A COMMENTARY

Upon the Holy VVritings of Job, David, and Salomon:

THAT IS,

These Five, Job, Psalmes, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Songs.

BEING

Part of those which by the Antients were called

HAGIOGRAPHA.

WHEREIN

The diverse Translations, and Expositions, both Literall and Mysticall, of all the most famous Commentators, both Ancient and Modern, are propounded, examined, and censured:

And the Texts from the Originall much Illustrated.

For the singular benefit of all that bee studious of the Holy Scriptures.

By JOHN MAYER Doctor in Divinity.

MATTH. 13. 44.

Πάλιν ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν θησαυρῷ κεκρυμμένῳ ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ· ὃν εὑρὼν ἄνθρωπος ἔκρυψε, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς αὐτοῦ ὑπάγει, καὶ πάντα ὅσα ἔχει πωλεῖ, καὶ ἀγοράζει τὸν ἀγρὸν ἐκεῖνον.

The Kingdome of Heaven is like Treasure hid in a field, which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that hee hath, and buyeth that field.

LONDON,
Printed for Robert Ibbitson and Thomas Roycroft.
MDCLIII.

The Epiſtle Dedicatory.

To the moſt Excellent the Theophili of the Nobility and Gentry of England.

IT was the complaint of Jeremiah the Prophet of old, under the Law, that when hee had gone through the ſtreets of Jeruſalem to ſeek out one godly man, and found none, he came to the great ones, but neither did he finde any amongſt them, but that they all had caſt off the yoke, and broken the bands. And the Apoſtle Paul in the time of the Goſpel ſaith, Not many wiſe, not many great, or mighty, not many noble are called. If it were with the preſent noble, wiſe, and great ones of England, as of old, my dedication of this Booke would prove a nullity. But under the Goſpel, it is not ſaid none, but few ſuch are called, wherefore Luke could now finde out a moſt excellent Theophilus to dedicate his Goſpel, and Acts of the Apoſtles unto, and the Apoſtle John, an elect Lady, and her children, to write his ſecond Epiſtle unto; and I doubt not but in theſe laſt and worſt dayes there be ſome ſuch, to whom both my work and dedication will be acceptable, that is, true lovers of God, and of his things, as the word Theophili ſignifieth: and my deſires are, that theſe my poor labours may be a means to increaſe the number of them, which I doubt not by Gods bleſſing, but they will, if with the great Steward of Candaces, the Queen of Ethiopia, they would bee pleaſed at all ſpare times to be reading the holy Scriptures, and take up Philip by Gods providence brought unto them, to interpret all things therein contained, yea the moſt obſcure, and hard to bee underſtood, whereof St. Peter ſaith, there be many by ſome for want of doing thus, perverted to their owne damnation, that is, by ſuch as being private perſons, preſume, to give the ſenſe of their owne heads, contrary to that which they are ſpecially warned by him to take notice of, that no Scripture is of private interpretation. And why ſhould not all Noble men, and Gentlemen, Ladies, and Gentlewomen be pleaſed to doe thus, ſeeing there are none ſo great, but if they could, they would be greater, and more honourable? and to attaine to this, the onely way is to ſearch the Scriptures, for which the Spirit of God giveth this teſtimony to the Bereans, that they were more Noble, then thoſe of Theſſalonica. And to ſpeak truly, be ye never ſo great in this world, til ye come this way to be innobled, although ye be here called honorable, or worſhipful, yet ye

Ier. 5. 2, 3, 4, 5.

1 Cor. 1. 26.

Luke 1. 3. Act. 1. 1.

Act. 8.

2 Pet. 3. 16.

2 Pet. 1. 20.

Act. 17. 11.

are not ſo much as truely free, but in bondage, according to that of Ioh.8.33,34. our Lord, when the Jewes ſaid unto him, We be Abrahams ſeed, and were never in bondage to any man, he that committeth ſinne, is the ſervant of ſinne, but if ye continue in my word, ye are my Diſciples, and yee ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free. And what man or woman living is there, that is not a ſinner? and if a ſinner, a bondman till he be made free, and this freedome is not attained, but by abiding in the word, and abiding ſo, as to know the truth therein contained, and this is not obvious to every ſpectatour, that doth onely now and then look upon it, and read, and heare it of courſe, for it
Matth. 13. 44. is as a treaſure hid in a field, and lying deep within the ground, which cannot be found and gotten, but by much ſeeking and labouring.
Prov. 2. 3. If thou ſeekeſt for knowledge therefore, ſaith Salomon, as for ſilver, and ſearcheſt for her, as for hid treaſure, then thou ſhalt underſtand, &c. And agreeable to this, ſpeaketh Auguſtine, ſaying, Auguſt. Deus ſub figuris & obſcuris veritatem ſuam occultavit ut à laboroſis tantum, non ab otioſis reperiatur. And thus the excellency of his truth is intimated, becauſe we count that vile and baſe, ſaith Caſſiodor, that comes to Caſſiodor. us with eaſe, but that excellent, which is not without great difficulty attained.

But to returne againe to the freedome, of which I ſpake before, to ſtir up all you great ones to affect it, as the Theophilus-Nobility and Gentry doe. Hear ſome notable paſſages out of that noble Tutor of Nero the Emperour, who was no profeſſed Chriſtian, but a Seneca. heathen Roman.

Many men, ſaith he, are fools, that flye ſervile food, & ſervile cloaths, but not ſervile manners, for ſuch may truly be called fools, who affect the reputation of nobility, but the true Nobility, which ſtands in good manners, they affect not, nor labour after. Again, if thou ſeeſt a Noble, or Gentleman praiſe thy parents, if rich, thy fortune, if fair, ſtay but a while, and thou ſhalt be neither of them all, viz. when death comes. But if thou beeſt indued with good manners, this makes thee praiſe-worthy indeed.

Laſtly, He that hath no nobility, but from his parents, hath no cauſe to glory therein, whether they were good or evill; if they were good, true is the ſaying of the Philoſopher, Nobility periſheth in him, which is in the beginning onely; but if evill, what joy can he have hereof, being now a firebrand in hell. It is better to come of poor parents that are now in heaven, then of rich in hell.

Now for further information, that ye may know when wee are truly noble, bee pleaſed to take notice, that this ſtands in three things, and ſheweth it ſelfe in three ſigns. The three things wherein it ſtandeth, is firſt to be wiſe in point of Government. 2. To keep fidelity to God, as they would have their tenants and ſervants doe to them. 3. To humble themſelves to God, and to give him all due obedience, as they would have their ſervants and inferiours doe t bem.

1 King. 3. Touching the firſt, it was the prayer of Salomon, wherewith God was ſo well pleaſed, that he might be indued with wiſdome to goe goe in and out before the people, over whom God had set him, and both Kings and Iudges are admonished hereof by King David, saying Be wise ye kings and Iudges of the earth, and shewed how they may be so, viz. by serving the Lord with fear, one part of whose service to this end is to read in his word continually, as is shewed Deut. 17. 19. that Kings should doe, to learne to feare God, and to doe his will in all things, and best to governe, for want of which learning, some in sundry times have brought both themselves and people to great miseries, whilst they have not been intent to such studies, but either to increase their wealth and honour, or to fill themselves with pleasure in drinking, whoring, gaming, following sports and pleasures, and delicious meats: like Sardanapalus, whose posie was, Ede, bibe, lude, dormi, post mortem nulla voluptas. And why doe any of you great and rich ones, or any others so, but because yee thinke, that there is none other pleasure, but what yee have the sense of in this life, as it is said in the Fable, that the Swine being invited amongst other beasts to the Lions feast, would not goe because there were no dregs there. And it is said of the Welch of old, that they thought there could be no such pleasure in heaven, because there is no strong drink there. Psal. 2.

But herein ye are like unto one that hath an Ague, or a Greensickenesse, to whose taste nothing is pleasant, but that which is worst and most hurtfull to him, who yet, if hee recovereth his health, comes to finde more pleasure in good and wholesome meats, and is ashamed to think, that he loved things so vile and base before; so the soule that is so much affected to the vaine and sinfull pleasures of this life, appears hereby to be out of temper very much, but if she hath once recovered her health, and be like to live eternally, shee abhorreth from, and is greatly ashamed of, and grieved to thinke of such pleasures, and her feeding thereupon so long a time; and now all her delight is in the sincere milke, and solid wholesome meat of the word, as it was with Iob, who professed, that he esteemed of Gods word more then of his appointed food; and David more then the honey-comb, or any worldly treasures; and Salomon repenting, cryeth out upon his owne foolishnesse and bruitishnesse, whilst hee was transported with carnal pleasures under the name of Agur, saying that he had not then the understanding of a man in him: but in extolling the word now he saith, Every word of God is pure, that is pretious, and delightfull, as a cordiall to my soule, and againe having largely discoursed of all things that are esteemed much of in this world, he concludeth that they are all vanity, and that to feare God, and keep his Commandements is the whole duty of man, which who so doth not, but transgresseth there-against, although but in his secret thoughts, shall therefore be brought to judgement: But hee that feares God shall have the joy of the Spouse in her Bridegroome Christ, treated of in a Prophetical and heavenly manner in his Song of Songs. And who is so great that may not well thinke any of these three worthy to be hearkned unto, and imitated, for as David and Salomon, so most probably, as I have shewed in my Preface upon Iob, he was a noble King: Iob 23. 12. Prov. 30. 2. Eccles. 12, 13.

If then any of you will not ſo much regard what an inferior perſon ſaith, yet let that which he brings and preſents you with, from ſuch as were your ſuperiours, be accepted and thought worthy your moſt ſerious ſtudy and conſideration; and if there be any ſuſpicion that there be no ſuch joyes and pleaſuresin heaven, to come, for ſuch as feare God, and love his word above all things, both to underſtand and obey it; doe but conſider, I beſeech you, what an unreaſonable thing it is to ſuſpect this: For in reaſon, if this world, which is but a kind of priſon, affords to ſuch, as have the goodly things hereof in abundance, ſo much pleaſure; of which, yee great ones cannot but be ſenſible; what pleaſures muſt the world to come needs afford, which is a moſt faire and ſpacious paradiſe? as Chriſt calleth it in that ſaying of his to the converted theif upon the croſſe, this day ſhalt thou be with me in paradiſe: and that this world is as a priſon, appeares by the complaint of the Apoſtle Paul, *Phil.*1.23. I am ſtreightned between two, having a deſire to be diſſolved or looſed, ἐπιθυμίαν ἔχων εἰς τὸ ἀναλῦσαι, and if to bee looſed, then whilſt he lived in this world, he counted himſelfe as it were in priſon. And here let no man ſay Paul indeed might well count himſelfe ſo, ſith he was a poore man, and ſo could not have ſuch pleaſure here, as noble perſons have; for he had more joy, even whilſt he lived in the midſt of his poverty, and all his afflictions, then the richeſt, and greateſt in this world, of their ſtately Houſes, faire Gardens, delicious fare, large Revenues, and goodly Apparrell, and honour amongſt men, becauſe that in his mind he was elevated above theſe things, and had his converſation in heaven, inſomuch as that he counted them all comparatively, but as droſſe and dung: and for his ſufferings he rejoyced more therein, then any one can in worldly pleaſures, becauſe that joy herein is ſoon fading; ſuch joy, never but increaſing, and finally perfected: for which James ſaith, Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; and of the perfection of joy following in a very ſhort time Paul ſpeaketh, ſaying, our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh unto us a farre ſurpaſſing and eternall weight of glory.

Phil.3.20.

Rom.5.1. Iames 1. 2.

2 Cor.4.17.

But what doe I ſpeaking of joyes and pleaſures here to the greateſt of the Nobility and Gentry in England, who may now ſay as the wife of Phineas, when the Arke of God was taken, Ichabod, The glory is gone from Iſrael: But this is not come to paſſe without a providence, becauſe they were too much carryed away by theſe vanities for the moſt part, and ſet not their minds upon the treaſure before ſpoken of, to ſeek that with all earneſtneſſe: Wherefore others far inferiour to them are ſet up and they put downe. Oh that they would now therefore lay this to heart, and turne their taking pleaſure in vanity, to a taking of pleaſure and delighting themſelves in the word of God, which indures for ever; and think when they are ſtirred up thus to doe, as the Spouſe in the Canticles, this is the voice of my beloved, when he had ſaid, I have eaten my hony with my hony-comb, I have drunken my wine with my milke; eate O friends, drinke, yea, drinke abundantly (O beloved:) So ſhall they be able (to their ſoules ſoules ſolace) to ſay, before I was afflicted I went aſtray, but now I keep thy commandements; and have eaten and drunke that which refreſheth us more then all the good Chear and Wine, which we formerly had: and thus their pulling downe ſhall turne to their ſetting up, and exalting more high then ever heretofore; as God dealt by Job.

1 Pet.1,25.

Cant. 5. 1.

2 The ſecond thing, wherein true Nobility ſtands, is in Fidelity to God, as you looke that your Tenants or Vaſſals ſhould duly do their fealty to you: For whoſo doth not, preferreth himſelfe before God, in that he hath indignation at them that ſweare fealty to him, and keepe it not; yet hee voweth to God and keepes it not. But what is the fidelity vowed to God? verily the vow made in baptiſme, or any vow or covenant ſince, made lawfully, ſo that whatſoever Chriſtian forſakes not the pomps and vanities of this wicked world, but followes and is led by them; as almoſt all the rich are, being ſo vaine in their Apparrell, and ſo taken with Plays and Maskes, Dancings and other Sports, may juſtly be charged for not keeping their fidelity to God; or likewiſe, he that proteſts or ſwears any thing, but performs it not. For as he that makes oath to his Soveraigne Lord and King, and afterwards breaks it, rebelling againſt him, hath tainted his blood, and is no more honourable, but a baſe Traytor; ſo he that makes oath to God, for to him in ſwearing is the hand lifted up, but breakes it, is falne from his excellency, and honour: As Reuben is ſaid, by his Father Jacob, by his preſumption againſt him to have been. And with this, as a great ſinne, and cauſe of his ruine, is Zedekiah charged, 2 Chron. 36.13. He rebelled againſt Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him ſweare by God, that is, fidelity to him.

3 For humility towards God: It is a rule in the civill Law, that what humility a Superiour would have his Inferiours to ſhew to him, the like he ought to ſhew to his Superiours; now no man is ſo great, but God is farre his ſuperiour, therefore to him he muſt be humble, or elſe he looſeth his honour, according to that ſaying of the man of God to Ely, thoſe that honor me, I will honour; but thoſe that deſpiſe me, ſhall be lightly eſteemed; and from the ſame hiſtory it may be gathered, who humble not themſelves to God, viz. all ſuch as ſet not by his Lawes, to obſerve and doe them, in all things; and who they be, is further ſhewed in the example of Zedekiah, of whom it is ſaid, that he humbled not himſelfe before Jeremiah the Prophet, ſpeaking from the mouth of the Lord, that deſpiſe the inſtructions, and admonitions of Gods faithful Miniſters; as thinking themſelves too great by ſuch poore men to be directed. And Azariah, the ſon of Hoſhajah, and Johanan the ſon of Chareah, Nobles amongſt the Jewes, are expreſly charged to have beene proud, when they ſleighted the directions of Jeremiah. Now that every man that is greateſt and higheſt in this world, may be moved to put away this pride, and to humble himſelfe to God, as hath been ſaid; Conſider I pray you, that as there are three things that make men to humble themſelves to other men: Their Majority, Utility coming ing by them, and an inevitability of puniſhment to ſuch as do not; All theſe are far more eminently in God, then in the moſt high and mighty man. For firſt, Hee is ſo great that the whole earth is ful of his glory; he is above all Men and Angels, he can doe whatſoever he pleaſeth; and very Emperours and Monarchs are all his ſervants, as he called Nebuchadnezzar the great, and King Cyrus. And if a terror be ſtricken into a poor man, when he comes before a King ſitting in his majeſty; when God hath appeared as upon mount Sinai, ſuch terrour was ſtricken into the children of Iſrael, that they feared they ſhould dye, if he ſhould ſpeake to them any more; yea, King Moſes himſelfe ſaid, I exceedingly feare and quake. Hebr. 12. 21.

1 Sam. 2. 30.

2 Chron. 36. 12

Ierem. 43. 2.

2 For utility or benefit coming by him, no Lord can be ſo beneficiall to the ſervant, whom he loveth moſt, or Father to his dearly beloved childe, as God to his ſervants, and children that ſerve him. The Prophet Malachy in his name ſaith, A booke of remembrance was written for them that feared the Lord, and they ſhall be mine, ſaith the Lord of hoſts in that day, when I make up my Jewels, and I will ſpare them, as a man ſpareth his owne ſon that ſerveth him: And the Apoſtle ſaith, Eye hath not ſeen, nor eare heard, neither have entred into mans heart, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. Mal. 3. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9.

3 For inevitability of his puniſhments, let the old world be looked at for example, which was drowned by a flood, and Sodom and Gomorah, and the Kings of Canaan, and all the wicked Kings of Judah and Iſrael, of whom none eſcaped, but every one in his time was remarkably judged.

1 Now for the ſignes of a perſon truly noble, The firſt is, to bee free, and not in bondage to his luſts, ſo as that he cannot maſter them, but is as one given over to them, Unrighteouſneſſe, fornication, maliciouſneſſe, envy, murther, debate, deceit, malignity, deceitfull, proud, boaſters, &c. For he that lives in any of theſe, or any other groſſe ſin, is not noble, but ſervile, and more ſervile then any ſlave to the Turke; becauſe in his beſt part, that is his ſoule, wherein he that ſerveth God and not ſin, as the Apoſtle ſaith of himſelfe, In my mind I ſerve the law of God, and John ſaith, He that is borne of God ſinneth not, that is, in his heart, but hates and abhors from all ſin; and therefore liveth righteouſly and holily, is free and noble, although a poore man or a ſervant, and is preferred before the rich by James his ſaying, hath not God choſen the poor in this world rich in faith, heires of his Kingdome? Rom. 1. 28. Rom 7. 25. 1 John 3. 9. Iam. 5. 5.

2 The ſecond is, Bounty towards the poor, and ſuch as deſerve well, for the Prophet ſpeaking of ſuch as are bountifull, or not, but churles, ſaith, the vile perſon ſhall no more be called liberall, nor the churle bountifull, that is, as the Hebrew word נדיב nadib ſignifieth, Prince or Noble: And againe, A Prince deviſeth liberall things, and by liberall things ſhall he ſtand. And in the Pſalmes it is ſaid of a great man, that is good, that he both lendeth and giveth to the poore, and his horne ſhall be exalted with honour; that is, he ſhall be made more mighty and honorable. And againe, his ſeed ſhall be mighty upon earth. But on the contrary ſide, that great man becomes vile, that uſeth Iſa. 32. 5. verſ. 8. Pſal. 112. 5, 9. verſ. 2.

his

his might to oppreſſe others, as may be gathered by that which the Prophet further ſaith, The vile perſon will ſpeake villany, and his heart will worke iniquity, to empty the ſoule of the hungry, and to make the drinke of the thirſty to faile, and he deviſeth wicked devices to deſtroy the poore. Eſa.32. The greateſt amongſt men ſhould be, as the King of the Bees, without a ſting, to governe over others for their good, but to hurt none; if a Bee by ſtinging hath loſt her ſting, and now hath none to hurt withall, ſhe hath no praiſe therefore, for ſhe hurteth not, becauſe ſhe cannot; ſo the great one that hath had power, and hurting herewith hath loſt it, although he now doeth no harme to any, it is not praiſeworthy, becauſe he cannot; but he that hath power to hurt, and doth not, but by it doth good, ſhall be had in honour both by God and men.

3 The third is magnanimity, that is, to beare ſo noble a minde, as ever to be ſtudying how to requite goodneſſe by any ſhewed unto him according to his power, and therefore to God eſpecially, by whoſe beneficence h eis what he is, as David did, for he ſaid, What ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits, I will take the cup of ſalvation, and praiſe his name. And Moſes after commemorating the great beneficence of God towards Iſrael, ſaith, And now (O Iſrael) what doth the Lord require of thee, but to feare him, to love, and ſerve him with all thy heart; therefore he is not a noble, but vile minded man, that ſerves not God with all diligence, who hath ſo highly advanced him. And becauſe Almſ-giving to the poore is ſo greatly by the Lord eſteemed of, as being done to his members, he ought likewiſe to ſhew his gratefull minde this way: he that doth theſe three is after the image of God, who is not temptible of evill, and governs in goodneſſe, and will let none goe unrewarded that ſerve him, and do the good that he requireth, as is ſaid Matth.6. Pſal.116.13. Deut.10.12. Iam.1.14.

And to ſtir you great ones up the more, conſider, that every man hath moſt care of his face to keep that cleane, as the moſt conſpicuous part of the body: but yee Nobles are the head and face, as it were, of the body politick, as Conſtantine the Great once wrote to his mother Helena, the higher place we have amongſt men, the more open we are to the ſight of all men, and the eyes of all mortals, their judgements and thoughts, conſider our good or evill will, and therefore it ought not onely not to be reprehenſible, but laudable what we will. And Bernard to Pope Eugenius a great Prince in the Church then, ſaith, Monſtroſa res eſt gradus ſummus & animus infimus, ſedes prima & vita ima, ſermo multus & fructus nullus. And if we conſider the moſt generous of the Beaſts that we have about us, that is the moſt intelligent amongſt them to doe his Maſter ſervice, the dog, he, if right bred, will not prey upon Domeſticks, but defend them, hunting after, and deſtroying only hurtful creatures, the Fox, and the Wolfe, and ſuch like, but they the moſt ignoble deſtroy ſheep, and poultry, eſteemed of for the good uſe they have of them that be their keepers; ſo the true, noble, and Gentleman doth neither trouble nor oppreſſe the good and faithfull of the land, but defend them, and endeavours onely to root out the wicked, as David, did did *Pſal.*101.and whoſoever of them doth otherwiſe is worſe then a Dog,yea as vile as a Wolfe or Fox, imploying his wit to do hurt.

Lastly, yee are to other inferiour members, as armes to a body, which helpe what they can,and doe no hurt to any member thereof, for that were unnaturall.

Now if theſe my labours upon theſe Books, which are able to make a man truly wiſe, thus to doe, and conſequently to ſalvation, may finde ſo much favour, as amongſt ſome of you to bee thought worthy the daily and ſtudious peruſal; I doubt not but a bleſſed work, by Gods grace, will be wrought in your hearts to your everlaſting comfort: Which that it may be, prayeth your ſervant in the Lord,

JOHN MAYER.

A Catalogue of the Authours out of whom any thing is taken in this Commentary.

Adricomius,
Gregory,
Ferus,
Calvin,
Junius,
Thomas Aquinas Chryſoſtome, Pineda,
Philo,
Chald. Paraph.
Genebrardus, Tertullian, Cyprian, Auguſtine,
Nazianzen, Apollonius,
Baſilius Mag.
Cajetan,
Olympiodorus,
Origen,
Hieronymus, Iſidorus, Carthuſianus, Lyranus, Athanaſius,
Philippus,
Vatablus,
Clarius, Beda, Dionyſius,
Rabbi Levi,
Rabbi Abraham,
Rabbi Moſes, Pagninus,
Eugubinus,
Rabbi David,
Tigurina inter.
Septuagint,
Lippoman. Caten.
Albertus, Ambroſius,
Plinius, Nicetas,
Plutarchus, Ciſſiodorus,
Hugo Cardin.
Tilleman, Theodoret, Ælianus, Xenophon, Toſſarius, Murianus, Oſorius, Ariſtotle,
Gloſſa Ordin.
Toſtatus, Cyrillus, Rabanus,
Camarenſis, Olaus, Philoſtratus,
Lucretius,
Euſebius,
Ainſworth.
Arnobius,
Rabbi Menahem,
Horatius,
Geneva Notes.
F.M. on Pſal.
T.W. on Pſal.
Symmachus, Theophylact, Donatus, Arboreus, Muſſet, Tullius,
Hugo Victor,
Valerius Max.
Antonius,
Aben Ezra, Salazar, Hilarius, Ovidius,
Seneca,
Georgius Agricola Irenæus, Vincentius, Pauſanias, Macarius.
Clemens Alex.
Rodolphus,
Maximus.
Sophocles, Bernardus, Hippocrates.
Remigius, Fulgentius, Heſiodus,
Galen, Nilus,
Benifa. Mog. Ep.
Ignatius.
Homerus,
Rabbi Ioſeph.
Aquila, Palingenius,
Socrates, Albinus,
Proſper.
Pelagius, Quintilian,
Quintus Curtius,
Petrarch, Athanaſius,
Iuvenal, Ianſenius, Carneades, Polybius, Celſus, Dioſcorides,
Baius, Procopius, Solon, Heccateus, Lorinus,
Salonius,
Hugo Victorinus.
Albinus.
Thaumaturgus,
Schola Salerni, Munſterus, Bibliander, Bonaventure,
Iuſtus Orgelitanus.

Reader, Take notice that the firſt figure ſtands for the Chapter, the ſecond for the Verſe.

Errata in Iob.

IN Preſa.read ſatisfie.5.21.*r.pabu'um*23.r. to hold, & here and there are many words omitted, and ſome falſe printed, which any ingenious reader may by the ſenſe perceive, and correct, ch.6.v.9 r. my life goeth.*19. r.*avoid. 9.29.r. iritus. 12.6 r. he doth into.19 r. Jechoniah.13. 18. משפט 19 4.*r.*they were not like.6.r.qui ab. 20.10.r. ורנן 19. *ſeventy.*25. מרר 24.12.r. without 13. *r.*forced. 26.5.r. ſanation. 11 *r.*as the pillars of the Temple.12 r. רולב רמע.28.17.*r.*ſanctification.29.8.*r.*Senate.32.14.*r.*although.33.14.r no difference.23.*r.*ſeventy.35.9.*r.*deſtroy,10. *r.*alleviate.15. מאך.38.3.*r.*he knew ſuch.40.13.*r.*ten.16.*r.*lick. In Pſalmes,18.47. *r. Ahab.*19.4. שמש.24.7.doubleth, 26:12. right.33.5.34.7. *r.*anſwer. 2.3.8,16. forcible. 41.1. משברל 42. בצה.45.1. בט 13. hypocrite,58. אדם.noble. 59 אלדח 44.40.waſting 85 *r.*ſeventy.quemcung.In Proverbs Preface *r.*wit.1.5.*r.*often.7.*r.*perfected,28.*r.*moveth.2.33.לוץ 7.11.*r.*hodmandod.9.7 r.vita beata,11.28.*r.*premiſed.3.r. Peter,12.26.*r. gerit.*13.9.r living.15.27 *r.*pervert.16: 22: *r:*ſlave:20:12 *r:*one whit of firſt:24:*r:*it is ſaid:27:r: בר; In Eccleſiaſtes 2:4 r. geſtus,6:11.r. דברים *r:*by: In Canticles,1,2.r: דודו,8:*r:*ſubſcribe:9:*r:*love:2:4:*r:*wine-ſeller:

The Preface to JOB.

SOME Hebrews, and others hold, that this Booke is onely Paraboli-call, and no true Hiſtory, becauſe ſuch things are herein related, as ſeem impoſſible to them to have been truely done, as that, Job 2. 13. That Jobs three Freinds ſate ſtill mourning for Job ſeven dayes and ſeven nights, before that he or they ſpake one word, and becauſe of the Devills appearing before God amongſt his Sons, Chap. 1. 6. Which ſeemeth to them to be but a made thing, and becauſe the name of Job, and of his Land Uz, are ſignificative, and it is written in verſe, and Joſephus maketh no mention in his Hiſtory of ſuch a man. But againſt this, and to prove that there was truly ſuch a man as Job, marke that paſſage, Jam. 5. Yee have heard of the patience of Job, And Ezek. 14. Although Noah, Job, and Daniel ſtood before me; for hereby it is implyed that if Noah and Daniell were true and no imaginary men, then Job was a man truly of that name alſo. And thus he hath been acknowledged by the Church of God in all times and ages. Moreover if it were not a true Hiſtory, it were not of that force to move others to patience in extream miſery by his example, as James improveth it. As for the reaſons brought to the contrary, they are of little force; for firſt, nothing is impoſſible with God, and we are not to meaſure other men, that might be extraordinarily ſtrengthned by our ſelves ordinarily. Secondly, For Satans coming together with the Sonns of God before him, I ſee not how this ſhould make againſt the truth of the Hiſtory, for the Angells here, called the Sons of God, minſter continually unto him; and Satans coming and ſtanding, is but when by his power and appointment he is brought, that his accuſations may be heard, and he may receive commiſſions and licenſe to do any thing againſt particular men, which he cannot do, unleſs God licenſeth him ſo to do. For to imply his appearing before God to accuſe men, he is ſayd to have been caſt down from Heaven, that was the accuſer of the Brethren, and that he can do nothing without Gods licenſe againſt any creature, appeareth in that he could not enter into the Swine of the Gadarens without it. Thirdly, for the Argument drawn from this, that Jobs name is ſignificative, ſo was Abels, for it ſignifieth mourning, and his Parents had cauſe, according to the ſignification of his name, to mourn for his Brothers inhumane cutting of him off, and Noah reſt, and Jacob ſupplanting; and it was uſuall of old not to call children by their Fathers names, but either by way of preſage, or as at the Birth, they ſaw cauſe: For they were generally ſignificative. Fourthly, For the writing of it in verſe, or Hebrew meetre, ſo were ſome of the Pſalmes. Fifthly, Joſephus propounded not to himſelf to write any thing, but what concerned the Jews, his Countreymen. For the authority of this Booke, it was never doubted of, but that it was Canonicall Scripture. For the Pen-men ſome have thought, that Moſes Wrote it, in the time that the Hebrewes lived in ſo great miſery in Egypt, for their comfort, ſome that Job himſelf wrote it: But of this

Revel. 12. 9, 10.

Matth. 8.

Ferus ſaith well, it is not materiall to know, who wrote the Kings Letters if we know that they be his, and declare his will unto us; ſo although we know not certainly, who penned ſome parcells of the holy Scripture, yet this ought to certifie us, that we know them to be the word of God. Laſtly, touching this Job, of what time and linage he was, it is uncertain. Some ſay, that he was contemporanean with Abraham, ſome of the poſterity of Iſhmael, ſome of Eſau, ſo the ſeventy render it, Job of the Sons of Eſau. But it is enough to know that he was no Iſraelite, but to the ſhame of many Iſraelites, moſt excellent for Righteouſneſſe, Faith, and Patience, which both Jews and Gentiles may learn of him, as they deſire to come to the like bleſſed end, that he did. For the ſcope of this Book, it is apparantly to every man in the example of Job, to commend patience in adverſity unto us. Secondly, to teach us that the moſt Righteous in this life are ſubject to moſt greivous ſufferings. Thirdly, What an enemy to ſuch the Devill is, but that he can doe nothing againſt them without Gods permiſſion. Fourthly, How hardly the wiſe men of this World are ready to think of the beſt, being under greiveous Sufferings. Fifthly, that no man patiently beareth Afflictions in vain, but in the end he ſhall have a bountifull remuneration, if not in this, yet in the World to come for ever.

Note.

JOB.

JOB.

CHAP. I.

THere was a man in the Land of Uz, whose name was Job, and that man was perfect and upright, one that feared God and eschewed evill. Touching the name Uz, it signifieth Counsell, saith one, and Job greiving: It was by the consent of all, a Country bordering upon Idumea in part, and in part upon Jordan, and in part upon Arabia, and another part upon the Kingdome of Bashan; Job although a Gentile, and one that lived amongst naked Heathens, yet is commended by this, that he was perfect and upright before God. Whereupon Gregory saith, That to be righteous amongst the righteous is not so great a commendation, although it be good every where: but to be righteous, and to live in the fear of God amongst the wicked, this sheweth a most righteous and vertuous man indeed. So Lot amongst the Sodomites, Noah in the old world, and Jeremy amongst the Jewes, the rose in the Canticles amongst thorns.

Vers. 1.

Adricomius.

Gregor. Note.

Again, in describing Job it is said, that he was perfect and upright, that is, of an upright heart and innocent life, hee did not make a shew of that outwardly, which he was not inwardly, and he feared God, which he proved by his eschewing of evill: And who so would be accepted for righteous, must be such a man as he was.

Here is shewed with how great blessings God blessed this man Job, both of Children and Cattel, So that he was the greatest in all the East, and as some say, a King, which indeed is implyed, in that he is said to be the greatest of all others, such as none but Kings are: and in some passages afterwards following, where he declareth in what Majesty he lived, and was by others observed some say that he was the first King of Idumea. First, the blessing of God upon him in giving him children is spoken of, because that in those days this was counted the greatest worldly blessing, and therefore is commonly spoken of in the Psalms, where Gods blessings upon the righteous are enumerated in the first place. For his substance, although it be set forth, as standing only in Cattell, yet some think that he had great store of gold and silver also, but without ground. In Job thus wealthy, wee see it true by experience, which God promiseth and speaketh of, that should be to the righteous, Godlines hath the promise of this life, and of that to come. But there is another end, as Ferus, noteth of commemorating these things in this place, his children are spoken of, which were many: Next after his eschewing of evill, to shew, that he was not like the men of these times, who if they have many children, will take any evill course to get something for them, steal, lye, deceive or oppress, and they think it a plea sufficient against charity or doing good with their goods, that they have many children to provide for. Job did not so, but still kept constant in the way of righteousnesse, and exercised much charity, as we may see Chap. 21. And his great riches are also spoken of, that his vertue might the more appear in that, having so great possessions hee did not set his heart thereupon, as men that be rich commonly do, making Mammon their God. For that he did not, appeareth, because when he had lost all, he blessed

Vers. 2. 3.

1 Tim. 4.8.

Ferus.

Note.

ſed God, ſaying, The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away, bleſſed be the Lords name. Moreover the children of Job are not therefore mentioned, becauſe it is a commendation to a man ſimply to have children; but having children, to bring them up in the nurture and feare of the Lord, as he is ſhewed to have done, verſ. 4. which next followeth.

Verſ. 4. And his ſonnes went and feaſted in their houſes every one his day, and ſent and called for their three ſiſters, to eate and to drinke with them.

Verſ. 5. And when the dayes of their feaſting were gone about, Job ſent, and ſanctified them, and roſe up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all; for Job ſaid, It may be that my ſonnes have ſinned and curſed God in their hearts, thus did Job continually.

This feaſting of his ſons was, as is generally conceived, to ſhew in what good love and amity they lived together, as brethren and ſiſters ought to do, a meanes to expreſſe and continue which, is ſometimes to feaſt one another. This therefore makes further for the praiſe of Job, that hee brought up his children ſo, as that they were knit together in mutuall love, which how pleaſing it is to God, appeareth by that of the Pſalmiſt, O how happy and joyfull a thing it is for brethren to live together in unity. And therefore in their example unity and love is commended unto us, who are all brethren in Chriſt, and to uſe all meanes whereby it may be maintained, taking even times for this end, to feaſt one another, and not only ſuch as can feaſt us again, but the very pooreſt that cannot, as our Lord hath commanded us to do. Whereas it is further ſaid, that, When the days of their feaſting were gone about, Job ſent and ſanctified them. Calvin rendreth it, He ſent for them and ſanctified them, but the word ſignifieth nothing, but He ſent, and therefore Junius better, He ſent and commanded them to ſanctifie themſelves in way of preparation to the ſacrifice next ſpoken of; as it was afterwards by the written law of God required, that men by waſhing after uncleanneſſe any way contracted, ſhould ſanctifie themſelves before that they drew near to God. Ferus thinks that he ſent ſome man unto them, who was able to inſtruct them herein, that he might ſee it done, haply having other publique employment himſelf at that time. And why did he take this care of ſanctifying them every day after their feaſting? the reaſon is ſhewed in the next words, It may be they have ſinned and curſed God in their hearts. Hee knew that although inviting to their houſes and feaſting were lawfull, yet it could hardly be without ſinne, eſpecially in young perſons, and in ſuch as have not ſo good government of their tongues or appetites. For in feaſting there is commonly exceſſe of eating and drinking, even in thoſe that are more temperate: and the heart being merry with wine and good cheer, the tongue is ready to run ryot even to the blaſpheming of Gods moſt holy name; for when the Wine is in, the wit is out, and men are ready to ſpeak they know not what. Calvin for theſe words, It may be they have curſed God, hath theſe, They have not bleſſed God: the word indeed is, ברכו ſignifying bleſſing or curſing; but if it be expounded by bleſſing, it muſt be read, They have bleſſed, becauſe that here is no negative. Tho: Aquin. rendreth it by bleſſing, ſaying there, He meaneth, It may be they have ſinned by being over merry, and in their hearts bleſſed or praiſed God, through whoſe beneficence they have had wherewithall to feed and drink ſo liberally, as Pyrats and Theeves having gotten a good booty by robbery thank God for it. And this I take to be the beſt way of expounding it. Yet becauſe it is moſt commonly expounded by curſing, if it be taken ſo, it may have this ſenſe: It may be they have curſed God, although not with their tongues, for ſo it is not to be thought, that Jobs children being ſo well brought up, would doe, but they might in their mirth not think ſo reverently of God in their hearts as they ſhould, there might be now evill thoughts of him, although not uttered with their tongues: and for ſinning in their hearts, Job would have them ſanctified. A right Evangelical man, ſaith one hereupon, was Job, who knew that evill which is but in the heart to be ſinne, and ſacrificed therefore

Note.

Pſalm. 133.

Luke 14.

Calvin.
Junius.

Exod. 19.
Ferus.

Tho: Aquinas.

fore: Ferus from Jobs ſending to his ſons to ſanctifie them, obſerveth, that he had a care of his children, not only in reſpect of their bodyes, providing ſo well for them, that each one had his houſe and meanes to live well in this world, but alſo in reſpect of their ſoules, that if they had through infirmity ſinned in any thing, he would eftſoons have them ſanctified, by confeſſing and humbling their ſoules, and expreſſing their penitency, and waſhing themſelves by contrition of heart, by externall waſhing of themſelves and cloths by water. Whereby moſt Parents are reproved as very faulty, in that all their care for their children is in reſpect of the body, they having little or none for the ſoule, and that they may from time to time be ſanctified and cleanſed from the ſinnes, to which by the corruption of nature, or through infection by others, they are addicted. This man Job, who was but a Gentile, ſhall riſe up in judgment againſt ſuch Chriſtians and condemn them. Ferus. Note.

Again, Job held an hand of power and rule over his children, being come to mens and womens eſtate, and having families of their own, to awe them in caſe of ſinning, as all good parents alſo will endeavour to have by their grave carriage of themſelves towards them, and learning and diſciplining them well when they are young. All Parents would have their children likewiſe to honour them as long as they live; but becauſe they carry not themſelves thus honourably towards them, neither lay a foundation of this when they are young, all their authority is by undutiful children ſhaken off, if they be once grown up men or women. But ſuch children are by the example of Jobs children to be reproved, eſpecially, that having ſuch good Parents as he was, regard not their charges, to be ſanctified, to live holily, and not as the prophane ſort, as there are too many that do. And Job roſe up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings: Theſe were properly offerings for the expiation of ſin, ſome young, fat, and perfect beaſt without blemiſh, being taken and killed, and then wholly burnt with fire to aſhes to the Lord, upon which doing, the ſinner ſtanding and confeſſing his ſinnes, obtained mercy and forgiveneſſe. This office of ſacrificing before the Law, long before which Job lived, perteined to every man, as we ſee in Cain and Abel, who both brought their offerings; but afterwards it ſeemeth to have been reſtreined to the firſt borne, for he was the Prieſt of the Family. After this, Iſrael being grown into a Nation, and brought out of Ægypt, to avoid confuſion in the ſervice of God, the Tribe of Levi was ſanctified and ſet apart to this Office for all the firſt-borne of Iſrael, and more particularly out of that Tribe, Aaron and his ſonnes, as is plainly declared in the Law. Here Job, as piety bound him, and it was lawfull for him to do, killed and offered ſeven whole burnt Offerings, or ten according to the number of his children, both ſonnes and daughters, and this he is ſaid to have done all the dayes, Hebr. that is, when one feaſting day was ended, he roſe up early the next morning and ſacrificed, and this he did till the times and days of their feaſting were over. Thus Jerome Epiſt. ad Eagrium, Olympiodorus in catena, Genebrard in Chronol. Some think that all his ſacrificing was together upon the 8. day. And his diligence herein is to be noted, when he conceived that ſome ſinne had been by his children committed, he uſed no delay, but next morning betimes took a courſe for the expiation thereof: whence we ſhould learn in generall, if we have been overtaken with ſinne by infirmity, not to lye therein, but ſpeedily by repentance and faithfull prayer (whereby we offer Chriſt as it were in ſacrifice, that immaculate Lamb to the Father, when we pray in his name) to riſe up againe, and then we ſhall be pardoned. And in particular, becauſe feaſting can hardly be in all the company without ſinne, both to be very carefull at ſuch times, that we offend not: and after eating and drinking to pray to God to pardon our exceſs, being carryed by our ſinfull appetite, and all our vain talk, yea our evill thoughts in the diſſoluteneſſe of our minds at ſuch times. Note. Note.

Now there was a day when the ſons of God came to preſent themſelves before the Lord, and Satan came alſo among them. V. 6.

Before

Before I enter upon theſe words to open them, I think it not amiſſe to ſhew, that Gregory, although hee acknowledgeth this to be a true Hiſtory, yet he ſaith it all allegoricall. Job is ſignifying mourning, ſetteth forth Chriſt, a man of ſorrows, he dwelt in the land of Huz, ſignifying counſell, this ſetteth forth Chriſts wiſdome and counſell, for which he is by Iſaiah called Counſellor, He was perfect and upright, ſo was Chriſt indeed, without all ſin, and feared God: So it is ſaid of Chriſt, That the ſpirit of the feare of the Lord was upon him. He had 7. ſonnes, Chriſt 12. Apoſtles, who were perfect through the Spirit, with which they were extraordinarily indued: for 7. is a number of perfection, and being divided into 3. and 4. the firſt number being multiplyed by the ſecond, or the ſecond by the firſt make 12. And three daughters: So beſides the Apoſtles, who were ſtrong as ſonnes, Chriſt hath ſome weaker children. who are as daughters, I meane the people who are not ſo intelligent, but yet they believe the bleſſed Trinity, God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, by which they may be ſet forth by three. For his allegoricall application of his 7000. ſheep, to the ſheep of Chriſt, as hee calleth the faithfull: however there may be ſome colour for this, yet when he commeth to make allegories of the 3000. Camels, 500. yoake of Oxen, &c. he attempts ſo divers wayes to make theſe out alſo, that I thinke nothing ſolid therein. But he hath his Morals alſo hereupon: Job dwelling in the Land of Uz, meaning in Counſell, is every faithfull perſon, becauſe ſuch mourn in regard of ſin and miſery in this life, and taking counſell from the word of God, and thereby underſtanding what great happineſſe is to come, he ſigheth after it. Whereas the wicked of the world either not knowing, or if they doe know that happineſſe, yet contemning, or ſetting light by it, in compariſon of the profits and pleaſures of this world, mourn not for their ſinnes, but laugh and are merry, wiſhing that they might live here alwayes. And as Job, ſo every true faithfull perſon is juſt in his doings, and right in his faith, fearing God, and eſchewing all ſinne, becauſe he knoweth that in fleeing ſin the feare of God conſiſteth. He hath alſo 7. ſonnes, that is, the ſpirit of God with his ſeven-fold gifts, Wiſdome, Underſtanding, Counſell, Fortitude, Knowledge, Piety, and the feare of the Lord: And three Daughters, Faith, Hope, and Charity, which as ſiſters muſt be joyned to the other 7. or elſe we are not compleat Chriſtians. But having Wiſdome, Knowledg, &c. together, with them we are. Moreover he hath 7000. ſheep, which are cleane Beaſts, that chew the Cud, who is full of ſpirituall and holy meditations, doing alſo good to others, as ſheep beare fleeces to cloath us withall. And he hath 3000. Camels, who humbleth himſelfe through love to beare the burthens of others, although he be higher and ſtronger; becauſe the Camel is a high and ſtrong Beaſt, yet ſubmitteth himſelfe to carry heavy burthens for thoſe that uſe them: and in the 300. it is againe alluded to the Trinity, and faith in the Trinity. He hath 500. yoak of Oxen, that liveth and laboureth honeſtly in his calling, keeping good correſpondency and agreement with his neighbours, whereſoever he becometh: And 500. She-Aſſes, that acknowledging his own ignorance, beareth with other mens follies, becauſe the Aſſe is a ſimple creature, and made to beare heavy burthens. The ſeven ſonnes feaſt every one in his day, when the ſeven Graces or Gifts of the Spirit feaſt the mind, as it were, and make it to rejoyce in Wiſdome, whereby wee doe ſapere or ſavour heavenly things; for when a man doth ſo, he hath great comfort, as in feeding liberally at a Feaſt: Then cometh the day or time of Underſtandings feaſting, wherein a man having only ſome generall perceivance of divine things before, underſtandeth, and ſeeth more particularly into the myſteries of the word, and hath great joy therein; then Counſel cometh and makes his Feaſt, when a man attaineth to that underſtanding and government, that he doth all things according to reaſon by good advice and counſell. Next cometh Fortitude, putting away the feare of men, and filling the mind with courage, becauſe hee well knoweth it to be the right for which

Gregor.

Iſa. 9. 6.

Iſa. 11. 1.

which he ſtandeth, and whatſoever loſſe hee ſuffereth, ſhall be abundantly recompenced by him: for whoſe ſake, and hereof he hath great joy, as in being feaſted. Then cometh Piety and makes his Feaſt, by filling the bowels of the heart with the works of mercy: and knowledge his feaſt, by filling the belly of the heart ſo, as that the famine of ignorance is overcome. Laſtly, Feare makes his Feaſt, when by ſuppreſſing pride in regard of things well done in this preſent life, he refreſheth the mind with the hope of a greater elevation to come in heaven, as with moſt delicious meate: whereas theſe ſeven ſonnes feaſt one another, implying, theſe ſpirituall gifts doing the like, it is, when they meet altogether in the ſame perſon, as they doe in every one, that is ſpirituall. For wiſdome to ſavour things ſpiritual without underſtanding, is but zeale without knowledg; and underſtanding without zeale profiteth not, no more doth Fortitude without Counſell, being but temerity: nor Counſel without Fortitude: Piety without Knowledge, is but blind devotion; and Knowledg without Piety bringeth but the greater condemnation, and Feare without Fortitude degenerateth into timerouſneſſe, making a man unfit for any couragious action. And the ſonns call for their 3. Siſters, Faith, Hope, and Charity, when theſe are joyned unto them in all things, as without which they cannot be acceptable. For Jobs ſending to ſanctifie his ſons, and offering for them burnt offerings, this he doth, who becauſe even the gifts of the ſpirit are imperfect in him, conſidereth of every one of them; and for his imperfections humbleth himſelfe in prayer, that wiſdom may not elevate him, nor underſtanding cauſe him in his ſubtle diſquiſition of things to run into errour, that counſell whilſt it is multiplyed confound him not; that Fortitude whilſt it cauſeth confidence, precipitate not; that Knowledge puffe not up, nor Piety maketh to decline into crooked wayes of devotion, and that feare be not turned to deſperation.

Now there was a day when the ſonnes of God came to preſent themſelves before the Lord, and Satan came alſo among them. Verſ. 6.

The vertues of Job being hitherto ſet forth, now it is ſhewed how contrarily the good Angels of God and Satan, that is, the evill Angels were therefore affected towards him. The good Angels as rejoycing and glad for all thoſe things come, and as it is moſt probably meant, relate them to the Lord to his praiſe: but Satan having great envy hereat, came to extenuate them, & to detract from him. Whereby we may ſee to our comfort, that the good Angels of God are about us rejoycing at our well doing. and are ready to relate the ſame before the Lord: ſo that no good which we do ſhal be forgotten, but had in remembrance with him, and in his good time rewarded in heaven. Note. And we may alſo ſee to ſtirre us up to circumſpection in all things, that wee have alſo evill angels about us, who are diligent to eſpy our ſins and errours and to accuſe us therefore before the ſame higheſt Judge. Wherefore, as wee would rather rejoyce in Gods holy Angels ſet to guard us, and not give Satan, who deadly hateth us, any advantage, let us flee all ſinne, and conſtantly goe on in well doing, and then we ſhall reap in due time, and Satan ſhall be confounded, as he was when he entered the Liſts againſt Job, for he was made the more famous, and Satan more odious. But here we muſt take heed that wee conceive not God to be ignorant of things done here upon earth, till that he hath intelligence hereof given him by his Angels; for he is omniſcient, and wee and our doings can no where be hidden from his ſight, but he uſeth the Miniſtry of his Angels about us and our doings, to goe out and return with joyful tidings of our wel doing, to ſhew his tender care over his faithfull ſervants in condeſcending to our weakneſſe, who cannot think our ſelves ſo ſafe, as by having a Guard moſt ſtrong and mighty ſet about us continually; or that our well doing ſo much regarded, as by having Spectators in all places ſet to take notice thereof, and to make mention thereof before the Lord. Note. Pſal. 139.

Again, that which is here ſaid is likewiſe ſpoken in condeſcending to our weakneſs, weakneſs, who give one another to underſtand things done by ſpeaking, and coming into the preſence of them to whom we ſpeak: For God and his Angels, good or bad, are ſpirits, and therefore ſpeak not one to another by an audible voyce, as wee that have bodies and Organs of ſpeech doe; but Gods ſpeaking to them is by making them to know his will, and their ſpeaking to him, by tacite ſuggeſtions of their deſires, good or evill. And it is to be noted here, that the Lord ſaith nothing to the good Angels, called his ſons; but for the evill, he asketh him, Whence comeſt thou Satan? Hee asketh him not, becauſe he knew not, but becauſe that which he goeth about, and doth in every place is wicked; and he ſpeaks of workers of Wickedneſſe, as if he knew them not, only becauſe he doth not approve, but hateth their doings. The goings out, and returnings of his ſons he knoweth, and liketh well, and their doings; wherefore he asketh not them, but heareth them coming to him, and accepteth them. And although he ſpeaketh to wicked ſpirits and men, as not knowing them or their wayes, yet he doth, and the thoughts of their hearts alſo, and will bring them to Judgement. For Satans anſwer,

Ferus.

Matth. 7. 21.

Pſal. 14. Eccleſ. 12. 14.

Verſ. 7. From compaſſing the earth, and walking up and down in it.

This ſpeech of his is by the Apoſtle Peter made up thus: Your adverſary the Devill goeth about like a roaring Lyon, ſeeking whom he may devoure. By ſonnes of God, Chryſoſtome will never have Angels of God underſtood, becauſe it is ſaid, Heb. 1. To which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, thou art my ſonne, &c. Some again on the contrary ſide ſay, that by the ſons of God in the Old Teſtament, his Angels are meant in every place, expounding therefore that of the Sons of God ſeeing the Daughters of men that they were faire, of the Angels. But the reaſon of Chryſoſtome is too weak; for that place to the Hebrews proveth only, that Chriſt had more honour done him by God, then the Angels, no one of them being ever called his begotten ſonne: and it was a manifeſt errour in ſuch as held the Angels to be meant by the Sons of God, Gen. 6. as I have there ſhewed; men then are meant there, and Angels here. Thomas Aquinas, becauſe it is ſaid, the ſonnes of God came and ſtood: but of Satan, only that he was amongſt them, noteth, that Satan was there by compulſion, they voluntarily; but they ſay better, that gather Satans impudency from hence, intruding himſelfe amongſt them in the proſecution of his malicious ends. Some note, that the Angels who ſtand for the faithfull, are many, Satan but one, ſo that they have there more friends then enemies, and therefore ſhall ſpeed well in the Court of Heaven, do the Devill what he can to the contrary.

Chryſoſt.

Gen. 6.

Tho: Aquinas.

Verſ. 8. And the Lord ſaid unto him, haſt thou conſidered my ſervant Job, &c.?

Verſ. 9, 10. Then Satan anſwered, Doth Job feare God for nought? haſt not thou made an hedge about him, and about his houſe, and about all that he hath?

Verſ. 11. But put forth thine hand, and he will curſe thee to thy face.

There being all manner of good in Job, and nothing wanting to make him moſt glorious upon earth, but to put him into a combate with the mightieſt Enemy that man hath, that is, the Devill, of whoſe power ſee Epheſ. 6. 12. that getting the victory, he might ſhine in patience alſo, as he had done in other vertues, now the Lord takes order thus to magnifie him alſo, and to make him a pattern to all other men.

Haſt thou conſidered my ſervant Job, &c?

God is brought in thus ſpeaking to Satan, and Satan anſwering him, to ſhew the great envy of Satan againſt the righteous, his indefatigable indeavours to deſtroy ſouls in all the earth, and what notice God takes of mens well doing in this world, againſt thoſe, as Ferus ſaith, that hold that God careth not for humane affairs, for he both doth, and will praiſe them that do well, and this is more then to have the praiſe of all the world; in regard of which the Apoſtle ſlighteth that as nothing worth, ſaying, Whoſe praiſe is not of men but of God. It is as if he had ſaid, Thou Satan, I know that envy which is in thee againſt Job hath brought thee hither at this time amongſt my

Ferus.

Rom. 2. 29.

ſonnes,

ſons, but to thy ſhame be it ſpoken, Job, a mortall man in the midſt of the infirmities of fleſh and blood is my faithful ſervant, & thou, a ſpirit created pure, and having no fleſh and blood to tempt thee, haſt played the Apoſtate: He is ſuch an one as is not to be found again upon the earth for perfection, uprightneſſe, the fear of God, and eſchewing evill, thou a deceiver, and lyer, and enemy to all goodneſs, and a daily practicer of all manner of evil. And this could not but be a great vexation to the Devill to heare him, whom he ſo greatly envyed, thus praiſed; But I ſay, God is brought in ſpeaking thus, and then Satan, becauſe this is not to be conceived to have been done according to the relation, but becauſe men when they have to doe one with another in conference about a third perſon, are wont by ſuch ſpeeches to declare their good will or enmity towards him: The love and good will of God towards righteous Job and all juſt men is thus declared, and Satans envy and hatred, as by a Proſopopœa.

Doth Job feare God for nought? &c.

Here it appeareth that Satan, the Devill, the old Serpent, hath not his names without cauſe: for he hateth good men, as Satan ſignifieth, and is an adverſary to them: He is a Detractor and Accuſer, as Diabolus or Devill ſignifieth: Or a doer of all evill and miſchief that he can, and by his ſubtlety like a Serpent, projecteth how he may bring his malicious ends about. If he can, he wil make a man proud of his wel doings: but if he cannot, he will extenuate all that he doth, as nothing worth, as being done only out of a mercenary mind, the good being followed only ſo farre forth as he is dearly waged thereunto.

Touch him in all that he hath.

Satan ſpeaketh thus, as intimating that he could do nothing againſt him without Gods permiſſion; for if he could, hee would not have ſpared him hitherto, bearing ſo deadly an hatred againſt him. But that he can doe nothing againſt any creature of God without it, appeareth, in that the legion of Devills being caſt out of the man poſſeſſed, asked leave to enter into the Herd of Swine, before they could enter into them; that if we feare God as Job did, we may not feare what Satan or any of his inſtruments can do unto us. Note. Matth. 8.

And the Lord ſaid unto Satan, All that he hath is in thy power, onely upon himſelfe put not forth thine hand. Verſ. 2.

It may ſeem ſtrange that the Lord by the inſtigation of Satan ſhould commit all that Job had into his hands: can this be thought juſt towards one, that alwayes ſo devoutly and faithfully ſerved him? But the end of the Lord in his thus doing muſt be conſidered: It was not for any evill, but for the good of Job, that he left Jobs goods and children unto him as the ſequel ſhewed: For he did but bring him into the liſts as his Champion to combate with Satan to foile and overcome him by his admirable patience and conſtancy in his ſervice in the middeſt of all his ſufferings to his greater praiſe, and Satans greater confuſion. And when he had gotten ſo famous a victory, he crowned him by doubling his bleſſings upon him, in children, worldly goods, and long life in peace and proſperity: And by his example he gave encouragement to all his faithfull ſervants in all places to the worlds end with the like patience to beare their loſſes and croſſes whatſoever they be, and of how long a continuance ſoever, not fearing what the Devil or wicked men can do unto them. Note.

And Satan went forth from the preſence of the Lord. That is, having licenſe given him, he immediately goeth about his malicious work of diſpoiling Job of all that he had: And it is noted firſt at what time he did it.

There was a day, when his Sons and Daughters were eating and drinking Wine in their eldeſt Brothers houſe. Verſ. 13.

The ſubtle Serpent knowing, that when Men and Women make merry together, by eating and drinking liberally, it can hardly be without ſin, as was before noted, took this opportunity to do Job all the miſcheiſe here related together, not only to provoke Job to impatience, but to diſcourage from ſuch meetings of Bretheren in love, and to deſtroy if he could, both the Bodyes and Soules of his Children at once. And Gregory here further noteth; that their feaſting in their eldeſt Brothers houſe at this time, when this Judgement fell upon them, ſheweth, in what danger men are, when he that is Watchman over others, is given to drinking of Wine, contrary to the Precept of the Apoſtle 1. Tim. 3. In the 14. 15. 16 17. 18. 19. verſes, the miſcheifes done by the Devil to Job are declared, and the news hereof was brought unto him.

Gregory.

Verſ. 14. First, The Oxen were plowing and the Aſſes feeding by them, and the Sabeans fell upon them and took them away, &c. This Judgement is aggravated by this, that the Oxen were taken away, when they were plowing, the hope of a crop of Corn to come of plowing, and ſowing of the Ground, being thus fruſtrated, beſides the loſſe of ſo many Cattell.

Verſ. 16. Secondly, Whilſt he was ſpeaking, another came and ſaid; The fire of God fell from Heaven and hath burnt up thy Sheep and thy Servants, &c. This was a more grievious Temptation then the firſt, which was but a loſſe by men: For ſtill there is comfort to a faithfull perſon, that God is not againſt him, but favoureth him, but when God ſhall ſeem to be againſt him alſo, what comfort can he then have? Then immediatly comes news of another Judgement: The Verſ. 17. Caldeans made out three Bands and fell upon the Camels and carried them away, &c. Nothing remaining of all his Subſtance before commemorated, but three thouſand Camels, in regard of which he might have had ſome comfort, now they are taken away alſo and his Servants ſlain: And to make up the meaſure of his Sufferings to the full, another cometh: Immediatly after another came and ſaid; Thy Sons and Daughters were eating and drinking

Verſ. 18. 19 in their eldeſt Brothers houſe, and behold there came a great wind from the Wilderneſſe, and ſmote the four corners of the houſe, and it fell upon the young men and they are dead. For his Cattell being all loſt, but his Children ſtill remaining he might have had ſome comfort from them, but they being ſlain alſo, here was the greateſt extremity of miſery in this mortall life. And yet this was more aggravated by hearing it to have been done by Gods Hand, for who but God can raiſe the winds, and cauſe great Tempeſts, or the Devil, the Prince of the Ayre by his permiſſion? And this muſt needs afflict Jobs Soule, the more that this was done at ſuch a time, as probably they were moſt ſecure, eating and drinking, being ſpoken of by our Lord, to ſhew the great

Luk. 17. 27. ſecurity of the wicked World at the day of Judgement, as of the Sodomites, when fire and brimſtone came down from Heaven, and deſtroyed them. But

Verſ. 20. what did Job, when he heard all this? He aroſe and rent his Mantle, and ſhaved his Head and fell down upon the Ground, and worſhiped, and ſaid;

Verſ. 21. Naked came I out of my Mothers Womb, and naked ſhall I return; the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord.

A ſingular example of patience, and conſtancy in ſerving God, worthy the imitation of all the Faithfull: In rending his Garments, ſhaving his Head, and falling down to the Ground, he did according to the common manner of men, in times of great calamity: For piety expelleth not nature ſo, but that the Note. Godly as well as others are affected at loſſes and great ſufferings, but herein was the difference, Job worſhiped and praiſed God ſtill, as not being diſcouraged, or made to deſpaire, for all this of Gods favour. For in ſaying, firſt, that he worſhiped God; then that he bleſſed his name, he in the laſt words expreſſeth, what he meant by the former, he blaſphemed not, being by his ſufferings inraged againſt God, after the manner of wicked men, who have nothing in them, but nature, but contrarywiſe he bleſſeth and praiſeth him, as acknowledging, that he was able and would make all things to work together for the beſt unto him, as it is promiſed to all that love God, and are

Rom. 8. 28. his elect, which he alſo intimateth by ſaying, As it pleaſeth the Lord ſo come things things to paſſe. And in his bleſſing of God, what ſaith he? Naked came I: as if he had ſaid, it was Gods goodneſſe toward me, that I had any Poſſeſſions and Children, for I came naked into the World having nothing, and when I depart again out of this life, I ſhall carry away nothing, but then at the leaſt I muſt be ſtript of all again, I do not therefore count theſe worldly things mine own, but the Lords; for whom it is free as to give ſo to take according to his own good pleaſure: No reaſon therefore why, as if he had wronged me herein, that I ſhould for this loſſe go from his worſhip and ſervice, nay I will not, but ſerve him ſtill with my praiers and praiſes: And ſo ſhould we that beleive in God alſo, not being diſheartned for any evills in this life befalling us. And in ſaying, The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh, not the Lord giveth, and men, or the Devil take away, although he was not ignorant, that even the Divill was an agent herein, to caſt down fire, and to ſtir up ſo ſtrong a tempeſt: He herein teacheth us in our ſufferings in any kind, not to look at the Inſtruments, or ſecondary cauſes, but up to God: For he only is able to ſmite us, and without his permiſſion they can do nothing againſt us; Thus alſo David ſaid touching Shimei raying upon him and curſing him. He curſed, becauſe God had him curſe. Note.

In all this Job ſinned not, nor charged God fooliſhly. Verſ. 22.

Job that was praiſed before his ſufferings, now is prayſed again for his perſevering in the feare of God, keeping him from ſinning under ſo great, and grievous ſufferings: and truely it ſheweth a man excelling all other famous men o the World, being under ſo ſtrong temptations, not to ſin by impatience of mind, or by uttering fooliſh and raſh ſpeeches againſt God: And as this tendeth to his exceeding great praiſe, ſo it reproveth us, that when we ſuffer but a little, can have no patience, but murmure and fret and vex hereat without all reaſon. For the laſt words, He charged not God fooliſhly, Calvin noteth, that Heb. it is, Put not upon God any unreaſonable thing, the word תִּפְלָה ſignifieth properly inſulſum, unſavoury, the meaning is, although he had done ſo by him, as could not have been expected, yet he acknowledged that God ſaw good cauſe, why he thus ſuffered him to be tempted, and herein he reſted: And the like conſideration ought we to have in all our ſufferings, and then doubtleſſe wee ſhall likewiſe have the praiſe of true patience. For this is not to beare evill only, as ſome are thought for this to be patient, but to look up to God, that afflicteth us, and becauſe we beleeve he doth it, and he knoweth good reaſon why, to ſubmit to his Will, and Wiſdome, bleſſing him therefore as being fully aſsured that it is beſt for us to be thus dealt withall, although we ſee not how for the preſent, for afterwards we ſhall. For Jobs rending of his Garments and polling his head, I have further ſhewed that in thoſe hot Countries, wherein they were more ceremonious then we are in this cold, they had this cuſtome, amongſt others, to rend their Garments and cut off their Haire, or to teare it off for ſorrow, and therefore herein Job did after his country manner, to ſhew what greif peirced his heart, that his refraining of himſelf from going further in his paſſion, and even then breaking out into the praiſes of God, who ſmote him, might be the more admirable. For as Calvin alſo ſaith, for a ſtock or a ſtone to ſuffer any thing patiently is no praiſe, ſo for a Stoick or ſtock-like or mad man that feeleth not, neither is ſenſible of miſery: but for a man that is peirced in his heart with extream greife, yet to moderate himſelf, and to celebrate Gods geſts and praiſes, this is a thing commendable indeed. Calvin. Note.

Gregory upon all this, from Satans comming and ſtanding before the Lord amongſt his Sons, Moralizeth thus: The Sons of God ſtand before him, when the Faithfull have good and Heavenly meditations in their mind, for thus they ſet themſelves as it were before God: And Satan thruſts himſelf in amongſt them, when he ſuggeſteth evill thoughts into their Minds, but it is ſhewed that God finds theſe out for them, and makes them known unto them, becauſe they not diſcerning Satan to be there, the Lord by asking him; Gregory.

Whence comeſt Thou, diſcovereth him, when he drew this anſwer from him. I came from compaſſing the Earth and walking to and fro in it.

For what is here ſet forth by the Earth But the Earthly, or naturall part of man? wherein he is not ſaid to flee, but to walk to and fro, Intimating his aboad here. ſeeking to take advantage by the fleſh to tempt us to things againſt which the Spirit moveth us: Then the Lord to ſhew his ſpeciall providence over the Faithfull, asketh him ſaying, Haſt thou conſidered my Servant Job?

Seeſt thou how little thou proficeſt by thy evill Suggeſtions with my faithfull Servants, that are not like others, who are altogether carnall and earthly, but walk uprightly before me, when thou haſt aſſaulted them to the uttermoſt by thy Temptations; then Satan replyeth. Doth Job feare God for nought, haſt not Thou hedged him about, &c.? That is, this were ſomewhat indeed if he ſtood by his own ſtrength, but thou ſtrengthneſt him to ſtand, and yet upbraideſt me by him, that do what I can, ſuch a man ſtill continueth in his uprightneſſe. But touch all that he hath, let me alone by my Temptations to bring him low, that he may ſee, that he hath of himſelf no good in him, but is full of ſin and evill. Then the Lord, to make the grace in the Faithfull to ſhine more, permitteth him thus to do. And now all that he hath is ſmitten, only he cannot by all this touch him, that is, his heart, for this God keepeth ſo, as that howſoever he be tempted, yet life is herein preſerved: Whereby he is borne up, when he is moſt filled with feare and deſpaire in reſpect of his infirmities, and the worthleſneſſe which he ſeeth in himſelf, as the Apoſtle, who ſaith, In me, that is in my fleſh, there is no good, And miſerable man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this death? yet by and by to ſhew that life was upheld in him, he addeth, Thanks be to God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in my mind I learn the Law of God although in my Members the Law of ſin.

Rom. 7.

For their eating and drinking wine in their eldeſt Brothers houſe, this ſetteth forth the comfort that is in ſuch as are indued with Virtue through Faith, which is, as it were, the eldeſt of all graces, and hereby only we can have true Joy, but without it, not: For without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. Jobs renting his Garments and ſhaving his Head ſetteth forth the ſad condition, wherein the Faithfull ſometimeare through temptations, but or ſomuch as they were born naked, & void of all good: And that they know is the gift of God, in hope that it will pleaſe him to give, and increaſe again, that which of his own good will he hath ſo freely given. They fall to bleſſing and praiſing of him, not dobuting but to be reſtored.

Heb. 11. 6.

CHAP. II.

IN this Chapter another time ſtanding of the Sonnes of God before him, and Satans being amongſt them to move the Lord to permit him to ſmite Job in his perſon, is ſet forth. For the three former verſes, they are the ſame with Chap, 1. 6. 7. 8. And therefore need no Expoſition, Verſ. 4. Skin for Skin and all that a man hath will he give for his life.

Verſ. 4.

Verſ. 5. But put forth thine hand now, and touch his Bone and his fleſh, and he will curſe thee to thy face.

Verſ. 6. And the Lord ſayd unto Satan, behold he is in thine hand, but ſave his life.

Ferus. This is the reply of Satan to the Lord commending Job again, as before, and adding, Although thou moveſt me againſt him, to deſtroy him without cauſe. What meaneth the Lord to ſay thus, is not he the juſt Judge of all the world, and will he then deſtroy any mans poſſeſſions, and take them away without cauſe?

To

To this Ferus answereth well, these words without cause, or in vain, may be understood two wayes. Ferus.

First, When any thing is done, but the end of doing it is not attained, so the Devill moved God against Job, and his Motion being granted, yet he attained not his end, to make Job through impatience to blaspheme. But yet on Gods part, this destruction came not upon Job without cause, for his end was attained, to make the patience of Job, and his Faith to shine the more, and so to make him the more illustrious, and by his example, suffering so patiently such greivous things to stir others of his Faithfull servants up to patience, and to make them confident and courageous against the devill in all his assaults and to confound him.

Secondly, When any thing is done in Judgment against a man he not deserving it: and thus Job was afflicted without cause; for although all men be sinners, and so God may justly lay his Judgments upon them, yet the Faithfull are by Faith justified from all their sinnes, and therefore there is nothing in them for which they can now be judged: But for the Tryall of their Faith and Patience, and consequently for their greater future good, and glorification, it is not strange for the righteous Judge of all to suffer Satan to winnow them. For the momentany afflictions of this life do work unto us a surpassing weight of Glory that shall be revealed. 2 Cor. 4. 17.

To this effect Ferus, a Fryer; To be noted the rather because the present Fryers and Preists do teach to the contrary, that the Faithfull have sufferings layd upon them to satisfy the Justice of God in respect of temporall punishments due for their sinnes, as Christ hath satisfied for the Eternall, and if this were so, how can it be sayd, that Job suffered without cause? Now to proceed to V. 4.

Skin for skin, and all that a man hath, he will give for his life. Vers. 4.

It is as if he had sayd, thou hast hitherto touched him no further then he may well patiently bear: there be more men then he, that suffering the losse of all their worldly Goods, have been very patient men in danger of drowning at sea, cast their Goods forth to lighten the ship, and save their lives, and being in their Enemies hands, will give all their substance for a Ransome, that their lives may be spared: neither are Children so deare unto them, but, their own lives are dearer; according to the saying, Proximus sui quisque sibi, every one is neereſt to himselfe, and the skin and flesh of another, whether child or servant is not so much to him, but if his own skin and Body be untouched he may bear it: But herein the Devil shewed his malice and subtilty, for Job did not only bear all his losses patiently, as others, even naturall men, have sometimes done, but also prayed God therefore, as never any man before him did, so that herein Job was singular, as also the Apostles afterwards, who praised God, that they were counted worthy to suffer for the name of Christ. The word rendred life here is נפש the Soul, but his life is herby meant, when the Lord permitted Satan to smite Job, in his Body; saying, but save his life. Act. 4.

A thing well to be noted, that although God sometime giveth Satan power over the Goods and Bodyes of his Children, their skin and bones, as is here sayd, yet that which is the principall thing, the life and Soule, he reserveth to his own protection, not permitting him to have any power over this; that no righteous man be discouraged, when hee readeth of Jobs being given into Satans hands, for it is but to suffer in things lesser and transitory, but still to without danger of suffering the losse of the Soul which is eternall, Note.

And Satan knowing, that God would not suffer him herein to touch Job, dareth not to move him any further then about his Bones and his skin. But it is to be noted, that he was so malicious, that he is not satisfied with so great a blow given to Job in his Substance and Children, but he desireth to have Note.

have him tormented to the uttermoſt, and that he is moſt ſubtill to accompliſh this, that we may in nothing think ever to be beneficed by him, how well ſoever he ſeemeth to deal with us; ſometime helping men to Moneys, ſometime to recover things loſt, and ſometime to health in moſt dangerous ſickneſſes. And that not being ignorant of his ſubtiltyes, we may do all dilligence to learn out of the word to be Wiſe, that he may not circumvent us as the Serpent did Eve to our everlaſting ruine.

Verſ. 7. So Satan went forth from the preſence of the Lord, and ſmote Job with ſore boiles, from the ſole of his foot unto his Crown.

Verſ. 8. And he tooke him a Potſheard to ſcrape himſelfe withall, and he ſate down among the Aſhes.

Gen. 14. He is ſayd to go out from the preſence of the Lord, that goeth about any malicious practiſes, as Cain is ſpoken of likewiſe: the Angells are ſayd to aſcend to God, and to deſcend, and to ſtand before him, but no where to go out from his preſence, for this is to go out full of Wrath, Malice, and Indignation, and the Good Angells never do; but both evill ſpirits and men do. And this is in this ſenſe rightly ſpoken of them, becauſe they have not God in their wayes; and wiſh themſelves out of his preſence the more licentiouſly to commit evill. Now that it is here meant thus, appeareth becauſe he went and moſt cruelly ſmote Job with a ſore diſeaſe, no part of his Body being ſpared, but both ſore, and mattery, and ſo loathſome to behold, and full of extream paine; for the matteryneſſe of his ſores, is implyed, in that it is ſaid he ſcraped them with a Potſheard, by which circumſtance alſo his miſery is the more agravated, he hath no oyntments nor baths to leniſie his ſoreneſſe, neither lay he upon a ſoft Bed, but upon the Ground in aſhes, heavy and ſorrowfull: for ſo men in ſorrow ſtrew aſhes upon themſelves, or duſt of the Earth. That this ſuffering of Job and the greatneſſe of it may be the better conceived, ſome compare it with that of Lazarus, touching which Chriſoſt. reckoneth up nine particulars aggravating it.

Chriſoſt. de Lazaro.

First, His extream poverty.
Secondly, His Sores, of which he was full.
Thirdly, He was deſtitute of all humane help.
Fourthly, He lay upon the Ground.
Fifthly, He was ſick and very weak.
Sixthly, He ſaw the plenty wherein Dives lived; for although he minded him not, yet it could not but greive him the more, when he compared together his Welfare and Pleaſure, and his own ſufferings.
Seventhly, He was unparrallel'd, no man being in that miſery in this World, that he was in.
Eighthly, He was for this evill thought of, a varlet and wicked man, and unworthy of any mercy.
Ninthly, Which yet I cannot think, he knew not of the reſurrection: So Job was moſt poore, full of ſoares, no man did help him, but he ſcraped himſelfe, he alſo lay upon the Ground, and could not but be very weak, not being able to eat any thing in 7. dayes, three men of great wealth and Dignity were in his eye, cenſuring him as an Hypocrite, and for Parallel he had none, but he beleeved the reſurrection, and herein his miſery was yet greater then that of Lazarus; becauſe he had been ſo opulent, and mighty, and bleſſed with Children, but now had loſt all: his ſufferings were alſo greater then thoſe of the wicked Egyptians, whoſe not only boyles, but all their ten plagues one runneth through, and ſheweth that Jobs were yet greater.

Job 19. 25.

Pineda,

Verſ. 9. Then ſayd Iobs wife unto him, Doſt thou ſtill retain Integrity? Curſe God, and dye.

Philo. Calde paraph. Genebr. Who Iobs Wife was, ſome take upon them to determine, as Philo Judeus the Cald. Paraphr. and Genebrard in Chronol. and ſome Jews go further, ſaying, that Iob had a moſt faire Daughter by his Wife Dinah whom Potipher married, and that of her came Aſenaz whom Ioſeph married. But all theſe are but conjectures, and there is no certainty in them: It may ſeem ſtrang, that when all his Children periſhed, that his Wife was preſerved ſtill alive: Touching this, diverſe conjecture diverſly. Some that God would have her ſpared, that being brought to ſo great poverty, ſhe might beg for him: Some that ſhe was ſpared, becauſe ſhe was one with him, from touching whoſe life Satan was reſtrained: but the moſt common received opinion was, that Satan ſpared her, that by her he might be yet further tempted to curſe God. So Tertullian, Ciprian. Auguſt. Chriſoſt. Stephanus, Proſper, Gaudentius: And this ſeemeth moſt probable, becauſe his words ſo fitly agree, with thoſe of Satan before uſed, He will curſe thee to thy face. Tertull. Ciprian. Auguſt.

the

* For the temptation of the Wife is of greateſt force, as that old Serpent found once by experience. When by his inſtigation Eve tempted Adam to eate of the forbidden Fruit: Therefore Chryſoſt. calleth her the apteſt and ſtrongeſt Inſtrument, wherewith the Devil could fight againſt Iob, and Nazianzen the hope of calamity. And of Wives in generall, Seneca ſaith, that they are kept by the councell of Megara and the furies for the extream miſery of Kings, and ſome to diſgrace ſuch women: the more ſay, that the ſame word which ſet forth Adams Wife without an aſpiration ſignifieth a woman, but with an aſpiration, a Serpent, which yet holdeth not, unleſſe it be meant ח being put for ה and ׳ for ו for the word ſignifying a Beaſt or a Serpent is חפה But to let ſuch ſpeculations paſſe, and to come to her ſpeech. Only we may firſt take notice: That Chryſoſt. ſaith, ſome think, that the Devil in the ſhape of Iobs Wife ſpake thus unto him, and not ſhe: And if not yet he thinketh, that the Devil ſpake by her, for he ſtirred her up: As he did ſometime by the Serpent to Eve, for he ſaith, that ſhe was by a diabolicall fury ſtirred up, and as a ſtrong Engine uſed to a Wall of Adomant, which Iob was. For the words of Iobs Wife, Curſe God and dye. It is thought that ſhe uſed many more words, as that he ſaw now by experience, that he had no priviledge by his ſo conſtant ſerving of God, but that it befell him as to the moſt wicked, therefore ſhe perſwaded him now ſeeing there was no hope, that he ſhould live long in ſuch extremity of paine, to blaſpheme and curſe God by uttering all the virulent words that he could againſt him in way of revenge for dealing thus cruelly with him. Some ſeeing there cometh no more good of ſerving God, give this thy piety over, and fall to another courſe of life more licentious, happily if thou doſt ſo it will be better for thee, for it cannot be worſe with thee, then now it is; Some, provoke God by blaſpheming him, to kill thee out of Hand, that thou mayſt inſtantly be rid of thy paine. Laſtly, Some blaſpheme God, that by the Law paſſing upon thee for it, thy life may be taken away, which now is irkſome to thee: but this laſt way I cannot think it to be meant, becauſe that although amongſt the Jews, it was death to blaſpheme or curſe God, yet who knoweth that it was ſo amongſt the Gentiles, who were idolators. Yea they commonly blaſpheme the true God, as Pharaoh, Sennacherib and Benhadad King of Syria. Neither is the ſecond opinion more probable; for change the courſe of a mans life, one may do, and yet not blaſpheme or curſe God. Therefore the firſt and third are to be preferred, betwixt which, there is little difference, where as ſome will not have the words expounded curſe; but Bleſs God, it is to be noted that although the word ברך ſignifieth to bleſſe, as well as to curſe: yet it is the ſame that was uſed before by the Devil ſaying, He will curſe thee to thy face: And therefore ſhe ſeemeth in uſing Satans wrod to ſpeak from his mouth, and not in a contrary ſence. Yet Cajetan rendring it by bleſſing ſaith; it is ironically ſpoken, as if ſhe had ſaid, ſurely thou doeſt very worthily, to hold on in bleſſing God in the midſt of all thy Sufferings, even go on ſtill ſo to do until the death, Nazianzen. Chryſoſt. Verſ. 10. Tho: Aquin. Lira. Chriſoſt. Apollonius. Baſil. Cajetan.

death: But thou ſhalt but ſhew thy ſelfe a fool in ſo doing, bleſſing, and being rewarded with a tormenting death.

Calvin. Calvin alſo ſeemeth to be for this, concluding, that which way ſoever it be taken, all comes to one iſſue, ſhe ſought to drive him to deſpaire and to utter, in ſtead of bleſſing God, any words of impatience and diſcontent at Gods doings in way of revenge before he dyed. And this is implyed in his anſwer. Thou ſpeakeſt as one of the fooliſh women.

Verſ. 10.

Ferus. Where by this one, Ferus underſtandeth Eve tempting Adam, and bringing him and his Poſterity to miſery, as if he had ſaid, this did Eve once moſt fooliſhly, by the inſtigation of the ſubtle Serpent, move her Husband to ſin, how is it then, that thou conſidereſt not that the Devil now attempteth the like by thee againſt me?

Shall we receive good things at the hands of God, and not receive Evill? If this be come upon me by Gods providence, as we are not to doubt, but it is, let us remember how much good we have received from him in the former part of our life; We had great ſtore of Subſtance, upon which we lived plentifully from day to day; we had Children alſo to our greater comfort, and Servants to wait upon us, and lived in the beſt manner: if therefore now the wheel be turned, and we be made as low, as we were then high, let us weigh the one againſt the other, and not deale by God, as if he had never dealt favourably with us; Like Perſons ungratefull to their Benefactors, who if they go not on continually to do them good, will declaim againſt them, as much as ever they have extolled them. Againe when I had the Goods of this World, we could not, unleſſe we were fooles but acknowledg them to be momentany, and not ſuch as could laſt alwaies with us: And as it is in reſpect of Goods, ſo in reſpect of bodily health; for, it is common to all men, ſometime to injoy health, and then come grievous ſickneſſes and diſeaſes to many. And as the one ſort is momentany, ſo is the other, wherefore it were great folly as not to reioyce in the one, ſo not to be patient in the other, but to think alwaies in this tranſitory life to continue in one eſtate: Moreover it is a point of wiſdome rather in this afflicted eſtate, to ſeek to the Lord, the great Moderator of all things, according to whoſe will they come to paſſe, to be again propitious and favourable to us, as he out of his goodneſſe is inclinable, then to break out through impatience to the uttering of any words, whereby he may be further provoked. For if I having ſo duly ſerved him and lived alwaies in his feare, ſuffer yet theſe grievous things at this time, by men or Devils, who have wrought me this miſcheife by his permiſſion, how can I but expect greater ſufferings, if by curſing God, as thou wouldeſt have me, I provoke him to wrath againſt me? If ſuch things be done to the green Tree, what ſhall be done to the dry? If to a man perſiſting in his integrity, being full of the Sapp and moyſture of grace, much more in the caſe of having this grace dryed up, and becoming as waſt wood, which is fit for nothing but the fire: ſhall I be in danger of being made fewell, for the fire of Hel for evermore? Moſt worthy conſiderations to be had in the mindes of us all in the time of miſery; that for no ſufferings we break out through impatience to the diſhonouring of God, that ſmites us by what Inſtruments ſoever, but rather the more we are afflicted, we be the more devoted to his ſervice, turning and ſeeking to him, as the Prophet exhorteth, and then we may be in good hope of an happy iſſue out of all our trouble, as Job had, and is promiſed, Let us turne to the Lord, for he hath ſmitten us, and he will heale us.

Note.

Hoſ. 6. 1.

Now when Jobs three Friends heard of all this evill that was come upon him, They came every one from his own place: Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, for they had made an agreement together, to come to mourn with him, and to comfort him.

Verſ. 17

Having ſhewed, how he was tempted by his Wife; now the coming of his his three Friends unto him, beginneth to be related, and afterward what they ſaid further to vex him, and to try his patience, by laying hypocriſie to his charge, They ſhewed themſelves indeed at the firſt to be friends in that they were moved with compaſſion, at the hearing of his miſery, and took their journey with an unanimous conſent unto him to comfort him. For they are true Fr ends that ſhew themſelves friendly in adverſity, they that are friendly and come in proſperity, but not in adverſity; are but trencher friends, who ſeek to the rich for their own good, not for his: when he hath not wherewith they may be any more benefited, they will no more come at him; according to the ſaying: Whilſt thou art in proſperity, thou ſhalt have many Friends, &c. And this is the friendlineſſe of moſt Chriſtians, to our ſhame be it ſpoken, when there was ſuch friendſhip even amongſt Heathens, as ſhewed it ſelfe in adverſity and poverty: But ſome make a queſtion, whether they were true friends or no; becauſe, when they had been awhile with him, they fel ſo foule u on him; but they are called his friends, becauſe they ſeemed ſuch, as Herod is ſaid to have been ſorry, when the Head of John Baptiſt was asked by the Daughter of Herodias, becauſe he ſeemed ſo; Olympiodorus, yet better ſaith, that they were true friends and kinſmen, being all of the poſterity of Eſau, as he was; and that coming with a good intention to comfort him, by the Divils temptation, they were carried a contrary way to ſpeak againſt him: For their hearing of Jobs diſeaſe, Origen thinketh, that the Divil might declare it to them, to move them to go for his own ends, before touched upon; ſome that the good Angels made it known unto them, that they might go to comfort him, being wiſe and religious men alſo, as their ſpeeches after following ſhew: For it is not likely, but that Job was choice in making friendſhip with men, as David profeſſeth, that his delight was in the excellent: And Abraham is ſaid to have had his three Friends that went to war with him againſt the enemies of Lot, Aner, Eſhcol, and Mamre; It may be both; that the Divil, and good Angels alſo, for diverſe reſpects, brought the new of this unto them: but without any ſuch meanes, by common fame, or report, which fleeth apace abroad; eſpecially touching the ruine of great men, they might eaſily come to heare of it, hebeing known to be their friend: As Abraham was ſeen tould of Lots captivity that he might be an help to him. And indeed for true Friends to beare a part with a man in miſery is no little lightning of the burthen, under which he groaneth, as when more ſhoulders bearing up the ſame weight, make it the lighter: For the time of the coming of theſe men nothing is ſaid; but it is ſet down next in order, after his wives ſpeaking as before: It is moſt probable, that ſo ſoon as they heard certainly of his miſerable caſe, they appointed a time to go unto him together, but being, as it is conceived, Princes alſo ſometime, muſt come between for their affaires at home, ſo that many daies of Jobs ſore diſeaſe were paſt before they came unto him.

Dum fueris fælix multos numerabis amicos: Nullus ad amiſſas ibit amicus opes.

Olympiod.

Origen.

And when they lifted up their eyes afar off and knew him not, they lifted up their voyce and wept: And they rent every one his Mantle, and ſprinkled dust upon their heads towards heaven. And they ſet down with him upon the ground ſeven daies and ſeven nights, and none ſpake a word unto him, &c. Verſ. 12. 13.

All this ſhewed the greatneſſe of their griefe, and conſequently the greatneſſe of his miſery affecting them ſo much, that by ſimpathyzing with him, they were ſo taken, that they never ſpake or took any ſuſtenance in ſo long a time; but ſate mourning upon the ground, to ſee their friend to be ſo greatly changed in his outward frame, that for the boyles upon him, they could not know him to be the man. Here was that of the Apoſtle fulfilled, Weep with them that weep: And this is indeed to comfort our friends and neighbours in miſery, to beare a part of their ſorrow with Calvin. them. But as Calvin noteth, they fayled, in that through aſtoniſhment they continued ſilent ſo long a time, and ſpake nothing to comfort him: And it ſeemeth by their ſpeeches afterwards, that when they ſaw him in this caſe, they changed their opinion of him, thinking him, for all his ſhew of godlineſſe to be a wicked man, and a caſtaway: So that all that time moſt probably, they meditated how to ſpeak unto him; to the ſame effect, we ought contrariwiſe, when we come to viſit and comfort the ſick and afflicted, not only to be affected with ſorrow, but alſo to ſtudy to ſpeake ſomething whereby they may be comforted the better to beare their miſeries; or to bring them into ſuch a condition by repentance and godly ſorrow wrought in them, that they may be capable of true comfort, if their life hath been ſuch, that there is need thereof.

Note.

Gregory. Morally, Gregory noteth hence: That as Satan put a ſpace betwixt his firſt and ſecond ſmiting of Job; ſo he dealeth with the faithfull in regard of temptation: We muſt not think, when we have been tempted, and have once overcome, that henceforth we ſhall be aſſaulted no more: But after one, we muſt prepare for more encounters. He ſmiteth with boyles from the ſole of the foot, to the crown, when from leſſer temptations, he aſcendeth and proceedeth to greater, to the corrupting of the Soule, ſo far forth as that it mattereth, by ſome corruption made to break, the life yet being ſaved, by the abiding of grace ſtil in the heart: Whereby a man ſcrapeth theſe ſores, as it were with a potſheard, by ſtrictly looking into his ſins, and ſeverely judging himſelfe therefore, rigorouſly afflicting his Soule with ſorrow and contrition: Then he alſo lyeth upon the ground in aſhes, when he thinketh vilely of himſelfe: As Abraham ſpeaking to the Lord ſaid, I am duſt and aſhes, for ſo much more ſhould we do, even when God graceth us moſt, as he did him, by vouchſafeing to talk with him, and to make him of his counſel: whereas ſome through the leaſt meaſure of grace, are contrariwiſe puffed up, and have high thoughts of themſelves; whereas Job was further tempted by his wife, this ſheweth the temptation of fleſhly cogitations alſo added to theſe of Satan, which yet he manfully reſiſteth: whereas wicked men having them, are taken with them, and overcome. Laſtly, as Job was all theſe wayes tempted, and yet here was not an end, but his friends came under a colour to vex him yet more; So ſome vices ſeeming to be vertues, do more indanger the faithfull, if they take not heed thereof: as anger and revenge coming under the colour of juſtice, remiſsneſſe under the colour of mercifulneſſe, and the feare of men under the colour of humility, making a man to yeild obedience, and to ſubmit unto them againſt Gods precepts. Theſe three ſpecially, as Jobs three friends, are apt to deceive us: but there be more alſo, as Elihu came alſo afterwards, of which we muſt likewiſe take heed; as hypocriticall outward performances of good duties pretending to be piety. But theſe masked vices coming to the faithfull in miſery and ſorrow, knew him not, that is, came without effect in him, yet they will comply with him, by rending their garments, by weeping, by ſitting upon the ground, and putting duſt upon their Heads: For Piety is ſet forth by weeping, Diſcretion by rending the garment, the affection of workes by duſt upon their heades, and Humility by ſitting upon the Ground.

Gen. 19.

CHAP III.

Verſ. 1. 2, 3. AND Iob opened his mouth and curſed his day, ſaying, Let the day periſh wherein I was born, and the night wherein it was ſaid, There is a man child conceived.

After ſo long ſilence, Iob finding no eaſe of his intolerable pangs, changeth his tune, and ſheweth no further patience by bleſſing God; but much much weakneſs being overcome by paſſion, and curſing the day of his Birth. Yet ſome Expoſitors think, that this is not to be expounded literally, but altogether allegorically. Or that Iob ſpake thus, not as in his own, but the perſon of a wicked man. And to prove this, they reaſon from the commendation given him before, and in the end, he being juſtified by God, to have ſpoken more rightly, then any of the other men, who came to viſit him. But as Ferus ſaith, Iob is not ſaid, as before, not to have ſinned in thus ſaying; neither can he be excuſed from impatience ſhewing herein. Rather it is to be held, that the Lord, who before ſtood by him, now for a time left him, to try what is in man, even the beſt man living, if he be not ſtrengthened by God continually. The like we may ſee in David, ſometime being moſt courageous, and ſometime full of feare; courageous againſt Goliah, fearefull when Saul perſued him: So Jeremiah and Peter; yea the Son of man, Chriſt himſelfe cryed out as forſaken of God, when he ſhewed not himſelfe in mercy to him hanging upon the Croſs, but as a ſevere Judge againſt him ſtanding in our ſtead, and made him ſin for us, although this feare and paſſionateneſs in him was no ſin, for he knew none: Theſe words then came from Iob as effects of his extream pangs and Sufferings, whereby he was carryed to ſpeak thus unadviſedly, as the moſt righteous may be, as not being for a time, through the ſenſe of paine themſelves. But theſe paſſionate ſpeeches God imputed not to him for ſin, and therefore he afterwards juſtified him in all that he ſaid; Yet not to animate us in our greateſt ſufferings to do the like, but to ſhew us our weakneſs, that we may ſtrive daily to be more and more ſtrengthened to all patience, and long ſuffering, and when through weakneſs we fayl, be comforted and ſeek help of God to come out of moſt impetuous temptations: We may think, as Peter, before we be tempted, that we have ſtrength enough to ſtand; but as it was with him in the time of temptation, ſo we may feare it may be with us: As a man in health thinketh, when he ſeeth another in ſickneſs impatient, he would not be ſo in the like caſe: But coming alſo to be tryed, he can as ill beare it, as that other man.

Ferus.

2 Cor. 5. 20.

Note.

Gregory will by no meanes have it taken as literally ſpoken, becauſe it is not probable, that having ſtood ſo firmly hitherto, both when his Children and Servants and all his Subſtance was loſt: Yea and his Body alſo ſore ſmitten, being provoked by his Wife hereunto, he could not yet be moved to any impatience or curſing, and is it then probable, that now nothing provoking him, yea having his freinds about him, bearing, by their ſorrow, part of his burthen with him, that he would break out into impatience and curſing, as not being able to beare his miſery any longer? Moreover, let his words be taken literally, and what ſenſe is in them?

Gregory.

Let the day be curſed, wherein I was born: And let it be dark, becauſe that day was long ago paſt, and can never be again: And whereas he wiſheth, that he had dyed ſo ſoon as he was born, for this ſavoreth not, as coming from one that knew he was born in ſin: And therefore if he dyed before he was born again of water and of the ſpirit, he could not be ſaved, and that this could not be without circumciſion then, or baptiſme now: Therefore upon theſe reaſons, we are driven to ſeek out the meaning of his words, as not being of literall, but altogether of an allegoricall underſtanding: Now to curſe cometh ſometime from God, who curſeth in his juſtice; As he did the Serpent, and the Earth for mans ſake, when he had ſinned; ſometime from holy men, as they are moved by way of propheſie, by the ſpirit of God: As Eliſha curſed the Children of Bethel that mocked him, and Noah Canaan the Son of Ham; And ſometime from envy and wrath in man, and this curſing only is evil, and by the Apoſtle forbidden, ſaying, Bleſs my Brethren and curſe not.

Iob then might curſe here, and yet not ſin, but ſpeak by the ſpirit of God, and not of impatience. But what ſhall we underſtand then by the day, which he curſeth, verily by this Day, we may underſtand, the whole time of this mortal life; Which he by thus ſaying, and Let it be turned into darkneſs, foretelleth, that it ſhall have an end, and then there ſhall be no light here any more: All the Heavenly Lights fayling, and the Heavens themſelves, and ſo all ſhall be darkneſs, as it was ſaid in the beginning, that darkneſs was upon the face of the Earth. He meaneth not then the day of his Nativity in particular only: But the time, wherein both he and all others are born in ſin and miſery into this World; for which he ſayeth not, the day of my Creation, for Man was made righteous, but of my Birth, of which it is ſaid: I was Conceived in ſin, and born in iniquity. And Man that is born of a Woman is full of miſery &c. And he ſayeth. Let that day periſh, that is be no more; For periſhing is two waies: either by being in an evil caſe, or when a lightſome day is darkned, or ceaſing to be, and in this latter ſenſe it is ſpoken, for when light vaniſheth, and perpetuall darkneſs cometh in ſtead thereof, the day ceaſeth to be any more, and ſo

Rev. 10. 6. time, according to which the Angel ſwore, That time ſhould be no more. He alſo by the Day here underſtandeth, the Devil with his flattering Temptations, whereby he pretendeth light and comfort: As when he perſwaded Eve to eat of the forbidden Fruit, Yee ſhall be as Gods, ſaid he: But through harkening to him they were made moſt miſerable, Job then prayeth that the Devil may periſh, and that the day and light by promiſing which, that is the good and comfort, with which he beareth ſilly men in hand, if they yeild to his Temptations, may be turned into darkneſs unto them, that is, appear to tend to diſcomfort and miſery, and that this will be the iſſue of them, that they may not be ſeduced hereby.

Verſ. 4. Let not God regard it from above, neither let the light ſhine upon it.

That is, Foraſmuch as the evill angels were altogether ſpirits, and ſo had nothing infirm in them, whereby they might be tempted to ſinne, but were light as the day, yet proved rebellious againſt their Creator, let not them be repaired or reſtored again by any mercy from God ſhewed unto them; although through his pity to man ſinning, being clad with fleſh, that is, infirmity, he be by Chriſt reſtored. For this is by the Pſalmiſt pointed out, ſaying, Pſalm 78. he Had mercy upon him, for he knew that he was fleſh, and ſinned by infirmity.

Verſ. 5. Let a cloud dwell upon it, &c.

That is, Let the Devill lye in darkneſſe, chained and tormented for ever, wherein he prophecyeth of the ſtate wherein hee ſhall be after the day of judgment, although he be not yet confined to that place of torment, yet then he ſhall.

Verſ. 6. As for that night let darkneſſe ſeize upon it, let it not be joyned to the dayes of the yeare, nor come into the number of moneths.

This is a further amplification of the ſame day before ſpoken of, ſometime called day in regard of that it had been, and ſometime for that it ſhould be, as alſo the Devill at the time before ſpoken of to be made darkneſſe for ever, and not in appearance an Angel of light any more.

Verſ. 7. Let that night be ſolitary, let no joyfull voyce come therein.

That is, Let the Devill lye ſolitarily in that darkneſſe, and none of Gods elect people come there, as he deſireth, if he could poſſibly deceive them.

Verſ. 8. Let them curſe it, that curſe the day, who are ready to raiſe up their mourning.

The vulg. which Gregory followeth, Who are ready to raiſe up Leviathan. Thus alſo Hebr. Let the holy Angels declare to all the world the curſed condition of thoſe that fell, even they that are ready to raiſe up their additament, as the word Leviathan ſignifieth, that is, men who fell by the Devils deceit: but the elect of them, to whom Angels miniſter, ſhall be raiſed up againe by grace, and be added or joyned to the Angels in heaven, whoſe number number was diminiſhed by the fall of millions, but by men elected ſhall be made up again.

Let the ſtars of the twilight thereof be darke, let it looke for light, but have none, neither let it ſee the dawning of the day. Verſ. 9.

By the twi-light underſtand Hypocrites, who give ſome little light by the good works that they doe. But for ſo much as their intention is not good, for They doe all to be ſeen of men; the very ſtarres of this their twi-light are made dark, when they are detected by ſome foule ſinne that they fall into, which darkneth their ſtar-light, as it were, whereby they ſeemed before to ſhine as ſtars in the midſt of a crooked and perverſe generation. Let it looke for light, but finde none: That is, for Chriſt, who is the true light, but not find him to have any true comfort by him: Nor let it ſee the dawning of the day: That is, have my true ſaving knowledg, which is the beginning of theſe lights ſhewing it ſelfe to the heart, according to that of the Apoſtle: Till the day dawne, and the day-ſtar ariſe in your hearts. 2 Pet. 21.

Becauſe it ſhut not up the doors of my mothers wombe, nor did ſorrow from mine eyes. Verſ. 10.

What mothers womb is here meant, it being underſtood, as before, of all mankind ſince the fall of Adam? Paradiſe may be meant by this mothers womb, becauſe man was there, as in the womb without all ſorrow, till that being tempted and ſinning, he was put forth, and filled with ſorrow and miſery, ſins procuring the opening of the way, and thruſt him out thence, being called the not ſhutting of the doors.

Why dyed I not from the wombe, and give up the ghoſt when I came out of the belly? Verſ. 11.

That is, O that I had then apprehended the death and deſtruction to follow upon my ſinning, whilſt I was in tempting! For then ſhould I never have come out of that belly wherein I was ſo quiet and free from all ſenſe of miſery, as followeth, Verſ. 13. So that the words of verſ. 12. Why did not the knees prevent, and why did the breaſts give me ſucke, are a continued complaint of that which he and we all did in Adam, conſenting, and being delighted with the temptation, as the Infant with the Mothers milk, yea and with the ſinne, which we excuſed, and ſought to hide. And the reſt which man ſhould have had, which he meant, in heaven; For mankind being multiplyed in Paradiſe, if he had not ſinned, ſhould never have dyed, but have beene tranſlated from thence to heaven, there to reſt for ever. And he ſaith,

With Kings and Connſellors of the earth, which built deſolate places for themſelves. Verſ. 14.

Hereby meaning Gods faithfull Miniſters, who rule amongſt his people, and give them counſell in their teaching what to doe to be ſaved: For they goe immediately after death into the place of bleſſedneſs, and their good hearers together with them, recovering that ſtate by Chriſt, which we loſt by the firſt mans ſinning, although we muſt now goe through death hereunto; but if we had not ſinne, without dying.

Which built deſolate places for themſelves.

That is, when others have their minds full of tumults, and worldly troubles, theſe putting all ſuch things from their minds, make them places, as it were to be in alone with God, ſetting their minds only upon heavenly things: For thus they are, although in the frequency of men, yet as men dwelling alone here in deſarts. Thus David deſiring one thing of God, viz. To dwell in his houſe: and Mary chooſing that one thing which was neceſſary, made themſelves deſolate places.

Or with Princes that had gold, who filled their houſes with ſilver. Verſ. 15.

Who are Princes, but the ſucceſſors of the firſt Preachers, the Apoſtles, that were as Kings, the Rectours of Churches, of whom the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh. Inſtead of fathers thou ſhalt have children, which thou mayeſt make Princes in all lands. Theſe have gold, when they have ſpirituall wiſdome and faith, Pſal. 45.

Revel. 3. faith; for ſo it is ſaid, I counſell thee to buy of mee gold tryed in the fire, and faith more precious then gold. And the ſilver wherewith they fill their houſes are divine Sermons and Orations, of which their hearts are full, and then

1 Pet. 1. 7. they are uttered by them; for of the words of God it is ſaid, They are like to Pſal. 12. pure ſilver tryed ſeven times in the fire.

Verſ. 16. As an hidden untimely birth, as Infants that never ſaw light.

That is, As thoſe holy men before the Law, that being led only by the light of nature, whereof ſome indeed have their names and famous acts recorded, as Abel, Enoch, Abraham, Noah, Iſaac, Jacob; but moſt lye hidden, and no remembrance of them is come to us, but as abortives they are without names, yet at reſt with God, in whom they beleived and with whom they walke continually: And as Infants dying before they ſee the light, were all ſuch both before the Law, and under the Law, who lived not till the coming of Chriſt in the fleſh, yet believed in him, of whom it is ſaid, Many Kings and Prophets deſired to ſee my day, and ſaw it not.

Verſ. 17. There the wicked ceaſe from troubling, and there the weary be at reſt.

That is, the wicked Gentiles, who, before the coming of the Goſpel amongſt them were diſtracted by being carryed after divers vanities; but being hereby converted, they alſo finally come to have reſt here, and the weary through the heavy burthen of their ſins, as our Lord hath ſaid, Come to mee all yee that travell and are heavy laden, and yee ſhall finde reſt unto your ſouls.

Matth. 11. 28. There the priſoners reſt together, they heare not the voyce of the oppreſſor.

Verſ. 18. The priſoners or bound ones, are thoſe that feel themſelves bound with the bonds of naturall corruption, from which they cannot during this life get looſe, but hereby they are terrified, as they that live under a Tyrant, who daily oppreſſeth them. In this caſe Paul was, who was ſo fettered by

Rom. 7. his naturall corruption, that he was as a poor Captive lead away, and caſt into priſon hereby, and this he calleth his fleſh. And David complaineth of his ſins, taking ſo faſt hold upon him, that he could not look up. But being once in this place, all ſuch ſhall be then at reſt, and be troubled with no op-

Revel. 7. preſſors any more to fill their hearts with ſorrow, according to which it is ſaid, They ſhall ſorrow no more, but have all teares wiped from their eyes. Of our being ſubject to vanity, and bound as it were, hee by the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaketh, ſaying, The creature is ſubject to vanity, but ſhall be brought into the glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God, and ſet at liberty. And in another

Rom. 8. place of himſelfe he ſaith, Deſiring to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt. That Phil. 1. 27. is, be looſed: And what doth this imply, that he counted himſelf bound here? And who is the Oppreſſor or Exactor here ſpoken of, but the Devill, who ceaſeth not by his temptations to exact upon the faithfull? but there ſhall be no Devil any more thus to moleſt us, and even whilſt we live here, he heareth not his voyce, that reſiſteth his temptations.

The ſmall and great are there, and the ſervant is free from his maſter. That Verſ. 19. is, all who have any true grace, although but little in compariſon of that, which is in others, every one yet being here placed higher or lower, as he hath abounded more, or hath had a leſſer meaſure of grace and virtue. And the Servant is free from his Maſter, becauſe he that once had been a Servant of

Joh. 8. ſinne, as he is called, that committeth ſinne, but whilſt he lived, turned therefrom, is now free from all danger of being brought into this ſervitude any more, ſinne being now plucked up by the roots: As the Ivy growing in a ſtone

Rom. 6. wall when it is broken downe, as it could never be before, but remaining ſtill

Heb. 12 as a root of bitterneſs troubled even the beſt, and as tinder apt to take the fire of temptation, to inflame with ſinful luſts.

Wherefore is life given to him that is in miſery, and life to the bitter in Soul?

Verſ. 20. That is, Why doth the World ſmile upon the Faithfull to tempt him by the flatteries thereof in profits and preferments to ſin, or frown upon him by adverſityes and miſeries, to diſcourage and diſhearten him to indanger his his Soule, by impatience and diſcontent? For in regard of theſe dangers, to which in this life he is continually ſubject, it is irkſome to him to live here, and he deſireth rather to be diſſolved and to be with Chriſt.

Who long for death, but it cometh not, and dig for it more then for hid Treaſures. Verſ. 21.

They are ſayd here to long for death, that deſire totally to be mortified to ſin and to the world, taking no pleaſure in the honours, and preferments hereof, yet cannot, but will he nil he, honours and publick imployments are put upon him, and hereby he is hindred in the work of mortification. But he is ſaid to dig for it, as for his treaſures, that is ſeeing a treaſure in heaven ready to be beſtowed upon him, that laboureth in this work, he doth, as he that digging for a treaſure hid in the ground, when he findeth that hee is neer unto it, work the more earneſtly in digging till he hath gotten it into his poſſeſſion.

Why is light given to a man, whoſe way is hid, and whom God hath hedged in? Verſ. 23.

The Vulgar hath compaſſed about with darkneſſe Hebr. either hedged in Thornes, or covered or blindfolded, it is סכך ſignifying either, but becauſe hiding his way, was before ſpoken of, by another word, this of hedging, is rather to be preferred. By a man, whoſe way is hidden, underſtand him that laboureth in the work of mortification, before ſpoken of, and yet neither knoweth certainly, that what he doth is approved of before the ſtrict Judge of the whole world, nor whether the end of the way wherein he goeth, ſhall be everlaſting bleſſedneſs For as Salomon ſayth, There is a Way that is right in a mansown eyes, but the end thereof is death.

But this is not true touching all men, for he that believeth, and in uprightneſs of heart laboureth, to do all good, and to eſchew all evill, is ſure that his way pleaſeth the Lord: If it be ſayd, but he may not perſevere, and then he ſhall not be ſaved. Sol: He that hath begun this good Worke will perfect it in the day of the Lord Jeſus. But many there are that have light or comfort here in regard of the good end to which they ſhall come; yet being upon deceitfull grounds, that end of their way to which they ſhall come indeed, is hidden from them, and yet they are hedged as with thornes, that is, ſuffer by ſharp and pricking Judgments, as they that ſuffer by the burning of their bodyes, but have not love. 2 Cor. 13.

For my ſighings come before I eat, and my roarings are poured out like the waters, Verſ. 24.

That is, before feeding upon the contemplation of the happineſs to come, I ſigh and mourn after it, according to which the Apoſtle ſaith, We ſigh after the diſſolution of this earthly tabernacle, &c. For he that is not thus affected towards the happineſs to come, and with the preſent ſinns and miſeries, cannot thus eat and be comforted. And to ſhew this greife is no ſmall greife in the truly faithfull, it is added, My roarings are poured out like water. Extremity of greife cauſing tears to break forth for ſinns paſt, being thus denoted, for which a ſimile is taken from waters. 2 Cor. 5.

The thing that I greatly feared is come upon me. Verſ. 25.

The vulg. The feare, that I feared hapned to me, That is, not knowing when God chaſtiſeth in love, and when in Juſtice, by way of taking revenge. This made me greatly afraid, leaſt my ſufferings ſhould be the effects of wrath and not of love as David ſaith, Who knoweth the Power of thy wrath which is ſo ſpoken, becauſe our minds are not able to conceive rightly hereof, but ſometimes that ſeemeth to be grace to us, which is wrath, and that to be wrath which is grace, and that God approacheth unto us, when he leaveth us, and that he leaveth us, when he approacheth in love to us.

I was

Verſ. 26.

I was not in ſafety, I had not reſt, neither was I quiet, yet trouble came.

The vulg. Have I not diſſembled? have I not been ſilent? have I not been at reſt, and Indignation came upon me?

Acc ording to which Gregory, whom I have hitherto followed in all this Allegoricall Expoſition, ſaith, the meaning is, being placed in this Dignity, ſo that I might think, ſpeak, and do what I would; for thus it is with men exalted above others: they have high thoughts of themſelves, which yet they hide from others, and are licentious in their talk, and doings, being never troubled at it, but think they may ſpeak and do what they luſt: But Job diſclaimeth this, touching himſelf; calling the firſt, a diſſembling, and the two next being ſilent, and at reſt, whereby he meant, that he diſſembled the great Dignity, of which he was, thinking low of himſelf, notwithſtanding the ſame; and inſtead of licentious ſpeaking, he was ſilent, not uttering any ſuch words, and reſted from practiſing evil, after the manner of other wicked Princes. And ſo do all the godly in honour, they repreſs their heart, from conſidering their own glory, they reſtrain their tongues from immoderate talking, and keep their work from wandring through unquietneſs: Whether the words be rendred thus Interrogatively or Affirmitively, as I ſee no reaſon but they may, the ſenſe cometh all one, I thought not my ſelfe ſafe, or in a quiet Eſtate, and at reſt: If I ſhould have been ſwayed by my greatneſs to do, as I might have been tempted hereby: And therefore had I a vigilent eye over my wayes, that I might not be thus tranſported. And yet wrath or terror came; for ſo נגע ſignifieth. And as Gregory, ſo Iſidor. and Beda expound all this Allegorically. But Chriſoſt. and ſome others adhering to the letter, yet excuſe Job from ſinning through impatience, in ſaying thus much. For Chriſoſt. ſaith, That Job did like a ſick man: Who being under the Phyſitians hands, whom he knoweth to be careful of doing all things for the beſt, uſeth all the patience towards him that may be: But in the extremity of his pain, hee layeth about him, and ſtrikes at the ſtanders by, and all things about him, but from the Phyſitian, he yet holdeth his hands for the reverence which he beareth towards him, and the awe in which he ſtandeth of him: So Job being in extrem pain and torment, and it yet continuing, in none of his ſpeches here, or which he uttereth afterwards, ſtriketh at the Lord, but at other things only, wherewith he thought he might be more bold. I for my part am much affected with the Allegoricall expoſition hetherto brought, and by me contracted to more brevity, and yet made more perſpicuous, becauſe I cannot think, that a man out of impatience againſt the innocent creatures, ſhould ſpeak ſo diſcreetly, holding out to ſuch a length; or were he never ſo much overgone with paſſion, that he ſhould magnifie the ſtate of all the dead, having it by faith ſo rooted and grounded in him: That a difference is in death put betwixt men in reſpect of weal and woe, reſting and being tormented: And ſpecially in bleſſing the condition of the greateſt in this world, Kings and Princes, who for the moſt part are worſt for Pride, Tyrany, Injuſtice, and licentious living. Therefore I cannot but think, that Job was even now full of the ſpirit, whereby he ſpake thus; yet as in a cloud, and obſcurely, that we might ſtudy to find out his meaning, in opening which, the light given by acute Gregory, whoſe peircing wit I cannot but admire, doth not a little avail: And truly here are many paſſages, not only moſt true, but tending to our ſingular comfort and edification if they be well conſidered: For which I thought it good thus to ſet them forth.

Cor a conſideranda ſua gloria repremunt, lingua ab moderata locutione ſtringunt, opus ab iniquietudinis vagatione cuſtodiunt.

Ambroſe, who is alſo for the myſtical ſenſe, upon V. 8. That are ready to ſtir up Leviathan, ſaith, That this is ſpoken of Chriſt, who he ſaw was to encounter with the Devil, and to overcome him: For by Leviathan, the Devil is commonly by the Fathers underſtood, Job 40. And Chriſt is ſpoken ken of as ready to ſtir him up. They that follow the literal ſenſe ſay, That Job herein calleth upon the wicked, that work by the Devil, to curſe that night, or ſuch as go a fiſhing, becauſe a Whale is called Leviathan, but have no good ſucceſs, and therefore curſe ſuch a night or day, as unlucky. From hence to V. 14. There is nothing difficult touching the literal ſenſe: And upon this. Then ſhould I have been at reſt with Kings and Counſellors of the Earth. It is ſaid, the meaning is, I ſhould not have been in worſe caſe then others my fellow Kings and Princes, who being dead and laid in their Sepulchers feel no ſuch pangs as I do. Then V. 17. There the wicked ceaſe from tumult, that is, Either are made to be quiet, and ceaſe from their wicked practiſes: Or the righteous are no more diſquieted by them; whereas whilſt they live here, they are allwaies like the raging tumultuating, and can never ceaſe rayſing up troubles againſt them. Verſ. 17. Iſa. 57.

The man whoſe way God hath hidden &c. That is, The way of going out of this life, which he deſireth to do: But he findeth no meanes to get out; As one going upon the way, and coming at an hedge, through which he cannot break. Verſ. 23.

I ſigh before I eat. That is, I am ſo full of ſorrow, that even when I take my repaſt, I do it not without ſighing and lamenting. The meaning of this is plain, The thing that I feared is come upon me. I lived not ſo in proſperity, but I expected this day then; for I knew the uncertainty, and mutability of theſe worldly things: And therefore this hath not come upon me, for my confidence in worldly things. And ſince I was afflicted in my Children, whom I loſt, and my Servants and Cattle, I murmured not, nor complained againſt God, whereby I might provoke him, to lay this Judgement more upon me, I did ſilently and quietly beare all my loſſes, as it appeareth by that which he ſaid before, and yet lo what another heavy Judgment hath befallen me, & I ſee no end of it. And hetherto according to the literal ſenſe and morals made hereupon: Something alſo hath been touched upon, concerning the Allegoricall from Job to Chriſt, which may well hold, if we make ſuch an application in general, but not ſo particularly, as Gregory doth. Job was a figure of Chriſt, as was before ſaid in his Name and Country, if we look at their ſignification: As alſo in his extrem poverty to which he was brought from great riches, although ſo juſt a man, that none was like him upon the Earth. He was alſo aſſaulted by the Devils temptations, being hungry and alone in the Wilderneſs, and that not once, but ſundry times; as the Divil ſtired up Jobs Wife, and by her aſſaulted him being in pain, and alone, there being neither Children nor Servants about him, and then his friends by their invectives againſt him, laying to his charge hypocriſy, as the Phariſees likewiſe ſtirred up by the Devil, laid to his charge, that he was a deceiver and wrought by Belzebub. Again he was filled by his harſh uſage and ſufferings beginning to ſeize upon him, about the time of his great paſſion upon the Croſs, with ſuch anguiſh, that it drove him into an Agony, which made him ſweat ſuch a ſweat, as never was heard of, even drops of blood; and after this, as deſpairing, to cry out, Eli, Eli, Lama ſabacthany. When yet he neither ſinned by the heat of impatience, or the chill coldneſs of puſillanimity, or feare, as Job cryed out againſt the day of his Birth, and as impatient of living longer, not in a ſinful way, but as under a ſhew hereof, uttering miſticall things for our inſtruction, as may appear from that which hath been ſaid. How the allegory holdeth afterwards in the end, which the Lord made, ſhall be by his aſſiſtance ſhewed toward the end of this Book. Verſ. 24. Verſ. 25. Verſ. 26. The Allegory. Matth. 4.

CHAP IIII.

Verſ. 1. 2. THen Eliphaz the Temanite anſwered and ſayd. If we aſſay to commune with thee, wilt thou then be greived? But who can withhold himſelfe from ſpeaking?

Gregory. Here before I begin to ſpeak upon the words of Eliphaz, ſomething would be ſaid upon the ſignification of his Name, and the names of his other two Friends, upon which Gregory thus: Theſe three ſet forth Hereticks, who begin to ſpeak ſmoothly at the firſt, as if they meant no hurt to him, to whom they ſpeake, but only good, to purchaſe his benevolous attention, but ſoon come to ſpeak words which much hurt the hearer, and greatly trouble him, that we may beware of them, and not be drawn by the inticing words of their eloquence. Eliphaz ſignifieth The contempt of God, Bildad oldneſs alone, Zophar the diſſipator of ſpeculation: And by theſe three Names are aptly ſet forth three evill qualities in Hereticks, which are the grounds of all their wicked hereſies: For firſt they are proud and deſpiſe the plain and ſimple Truth commonly taught according to the word of God, and ſo do in effect deſpiſe God. Secondly, they have only the old Man with his deceitful heart in them, and nothing of the new, guided by the Spirit of God. Thirdly, They diſperſe and ſcatter abroad their own ſpeculations for truths, pretending ſometime the light of Revelations to make them the more acceptable: according to all which Popiſh Hereticks proceed. for they deſpiſing the ſingle word of God, the Canonicall Scriptures, as inſufficient, adjoyn hereunto, to ground their Errors upon, Apocriphals, Traditions of men, and many Inventions, for the better ſetting forth of the publick Worſhip of God, which in the Ceremonies by them deviſed, would be naked and contemptible. Secondly, They are ſet a work thus to doe by their own deceitful hearts carrying them on through the covetouſneſs and pride that is in them. Thirdly, How many revelations have been by them pretended to confirm their imaginary purgatory, their ſuperſtition about the invocation of Saints departed, and the adoration of Images, and the ſingle life of Prieſts? Neither do the Anabaptiſts differ much from them herein; for they pretend new lights and revelations, and are manifeſtly led by the old man, making them to deſpiſe God and his waies, going in crooked waies of their own, and not in the known waies of the Church of God.

Note.

Ferus. Touching the ſpeech of Eliphaz, Some, ſaith Ferus, think, that he ſpake but deceitfully, when he pretended his unwillingneſs to grieve Job by that which he ſhould ſay, and his conſcience inforcing him hereunto: But becauſe it is not a friends part, when he heareth his friend in his miſery breaking out into impatient ſpeeches, as if God had dealt worſe by him, then he deſerved, to hold his peace, but to tell him plainly of his fault, that he may repent, and uſe more patience: He rather thinketh, that Eliphaz ſpake in part as he ought to do, and as it is our part to do in the like caſe, that is, Not by the way of flattery to be ſilent, if we ſee cauſe of ſpeaking by reproofe to our deareſt friends; only in judging and charging him for his ſufferings, not to be the man that he took him to be, but hypocriticall and wicked, what a ſhew ſoever he made, this is ſinful and uncharitable, yea although, the perſon afflicted uttereth words of impatience, through the infirmity of the fleſh, in the extremity of his pain: But for reproving any ſin in our friends, we have a Precept. Math. 18, And Salomon ſaith, That the woundes of a loving Friend are better then the kiſſes of an Enemie: Moreover, our zeal for God, and to vindicate his juſtice in all his doings, ought to be ſuch, as not now to be ſilent, but to ſpeak, leaſt we be proved ſuch as love men more then God. Thus Ferus and that rightly: But for ſomuch as Job

Note.

Prov. 27.

ſinned

ſinned not by impatience any more now, then formerly, as hath been before ſhewed; Eliphaz did him wrong in all that he ſaid, yet not wittingly: For he loved him dearely, and came out of love to comfort him; but through ignorance, and I doubt not, but by the inſtigation of Satan, to vex Job yet more, for which as for men ſinning out of ignorance, the Lord commanded, that Sacrifices ſhould be offered both for him and the reſt of his friends: To proceed in the words of Eliphaz, V. 3.

Behold, Thou haſt inſtructed many, and ſtrengthened the weak hands, &c. But now it is come upon thee, and thou fainteſt; it toucheth thee and thou art troubled. Verſ. 3.

Is not this thy feare, thy confidence, the uprightneſs of thy waies, thy hope? In reproving Job, He firſt beginneth with laying to his charge, his not following his own inſtructions, given to others in the time of their miſery; in that he himſelf now was ſo faint-hearted, that he thought that the check, Phyſitian heal thy ſelf, might rightly be given unto him: And Turpe eſt Doctori cum culpa redarguit ipſum: It is a ſhame for him that reproveth, and teacheth others, to fault in the ſame thing himſelf. If Job had done ſo indeed, he might well have been blamed; or who ſoever doth ſo, as the Scribes and Phariſees, that ſaid and did not; for now thou art condemned out of thine own mouth. But if Job had been impatient in ſuch extreme miſery, whereas in his health and proſperity, he comforted others, and happely reproved them, for their impatient ſpeeches; that which rightly could have been gathered herefrom, were nothing elſe, but that a man in health and proſperity knoweth not his own weakneſs, although he truely feareth God, til he is brought to the tryall. For many think, as Peter, to be very couragious then: But coming to be tryed, their ſtrength to ſtand is nothing, as it was with him; yea and it is not to be doubted, but that theſe men themſelves, if they had been tryed, as Job was, would have been much more impatient, then he ſeemed to be. They ſinned therefore in this, that they dealt not with him, as conſidering themſelves, and their own weakneſs; as is commanded: If any man be faln by infirmity, reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of meekneſs, conſidering thy ſelf, leaſt thou alſo be tempted. For the next word V. 6. Is not this thy feare, thy confidence, &c. In ſaying thus, he doth as it were deride him, for the words laſt uttered by him, Chap. 3. 25. 28. Where he ſpake of his feare and confidence, and reſt through hope, and quiet living, as if he had ſaid, Art thou not aſhamed to ſpeak of theſe things and yet makeſt ſuch impatient exclamations for being quiet, fearing God, and truſting in him, rather caſting away his feare, living ſinfully; ſo that thou mightſt juſtly in ſtead of being confident, deſpaire now; and in ſtead of being quiet, be ful of trouble, as thou art. Herein then, Eliphaz ſinned again by judgeing righteous Job to be a wicked man: And that this is his meaning, the next words, V. 7. doe declare.

Note. Matth. 23. 1.

Note.

Gal. 6.

Who ever periſhed being innocent? And where were the righteous cut off? He committed then the great ſin, of judgeing his Brother, of which it is ſaid, Judge not, that yee be not judged. And how ſhalt thou that judgeſt another, eſcape the judgement of God? For in regard of ones being ſmitten, to judge that hee is wicked, and not innocent and righteous; is to condemn many righteous men: As Abel, who was cut off by Cain, Ioſeph, that was caſt into a Dungeon, David, that was perſecuted by Saul: And Abimeleck ſlain, with eighty Preiſts more by Doeg in one day. Here before I proceed any further, in the ſpeeches of theſe men, it is neceſſary, that I reſolve a queſtion, in what account they are to be had, whether as divine and true, and to be grounded upon, as other ſayings in the holy Scripture, or humane, as coming from wiſe men, who by their wit and ſtudy, had attained to the knowledge to ſpeak thus: The reaſon of this queſtion is, Becauſe, in many things, they contrary Job, and are ſaid by God himſelfe not to have ſpoken ſo rightly as Job, and if not ſo rightly, then ſome things

Verſ. 7.

Matth. 7. 7. Rom. 2. 1.

ſpoken by them were not true, and therefore not divine, nor ſpoken by the ſpirit, as it is ſaid of all the canonicall Scriptures, that they were. To this it is to be anſwered by diſtinguiſhing: Some of their ſpeeches came from their own darkned underſtanding and blind reaſon: As namely theſe which are by Iob contradicted, and wherein they apply things truly ſpoken in the Theſis againſt him from hence to convince him of wickedneſs and hypocriſy. Some of them again ſet forth things concerning God and divinity aright: Some Philoſophy, both moral and natural, the former of which are to be thought to have come from God, who put thoſe words into their mouths, as he did many divine and propheticall ſayings, into the mouth of Balaam: And afterwards it is ſaid of Caiaphas, that in ſaying, it is neceſſary That one man ſhould dye, and not all the Nation periſh. That he ſpake not this of himſelf, but being high Prieſt, that yeare he propheſyed. The ſpeeches uttered by them againſt Iob, by way of inference from the truths delivered by their mouthes, came altogether from themſelves, and the inſtigation of Satan, that Iob might be the more greived, and, if it were poſſible, provoked to ſpeak raſhly and impatiently, and ſo to ſin, which was the thing, that Satan endeavoured with all earneſtneſs: For the approving of the truths of God which they uttered, to have come from the ſpirit of God make the citations of them by the Pen-men of the holy Scriptures, as V. 8. of this Chap. is cited, Prov. 22. 8, Hoſ. 10. 11. V. 18 2. Pet. 2. 4. And many ſayings more throughout this book, as may be ſeen all along, by the quotations upon the Margin: For if they had not come from God, they ſhould not have been alledged, as authoritative, or proving. Origen alſo to prove them to come from God, ſaith, That the ſayings of Iobs faithfull friends ſhould not certainly have been by Iob committed to writing in his ſacred book, unleſs they had come from the ſpirit of God, and were profitable for us to read. Yea Moſes himſelf citeth ſome paſſages of theirs: As namely, that of dwelling without feare, chap. 22. 19. Levit 26. 5. and that of reſting, and none terrifying, chap. 11. 19. and that of not accepting perſons, Iob 34. 19. Deut. 10. 17. whereby it alſo appeareth, that the book of Iob was written firſt of all other books of Scripture, and it is more confirmed, that he lived about the time of Iacob, whoſe daughter Dinah, he is ſaid before to have married. Now to return again to Eliphaz the Temanite: the country, of which he was, had the name from Teman, the ſone of Eſau, of whom Eliphaz came, and Ierom ſaith, that he was the King of the Temanites, in the land of the Gebalites, although in the Hebrew tongue all the ſouth parts were called Teman. To proceed according to the words of this Eliphaz. V. 8. 9. are plain V. 10.

2 Tim. 3. 16.

Joh. 11. 49. 50.

Origen.

Gen. 36.

Hieron. de locis Hebr.

Verſ. 10. The roring of the Lion, the voice of the fierce Lion, and the teeth of the young Lions are broken. For fierce Lion, the vulg. hath Lioneſs, and for young Lions, Lions whelpes. But herein the ſenſe is more reſpected, then the proper ſignification of the words: For the Lioneſs, when ſhe hath whelpes, is noted to be more fierce then the Lion, and what are young Lions, but Lions whelpes? Theſe words are by Eliphaz uttered further, to aggravate Jobs wickedneſs, for which he had ſaid before, that although he pretended holineſs, and had been hitherto bleſſed: Yet now a ſpirit from the Lord had blown upon him, V. 9. and that ſo powerfully, as that now he could play the Lion no more; either terrifying his Subjects, by his roring, or tearing of them with his teeth, which were now hereby broken: So that he could neither act the roaring Lions part himſelf, nor his wife the part of the fierce Lioneſs, nor his children, who were as young Lions, teare cruelly with their teeth: For they were broken by the fall of the houſe upon them, as was before ſhewed: And not ceaſing here, he proſecuteth the ſame allegory of a Lion, further V. 11. Thus to the piercing of his heart, with bitter words he did inſult over him.

Verſ. 12. Here Eliphaz to confirm his reproachfull ſpeeches againſt Job, findeth that that he had a Revelation from God, as Ferus ſaith, ſo likewiſe Lyra, Iſodor and Clarius. Some think that it was the Devill, who thus deluded him; he thinking that God had whiſpered theſe things unto him, whilſt he was by night thinking upon Jobs caſe, and why, he being ſo juſt a man ſuffered ſuch greivous things: then Satan, that he might with the more authority, as from God, confound Job, appeared thus unto him pretending to be a good ſpirit. Ferus. Lyra. Iſidor.

Laſtly, Some others will have it a true revelation from God, becauſe the things ſpoken are moſt true, but by Eliphaz ill applyed againſt godly Job. So Gregory, Carthuſianus, Burgenſis contra Lyranum, and Calvin, who ſaith that Eliphaz was an excellent man, and that God vouchſafed ſometime to ſpeak unto him, as appeareth by that which he here uttereth. And to this do I aſſent, for ſuch ſpeeches could not come from the Devill or from an ordinary but a prime man and inabled by God to inſtruct others in his truth. But what is it that he ſayth? A thing was ſecretly brought to me, and mine ear received little thereof. Gregory. Carthuſ. Calvin.

It may ſeem to be no ſecret, that God only is perfectly righteous, ſayth Calvin, and all men unrighteous in compariſon of him, as here followeth, Verſ. 17. But he calleth it a ſecret, becauſe it is hidden from many proud men, who if they outſtrip other men, who live moſt wickedly, think themſelves moſt righteous perſons, that God ſhould do them wrong, if he ſhould lay his judgments upon them: and he ſaith he heard a little of it, he taketh not upon him any perfection of knowledge, although he were an eminent man for this, yet he heard and underſtood but a littlerto the reproof of thoſe, that knowing but little of the word of God, yet take upon them to have Knowledge, yea enough to teach others and think, that they have no need now to learn any more, thus coming to deſpiſe all teaching. V. 14. Calvin. Note. Note.

Fear came upon me, and Trembling, which made all my Bones to ſhake. Verſ. 14.

And this he ſaith was in the Viſions of the night, verſ. 13. Such terrour doth God ſtrike into men in declaring his will unto them that it may be efficacious in them, as it is not, unleſs they feel the power of his Majeſty that ſpeaketh, as alſo was ſhewed by giving the Law to the ſo great terrour of Iſrael, and by the fear that came upon Moſes himſelf, of whom it is ſayd that he trembled and feared. And Daniel fell down as dead for fear; and Ezekiel and John who wrote the Revelation: and this is the courſe, that the Lord taketh under the Goſpell for the converting of ſinners, as we may ſee in Saul, he was ſmitten down to the ground and trembled, and then the Lord ſpake unto him by Ananias: and he cometh not nigh to any but to ſuch as he makes to tremble at his word. Heb. 12. 21. Act. 9. Iſa. 66. 2.

Then firſt beginneth grace to work, when a man is made to fear by Gods voice from heaven hearing his word, as it is ſayd, that Joſia did, and his heart melted within him, V. 15. 16.

Then a ſpirit paſſed before my face, but I could not diſcern the form thereof, an Image was before mine eyes, there was ſilence and I heard a voyce. The ſpirit here by ſome is thought to be an Angell, by others more probably a wind, as it befell Eliah, to whom after a ſtrong winde came a ſoft and ſtill voyce, and in ſuch a winde the ſpirit came upon the Apoſtles Act. 2. The likeneſs not to be diſcerned ſheweth, that it is not Gods will, that he ſhould by man be repreſented by an image, ſo that to do this is an abomination and inſtead of ſhewing himſelfe wiſe that doth ſo, a ſhewing of himſelf a foole and in danger to be given over to a reprobate ſence as the Apoſtle ſheweth. Whereas he ſaith, There was ſilence, this is ſpoken to ſhew that he heard well ſo much as he here uttereth, that was then ſpoken in the ſilent night, there being no noiſe to hinder his hearing: And hereby we are taught in ſilence to harken to the word of God, or elſe we are likely to carry but little of it away; or to profit little thereby, as it commonly hapneth to moſt hearers, when Verſ. 15. 16. 1 Kings 19. Rom. 1. 19. Note.

when they are at a Sermon the world maketh ſuch a noiſe in their hearts, ſpeaking to them of other things, profits, buſineſses, pleaſures of the World, or the Devill by his ſuggeſtions, that they cannot hear to remember, inſomuch as that being asked, what was treated upon, they are able to ſay juſt nothing.

Verſ. 17. Shall a mortall man be more juſt then God? ſhall he be more pure then his Maker?

Verſ. 18. Behold, he puts his truſt in his ſervants, and his Angells he charged with folly. The Vulg. Shall he be juſtified in compariſon of God? And thus indeed is the meaning, although a man be never ſo juſt, yet in compariſon of Gods, his righteouſneſs is nothing, and therefore God is to be acknowledged juſt and righteous in all his doings, when he proceedeth moſt ſeverely againſt his moſt righteous ſervants. He hath no truſt in his ſervants, Vulg. They that ſerve him, are not ſtable. That is, his good Angels that ſerve him, are not ſtable by their own ſtrength, but by Gods ſtabliſhing of them to ſtand, when others fell, and for many of the very Angels they fel indeed, and

Calvin. are charged with folly, that is, Sin to eternity. Calvin will have nothing ſpoken of the Angels, that fell here, but only of them that ſtood; becauſe the word folly, is not ſignificant enough, to ſet forth their horrible ſinning, but becauſe he maketh two ſorts of them, the one of ſuch as ſerve him ſtil, the other of theſe, that long ago were charged; I conceive it to be

2. Pet. 2. 4. plain, that the evill Angells are meant by Angells, and as thus meant, Saint Peter ſeemeth to ſpeak from hence, ſaying, God ſpared not the Angels that ſinned. For what was his not ſparing of them, but charging them with ſin, which is folly, as it is here called; with Calvin ſtandeth Vatablus and Cajetan; But Olympiodorus, Chriſoſtome, and Athanaſius. and generally all ancient writers, both Latine and Greek, hold that the Angels which fel, are Olympiod. Chryſoſt. Athanaſ. meant. How much leſs in them that dwell in houſes of clay, Whoſe foundation

Verſ. 19. is in the duſt, who are cruſhed before the moth? For out of the duſt was

2 Cor. 5. man made; and his body, the houſe of his ſoul, is but of red earth or clay, for which the Apoſtle calleth them, earthly Tabernacles, which ſeemeth to be taken from hence, and to a garment eaten by moths: that is, Man for his frailty, compared by David, which he took alſo from this place. And Hoſea

Pſal. 39. ſaith, in the name of the Lord, I will be a moth to the houſe of Judah, and Ephraim.

Hoſ. 5. Whereby is intimated his being conſumed, till that he be brought to duſt for his ſins, and the frailty of dealing with man by deſtroying him, as having much leſs ſtrength, when he ſinneth to ſubſiſt.

Verſ. 20, They are deſtroyed from morning to evening: they periſh for ever, without any regarding it. Here he further ſheweth the miſery of men that juſtifie themſelves, as not worthy to be ſo ill dealt withall, in regard of the righteouſneſs, which they conceive to be in themſelves; Gods judgements ſeazing upon them, they are made known to be vile, how excellent ſoever they ſeemed formerly to have been. For the moral obſervations of Gregory, firſt, from Morals Gregory. Eliphaz his Exordium, wherein he praiſeth Job for teaching others, what an excellent man Job was, that he who was ſet to detract from him, yet gave him this high commendation, that being of ſo great dignity, implying much imployment, yet he took time to inſtruct and teach others; and the commendations of adverſaries are moſt ſure proofes, becauſe by the power of the truth forced from their mouthes: And this doth greatly commend a man of wiſdome indeed, that notwithſtanding, all worldly incumbrances, he is intent to teaching and inſtructing of the ignorant, and confirming in faith and obedience to God, and patience. Secondly, From theſe words,

Verſ. 6. Where is thy feare, thy fortitude, thy patience, the perfection of thy wayes? That he was indued with four cardinall virtues, which, in whom ſoever they are, makes him excellent indeed; fortitude founded upon the feare of God, being without it but raſhneſs; and patience with hope added to fortitude, without which it cannot be durable; with all theſe uprightneſs

to

concurring; the glory of God being in ſincerity ſought in all theſe, and not a mans own vain glory. Thirdly, That Hereticks ſpeak ſome things truly, that they may be the better beleived in that, which they ſay erroneouſly.

Fourthly, From theſe words, They that plow iniquity, and ſow wickedneſs, reape the ſame, &c. that God ſometimes ſuffereth wicked men long, before that he proceedeth in Judgment againſt them: for plowing and ſowing, and after that reaping, implyeth a long time as is betwixt ſowing ſeed and the harveſt, wherein it is reaped; but in the end a winde ſhall come to ſcatter them, as the Pſalmiſt ſayth, as the duſt which the wind bloweth away. Sometimes God puniſheth ſooner in the acting of Wickedneſs, that he may not ſeem not to regard the evill doings of men; and ſometimes he forbeareth to puniſh till ſin is come to be full ripe, as in the Amorites, or till the day of Judgment, that we might certainly expect that time, and be confirmed in our patient bearing the wrongs done to us by the wicked, being aſſured that they ſhall be reckoned with for all, and be judged accordingly. Fifthly, By the roaring of the Lyon, the auſterity of the man being underſtood by the Lyoneſs, the garrulity of the wife, and by the teeth of Lyons whelps, the edacity of Jobs Children, becauſe they feaſted one another ſo much, and by the Leopard, as he hath it, for the old Lyon, which is ſpotted, and variouſly coloured, that Hereticks exult great, if they can finde ſuch vices mingled with virtues in the Orthodox, as tending much to their diſgrace, and giving them advantage, as they do indeed, that we may take heed of ſuch mixtures of Almes-deeds with vain-glory, of zeale with mercileſs rigour, or of coveteouſneſs with pious performances and temperance. Sixthly, upon theſe words, It was ſayd to me in ſecret, that Hereticks to purchaſe the more credit to their erroneous teaching, find revelations which they have had ſecretly, whereof none elſe, but he alone that teacheth, is a witneſs: and hereby they challenge unto themſelves no ordinary, but extraordinary knowledge, exceeding that, which is in other men: and they alſo ſeek ſecret places, wherein they may vent their errours, there being none preſent, as in the publick place, whereby they may be confuted, and thus many ſimple ſoules are perverted by them, ſo that there are theſe three ſignes of an Hereticall Teacher.

Verſ. 8.

Gen. 15.

Verſ. 11.

Firſt, That he pretendeth revelations.

Secondly, He challengeth to himſelfe more knowledg then in other men.

Thirdly, He lurketh in ſecret places, in private houſes, in corners, as the Prophet ſayth, that thy teachers ſhall not be. 7. Upon the ſame words, A word came to me in ſecret, what is this word, ſaith he? but that of which it is ſaid, In the beginning was the word & that word was God, and tooke fleſh. And this word cometh in the night, when there is no noiſe, but all things are quiet, to ſhew, that he muſt ceaſe from worldly things that would receive this word into his Heart: and he ſayth, that he heard a little thereof, to intimate the defectiveneſs of our knowledge in this great myſtery of Chriſts incarnation: and by the fear coming upon him is ſet forth, as I touched before, how the word firſt works in the heart towards converſion: and the ſame word was an Image, yet not diſtinctly to be diſcerned, becauſe the Son is the Image of the Father, but till the ſpirit cometh, of which he ſpeaketh next, not ſo well to be diſcerned, by which ſpirit is meant the Holy Ghoſt coming down at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, compared to a gentle aire, becauſe bringing great tranquility into the minds of thoſe that receive him.

Iſa. 30 21.
Joh. 1.

8. Upon theſe words, His Angells he charged with folly. Theſe Angells may be alſo expounded of his Miniſters according to Revel. 1. and Mal. 2. 7. even theſe are not without ſin, as James ſaith, In many things we ſin all, and Paul, Not as though I were perfect: and they dwel in clay houſes that are weak in reſpect of grace: and are founded upon the duſt, that is, have hearts duſtied with evill cogitations, from which they can never in this life be clean ſwept: and what is the moth, but that which is bred in the garment,

Verſ. 18.

James 4.
Phil. 3. 8.

and

and then corrupteth it, the ſin bred in the fleſh, whereby deſtruction cometh. Dangerous then is the caſe of the fleſhly, and unregenerate, that is, they, in whom ſin increaſeth daily in ſtead of being mortified: For of ſuch it

Verſ. 20. is added further, They are deſtroyed from morning to evening, they periſh for ever without any regarding it. They are ſaid to be deſtroyed from morning to evening, When by the daily increaſing of their ſins they lay a foundation of everlaſting deſtruction, Heaping up (as it were) wrath againſt the day of wrath. And none of them is ſaid to regard it: That is, in great ſecurity they goe on thus to do, till the foreſaid inevitable deſtruction cometh upon them, to declare which further, it is added, verſ. 21. They dye without wiſdome, being without all providence, as fooles, till their fatall blow cometh, ſo that they may enjoy the preſent pleaſure, or profit of ſin, not regarding what ſufferings attend them afterwards.

Laſtly, For theſe words, Doth not their excellency which is in them goe away? He following the Vulg. But they which ſhall remain ſhall be taken out of them, Expounds them thus; When they are thus deſtroyed, the Elect who are as the left and neglected ones of them, ſhall be taken out from amongſt them, and carryed up to remain ever with the Lord. For theſe are, as the rejected ſervant of the Amalekite, upon whom David lighted in his way, who was weake and almoſt dead, but by him refreſhed, he went with David as a guide, who came upon the hoſt of the Amalekites, and ſlew and ſpoiled them. So the elect of God are dealt with here as moſt deſpicable, but Chriſt takes and ſaveth them, and uſeth them as Guides, by ſetting them up for Preachers and Leaders, as it were in their Sermons, denouncing this judgment to come amongſt them, after which he followeth, and adjudgeth them all to deſtruction. Thus he, and the Heb. will beare this reading, the word being יתר, ſignifying firſt to remain, and then to excell: whereas it may ſeem to make againſt this, that theſe words are inſerted amongſt the other, as tending all to ſet forth one matter: He anſwereth, it is not unuſuall in holy Scripture in ſpeaking of one thing, ſuddenly to interpoſe ſome-what touching another, and then to return again to ſpeak more of that which went before; to prove which, he inſtanceth in 1 Tim. 5. 22, 23, 24. Thomas Aquinas followeth him, but Lyra underſtandeth it as meant, that none of them ſhall finally eſcape: But as ſome here are deſtroyed, ſo all the reſt at the laſt day ſhall be. Calvin and ſome others will have the excellency of the ſame men meant, which at the laſt vaniſheth all: And that of being deſtroyed from morning to evening of this life, waxing ſhorter every day till wee dye.

Tho: Aquinas.

Calvin.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. CAll now, if there be any that will anſwer thee, and to which of the Saints wilt thou turn?

Here the Jeſuite thinks is a manifeſt proof, that it is no new thing to call upon the Saints departed, but was done even in Jobs time: But this ground is altogether ſandy. For the word rendered Saints here, ſignifieth either Angels, as Auguſtine hath it, or holy perſons living ſtill in this world, as the Jeſuite himſelfe acknowledgeth. Moreover, Gregory acknowledgeth none other to be called upon here meant, but God, and the Saints are mentioned to him in deriſion, as if it were a ridiculous thing to call to them departed out of this life, who cannot heare us: For Abraham, ſaith the Prophet, knoweth us not, and Iſaac is ignorant of us. But to whom ſhould a Roman Catholike rather hearken, then to one, and that the famous of their owne Biſhops? The meaning of this bitter ſcoffe is, that if he beleeved him not, that he had ſuch a revelation as he ſaid, and hee would not conſent to that which he had ſpoken as true, but would ſtill perſiſt in his exclamations, as if hee had beene by Auguſtine. Pineda. Gregory.

Eſa. 63. 16.

God

God wronged; that he ſhould pray to God, and ſee if he could prevaile an anſwer from him to convince Eliphaz of falſhood, or to juſtifie himſelfe ſo terribly puniſhed, and ſo impatient under his puniſhment. And if he ſhould think that any of Gods Angels, or ſervants upon earth, being called to take his part, would do it, this were abſurd for him to try, for ſurely none would ſtand for him; or if hee ſhould thinke of any Saint in Heaven to call to him, this were ridiculous.

Verſ. 2. For wrath killeth the fooliſh man, and envy ſlayeth the ſilly one.

Verſ. 3. I have ſeene the fooliſh taking root, and ſuddenly I curſed his habitation.

This ſaying, howſoever miſ-applyed againſt holy Job, containeth a truth in it: For wrath through impatience and envy at the better eſtate, wherein others are, is a great ſinne, and deſtroyeth the image of God in a man, who ſpeaketh and doth all things without paſſion, and therefore wiſely and righteouſly, which he cannot, do that through paſſion, is blinded in his minde by unadviſed anger. Thus alſo Solomon in his Proverbs condemneth him for a foole that is ſoon angry, or continueth herein, of which ſee more upon that Book. Gregory. Touching Envy, he in whom this vice is, envyeth another, becauſe he thinks him better then he, as Cain envyed Abel, and Joſephs brethren, him, and Saul, David; and thus he condemneth himſelfe as little in vertue, and unworthy to be ſpared. Note. Now to be preſerved from this dangerous evill, to which we are provoked by the love of worldly things, (For every one would have the beſt of theſe: and becauſe he cannot, but ſeeth another have better then he, envy is ſtirred up in him.) We muſt labour to have our hearts taken up with heavenly things, wherein there will be no ſtreightning to any man, but every one ſhall hereof have his fill, one as well as another; the more come to partake hereof, they being the more inlarged, that every one may have enough; for the love of heavenly things will take us off from the love of earthly, and not loving them, although we want, we ſhall not envy thoſe that have, becauſe we have farre better, able to ſuffice any ſoule, in compariſon of which theſe are but as droſſe and dung.

Verſ. 3. I have ſeen the wicked taking root. That is, ſeeming as a deep rooted tree, to ſtand firmly, becauſe in great proſperity. And I ſuddenly curſed his habitation: That is, I did ominouſly ſpeake or think, that ſuch a mans houſe would come to ruine: For the word is not קלל which is uſed elſewhere to ſet forth curſing, but קבב to divine ominouſly. And ſo it is alſo ſaid by David, I have ſeen the wicked flouriſhing as a green bay tree, and by and by his place was no where to be ſeen. Pſal. 73. Thus alſo Gregory, who morally by him deeply rooted, underſtandeth the earthly, according to that of our Lord, That which is of the earth is earthly. Gregory. John 3. Becauſe trees are rooted in the earth, and the foolish Worldling by having his mind ſet upon things here below, is ſaid to be thus rooted; but his Excellency, as he rendreth it, and the word alſo may ſignifie accurſed, to what eſtate ſoever he attaineth in this world, it ſhall be turned into a curſed condition, and ſo ſhall ſuddenly vaniſh, when he cometh to be judged, as if it had never been. Note. And miſtically by the fooliſh, hee underſtandeth the Jewes that were ſo malitious and envious againſt Chriſt; They, how deeply ſoever rooted in the land of Canaan, by their continuance there, and by promiſes made to their Fore-fathers; yet for their malicious perſecuting of Chriſt to the death, were by Gods curſe expelled, and all their glory in having God for their Father and Protector, is turned into diſhonour, ſhame, and contempt. The morall. The myſtery.

Verſ. 4. His children alſo are far from ſafety, they are cruſhed in the gate, and there is none to deliver them. This was manifeſtly ſpoken by him of Jobs children, who were cruſhed by the houſe falling upon them: Whereas it is ſaid, In the gate, hereby Judgment, whereby it fell thus out unto them, is denoted, becauſe the gate of a City of old was the place of Judgment: And hereby it is ſhewed, that at the laſt day, when the Lord ſhall ſit upon his Judgment-ſeat, all the wicked, and their children like unto them in condition, ſhall be cruſhed, that is, deſtroyed, ſentence being denounced then againſt them, as Mat. 25. Goe yee curſed into hell fire, prepared for the Devill and his Angels; For ſuch only are counted the children of the wicked. If any ſeeing their fathers wickedneſſe, turn there-from, the Lord hath promiſed that they ſhall not dye, but live. The gate alſo, which is a place to goe out at, may ſet forth Death, by which, as by a gate or door, men go out of this life; And herein all the wicked are crushed, that eſcaped all their life time before, it being to them the gate leading to Hell, but to the Elect, to Heaven, all whoſe ſufferings are now at an end, and their joyes begin, which never ſhall have end, as it was with Lazarus, of whom, and Dives being dead, it is ſaid, Now hee is comforted, and thou art tormented.

Ezek. 18.

Note.

Luke 16.

Verſ. 5. Whoſe harveſt the hungry ſhall eat, and taketh it out of the thornes, and the robber ſwalloweth up their ſubſtance. Vulg. And the armed ſhall ſnatch it away, and the thirſty ſhall drinke up his riches. But there is no reaſon, if the ſenſe of the word be reſpected, to render it The armed, in the Nominative caſe, for it is מצנים properly ſignifying out of thorns, or arms ſharp as thorns, whereby it is defended; and ſo the meaning is, the harveſt of the wicked, that is, their abundance, although never ſo ſtrongly guarded by men and armes, whereby it is hedged about as with thick growing thorns, that a man would think it impoſſible for any to come at it: Yet hungry and poore men, by Gods juſt judgment, ſhall break through, and make a prey hereof: And of hedging Job about, Satan ſpake before in this ſenſe, Chap. 14. And for the next words, the word rendered robbers, by Vulg. thirſty, as צמום which if it be derived from צמא ſignifieth thirſty, if from צמם ſignifying hair, Theeves, and Robbers: Becauſe the Arabians and Sabeans, who were Robbers, living in Deſarts, went naked, and wore their hair long, to cover their bodies: and this is rather to be followed, although becauſe ſuch thirſt after gaine, and the goods of other men, not going out in Bands ſo much to fight to get victory, as to take preyes; that other rendring may ſeem tollerable, eſpecially, becauſe hungring was ſpoken of before: And here coming to ſpeak of the ſame goods, which goe there under the ſimilitude of an harveſt, to be taken and eaten, here they are propounded as drink to be ſwallowed or drunk, thirſting hereafter moſt aptly agreeth. And in all this he aimed at Job to grieve him the more, by ſetting him forth as the wicked man, who was thus dealt withall, his Cattell being ſtrongly guarded by his ſervants; yet the Sabeans coming out in bands, ſlew his ſervants, and tooke them away.

Note. Whence we may truly note in generall, although he in applying it to Job ſinned greatly, that no ſafe keeping of wicked mens goods will avail, if they be put in iron cheſts ſtrongly locked, and ſtrong places, and guarded alſo by men and armes, will keepe them from Robbers, when God beginneth to animadvert againſt, and to puniſh them for their unjuſt ſcraping of them together. As Craſus could not have his goods defended when Cyrus came, nor the Tyrians theirs againſt Nebuchadnezzar, or Alexander, or the Babylonians theirs againſt the Medes and Perſians. From hence Gregory raiſeth this Morall; The hungry taking away, and eating the rich mans Harveſt, as out of thorns, that is, with much difficulty: And the thirſty drinking up their riches, ſet forth ſuch as are more dull of underſtanding, in compariſon of others, that are more ripe witted, and quick of apprehenſion: For theſe having abundance of knowledge, to which they eaſily attain, have, as it were, an harveſt to be reaped to feed and inrich their ſouls much; but becauſe they have no hearts affected with the things that they know; the dull of underſtanding, hungring and thirſting after this Harveſt, and treaſure of wiſdome, in time attain unto it, and there theſe witty ones have it taken away, as it were from them, being in the midſt of their knowledg, left poor and deſtitute of all true wiſdome and underſtanding, and ſo becoming miſerable, as the Angel of the Church of Laodicea, ſaying that he was rich, and needed nothing, is pronounced to be poore, miſerable, blind, and naked.

The morall

Revel. 3.

Although

Although affliction cometh not out of the duſt, nor trouble ſpringeth out of the ground: Yet man is born to trouble, as the ſparkes flye upward. The vulg. Nothing is done upon earth without cauſe, neither doth griefe riſe out of the ground. But herein the ſenſe, is more reſpected then the words, which are Hebr. as in N. T. For this is the meaning, Afflictions and Sufferings come not to men without cauſe, they ſpring not up out of the duſt or earth, as hearbs, and thorns, and nettles, naturally, there is a further cauſe hereof to be looked at in the man himſelfe that ſuffereth, namely, his owne ſins, which be the ſeeds from which miſeries ſpring. Chryſoſtome and Olympiodorus turn the ſenſe another way, thus: The earth is not ſenſible of paine, and therefore it is not incident unto it: But man is, yea every man, and therefore it is by him patiently to be borne, and not to be counted a juſt cauſe of murmuring and complaining, for he is born to trouble as the ſparks flye upward. It is a thing by all men to be expected, and therefore Job ſhould have patiently born it, ſaying with another, I think nothing incident to man, ſtrange to me. But the meaning before given and followed by others is beſt, and hereunto agree theſe words very well, thus: Man being a ſinner, is borne and brought forth into this world to ſuffer trouble and miſery, his corruption by nature carryeth him hereunto, as the ſparkes are naturally carryed upward: The Vulg. hath it, Labour is for man: Man is born for labour, and birds for flying. Heb. בְּנֵי רֶשֶׁף the children of a burning coale, or of an arrow, which becauſe it hath feathers, Jerome rendereth by feathered or winged Fowls. For the word, flee upward, it is Heb. Shall be lifted up in fleeing. And they who render it by Birds, give this ſenſe, as Birds which, naturally have wings are for fleeing, this is that which God hath appointed them to, to flee about, and ſo to get their living: So man coming into the world with hands, and having, when he is grown up, underſtanding accordingly, is taught hereby, that God would have him to labour for his living, and not to ſeek to gather wealth by oppreſſion and wrong: And if he doth not, but being a Prince, playeth the Tyrant or Lyon, as was before ſaid, tearing from his Subjects, then he hereby layeth a foundation of affliction and ſorrow to himſelfe, which commeth not out of the duſt, as was ſaid before, that is, through no fault of his; but here is the evident reaſon of his being brought to ſuch miſery, his oppreſſions. And this we may reſt in, as fully ſatisfying, being alſo the ſame in effect, which I ſaid before: Or if it liketh thee not ſo well to render it Birds, take it for Arrows, as the word alſo ſignifieth, or for ſparks of fire, which have nothing elſe to do but to flee aloft: But becauſe labour for living is here compared with fleeing, and the Birds of the Aire only flee about thus, not ſparks or arrows, I ſtill hold as before, that there is none Expoſition to that made by Birds. And being thus underſtood, it agreeth beſt with his other vexing ſpeeches before going, and ſpecially that, Chap. 4. 10. But howſoever in his ſenſe erroneouſly applyed, yet continuing in its truth, which all Oppreſſors had need to think upon; as they would not have affliction and ſorrow in the end, the fruit of their covetous accumulating earthly treaſures. Gregory hereupon ſaith, Affliction cometh not from the duſt, nor trouble from the earth: When it is dry, and ſo becometh barren, or over wet, or the fruit thereof blaſted or mildewed, or Vermine be bred that eat up all; but mens ſins are the cauſe of theſe judgments from the earth: And man is born to labour, and birds to fleeing upward, that is, man, who hath nothing in him but nature, hath toyle and travell in getting and keeping the goods of this world; but they that are as birds by an heavenly converſation, flee aloft, and are not ſo intent to this labour, but even neglect them in compariſon: Yea, and the afflictions which they ſuffer, they turn into an occaſion of being the more heavenly minded: and ſo being mounted up above this world, they are not moved at the evils hereof, but joyfully ſuffer all things.

Verſ. 6, 7.

Chryſoſt. Olympiod.

Humani nihil à me alienum eſſe puto.

Chap. 4. 10.

Note.

Gregory.

I would ſeek unto God, and to God would I commit my cauſe: Which doth great things, and unſearchable, &c. Olympiod. thinketh this to be ſpoken by way way of oſtentation; as if he had ſaid, I for my part will bleſſe God, for that I am not ſuch an one as have laid a foundation to my ſelfe of ſorrow and miſery by oppreſſions, and ſo am preſerved therefrom; but this is both contrary to the words, I would ſeeke, not I would praiſe, and ſavours not of the ſpirit whereby Elihu ſpake, out of preſumption, as the Phariſees prayer, Luc. 18. Wherefore others better either take the meaning to be: If I were in thy caſe, I would not ſpeak, as one that found my ſelfe grieved out of a conceit, that God had dealt more hardly with me then I have deſerved; Or elſe doe thou (O Iob) what thou wilt, cry out ſtill if thou wilt againſt the day wherein thou wert born. But if I were in thy caſe, I would humble my ſelf to God, that he would pardon my ſins, & take his plagues away from me, for he is not inexorable, but moſt mercifull, and able to do wonderfully for thy reſtitution, both to health, wealth, and children again: And this is his meaning, the words following, verſ. 10, 11. do declare. He giveth rain, &c. to ſet up on high thoſe that be low, that they who mourn may be exalted to ſafety.

Verſ. 8, 9. Olympiod.

Ver. 11, 12.

For the phraſe of making it to raine upon the good and the bad, is uſed by our Lord to ſhew proſperity and increaſe by Gods bleſſing in theſe outward things. Gregory upon theſe words, Who doth great things and unſearchable, marvellous things, ſaith, that many things which God daily doth marvellouſly, no man admireth, but the like being done rarely, are by all men admired, as the raiſing of a man from the dead is wondered at by all; but the birth and coming of a man into the world, which is a greater wonder, no man admireth: and I call it greater, becauſe the making of that which was not, is a greater work then the repairing again of that which was: Water turned by Chriſt into Wine all admired, but that out of the moyſture of the earth drawn through the Vine grapes, and Wine ſhould come, no man admireth, and yet it is as wonderfull a work as the other: And the loaves multiplyed by Chriſt for the feeding of ſo many were admired; but the like being daily done by the corns ſown into the ground, of one many coming, is not admired. The commonneſſe of things take away our admiration, or counting them wonderfull. Many more wonderfull works of God alſo there are, for which they are ſaid to be innumerable. His works are alſo ſaid to be unſearchable, becauſe man cannot find out the reaſon of them, to believe even the moſt wonderfull of them paſt or to come we are bound: But to inquire into the reaſon is not ſafe, but prejudiciall to our faith, as the creating of all things of nothing, and the raiſing of the dead again at the laſt day, this wee are to believe and admire: But for the reaſon hereof we ought no further to inquire; but this ſhould be a reaſon ſufficient for us, becauſe he made all men at the firſt, when they were not before, therefore ſuch as have been, he can doubtleſſe make again out of the ſame matter. For his making it to raine, verſ. 11. this hee expoundeth of his doctrine, which is elſewhere ſaid to come down as raine: And the next words, verſ. 12. To lift up on high thoſe that be low. Of the Apoſtles, and as abjects in this world, but ſhall be at the Reſurrection lifted up on high by being ſet upon 12. Thrones, to judge the twelve Tribes of Iſrael. They alſo, and the like unto them were the mourners, which ſhall be comforted.

Matth. 5. 46. Gregory.

He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſſe, and the counſell of the froward is carryed headlong.

Verſ. 13.

This ſaying is alleadged, 1 Cor. 3. 19. and thereby appeareth to have come from the ſpirit of God, and not much unlike unto it is Iſa. 44. 25. and therefore ſee the Expoſition there, only we may take notice of ſome examples brought by Gregory for the illuſtration hereof. Ioſephs brethren were ſo wiſe, that they thought to fruſtrate his dreams, but their counſels took no effect. And Saul thought to circumvent David by giving him his daughter to wife, but all in vain. Yea, Ionah himſelfe, when he thought to deal wiſely in diſobeying God, was taken and caſt into the Sea.

They meet with darkneſſe in the day time, and grope at noon day as in the night.

Verſ. 14.

This

This is by Gregory expounded as propheticall, touching the Jewes, who having Chriſt amongſt them ſhining clearly as the day light, by teaching and miracles, yet had their underſtandings ſo darkned, that they ſaw him not to be the Meſſiah, but groped after him, when they ſaid, How long doſt thou keep us in doubt, if thou beeſt the Chriſt, tell us. And in this ſenſe Ieremie ſaith, The ſunne went down to them, when it was yet day. And Eſay in their perſon, We have ſtumbled at noon day as in the dark. Gregory. Joh. 10. Jer. 15. Iſa. 49.

But he ſaveth the poore from the ſword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty. Verſ. 15.

So the poore hath hope, and iniquity ſtoppeth her mouth. Who is the poore man here firſt ſpoken of? but Chriſt, of whom it is ſaid, that he made himſelf poore to make us rich. He was ſaved from the ſword of the wicked Jews, when as although he was crucified, yet he roſe again the third day: and the ſame that is called the ſword, is alſo called the mouth, becauſe the mouths of the wicked Jews crying out, crucifie, crucifie him, were as ſwords drawne forth againſt him. And therefore it is ſaid, The ſonnes of men, their tongues are arrowes, and their mouth as a ſharp ſword. And there is a generation whoſe teeth are as ſpears and knives. The poore that have hope now, are the Diſciples of Chriſt, who when they ſaw him riſen again, were filled with comfort, but the mouths of the wicked Jewes were not yet ſtopped, for they ſtill cryed out againſt him; but they ſhall be ſtopped, When at the laſt day they ſhall ſee him whom they have pierced come in Judgment to their inevitable deſtruction: And ſo ſhall all their mouths be, who having received the knowledg of his truth, yet ſin willingly, and ſo crucifie him over again, piercing him as it were with their oaths and imprecations, corrupt communications, and other wickedneſſes of their tongues, or lives. Morally alſo by thoſe that meet with darkneſs in the day, underſtand the wicked envious men who envy the righteous, and ſeek ſome occaſion of detracting from them: But going about this, a black darkneſſe overſpreadeth them, ſo that they can find nothing againſt him, yet they grope for ſomething whereof to accuſe them. As the Sodomites coming about the houſe of juſt Lot were ſmitten with blindneſſe, and groaped about to find the door, but could not enter or finde it: So they ſeeking ſome door at which they may enter an accuſation againſt the righteous, can find none, as men in the dark: For God ſaveth the poor from their ſword and their mouth, that is, ſo that they cannot prevaile to make them ſin, whereby to have any advantage againſt them, either by violence or fraud, ſeeking by flattering ſpeeches or promiſes to pervert them, or to bring them out of the right way. And theſe poor ones be the humble whom God teacheth, and to whom he giveth grace, that they can have none advantage againſt them, but are in theſe their wicked enterpriſes finally confounded, and ſhall have their mouths ſtopped, when their judgment ſhall be denounced, and they have no time any more to ſpeak againſt them as now commonly they do, or ſeek to do. Verſ. 16. Phil. 2. 6. Pſalm 5. 7. Prov. 30. 14. Hebr. 6. Note. Pſalm 25. Jam. 4. 9.

Behold, happy is the man whom the Lord correcteth, therefore deſpiſe not thou the chaſtning of the Almighty. See the ſame, Prov. 3. 12. with a reaſon, Verſ. 17.

For he maketh ſoare, and bindeth up, he woundeth, and his hands make whole. Of this ſee Hoſ. 6. 1. Deut. 32. 39. Verſ. 18.

He ſhall deliver thee in ſix troubles, yea in ſeven there ſhall none come neere thee. By ſix ſaith Gregory, underſtand all the troubles of this life, ſet forth by this number, becauſe the world was made in ſix dayes, and this world is full of trouble, therefore we muſt expect trouble after trouble here to the end of this mortall life: but God will deliver his ſervants out of them all. Yea, and when the ſeventh cometh at the end of this world, the day of judgment, which ſhall be the moſt terrible time of all others to all the wicked, that ſhall not touch thee; but then ſhall the day of thy reſt begin, which never ſhall have an end. Some not obſerving the diſtinction here made of ſixe, from the ſeventh, but putting them together, ſay, innumerable troubles are hereby Verſ. 19. Gregory.

hereby meant, to which even the beſt are ſubject in this life, but they ſhall be delivered out of them all; the number of ſeven being put for very many but when ſeven are not named together, but ſix and then the ſeventh, we muſt not confound what God hath diſtinguiſhed; as neither Hoſ. 1. where it is ſayd, for three tranſgreſſions and for four, but by three, ſomeleſſer ſins and fewer are to be underſtood, by four more and greater ſins, being now grown to the full: Therefore Gregory herein is to be hearkned to, andwheras ſome think, that the evils hereafter named, V. 20. 21. 22. may be taken for the ſeven here ſpoken of, if V. 24. be added, ſix being in the 20. 21 22. and one in that, Gregory without obſerving this number, ſaith, That having ſpoken of his not being touched with the ſeven meaning, that in ſtead of being touched, now for a reward of his patient bearing of the troubles of this life, he ſhall come to perpetuall reſt; he ſetteth forth the troubles of this life, againſt all which he ſhall be ſafe, by the graces wherewith he ſhall be indued.

Verſ. 20. Amos 8. 11. In famine he ſhall redeem thee from death, and in war from the power of the Sword. That is, If there be a famine of the word, of which Amos ſpeaketh, and hereupon the fleſh getteth ſtrength, fighteth againſt the ſpirit; ſuch, grace ſhall be given to ſuch as ſeek to God, as was before ſaid: That they ſhall be free from all danger coming hereby, when as the wicked ſhall be overcome, and incur the danger of death, V. 21. Verſ. 21. Thou ſhalt be hidden from the ſcourge of the tongue, neither ſhalt thou be afraid of deſtruction when it cometh. This is ſpoken to ſhew, That whereas ſome being preſerved from the temptations of the fleſh, even when Viſion faileth through perſecution, yet being aſſaulted, either with the flatteries of the tongue, or violence offered unto them, are not able to ſtand; yet the faithful Servants of God that ſeek to him ſhall, and neither flatteries, nor threatnings ſhall prevail againſt them, for they knowing, that they ſhall be variouſly aſſaulted, have the food of the word in them againſt this famine: The grace of continency againſt the fightings of the fleſh, patience againſt the ſword of the tongue, and the love of heavenly things, taking up the heart againſt ſufferings, in our Goods or Bodies. V. 22. At deſtruction and famine thou ſhalt laugh. That is, At the laſt day, when judgement as deſtruction and famine ſhall ſeaze upon the wicked; which is ſo ſaid of them, becauſe they ſhall not ſee Chriſt any more, who is the bread of life, and therefore being ſhut out from him, what can come to him but famine and torment; the Servants of God ſhall be the joy of their hearts; live and be with him for ever. And thou ſhalt not feare the beaſt of the feild, that is, The temptations of the Devil, who is called a Beaſt, becauſe he tempted Eve by the Serpent, the ſubtleſt of all beaſts: But him the righteous ſhall not feare at the day of death, when chiefly he ſeeketh whom he may devour as a roaring Lion, the wicked; with whom he hath prevailed by his allurements in their life, may well feare him in their death; as ready to make a prey of their Soules: But to the righteous, it ſhall be as the Prophet Iſaiah ſaith, An evil Beaſt ſhall not paſs through thee. They that have feared God in their life time, ſhall not in their death feare the Devil; but ſuch as caſting away his feare, have been drawn by the fleſh or the Devil to ſin, now ſhall feare the death, to which he ſhall take them away for ever.

Habent contra famem verbi palulum contra belli gladium continentiæ ſcutum, contra flagellum linguæ profectionum patientiæ, contra exterioris calamitatis damnum interni amoris adjutorium. Joh. 6. 2. Pet. 5. 8. Quos ſæviendo blandiendo decepit morientes ſæviens rapit. Iſa. 35.

Verſ. 23. Thou ſhalt be in league with the ſtones of the feild, and the beaſts of the feild ſhall be at peace with thee. So almoſt a like paſſage, Hoſ. 2. 18. the meaning is, ſaith Gregory, The faithful, who are by Peter ſet forth, by the name of living ſtones, ſhall be joyned in league unto thee; in aſſociating thy ſelf with whom thou ſhalt have much delight, and the beaſts of the feild are either Devils, as was before ſaid, or fleſhly luſts, which coming upon us, as raging beaſts: For the more the faithful are aſſaulted by either, the more do they ſeek to God; and ſo they are not able to hurt them as enemies, but to benefit them by occaſioning a firme peace betwixt God and them, who loveth

Gregory. 1 Pet. 1.

veth and beareth greateſt favour to them that ſeek moſt unto him in time of trouble; when he is ready to hear, and we forget him, to be torn in peices, there being none to deliver them: Hitherto Gregory is moralizing, but according to the literall ſenſe, here are the greateſt judgements, that befal men in this life, reckoned up, famine and the ſword; and deſtruction making deſolate, ſuch as that which cometh by the ſword and the famine, through peſtilence, which commonly followeth after, and by evil beaſts, as the Lions, that deſtroyed the Aſſyrians; from all theſe he ſaith, That the man, who ſeeketh to God, ſhall be preſerved; the like unto which, David hath, Pſalme 91. And for theſe words; Thou ſhalt be in league with the ſtones of the feild. As I am not ſatisfied with the moral ſenſe given, ſo it is moſt difficult to determine, what is meant hereby: Some underſtand, ſtrong men, whoſe ſtrength is as that of ſtones; contrary to which Job ſaith, afterwards of himſelf; My ſtrength is not as the ſtrength of ſtones; and if it be taken thus, the meaning is: That in ſtead of ſtrong enemies, he ſhould have ſtrong and firme friends, to ſtand continually to him, ſome underſtand, ſtones ſet for boundaries of Lands, land-marks, to be in league with which is, hold a mans land, without being encroached upon by enemies; ſome underſtand patience making a man to ſtand firmly in adverſity, howſoever ſhot at. Some, thou ſhalt be ſo ſafe in thy going, as that, though thou goeſt amongſt the ſtones of the feild, thou ſhalt not ſtumble nor be hurt hereby, as if they had made a league with thee, not to hurt thee, as often times they did ſome others, in thoſe rocky countries: And this I prefer, for it is in regard of hurt by ſtones or by beaſts, that he ſaith thus: And it is promiſed, where preſervation of the faithful, from peſtilence and war is ſpoken off; That the Angels ſhall beare thee in their hands, leaſt thou daſh thy foot againſt a ſtone, and Lapides, ſtones, have their name, Lændo pedes, hurting the feet: That of Thomas Aquinas, which is ſo applauded by ſome, then fals to the ground, that the very ſtony ground ſhould be fruitful to him, which uſed to be barren to others; yet there is one expoſition more, which I will bring, that may not ſeem unfit; and that is, That the ſtones ſhall not cry out againſt thee, as it is ſaid, they ſhall againſt him, that buildeth a City by blood, The ſtones of the wall ſhall cry out againſt him. For even the Earth and ſtones of the earth, have a voice to cry out againſt, and to complain againſt oppreſſors; as alſo we may ſee againſt Cain, that the earth that received his Brothers blood at his hands, did: But if thou beeſt no Oppreſſor, but art juſt in all thy dealings, thou ſhalt be as it were in league with the ſtones in this regard, nothing ſhall riſe up, to accuſe thee, but rather ſpeak for thee; Thou ſhalt know, that thy Tabernacle ſhall be in peace, and thou ſhalt viſit thy Habitation, and ſhalt not ſin. The vulg. Thou ſhalt viſit thy ſpecies, thy kind, another man Like unto thee, as Gregory expoundeth it: and this reading alſo the Hebrew will beare, for what is another mans body, but ſuch an habitation as thine is, weak and infirm as an earthen veſſel, and may be called thine, becauſe his fleſh is thine own fleſh, as the Prophet Eſay ſpeaketh, Break thy bread to the hungry, and bring the poore wandring into thy houſe, and deſpiſe not thine own fleſh. Or bring the poore caſt out, into thine houſe. Not ſuch as voluntarily prefer a vagabonds life, goe about the country begging, who by giving harbour to them, are too much incouraged to goe on in this idle courſe of life, to the filling of the Land with confuſion; whereas ſuch ſhould rather be chaſtiſed, and ſent back to their own habitation, as is by good law provided: But what is it that he ſaith, Thou ſhalt ſee thy Tabernacle in peace? it is, Thou ſhalt have peace in this life, if abhorring from rapine and wrong, thou doſt that which is juſt and right in all things, whilſt thou ſojourneſt in the body, as in a Tabernacle, as the Apoſtle calleth it, the peace of good conſcience towards God and men. And if thou adjoyneſt hereunto, viſiting the poore and weak, called thy habitation

Pſal. 50.

Philip.

Cajetan.

Pſal. 91. 12.

Tho: Aquin.

Heb. 2. 11.

Gen. 4.

Verſ. 24.

Gregor.

Iſa. 58. 7.

2 Cor. 5. 1. 2.

tion, for the reaſon aforeſaid, giving releiſe to the one, and ſupporting and helping up the other, as it is required, Gal. 6. 1. thou ſhalt not ſin, and ſo not be prejudiced for want of doing this alſo, in reſpect of everlaſting peace in Heaven. And becauſe nothing is of more force, then this conſideration, that ſuch are as our ſelves, to move to mercy, he ſaith, Thou ſhalt viſit thy kinde, as the Apoſtle doth, Conſidering thy ſelf, leaſt thou alſo be tempted. And our Lord, as yee would that men ſhould do unto you, ſo do yee to them; wherein the ſame Apoſtle was a notable example, who ſaith, That 1 Cor. 9. 22. he became as weak to the weak, and all things to all men, that he might win ſome, conſidering himſelf in them, and how he would have been condiſcended to in the like caſe. Thou ſhalt know alſo, that thy ſeed ſhall be great,
Verſ. 25. and thy offſpring as the graſſe of the Earth. To ſay nothing of Gregories morals here, as being too far fetcht, in ſaying; Thou ſhalt know, he meaneth, thou ſhalt ſee by experience the increaſe of thy poſterity, which ſhall be Pſal. 112. a goodly offſpring, as the green graſſe growing out of the earth, putteth a beauty hereupon: ſo thou ſhalt have children again faire and comely, and they ſhall be great, and mighty upon earth, as alſo the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, of the ſeed of the righteous. And thou ſhalt come to thy grave in a full age,
Verſ. 26. as a ſhock of Corn cometh in his ſeaſon. Wherein he ſpake rightly, as the ſequel at the end of this book ſheweth, for Job had again both ſons and daughters, and wherewithall to make them great, for his eſtate was doubled; and his daughters were moſt beautiful women, and he lived after the turning of his captivity 140 yeares, and having given Inheritances to his daughters amongſt their brethren, he dyed ful of daies.

CHAP. VI.

Chap. 6. Verſ. 1. 2. THen Job anſwered and ſaid, O! that my greifes were throughly weighed and my calamity laid in the ballances together. Having heard his friend Eliphaz charging him for his ſeeming impatient under his ſufferings, to be a wicked man, and one, who though he had formerly ſeemed moſt righteous, yet appeared to God to be an hypocrite, doing otherewiſe then he made profeſſion, or elſe God would not have dealt ſo ſeverely by him, as he did; having I ſay heard all this to his greater vexation, Job now anſwereth, as if he had ſaid, I confeſs indeed that I have ſhewed much impatience in the ſpeeches, that I have uttered, if they be looked at, as they ſound, which I ought not to have done. But O! that yee could ſee how I am afflicted, even much more then appeareth outwardly to the eye in my ſoul and inward parts, becauſe that here I feel nothing to make me look up to God as a merciful Father unto me, but a ſevere Judge againſt me; ſo that I feel in my Verſ. 3. ſoul as it were, the terrors of Hel upon earth: And theſe being thus weighed, would ſeem heavyer then the ſands of the ſea ſhoare, and therefore importable by any creature, ſo that I want words to expreſs my miſeries, which he meaneth by ſaying, My words are ſwallowed up. For that he meaneth, his Verſ. 4. inward ſufferings, beſides his outward, the next words do declare, V. 4. The arrowes of the Almighty are within me, the poyſon thereof drinketh up my ſpirit, the terrors thereof ſet themſelves in aray againſt me. That is, I feel the effects of Gods wrath in my heart, as arrowes peircing and galling it, yea poyſoned arrowes, which are moſt mortal: And are ſhot by
Note. moſt cruel enemies, deſiring that none who are thus wounded, ſhould eſcape, but dye a tormenting death, and whilſt it is thus with me, I am beſet as it were, with an army; from which there is none eſcaping, but I muſt needs periſh for ever: Whence note, How great the ſeverity of Gods wrath
Note. is, and ſhall be towards the wicked: for if Job ſo juſt a man be thus dealt with, and being under it but for a time, judgeth the burthen thereof intolerable, what ſhall become of the wicked who ſhall beare the burthen of a greater his moſt heavy wrath for ever and ever: And therefore let us all repent and ſerve the Lord with reverence, that we may never feel the weight of this burthen: And becauſe Job was for a time in this deſperate eſtate, but at length delivered and comforted, let no faithful ſervant of God, if he be under ſuch temptations, utterly deſpaire, but looking to his example, certainly expect by faith a joyful iſſue; the rather now, becauſe Job, who is propounded to us for a pattern, had: There was no example before this, from whence he could take the like comfort; but we have both this and Chriſts, and diverſe more, whereby we may be comforted: But becauſe there is ſo great danger of falling into deſparation, under ſuch greivous temptations, let us pray to God, as Chriſt hath taught us, ſaying, Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. And let it terrifie us from every groſs ſin, as that of Cain and Judas; and the like; being aſſured that if Job were ſo preſſed down by deſpair, who lived in no ſuch ſin, but moſt righteouſly in all things: We ſhall fall into a deſperate moſt doleful condition in the end, and never be delivered, but periſh everlaſtingly; as the wicked men before named did: Pray we then with David both, Keep me Lord from preſumptuons ſinning; and again if we have ſo ſinned. Purge me from this hainous and bloody fact; And enter not into Judgment with me. And correct me, but not in thy fury. Which who is able to beare? The allegorical expoſition made hereupon by Gregory, that by the ballance Chriſt is to be underſtood, and that weighing the ſins of all men, in whoſe perſon he ſpeaketh, in this ballance, is, by his ſuffering death for them, whereby their weightineſs appeared; this I ſay ſeemeth not to me ſo ſolid, and therefore I paſs it over: For that which he objecteth againſt thoſe that will not receive a myſtical ſenſe here, if theſe things be not myſtically to be underſtood, what ſenſe ſhall we give of theſe words, V. 7. The things which my ſoul refuſed to touch, are my ſorrowfull meat. If his friends galling ſpeeches ſhall be thought to be meant hereby, we muſt condemn him for a very proud man in his proſperity; therefore no literal ſenſe will hold good, but we muſt ſeek out a myſtical, which is, That the Apoſtles, who before the coming of Chriſt, and by his death bringing ſalvation to the Gentiles, would have nothing to do with them, nor before they were better inſtructed in the perſon of Peter; yet after this ſhould make them as it were, their meat, filling them by preaching repentance unto them, and eating them by baptizing them, and giving the Communion to them, beleiving in Chriſt, being incorporated into the ſame body with them, as the meat is, when it is eaten and digeſted into our bodies: But this expounded, ſaith he, it agreeth very well, and aptly followeth that of meat to be eaten without ſalt, and the white of an egge having no taſt in it; for ſo the Gentiles before grace coming into their hearts, ſet forth by ſalt, were as meat without a taſt, and not to be eaten; but now well taſted meat, and it is called ſorrowful meat, becauſe the Jewes being rejected, when they were called, made the Apoſtles ſorrowful, as Paul ſheweth, whom we may heare ſpeaking for them all, I have continuall heavineſs for the Jewes. And by the Aſs an unclean beaſt, he meaneth the Gentiles, and by the Oxe, a clean beaſt, the Jewes: But Ferus hath an expoſition, making the ſenſe good, without any allegory thus. O, that my greife were throughly weighed, and my calamity laid in the ballances. In ſaying which, he doth not as it may ſeem by the Vulg. lat. O, that my ſinnes were laid in the ballance. Complain as if his ſufferings were greater then his ſinnes; for the moſt righteous man cannot ſay ſo, becauſe the leaſt ſinnes that he comitteth, are greater then the greateſt ſufferings that God layeth upon him in this world; for which David in the name of the faithful acknowledgeth: That God rewardeth us not according to our ſinnes, but even in judging us here, ſheweth us mercy. His meaning therefore is, I may ſeem to you, yea I perceive by the great neſs of my ſufferings, that thou Eliphaz gathereſt, that I am no ordinary, but a grea-

Note.

Note.

Pſ. 19.
Pſa. 51.
Pſ. 6.

Gregory.

Verſ. 7.

Act. 10.

Verſ. 6.

Rom. 9.

Ferus.

Pſ. 103. 2

a greater sinner, then thou art, and that I have hidden my wickednes under the vayl of hypocrisie: But O! That thou couldest see into my heart, and there thou shouldest finde, that I have served God in sincerity, and therefore, although I acknowledge my selfe to be a sinner, yet thou wouldest not measure my sinnes by my calamities, but wouldest think upon some other course, whereas by doing otherwise, thou putteſt not my sinnes and my miseries into an equall ballance, judging of them by the heavy weight of my sufferings, whereas thou wouldest if thou knewest me throughly, judge so hardly of my case: Whence note, that they put the calamities of godly men into an unequal ballance, that judged them to have sinned so fouly, as they may seem by the greatnes hereof to have done, that we may beware of this rash judging, that we be not Judged. For these words, Doth the wilde Asse bray when he hath grass? or loweth the Oxe over his fodder? His meaning in thus saying, is, yee know that if an Asse brayeth or an Oxe loweth, they want somewhat, and are ready to spoke what it may be, to supply them herewith, but to me, although ye come in the name of friends, ye are not so loving, ye search not into the cause of my complaints; but presently hearing me cry out for anguish of spirit ye condemn me for a wicked man.

Note.

Vers. 5.

Vers. 6. Can that which is unsavoury, be eaten without salt? Or is there any taste in the white of an egg?

Vers. 7. The things which my Soule refused to touch, are now my sorrowfull meate. That is, if a man cannot eat stinking meat, as that is, which is not salted, or the white of an egg without it, in which for the freshnesse there is no taste; How do ye think, that I wanting inward consolation, how that I am thus outwardly pressed with misery should bear it, especially, yea instead of comforting me, upon discerning my case aright, laying more load upon me by your most uncharitable censures: But now it is my meat which I would not touch, that is, now ye feed me with such meat, such sorrow-causing fruit cometh from your mouth, as is most distastfull unto me, and hereby my trouble is yet more increased, for honey of which I have most need, yee giving me gall and poyson, which not only I, but all men so much abhorr from, that they will not touch it with their hands; and herein he goeth on in his similitude, from an Oxe; whom when his Master feedeth with good fodder, when he heareth him lowe, Eliphaz by his tart invective against him fed him with most distastefull and pernicious food. A warning to all men, when they see a good man in distresse, of whom by his works they can judge none otherwise, to take heed how they judge and censure him, for in so doing, they give him poyson, as it were for meat, breeding of dangerous distempers in him prejudiciall to the life of soule, although no such effect was hereby wrought in patient Job, yet such sin in an high degree against love.

Note.

Vers. 9. That it would please God to destroy me, that he would loose his hand and cut me off. Here Ferus layeth some impatience upon Job, in that after the manner of other men in dispaire, that God would now never be reconciled unto him again, or take off his judgments, he prayeth that he would not lingeringly destroy him, but soon dispatch him and rid him out of this mortall life, and so of all his miseries at once: And God left Job thus to speak, that we might know how little our strength is, when we are pressed with miseries and feel no comfort, and therefore not judge others, who seem to be more impatient then we think; that we, if we were in the like case, would be; For even holy Job now seeketh, as despairing to be cut off. Gregory better, Job prayeth thus to God, fearing least if he should be spared, and live still and injoy prosperity again, he should by the temptation hereof be brought into worse case for his soul, then now by all his afflictions he was: He doth therefore as a patient to the Chirurgion, having his soares lanched, but not all the corrupt matter yet come out, bidding him, cut me deeper, leave

Ferus.

Note.

Gregor.

no

no corruption behind, although goeth away withall: And that this is his meaning, the next words ſhew. Then ſhould I yet have comfort, I would harden my ſelf in ſorrow, let him not ſpare, for I have not concealed the words of the holy one. Gregory: Neither will I contradict the words of the holy. And becauſe he ſaith, Let him looſe his hand and cut me off. For hereby he intimateth, that he was ſtil held in life by Gods hand having faſt hold, as it were upon him, that he could not by all his ſufferings, be deprived of his bodily life, and by this hand he had been upheld in ſo proſperous an eſtate formerly, but now he deſireth that it might be looſed, and he might be let fal into the grave, rather then to be reſtored into the dangerous eſtate of proſperity any more: For what comfort is there to a man, that dyeth in deſpaire? Or is this the voice of one deſpairing, that ſaith, He concealed not Gods word &c? that is, Behaved not himſelf ſo, as if caſting Gods words behind his back, he made no uſe of them, to live and ſpeak according to the ſame; as the man, that had one Talent, and hid it in a napkin, made no uſe of it: For which it was both taken from him, and he was caſt into utter darkneſs; For the rendring of the words by Contradicted, I ſee no reaſon for that כחד ſignifying nothing but to conceal, or to hide, yet there is the ſame ſenſe, becauſe to heare Gods words, and to do contrary, is to contradict them; for there is a denying of God and his word in our deeds, although in our ſpeeches we confeſs and deny him not. But Job meaneth not, that he did not ſpeak or do, as if no ſuch words had come to his eares only, but that he brought them forth for the inſtruction and edification of others; as Eliphaz before teſtified of him, and it appeareth both in the firſt and ſecond chapters: for what were the words which he there in his greateſt ſufferings brought forth? but the words of the moſt holy God to his great praiſe, when he ſmarted ſore. Is my ſtrength as the ſtrength of ſtones, or my fleſh as braſs? Having ſpoken of his ſtrength, V. 11. What is my ſtrength that I ſhould hope? Now he compareth it with that of ſtones and of braſs, upon which if heavy burthens be laid, they can beare them; but mans weakneſs is ſuch, that he being loaden with a load, like the ſands of the Sea ſhoare, as he ſaid before, that he cannot, but muſt be cruſhed hereby in peices and dye: and therefore having ſuch load laid upon him, what hope could he have of living any longer here? and therefore he deſireth, that he may not be ſpared, but be ſoon diſpatched out of this life, but for the reaſon before ſpoken of: Here Gregory giveth no other ſenſe, but this allegorical. My ſtrength is not as the ſtrength of thoſe men, that be ſtupid as ſtones feeling nothing; or of thoſe that under afflictions are ſonorous as braſs, the one ſort not being brought by any ſufferings to ſpeak by confeſſing their ſinnes, but their hearts are ſo hardened, that they lye and ſay nothing this way, howſoever they hardly cry out of their pain; others ſound out loud cries unto God for mercy and pardon, and profeſs themſelves very ſorrowful for their ſinnes, and make ſerious promiſes of amending their lives; but being delivered, they appeare to have been but as ſounding braſs: Of which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, ſaying, I were as a ſounding braſs or a tinkling Cymball. As the Prophet doth of the other, where he ſaith. I will take away their heart of ſtone and give them a heart of fleſh. And this ſenſe he approveth by the words following. Is not my helpe in me, is wiſdome driven quite from me? Vulg. My help is not me. Lo here ſaith Gregory, he ſpake not before that he was not hard harted, as ſome others who be like ſtones, or a man that made a ſound of words only, as a man of braſs; as aſcribing any thing to himſelf, for this had been pride and vainglory, and ſo enough to make him to be left of God and ſo to have his grace turned into ſin; but he acknowledgeth that he was therein holpen by God, and had it not of himſelf, as we muſt all acknowledge, if we ſee any difference betwixt our ſelves and others, we muſt think upon that of the Apoſtle. Who made thee to differ? And of the Pſalmiſt ſaying. Our help cometh from the

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 12.

Gregory. Note.

1 Cor. 13
Jer. 31

Verſ. 13.

2 Cor. 4. 7.

the Lord. And this reading is favoured by the Hebrew, which is word for word. And if no help in me, which may be thus ſupplyed, and if it be thus as I have ſaid, V. 12. there is no help in me, whereby I am made not to be ſuch, then the help whereby cometh from God, and ſo the wiſdome required in thoſe that ſhall be ſaved, is not gone away from me: But the words being alſo rendred, Help is not in me, agree well to the literal expoſition firſt made, if I be weak, and have not ſo great ſtrength, I confeſs, that I have no help in my ſelf to ſtand under this heavy weight, neither am I wiſe enough to know how to ſtand, being ſhaken with ſo terrible temptations, yet the allegory of Gregory is of good uſe for inſtruction, which made me not to paſs it over in ſilence.

Verſ. 14. To him that is afflicted pitty ſhould be ſhewed from his friend, but he forſaketh the feare of the Almighty. Now Job cometh to complain of Eliphaz, who did not by him like a friend and therfore not as one that feared almighty God, for ſuch are not ready to cenſure their Brethren in miſery as wicked; in whom they ſaw no ſuch thing before, but all ſignes of piety, as could not but be ſeen in Job; for in this caſe it is the part of a true friend, and one that feareth God, to judge the beſt, that ſuch a man is not made a ſpectacle

Note. of miſery, becauſe he is a greater ſinner, but either to try his patience, or that others might ſee in him, the uncertainty of worldly things, even in the beſt, when they abound with them, and therefore make no other account of them whether they be riches, or health, or comelyneſs; and not to think themſelves happy in having theſe, or glory in them, but account this only

Jer. 9. 23. Matth 19. their happineſs, that they know God to ſerve and obey him, becauſe he hath far greater riches in ſtore for thoſe, that do ſo, according to that Come and follow me and thou ſhalt have riches in Heaven. He that doth otherwiſe feareth not God, and his wrath, that ſhall be upon him, when he ſhall judge all thoſe, that uncharitably judge others. Gregory ſaith, That

Gregory. he is the friend here ſpoken of who feareth not God, that acknowledgeth not any benefit, to be an afflicted one, and therefore deſpiſeth the afflicted, and he calleth the ſame ſort of men, Brethren like brookes that paſs away. V. 15. Becauſe brookes are made of waters, running down hils into valeys, where the heat of the Sun coming, they are ſoon dryed up; ſo they that Verſ. 15. deſpiſe the afflicted, are but falſe Brethren; who for a time are as a brook running ful by proſperity, but by the heat of Gods judgments this their proſperity is made to vaniſh all away, and they are in miſery for ever.

Which are blackiſh by reaſon of the Ice, &c. Vulg. They that feare the Verſ. 16. hoare froſt, the ſnow ſhall fall upon them, Heb. The obſcured from the froſt or ice, upon them the ſnow ſhall fall. The meaning being, that hide themſelves for feare of ſufferings upon earth, upon them judgments ſhall come from above, that ſhall be worſe for them by far, becauſe the froaſt is upon the earth by the coldneſs of the aire here below, and ſnow falleth from above, and herein he goeth on in the allegory of Brookes, that run away; they that are ſuch, with whom all friendſhip is gone, when they ſee their Brethren in miſery, they ſeeking as it were through a worldly feare to obſcure themſelves, judging ſuch ſufferings to be arguments of Gods wrath againſt the wicked, they do but hide themſelves from leſſer evils, and the greater ſhall fal upon them, they feare ſufferings by men below; but judgments ſhall come upon them from God above, and this is the ſame in effect with that, which followeth V. 17. 18. Of their diſſolving when they wax hot, and vaniſhing out of their place, whereby it is meant, that as the ſnow aforeſaid, theſe men that are ſo wedded to worldly things by the foreſaid heat of Gods wrath, ſhall utterly periſh.

Verſ. 19. The troopes of Tema looked, the companies of Sheba waited for them. Vulg. Conſider the paths of Teman, the journies of Saba and waite a little. Which is by Gregory expounded by the ſouth, as Teman ſignifieth, and a net as Saba thus; conſider the waies of them that are in proſperity, upon whom none none but the warm and favourable South-wind bloweth: and if yee expect a while, ye shall find them intangled and taken in a net, that is, insnared by their wicked deeds, which by their prosperous going on, they have been made bold to commit. And what shall be the issue hereof? verily nothing but confusion and shame in the end, as vers. 20. Ferus expoundeth the whole passage thus: Ye (O my friends haply feare, that if ye should shew your selves friendly to me, it would prove some cost unto you to relieve me in my want, and therefore to award the detriment that thus might come unto you, ye take occasion from my sufferings to censure me as a most wicked man, and unworthy to have any thing done for me; but know, that in being moved by this fear, ye do but put your selves upon a greater danger, viz. of Gods judgments from above, against which no unmercifull person shall be able to stand, Who seeth his brother in want, and relieveth him not. Or according to another rendring more agreeable to the Hebrew, whereby they are compared to the ice covered with snow, such men are as ice covered with snow, for the present hard and firm, so that a man may go upon it; but the heat of the Sun coming, all this firmnesse goeth away and cometh to nothing: so the unmercifull rich man seemeth to have a firm and durable estate, to which he may trust, but his wealth melteth, and then he that trusted to it, sinketh, and is drowned. For the next words, vers. 19. he saith, according to the Heb. it is, They looked on the troops of Tema, and the comings out of Seba, that is, the doings of the Caldeans and Sabeans against Job, in taking away his Cattell, and slaying his servants, as a judgment of God coming upon me for my wickednesse, thinking them rather to be justified then me; but this he sheweth, Vers. 20. should be to their confusion. So they that are lead by the present condition wherein they see the wicked and the righteous, these prosperous and merry, them crying and lamenting, judg them therefore worst, and these better, shall in the end go to confusion, as the Egyptians in Pharaoh's Army, pursuing the Israelites, crying and sorrowing, were drowned in the red Sea, and they passed through upon dry land: And the old world of wicked unbelievers looking upon their own prosperity, when Noah entered into the Ark, and at his foolish fearfulnes in their judgment, condemned him as ridiculous and contemptible, and those that believing God, went in with him, but these were saved, and they all drowned. If the N. Tr. be followed, The troops of Tema looked, I know not how a good sense may be given of these words, but being rendred, They looked, meaning these his censorious friends the sense given is very good; for the Caldeans, that before were said to make out 3. Bands, dwelt south, as Tema signifieth.

Ferus.

Note.

Chap. 1. 17.

For now yee are nothing, yee see my casting down, and are afraid. Heb. Now ye are not. These words co-hering so with the former, as that they cannot well be expounded apart, give me occasion to look back again to them, ver. 19. 20. which some expound, as if the allegory from a brook begun, vers. 15. were still proceeded in, and not any new matter were laid to their charge, as if they justified the Caldees, and Sabeans, and condemned him, but would have them to consider how it was with those peoples travelling upon the way, when they came at places where brooks used to run, hoping to find water, they found none, the sandy drynesse of the ground being such, that all the rain that fell was seen drunk up and consumed, this they seeing, were confounded. And likewise yee, when I hoped that upon your coming to me, being my friends, that I should have comfort from you, in stead whereof yee were ashamed to own me any more as a friend, for which in this Vers. 21. he addeth, Now yee are not. That is, the men which I expected ye would be unto me; but seeing me thus impoverish'd, ye feared that your coming might turn to some prejudice unto you, I taking this opportunity to ask something for the supply of my wants; to prevent which, ye have behaved your selves so strangely towards me in your detracting and reproachfull words against me. And this sense is confirmed vers. 22. Did I say bring unto me, or give a reward of your substance,

Vers. 21.

Vatabl.
Isidor.
Clarini.

Vers. 22.

ſubſtance, or deliver me from the enemies hand, or redeem me from the hand of the mighty. He neither in this his great poverty begged for ſuſtenance, or that they would take upon them the charge of ſetting forth men to help him to his goods taken away again.

Verſ. 24. Teach me, and I will hold my peace, &c. That is, whereas yee object wickedneſſe to me, be plain with me, and tell me, if ye know any evil by me in word or deed, tell me what it is, help my ignorance herein, who know nothing by my ſelf for which yee ſpeak ſo bitterly againſt me.

Verſ. 25. How forcible are right words, but what doth your arguing reprove? Yee imagine to reprove words, the ſpeeches of one that is deſperate, which are as winde. Vulg. Why have yee detracted from the words of truth, when as there is none of you that can reprove me? And the word מרץ ſignifieth either to ſtrengthen, or to ſpeak evill, and the next words are, Heb. Which of you in reproving, can reprove me? And thus the meaning is plain, inſtead of making me by your ſpeeches to ſee any ſin, for which the Lord ſhould be ſo ſevere againſt me, yee have done nothing but corrupted the truth, and the words by me ſpoken according to the ſame: If it be otherwiſe, ſpeak any of you, and prove that I have not ſpoken rightly. Verſ. 26. Yee frame ſpeeches onely to reprove, and bring forth words againſt the wind. Heb. And againſt the wind words of deſpair: For it is, יאש coming of יאש to deſpair. Job thereforefore meaneth not, that he had ſpoken deſperately, but reproveth the deſperate ſpeaking of Elihu, deviſing words againſt that which he had ſaid to no purpoſe in truth, and therefore he herein reproveth him, and vilifyeth his ſayings, as if they were but diſputings againſt the wind, a beating of the empty aire.

Verſ. 26.

Verſ. 27. Yee over-whelm the fatherleſſe, and digg a pit for your friend. He ſetteth forth himſelf by the name of the fatherleſſe, becauſe he was now as the fatherleſſe, without any to protect him; and they combine together ſo to lade him with calumnies, as that they did hereby, as it were, undermine him, that he might fall into deſpair, and periſh. Verſ. 28, 29, 30. He exhorteth them to be more conſiderate in their ſpeeches, and to lay nothing to his charge, but what they were able to make good, promiſing, that he for his part would ſpeak no lye, but the truth in all things, and he diſſwadeth them from going on in the way of contention, which hindereth from ſeeing into the truth.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. IS there not an appointed time to man upon earth, are not his dayes as the dayes of an hireling?

Having by the words before going prepared his friends to attend patiently, and to judg righteouſly of his words, now he approveth that which he had ſaid before, Chap. 3. touching his deſire to dye, and not to have his miſerable life ſtill prolonged. And to this he compareth himſelfe, and man, leading his life in miſery here, to an hireling, whoſe labour is great and ſoar, and there he deſireth the coming on of the night, as alſo doth every poor ſervant, that he may reſt his weary body, and the hireling have his wages paid him. So it muſt not be thought unreaſonable and wicked for a man living in miſery, to come to the night of death, being to ſuch, if he feareth God, as Iob did, far more comfortable then life, for the happy remuneration which he ſhall then have in the kingdom of heaven, although not out of merit but mercy, verſ. 3. In way of declaring his own miſeries, he ſaith, I am made to poſſeſſe moneths of vanity, and weariſome nights are appointed unto me. As if he had ſaid, I am in worſe caſe then the pooreſt hireling; for when he after the toyle and pains of the day, goeth to reſt at night, he ſleepeth quietly, but my nights are no better to me then my dayes, they are weariſome and tiring alſo.

Verſ. 3.

Verſ. 5. My fleſh is cloathed with worms and clods of duſt, my skin broken and become loathſome: Which he ſpeaketh for the filthy and ſore diſeaſe that was upon him:

him: For the words of verſ. 1. Is there not an appointed time to man? The Vulg. hath it, The life of man is a warfare upon earth. Heb. Is there not a warfare to man? or an appointed time? For צבא ſignifieth both, but it is moſt commonly expounded by warfare, and take it to be a deſcription of mans life in generall, which is ſet forth by three compariſons.

1. To a Souldier, who is in continuall danger.

2. To an Hireling, that laboureth and toyleth in all weathers. 3. To a ſervant, a ſlave, whoſe life is moſt miſerable of all others, and therfore as good Souldiers let us fight manfully againſt all our ſpirituall enemies, the World, the Fleſh, & the Devil, and let us labour faithfully in our places and callings, whilſt life and ſtrength laſteth, and not ſtand idle; and let us with all diligence ſerve the Lord, becauſe although ſervants; by ſo doing we are made his free-men: and as valiant Souldiers, when we have overcome, we ſhall be crowned, and as faithfull labourers in Gods vineyard, at the end of the day of this life we ſhall have our hire, as thoſe labourers in the Vineyard, and as good ſervants be bidden to enter into our Maſters joy, and in the midſt of the greateſt heat of al adverſities, we patiently bearing the burthens laid upon us ſhall be under the ſhadow of the Almighty, and have refreshing hereby. Thus for the generall; but howſoever this be true touching all men, yet more in Job, who is to be thought more particularly thus to lament his owne moſt afflicted condition: for he, as a Souldier, did bear the piercing of Gods arrows, as he ſpake before, and as an hireling or ſervant, had a greater weight laid upon him then he was able to bear, a weight heavier then the ſands of the Sea ſhore. And to him in particular agree the complaints following, verſ. 3, 4, 5. And whereas he ſpeaks of man in the third perſon, this is not unuſuall in holy Scripture, when one ſpeaketh of himſelf, as 2 Cor. 12. And Iob beginneth his Book in like manner, Chap. 1. As for verſ. 3, 4, 5. Ferus applyeth them alſo to man in generall, thus: He paſſeth moneths in vanity, becauſe oft times he laboureth, and his labour taketh not effect: And he ſaith at night, when will it be morning, becauſe he is uncertain, when he goeth to bed, whether he ſhall live to the morning, or in the morning, whether he ſhall live till night, upon ſuch uncertainties he goeth. And well may every man ſay, that he is cloathed with duſt and worms, &c. For ſo ſhall it be with him, when death cometh, if he eſcapeth coming into the like condition before. And whereas verſ. 6. it is ſaid, My dayes are ſwifter then a Weavers ſhuttle, my life is ſpent without hope. This was true, as he conceived in him, there was no hope, but that he muſt dye of this grievous diſeaſe, and that ſoone; and it is true of every mortall man, he is but of short continuance in this life, but his glaſſe runneth out apace every day. Verſ. 7. Having made his apology in reſpect of that, which he was judged to have ſpoken rashly, Chap. 3. Now he maketh his complaint and prayer to God, from whom hee acknowledged all his miſery to come.

O remember that my life is wind: mine eye ſhall no more ſee good. From hence to the 11. verſ. he in effect prayeth to God for mercy to be shewed unto him, to bring him again out of the miſery wherein he was, moving for this inconſideration, that if he were once gone out of this world, the time would be too late to do any thing for him in this world any more, ſith, that after death he ſhould be but like a cloud diſſolved, which now is nothing, and as the wind paſt and gone; for ſo it is with him that is departed hence, he ſhall here be ſeen no more: As alſo David ſaith, Pſ. 39. That we may not think it ſtrange, that ſo righteous a man as Iob ſhould ſpeak thus deſpairingly, as if he thought that all happineſſe was at an end, when his mortall life was ended. Gregory ſpeaketh excellently upon thoſe words, Verſ. 6. My dayes are ſpent without hope. This is indeed the caſe of wicked carnall men, when this life is gone, all is gone from them; becauſe although they heare of the happineſſe of the life to come, yet they believe it not, and ſo it is as nothing to them: but Iob and other faithfull perſons, who have pleaded ſo much to have their lives

Note.

Rev. 2. Chap. 3. Math. 20.

Pſalm 91.

Verſ. 6.

Verſ. 7.

Gregory.

lives ſpared upon the ſame grounds, as it may ſeem by their words, ſpoke in a far divers ſenſe, for their minds being ever upon the life to come, in regard of which they ſet light by this life, and the things hereof, ſay they ſhal dye without hope of any happineſs here to be attained, where even in proſperity they have ſeen and counted all worldly things vain and tranſitory, and overcoming have trodden them under their feet. And to the ſame effect are the next words, wherein he turneth himſelf to God, ſaying, Remember that my life is as a wind, &c. I ſo account it, and therefore ſet not my heart upon it, as worldlings do, who imagine it to be a ſtable thing, and are affected to it accordingly, but the Elect ſee it, and to be as it is, as a wind that paſſeth away, and returneth no where, and to the ſame effect he ſpeaketh on, V. 8. 9. 10. And hereupon he concludeth, ſaying, Verſ. 11. Therefore I will not refrain my mouth, but I will ſpeak in the bitterneſs of my ſpirit. That is, with ſorrow and anguiſh of heart I will confeſs my ſinnes; Wicked Reprobates alſo, ſometimes confeſſe their Sinnes, but it is with godly Sorrow for them, and ſo they are he that openeth his wound, but layeth on no plaiſter, and by this means the wounds made by ſin are more putrified and grow more dangerous; but he that confeſſeth, and lamenteth them in a godly manner, openeth them, and applyeth a medicine to them to heal them: And I ſay, In a godly manner, in the phraſe of the Apoſtle, becauſe Ahab and Judas were ſorrowful, but it was in regard of the puniſhment, not of the ſinns committed by them, they that have anguiſh and vexation for their ſinns ſhal have comfort, as our Lord ſaith, Bleſſed are they that mourne, for they ſhall be comforted.

2 Cor. 7. 10.

Matth. 5

Verſ. 12. Am I a ſea, or a Whale that thou ſetteſt a watch over mee? Vulg. That thou campaſſeſt me with a priſon: Whereby Gregory underſtandeth, that which keepeth a man ſtraite, that he cannot ſo freely fight againſt all his ſinnes, as he would, or be inlarged more in virtue, to run the race of Gods Commandments, ſo David prayeth alſo, Bring my Soul out of priſon to confeſſe to thy name. And to a ſea are the wicked compared, ſuch as Job was not, becauſe fleſhly and rebellious notions are continually riſing in their carnall minds; To a whale the Devill, who maketh his habitation in them, making them more dangerouſly to ariſe to overturn the ſhip of the Church, and drown it amidſt the waves thereof: But both they and he are ſtreightned as it were by impriſoning, ſo that they cannot do againſt the faithful always as they would, which oft times appeareth, when God by his judgments repreſſeth them, ſo that of what ſtrength ſoever they be, and what preparations ſoever they make, they cannot prevaile, but are confounded in their enterpriſes; as Pharaoh purſuing the Children of Iſrael into the red ſea was drowned, and Sanacherib coming againſt Hezekiah, was miraculouſly ſmitten in his hoaſt, and periſhed, a great comfort to the people of God in all ſtraits by their enemies coming to fight againſt them, remember we in this caſe that we have a God that is able to reſtrain the moſt potent Whale, the powerfull Devills, and the ſea of the wicked, their greate't multitudes from overflowing, to drown and deſtroy his Servants, that we may put our truſt in him. Now Job in ſpeaking thus of himſelf, meaneth; that ſeeing that he was not as a ſea or whale, having motions riſing in his mind, putting him on to do miſcheife, but his motions were good and godly, to proceed further in vertue; The Lord ſhould not by reſtraining him from greater increaſes herein any way diſcourage or hinder him by dealing hardly by him: That the wicked are as a ſea, as hath been ſaid, See Iſaiah 57. ult. and the Leviathan or whale, both in this book and elſewhere ſpoken of, ſet for the Devil, and the word משמר ſignifieth priſon as well as cuſtody, or a watch to keep a man.

Pſal. 142.

Note.

Verſs 13. Verſ. 14. Gregory. When I ſay my bed ſhal comfort me, my couch ſhal eaſe my complaint. Then thou ſcareſt me with dreames, &c. What is meant here by bed or couch, ſayth Gregory, but a mans receding from things outwardly ſuffered or injoyed into his own heart and inward meditations. For ſo in the ſong of Solomon it is ſayd, I ſought him in my bed whom my Soul loveth: Job then meaneth, that being preſſed with miſery as he was, he retyred to inward meditations, touching God and himſelf, and doing ſo, when he thought to find comfort, he perceived the ſeverity of God to be ſo great againſt ſinn, and that he will come at the laſt day in ſuch a terrible manner to puniſh it, that this proved to him as fearfull dreams and viſions in the night, ſo that in ſtead of being comforted he was deterred, as men commonly are by fearfull dreams and apparitions, becauſe the Judg then will proceed moſt ſtrictly againſt ſin, and puniſh it moſt ſeverely, without reſpect of perſons; for when a godly man thinketh with himſelf of his ſins, they all come to his mind, that ever he hath done, and then the divill is at hand to aggravat them againſt him, and hereby he is greatly terified. For as other be dreames, that come from God, as the dreams of Pharoah his cheif Butler and Baker, and of Pharoah, which Joſeph interpreted, ſo there be deluſory dreams, that come from the Devill, for which it is forbidden to regard, as Divinations, ſo dreams, and dreams are ſayd to make many to err. Some dreams alſo come of much buſineſs, and ſome of thought and care taking about things to come. As Daniel ſaith of Nebuchadnezzar, that when the thoughts of his head troubled him, he ſaw an image, &c. And by deluſory dreams, it was that Job was terrified, which come from the Devil, God permitting it; and therefore he ſaith, Thou ſcareſt me with dreames, when he ſpeaketh to the Lord: For the literall ſenſe it is plain, he meaneth that he took no reſt night or day, as he partly touched before, Verſ. 4. and his terrours by night were in reſpect of the arrows of God ſpoken of, Chap. 6. that pierced him within. For the allegoricall ſenſe given by Gregory it is very good, and ſheweth the fears that come by ſin for which when a man ſuffereth outwardly, and thinketh to have comfort inwardly from God againſt them, ſhall be more increaſed, ſo that the ſinner if he well conſidereth it, can have no reſt or comfort in his affliction outwardly or inwardly, and therefore is in a moſt miſerable condition; For if Job a moſt holy man found rerrour within, where he thought to have had reſt, what ſhall groſs ſinners that are ſpots and blots amongſt Chriſtians doe.

Solomon

Cant. 3. 1.

Levit. 19. Eccleſiaſtic. 34. Eccleſ. 5. Dan. 2.

Note.

So that my ſoul chooſeth ſtrangling, and death rather then life. Verſ. 15.

The vulg. Suſpenſion, or hanging for ſtrangling, whereupon Gregory, the ſoul is ſuſpended when it is elevated or lifted up above theſe worldly things, And my bones chooſe death, ſo the vulg. for theſe words; And death rather then life; and that rightly, for the word is, מעצמותי ſignifieth my bones, and hereby ſtrength of the body or fleſh is meant, the mortification whereof having the mind lifted up to things above, he here intimateth that he deſired, and indeed it is, for by being heavenly minded, the fleſh or members are brought to have the leſſer ſtrength, yea to ſuch weakneſs as if they were dead; a good allegory, but the literall meaning is, that being in this miſery within and without, he preferred the taking away of his breath by the prevailing of his Boyles, and conſequently death before the ſavity of his Body, and ſtrengthning of it again, by having of his Diſeaſe healed.

Note.

I loath it; I would not live alwaies, let me alone, for my dayes are vanity. Verſ. 16.

What is man that thou ſhouldſt magnify him, &c. Man being elevated in his mind, as was before ſayd, although he hath temporall goods, yet he vilifieth them in comparison of heavenly things, not deſiring to live in pleaſure by them, or to have his life prolonged, that he might injoy them more time, for he looks upon the days of this life, as vanity and vexation of ſpirit, for which he deſireth God to let him alone, as the vulg. hath it, not to ſpare him in reſpect of life and proſperity, and then V. 7. he argueth to this purpoſe. Verſ. 17.

What is man that thou ſhouldſt magnifie him? that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine Verſ. 18.

heart upon him, and viſit him every morning, and try him every moment? That man being ſo vain a thing and this his life, why is he ſo ſet up, as thy favourite in reſpect of worldly things, having wealth, honour, & dignity here: Yea thou viſiteſt him every morning: What is the morning but the light, which riſeth after the dark night, ſo God viſiteth his elect every morning, when he inlightneth them by his Grace, who were before in the darkneſs of unrighteouſneſs and ſin, but now by his grace are brought into the light of Righteouſneſs, faith, and holineſs: But becauſe God by coming to us by his grace promotes virtue in us, and by receding ſuffereth us to be ſhaken by temptation, and therefore after viſiting every morning ſpoken of, he ſaith, Thou tryeſt him every moment; For if we were not after grace entring into our hearts, ſhaken by temptations, we would be ready to think that we had this of our ſelves, and not of the gift of God, and ſo to be proud, but by being thus ſhaken we are humbled, as Paul ſaith of himſelf, 2 Cor. 12. For in temptation finding our own weakneſs, we ſee what need we have of Gods help, and ſo flee to him in prayer.

Deus accedendo promovet virtutes nobis recedendo concuti pertentationem permittit.

Verſ. 19. How long wilt thou not depart from me? nor let mee alone till I ſwallow my ſpittle? Here letting paſſe that of Gregory as over curious about his ſpittle. I, with others, take the meaning to be, as if he had ſayd, ſpare me from my pains, which make me even like unto one that is ready to dy, who cannot get his ſpittle either to go down or to come up, wherein he deſireth ſome liberty again; to which effect alſo David ſpeaketh, ſaying, O ſpare me that I may recover ſtrength. And of Gods ſetting his heart upon man, and magnifying him V. 8. Uſing the ſame interrogation.

Pſ. 39. 13.

Verſ. 20. I have ſinned, What ſhall I do to thee, O thou preſerver of men? why haſt thou ſet me as a mark unto thee, ſo that I am a burthen to my ſelf. Now Job to ſhew that he did not in all his ſayings before juſtify himſelf, confeſſeth, I have ſinned; The word rendred Preſerver is נוצר by vulg. rendred Keeper, as it ſignifieth properly ſuch a keeping, as of a watchman ſtanding upon a Tower to look unto, and to obſerve all things hoſtily attempted, or done, that there may be an oppoſition made there againſt in due time, and to this do the next words moſt aptly agree: Why haſt thou ſet me as a mark; or as the vul. hath it, an Adverſary: Hebr. מפגע one comming againſt, that is, an Enemy. The meaning is, I acknowledg my ſelf to be a ſinner, and t herefore worthy of the judgments which have befallen me; but what wouldſt thou have me to do, that haſt and doſt ſo diligently look at the ſinns of men, that I have not done, for I have patiently born thy judgments, juſtified thy proceedings againſt me in ſo great ſeverity, given thee praiſe in the midſt of all my greivous ſufferings, and my heart hath alwais been to ſerve thee in truth, and to flee all ſinn, & now I confeſs my ſelf yet to be a ſinner, what wouldſt thou have me Lord to do more? or what can I do more to procure thy favour again towards me even as a poor debtor, that not being able to ſatisfy his Creditor, but humbleth himſelf unto him, & is ready to do what in him lyeth to the uttermoſt, in way of ſatisfying him, as that Debtor, Matt. 18. So Job pleadeth before the Lord, as the maſter, who is kind to his ſervant indebted; that although in 10000. Talents is to him, ſo he would be pleaſed to ſhew honour to him, and not to deal by him as an enemy, perſiſting ſtill by his Judgments to make out againſt him, for if he ſhould ſo do, he had no joy in living any longer here, but his life was a great and importable burthen to him, that made him to complain inſuch bitterneſſe as before. The Talmudiſts make bold here to change the ſentence thus. I am a burthen to thee; And the Sept. Tr. likewiſe, which Aug. following ſayth, why haſt thou ſet me againſt thee, that I ſhould againſt thee and ſo be a burthen to thee, greiving thee ſo with my ſpeeches, ſpeak that thou canſt not bear them, but the word is עלי to me.

Auguſtine.

Verſ. 21. Why doſt not thou pardon my tranſgreſſion, and take away mine iniquity? For now I ſhall ſleep in the duſt, thou ſhalt ſeek me in the morning, but I ſhall not be Having confeſſed his ſinns, he now craveth pardon, and uſeth this as an argument argument to move the Lord hereunto, and that ſpeedily removing his greivous ſuffrings from him, whereby he was now ready to ſink and dye, leaſt if he did not, it would be too late; For if death once cometh, although it be ſet forth by ſleep, yet herein it is not like unto naturall ſleep, which although it be all night, yet a man waketh in the morning, and ſo from morning to morning again, but he being once dead, waketh ſo no more to live in this world, and therefore if the Lord will ſave him alive, he muſt do it without delay, before that death ſtriketh him, if not, but he be once departed, he is not to be found here any more, how diligently ſoever ſought for; he meaneth not, that he ſhal never be found, or come forth from the duſt again, for at the laſt day he ſhall, and ſo Job beleeved, for he ſayth, I know that my Redeemer liveth, &c. To conclude, in that he ſpeaketh of God as a watchman, diligently obſerving our ſinns, to come againſt us, therefore note. Firſt, That we are no where hid from his ſight, as is alſo taught, Pſal. 139. That we may always walk as in his preſence. Secondly, That we ought to flee ſin, as making God our enemy, and to count us his enemies. Thirdly, Not only groſſer but even leſſer ſinns in the beſt livers are marked by God, and therefore we have all need to confeſs and crave pardon of our ſinns, as being otherwiſe liable to death. Fourthly, That we may come into favour and be pardoned, we muſt do as Job did, ſuffer affliction with patience, juſtifie God in all our ſuffrings, and even therefore bleſs his holy name, &c. as it is ſayd before.

Job 19. 25.

Note.

CHAP. VIII.

How long wilt thou ſpeak theſe things? and how long ſhall thy words be as a ſtrong winde? Now Bildad the ſecond of the three friends of Job, that came to viſit him, ſpeaketh, being according to his name a wicked kinſman, for בל from whence cometh בלעל is wicked, an דוד is an uncle. He begineth with accuſing Job for his uſing ſo many words, as he did in the two Chapters before going, to juſtify himſelf, as if he thought, that by his ſpeech he were able, like a bluſtring ſtrong wind, to bear down all others, that ſhould ſpeak againſt him,

Verſ. 2.

Doth God pervert judgment? and doth the Almighty pervert juſtice? if thy Children have ſinned againſt him, &c,

Verſ. 3.

He conſenteth with Eliphaz, who ſpake firſt, in laying to Jobs charge and to his childrens, ſome great ſin although to other men unknown, for which they being now cut off, he complained as if he were wronged, and for other plagues of God upon him; That which Bildad ſaith here is true; God will not pervert Judgment or juſtice, but conſtantly execute both, and although Job could not be found fault withall for his muttering out any thing againſt Gods juſt proceedings, yet many there are that may and ought to be reproved therefore, viz. All wicked men who although they be worthily plagued for their foul ſinns, yet being ſmitten, murmur againſt God and cry out of his ſeverity: For Job is approved by God himſelf to have been a moſt juſt man, and therefore not one now judged for his ſinns but only tryed in his patience, ſo that whatſoever he ſpake it is juſtifiable, as coming from one full of grace and virtue, but not in others who are wicked: Bildad then and his fellows erred in ſpeaking thus to Job, all the things ſpoken by them are moſt true, and are written for our inſtruction. Touching Jobs children ſpoken of, Verſ. 4. He mentioneth their example to them, that by it he might be ſtirred up to repent, and that ſpeedily, which is a moſt pious admonition to wicked men indeed, but miſapplyed to Job; For by the example of the Galileans ſlain in ſacrificing and of the men upon whom the Tower of Siloe fell, Chriſt, alſo

Note.

Verſ. 4.

Note.

Luke 13.

alſo admoniſheth the Jewes, to repent ſpeedily, threatning that otherwiſe they ſhould all likewiſe perish: Jobs Children were eating and drinking, and thought little of dying when they did, yet by one blow of the houſe falling they were all ſlain; ſo it may be with others, and therefore to delay repentance is dangerous: And as for Job, he ſeemeth further to argue thus, they being taken away ſuddenly; thou haſt been ſpared, and thy life heitherto ſaved, to what end is this: But that thou mighteſt be better prepared before thy death, and ſo much more every other man ought to make this uſe of his life prolonged, when others are cut off ſuddenly, to fal preſently to repenting and praying to God, for which he ſaith, (Betimes) thou wouldeſt ſeek to God betimes. And then ſhewing, what the life of the penitent now henceforth is, he addeth, If thou wert pure and upright, he would awake for thee. For hereby it is ſhewed, that penitent perſons live purely; after that they turn by true repentance, how ſoever they have formerly lived: And ſuch as do ſo if they be in miſery, as they have betimes turne unto God, ſo he will ſoon turn their miſerie into proſperity again; which is ſet forth in his ſaying: Surely he would now awake for thee, and make the habitation of the righteous proſperous. As thy habitation, whilſt thou continueſt in thy ſin, was miſerable; ſo being turned into righteouſneſſe, it ſhall be proſperous: Thou being bleſſed, both in thy houſe and in all that thou haſt: Although thy beginning were ſmal, yet thy latter end ſhall greatly increaſe, Wherein he ſpeaketh as it were, propheticall, touching Jobs future great proſperity, for ſo it is ſhewed to have fallen out to him, at the end of this book. As was noted before upon the ſpeech of Eliphaz, the ſpirit guiding their tongues to ſpeak thus truely, as afterwards the tongue of Caiaphas, to ſpeak of Chriſts death.

Note.

Verſ. 6.

Note.

Verſ. 7.

Inquire I pray thee of former ages, &c. here and V. 9.10. Bildad appealeth to the experience of Gods doings in moſt ancient times, for if this be looked unto, we ſhall finde that God, with whom there is never any variableneſs or ſhadow of change, alwaies bleſſed and ſhewed mercy to ſuch, as ſought unto him, being pure and righteous, and therefore it is certainly to be hoped, that towards all penitent perſons, he will do ſo ſtill. Ferus upon theſe and the words before going, ſaith very well; Bildad reaſoneth from worldly proſperity, to purity and righteouſneſs of life, and contrarywiſe from adverſity to wickedneſs and ſinfulneſs, as if there were no true godly man that is in miſery here, or wicked man in proſperity, and of this he ſeekes to bring proofe from the experience of all moſt ancient times: As if he had ſaid, beleive it Iob, no righteous man ever ſuffered, as thou doſt; and if thou wilt not beleive it for our ſayings, yet beleive it for the teſtimony of all Antiquity, wherein he well aſcribeth authority to them ancient, for God commandeth to honour the ancients, and provoketh his people oftentimes to attend to the doings of their fathers, and the experience that they had of Gods goodneſs towards them, that is, ſuch of them as feared him, as Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, Noah and Enoch. He doth not yet hereby ſo commend the authority of ancienteſt or oldeſt of men unto us, as if their ſayings were authenticall alwaies, for ſome old men are not ſo wiſe, as even children, witneſs the Preacher, who ſayth, A poor wiſe child is better then a foolliſh old King. But where antiquity and wiſdome concur, ſuch are to be preferred before child-hood, or men of few years, although wiſe alſo: But in appealing to the ancienteſt, he meaneth not ſo much thoſe, that were of times more antient then our ſelves, although many hundreds of years, but the firſt of the Church of God, that were in the world: For Quod primum verum. And the Roman Catholickes of theſe times glory much in the Church of Rome, that was when Saint Peter ſate Biſhop there; upon this bearing themſelves, as the only Catholick Church, and they alledge, as a reaſon of the authority of their Church, the antiquity of it, pretending it to be as ancient as Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles; and the

Verſ. 8.

Jam. 1. 17.

Ferus.

Eccleſ. 4. 13.

Note.

the very ſame that then it was, but when they come to prove it, they go no higher then to about a thouſand years agoe, the teachers of which antiquity are not of ſufficient authority to confirm any thing, but only of tohſe that were firſt, ſent out to preach the Goſpel: For Bildads reaſoning from the proſperity of the godly, and contrariwiſe, to righteouſneſſe or wickedneſſe, it is a deceitful reaſoning: For many times the wicked are in proſperity here, and the righteous in adverſity; and adverſity is good for them, and continual proſperity evil: But whereas he ſaith upon theſe words, If thou wouldſt ſeek God betimes, and he would awake for thee, he noteth, That a man whilſt he liveth in ſin is a ſleep; and then he muſt not expect, but that God ſhould be aſleep to him; that is, not protect him from judgments and miſeries: But when he awakes, from this ſleep, according to that of the Apoſtle, Awake thou that ſleepeſt. God will awake to him, to protect and ſave him, from miſery and to advance him to felicity.

Note.

Epheſ. 5. 14.

Can the ruſh grow up without mire? or the flag without water? Whilſt it is yet in his greeneſs and is not cut down, it withereth, &c. So are the paths of all that forget God, and the hypocrites hope ſhall perish. After an argument from the experience of antiquity, Bildad here addeth another argument from a ſimilitude taken from ruſhes and flags; to prove that wicked men ſhall not conſtantly injoy proſperity, but ſoon fade away: And Jerome ſaith, That it was a thing, to which the Syrians and Phyliſtims were naturally much addicted, from natural things to illuſtrate the truth touching others, like unto them concerning men: The ſcope of this ſimilitude is to ſhew, that hypocrites, who cover over wickedneſs with an outward ſhew of holineſs; may for a time flourish in worldly proſperity, above and before others: But as the rush or flag being grown to a certain height, without ever yeilding any fruit, wither again; ſo it is to be expected, that hypocrites ſhould do; who forgetting God, and not out of conſcience toward him, practiſe piety, but for their own worldly ends, they wanting all ſolydity of grace, and ſhooting forth thus only as it were by meanes of mire and water, the baſe and tranſitory things of this life, their own nature and not grace putting them on herein. Ferus will have the force of the reaſon to lye in this: That as the rush and flag, grow not but in watery and miry places, in dry and firme Grounds, if they ſhould be ſet therein, they would wither; ſo the wicked hypocrite, in proſperity, makes a great ſhew of piety, but in adverſity, or being hardly intreated therefore, he hath no courage, ſo much as to make a ſhew any more: But contrariwiſe by his impatience and murmuring againſt God, he breaketh out, making the hollowneſſe of his heart to appeare to all men; and herein he aimed at the making of Iobs caſe odious, whom he thought now to be ſuch: And he ſaith further, Whoſe hope ſhall be cut off, and his truſt as a ſpiders web: he ſhall leane upon his houſe but it ſhall not ſtand, &c. For the ſpider makes his web in great and high houſes, and that very curiouſly and artificially, but it is ſoon ſwept down, ſo the wicked working very ſubtlely, all their works, both their wealth and piety ſoon vaniſheth.

Verſ. 11.
Verſ. 12.
Verſ. 13.

Hieron.

Note.

Ferus.

Verſ. 14.
Verſ. 15.

He is green before the ſun, and his branch ſhooteth forth in his Garden. In expounding this, and V. 17. 18. 19. There is great difference amongſt Expoſitors; the ancients following the vulg. Lat. which hath Ortus for Hortus, riſing for garden. Expound all of the wicked hitherto ſpoken of, thus: He is green and flourishing before the ſun, with his burning and drying heat cometh; but this is only in his ſpringing up at the firſt, as was touched before, V. 12. But now it is more at large declared, how being thus green as it were, by proſperity: He withereth, V. 17. His roots are wrapped about the heap, and he ſeeth the place of ſtones. Hereby he is made to wither; the mire or water wherein he grew, being dryed up, towards the end of ſummer, and made hard as ſtony ground; he begineth to wither for want of moyſture at his roots, V. 18. If he deſtroy him from his place, it ſhall deny him, ſaying,

Verſ. 16.

Gregory.
Tho: Aquinas.
Beda.
Philip.

Verſ. 17.

Verſ. 18.

ſaying, I have not ſeen thee; that is, The ſun having thus made the flag to wither, ſhall bring it to that paſſe; that for the total making of it to dye, and wither away: It ſaith, as it were, (ſpeech by a Proſopopeia being aſcribed to it) I have not ſeen thee any more; the old rushes or flags come to be green no more, but others grow up in the roome thereof: One generation paſſing and another ſucceeding; and this is the joy, that theſe natural things of ſo ſhort a continuance have, as is ſaid, V. 19. And ſo one wicked generation being cut off, yet another ſpringeth up to the worlds end. Vatablus. Clarius. Iſidorus. Cajetan. Others that keep to the original, wherein it is a Garden, V. 16. Expound it of the righteous, as if Bildad having done ſpeaking of the wicked hypocrite; came now to the true hearted juſt man, to make good either way his aſſertion, as touching the momentany proſperity of the wicked, ſo of the conſtant and induring proſperity of the righteous: He groweth not as it were, in the mire or water of marrish ground, but as in a garden, in a fruitful ſoyl, ſtanding pleaſantly in the ſun, and by reaſon thereof proſpering the better, and ſhooting forth his branches; his children that live and grow up with him, to his greater comfort, V. 17. His roots are wrapped about the heap, and he ſeeth the place of ſtones. that is, He is deeply rooted, as it were, his roots being multiplyed into an heap, one infolded in another; a diſcription of a tree that ſtands moſt firmly; then in ſaying, He ſeeth the place of ſtones. It is meant, ſeeing hardſhip to be indured, ſuch a man is not hereby terrified, but patiently beareth it: And whereas V. 18. it is ſaid. If he deſtroy him from his place, he ſhall ſay, I have not ſeen thee. It is meant, that the juſt may be as it were deſtroyed, either by having his boughs cut off, as it is done to a tree, or vine being pruned, or cut off by the roots, yet in a ſhort time, as a tree ſhooteth out branches again, from the body or root thereof, and groweth again; ſo ſhall he have children, and come to a proſperous eſtate again, as if he had never ſeen or felt any ſuch ſtroakes cutting him down, V. 19. This is the joy of his way, & out of the earth ſhall others grow, that is, Thus the juſt in his way, hath joy of proſperity reſtored again; and out of him thus cut down to the ground, by loſſes of goods and children, ſhall other children come; and of them more to make him flourish from Generation to Generation: A very apt expoſition, and ſuch, as then which, we ſhall need to ſeek none other; And ſo the next words agree very well, V. 20. Behold, God will not caſt away the perfect man, neither will he help the evill doers; as if he had ſaid, Hereby it appeareth, that although the righteous man may fal into adverſity, as Iob did; yet he if he be juſt may have hope of being reſtored, but the wicked being ſo proceeded againſt; are without all hope of ever being reſtored again, V. 21. Till he fill thy lips with laughing, &c. He will not caſt away the perfect, but give him by his final proſpering again, after affliction, cauſe of joy and gladneſſe again for ever: And then ſhame and confuſion ſhall come to the wicked that hated, and ſpake deſpitefully againſt him in his miſery: And his dwelling place or houſe ſhall come to naught. Wherein it is worth the conſiderring, how truly all this fel out, touching Iob and theſe his friends; he was reſtored, and they by Gods reproving them: Confounded and put to ſhame. As it appeareth, Chap. 42. 7.

Verſ. 19. Verſ. 20. Verſ. 21. Verſ. 22.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 2. I Know it is ſo, but how ſhould man be juſt with God? If he ſhould contend with him, he were not able to anſwer him one of a thouſand. Here Iob to the laſt words of Bildad and thoſe, Chap. 8. 3. Where he juſtified God in all his doings: The ſame now doth Iob in a more ample manner, in ſaying, How ſhould man be juſt with God? He meaneth not, that no man is juſt, even in in Gods account; for God himſelf had before teſtified of him, that he was a juſt man: But in compariſon of the juſt God, whoſe juſtice is without any the leaſt ſpot or ſtain, no man is juſt: But what meaneth this, Not anſwer him one of a thouſand. Verily, that if God ſhould put a thouſand queſtions to him about his righteouſneſſe, in ſo many particulars, he could not in any one of theſe juſtifie himſelf; ſo V. 12. and 14. He more expreſly ſpeaking of the ſame effect again, ſaith, I cannot anſwer him, therefore they err, that hereby underſtand Gods anſwering man, as if he had ſaid, Man is ſo much inferiour to God, that if he would contend and queſtion within him, he would contemne him, and not think him worthy of any anſwer, but to be ſeverely cenſured for his audaciouſneſſe.

Verſ. 5. Who removeth mountaines, and they know it not. Here Iob to approve what he had ſaid, V. 4. of Gods power and wiſdome, againſt which therefore there is no contending for man, beginneth to inſtance in ſome particulars, whereby it may appeare to be infinite: And he beginneth with the mountaines, which are ſo great and firmely ſet, that none but an Almighty power can remove them: For which Chriſt alſo ſpeaketh hereof, as an act of the greateſt power that is, ſaying, If yee have faith, and ſay to this mountain, be removed, &c. And Paul likewiſe, If I have all faith, ſo that I could remove mountaines. 1 Cor. 13. For the doing of this mighty work, Dionyſius thinketh, That in thus ſpeaking, he aimeth at that which was done in the time of Noah his flood, when the waters with their mighty force galled and bare down many great mountaines; others, becauſe this is only conjectural, hold that it is ſpoken of thoſe, that ſometimes in earth-quakes have been removed, as ſometime was done in this our Land, in Herefordſhire; or by ſaying he removeth he meaneth, can remove, and will at the laſt day, when even the Heavens ſhall be diſſolved and melt away with heat, and the whole earth and mountaines thereof ſhall be burnt up. Dioniſ. 2 Pet. 3. 10.

Verſ. 7. Which commandeth the Sun and it riſeth not, and ſealeth up the ſtars. Here Gods almighty power is further proved, by his ruling over the Sun and the Stars, which when he pleaſeth, is ſtayed in the courſe thereof, as in the daies of Joſhuah: And he can make the Stars alſo to ſtand ſtil, as if ſealed up; as he then did by the Moon, the Sun, Stand ſtil in Gibeon, and the Moon in the valley of Ajalon, an whole day. Joſh. 10. 12. Verſ. 8. Which alone ſpreadeth out the Heavens, and treadeth upon the waves of the Sea. Here is another argument of the ſame, he made the Heavens by his power and wiſdome; and the Seas moſt violently carried with irreſiſtable force, the waves whereof are lifted up by moſt impeteous winds, he ſuppreſſeth and ſtayeth, as by treading them under his feet, ſo that they can paſſe no further, V. 9. Verſ. 9. Which maketh Arcturus, the Orion, and Pleiades, and the chambers of the South: Arcturus hath the name עש from congregating or gathering together, becauſe it is a conſtellation gathering the windes as it were together, when it ariſeth and making great tempeſts. Orion hath the names כסיל ſignifying inconſtant: And from hence the ninth month amongſt the Hebrewes was called Araſſen, which anſwered to our November; when this conſtellation ariſeth making the weather very inconſtant and windy: The Pleiades, by the Greeks called Hyades, from raining, by Pliny, or hedi, ſuccula, Heb. כימה are a conſtellation, which when it ariſeth, cauſeth much rain; it is which we commonly call the ſeven Stars, or Charleſwain: And of theſe it is alſo ſpoken, Amos 5. 3. Which ſeemes to be taken from hence, and of the ſpreading of the Heavens by his power, Pſ. 104. And theſe conſtellations in particular, are ſpoken of as made by him, to prove his infinite power; there being none in the world, that can ſtop their influences upon earth, or know before of the violent tempeſts, or ſuperabounding raines cauſed hereby, to ſave themſelves herefrom: And the like is to be held, Of the chambers of the ſouth: By Vulg. Interiora auſtri, the more inward parts of the ſouth, where diverſe other ſtars are, that appeare not to us, and yet have their influences alſo:

alſo: The ſcope of capitulating all this is, that infirme and wretched man, might not once mutter againſt Gods doings, howſoever he dealeth by him; as if he were unjuſtly dealt withall, becauſe this doth only provoke him more, as is not the way to ſtop the courſe of his judgments againſt us; for this is to be done, only by humbling our ſelves before him, and confeſſing our ſinnes, and that he is juſt in all his waies, and righteous in all his works; becauſe the moſt righteous man is a ſinner: And we are worthy for our leaſt ſinnes, of all the judgments that can befal us in this world; and it is good for us, if we be afflicted and judged here, that we may not perish together with the world, ſuch judgments being but fatherly chaſtiſements, and tokens of Gods love towards us. Note. 1 Cor. 11. Heb. 12. 9. Loe he goeth by me and I ſee him not, he paſſeth by me and I perceive him not. Verſ. 11. Here after other arguments before going to make all men to feare God, for his almighty power and wiſdome, another is added to ſtrike ſuch terror into us, as not to dare to quarrel with him about any of his doings towards us, for he is inviſible: And therefore whether he be coming in love and favour in his judgments, or paſſing away in diſpleaſure, we know not; for ſometimes he judgeth ſeverely, as I ſaid before in great love and mercy, for the good of thoſe that are judged; and ſometime in wrath, his judging in this world being a forerunner and beginning of everlaſting deſtruction: And whether he judgeth the one way or the other; man commonly knoweth not, and therefore ſeeing our ſoareſt afflictions may be effects of love, there is no cauſe why we ſhould ſpeak againſt God therefore, but patiently and humbly ſubmit to his ſtroak; yea we have a promiſe of bleſſing by afflictions, if in time of affliction we do ſo. Note. Prov. 3. 12. Whereas otherwiſe we may juſtly feare that he is paſſing away, and that we ſhall never injoy his love or favour, but perish under his hand everlaſtingly; if it be taken as it is by ſome, for his being alwaies nigh unto us, paſſing and repaſſing daily, but yet unſeen: Nothing is hereby meant, but his inviſibility; although he be alwaies neer to every one of us: For in him we live, move, and have our being; and he is about all our paths, and about all our waies: If it be thus taken, he is to be underſtood, as proceeding from ſpeaking of his power ſhewed in the things afore ſaid, to his omnipreſence, although inviſible, that we may take heed what we ſay of him, in any extremity or miſery; for although we ſee him not, yet he both ſeeth and heareth us: As a circumſpect Judge that goeth obſcured under ſome diſguiſe, and ſo heareth and ſeeth what is ſpoken or done, by thoſe that are to be judged by him: Wherefore neither in ſuffering, nor at any other time are we to think, we may in the dark or in ſecret, do or ſpeak what we will, but that the Judge is nere, even by us; that we may feare to ſpeak or do any evil. Acts 17. Pſal. 139. Note.

If he take away, who can hinder him, or ſay unto him what doſt thou. Verſ. 12. If God withdraweth not his anger, the proud helpers do ſtoop under him. the Vulg. If he ſuddenly asketh, who can anſwer him. Verſ. 13. But the word יחתם here uſed, ſignifie to ſnatch away, and שוב from whence cometh the word rendred anſwer, ſignifieth, to turn; and ſo the meaning is: Who can repel or turn him back: Wherein Job plainly alludeth to the taking away of his Children, Servants, and Cattell; againſt which, being Gods act, it was not ſafe for him to cavel or to object any thing, as it is not for any other man: In his calling Gods taking away, his ſnatching; he ſpeaketh after the manner of natural men, who are ready, when they ſuſtain great loſſes, to impute Lion-like, and tyrannical dealing to God, as if he were not led by juſtice, but by his own will without cauſe to vex men: But if there be any, that dare think or ſpeak thus; or ſome being by his hand put to ſo great loſſe, think to provide for themſelves, that they will not ſuffer the like, but hold up their eſtates better, thoſe proud ones, called here proud helpers, ſhall be made to ſtoop, this their inſolency ſhall cauſe their ruine: To which effect Calvin ſpeaketh, the Vulg. For proud helpers, hath it, Qui Calvin.

portunt

portant orbem, That beare up the world, but the word רחב ſignifyeth, Latus broad, and ſo it is, Helpers of latitude: That is, of the largeſt extent, either in power, or by an elate mind, and ſo the meaning is, none are ſo mighty, or ſo high conceited of their own ability, but if he be angry he will make them to ſtoop under him, as not being able to beare his wrath. Or by theſe mighty helpers we may underſtand the mountains, Earth and Heaven before ſpoken of, which may be called helps of Latitude for their large extent, and ones helping another, the Heavens the Earth, with the influences thereof making it fruitful, and the earth men with the fruits thereof, for even theſe ſhall ſtoop in the day of Gods anger, at the day of judgment, when all ſhall be diſſolved: Therefore he inferreth, that he much more muſt needs be unable to deale with him, or to plead againſt him, to make his plea good, although he ſhould uſe the choyſeſt words that might be deviſed. Whereupon he concludeth, that if he were righteous, he would not thus anſwer by way of pleading his own righteouſneſſe, but make his ſupplication to his Judge. Herein teaching us to do likewiſe, accounting our owne righteouſneſſe nothing, but his grace all in all, for ſalvation and deliverance from all evill. Verſ. 14. Verſ. 15.

If I had called and he had anſwered me, yet would I not believe that hee had hearkned to my voyce. Some think theſe words to have been ſpoken deſpairingly; but others better, that this is ſpoken in way of anſwer to that of Bildad, Chap. 8. 5. If thou wouldſt make thy ſupplication to him; If thou wert pure; Now to this he ſaith, If truſting hereunto I had prayed, and he had anſwered me, I ſhould not have believed that he had hearkned unto me, the reaſon whereof was given before: That neither he, nor any man living, can thus plead in prayer with him, but truſting only to his goodneſſe and mercy. For a man may pray, having ſome truſt in his own righteouſneſſe, and be heard for ſome worldly thing, of which he ſtandeth in need, and yet he cannot hereby gather, that the Lord beareth a favour to him, becauſe both he denyeth theſe things ſometimes to his favourites, and granteth them to ſuch as are out of favour with him, and ſoon after teareth him, as it were with a tempeſt, as here followeth, Verſ. 16.

He breaketh me with a tempeſt, and multiplyeth my wounds without cauſe. Vulg. He will break, and ſo it is Heb. that is, If I ſhould plead before him as pure, although I might temporally, or for a time be delivered, yet I ſhould not finally eſcape deſtruction, although I ſhould give him none other cauſe. Whereby we may ſee upon what danger of being torn in pieces by Gods judgments they put themſelves, that juſtifie themſelves, aſcribing perfect righteouſneſſe to themſelves, how holy ſoever they be, as the proud Phariſee, Luk. 18. Olympiod underſtandeth theſe words of Gods multiplying his wounds without cauſe in the ſame ſenſe, that the ſame words were ſpoken by God to Satan, when he charged him againſt Jobs firſt ſufferings, that he had ſtirred him up againſt him in vaine, or without cauſe, Ch. 2. That is, thou multiplyeſt my wounds to try mee and prove me, when thou needeſt not ſo to do, for without thus trying my patience, thou knoweſt mee very well: So that in ſaying thus, Philip gathereth, that Job now perceived that the Lord was thus terrible to him in his judgements, for nought alſo, but to try his patience. Howſoever, it was certainly a great meaſure of humility in Job, to extenuate his own worth ſo much, being by Gods owne teſtimony a perfect man, to whom no man upon earth then was equall, and to aſcribe all goodneſſe to God alone, wholly and only depending hereupon, and not as the Papiſts do, partly upon grace, and partly upon works. Verſ. 17 Note. Olympiod. Philippus.

Although I were perfect, I would not know my ſoule, but would deſpiſe my own life. The 18, 19, 20. verſes need no explication, conſidering the premiſes, and what hath been ſaid upon the like: Onely verſ. 20. in ſaying, if I ſhould juſtifie my ſelfe, my own mouth would condemn me, is as if hee had ſaid, I ſhould in ſpeaking ſhew my ſelf proud by ſpeaking in my own praiſe, Verſ. 21.

and detracting from Gods juſtice. For theſe words, having in the former diſclaimed perfection in himſelfe, now he ſaith, If I were perfect, I would not looke at that; or regard it, being in the midſt of thoſe miſeries, as thinking therefore to be delivered and preſerved alive in this world, or have any thing that I deſire: Yea, I rather hate this life, that I may be rid of it, and through Gods goodneſſe, to which alone I truſt, attaine to everlaſting life.

This is one thing, therefore I ſaid it, he deſtroyeth the perfect and the wicked. That is, that which I have ſaid already is one thing, God only is juſt, every man in compariſon of him unrighteous, or imperfect; therefore in deſtroying, that is, laying his judgments upon the good, as well as the bad, in this world, he cannot be ſpoken againſt. He meaneth not, as Iſidorus conceiveth, that he hath no more regard to keep the Juſt from deſtruction then the wicked, as not caring whether men be juſt and righteous in their lives and dealings, or not: for which to clear Job, he ſaith, that he ſpeaks in the perſon of a naturall man. But there needs no ſuch ſhift here, for it is no more in effect then that which is ſaid, Chap. 9. 1. All things fall out alike unto all. And by Ezek. I will deſtroy the righteous, together with the wicked. Although for divers ends, them for correction, and that they may be more ſanctified, theſe that being by no meanes reformed, they may be the more juſtly condemned for ever, as deſperate ſinners.

Iſidor.

Verſ. 23. If the ſcourge ſlay ſuddenly, he will laugh at the tryall of the innocent. The Vul. If he ſcourgeth, let him kill at once, and not laugh at the puniſhments of the innocent: But here is no word ſignifying Not, and the word rendred ſcourge, is, שוט a Scourge: Not to leave this then, and to hold us to N. Tr. the meaning is, when as the ſcourge or judgment of God ſlay the wicked ſuddenly, but the innocent, that is, they that are of an unblameable life, are by Gods judgments brought under killing miſeries, and there long held for their tryall, but their lives are ſpared: He, that is, the wicked, derideth them for their ſuffering of theſe things, as men no more, or leſſe accounted of by God, then they be, and thus theſe words anſwer moſt aptly to thoſe before going, ver. 22. He deſtroyeth the perfect and the wicked: But when as the perfect or innocent man, who is innocent in compariſon of him, is under ſore affliction a long time; and the wicked man, who for the preſent eſcapeth, yet ſhall certainely be deſtroyed, and that upon the ſudden, if not ſooner; yet at the day of Judgment, the wicked, that looketh only at things preſent, derideth him, as hath been before ſaid. Some by the Scourge underſtand the Devill, who is Gods inſtrument to ſlay the wicked, and to afflict the righteous, as he did Job for his tryall, and that a long time, this is matter of mirth and deriſion to him: And ſome underſtanding it of God, of whom Job ſpeaketh hitherto, expound theſe words, as if Iob prayed herein, that for ſo much as it was his will to deſtroy both the righteous and the wicked, that he would not put this difference, deſtroying the bodily life of the wicked ſuddenly, without prolonging their paine and miſery here, and contrariwiſe keep the Juſt under ſuffering ſo long, as that the wicked thinking them now utterly forſaken by God, ſhould take occaſion to laugh at, and deride them. But forſomuch as here no word implying a prayer, and the wicked and not the Devill were ſpoken of in the words before going, the firſt Expoſition is to be preferred as moſt genuine.

R. Levi.
R. Abraham.
Vatablus.
Pagnin.
Eugubin.
Philip.
Cajetan.
R. Moſes.

Verſ. 24. The earth is given into the hands of the wicked: he covereth the faces of the Judges thereof; if not, Where, and who is he? This is ſpoken againſt Jobs friends, who were Princes and Judges of the earth, in whoſe hands the earth, that is, earthly things being in abundance when he was in want, and ſuffered ſo grievouſly, they as men blinded by God, judged unjuſtly of him: For in ſaying, He covereth the faces of the Judges thereof, the blind-folding of them is meant, that they being in proſperity could not judg aright of others, the ſervants of God being in miſery & he puteth it to them to anſwer, if they can, if they ſhal deny this, who it is, by whom they, and others like unto them are

continued

continued in proſperity, whereupon they take occaſion to inſult and cenſure ſo injuriouſly, them that be in miſery: And thus underſtood, it aptly followeth after the complaint againſt the wicked, deriding the righteous in their ſufferings, verſ. 23. As if he had ſaid, they laugh at them indeed, but it is becauſe God that dealeth ſo favourably with them in the mean ſeaſon, hath thus put a covering upon their eyes, as it were, not to ſee how to judg aright of the miſerable.

Now my dayes are ſwifter then a Poſt, they flee away, &c. That is, although I deny not, but aſſert the equity and juſtice of God in all his doings, and aſcribe no righteouſneſſe to my ſelf, yet give me leave to lament my miſeries, and ſome-what to eaſe my ſelf whilſt I live, by complaining of the ſhortneſſe of my worldly felicity. He had before compared the life of man for the ſwift paſſing of it away, to a Weavers Shuttle, now he compareth to one riding Poſt, the fleeing of an Eagle, and the Ships ſailing moſt ſwiftly upon the Sea. Verſ. 25. Job 7. 6.

If I ſay I will make my complaint, &c. I am afraid of all my ſorrowes, I know thou wilt not hold me innocent. That is, when I think to ſuppreſſe my greif, and not to ſpeak any more, I am not able to contain my ſelf; for even ſo doing I fear, leſt by the continuation of my ſorrows, and Gods hand upon me, I ſhould be yet rather thought by other men not to be innocent, but a moſt wicked man, they being hereby more confirmed in this opinion touching me, and I alſo feare my ſelf to be able to hold out in my faith, and not to have it turned into deſperation hereby. Ver. 27. 28.

If I be wicked, why then labour I in vain? This is by Vatablus referred to labouring with God in Prayer, as Bildad perſwaded him, as if he had ſaid, Why ſhould I apply my ſelf to God in prayer, ſeeing this would be but vain, for ſo much as he heareth not the wicked, but the righteous only. Cajetan referreth it to his aſſiduity formerly uſed from time to time, by ſacrificing and praying, even to ſanctifie his children; for this had been vain for him to have done, his perſon not being accepted; as it could not be, if he were wicked. But againſt this it may be excepted; thou (O Job) didſt then indeed labour in vaine, witneſſe the judgment that fell upon all thy children: And againſt the former, that Bildad did not onely perſwade him to pray, but alſo to be pure; and againſt both, becauſe he ſpeaketh of ſomething preſent, not paſt: Why do I labour in vain? Olympiod. therefore beſt ſaith; Why doe I labour under my ſufferings, being ſo great and grievous ſo long, and am not ſuddenly cut off, as is uſed to be done to the wicked and reprobates? Seeing this is a courſe which God taketh with his Elect, who are accepted before him, thus trying and purifying, and making them to ſhine more; but for wicked reprobates it is Labor irritus, to deale thus with them who are unreformable by any ſufferings. A thing to be noted by Gods ſervants for their comfort in all their miſeries, when they are moſt tedious, by their long continuance unto them, being patiently born, and righteous dealing ſtill being aſcribed to God, together with praiſe even when he taketh away; for this certainly argueth that they are not wicked, but ſuch as are precious in his ſight, as gold, which he will not finally looſe. Verſ. 29. Vatablus. Cajetan. Olympiod. Note.

If I waſh me with ſnow water, and make my hands never ſo clean, &c. Here againe Job by another compariſon ſheweth, that all thoughts of juſtifying himſelf to God in any of his ſpeeches before uſed, were far from him; For let a man be as clean as poſſibly he can, yet God ſeeth foulneſſe ſtill in him, as in one that lyeth in a dirty ditch, if he looketh upon him with the eye of juſtice, although in his mercy he ſeeth none iniquity in Jacob, nor ſin in Iſrael; that is, in ſuch as humbly confeſſe their ſins, as is expreſſed by the Prophet David, Pſal. 32. 1, 2, 3. The Vulg. to expreſs the meaning of theſe words, Thou ſhalt plunge me in the ditch, hath it, Sordibus intinges me, according to that which I have already ſaid. By the ditch alſo we may underſtand the Grave, where men wear no cloaths any more; yea cloaths are ſaid Verſ. 30. Verſ. 31.

by a Proſopopeia, to abhor to touch them, ſo that it is the greateſt expreſſion of filthineſſe that can be, even as of a dead corps, that lyeth rotting in the Grave. of which our Lord, ſpeaking of whited Sepulchres, ſaith, Within they
Iſa. 64. 6. are full of rottenneſſe and dead mens bones. To which effect alſo the Prophet ſaith, Our righteouſneſſe is as filthy rags.

Verſ. 32. He is not a man as I am, that I ſhould anſwer him: Nor is there any dayes-man, &c. After other reaſons, proving that it was not for him to contend with God, here he reaſoneth further from hence, that God was not as a man, but ſo high and excellent above man, that who ſo ſhall think to hold any Plea againſt him, ſhall be ſure to be over-matched.

Verſ. 34. Verſ. 35. Let him take away his rod from me, and let not his feare terrifie mee. So would I ſpeake and not feare him, but it is not ſo with me. That is, I am now under his rod, which makes me that I dare not ſpeak any thing by way of pleading with him, I am ſo terrified hereby, and aſtoniſhed at it, through a conſcience of my owne vileneſſe in his ſight; but oh, that it would pleaſe him to deliver me from this my miſery, then I ſhould hence gather, that he accepteth of me, and ſhould be confident and bold to ſpeak unto him by my prayers and prayſes, as I have formerly done; but yet it is not ſo with me, and therefore I fear and tremble to ſpeak unto him. But to you if I ſpeak, I hope that he wil not be offended with me, to juſtifie my ſelf againſt your foul calumnies, as a Judge, when men contend by words before him, ſome laying wickedneſſe to anothers charge, and the other defending his innocency againſt them. Whence note, that the judgments of God and temptations do ſo work
Note. upon the ſpirits of his moſt righteous ſervants, that their faith is much ſhaken hereby, and their hope to Godward is not ſo firme, but they are inclining to deſpair, yet being here-from againe delivered, they take unto them their wonted confidence and boldneſſe again, as being now fully perſwaded of his grace towards them: and therefore truſting to this, let us not utterly deſpair for any tryals or temptations, but certainly expect to be reſtored. Allegorically [by the mountains and earth removed, ſaith Gregory, underſtand Verſ. 5, 6. The Allegory. Gregory. the Apoſtles rejected, and gone from amongſt the Jewes, and by the earth removed their expulſion out of their country, and by the Sun reſtrained from the courſe, their ſpirituall darkneſſe; all light of the Sun and Stars, that is, of the truth hidden from their eyes. By the ſtretching out of the heavens, the ſtretching out of the heavenly light of the Goſpel to all Countreyes and Nations, when as before the light was ſtreightned, ſhining in Judea only: And by his treading upon the Sea, which is raging, God repreſſing and curbing of the violent motions, both of Jews and Heathens, againſt his Church, ſo that although ſhe were hereby indangered as a ſhip upon the Sea, yet they could Verſ. 9. not drown her. Touching Arcturus, Orion, the Pleiades, and the chambers of the ſouth, we are not to thinke, that Job ſpake of Gods making theſe to confirm the imaginations of Aſtrologers, who deviſed theſe names, and tell fabulous things of them; but hereby are other things concerning the Church to be underſtood, by Arcturus, or the bright ſeven ſtars ariſing in Autumne, whereupon variable weather and winds follow; The ſeven Churches, called Seven golden Candleſticks, Rev. 1. which ſhone moſt brightly; by Orion, cauſing tempeſts in the midſt of Winter, perſecutions by Heathens raiſed, making many Martyrs, who were by them violently ſhaken and deſtroyed, when they remained yet frozen hard, as it were, by the hardneſſe of their hearts in ſinne and infidelity. But after this in the ſpring ariſe the Hyades, or Pleyades, when a flouriſhing time like the Spring followed to the Church, perſecutions being appeaſed, and peace enjoyed.

Then laſtly, he mentioneth his making of the chambers of the South, or the inner parts thereof; by the South, meaning Heaven, becauſe it is warm and comfortable, from the inner parts whereof cometh down the holy Ghoſt into the hearts of the faithfull, heating them by elevatiug their minds to divine contemplation, whereby they are chambered, as it were, amidſt the joyes of heaven;

heaven, where in the ſecret of the moſt high are all the Saints departed out of this life. Whereas he ſaith, He goeth by me, and I ſee him not. It is meant, that men even inlightned here are ſo blinde, that they ſee not to what thoſe things that befall them tend, but count ſometimes thoſe to be good for them which are evill, and thoſe evill that are good, as the gift of knowledg, tongues, or propheſying, which to ſome tend to their greater damnation, as Mat. 7. 21. 1 Cor. 13. and afflictions & miſeries in this life, which to ſome tend to glory, in the life to come to the increaſe thereof, but the end of all, and whereunto they tend is unknown yet unto them, for mans inability to reſiſt God, or to hinder him. Moſes hindered him from ſlaying the Iſraelites, and Aaron by offering Incenſe ſtayed the Plague, and Phineas by doing execution upon Zimri and Cosby. But it is to be underſtood, that it is meant, no man by his owne power can withſtand Gods judgements, but ſuch as have power from him ſo to doe, as theſe men had. Under whom they that beare up the world are bowed: That is, the Kings of the Nations, for who beare up the world in their ſeverall Kingdomes but they, for which a King in Greek is called βασιλευς, quaſi, βασις του λαου, the foundation of the people. Now theſe are bowed, when they are bowed to the obedience of the Goſpel, the Jewes, that would not, being deſtroyed, and there being none able, when the time of their rejection came, to reſiſt. For theſe words, Mine owne garments ſhall abhorre me.

2 Cor. 4. 17.

Verſ. 12.

Verſ. 31.

By garments underſtand the body, which is as a garment to the ſoul, by abhorring me, making me to be abhorred, as is ſaid of Judas, that he poſſeſſed the Field called Acheldama, that is, made others to poſſeſſe it, for he being dead could not poſſeſſe it. And the body makes a man abhorred, when by the luſts hereof hee is drawne to ſinne, although contrary to the intention of his minde, whereby hee waſheth his hands, as it were, with ſnow water, as Paul alſo complaineth, Rom. 7.

Laſtly, by his rod, of which he ſaith, Let him take his rodde away from mee, underſtand the Law, with the terrour thereof, which is done onely by CHRIST, in whom wee can looke up to God, and ſpeake to him without all ſlaviſh feare, but under the Law we cannot. As the child of the Shunamite, when Gehezi the ſervant of Eliſhah ſent with his ſtaffe, laid it upon the face thereof, ſhewed no ſigne of life, but lay dead ſtill; yet Eliſhah coming, and ſpreading himſelfe upon it, and then walking and doing it againe, the childe ſneezed ſeven times, and then received life and comfort. So Moſes coming with the ſtaffe or rodde of the Law, there is no life or heart to ſpeake: But Chriſt coming, and taking our nature upon him, whereby hee did, as it were, ſpread himſelfe upon us, then walking too and fro, teaching and doing Miracles, and after this dying for us, his hands and feete being extended upon the Croſſe, wee by the Spirit with his ſeven-fold graces are revived, and come boldly to the Throne of Grace, pleading with him for the effect of CHRISTS paſſions in us, Adoption, and Glorification.

Verſ. 34.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. MY Soul is weary of my life, I will leave my complaint upon my ſelfe, &c. The vulg. Dimittam adverſus me eloquium meum, I will let my ſpeech go againſt my ſelf; Expounded by Gregory thus, It irks my ſoul that my life is ſo ſinful, as to bring ſo great Judgments upon me; I will therfore not excuſe, but accuſe my ſelf; wherein we are alſo taught what to do, and not when we have done evill and God meets with us by his Judgments, or we are accuſed and in danger to be puniſhed, therfore to deny the evill which we have done, as the manner of moſt is: And becauſe ſome ſpeak in confeſſing their ſinns, or telling of them without all greif therefore; yea rather glorying and delighting to recount them, he addeth further, I will ſpeak in the bitterneſs of my Soul, As every one muſt do that would have pardon. Againſt glorying in ſinn which is our ſhame, ſee Phillip. 3. 21. The Hebrew is, I will leave my words of complaint upon me: To the ſame effect; For he that doth ſo complain of his own evill deſerts, and conſequently againſt himſelf.

Gregory.

Note.

And the next words follow well after theſe, being thus underſtood.

Verſ. 2. I will ſay unto God, do not condemn me, ſhew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me. Seeing I confeſs all the fault for which I ſuffer is in my ſelfe (O Lord) do not thou proceed ſtill againſt me, but now that I do, as thou requireſt of ſinners, ſhew me wherefore thou ſtill proceedeſt in thy Judgments againſt me, and doſt not releaſe me from them, that if there be any other thing by me to be done, I may apply my ſelf unto it and recover thy favour; a ſpeech much like unto that Ch. 7. 20. for the juſt Judg of all the world wil not ſmite without a cauſe, therefore not the poor, the work of his own hands, as it followeth, V. 3.

Verſ. 3. Neither will he help the counſell of the wicked. Whereby he meaneth his wicked friends, who conſpired together to lay ſome groſs ſinns to his charge, arguing from the Judgments upon him, that he muſt needs be notoriouſly wicked before God, and if his plagues ſhould ſtill continue, they would be confirmed in their evill opinion againſt him.

Verſ. 4. Haſt thou eyes of fleſh? or ſeeſt thou as a man ſeeth? Gregory, who by the wicked ſpoken of, V. 3. nnderſtandeth the devill taking occaſion by afflictions to drive the ſervants of God to ſin, & ſo into the danger of everlaſting death, which he cannot otherwiſe effect to make them as miſerable as himſelf; and the former words, Seems it good to thee to oppreſſe the Poor: as if he had ſaid, I know it doth not, but thou ſeeſt ſome cauſe of theſe my Suffrings, which I do not, and for this I greive; He I ſay expoundeth this of V. 4. Thus, if thou hadſt eyes like a man to ſee nothing till it were done, and wert in thy time and dayes like a man of ſhort continuance, made in time, and ſo cut off again in a ſhort time, and not from everlaſting to everlaſting, knowing all things to come from Eternity, and not as man who cannot know things ſo; becauſe he cannot know but after he hath a being, I ſhould not marvel at thy purſuing me with thy Judgments to prove me, but now it amazeth and troubleth me much, to think why thou thus tryeſt me, being ſo well known unto thee; even before I was born. Thus alſo Auguſt. and Tho: Aquinas Polichron. and many more. V. 7.

Gregory.

Verſ. 7. Thou knoweſt that I am not wicked, and none can deliver me out of thy hands.

The vulg. joyning it by a copulative to the former verſe, renders it, And thou mayſt know that I am not wicked. Hebr. It is upon thy knowledge, without any copulative, Job appealeth here out of the clearneſs of his conſcience to God himſelf, ſeeking to move him hereby, not to try him further by his judgments, ments, ſith he knew, that he had not a wicked, but an upright heart; as God had teſtified of him, chap. 1. 1. Yea and ſince he was tryed by ſo ſoare ſufferings, nothing wicked proceeded from him: For the words adjoyned, None can deliver out of thy hands. It is as if he had ſaid, Thus thou knoweſt it to be with me, that I have no wicked heart, but for this I expect not to be delivered; for thou canſt ſtil finde matter in me, for which to lay thy hands upon me: But the more I ſubmit my ſelf, acknowledging nothing of worth in me, for which to be delivered; the more milde ſhouldeſt thou be in thy dealings towards me, as a Lion to a man crouching to him. Thy hands have made me and faſhioned me round about. Becauſe nothing in himſelf was of force to plead for deliverance in regard of it, he now uſeth another argument from Gods own work, which he was, therefore he hoped that he would not deſtroy him any more, then his own work, which none will do: And in this we may have great confidence, that are truly faithful, ſeeing as the Apoſtle ſaith: We are his work-manſhip created unto good works in Chriſt Jeſus. Haſt not thou powred mee out like milke, and curdled me out like cheeſe? Having ſaid, V. 9. That he had made him of clay, wherin he alludeth to the making of the firſt man, now he ſpeakes of the generation of men, coming of the ſeed of man; like white milk and coagulated in time together into flesh, which he ſpeaketh of, to move the Lord to take care now of his preſervation, and that he might not be deſtroyed: But that he would tender his own work ſo admirably framed, as it is even the body of man; of which it is ſpoken, Pſal. 139.

Verſ. 8.

Eph. 2. 10.
Verſ. 10.

Thou haſt clothed me with skin and flesh, and fenced me with bones and ſinewes. Both this and that of milk made into cheeſe, is by Gregory expounded allegorically, beſides the literal ſenſe thus: Thou haſt made me out of the milk of which I firſt came, into a new form of ſpiritual converſation. As the cheeſe made out of milk is now a new thing, and although I have flesh, and conſiſt of flesh, yet thou haſt ſtrengthened me againſt this my weakneſs, in regard of ſin, as with bones and ſinewes, the flesh is ſtrengthned to ſtand, and to do that, which otherwiſe it could not: For it is not ſomuch to plead that a man may not be deſtroyed, becauſe God hath made his body; for ſo he hath made the bodies of Beaſts that perish: But this is a ſtrange plea and prevalent with him, that he hath wrought a work of grace, a ſpiritual work in him, to the making of him a new man: Wherefore he more expreſly ſpeaketh of this alſo, V. 12.

Verſ 11.
Gregory.
Allegor.

Thou haſt given me life and favour, and thy viſitation hath preſerved my ſpirit. For in ſaying thus, he meaneth, not only the inliving of his body with a reaſonable ſoule, as he doth to all men: But alſo a ſpiritual life and grace; for which his bodily life hath been heitherto alſo preſerved, with which Satan would have been dealing, as we may ſee by theſe words, chap. 2. Skin for skin and all that a man hath he will give for his life. But the Lord charged him, when he put all that he had into his hands, to ſpare his life: Gregory underſtandeth it altogether of the life ſpiritual, ſaith: That life and favour or grace, are joyned together; becauſe, this life is not given to any, but to ſuch as have grace to leave their ſinnes: Yet it ſtandeth in dying to ſin, and living to righteouſneſſe, and to live in ſin is to be dead, and this life thus attained is not upheld, but by further viſitation of his ſpirit with grace, from which the regenerate to this ſpiritual life, are continually ſuplpyed. According to which Jerom ſpeaketh notably: God is alwayes a giver, it is not enough, that he giveth me his grace; unleſs he alwayes give aſupply thereof. V. 13.

Verſ. 12.

Gregory.

Eph. 2.
Rom. 6.

Hieron. Semper largitor eſt deus, ſemper donator, non ſatis eſt quod ſemel accepi niſi ſemper accipiam.

And theſe things haſt thou hid in thy heart; I know that this is with thee. The vulg. Scio quod univerſorum memineris. Expounded by Gregory: Thou haſt it I know in thy heart, to pardon and releaſe me from theſe my ſufferings, although thou haſt not yet laid it open; for thou wilt in thy due time be mindful of all men, in all parts of the World, that ſhall beleive

Verſ. 13.
Gregory.

beleive in thee, and walk uprightly before thee; which is a thing, that thou
Note. yet concealeſt, but will in thy good time reveal: And hereby he thinketh, that the vocation of the Gentiles, and not of the poſterity of Abraham only is implyed. And he gathereth, that men may know the favour that God beareth towards them; howſoever for the preſent they be under greivous miſeries, and that even by his afflicting them, when as in uprightneſs of heart they ſerve him and walk before him: For this is a certain ſign of his
Heb. 12. 9. fatherly love. But the new Tranſlat. is word for word, according to the Hebrew; ſo that he being too much led by the Vulg. lat. fell upon this expoſition without ground here: The meaning then is nothing elſe, but what I ſuffer, is by thy ſecret counſel and decree come to paſſe, thy love being never the leſſer towards me: And the ſame is true touching all Gods faithful Servants, that none may deſpair under their ſufferings; but now ga-
Note. ther more aſſuredly that God loveth them, and therefore the iſſue of them all, ſhall be joyful and comfortable: And if it be ſo, what is to be thought of their Tenet that ſay, No man can know whether he be beloved of God, and ſhall be ſaved or not; when as Job knew it, and Paul, who therefore ſayth, 2 Cor. 4. 8. I have fought a good fight, now remaineth the Crown of righteouſneſs: Which the righteous Judge will beſtow upon me, And John. We know that we are the
1 Joh. 3. 3. Sonnes of God, &c. But by the way, God dealeth with his Servants, as Joſeph with his Brethren, who concealed his brotherly affection for a time, and dealt roughly with them, but in the end, he could contain no longer, but ſhewed it to their exceeding great comfort and joy.

Verſ. 14. If I ſin, thou markeſt me, and wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity. The vulg. If I have ſinned, and thou haſt ſpared me for an hour: Why doſt not thou ſuffer me to be clean from mine iniquity; Hebr. If I have ſinned, and thou haſt, marked me, and if thou haſt not cleanſed me from mine iniquity? If I be wicked
Verſ. 15. woe is to me. And the ſenſe is plain: If thou proceedeſt againſt me with theſe thy judgments, as againſt a wicked man for his wickedneſs, then woe is to me; I am in a ſinful and miſerable condition indeed: And hereby two things are intimated, Firſt, That the righteouſneſs of the beſt man, ſtandeth in this, that God hath cleanſed him from his ſinnes, juſtifying him by faith in Chriſt, and ſo forgiving them all unto him; and not in this, that he is without ſin, or that God marketh not his ſinnes. Secondly, He that Note. ſuffereth as an evil doer, a ſinner and ſo accounted before God, is in a moſt miſerable caſe, woe is unto him; for he both ſuffereth in preſent, and ſhall ſuffer in future for ever. And ſuch are all they, that murmure againſt God in their ſufferings; as if they were not worthy to be ſo dealt withall: But on the contrary ſide afflictions ſuffered, which have this effect to cleanſe from ſin, wherein a man hath formerly lived; or if he hath not ſo lived, yet to make him know, that he is not without ſin; and therefore to juſtifie God in all his doings towards him, bleſſed and happy is he; that we may take heed, that we bring not this woe upon us, either by living licentiouſly, or by ſetting our mouths or hearts againſt Heaven, whatſoever we ſuffer; or not being cleanſed hereby from our ſinnes, becauſe this is a certain ſign that God cleanſeth thee not, if by his rod thou be'st not cleanſed, to live in his feare for all times to come. If I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head, I am full of confuſion, therefore ſee thou mine affliction. The vulg. Saturatus afflictione, & miſeria Heb. Being ful of confuſion, and the ſight, of my miſery, or ſee my miſery, that is, See thou oh Lord: Here Job falleth again to complayning of his miſery, ſeeing this to be the caſe, that whether a man be wicked or righteous, he muſt ſuffer much miſery: The wicked by the woe, that ſhall further be to him, beſides his miſeries here: And the righteous by a bundance of miſeries in this life, for which he ſaith, that he will not lift up his head, that is, By being conceited well of himſelf, which were intolerable pride, and would be a meanes to make the Verſ. 16. Lord to increaſe them yet more: As followeth, V. 16. It increaſeth, thou

hunteſt

hunteſt me as a fierce Lion, and again: Thou ſheweſt thy ſelf marvelous upon me. The vulg. And for pride thou wilt take me as it were a Lion, and returning thou dyſt marvelouſly torment me. The word rendred increaſeth, or for pride is גאה, ſignifying either to be proud, or to increaſe: But becauſe it is a Verb and not a Noun, it is beſt rendred Increaſeth: And the next words ſhew how, viz. God perſuing him, as a fierce Lion, againſt whom what can a poor weak man do? The Sept. Whom many Greek writers follow, hath it: I am taken as a fierce Lion, whom the hunters perſue, with many woundes, till they have deſtroyed him: For the laſt words of the verſe, Hebr. It is, Thou ſhalt make thy ſelf wonderfull upon me. Whereby Gods various dealing towards him, is ſet forth, as indeed it was, in that after tearing him like a Lion with his judgments, he turned his captivity ſo wonderfully, as he did, chap. 42. and therefore the Vulg. miſtook the matter rendring it, mirabiliter me crucias. For in theſe words, Job ſheweth rather again, what a confidence he had, that God returning to him in mercy, would do wonderfully for him in the end; the word turning here, and the turning of his captivity, there ſo aptly anſwering the one to the other, to approve this expoſition. Verſ. 16.

Thou reneweſt thy witneſſes againſt me, and reneweſt thine indignation upon me; changes and war are againſt me. A great difference is here amongſt Expoſitors, who the witneſſes be, that he here ſpeaketh of: Some ſaying, That the Divil is meant, who firſt ſtood againſt Job, chap 1. and 2. Some theſe his friends, who came to viſit him, who came not without Gods providence to lay ſuch things to his charge as they did, and ſome his dolorous ſufferings from whence, as from witneſſes men gather, that he was wicked, becauſe that otherwiſe he ſhould not have had them laid upon him, for ſtupendous judgments declare oft times, as witneſſes, that the man whom they befall is ſome way notorious: Thus Auguſtine whom moſt follow, and indeed he ſpeaketh moſt probably: Yet the friends of Job would not be excluded from bearing a part in this Teſtimony, for they together with his judgments made war, as it were upon him, per λογομαχίαν, by word fighting with him, as immediatly followeth: And in ſpeaking thus he alludeth, to the manner in Courts; wherein the Judge examineth witneſſes againſt priſoners, and then proceedeth to denounce judgment, and to execute them accordingly, by the hands of his Executioners, who are as his Souldiers to ſlay them. Verſe 18. 19. are to the ſame effect, that he ſpake, chap. 3. 11. Thus, Job like a man almoſt diſtracted by ſufferings, ſometime turneth himſelfe one way and ſometime another; ſeeking by all meanes ſome eaſe to his greived mind. For the verſes following, to the end of the chapter, V. 20. 21. 22. There is nothing in them, but a repetition of ſpeeches before uttered by him, of the ſhortneſs of his daies, craving therefore to be ſpared a little before his going hence, and no more returning, into a Land of darkneſs, and confuſion; that is, The dark places of the Earth, where his body muſt lye and become wormes-meat and duſt, promiſcuouſly mingled with other bodies: for that he ſpeaketh only of his body, is declared, chap. 19. 26. Verſ. 17. Auguſt. Verſ. 20. 21. 22

CHAP. XI.

HEre Zophar the Naamathite, the other two friends of Job being anſwered, taketh his turn to vex him further by his ſpeeches alſo: Naamah was a City in the Land of Uz, eighteen miles from Jobs pyramis, ſaith Adricomius, from thence he was called the Naamathite, becauſe the Prince thereof: It ſignifyeth faire, and Zophar ſpeculator, a watcher: He firſt beginneth with a bitter exordium, V. 2. Should not a multitude of words be anſwered, and V. 3. Sould thy lyes make men hold their peace &c. V. 4. Verſ. 1. Adricomius. Verſ. 2. 3. 4.

Thou haſt ſaid, my doctrine is pure, I am clean in thine eyes. In which three verſes, he layeth threefold ſinnes to his charge, as Ferus noteth. Firſt, Prov. 29. Ferus. Note.

Vain multiplying of words, which is ſuch a ſin, that Salomon ſaith: Who ſo uſeth many words, there is more hope of a fool then of him. It implyeth ſelf-conceitedneſs, in regard of a mans own wiſdome; as if he alone could ſpeak to the purpoſe, and all others were bound in ſilence to heare him: This is to ſin with the tongue, and to be unruly herein, as is ſaid Jam. 3. And therefore by all men to be taken heed of, the greater prater being the moſt fool, contrary to which it is ſaid, That man is wiſe, that ſpeaketh few words.

Vir ſapit qui pauca loquitur.

But Job is unjuſtly accuſed for this, becauſe his words were not multiplyed out of an affection to ſpeake much, but out of his anguish and greife of ſpirit, for his long continued intolerable ſufferings, in which to utter many words, if they be true, and tend to the eaſing of his own mind, and the inſtruction of others, as Jobs did, are not vain or ſinful. Secondly he chargeth him with lyes, and blaſphemies againſt God, which is another moſt abominable ſin, as of which the Devil is the father; and of lyers it is ſaid: That they ſhall be ſhut out of the new Hieruſalem, with dogs and witches.

Ioh. 4. 48.

Revel. 22

Thirdly, With pride and arrogancy, for juſtifying of himſelf, becauſe he ſpake, as if he thought himſelf more hardly dealt withall, then he was worthy: For this is intolerable pride in any man, ſith whatſoever judgments God layeth upon the moſt juſt man that is, are laid upon him deſervedly, for ſomuch as he is not without ſin, as Job confeſſed of himſelf, both. chap. 7. and 10. Only it is to be underſtood, that although he be worthy in himſelf conſidered, yet being conſidered as faithfull, and ſo in Chriſt and Chriſt in him, he is not worthy of ſuch ſufferings: wherefore it is to be held, that they are not punishments of his ſinnes, ſo that it cannot hence be gathered, that he is a great ſinner and an hypocrite, but tryals of his faith and patience, working a far more ſurpaſſing weight of glory unto him. Zophar then was the lyer, and not Job, in any thing that he had ſpoken: But this is the condition of the beſt in this World; yea of Chriſt himſelf, to be thus evill ſpoken of by wicked detractors: And therefore no faithful perſon ought to be diſmaied at it, but comforted, according to that of our Lord.

Note.

2 Cor. 17.

Math. 5. 12.

Bleſſed are yee, when all men ſpeak all manner of evil of you falſly, great is your reward in Heaven, for ſo they perſecuted the Prophets that were before you: And Paul was called a babler.

Verſ. 5.

Oh! That God would ſpeak, and open his lips againſt thee.

Verſ. 6.

That he would ſhew thee the ſecrets of wiſdome; and that they are double to that which is: Know therefore that God exacteth leſs of thee, then thine iniquity deſerveth. Having charged him with the foule faults before ſpoken of: Now he inſinuateth another way into him, to perſwade him to change his minde, and to aſſent to him and his fellowes; and to confeſſe, that he was ſo great a ſinner under the vayl of hypocriſie, as his fellowes and he had charged him to be: And this is a notable cunning of wicked Hereticks to mention God, as approving of their errors, if by ſpeaking he would from Heaven declare himſelf plainly, that we may heed of thoſe that labour this way to work upon us, when by right reaſon they are able to evince nothing, which they ſay: The vulg. For theſe words, Double to that which is, hath Quod multiplex eſt lex ejus, Hebr. כפלים לתושיה doubles to the being, that is, manifold more, then is by thee apprehended: As is further intimated, V. 7 Canſt thou by ſearching finde out God? That is, in his waies; as if he had ſaid, no man can: And therefore as being ignorant of his doing, he ought to think that juſt which he doth, although he cannot tell, how it ſhould be: And how obſcured his waies are, and beyond mans capacity to comprehend, he further declareth, V. 8, 9. And therefore whatſoever he doth unto him, it were beſt for him to be ſilent: For to oppoſe his doings in word or deed, is moſt vain, V. 10. If a man knoweth not his own

Note.

Verſ. 7.

ſinnes

ſinnes, God knoweth them, and findeth him out to punish him. For vain man would be wiſe, although he be born like a wild Aſs colt. The vulg. He thinks himſelf to be born as a wild Aſs colt, Expounded very well by Gregory thus. As a wilde Aſs colt not uſed to the yoak, runneth up and down the large feilds and Woods at his pleaſure, and when he is weary lyeth down, and thus doth form day to day: So man by nature is licentious, running as his luſts cary him, to all manner of ſin; and giveth not over running till he is weary, he will not be held in by any reines, or kept to do the work he ſhould by any yoake, which the Lord by teaching ſeekes to put upon him: But againſt this Job is exhorted, V. 13. Many promiſes being propounded to move him, and who ſo will not, is threatned V. 20. Some great judgment or ſickneſs ſhall come upon him, to tame him; whereby he ſhall be made even like unto one dying for feare, and ready to give up the Ghoſt: As that feirce perſecutor Saul was delt with, when he poſted from one place to another, perſecuting the Church of Chriſt: But being ſmit down and terrifyed, he was calmefyed, and ſaid: Lord What wouldeſt thou have me to doe?

Verſ. 12. Gregory.

Act. 9.

Thus Gregory, and the reading followed by him, beſt giveth the ſenſe, although by the New Tranſlat. the words are beſt rendred, according to the Hebrew word: And this is a good admonition to all men, that are ſwayed by the corruption of their nature, although miſapplyed to this holy man Iob; let libertines then that will do what they luſt, and be bound by none of Gods bands, but break all them aſunder, think upon this, what a wilde and aſſe-like race they run; and what greivous judgments hange over their heades, therefore in this World to tame them, and if they be not ſo brought into better order, what greater judgments ſhall ſeiſe upon them for ever in the life to come, or rather the ſecond death.

Note.

To come now to the Exhortation made, to ſuch as are in the caſe aforeſaid, V. 13. If thou wilt prepare thy heart, ſtretch out thy hands unto him, &c. But all that he ſaith, in exhorting him to prayer, and propounding the bleſſings, that ſhould enſue hereupon, is but to the ſame effect, with that of Eliphaz, chap. 5. 8. 9. 10. &c. But Gregory following the Vulg. Lat. Thou haſt hardened thy heart, Tu firmaſti cor tuum, Expounds this verſe, as a continuation of his reprehenſion, but the word כון ſignifyeth firſt and cheifly to prepare, although it ſignifyeth to hold on ſtifly and ſtoutly alſo, and the conjunction אם is if, not but, as there it is rendred: So that he plainly cometh in theſe words, to inſtruct him, what is beſt in the caſe in which he was to be done, that he might come out of it, viz. To prepare his heart and to pray unto God: And withall, becauſe God heareth not ſinners, to put the iniquity in him far away by confeſſing it, and not ſuffering it to dwel in his Tabernacles; that is, renewing it any more: Four excellent things, as Ferus noteth, To be commended to all men, that it may be well with them, to get a ſanctifyed heart, to pray with ſtretched out hands, to confeſſe and be ſorry for their ſinnes, and to hate them ſo, as not to give them entertainment any more, or in their Tabernacles, that is, houſes, to tolerate ſin: And then he ſubjoyneth double the number of bleſſings that ſhall be upon him, that doth thus: Firſt Thou ſhalt lift up thy face without ſpot. Secondly, Be ſtedfaſt and not feare; without ſpot, none of thy leſſer ſinnes, which through humane fraielty thou falleſt into, being imputed unto thee, but perfect righteouſneſſe: And the feare of damnation and Gods wrath ſhall be taken away, there being now no wavering through unbeleiſe, as it is ſaid of Abraham: Where note, that the wicked, who through faith make themſelves ſure of Gods acceptation, notwithſtanding their going on in ſin, have no true faith indeed, but their ſtedfaſt beleeving is carnal preſumption, becauſe their beleeving followeth, upon the putting away of iniquity, as was aforeſaid, not only in themſelves, but their families alſo; they therefore that do ſuch things, and favour

Verſ. 13.

Verſ. 14. Note. Ferus.

Verſ. 5.

Rom. 4. Note.

favour them that do, are rather then faithfull, given over to a reprobate
Rom. 1. 29. ſenſe, which makes them yet without feare of death.
Verſ. 16. 3. Thou ſhalt forget thy miſery, or if not, remember it, but as waters that paſſe away. There ſhall be no ſenſe of ſorrow for bodily ſufferings, but being by faith look'd upon as tryals, and tokens of Gods love, there ſhall be more joy then ſorrow; and when thou art ſet free from them again, thou ſhalt
Rom. 5. 1. Hebr. 9. look upon them, but as Noah upon the Floud, when it was paſt, with thankfulneſſe to God, who hath brought thee out of ſo great dangers, offering ſacrifice therefore as he did.
Gen. 9.
Verſ. 17. 4. Thine age ſhall be clearer then the noon day, thou ſhalt ſhine forth as the morning.
Gregory. Hereupon Gregory, who upon the words before going, Like waters paſſed away, ſaith, that ſuch are all the miſeries of this life to the faithfull, whoſe hearts are already in heaven, they count them as already paſt, becauſe they are ſure even when they ſuffer, they are but as waters, ſoone flowing away, and after a while, no new ſupply of any ſuch ſhall come upon them any more. He I ſay, upon theſe ſaith, that although the faithfull ſervants of God look upon afflictions as waters paſſed away, yet they work ſomething upon them whilſt they ſuffer them, being made ſtiffe, as it were, as a man lying in Winter, or in the night in the cold water. Therefore to comfort here-againſt, it is further added, Thine age ſhall be clearer then the noon day, &c. That is, as after the night, the ſhining light of the Sun ſoon followeth, at the leaſt at noon day, which is towards the evening, and after the next night followeth another bright ſhining morning: ſo after the night of affliction ſhall come, although it be ſome time long firſt, the light of conſolation: and as miſeries come on again, more timely comfort, till that bright ſhining morning ſhall come at the laſt, after which it ſhall be all day, and no night more for ever.
Verſ. 18. 5. Thou ſhalt be ſecure becauſe there is hope, thou ſhalt dig about thee, and take thy reſt in ſafety. Vulg. Thou ſhalt have confidence, hope being ſet before thee. That is, ſaith the ſame Gregory, by temptations thy confidence ſhall be increaſed in hope of greater joy to come; for the more a man ſuffereth that is in Gods favour, the greater ſhall be his reward in the world to come, accor-
Matth. 5. 12. ding to that of our Lord; Great is your reward in heaven. And the Pſalmiſt
Pſal. 126. ſetteth forth the joy to come after ſorrow, ſaying, They that goe forth weeping, and ſow their ſeed, ſhall come rejoycing, and bring their ſheaves with them. But what is meant by ſaying, Thou ſhalt dig about thee, and then reſt in ſafety? Either being reſolved to dye, and that in dying, a Crown ſhall be attained,
2 Tim. 4. 8. as Paul ſaith, Now remaineth the crown of righteouſneſſe, &c. Thou art already digged into the ground, as it were, and ſo ſleepeſt ſecurely in reſpect of bodily dangers; or elſe thou ſhalt dig and reſt ſecurely, is, as much as if he had ſaid, as they that dig caſt out the earth in the inner parts of the earth: ſo thou digging by labouring about it to expell the love of earthly things and worldly cares out of thy mind, having once done this, ſhalt reſt ſecurely, there being nothing to trouble or wake thee, as there is in the minds of the worldly minded, eſpecially if they be in danger of ſuſteining any great loſſe. For the former of theſe Expoſitions, it is made upon the Vulg. rendring the words thus, Defeſſus dormies ſecure: The Heb. word חפרתה ſignifieth alſo, Junius. thou haſt digged, or exploraſti, thou haſt tryed. Junius renders it, exploratus es, Thou art tryed. And if we take it ſo, the ſenſe will be plain, doing the things before ſpoken of, thou ſhalt have ſure confidence in God, which ſhall not deceive thee, thou art found to be right, or thou haſt tryed; thou art as ſure that it ſhall be thus with thee, as if thou hadſt already found it by ex-
Cajetan. perience. Divers other Expoſitions are brought, 1. Cajetan reading it, Thou ſhalt dig, that is, thy ſervants ſhall work abroad in the fields, digging, or otherwiſe labouring without being in danger of violence by enemies coming upon them.

2. Eugubinus,

2. Engubinus, Thou shalt dig, as it were, by searching to find out how to do all things for the best, and shalt in all prosper. Engub.

3. Dyonisius, and Thomas Aquinas, When thou art laid in the ground, being dead, thou shalt by none be disturbed. Dyonis. Tho: Aquinas.

4. Tygur. interpretation, Thou shalt be secure, as they that lye within trenches made round about them. Tygur.

5. Rabby David: Thou shalt dig onely about thy City, and not need to make any wals about it for thy security. R. David. If it be rendred by digging, that of the Tygurine Interpreters is to be preferred for the literall sense, and that of Gregory is a good Allegory; but I take it to be best to render it by exploration or tryall, as the sense hath been given before. Hitherto five great blessings, and this fifth may be distinguished into three.

1. Thou shalt be confident. 2. Thou hast tryed, or digged. 3. Thou shalt rest in safety, and when thou lyest down, none shall make thee afraid. So that here are seven benefits. 6. 7. Vers. 19.

8. Many shall make suite to thee. In such high and honourable place shalt thou be, that many others shall seek unto thee to have thy countenance and favour. And these eight may be reduced all to four, according to the foure vertues before going: 1. A good name, and unblemished. 2. Secure and safe living, to which that of vers. 18. and 19. may be also referred. 3. For sufferings, to look upon them as shortly past and gone. 4. Exceeding great comfort, as the noon day light shining most brightly, and after this a morning of endlesse comfort.

But the eyes of the wicked shall faile, and they shall not escape, but their hope shall be as of one giving up the ghost. Vers. 20. That is, their light and comfort shall be darknesse and misery, and their dangers shall be great, and take effect against them: and if they have any hope to be delivered, it shall be but like the hope of a dying man, who although he hopeth that he shall live, yet hee shall surely dye: So what hope soever such have, when they are ready to depart, of living eternally, it shall be frustrated. The Vulg. hath for the last words, Their hope is an abomination to the soule. Heb. מפח נפש properly signifying, ex sufflatio animæ, the breathing out of the soule, or the giving up of the ghost, as in the N. Tr. Gregory by the eyes understandeth the intention of the mind, according to which our Lord saith, The light of the body is the eye. Gregory. And what is the intention of the wicked worldlings, but to get worldly things in abundance, and to enjoy them alwayes? but of this he shall be disappointed, although here for a time he hath plenty, and denyeth nothing that is pleasant to himselfe, against poverty he getteth riches, against contempt he getteth honours, against sadnesse, sports and delights, against appetite to his meate failing, variety of dainties, for all things he findeth a refuge. But whilst he is thus doing, this life runneth away, and death cometh, and then he hath no refuge more against the wrathfull countenance of the strict Judge, there he is alone before the Judg to have the sentence of everlasting damnation denounced against him: and where is his hope now? it utterly faileth, and his soule perisheth for ever. Then upon the sudden pleasure is withdrawn, the sin run into for pleasures sake remaineth, and they learn by perishing miserably that they held perishing things; yet while they lived corporally, they ceased not to seek those hurtfull things, or these things that should do them so much hurt in the end. Note. Tunc voluptas subtrahitur, voluptatis causa culpa servatur, et repente periundo discunt; quod pertura quæsierunt, &c.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

Zophar having ſpoken, as he thought, moſt wiſely, and as one able to inſtruct Job, now he anſwereth him by deriding him and his fellows for their ſelfe-conceitednesſe, when as they had ſpoken nothing, but what he knew very well before, as he ſheweth by ſpeaking much more, in ſetting forth the power and wiſdome of God, then he had done. For his deriding of them V. 2.

Verſ. 2. No doubt but yee are the people, and Wiſdome ſhall abide with you. It is commonly reproved in Scripture, as a great ſinn, to deride and to deſpiſe others, as in Iſhmaell mocking at Iſaack, Michal at David, the Children of Bethel at Eliſha, and Sennacherib at Hezekiah, The Jews at Chriſt upon the Croſs, and at his Apoſtles, Act. 2. and many others: But the mocking of Job was not ſuch, but as that of Elijah mocking at Baals prophets, and of Michaiah at Ahab, ſaying, Go up to Ramoth Gilead, and proſper, and of Iſay at Idolaters to make them aſhamed of their ſinns, and repent: ſo Job, that theſe men inſtead of glorying in their wiſdome wherein they thought they excelled much, aſhamed that they had no more wiſdome to decline ſo groſs an error, as wherin they were held touching him, judging him wicked for his bodily ſufferings and the ſpeeches that he uſed to defend his innocency againſt them; Deſpiſers then, and mockers in generall, are not hereby juſtified but only the godly-wiſe that do it out of zeale for Gods glory and againſt ſinn, and upon juſt cauſe, that they, who do, or ſpeake evill, may being thus made aſhamed, repent: As for other mockers at piety in any they are as Sennacherib, whom Eſaiah challenged ſaying, whom haſt thou deſpiſed or mocked, and therfore threatneth him with curbing and deſtruction; or at miſery in any of Gods people, as the Babilonians and Edomites are ſayd to have done, and therefore they are pronounced bleſſed that ſhall pay them with their own coyne, deſtroying them and aggravating their miſery with the greateſt cruelty. For the pride of theſe men and theire ſelfe-conceitednesſe, Gregory ſaith well, that it put them on to teach one more learned then themſelves, and they were like men lighting upon a veſſell full of liquor, poure in more, which becauſe it is full already, is all loſt; for ſuch ſpeake not that others hearing them may learn of them, but as a man that hath plenty of thoſe worldly things giveth to ſuch as have no want, that they may bee thought greatly to abound, & ſo be more magnified, ſo theſe men to purchaſe to themſelves the reputation of the teachers of Job, beſtow largely upon him that of which hee was full already. Pride then makes men teach thoſe that are able to teach them, but hereof they ſhall reape nothing but ſhame although for a time they pleaſe themſelves by thus their own magnifying; therefore all who are humble, if they know more then others, teach ſuch as know leſſe, but not preſume to take upon them over the more learned, but bee ſilent before them ſitting to heare and learne yet more of them. This becauſe proud hereticks forget, they commonly ſet themſelves to detract from the Orthodoxe, as ignorant, or ſuperſtitious, that they might be counted the only men of knowledg & their errours imbraced: but they are like theſe falſe friends of Job, and falſe prophet of Baal, Zedekiah, that inſulted over the true prophet Michaiah, and ſhal be judged accordingly, as hee was, and theſe men had a ſharp check from God in the end, ſo ſhal they if comming to themſelves they make ſuch their friendes againe as they have calumniated, otherwiſe their rebuke will be farr worſe, and unexpiable even by Jobs ſacrificing for them; For Jobs ſaying, that he had wiſdome as well as they, herein he ſhewed no pride, for that he made himſelfe not ſuperiour, but equal to them, not to magnifie himſelfe, but to pull downe their pride.

Note. Eſa. 38. Pſ. 137

Gregory. Note.

1 Kin. 22. 24.

I am

I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he anſwereth me: The juſt upright man is laughed to ſcorn. The vulg. He that is derided of his friend as I, ſhall call upon God, and he will heare him: The ſimplicity of the juſt is derided. Hebr. Derided of his neighbour, I am calling upon God. To which N. Tran. cometh nereſt, but only in the laſt words. For he hea-eth me, It is, Heareth him. But both this and the vulg. come to one; Job compareth himſelfe to a man derided, who careth not for their ſpeeches, that deride him, but turneth him to God; as with whom innocency and uprightneſſe is regarded, whereas by ſuch it is mocked at, when a man is in miſery, and brought moſt low. Verſ. 4.

He that is ready to ſlip with his feet, is like a Lamp deſpiſed by them that live at eaſe. The vulg, A lamp deſpiſed in the thoughts of the rich, prepared for an appointed time. and Hebr. word for word the ſame, but only for rich שאנן quiet, free from trouble, injoying proſperity, as they that have and hold their wealth, not being robbed thereof do: But the word quiet or at eaſe, beſt expreſſeth the meaning, becauſe this implyeth both wealth and health, which Jobs friends had, but he now wanted: And whereas N. Tran. hath it. He that is ready to ſlip with his foot, is a deſpiſed lamp. There is no word in the verſe more but רגל foot, therefore if it be rendred accordingly, no more can be made of it but thus, A lamp deſpiſed in the thoughts of the quiet, ſet up for a time, a foot. Of which words what elſe can be the meaning, if we look back to V. 4. but this? the righteous man ſhining in virtue, and eſteemed of accordingly, is now deſpiſed as a lamp that is out; and accounted not as an head and honourable, for his virtue any more: But as a foot deſpiſable, his wealth being gone, and his body ſoare ſmitten, as Jobs was; but they be blind worldlings, that think thus of him, who meaſure men, and eſtimate them only according to their preſent worldly poſſeſſions. Verſ. 5.

Gregory ſaith, That the poor juſt man, is here compared to a Lamp extinct. Becauſe he ſhineth inwardly, by the virtue of an upright heart, but outwardly is, as it were extinct, becauſe there is nothing outward to commend him, No glorious apparel, no goodly houſes, no wealth, coſtly fare, or attendans as the rich have: And therefore think vilely of ſuch, as have not about them, as they have: But ſuch a Lamp he ſaith, is ſet for an appoynted time, That is, the day of Judgment, when he ſhall ſhine moſt brightly, even as the Sun, as the Lord ſpeaketh: And ſit upon a Throne with him as a Judge, the rich wicked, that have ſhined in Worldly glory for a little time, having all their glory put out for ever, and thruſt into utter darkneſſe. Gregor.

The tabernacles of robbers proſper, and they that provoke God are ſecure, into whoſe hand God bringeth abundantly. Here Job paſſeth from ſpeaking of Lamps ſhining by virtue to dark and black Soules, notorious for oppreſſions and robberies: But ſith they provoke God, how is it that they are full, and how is God ſaid to bring in abundantly into their hands: Sol. He bringeth not this abundance in, as a bleſſing to them, but in way of judgment againſt others, from whom their goods be taken: Yet ſometimes they have the better of it, who are robbed, and the robbers the worſer, becauſe the ſinnes of theſe are thus puniſhed, but the ſinnes of thoſe increaſed, theſe being ſtript of their worldly goods, having occaſion given them the more to diſtruſt worldly things, and to lift their hearts up to Heaven to get them a treaſure there: But thoſe by their prevayling, being hardned to go on in their ſinnes, till far greater judgments befal them: A conſideration truly for all oppreſſors, that be in place and authority, for they are no better then Theeves and Robers, and ſo they are called by the Prophet, ſaying: Thy Princes are companions of Theeves. It is no arguing, God bringeth theſe into our hands, therefore he approveth of our doings; no no: For ſo he doth into the hands of robbers, who are ſaid yet to provoke him. Verſ. 6. Eſa. 1. 23. Note.

But

Verſ. 9. But ask now the Beaſts, and they ſhall teach thee: And the fowles of the Aire and they ſhall tell thee, &c. Job having hetherto anſwered to the nip given him by Zophar, for his many words, as though he only were wiſe, and ſomething to the common argument againſt him, to prove him a wicked man; becauſe he ſuffered ſuch grievous things: Now he proceedeth to ſpeak to that, wherein he thought to ſhew himſelf moſt wiſe; that is: In his diſcourſe about the power aud wiſdome of God: And herein he ſo vilifyeth him, as if in ſpeaking hereof, he had ſhewed no more wiſdome, then the dumb Beaſt hath, or the Birds of the Aire, or the Earth, or Fiſhes, becauſe all theſe in their ſeveral ſhapes, and formes, repreſenting themſelves unto us, do in effect tell us: That God by his almighty power and wiſdome, made them, and therefore that his power is ſo great, as Zophar ſaid. For whence had they their beings? for they made not themſelves, therefore the very ſight of them, is a ſilent teaching of this almighty power.

Verſ. 11. Doth not the eare try words? And the mouth taſt his meat? Here Job proceedeth further in vilifying that which Zophar had ſaid, for although he knew how to ſpeak things touching God, that were right; becauſe he had heard thus much of him, whereby he had this knowledge, ſwimming as it were in his brain, but he taſted it not with the palate of his Soule; becauſe he made no good uſe hereof, to love and feare God, as he ought, and as they that are taught of God do: And the ſame is the caſe of all that heare the words of God, but are not hereby ſanctified; they heare of good and nourishing meat, but they taſt it not, although they can ſpeak of it to others; but ſuch as heare and lay to heart what they heare, to be reformed there after, they heare with their eares and taſt, and feed hereupon with the mouth of the ſoule, to their everlaſting comfort. Chryſoſt and Olympiod. give this for the ſenſe, the eare by hearing words, can as eaſily know all that thou haſt ſaid, as the mouth by taſting meat, what is the taſt thereof: and therefore little is the underſtanding of him, that knoweth to ſpeak thus: Some will have this ſpoken of God, as if he had meant; that God could much more eaſily heare, and taſt that which is ſpoken, to reject the evil and approve the good, then the eare of man, words ſpoken in his hearing, and his mouth taſt his meat. For men that are ancient, have by long experience attained to ſuch wiſdome, as followeth, V. 12. that they can diſcern other men by their ſpeeches: Much more God then can do it, who hath made the eare, and giveth men wiſdome, for which he addeth by way of aplication, With him is wiſdome and ſtrength, V. 13. Let the Reader follow which he pleaſeth: For my part I prefer that of Gregory, as moſt uſeful, and an expoſition well agreeing with the words: And for the next words, V. 12. He maketh them thus to cohere, this taſt in ſuch ſpiritual food is not ſufficiently confirmed to be in a man, when he hath for a little time thus reliſhed it, but when as he hath gone on ſo to do, till his old age, then he hath this wiſdome and true underſtanding indeed: But leaſt it ſhould be thought, that hereby he averred wiſdome to be in all the ancient, which is not; for ſome ſuch are ſtill as children for wiſdome, He addeth, V. 13. With him is wiſdome and ſtrength, He hath counſel and underſtanding. That is, God who is the ancient of daies, wherein he both confirmeth that which was ſpoken before by Zophar, and wherein he had ſpoken a little, he ſpeaketh much more, and more profoundly to ſhew his ſhallowneſſe, and how unadviſedly through his pride he had been, to undertake to teach him. Gregory by him in this verſe, underſtandeth the Son of God: From hence to the end of the chap. The mighty acts of God are ſet forth, whereby his power and wiſdome are proved to be infinite, which Zophar had only ſpoken of without proving.

Verſ. 14. He breaketh down and cannot be built up again, he ſhutteth up a man, and there can be no opening. Gregory here by breaking down, underſtands deſtroying everlaſtingly, and to this end, the breaking down of Gods Image in

Gregor.

Note.

Chryſoſt. Olympiod.

Gregory.

Gregory.

in a man, which is in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe: Now God doth not this any other way, but by leaving a wicked man to himſelf, not giving him grace: For to ſuch a man, no Preacher can do any thing to build him up, every mouth being dumbe, that ſpeaketh to him, whoſe eares God openeth not: That is, the eares of his heart; he alſo ſhutteth up a man as it were in Priſon; when he leaveth him to the accuſation and condemnation of his own evil conſcience, wherein the wicked lye, as it were, impriſoned, till that being brought forth at the laſt day: They be by the juſt Judge condemned and ſent into the everlaſting flames of Hell fire; which ſhould make every man to have a great care to keep a clear conſcience towards God and men: As the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that he did, that he may never be thus ſhut up, or broken down; for then woe will be unto him, and they are none but men of an evil conſcience, that are thus ſerved: As Pharoah and Judas, whoſe conſcience condemned and forced him, to do execution upon himſelf, and ſo he ſinned more then he had done before, in betraying his Lord: And the like may be ſaid of Eſau, having ſpoken ſo contemptuouſly of his birth-right, he was ſhut up from coming in for the bleſſing, even againſt his Fathers will; and when he came, he could not be opened, that he might receive it, although he ſought it with ſtrong cries and bitter. Ferus going according to the later, expoundeth it of works ſet up by men, but by God broken down, as the Tower of Babel and the Wals of Jericho: and of Babilon afterwards ruined by Cyrus: And the ſhutting up of man, of his giving him into the enemies hands, to be taken and carried away captive and impriſoned, as the Jews were by the Caldees; and Manaſſeth that moſt wicked King: And as Ferus ſo Eugubin. Tilloman, &c. But although it be thus underſtood according to the letters, any man may eaſily give the ſenſe of it ſo without an interpreter. Gregory therefore who findeth more herein for further inſtruction and edification, is not to be ſlighted, but much to be eſteemed of, for his opening greater myſteries that ly hid herein.

Note.

Heb. 12. 16.
Ferus.

He withholdeth the waters, and they dry up; he ſendeth them out, and they overturn the Earth. Here is another argument of his infinite power, when he withholdeth rain, a great drought is cauſed, and when rain falleth in abundance, which is alſo at his will, a floud is made, which galleth and waſheth away the earth in many places; and ſometime the floud was ſo great, that all buildings erected out of the earth, were overturned hereby and drowned, as in the time of Noah. But of this alſo, Gregory makes an allegory; ſaying, The waters here ſet forth, either the word preached, or the ſpirit, which is often ſet forth hereby: If there be no teaching, as there is not, when God taketh it away for ſin: Or if there be teaching, and not the ſpirit working herewith, men that came out of the earth, dry and wither in grace; but contrariwiſe theſe waters being made to flow, the Earth is overturned, that is: Earth-lives in mens minds, Heaven-lives of mind ſucceeding: According to which our Lord ſayth. That which is born of the earth is earthly, that which is born of the ſpirit is heavenly. Therefore pray we againſt this judgment of a famine, of hearing the word of God, of which Amos ſpeaketh, and for the water of the ſpirit, that it may come together with this heavenly dew falling, as Moſes calleth his doctrine, ſaying, My doctrine ſhall drop as the rain, and my ſpeech diſtil as the dew.

Verſ. 15.

Gregory.

Ioh. 3.
Note.
Amos 8.

The deceived and the deceiver are his. The vulg. He knoweth the deceiver and the deceived. But Hebr. It is as hath been ſayd, and the meaning is, that they are both in his hands, the deceiver to have revenge taken upon him, and the deceived, who revengeth not himſelfe, to have his cauſe righted; ſo it is threatned, 1 Theſ. 4. 6. And this argueth both the wiſdome and power of God ſpoken of, in the beginning of the verſe, his wiſdome to finde out the deceiver, how cunningly and cloſely ſoever he goeth to work, as hee did Achan, Gehezi, and Annanias, and his power to be revenged upon ſuch, which ſhould both terrifie deceivers, and comfort the deceived and wronged in any matter, and make them patiently to commit the wrong to God, and not to revenge themſelves, which to do were to take their deceivers out of Gods hands, and to put themſelves in to be puniſhed for this their precipitant haſt.

Deut. 32. 2.
Verſ. 16.

Verſ. 17. Hee leadeth Counſellours away ſpoiled, and maketh Judges fooles. That is, his wiſdome is ſo great, that Counſellours and Judges, who be the wiſeſt men, are but fools in compariſon of him, yea when they thinke to doe wiſely, he infatuateth them, and they do fooliſhly, as men ſpoiled of their greateſt treaſure, their wiſdome, as Achitaphells wiſdome was turned into fooliſhneſſe. Note. A warning to Judges and Counſellors not to take ill cauſes in hand, to juſtifie them for a reward, as many do, thus deceiving him that hath a good cauſe by their cunning, of his right, it is juſt with God, when they improve their wits to ſo evill an end, to infatuate their cauſes, and to make them as deſpicable as before they were honourable Verſ. 18. He looſeth the bond of Kings, and girdeth their loines with a girdle, V. 19.

Verſ. 19. He leadeth Princes away ſpoiled, &c. The vulg Contrariwiſe he looſeth the girdle of Princes and girdeth their loines with a rope. But the word אזור which is put laſt, ſignifieth a girdle, and מ׳סו put firſt, a girdle or bond, Vinculum, and therefore it is meant that ſometime he looſeth the bonds, into which Princes are brought, and advanceth them again to Kingly dignity, the enſigne whereof was of old, a pretious girdle, as it is at this day a ſigne of honour, ſo Manaſſeth was dealt by when hee repented; And Ieremiah having been long in priſon, in the time of the raign of Evilmerodach, was again honoured and ſet up as a King: But as hee doth this ſometime, ſo on the other ſide, he ſometimes giveth Princes and moſt mighty men into the hands of their enemies, to be ſpoiled and abuſed, as Sampſon was.

Verſ. 20. He removeth away the ſpeech of the truſty, and taketh away the underſtanding of the aged. Here by the ſpeech of the truſty, by Vulg. rendred Veracium: of true ſpeakers, ſome underſtand the comfortable promiſes made by the Prophets, which are removed; for when no comfort is by them ſpoken any more but all terrible things for the ſinnes of them to whom they ſpake good formerly. Some, the teaching of men wiſe and learned, and formerly makeing conſcience to teach nothing but the truth; but being drawn by men more then by God, and by the feare or favour of them, they have this faculty of ſpeaking the truth taken away from them, & now it's common with them, for truths, to utter lies, as it was with the Scribes and Phariſees, whom our Lord often diſgraceth, by calling them fools and blind for their foolish teaching. Matth. 23. And ſuch are Popish Prieſts, who formerly were Miniſters of Chriſt; but to pleaſe the Pope, or for fear of him, they now and long have taught lying legends and fables for Gods word, which only is truth. Note. And even among our ſelves in theſe dayes, ſome are greatly degenerated, who well performed the office of Evangeliſts before, but now worſe then Balaam, ſpeak other words for a reward, then God putteth into their mouths, for which they may juſtly feare to periſh more then he did, and undergoe the ignomy of the name of foolish Prophets, although they think that herein they doe moſt wiſely, getting by this means countenance and preferment, which others that will not be changed from Truth-ſpeakers, want, yea meet with hard meaſure although there be nothing elſe againſt them.

Verſ. 21. He poureth out contempt upon Princes, &c. The Vulg. in theſe words agreeing, for the next have words divers from the Heb. and New Tr. which are, And weakneth the ſtrength of the mighty. But in vulg. Releiveth them that are oppreſſed. But this is thus ſalved by the Jeſuite, it is thus rendred by the Sept. and ſo beſt anſwereth, as oppoſite to the firſt clauſe, and it is to the ſame effect, The weakning of the mighty, that oppreſſed others, being the relieving of the oppreſſed. Then for his wiſdome he ſaith, He diſcovereth darke things, Verſ. 22. And for his power, He inlargeth the nations, and ſtreightneth them, Verſ. 23.

Anp

And he taketh away the heart of the chiefe of the people, and maketh to wander in the wilderneſſe where there is no way. That is, as he hath all wiſdome, ſo when he pleaſeth, he maketh Kings and Judges fooles, having in their troubles no heart to underſtand what to do, or which way to take for the beſt, ſo that they wander, as it were in a wilderneſſe, in their conſultations, finding no way out, although they groap for it by beating their baines about it, but all in vain. Verſ. 24. Verſ. 25.

CHAP. XIII.

I Have ſeen all this. Here Job concluding firſt his diſcourſe touching God, of whom he ſaw and knew as much and more then they who undertooke to teach him, and therefore that he was not inferiour to them in knowledg, proceedeth after his approving what Zophar and the other two had ſaid rightly, to impeach Zophar for lying, as he had dealt before with him, Chap. 11. 3. For which as thinking them unworthy to be ſpoken to any more, he appealeth to God, ſaying, I would ſpeak to the Almighty, and I deſire to reaſon with God, but yee are forgers of lyes, Phyſitians of no value. Whereas Job ſaith, ver. 1. Mine eye hath ſeen all this, and mine eare hath heard and underſtood it: Gregory well noteth, that a man ſeeth with his eyes, and heareth with his eares indeed, when he underſtandeth; for to heare, or ſee, and not to underſtand, is not to heare or ſee, as alſo may be gathered from that of our Lord, Leſt they ſhould ſee with their eyes, heare with their eares, and not underſtand with their hearts. But who ſo by ſeeing and hearing cometh to underſtand not ſome things, but all things concerning God and his doings, his wiſdome and power which are to be taught unto others, is a Prophet. Others are but as Pharaoh, who ſaw the leane and fat Kine in his dream, portending things to come, but he underſtood them not. Or as Belſhazzar, who ſaw the writing of the hand upon the wall, but underſtood it not. Yea, the people of theſe times herein come ſhort of Pharaoh; for he hearing his dream interpreted, underſtood the will of God, and made proviſion accordingly, to preſerve his people and himſelf, when the Famine ſhould come: but they upon hearing, underſtand not, to take any courſe whereby to be ſaved from deſtruction to come, no not when all things are expounded and laid open unto them againe and againe many times. And the modeſty of Job is herein again to be noted, in that ſtill he counteth not himſelfe for his knowledge above them, but only ſaid, he was not inferiour to them: Whence wee may gather, that ſaving knowledge puffeth not up; but he that is indued with this, is ſtill humble, not making himſelf ſuperiour, but equall to thoſe that have underſtanding alſo, and do utter it for the inſtruction of others. Verſ. 1. 2. Verſ. 3. Gregor. Matth. 13. 11. 12. Note. Note.

For his ſpeaking to God, Verſ. 3. that was meant by prayer, in all humility made unto him, and his reaſoning with God, his coming, as it were, into Judgment upon the teſtimony of his good conſcience, cauſing boldneſſe and confidence; for they that humble themſelves in prayer, confeſſing their ſins, and ſorrowing for them, and heartily turning from them, are bidden by God, Come and let us reaſon together, if your ſinnes were as Crimſon, &c. For this, and not otherwiſe may we ſpeak unto, and reaſon with him. Verſ. 3. Iſa. 1. 16. 17. 18.

For Zophars lying, verſ. 4. the Vulg. renders it, Deſiring firſt to ſhew you to be forgers of lyes, and embracers of perverſe opinions: And the word רפא here uſed ſignifieth metaphorically Inſtaurare, as properly to heal: But if it goeth according to the metaphoricall ſignification, it muſt be rendered, Reſtorers, or builders of vanity are yee all. Whereupon Gregory ſaith, Heretiques typified by theſe are called builders; becauſe as builders build with ſtones, ſo they their errour with deceitfull words. Verſ. 4.

O that yee would altogether hold your peace, and it ſhall be your wiſdome. For Verſ. 5.

Prov. 17. ſo it is ſaid, A foole when he holdeth his peace ſeemeth to be wiſe. As when the door is ſhut, it cannot be ſeen what is within the houſe: ſo the mouth being ſhut by ſilence, the folly that is within lyeth hid; but being opened it cometh in view, and a man is ſeen what he is.

Verſ. 6. Heare now my reaſonings, hearken to the pleadings of my lips. The Vulg. Audite meas correptiones, ad judicium labiorum meorum attendite, and the Heb. will beare either reading. Gregory following the Vulg. noteth that hee ſpeaketh firſt of correption or reproof, and then of judgment, becauſe reproof muſt firſt be heard of a mans folly, and then he is fitted to heare that whereby he may be further edified in knowledg and grace: But Job ſeemeth in theſe words to reflect upon his former, ver. 3. of ſpeaking to God, and reaſoning, or coming in way of pleading in the Court of judgment before him.

Verſ. 7. Will yee ſpeak wickedly for God, and talk deceitfully for him? Will ye accept his perſon? Will yee contend for God? Becauſe Zophar had wished Chap. 11. 5. that God would ſpeak, as not doubting, but if he would, he would be againſt Job as well as they: Now Job reproveth him therefore, and the reſt, as men, that herein ſpeak wickedly, and deceitfully, pretending zeale towards God, as if by ſomething ſpoken by Job before, it had been derogated from his juſtice in Jobs juſtifying of himſelf: For this was in them a wickednesſe, and a very lye, as may appear by Jobs ingenuous confeſſing himſelf to be a ſinner, in ſaying, Will he accept his perſon? He meaneth, in favour and reſpect born to him: Will ye utter things untrue? as they that are to ſpeak betwixt a Judg and another poor man, for the reſpect that they beare to the Judges perſon, will ſpeak untruly on his ſide. But if he be a juſt Judg, he abhorreth their falſe teſtimony and ſtandeth for him: So, and much more Almighty God deteſteth thoſe that will ſpeak any thing untruly againſt the meaneſt of his ſervants, although they conceive that they ſpeak ſo for his glory, for he needeth not, neither will he allow of mens lying for him. Wherefore the inventers of lying legends to promote piety towards the Saints departed, although they thought that this was by conſequence piety towards God, were employed in a wicked work, when they ſet themſelves to write theſe things.

Verſ. 9. Is it good that he ſhould ſearch you out? and as one man mocketh another, do yee ſo mocke him? Vulg. Will it pleaſe him from whom nothing can lye hid? or will he be deceived by your frauds, &c? Bus N. Tr. is here word for word, according to Heb. Is it good that he ſearch you out? For the next words הֲתֹתֵל ſignifyeth either mocking or deceiving; and the meaning is, will it be for the beſt for you to have God ſpeak, as yee wiſhed; If he ſhould, he would certainly find you but to be ſuch, as I have ſaid: And although yee may by your colourable ſpeeches deceive other men, and make them to think me wicked for ſuffering ſo great things, yet yee cannot deceive God, who well knoweth you, and me, and all men, and when he cometh to lay you open, will be ready to reprove in ſtead of approving you in that which yee have ſaid. And that this is his meaning, the next words ſhew.

Verſ. 10. He will ſurely reprove you, if yee ſecretly accept of perſons. That is, of his perſon, as the Vulg. rendereth it, and as it was ſpoken of accepting his perſon before. The word in ſecret is inſerted to ſhew, that in their judging of him, they went upon a matter that was ſecret and hidden from them, that is, ſinne in him, for which they judged him to be thus puniſhed, when as they knew no ſuch ſin in him: For this he ſaith, as it were by way of prophecying, that God would reprove them, for ſo he did, Ch. 42.

Verſ. 11. Gregory. Shall not his excellency make you afraid, and his dread fall upon you? Your remembrances are like unto aſhes, &c. Juſt men ſaith Gregory, fear God, that when he ſmiteth, they may feel him quiet; but the wicked who fear him not, ſhall be troubled, and reproved, when he judgeth. And this is that which Job here ſaith, yee deſire to heare him ſpeak; but when he doth, it will be to the ſtriking of ſuch a terrour into you, that ye ſhall not be able to indure.

Your

Your remembrances are like aſhes: That is, yee may deviſe by ſome meanes or other, and ſeek to continue your memories; but when ye have done what yee can for this end, it is but as if ye ſhould make an heap of ashes for a memoriall, which how ſoon doth the wind blow away? For men have but clay bodies, and their life being gone, where is the remembrance of them, that is, of the wicked, but the Juſt by looking at God only in all their doings, fixe therefore their remembrance in heaven, and ſo in eternity, according to which it is ſaid, The righteous ſhall be had in everlaſting remembrance. Verſ. 12.

Hold your peace, Let me alone, that I may ſpeake, and come of it what will. The vulg. I will ſpeak what my mind ſhall ſuggeſt unto me. Whereupon Gregory ſaith, that he prepareth them to heare the myſticall things, which he was further about to ſpeak, as followeth, Verſ. 14. as not coming from fleſh and blood, but from the ſpirit within him: Heb. it is, I will ſpeake, and let any thing paſſe, or any thing ſhall paſſe over me: That is, according to other Expoſitors, whatſoever I ſuffer. But becauſe this is the voyce of a deſperate man, ſuch as Job never was, we may render it, What ſhall paſſe upon me? That is, whereas I have threatned you for your lyes, that reproof and terrour ſhall paſſe upon you, what ſhall paſſe upon me I fear not, for I plead before him that knoweth me better then you do, and knoweth me to be innocent in reſpect of that, which ye lay to my charge. Verſ. 13. Gregory.

Why doe I take my fleſh in my teeth, and put my life in my hand? Vulg. Why do I tear my fleſh with my teeth, and carry my life in my hands? By Gregory expounded thus: Why doe I inwardly take into conſideration what is fleſhly in me, and macerate my ſelfe with great ſorrow therefore, as a man that teareth his fleſh with his teeth, and by the works of my hands ſhew what my heart within me is, if all this be of no force with you to prevent your raſh judging of me. Some think, that this is ſpoken, as if hee had ſaid, What, do yee think me deſperate, that I ſhould lay violent hands upon my ſelf, by tearing with my teeth my fleſh? or with my owne hands making my life away? Some, what great ſinne have I committed, that I am in this miſerable caſe, as a man torn, and at the pang of death by his own meanes? I reſt in the ſecond for a literall ſenſe, as to which the words following, V. 15. do beſt agree, and in the firſt for a myſticall: And then note, that he is not like Iob, that for any miſery teareth, or doth violence to his own life, as it argued a great faith in Job expreſſed, Verſ. 15. So doing contrariwiſe, no faith, but unbelief, and conſequently damnation for evermore. Verſ. 14. Gregory. Note.

Although he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him, but I will maintaine mine own wayes before him. Verſ. 15.

Here is patience indeed in greateſt adverſity to truſt in God; which in proſperity no man knoweth whether he doth or no, at the leaſt he hath not yet proved it; for whilſt God doth well unto him, every man will truſt in him. But for the next words the Vulg. hath, I will reprove my wayes in his ſight, and he ſhall be my Saviour. Heb. For in him is לא ſignifying not, wher upon it is by ſome rendred, Behold he kills me, I will not expect: And indeed in ſtead of this word though, is הן behold; but ſo taken it is by ſome read interrogatively, May I not truſt, or hope; that is, I will hope. Some ſay, that which is ſometime put for לו in him, as Pagnin. Theſaur. But without granting this change the ſenſe is good, as hath been ſaid: But for the next words I muſt needs rather hold with the Vulg. Latin, I will reprove, becauſe יכח ſignifyeth to reprove, although it ſignifieth to diſpute alſo: and it is to be held, that to have God our Saviour, we muſt rather judge and reprove our ſelves and wayes, then to maintain them, as it is ſaid, If wee would judge our ſelves, we ſhould not be judged. 1 Cor. 11. 31.

He alſo ſhall be my ſalvation, for an hypocrite ſhall not come before him. Verſ. 16.

An hypocrite is one, that is, altogether intent to pleaſe men, and therefore although he makes a ſhew of piety towards God; yet he brings not himſelfe before God, by examining his heart and waies, as in his preſence to judge judge and condemne himſelf for his ſinnes, as he ſhould: And in this ſenſe he ſaid, not to come before him, becauſe if he did; he ſhould not be an hypocrite: But not coming thus before him, he ſhall come before him at the laſt day, and be adjudged to have the portion of hypocrites, where there is weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

Math. 24. 51.

Verſ. 18. Behold now I have ordered my cauſe, I know that I ſhall be juſtified. For cauſe Hebr. is משפט judgment, that is, ſo that when I come to be judged of God, I ſhall be juſtified, as the Vulg. rendereth it, ſpeaking nothing of ordering, which yet the Original doth. By which we may ſee the great confidence that Job had, upon his reproving and judging himſelf in his own heart, hereby he knew, that his matters were ſet in ſuch an order; as that God would juſtifie and not condemne him, as they did, and ſo doth every one, that likewiſe ſtrictly looketh to his own waies, taking himſelf in his errings, and condemning himſelf therefore as a ſinner, being accordingly humbled: But how doth that, V. 23. agree with this. How many are mine iniquityes and ſinnes. And V. 26. Thou makeſt me to poſſeſs the iniquities of my youth, and writeſt bitter things againſt me. For if he were ſo great a ſinner, and all his ſinnes from his youth, were ſtil recorded; how knew he that he ſhould be juſtifyed at the day of Judgment?

Note.

Anſw. Thus it was with him without Gods mercy, but through his mercy and grace, he doubted not of being juſtified from them all: A notable place, to confirme the doctrine of juſtification, altogether of mercy, and in no part for any merit of our own: To which effect alſo Gregory teacheth.

Note. Gregor.

Verſ. 19. Who is he that will plead with me? For now I know, if I hold my tongue, I ſhall give up the Ghoſt. The vulg. Therefore being ſilent, I am conſumed. Hebr. I dye. The meaning is, having cleared my conſcience before God, by ſtrictly looking to my waies, and for my faylings, judging my ſelf, let him that will come and accuſe and contend with me, laying ſin to my charge, I feare him not: It is the ſame in effect, with that of the Apoſtle. It is God that juſtifieth, who ſhall condemne? Becauſe he ſpake before of Gods juſtifying of him: And it is a ſpeech worthy with all diligence to be attended unto; for which he calleth for attention, V. 17. He challengeth all men here, ſaith Gregory, if they could, to accuſe him for any thing outwardly done amiſſe by him, and herein if none could taxe him, there was nothing, but evil cogitations in his heart, of which he could be guilty, but for theſe, from which none can be free, he held not his peace, but ſpake and complained internally hereof to God, by reproving his own waies, as hath been ſaid: And if he ſhould have been ſilent, and not ſpeak hereof, and bewayl them; he ſhould dye and perish: Note then here firſt, that the righteous mans life is ſuch, that no man can lay ſin to his charge, ſo inoffenſively and blamleſly, doth he live in all things: To which effect alſo John ſpeaketh. He that is born of God ſinneth not. 2. Although men can object nothing truly againſt him; yet he is not for this altogether without ſin, for there be ſinnes of thought, the law of the flesh rebelling againſt the law of the minde; as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, who in ſaying, The evil that he hated he did, meant not any ſin outwardly committed; but the rebellious motions, that aroſe within him. 3. Even theſe if a man be ſilent, and complaineth not before God and men of them; but in all things juſtifyeth himſelf, wil be his death and deſtruction for evermore.

Rom. 8.

Gregor.

Note.

1 Joh. 3. 9.

Verſ. 20. Verſ. 21. Only do not two things to me: withdraw thy hand from me, and let not thy dread make me afraid; then will I not hide my ſelf from thee. What is it to be hidden from God, but to be out of the danger of his proceeding, in the ſtrictneſſe of his judgment againſt him, to his condemnation, out of which whilſt he is not, he feareth and ſeeketh to hide himſelf from God, although in vain, as our firſt Parents did, but in deed none can do, no not if they could get the mountaines to fall upon them, to cover them: But then then ſhall not a man need to ſeek to hide himſelf, if God doth theſe two things to him.

Pſal. 139. Revel. 6. 16.

Firſt, Exempt him from the law, and the rigour thereof, which adjudgeth every ſinner; yea in thought only, to death.

Secondly, Infuſe his ſpirit and grace into him, to make him not out of ſervile feare, but filial love, to obey him in all things, becauſe perfect love expelleth feare, as the Apoſtle John ſaith. And both theſe are attained by Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1. John 7. 37. Thus Gregory; but others according to the letter, Withdraw thy hand from me, be not ſo ſevere ſtil towards me, as to continue me under thy ſharp ſcourges, and if thou appeareſt to ſpeak unto me, do it not in ſuch a terrifical manner, as through aſtoniſhment at thy glory to kil me, becauſe the ſeeing of God in majeſty appearing, hath been alwaies held to be mortiferous, as God ſaid unto Moſes, No man ſhall ſee my face and live, ſuch an aſtoniſhing power, even unto death, is there therein.

Then will I anſwer to thy call, &c. Here by calling he meaneth, Gods calling him, as it were, into the Court of judgment, to anſwer to that which ſhould be objected againſt him, the two things before ſpoken of being done, he ſaith, he would not feare to be thus cited before his judgment ſeat, yea he knew, that if he ſhould call to God to ſtand on his ſide, and be for him againſt the ſlanderous accuſations of men, he would be ready to do it. Verſ. 22.

How many are mine iniquities; make me to know my tranſgreſſions and my ſinnes. Before that a man can with his boldneſſe and confidence, appeare before God through Chriſt, he muſt have a ſight and ſenſe of his ſinnes: Therefore Iob confeſſeth and prayeth thus; and in deſiring to have theſe ſhewed him, he mentioneth two, Iniquityes and ſinnes: By iniquityes greater ſinnes, being underſtood; and by ſinnes leſſer: For this is the firſt act of grace, tending to juſtification, to be inlightned, to ſee the abomination of every ſin, and the infinite number of our ſinnes: Then cometh on apprehenſion of Gods wrath and diſpleaſure hereby incurred, he being by ſin made our enemy, and to count us his enemies. V. 24. Verſ. 23.

Wherefore hideſt thou thy face, and counteſt me for an enemy? And if God be an enemy to us, as he is to ſinners, and all wicked perſons; alas what are we to ſtand againſt him, even as a ſhaken leafe, without all ſtrength to hold from ſhaking, when the leaſt winde bloweth; or as the dry ſtubble to keep from burning, when fire cometh, as V. 25. Verſ. 24. Rom. 5. 8.

Wilt thou break a leafe to and fro, or purſue the dry ſtubble? To cauſe the greater terror, he looketh not only at ſinnes more lately committed, but longe ago, even in the time of his licentious, and greater judgments decreed to be brought upon him therefore, V. 26. Verſ. 25.

Thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and makeſt me to poſſeſſe the ſins of my youth. Upon the compariſon made betwixt man and a leafe, Gregory ſaith, that by ſinning at the firſt, man fell from being as a tree planted in Paradice, to be as a leafe fallen from a tree, as that is toſſed about with the winde: So he being now expoſed to the winds of diverſe temptations, carrying him hither and thither, and as dry ſtubble is without all ſap, ſo he is without all grace or goodneſſe: Hereupon bitter things are written againſt him, and not ſpoken only, to intimate their durance; to expreſſe which further they are compared to a poſſeſſion, whereof yet a man hath little joy, but great ſorrowes and long continuing: Herein then Iob doth not only ſpeak in his own perſon, but in the perſon of man in general, for this is the caſe of every Mothers Son, and to ſee into, and to be ſenſible hereof, is the only way to come to faith, whereby to ſtand confidently before God at the dreadful day of Judgment. Verſ. 26. Gregor.

Thou putteſt my feet alſo into the ſtockes, thou lookeſt narrowly into all my wayes, and ſetteſt a print upon the heels of my feet. The vulg. All my paths; Verſ. 27.

betwixt

betwixt which and waies, Gregory maketh this difference: Waies are larger, paths narrower; God then is ſaid, to look into all mens paths, when he looketh not only at the evil done by them, but the intention of their minde, which is not ſo eaſily diſcerned, but he diſcerneth it in every one, and אורחות indeed ſignifyeth narrower pathes. And for the print upon the heels of my feet. The vulg. Thou haſt conſidered the footſteps. To the ſame effect, Heb. שרש roots alike, ſetting forth heels and foot-ſtepts, the meaning is, not only my paths are marked by thee, that is, wherein I commonly go, but if at any time I ſtep out of the way: Whereby we may ſee, how narrowly God obſerveth and marketh the doings of men in every thing, for which though the wicked knoweth not, yet the godly know, that they are held by ſin committed, as a man by his feet in the ſtocks, till that by repentance, and mercy ſhewed unto them, they be releaſed again: Gregory alſo obſerveth here, that God looketh at the hurt done to others, by examples given by mens evil doings unto them, leaving a print upon the ground, as it were, whereby others follow them, and ſo their ſin is in this regard made the greater, V. 28.

Verſ. 28. And he as a rotten thing conſumeth, as a garment that is moth-eaten. This is by the vulg. rendred in the firſt perſon, but Hebr. it is hee, that is, man ſhewing, that what hath been before ſpoken was ſpoken of man in generall, whom he laſtly compareth to a rotten thing and a moth-eaten Garment, of which, that which is the deſtruction, breedeth in it ſelfe, and is not perceived till that it be marred and conſumed hereby; ſo ſin cometh from a mans ſelfe, and hereby the wicked are conſumed, not knowing it till it be to late, but it eateth into them dayly more and more, till they dye and utterly periſh.

Iam. 1. 13. Pſal. 39.

CHAP. XLIII.

HEre Job having ſpoken of a mans being conſumed by ſin, Chap. 13. 28. proceedeth to ſpeake more at large of the frailty of his life, firſt cauſed by ſinne, ſaying.

Verſ. 1. Man that is borne of a woman, is of few days, and full of trouble, &c. Of which the ſenſe is plain. And becauſe he is ſo fraile, and as was ſayd before, like unto a leafe and dry ſtubble, he ſaith, Verſ. 3. Why doſt thou open thine eyes upon ſuch an one, and bringeſt me into judgment with thee? As if he thought it an unworthy thing for the divine majeſty to looke ſo narrowly into his wayes, and finding any thing amiſſe in him, to proceed to the executing of his judgements upon him, and the rather becauſe he is borne in uncleanneſſe and ſinne, and hath no power to make himſelfe clean, as followeth, V. 4.

Verſ. 4. Pſal. 51. Rom. 5. 12. Who can draw a clean thing out of that which is unclean? not one. Of being borne in ſin, David ſpeaketh, and of all Adams poſterity, Paul, ſo that hereby the Anabaptiſt is convinced, that an infant is polluted by ſinne, and needeth waſhing by the water of baptiſme ſo ſoon as may be, and it is not in the power of any unclean perſon to ſanctifie himſelfe or another, onely Chriſt, who was born without ſinne, and who ſo would be cleanſed muſt be cleanſed by him, for he is the Lord our righteouſneſſe, and his bloud cleanſeth us from all ſinne, but neither can we come to him for this, unleſſe the Father draweth us,

1 Ioh. 1. 6. Ioh. 6. 44.

Verſ. 5. Seeing his dayes are with thee, and the number of his moneths are determined; thou haſt appointed his bounds that he cannot paſſe: By dayes here, Gregory underſtandeth the few dayes of a mans life by nature, by months larger ſpaces of time, to which notwithſtanding he of his mercy prolonged his life: But whether a man liveth a ſhorter or a longer time, this is before by God appointed, he hath ſet the bounds of every mans time, which he cannot cannot go beyond: And as of his life, ſo of his proſperity, and adverſity; how long he ſhall injoy the one, or be under the other: Here then we ſee the cauſe, why ſome likely to live long be ſhort lived, and others more infirme live longer: God hath ſet the boundary of each ones life to the very day. Whereas Hezekiah paſſe[d] this boundary fifteen yeares, it is anſwered, the time of his living ſet by God, was theſe fifteen yeares alſo: But the Prophet Eſay was ſent to him, to threaten him with death of the ſickneſſe, which then he had, becauſe he merited it by his ſin, that he might humble himſelf as he did, and ſo be releaſed again from that dangerous ſickneſſe: or elſe it may be conceived, that the time ſet by the Lord, was then come, which although he could not paſs, yet God could prolong his life ſtill, at his pleaſure, becauſe it is only ſaid, the bounds ſet him can no man paſs.

Turn from him that he may reſt, til he ſhall accomplish as an hireling his day. Having laid a ground for a plea, to be releaſed from his preſent miſery, now he prayeth for it, as if he had ſaid: For ſomuch as my time, of all men is very ſhort, but a day, as an hirelings time is; give me ſome reſt again, during this my ſhort time, and then let the time of my departure come when thou pleaſeſt. Verſ. 6. Chap. 7. 2.

For there is hope of a tree if it be cut down, that it will ſprout again, &c. Of man returning no more, after that he is dead, ſee before chap. 7. 9, 10. Which is ſet forth by divers compariſons there; Here a contrary compariſon from a tree is brought to illuſtrate it further, becauſe man is often ſet forth by a tree in the holy Scriptures: For the literal ſenſe, all things ſaith Gregory, are ſo plain here, that there is no need to ſay any more upon that: But we may by this tree reviving again after cutting down, underſtand a juſt man, and by the man, betwixt whom and him the compariſon is made, the wicked man: the juſt although he be cut down by death, ſuffering martyrdome in his younger time, and waxing old, dyeth his natural death, or otherwiſe, yet he ſhall live again, yea although being dead, he lyeth in the duſt: And as the tree through the ſent of water liveth again and brancheth, ſo he by divine virtue, coming from above, ſhall have his dead body raiſed up to live glorioufly in heaven. Verſ. 7. Gregor.

But man dyeth and waſteth away, he giveth up the ghoſt, and where is he? And to make this allegory good, the juſt man is compared to a tree. Pſ. 1. And Jeſſe the Father of David is likened to a tree cut down, the ſtump only being left, but afterwards branching again: And to waters is the ſpirit of God often compared, as hath been before ſaid: And if this place be thus underſtood, Iob ſheweth here the ſame faith touching the reſurrection to glory, that he doth plainly ſpeak of Chap. 19. 25. Although in this place obſcurely and enigmatically. Verſ. 10.

As the waters fail from the Sea, and the flood decayeth and dryeth up: So man lyeth down, and riſeth not till the heavens be no more, they ſhall not awake nor be raiſed out of their ſleep. Here mans minde is compared to waters flowing from the Sea, and to floods of water, the one ſalt, the other ſweet, becauſe he is unſtable in his waies, ſometime having luſtful thoughts in his minde, and ſometime wrathful, and ſometime covetous, yet his minde is ſometime alſo as ſweet water, for his thoughts of love and joy: And he is ſaid when he dyeth, to lye down, and then in ſpeaking of his reviving, he ſaith: He awaketh no more til the heavens fayl, to ſhew that he beleived, that the death of man, is but as a ſleep, from which he ſhall at the end of the World awake, it being as eaſy for God then to raiſe him up, reſtoring to him his own body, as to wake one out of his ſleep: Some becauſe there is no word in the Hebrew ſignifying As, take it not for a ſimilitude, but a diſſimilitude, as that of a tree before going, as if he had ſaid: Waters falling from the Sea, and floods be dryed up, but going into vapors that aſcend up in time, they diſſolve again into rain; whereby theſe waters are renew- Verſ. 11.

Chryſoſt. Auguſt. ed again: but with man lying down, that is dying, it is not ſo; thus Chryſoſt. and Auguſt. And to waters dryed up, are men aptly compared in death; becauſe then the Humidum radicale, the moyſture, the prop of life, is dryed up, but no more renewed til the laſt day, when yet it ſhall not be reſtored to the ſame ſtate of heat and moyſture; but inſtead of natural, riſe ſpiritual, as is taught, 1. Cor 15. And this expoſition is moſt probable, theſe two verſes being ſpoken, like unto theſe before going of trees, the words rendred there, But man, being Hebr. And man, as here And man lyeth down. If it be underſtood as a ſimilitude, it holdeth not, becauſe waters being dryed up are renewed again, as hath been ſaid, and the places where they were, continue not alwaies dry, but if they be dry now, flow again with waters, time after time, to the end of the World: So doth not man, although there be one certain time appointed wherein he ſhall riſe.

Verſ. 13. Gregory. O That thou wouldſt hide me in the grave, and keep me ſecret, til thy wrath be paſt; that thou wouldſt appoint me a ſet time, and remember me. The Vulg For Grave hath In inferno: Whence Gregory gathereth undoubtedly, that the faithful under the old Teſtament dying, went to a place below neare Hel, where they reſted til Chriſt coming, and then were delivered: and this he ſaith Job ſheweth here, that he knew very well, which made him pray ſo, and that God at his ſet time would remember him, coming then to take him thence, up to his heavenly Kingdome. For man being ſhut out of Paradiſe, the way was ſo kept; that he could not of himſelf ever enter in again any more, therefore Chriſt muſt firſt come and take him thence, up with him to the Paradiſe of God aboue. But from this expoſition, even they that follow the Vulg. Lat. goe except Lyra and Dionyſius ſome ſaying, that nothing elſe is ment but that he deſired to reſt in the grave amongſt the dead, provided that God would remember him in the time by him appointed, for all men to riſe to life again, and thus he prayed, becauſe in living here he had no comfort, by reaſon of the tokens of Gods wrath now upon him: He therefore deſireth rather to dye, and ly ein the grave, til the whole time of Gods anger againſt his faithful ſervants ſhould be paſt; and the time come of making them to rejoyce for ever, which is not till the day of Judgment: Touching the place imagined where the faithful dying before Chriſts coming, reſted below neare to Hel, there is no ground in holy Scripture for it, and therefore it is not probably ſo meant: For we read only of Heaven and Hel, and therefore this by them called Limbus patrum is non ens as well as Purgatory.

Verſ. 14. If a man dyeth, ſhall he live again? All mine appointed time I will wait til my change cometh. This is added as a moſt comfortable concluſion upon the premiſes, as if he had ſaid, is thus, when a faithful perſon dyeth, ſhall he riſe again at the appoynted time before ſpoken of, then will I wait all the time appoynted me to live here, comforting my ſelf in the expectation of that moſt happy change to come, when corruption ſhall be changed into incorruption, and mortality into immortality: And as Job, ſo every faithful perſon ſhould be comforted herewith, in the midſt of all worldly ſufferings. The vulg. For appoynted time, hath the time of my warfare, and צבא alſo ſignifyeth warfare, as was before ſhewed, chap. 7. 1. And this life is a warfare for ſuffering hardſhip, but our comfort lyeth in our

Verſ. 15. hope of that bleſſed change, for then ſaith he. Thou ſhalt call, and I will anſwer thee, thou wilt have a deſire to the work of thy hands. Take is, I ſhall anſwer thee by the ſimilitude of thy holineſſe and glory, that ſhall be in me; but this I ſhall not have of my ſelf, but thy hands ſhall work me to this: According to which it is ſaid. We ſhall be like unto him, for we ſhall

1 Ioh. 3. 4. ſee him, as he is.

Verſ. 17. My tranſgreſſion is ſealed up in a bag, thou ſoweſt up mine iniquity. This and V. 16. are not much unlike to chap. 13. 26. 27. Shew how God marketh and writeth and ſealeth or ſoweth up, as it were, every mans ſinns, keeping ping a memoriall of them to be opened at the day of judgment unleſſe they be ſeriouſly repented of: The vulgar for theſe words V. 16. Doſt not thou watch over my ſinne, hath, Parce peccatis meis, ſpare my ſinnes, and if it be read without an interrogation Do not watch my ſinnes, It comes all to one. He meaneth that God obſerved all his doings, but he prayeth not to deal ſtrictly with him therefore, by increaſing hispaine, as yet he did: Andfor the words V. 17. Thou ſealeſt up my faults as in a ſack, and curèd mine iniquity, but the word טפל ſignifieth Conjungere or applicare, whereby yet may be meant joyning together the gaping wounds made in me by iniquity after the manner of a Chirurgeon, that healeth them. And then it is meant, that although the Lord tracketh his Servants, as it were, in their ſinnfull ſteps and recordeth them here to puniſh them, but by ſo doing he healeth them, and thus theſe words aptly follow thoſe. V. 15. Thou wilt have deſire to the work of thy hands.

Surely the mountaine falling cometh to nought, and the rock is removed out of his place: The waters weare the ſtones, thou waſheſt away the things that grow out of the duſt of the earth, and thou deſtroyeſt the hope of man. Having in the former words ſpoken of Gods ſealing up and yet healing his ſinnes, now hee ſheweth by what meanes even the beſt are tempred and drawn to ſinn, whereby they come to deſtruction. And here are two ſorts of temptations ſpoken of by way of ſimilitude. The one more violent, and ſudden, as the falling of a mountain and the removing of a rock: The other of longer continuance and more gentle, yet having its effect alſo, as the water which is continually falling, although it bee ſoft, pierceth into and holloweth the hard ſtone, and waters running waſh away things growing out of the earth, as trees growing by the rivers ſide, the ground about their rootes being gulled, and ſo they made to fall and carryed away. For thus even righteous men, ſome that ſtand as mountaines or rockes by the ſudden ſhaking of an earthquake fall, ſome as it were into the Sea vaniſhing, ſome from virtue to vice, as David ſtanding as a mountaine or rock through the ſpirit of grace and propheſie, which hee had, being ſuddenly aſſaulted by the ſight of Bathſhebahs beauty fell into moſt groſſe ſinnes, and Salomon ſtanding as a mighty tree, or being impenetrable as a ſtone through the ſolidity of grace to his old age, then was pierced by the continuall allurements of his idolatrous wifes, and had the fat earth of grace in which hee ſtood and grew, waſhed away, whereby hee fell to be an idolater alſo; and thus God deſtroyeth the hope of miſerable man, as the word אבוש ſignifieth. Thus Gregory who alſo rendreth the next verſe thus. Verſ. 18.

Thou haſt ſtrengthned him with a little that he might paſſe on for ever. Accordingto the vulg latine expounding it thus, when hee thus falleth, whereby he incurreth the danger of deſtruction, thou ſtrengthneſt him by thy grace again for the little time, that he hath to live here, and by this meanes when he paſſeth hence he goeth to that life which ſhall never have end. Gregor. Verſ. 20.

N. Tranſlat. Thou prevaileſt for ever againſt him, and hee paſſeth, thou changeſt his countenance and ſendeſt him away Hebr. It is as well thou ſtrengthneſt him to overcome, and he ſhall walk changing his face, thou ſendeſt him. And therefore I ſee not but that it may be expounded according to Gregory, As if he had ſayd, thus it is with the beſt man, but when by temptation he is brought into ſo great danger, he recovereth ſtrength by thy grace to overcome theſe his ſpirituall enemies again, and when age and death commeth, changing his countenance thou ſendeſt him out of this miſerable and ſinfull life, and ſo out of the danger of temptations for ever hereafter, to live ſecurely for evermore.

Some, although in the reading they follow the vulgar, yet give this ſenſe, thou ſtrengthneſt him to live here a while, but as other earthly things, he is ſoone changed, his face growing old and wrinckled, and his haire white, and ſo thou ſendeſt him out of this world. But then they expound the the words of v. 18.19. thus. Great mountains, and hard rocks, ſtones, and trees growing are worne out in time, therefore man much more, when thou by ſufferings conſumeſt him, and if he hath ſtrength to live and come out of ſuch miſeries, yet ſo weak and fraile is his nature, that he changeth eftſoones againe and dyeth.

Verſ. 21. His ſonns come to honour and he knoweth it not, &c. His fleſh upon him ſhall have paine, and his Soul within him ſhall mourn. Man being gone out of this life, knoweth not how it falleth out to his children here, whether they live in honour or diſhonour, becauſe the dead know not the things of the living in this world. Thus Gregory, and hitherto well; but then hee diſtinguiſheth without ground only upon mans imagination, that this is the caſe of the carnall, but, not of the ſpirituall, for they being in the clearneſſe of God, ſee all things done here. And he further addeth, that by children here, works done by men are myſtically meant, as 1 Tim. 2. in ſpeaking of women, that through child-bearing they ſhall be ſaved, it is not literally meant; for then ſuch as beare no children, but ſerve the Lord alwayes in chaſtity ſhould not be ſaved. But good works are the children, whereby faithfull women are ſaved. And whereas it is ſaid, man knoweth not whether they be in honour or not, it is meant, that hee knoweth not whether the good works that he doth be accepted before God, or not: and then returning to man yet living, again he ſpeaks of the pain of their flesh, and ſorrow of heart: But I prefer, following the literall ſenſe only here, and like not of his attributing to works the honour to come, or the uncertainty of being accepted in our well doing: this is Gregories dirt, which I reject, although I make uſe of his gold.

Gregor.

For the laſt words, verſ. 22. the Vulg. to make the ſenſe more full, inſerteth theſe words, Whilſt he liveth: His fleſh whilſt he liveth ſhall have paine. The meaning is, although being dead and gone, he is not troubled, as Parents be here at that which befalleth their children, yet in his going out of this world his flesh shall have paine, and his ſoule ſorrow, he being in the pangs of death, wholly taken herewith, which ſhould make every man in the time of his life and health to prepare himſelfe for God, and not to put off the care of this till theſe pangs ſeize upon him, and his mind being hereby diſtracted, he be moſt unfit.

Note.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 2. Should a wiſe man utter vain knowledg, and fill his belly with the Eaſt-wind? Here Eliphaz the ſecond time acteth his part, objecting abundance of vanity to Job, for his moſt heavenly and profound ſpeeches before uttered. But ſuch meaſure muſt the Orthodox ſet forth by Job expect, and the hands of Heretiques ſet forth by Eliphaz and his fellows.

Verſ. 4. Thou caſteſt off feare, and reſtraineſt prayer before God: thy mouth uttereth thine iniquity. This is ſpoken becauſe Job was little, as he thought, in prayer, and ſo much in ſpeaking of other things, wherein he vaunted himſelfe in reſpect of his own wiſdome above other mens, and maintained his own innocency, for which he accounted him wicked and blaſphemous, as verſ. 5. 6. but moſt falſly: But by the way, note that a man in his ſufferings ſhould not be little, but much in prayer, as is commended, Pſal. 50.

Verſ. 7. Art thou the firſt man that was born? or wert thou made before the hills? This is ſpoken, becauſe Iob had bidden them to hold their peace, and to hear him, wherein he ſeemed to them to be proud and arrogant, taking upon him as if he were another Adam, as the word is, who being made before all other men, muſt needs be the wiſeſt among them, to teach all them in things both divine and humane. And he addeth, Before the hills, proceeding yet to ſome of more wiſdome, viz. Gods Angels, which were made before Adam, or the earth, or hills; for in the beginning God made the Heavens firſt, which are above all viſible things, and the Angels therein, then the earth and mountains, which are ſpoken of for their greater antiquity, becauſe at the ſeparation of the waters they firſt appeared, and then plaine places afterwards.

to

Haſt thou heard the ſecret of God, and doſt thou reſtrain wiſdome to thy ſelfe? What knoweſt thou that we know not? Here he taxeth Job, and derideth him, as taking upon him to know the ſecret counſell of God to declare it to others ſo, as that without him they could not know it; but he did beare himſelf ſo, as if he knew exactly the cauſe why God laid thoſe judgments upon him, and of his firſt conſulting about it, which made him ſo bold to deſire to argue with God about it: For the next words, he ſpeaks ſo, as one that would pay him in his own coine, Chap. 12. where Job ſpake likewiſe to them, Verſ. 10. Verſ. 8, 9.

We have men with us ancienter then thy fathers. This he ſpake, becauſe Iob had ſaid, that wiſdome was with the ancient: For whether they or Iob were ancienter is uncertain, but he ſeemeth to ſpeake this of his Temanites, and the old learned men that were amongſt them, to whoſe yeares hee came not nigh. Verſ. 10.

Are the conſolations of God ſmall with thee? or is there any ſecret thing with thee? The vulg. Is it a great thing that God ſhould comfort thee? but thy wicked words prohibit this. But N. Tr. agreeth with the Hebrew, and the meaning is, Thou ſeemeſt by thy ſpeeches as if thou wert able to deale with God upon equall terms, thou ſpeakeſt ſo high; but this is not the way to have comfort from God, but herein thou doſt, as if thou wert in thy heart ſo wiſe, that thou hadſt ſomething there in ſecret to beare thy ſelfe upon againſt whatſoever may come. Verſ. 11.

Why doth thy heart carry thee away? and what do thy eyes wink at? The vulg. And as thinking great matters haſt thou aſtoniſhed eyes? But different from the Hebrew; but whereas the Vulg. for carry thee away, hath, Lift thee up: It ſeemeth to be ſo rendered for the ſenſe, becauſe this carrying away is by pride: and in ſpeaking of his winking with his eyes, he meaneth in way of deriſion, as proud folks do to ſhew how little they eſteem of that which is ſaid by others. Verſ. 12.

Having ſpoken in generall againſt Iob, to the end of V. 13. he cometh, V. 14. to ſpeak to the ſame effect, that Iob had done before of mans uncleanneſs, and Verſ. 15. to the ſame effect with that which himſelfe had ſaid, Chap. 4. 18. of his not putting truſt in his Saints, adding more of the heavens uncleanneſſe in compariſon of God. Chap. 14. 4.

How much more abominable is man, that drinketh iniquity like water? Gregory upon this, and the words going before, from verſ. 8. ſaith thus: Iob having ſpoken of high and myſticall things, Eliphaz as deriding him for this, asketh him, whether the ſecret of God were with him, or he were of his privy Councell, that he took ſo much upon him. Then coming to verſ. 10. where Eliphaz braggeth of their ancient men, hereby ſeeking to beare down Iob, he ſaith, that it is the manner of Heretickes to boaſt of antiquity, thinking this to be an argument of great force againſt the Orthodox, and to make for them, contemning things preſent, although moſt true. If the Papiſts now would but heare this Biſhop of Rome in this, they would not ſo triumph in their argument, drawn from antiquity, as they do, thinking their Tenets abundantly confirmed, when being but their own phantaſies, they ſeek to countenance them by the authority of the ancient Fathers, as the Phariſees did by their traditions. And upon verſ. 13. That thou turneſt thy ſpirit againſt God, and letteſt ſuch words goe out of thy mouth. By theſe words he meaneth the words ſpoken by him touching his integrity; for words ſpoken for a mans own Juſtification, commonly proceed from pride and ſelfe-conceitedneſſe: and they that ſpeak thus, put a barre, as it were, in their way, to hinder Verſ. 16. Gregory.

hinder them from having any conſolation from God, of which he ſpake, v. 11. But the ſame words may be ſpoken by the wicked, and by the righteous, yet the one only ſhall be judged therefore, and the other accepted, as God ſeeth their hearts to be affected, when they ſpeak ſo: for the Phariſee ſpake ſo, and was condemned; but Hezekiah to the ſame effect, and was accepted of, and ſaved: why? becauſe the Phariſee ſpake out of pride, Hezekiah in humility, by way of pleading for himſelf before him that knoweth every mans heart. And to the ſame effect Eliphaz alſo ſpake, verſ. 6. judging Job worthy to be condemned for ſuch words; but this was his errour, in that hee could not diſtinguiſh betwixt the words of one man, and of another, according to the diverſity of the affections of their hearts; For theſe words of Ver. 16. here are two words uſed, Abominable, and Unprofitable, as the Vulg. hath it; but N. Tr. abominable and filthy, denoting both the wicked doings of ſinfull man: and becauſe he doth ſo, his unacceptableneſſe to God in that which he doth that is good; for by reaſon of his being in the ſtate of corruption, his beſt deeds are had in abomination: ſo farre are they from profiting him towards the divine acceptation, as is taught, Iſa. 1. 12, 13. and Iſa. 66. And ſuch a man is ſaid to drink in iniquity like water. For his ready running on in ſin; for he ſaith not eareth iniquity, but drinketh it, becauſe to eate, a man muſt chew, and this taketh up ſome time, but drink goeth downe without any delay; ſo the abominable man ſheweth himſelf to be ſuch by this, that without making any queſtion, or ſeeking to keep himſelfe from ſinne, he runneth on headily herein from time to time, whereas he, in whom any grace is, conſidereth, and finding it evill, ſpitteth it, as it were, out of his mouth, not ſuffering it to go down. But the word אלוח here uſed ſignifieth neither unprofitable, nor filthy, but ſtinking, which moſt fitly ſetteth forth unacceptableneſſe.

Note.

Note.

Ver. 17, 18, 19. Here to prepare to attention to that which followeth, verſ. 20. he ſaith, I will ſhew thee, heare me, that which I have ſeen I will declare, Which wiſe men have told from their fathers, &c. To whom alone the earth was given, and no ſtranger paſſed amongſt them.

Gregor. Heretickes, ſaith Gregory, out of their pride, if they have any thing to ſay that is true, are wont hereby greatly to magnifie themſelves, as though they were wiſer, and knew more then other Teachers, and therefore worthy by all others to be reverenced and hearkned to, ſo doth Eliphaz here.

1. He ſeeks this, by ſaying that he would ſpeak nothing but what he had heard, and becauſe a man may be deceived in that which he only heareth.

2. He ſaith, he had both heard and ſeene: and becauſe this might yet come from men, ſpeaking, or writing unadviſedly, he addeth,

3. That it came from the wiſe. And laſtly, becauſe they might be but wiſe men in his account, but indeed ſubtle, and crafy Hereticks,

He 4. addeth, that they were ſuch as alone poſſeſſed the earth, and no ſtranger paſſed amongſt them; that is, they had the government of the Church in their hands, and in their time there was no Heretick amongſt them by whom they could be corrupted, and therefore that which they taught muſt needs be moſt true: And for the name ſtranger given to Hereticks, and wicked men, under colour of Gods people, David ſaith of ſuch, Strangers are riſen up againſt me, when hee was perſecuted by Saul and his paraſites: and indeed ſuch are ſtrangers, both for their ſtrange erroneous teaching, and wickedneſſe, making them ſtrangers from the common-wealth of Iſrael, as the Apoſtle calleth them. But here indeed is a ſure ground of truth laid, and what ground is this? but the Apoſtles, who firſt alone had the government of the Church in all Nations, ſo that whatſoever we hear and ſee coming from them is the undoubted truth of God; what not, is to be ſuſpected as falſe and erroneous, whether it be in doctrine, or the manner of worſhipping and ſerving God, or governing his Church upon earth. And hereby the Roman Catholikes are again convinced to be hereticall, for their teaching ſo many things,

Pſal. 54.

Epheſ. 2. 12.

Note.

things, divers from the Apoſtles, and for their innovations in divine worſhip and Church-government: wherein I pray God to keep us, that we participate not with them. Now that divers men are for divers wayes, and that wee may be ſo kept, we muſt not only hear, but ſee, and look into their writings, that we may in all things be guided aright.

The wicked man travelleth with paine all his dayes, the number of yeares is hidden to the oppreſſour. The Vulg. The wicked man is proud all his days: but Heb. it is Parturiens, bringing forth in pain as a woman in travell, of חוּל that ſignifieth to bring forth, or to be grieved, or ſorrowfull: And then the meaning is, that he putteth himſelf to extream pains in travelling, by ſtudy and labour, to bring forth the plots which he hath in his mind, to circumvent others, of which travell followeth paine, by ſuffering in his body and goods, which he thought now was the caſe of Job. For the next words it is meant, that he who travelleth in this way of oppreſſing, knoweth not how ſhort his time is, and therefore going upon ſuch uncertainties, it was a vanity in him to wring with pain out of others that, which when he hath gotten, he knoweth not how long he ſhall enjoy. Verſ. 20.

A dreadfull ſound is in his eares, in his proſperity the deſtroyer ſhal come upon him. The vulg. Whilſt there is peace, he ſuſpecteth treachery: But Heb. it is, Deſtruction ſhall come to him. The meaning is, he that oppreſſeth & tyrannizeth over others, is alwayes troubled as with a ſound in his eares at his own evill doings, his conſcience telling him, that as he hath done to others, ſo it ſhall be done to him again to his great terrour and diſquiet: And finally, when eſcaping ſometime without being requited in his kind, he hath ſome quiet, & hath an eſtate moſt flouriſhing, deſtruction for ever ſhall come upon him. An effectuall conſideration one would think, to deterr all men from this great ſinne of oppreſſion, and to make them carefull to keep a good conſcience in all things, which contrariwiſe is a continuall feaſt. Verſ. 21. Note.

He beleeveth not that he ſhall return out of darkneſſe, and he is waited for of the ſword: That is, being thus troubled in conſcience, he ſometimes groweth deſperate, not believing that ever he ſhall eſcape the darkneſſe of miſery, to come into the light of felicity, for he thinketh that he ſeeth vengeance attending, and ready continually to ſeize upon him, a dreadfull caſe, which who for a greedy deſire of worldly wealth would be in, did he but ſeriouſly conſider it. Verſ. 22.

He wandreth abroad for bread, ſaying, where is it? he knoweth that the day of darkneſſe is at hand. By bread, which is for the ſuſtenance of this life, Gregory underſtandeth life, of which he now deſpairingly ſaith, where is it? Oh it is no longer to be held, but I muſt to the darkneſſe of death. Verſ. 23. Gregory.

Trouble and anguiſh ſhall make him afraid, they ſhall prevaile againſt him as a King prepared to battle. It being ſo with the covetous oppreſſor, as hath been ſaid, how great muſt his trouble and terrour needs be, even as theirs that have a mighty King coming to deſtroy them with his invincible army, that none can reſiſt. And having thus ſhewed the evill caſe of oppreſſors, in the next words he cometh to ſhew what ſuch have done to deſerve this. Verſ. 24.

He ſtretcheth out his hand againſt God, and ſtrengthneth himſelfe againſt the Almighty. Verſ. 25.

He runneth upon him, even upon his neck, and the thicke boſſes of his buckler; &c. Verſ. 27. In all which he yeeldeth this as a reaſon why ſuch horrour ſhould be unto him, viz. becauſe in his oppreſſing way, he maketh warre as it were, againſt God, and therefore he muſt needs looke for all hoſtility from him. He ſtretcheth out his hand againſt God: Who doth that which God hath forbidden, as he hath done all oppreſſion and wrong, and that without all feare of his judgment: and he is ſtrengthned againſt the Almighty, that being ſo wicked, greatly proſpereth yet in this world: And hee runneth upon him with an erected neck, as the Vulg. hath it, that is, becometh audacious againſt him, daring to do any heinous wickedneſſe: And he is armed Verſ. 26.

with

with a fat neck, That is, made fat with abundance of worldly goods, which maketh him thus luſty and bold. But the N. Tran. agreeth beſt with the Hebrew, and the ſenſe is the ſame; his running upon his neck ſetting forth his audacious neſſe, which by his worldly wealth he groweth too, and his running againſt the boſſes of his buckler, his thick lining with fat, through a confidence in which he feared not to run againſt the ſtrongeſt part of Gods armour, although able to grinde him to pouder; and that his confidence in doing thus, is in his worldly wealth, appeareth V. 27. Where the thick collops of his fat are ſpoken of. A notable deſcription of the great tyrants of the World, in oppreſſing poor men, contrary to Gods
1 Theſ. 4. 6. ſtrict charge, they enter battel againſt God himſelf in ſo doing, which what mortal man dare take the boldneſſe unto him to attempt? For he ſhall be ſure to be overthrown, let him be as great in wealth, and worldly power, as he can.

Verſ. 28. He dwelleth in deſolat cities, &c. Here having ſhewed, the giant-like war, made by proud and mighty oppreſſors, againſt God; he declareth in all theſe their doings, their evil and dangerous condition. They are like unto thoſe that dwel in ruinous houſes, of which, if there were never ſo many, even to the making of cities; yet they ſhall ſoon be brought down, and then but like many buildings fallen down together, making nothing but ruinous heapes: And he likeneth them to deſolate cityes, becauſe as the body not inhabited by the ſpirit of God, ſo is a deſolate citye. The Verſ. 30. flame ſhall dry up his branches, and by the breath of his mouth he ſhall go away. That is, ſuch a man is but as a tree with flouriſhing branches, before a a mighty flameing fire, or as duſt or chaffe before the winde, ſo is he before our God: That is, as a conſuming fire, and before the breath of his mouth, which ſuddenly can beare him down, that he ſhall be gone, as the forces with ſwords and ſtaves coming to take Chriſt, were beaten down backward by the breath of his mouth, there being no need of armes for him to bring all ſuch proud ones down, and to ſend them packing into Hel: By the breath of his mouth he ſhall go away, is commonly expounded in the going away of his breath, he is gone. The vulg. for theſe words, Neither ſhall he prolong his perfection upon Earth, hath it. Neither ſhall he take rooting in the earth. Whereupon Gregory, the Oppreſſor is like unto a tree which groweth high, and ſpreadeth out her branches, but takes no deep rooting in the ground; now how flouriſhing ſoever ſuch a tree is, any blaſt of winde eaſily overturneth it; and ſo it is with him and his family: But the word תמה ſignifieth perfection, and becauſe the perfection of a tree is in the rooting thereof to ſtand firme, it is not amiſſe ſo rendred. Let not him that is deceived truſt in vanity, &c. That is, the covetous oppreſſor, waxing great, let him not deceive himſelf, for he doth certainly, if by getting goods he thinketh to riſe to great dignity here, and continue. V. 32. It ſhall be accompliſhed before his time. Hebr. cut off. before he expecteth, which is further amplyfied by ſimilitudes, V. 33.
Verſ. 33. He ſhall caſt off his unripe grapes as the vine, &c. That is, his wealth and honour ſhall ſoon fal from him, V. 34. For the tabernacles of hypocrites ſhall be deſolate, &c. As they are like deſolate citys, as was before ſaid, empty of all grace, ſo ſhall their houſes, and the houſes of bribe-takers, be left empty of all treaſure, their children being poor and beggerly, V. 35.
Verſ. 35. They concieve miſcheif, bring forth vanity, &c. Of which ſaying, made uſe of by David, ſee Pſ. 7. 14. And my expoſition thereupon.

CHAP.

CAAP. XVI.

Miſerable comforters are yee all. Here Job, firſt teacheth, that a man ought not in the miſery of his neighbour, ſharply to reprove him, as by his ſinnes deſerving to ſuffer ſo, when he knoweth no wickedneſſe in him, for whoſoever doth thus, is a miſerable comforter, or overous or burthenſome, as the Vulg. rendreth it, adding weight to the burthen, which he already beareth to make him ſinke under it, which is againſt the love, that we ought to beare one to another. Verſ. 2.

I alſo could ſpeak as yee do, if your Soule were in my Soules ſtead, I could heap up words againſt you, and ſhake my head at you. He ſpeaketh not thus, ſaith Grogory, as curſing them, for he only intimateth a wish of that which might do their ſoules good, and keeping them from ſinning, as now they did by their proud inſulting over him, whom they ought, if they had any true love in them, to have comforted him, and ſympathized with him in his miſery: For this is one good thing, that cometh of ſuffering, to learn hereby to ſuccour others being in miſery, according to the ſaying, Sepius ipſe miſer miſeris ſuccurrere diſce. Being often in miſery thy ſelf, thou learneſt to ſuccour the miſerable. And our Lord himſelf by his ſufferings, is commended unto us by this, that he knew, how to compaſſionate thoſe that ſuffer: And it is to be noted, that he ſaith not, My Soule, in your Soules ſtead, but yours in mine. For then both he and they, ſhould have been in an evil caſe, but thus it would have been for their good, as hath been ſaid. Verſ. 4. Gregor. Note. Hebr. 2. 18.

But I would ſtrengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips ſhould aſſwage your greife. The vulg. I would move my lips as ſparing you. Whereupon Gregory, Great wiſdome is required in a Preacher, in his ſpeaking againſt the ſinnes of his hearers, for ſome are gentle and eaſy to be wrought upon by reproofe, theſe may be freely reproved, and being thus dealt withall, they will repent: But others are ſtout and proud, and if they be reproved take indignation at it, and are made worſe: That the Teacher then may in moving his lips, ſpare and provide for the good of either, what muſt he do, but freely reprove the one ſort in particular, but not the other, but only by generally ſpeaking againſt ſuch a ſin, as he knoweth him to be guilty of; and in thus doing he ſhall ſpare them both: The firſt ſort by not ſparing to ſpeak unto him, becauſe he will be reformed, and ſo ſhall be ſpared, and not by God be puniſhed for his ſin: And the other by ſparing to ſpeak in particular to him, and only againſt his ſin in generall, for thus he happily may apply it to himſelf, and be aſhamed, and turn. Hebr, the word rendred, Aſſwage your greife, or ſpare you, is חשך ſignifying Prohibere, to withhold, or forbeare, and this is the ſame in effect, with the word Spare, ſo that he meaneth, he would have ſpared to ſpeak ſo, as whereby they ſhould have been ſtirred up againſt him, and made uncapable of good by his ſpeaking, and contrariwiſe frame his ſpeech, ſo as that they might have been hereby benefited and comforted. Verſ. 5. Note.

Though I ſpeak, my greife is not aſſwaged; and though I forbeare, what am I eaſed? That is, I have ſpoken wiſhing, that your ſoules were in my ſoules ſtead, thus to eaſe my minde, or as I could otherwiſe think fit, but this cannot be, neither am I any thing eaſed hereby, or if I hold my peace, I ſhall give you occaſion to think yee have prevailed, and that I am ſuch a wicked man, as yee imagine me to be. Verſ. 6.

But now he hath made me weary, thou haſt made deſolate all my company: As if he had ſaid, I am not only, not eaſed whether I ſpeak or be ſilent, but more oppreſſed in regard of Gods being againſt me, which moſt perplexeth my minde of all other things: And becauſe he is againſt me, he makes Verſ. 7.

my companions and friends against me also, for thus a man that hath no hope, but despaireth of Gods favour, or wanteth all sense hereof, takes God now to be his enemy, and is hereby utterly discomforted: And to shew that his apprehensions were such, touching God at this time; he goeth on

Vers. 8. V. 8. 9. Saying in the bitternesse of his Soul, Thou hast filled me with Vers. 9. wrinkles, which is a witnesse against me. &c. He teareth me with his wrath, who hateth me and gnasheth upon me with his teeth, mine enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me. Whereby saith Ferus, we may see, in what a perplexed estate wicked reprobates shall be at the last day, when God shall declare himself to be such an enemy unto them indeed; for so much as one of his elect, and a most rare man, but conceiving him to be against him, because he had no present sense of his favour, was thus extremly troubled.

Note. Ferus.

Vers. 10. They have gaped upon me with their mouth, they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully, &c. Having spoken of his trouble inwardly, for Gods seeming harsh dealing towards him, now he turneth himself to speak of these his false friends, and there enemy-like carriage towards him: For then they gaped upon him with their mouths, and smote him upon the cheek, when they spake so reproachfully to him, charging him as an oppressor and tyrant, that had entered into battel against God, as it were, as Eliphaz had spoken with ful mouth, chap. 15.

Vers. 12. I was at ease, but he hath broken me asunder, &c. That is, God by his Vers. 17. judgments upon me and mine; and so he proceedeth in shewing the greatnesse of his sufferings, to Vers. 17. Wherein he pleadeth for himself, saying, Not for any injustice in my hands, also my prayer is pure. Here Job justifieth not himself, as clear from all sin; but from the iniquity wherewith they charged him, that is, rapine, as the word חמס properly signifieth, and hence one fowle with crooked clawes, viz. The night Owle, is so called, for thus sometime Jerome rendreth the word, therefore he hereby meaneth close and covert seeking, or make a prey of other men with his hands, as the night-owle doth with his clawes of other living creatures in the dark: And he saith, that his prayers were pure, because his hands were pure and clean from bloud, as theirs be not, who get goods by rapine and injustice,

1 Tim. 2. 8. as Isa. 1. 15. Where for this it is said, Your hands are ful of blood: and Vers. 18. lift up pure hands.

O earth cover not thou my bloud, and let my cry have no place. That is, if I have defiled my hands with bloud, by doing violence to my subjects, in any thing through oppressions, inriching my selfe, O earth open thou thy mouth against me, as sometime against Cain shedding his brother Abells bloud, and declare, as by crying aloud, this my wickednes, that God may take revenge upon me, and let not my cry in praying have any place, but let God stop his eares against it. A most patheticall speech, able to move the hearts of his friends to relent to heare it, and streightway to alter their opinion of him; It is as if he had sayd, I perceive that I have hitherto spoken to men obstructed in their eares by a prejudicate opinion against me, now therefore (O earth) I speak to thee who wilt be more ready to heare then they, do thy office as the creature of the righteous Judge, by crying out against me for any blood, that ever hath fallen from my hand upon thee, and spare mee not; And thou (O God) if it be so, as they accuse mee, let my prayers have no place, nor ever prevaile with thee for mercy, of which I stand in so great need. Gregory making all things here allegoricall, without cause applyeth this to the bloud of Christ, which is not hidden, but every where made known by the preaching of the Gospel to have beene shed for our sinnes, as also his crying out when hee suffered.

Vers. 19. Also behold now my witnesse is in heaven. Having called upon the earth, as the manner of Gods Prophets hath sometime beene, as of Moses and Isaiah in particular, against a stubborn and hard hearted people, now hee turneth himselfe to God, of whom hee had spoken before, as his enemy, yet having the teſtimony of a good conſcience; hee was bold to appeal to him, and to oppoſe him as a witneſſe againſt their approbrious calumniations. From which, and that before going, V. 17. not what an evill caſe they are in, that by oppreſſion and tyranny gather worldly goods, the very earth is a witneſſe againſt them, and ceaſeth not to cry out for revenge, and for their cryes and prayers they be of none availe with God. But contrariwiſe, they that do keepe a good conſcience, flee all injuſtice and wrong, are happy in the midſt of all worldly miſeries, for God in Heaven is a witneſſe for them, and ſo it will appeare to the terrour of their traducers, and to their own everlaſting comfort, as is declared, Pſal. 50. 1. 2, 3. Note.

yet

O that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth with his neighbour. Having ſayd, v. 18. that his witneſſe was in heaven, now againe he yet ſetteth forth the majeſty and ſuper-excellency of God above all men. If hee were as a man, hee might be ſummoned to come in for a witneſſe and clear him from the foule aſperſions layd upon him. Verſ. 21.

But for ſo much as hee was not, hee muſt even be content and go now away out of this world, into which hee ſhould never return again, in the account of theſe men wicked, & worthily thus brought to his end, unto which he ſaith, there was but a ſhort time; And in the next Chapter hee correcteth himſelfe, having ſayd here, A few yeares, and I go from whence I ſhall no more return: Saying; Verſ. 22.

CHAP. XVII.

My breath is corrupt, my dayes are extinct, the grave is ready for mee. The neerer a righteous man cometh to his death, the more is hee ſtricken with terrour in reſpect of the Judge being at hand, and the more narrowly doth hee looke into his wayes, and bethinkes himſelfe, if in any thing hee hath ſinned, whereas on the contrary ſide, the wicked towards their end, although they bee troubled at the approach of death, yet they are ſenſible only of their miſery; but for their ſinnes, they never call themſelves in queſtion about them, and ſo either dye and muſt abide the ſeverity of this Judge, or if they eſcape they are no whit amended hereby: But how is it that Job having before ſayd that he had ſinned, now ſayth, I have not ſinned. For ſo it is in vulg. lat. But Hebr. it is, If not illuſions, or illuders with me: Which they that follow the Vulg. ſeek to reconcile thus, if by theſe deceivers I had not ſuch ſinnes laid to my charge, as I am not guilty of, I would not ſtand ſo much upon my own juſtification, as now I do; by them therefore I am forced to ſpeak ſo, as if I had not ſinned; or if it be rendred, Illuſions are not with me. This they ſay is the ſame in effect, with ſaying, ſinnes are not with me, I have not ſinned, and by deceit ſought to hide it. N. Tran. Are there not mockers with me? as if אם לא had the force of an interrogation. Junius, Quando quidem non ſunt Ludificationes apud me. That is, criminations, by which they mock him, in all which there is not much difference, but the ſum of all is this; if we put both the verſes together, I am conſumed and dying, when as I have not deceived the World by making a ſhew of piety openly, but practiſing injuſtice and wrong ſecretly, as I am charged; but have walked uprightly in all things, as God knoweth, in whoſe teſtimony I ſaid before, I truſted againſt all the unjuſt calumnies of theſe men, and thus the doubt is alſo reſolved, and Iobs ſaying before that he had ſinned, and here in effect that he had not ſinned reconciled, he cleares himſelf only from the ſin of diſſimulation, as God alſo did at the firſt, ſaying of him that he was a juſt man, none being like him upon Earth. And doth not mine eye continue in their provocation. The vulg. Verſ. 1. Verſ. 2.

In bitterneſs, as the word alſo ſignifieth: And he ſaith, his eye continueth or lodgeth all night, as the word ſignifieth, in bitterneſs, becauſe he could not ſleep with his eyes, whereby to have any eaſe, when others commonly tooke their reſt, that were toyled in the day. Some refer it to theſe his friends, whom as long as he ſaw about him, deriding and calumniating him, he ſaw objects of bitterneſſe; and ſome to the eye of his minde, lifted up to God in prayer, but yet no ſweetning comming from him, either internally or externally; the firſt is rather to be followed.

Vatabl. Septuag.

Verſ. 3. Lay down now, put me in a ſurety with thee, who is it that will ſtrike hands with me? The vulg. Deliver me, ſet me by thee, and let any mans hand ſtrike againſt me. But N. Tran. Is word for word, according to the Heb. The vulg. looketh more at the ſenſe, then at the ſignification of the words; the meaning whereof is, Ceaſe to perſecute me with thy judgments (O Lord) lay down the peircing weapons of thy wrath, which thou haſt taken up againſt me, and what is this, but deliver me; put me in a pledge of thy favour, by thus reconciling thy ſelf again unto me, and what is this in effect but, for me by thee, who ſeemeſt now to put me far away from thee, for the laſt words they are מי הוא ידו ותקע who is he, he ſhall ſtrike hands with me. That is, if God would do thus for me, what man is there that would be ſo hardy ſtil to oppoſe me, yea he would rather be in league with me, but if he durſt, let him lift up his hand and fight againſt me.

Verſ. 4. For thou haſt hid their heart from underſtanding, therefore ſhalt thou not exalt them. This is by ſome underſtood, as ſpoken of the Caldeans and Sabeans, by ſome of the Devil, but it is plainly meant of theſe his friends, from whoſe hearts, underſtanding aright the cauſe of Jobs ſufferings was taken away, as appeared by their bitter invectives againſt him: Therefore howſoever they magnified themſelves againſt Job, as if they had more underſtanding then he, God he ſaith, would not finally ſo magnifie, but abaſe them before him, wherein he even propheſied of that, which was at the laſt done, when God ſaid, they had not ſpoken ſo right things as Job.

Verſ. 5. He that ſpeaketh flattery to his friend, the eyes of his Children ſhall fayl. Vulg. He promiſeth a prey to his fellowes. Hebr. He appointed his fellowes to a part, or ſheweth them a part, as the word properly ſignifieth. The meaning is, whereas he hath objected rapine to me, he that is Eliphaz, hath given himſelf a nip indeed, who together with his fellowes, Zophar and Bildad, knowing none other happineſſe but that, which ſtandeth in having worldly wealth, have mutually with joy, ſhewed one another goods to be gotten by rapine and wrong, of which they ſpeak ſo much, but their childrens eyes in looking to be inriched hereby, ſhall fayl; the expected goods ſo to be gotten, not coming in, or not continuing as they hoped, but melting away again, as the dew againſt the Sun.

Verſ. 6. He hath alſo made me a by-word of the people, and aforetime I was as a Tabret. The vulg. For theſe laſt words hath, And I am an example before them. Hebr. I am Tophet. The meaning is, the Lord by executing his judgments ſo ſoarely upon me, hath made me ſuch an example of miſery, that when any man will ſpeak proverbially of one extremely miſerable, he will ſay, As miſerable as Job: Yea and this makes my miſery the greater, that it is as a ſport to the prophane, to ſee or heare of a godly man thus afflicted and brought down, as the malicious Jewes looked upon Chriſt hanging upon the Croſs, nodding their heads and laughing at him. The word Tophet was afterwards uſed to ſet forth Hel, as Iſa. 30. Whereupon ſome think, that he meaneth, I am accounted by them, as one almoſt in Hel already, ſo wicked am I thought to be: But becauſe Tophet was not ſpoken of in this ſenſe, til long after Jobs time, this expoſition falleth, for theſe words before time in N. Tran. Hebr. it is, לפנים before them, and therefore I ſee no reaſon why that herein, the tranſlation is altered, if it be asked, why he ſhould ſay, I am Tophet before them, if he meant a ſport: The word ſignifieth a Tabret, an inſtrument, upon which they are merry and rejoyce, to be a Tabret therefore, is to be matter of mirth.

he

Vpright men ſhall be aſtonied at this, and the innocent ſhall ſtir up himſelf againſt the hypocrite. Verſ. 8.

Having ſhewed what the wicked did upon occaſion of his miſeries; now he ſheweth the effects hereof in the righteous, they are aſtoniſhed, as being put to ſeek, what ſhould be the cauſe, why a man ſo juſt as Job was thus handled, for they reſolve, that it is not for his ſinnes, from which he lived ſo free, therefore they conclude, that it is for his tryal, but then it amazeth them again, that others who are ſinfull, and no way in virtue comparable to him, are ſuffered both to live in proſperity, and thus to inſult over him in paine; and hereupon they ſtir up themſelves againſt ſuch hypocrites, that rejoyce in their own worldly happineſſe, thinking none in miſery here, comparable to them, for the favour wherein they are with God, they yet ſtir up themſelves againſt them, being perſwaded, that whatſoever they ſuffer in this World, they are in a better eſtate to Godward then they, and that they, who thus judge the juſt for their ſufferings, are but hypocrites, howſoever they flouriſh outwardly, overlooking therefore all their worldly pompe, and contemning it, they ſpare not to cry them down with diſdainful ſpeeches, as they are worthy for their inſolencies, as Job ſpared not to do by theſe, when he was in the loweſt ebb of miſery, and they were in the height of worldly proſperity: And hereby a wicked hypocrite may be known, and a right godly man, the one dareth not to condemne any innocent and unblamable liver, under what croſſes ſoever he ſeeth him, but is offended, and ſtirreth up himſelf againſt thoſe that do, the other meaſuring the favour of God towards men only by outward things, vilifie and cenſure, as worſe then nought ſuch as ſuffer extremity, whatſoever their converſations and dealings have been in all the time of their proſperity. Note.

The juſt alſo ſhall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands ſhall grow ſtronger and ſtronger. Verſ. 9.

That is, if he ſeeth other juſt men to ſuffer, or ſuffereth himſelf, he will conſtantly go on ſtil in the way of righteouſneſſe, and ſhall be ſtrengthened more and more, even by ſufferings, as knowing, that they work a ſurpaſſing weight of glory, that ſhall be revealed. 2 Cor. 4. 17.

My Dayes are paſt, my purpoſes are broken off, even the thoughts of my heart. Verſ. 11.

For the words of V. 10. Return and come. He herein challengeth them, as it were, to unite their forces, and to come together again into liſts againſt them, preſuming, as he ſaith, that he ſhould be one amongſt them, wiſe enough to anſwer rightly to that, which he had ſaid to clear themſelves of the imputation, that he had laid upon them, or to make good that wherewith they had charged him: But whilſt he was thus ſpeaking, his pangs oppreſſing him, maketh him to interrupt his ſpeech, as if not likely to live, or if he did live, to have another brunt with them, in way of argumentation, for the diſtractions of his thoughts and meditations, making him not himſelf as in where, through the extremity of his pangs, as it is with any man, though never ſo able, when he is ſo much oppreſſed in his body, and tewours of minde together, that he cannot take his natural reſt, night after night, as it was now with this poor man Job: And that this is his meaning, the next words V. 12. ſhew, They turn my night into day, my light is ſhort, &c. That is, theſe diſtracting pangs take all ſleep away from mine eyes, and ſo do greatly diſtemper me. Verſ. 12.

If I wait, the grave is my houſe, &c. That is, if I hope to have any better reſt, my grave muſt be my houſe, where I ſhall take it: Here I live but in common with others, and ſo as it were in a throng of troubles, where I look for no quiet, but my grave is my proper houſe, where none elſe ſhall come to trouble me, but I ſhall lye as in a ſweet ſleep, without diſturbance. Verſ. 13.

I have

Verſ. 14 I have ſaid to corruption thou art my Father, and to the worme thou art my Mother and Sister. Becauſe he had ſpoken of the grave as his houſe; now he mentioneth the family dwelling there with him, corruption and worms; of going thither, amongſt which he ſheweth, how deſirous he was, and that with hope of finding more comfort there then here: He ſheweth by calling the one his Father, and the other his Mother and Siſters: For whither do men in miſery, in a ſtrange country deſire rather to go, then to the houſe of their Parents; wherefore Job in ſaying thus, ſheweth, how willing, yea deſirous he was to dye: And of corruption indeed man cometh, for what elſe is the ſeed and bloud of generation? And therefore to dye, and to be put into the grave, ſhould cauſe ſuch horrour in us; for we thus go, but to our mother earth, out of which we were firſt taken and made.

Note.

Verſ. 15. And where is now my hope, who ſhall ſee it? That is, what hope have I more of living and injoying proſperity here, or who ſhall ſee it? All the hope then that I have, is in death, and not in this life; wherein the righteous are contrary to the wicked, with whom, if the things of this life be gone, all hope is gone.

Verſ. 16. They ſhall go down to the bars of the pit, when our reſt is together in the duſt. This is commonly underſtood of Job, and all his things, which he dying, ſhould together with him be at an end, he, if he had never ſo much, not having any comfort of them more for ever, wherefore the faithful are not to be ſo much troubled at worldly croſſes, but comfort themſelves in this, that there is reſt to come after death, what troubles ſoever they have indured in this World.

CHAP. XVIII.

HEre Bildad taketh his turn again to ſpeak againſt Job. Firſt bidding to ceaſe ſpeaking, and to mark, V. 2. And then he beginneth thus, V. 3. Wherefore are we counted as Beaſts, and reputed vile in your ſight. He ſpeaketh in the plural number, both here and V. 2. as ſome think, meaning both Job and Eliphaz, whoſe ſpeeches were ſo long, that he was hereby, he thought, held too long from ſpeaking; as alſo his fellow Zophar, whereby he lacked the words of Eliphaz, as well as Jobs, as if he had not ſpoken home enough unto him, but that he could ſpeak better. Some, that for reverence to Job, he ſpake in the plural, as men uſe to do to great perſons, as Kings. Some that he thought Job to be poſſeſſed by an evil ſpirit, whereby he ſpake ſo preſumptuouſly, as he thought, both to God and to them: But it is rather to be thought, that he ſpake thus, as bending himſelf both againſt Job, and ſuch as he counted him to be, hypocrites, which made a great ſhew of piety: Becauſe he had ſpoken of upright and righteous men, chap. 17. 8. 9. Who though they ſeeing him in ſuch miſery, would not judge of him as they did, to be diſcouraged from walking, in the like righteous waies that he had done; Bildad therefore putting him, and them now together, moſt probably ſpeaketh thus in the plural number; and whereas he ſaith, Wherefore are we counted as Beaſts? He hath reference herein to that which Job had ſpoken of, underſtanding being taken from their heart, chap. 17. 4. for what is a man void of underſtanding, but as a bruit beaſt? Gregory ſaith, that Bildad in objecting to Job, that he counted them as Beaſts, that in him Hereticks are ſet forth, who ſtomake it much; that the faithful take upon them to reprove them, as carried away by errour, as if the knowledge of the truth reſided in them only; and all they had no more underſtanding then Beaſts: And in diſdaining this they ſay, He teareth himſelf in his anger, ſhall the earth be forſaken for thee, and the rock be remo-

Eugubin.

Cajetan.

Philip.

Gregor.

Verſ. 4.

ved

vea out of his place: that is, they who pretend that the Truth is with them only, being but a few, destroy their own souls, in this their mad mindedneſs, which they cal zeal for the truth, for ſo the vulg. rendreth it, Why deſtroyeſt thou thy Soul in thy fury? ſhal the earth be forſaken for thee? That is, can it poſſibly be that God leaving all other men deſtitute of the truth, which fill with their numbers ſo many nations of the earth, ſhould reveal it to thee, and to ſuch as thou art: ſhal the rock be removed out of his place. That is, the foundation of the truth, of which Chriſt ſayth, Upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell ſhall not prevaile againſt it; Shall this be removed and faile from being any more? if it be abſurd to averr ſuch things, then that which thou arrogateſt to thy ſelf, certainly is abſurd: that is, to be the only one, that knoweſt the truth. And if we upon this ground, thus layd by Gregory, the Roman Catholicks, that now are, be moſt aptly ſet forth by Bildad and his fellowes, and conſequently they are the moſt notorious hereticks of theſe times: For all theſe things moſt aptly agree to them; they ſay that ſuch as have reformed themſelves from their errours deſtroy their own Soules, being carried as it were by the ſpirit of fury, under the pretence of zeale, to ſeperate from them, and to declaime againſt them, as antichriſtian. For they ſay that in ſo doing they are gone from the Catholick Church and cannot be ſaved. Secondly, They reaſon againſt them from their own univerſality, the faith imbraced by them, ſpread into all Countries of the earth, whereas they of the reformed religion are but few in compariſon of them. 3. From this that Chriſt hath built their Church upon a rock, that cannot be removed, and this they ſay is Peter, and the ſucceſſion of Biſhops of Rome after him theſe 1600. yeares, by the judgment then of this their own moſt learned Biſhop, they muſt needs be the arch Hereticks of theſe times, that do ſo aptly anſwer to their tipe, Bildad ſpeaking in his words, and ſeeking by his reaſons to convince the true Church, and to juſtify themſelves. Matth. 16. 16.

Yea the light of the wicked ſhal be put out, & the ſpark of his fire ſhall not ſhine. The vulger, Nonne lux impij, ſhall not the light of the wicked be put out. In this and V. 6. he having as he thought convinced Job to be as a mad man for his oppoſing of that, which he and his fellowes had moſt truly taught, for he ſpake of him as one that thought to remove the rock out of his place, and to make the earth to be forſaken, now he falleth upon him, as notoriouſly wicked, threatning Gods judgments againſt him, whereby his proſperity meant by the light ſhould be turned into adverſity, and his life be ended by an untimely death, V. 7. Verſ. 5.

The ſteps of his ſtrength ſhall be ſtreightned, and his own counſell ſhall caſt him down. That is, the ways wherein he hath walked, bearing himſelf upon his own power, which in this world he hath attained, ſhall be made ſo ſtreight, that he cannot walk in them any more oppreſſing others, as he in times paſt did, becauſe his wealth and might ſhall faile him, and the counſell which he followed before to overthrow others ſhall turn to his own overthrow and undoing, God thus juſtly puniſhing him in his kinde. Verſ. 7.

He is caſt into a net by his own feet, this is ſpoken of a man that uſed to go to circumvent and catch others, as in a net or ſnare, when he is taken and deſtroyed, this is called the net of his own feet, becauſe ſuch a net as he went and layd for others, and cauſed thereby. For theſe Words, V. 9. Verſ. 8.

The robber ſhall prevaile againſt him. The Vulger. hath it, Sitis exardeſcet, Thirſt ſhall burn in him: Wherein it is alluded to a wild beaſt in dry places, taken and held in a Snare till he becometh extreamly thirſty, and the word צמם ſignifieth either thirſty or robbers, by which laſt it is rather to be rendred, both becauſe it is a plurall צמם and becauſe the Caldean Robbers had robbed Job, at which he doubtleſſe aimed. Verſ. 9.

Terrours ſhall make him afraid on every ſide, and ſhall drive him to his feet. The vulg. Shall involve his feet, Hebr. His feet ſhall diſperſe him. That is, feare fear making him to flee, but uncertain whither, Verſ. 13.

Verſ. 13. It ſhall devoure the ſtrength of his skin, and the firſt born of death ſhall devour his ſtrength. The vulg. For ſtrength hath armes, and for ſtrength of his skin, the beauty of his skin, expounded by Gregory of his worldly glory, which

Gregory. when a wicked man being before in proſperity falleth, vaniſheth away, and ſo doth his power and authority. By the firſt born of death ſin is meant in generall, and pride in particular, becauſe this was the firſt ſin in the world, and hereby moſt rich men are overthrown, who might have ſtood, if together with their riches they had had humility joyned, v. 14.

Verſ. 14. His confidence ſhall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and bring him to the King of terrours: The vulg. rendreth both imparatively, Let his truſt be rooted out, and let the King of deſtruction trample him under foote; That is death, which as a King ſubdueth and bringeth under all men be they never ſo proud. V. 15. 16. &c. He ſheweth other horrible effects of wickedneſs in the houſe of the wicked, in his family and all things that be ong unto him, making all men aſtoniſhed at it, V. 20. as Job had before ſpoken, of the aſtoniſhment of the righteous at the ſufferings of ſuch, Chap. 17. 8.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſ. 3. TEn times have yee reproached mee, yee are not aſhamed, that yee eſtrange your ſelves from me. They had ſpoken yet but five times againſt Job,

Gregor. ſayth Gregory, how then calleth hee them ten times? and he anſwereth, that hee meaneth not only the vexation that he had by their ſpeaking ſo often to him, but alſo by his own ſpeakings in anſwering to their calumnies; becauſe, as he once ſayd, whether he ſpake or held his peace, he could have none eaſe: Some others will have a certain number put for an uncertain, and the number of ten, becauſe it is a number of perfection, and therefore in ſaying ten times he intimateth, that they had even ſpoken to the full whatſoever they could deviſe to aggravate his miſery, ſo that now for ſhame they had need hold their peace, and not multiply words any more in that way; and this I think to be the beſt, for it ſtandeth not with reaſon to underſtand by the manifold reproaches of him, his own ſpeeches in any part whereby he defended himſelf againſt them.

Verſ. 4. Be it known indeed that I have erred, mine errour remaineth with my ſelf.

Verſ. 5. If yee will magnify your ſelves againſt me, and plead againſt me my reproach. Here Job humbleth himſelfe, not denying, but that he might have erred, but he ſayth it was to himſelf, he did beare the ſhame and reproach thereof abundantly, and humbled himſelf, therefore, but they not like friends, nor like men that feared God, taking occaſion from hence for the magnifying of themſelves over him, to plead theſe his ſufferings againſt him hereby, and herefrom to argue, that he was notoriouſly wicked as they did.

But when they ſaw another, no way inferiour to them, thus dejected, it ſhould have ſtricken fear into them, and have made them thus to reaſon with themſelves, we are as well worthy of theſe judgments as he, what need then have we to humble, and not lift up our ſelves againſt him, leaſt God

Note. ſeeing it deſtroy us with a far greater deſtruction then him: For this uſe do the righteous make of Gods judgments upon others, but contrariwiſe to take occaſion hereupon to ſtrout out themſelves, as if they were better, and to inſult over the afflicted is the part of men farr gone in wickedneſſe, that may well expect, that their turne ſhall come next to drink of the cup of Gods wrath filled even up to the brim.

Verſ. 6. Know now that GOD hath overthrown me, and compaſſed me with his net;

This

This he ſpake in reference to that which Bildad had ſayd of the wicked, being taken in a net and ſnare. The vulg. At the leaſt now underſtand that God hath not afflicted me with an equal judgment, he that compaſſed me with his ſcourges: but the word rendred in New Tranſlation overthrown is ſmitten עוֹתַנִי and in the reſt it agreeth wel with the Hebr. But they who defend the vul. ſay that עוּת ſignifieth to ſmite ſo, as to oppres with his power which ſmiteth, which is in effect the ſame with the vul. But this being granted, what ſhall we ſay, can any man ſay, that God judgeth unjuſtly in any caſe, without the ſin of blaſphemy? It is anſwered, that Job meaneth nothing elſe, but that if he ſmote him thus, as they conceived, making him an example to others, for his notorious ſinns, he proceeded not with equity againſt him, for he by Gods own teſtimony to Satan, after that he was firſt ſmitten in all that he had, ſuffered ſo much by Satans inſtigation without cauſe, aud therefore if theſe judgments had come upon him for his ſinnes and not for ſome other occult reaſon, known only to God, they had not been juſt or equall: But all Gods proceedings in judgment are juſt, therefore his meaning is ſuch as hath been ſayd, and that his friends ought not as they did, to looke at his ſinns as the cauſe, but conceive that God had ſome other end in thus ſmiting him, and therefore it was their part and duty to forbeare calumniating him any more, and contrariwiſe to pitty and comiſerate his caſe: Job ſaith Gregory ſinned not herein, becauſe he ſpake no more then God ſpake of him to the Devill, Chap. 2. concluding, In quo itaque peccavit, quia authoris ſui ſententia in nullo diſcrepavit.

Behold I cry out of wrong, but I am not heard, I cry aloud but there is no judgment. Job having ſayd, that he was not dealt juſtly withal, V. 6. Now beginneth to declare wherein: Firſt, In reſpect of God, from hence to the end of V. 12. Secondly, In reſpect of men, V. 13. &c. to the end of V. 19. Thirdly, In reſpect of his ſufferings in his Body, V. 20. Verſ. 7.

For the firſt, herein he ſayth the ſame in effect that he did before, he was not equally dealt withall for this; that in his extreamity of ſufferings his prayers were not heard, he had pleaded hereby, that the ſufferings layd upon him, not for his ſinnes, might be taken off, but he could have no audience: But it may be ſayd, if they were layd upon him for his tryall, and the proofe of his patience, and conſequently for his greater future good, how could he ſay without ſin? that he could have no judgment, or jnſtice, Sol. Sinn he did not in this or any other thing that he ſayd, for if he did, as Gregory ſayth well, the Devill had prevailed, and would have triumphed, and with joy have been ready to object unto God, that it had fallen out as he had ſayd, and that he was deceived in the man, whom he had ſo much magnifyed. In ſaying therefore that he was not heard, neither could have juſtice done him, he meaneth nothing elſe but that his extreame ſuffering continued ſtill, he not knowing wherefore, although God knew very well, and through Gods delaying to here him he was judged by men to be an extraordinary ſinner, which was in them a moſt unjuſt judgment, V. 8. Gregory.

He hath fenced up my way that I cannot paſs, he hath ſet darkneſs in my paths: This is the ſecond thing in his Declaration, his way out of trouble was, as it were, fenced about, or guarded with ſuch a ſtrong guard to keep him in miſery ſtill, that he ſaw not how he ſhould ever get out, as a man going in the dark cannot ſee his way, but is wildred, and by darkneſs alſo he meant the darkneſs of his underſtanding, becauſe there might be ſomewhat in him at which GOD was offended, although he knew it not, and ſo he was of a perplexed mind, as being uncertain, what the iſſue of theſe his calamityes ſhould be: For he had yet no inward comfort, but as ſufferings without, ſo terrours within, as other faithful ſervants of God have alſo ſometimes had? and Chriſt himſelf hanging upon the Croſs, when he cryed out, My God my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? But as he was heard, and had a way

Note. made for him out of all his miſeries, ſo Job at length had, and that with great advantage; and ſo ſhall all the righteous have in Gods good time, though for the preſent they want all ſenſe of this comfort, which ſhould make them hope againſt hope, in all times of greateſt temptations.

Verſ. 9. He hath ſtript me of my glory, and taken the Crown from my head. This is the third particular, at which he found himſelf greived, as being wronged; for the underſtanding of which, according to the letter, there needeth no expoſition; for Job being ſo great a man before, lived in great glory, which was all now gone: But here is ſomething further meant, viz. his righteouſneſſe; for righteouſneſſe is as a glorious garment: For which the Pſalmiſt

Pſ. 132. ſaith, Let thy Preiſts be clothed with righteouſneſs. Of this Job counted himſelf ſtript, when injuſtice and wrong was by theſe men laid to his charge, and God continued ſtil ſilent; not doing for him, ſo as they might be confuted: For the crown of his head, that was the reward of righteouſneſſe in Heaven, which is given to thoſe that overcome; but from him is this crown taken away; that lyeth down under ſufferings, looking only at worldly things, and not at heavenly, hereby to be comforted againſt

Note. them: But he that ſometime doth thus, may raiſe up himſelf again, and ſo recover it being almoſt loſt: And the Garment of righteouſneſſe; which righteouſneſſe may be well called in ſome, for their putting it on outwardly, but not being made hereby glorious within, as it is ſaid, the Kings Daughter is: This I ſay a man may be ſtript off, and recover it again by repenting, after fading through infirmity under ſufferings, and have it ſo fixed in his heart, as never to be denuded hereof any more.

Pſ 45.

Verſ. 10. He hath deſtroyed me on every ſide, and I am gone, and my hope hath he removed like a tree. Here is the fourth particular in his declaration, he was not only ſmitten, but on every ſide, if he turned him to the left hand or to the right, if he look before or behinde him, he ſaw nothing but deſtruction on the left hand, and behinde him were worldly things, before him and on the right hand were heaveuly; for thoſe of the World they were gone; of the great abundance which he had, there being nothing left, for thoſe that pertained to ſalvation, the ſpirit comforting in all ſufferings; this alſo was now gone: Not only men, but God ſeeming alſo to be againſt him, and for the preſent his hope was no better, then of a dead tree plucked up by the roots, which cannot grow again.

Verſ. 11. He hath kindled his wrath againſt me, and counteth me as one of his enemies. This is a further amplyfication of that which he ſaid, V. 10, ſhewing that the Lord in deſtroying him on every ſide, had ſet fire, as it were, round about him, as an enemy doth by a City which he beſeigeth and overcometh, and burneth it in every part down to the ground: And that nothing might be wanting to make it evident, that God was ſet to deſtroy him, he

Verſ. 12. addeth, V. 12. His troups come together, and raiſe up their way againſt me. &c. Wherein ſpeaking of troupes, he may well be thought to relate to the bands of the Arabians and Sabeans, the fire and windes before ſpoken of that deſtroyed his Children, Servants, and Cattel, in a very ſhort time: All which being put together, O! How great were Jobs miſeries: But this was not all, for V. 13. He proceedeth to his ſufferings, in reſpect

Verſ. 13. of other men, ſaying, firſt, He hath put my Brethren far from me, and mine
Verſ. 14. acquaintance. In reckoning up theſe he nameth. Firſt, His Brethren.
15. 16 17. Secondly, Acquaintance. Thirdly, Kinsfolk. Fourthly, Familiar friends.
18. 19. Fifthly, Maides. Sixtly, Men-ſervants. Seventhly, His own Wife. Eeightly, Children. Ninthly, Inward friends.

Touching all which it is eaſily to be underſtood, according to the letter, what was meant hereby; he had no kinſman or friend abroad, or any in his houſe that regarded him, to miniſter to him in this his miſery: But

Gregory. myſtically here ſaith Gregory, Iob was a tipe of Chriſt, to whom the Jews were as all theſe Brethren and kinsfolk in the flesh; daily converſant with with him, and ſuch as even before his coming in the flesh, were familiarly acquainted with him, by reading the Prophets, out of whoſe propheſies they taught him to come: They are alſo called his maids & ſervants, becauſe of their ſervile condition under the law: And yet ſome of them; as the Prieſt and Levites, ſerved him more inwardly, as maides do, waiting in their Chamber upon them: They are alſo called his Wife, becauſe he had joyned the Jewish Church to him, as in marriage; but ſhe abhoreth his breath, becauſe he taught himſelf to be the Meſſiah, counting it an abomination, that any man ſhould be the Son of God, and his equal: And theſe Brethren and kinſfolk, are ſaid to have ſtood far from him, and to have eſtranged themſelves; yea his moſt inward friends: Becauſe the Scribes and Phariſees, and expounders of the Law, and ſo his privy Counſellors, as it were, received him not; but ſtood off a great diſtance in their affections from him, yea they were at defiance with him: And herein the children, that is, the common people, who are children in underſtanding; and therefore in Vulg. Tr. rendred Fools, followed them, when they had a little before cryed Hoſanna, crying by their inſtigation, Crucifie him. And of the ſame being Servants he ſaith, that he called unto them and they would not heare, becauſe when in his teaching he ſought to draw them ſaying, Come to me all yee that are weary, &c. And again, If any man thirſteth let him come to me, &c. Yet none of them were moved to come; he prevailed no more then the charmer with the deafe Adder, yea though he intreated them with his mouth; whereby is intimated in what a manner he ſhould be amongſt them, not as a Maſter commanding, but a ſervant intreating: And it is to be noted, that he imputeth all to God, that he had made all about him, thus ſtrange to him; and that he calleth the Troupes or robbers, that came againſt him, Gods Troupes: For hereby he intimateth, that whoſoever they be, by whom we ſuffer, we ought not to look ſo much at them, as by their own power doing any thing againſt us, as at God, by whoſe permiſſion and providence, they do it for our puniſhment, which we moſt commonly by our ſinnes deſerve, or he cauſeth to come for our tryal. One queſtion before I leave this catalogue of Friends, being now eſtranged, is moved amongſt Expoſitors, and diverſly anſwered, what is meant by this ſaying, V. 17. I intreated her for the children of my body. Becauſe Job was now without children: In vulg. rendred, I intreated the children. and Hebr. it is לִבְנֵי to the children, or ל being taken only for a note of the accuſative Caſe, I intreated the children. And againſt this reading, I confeſſe, I have nothing to ſay: But then what children were theſe? It is not worth the while to mention ſome Expoſitors, as that theſe were children, which Job had after the deſtruction of his ſeven Sonnes and three Daughters; for there was no time for him to have more betwixt that time and this: The moſt probable is, that theſe were his Grand-children; for although all his Sonnes and Daughters dyed, yet they were firſt men and women grown, and it is not improbable, but that having each one his houſe, ſome of them had children; which were out of the dint of that fall: And theſe he might well call the children of his body, becauſe they came from his body, although not immediatly; and they commonly are as deare to Grand-Fathers as their own children, and love them as well: Again amongſt others then of whom he ſought comfort in his miſery, but found none, he ſpeakes of theſe alſo; in whoſe ſight his viſage was ſo altered, that they would not know him any more, then others of his houſe: Some ſay, that theſe children, were ſuch as were born in his houſe, coming of his Servants; but then he would not have called them the children of his body. Some, that they were children which he had by Concubines, which it was not unlawful for a man then to have, for the increaſe of poſterity; but becauſe we read not before or after, that Iob had any, but only one Wife, and ſhe was fruitful enough: So that by her he had ten children before this, and that Math. 11. 28. Ioh. 7 3.

Note.

which firſt moved Abraham to go in to another beſides Sarah, was her barrenneſſe, and Iob was a faithful man like Abraham; I cannot agree with them, that hold, that Iob had any Concubine, or children by Concubines, but only by his Wife.

Verſ. 20. My bone cleaveth to my skin and my fleſh, and I am eſcaped with the skin of my teeth. The vulg. My bone, the fleſh being conſumed, cleaveth to my skin, and only lips are left about my teeth. But herein the ſenſe is more reſpected then the ſignification of the words, which is in N. Tran. For the meaning is, that he was nothing but skin and bones: ſo greatly was he pined away by his ſufferings, and the words may be brought to this; my bone cleaveth to my skin, and my fleſh, Sub intellige, is gone, and I have only remayning the skin of my teeth (or about my teeth) and what is that, but lips fallen away through leanneſſe to a skin. So that Iob here ſetteth forth the poor and conſumptuous eſtate of his body, through his continual pangs; and that it muſt be thus underſtood appeareth, becauſe he, whoſe bones cleave to his skin, hath no fleſh left, but it is all conſumed away: Gregory, in applying this to Chriſt, that his fleſh conſumed, ſetteth forth his Apoſtles, who were as the fleſh, neareſt to the bone, who were neareſt unto him, but at the time of his paſſion, they all fled from him; but the women that miniſtred of their goods unto him, were as his skin cleaving conſtantly to him, following him to the croſs, and afterwards to the grave, to imbalme his body with ſpices, which they had provided: For his lips left him about his teeth, they were the Apoſtles, who although they fled from him, yet they talked of him; for two of them travelling towards Emmaus, when he joyned himſelf with them, ſpake ſtil of him, but yet beleived not in him, neither had they the courage to do any thing more pertayning to their miniſtry; they were as teeth indeed, being bidden by him in the perſon of Peter, kil and eate, that is, by reproving mens ſinnes, to mortifie them hereunto, and to leave them, as it were, with their teeth, that they might by being converted, be incorporated into them, by being made one with them in faith, and conſequently with Chriſt, who is the head of all beleivers, and they altogether his body.

Gregor.

Act. 10.

Verſ. 21. Have pitty upon me (O yee my friends) For the hand of God hath touched me. Although they have been his friends, yet now they were turned enemies; why then doth he call them friends? To this Gregory ſaith, that even perſecutors are by the faithful to be looked upon as friends, becauſe their ſufferings by them are turned to good unto them, as the railing of Shimei upon David, God turning his curſing into bleſſing, by reſtrayning David, and bringing him in all humility to ſubmit himſelf unto him, as he alſo did by Job, bidding theſe men at laſt to crave of Job, that he would offer ſacrifice for them, that their lives might be ſpared. The hand of God hath touched me: It was Satan that did him the miſchief, yet he imputeth it to God, becauſe done not without his permiſſion, Verſ. 22. Why do yee perſecute me as God, and are not ſatisfied with my fleſh? God is ſaid to perſecute his ſervants, when he inflicteth greivous punishments upon them, for their ſinnes; which he knoweth to be in them, although men do not, neither do they know it by themſelves: As Paul ſaith of himſelf, 1. Cor. 4. 4. So David ſaith, that he perſecuted the detractors from their neighbours; but what meaneth he by ſaying, Why do yee perſecute me as God? For if they did it as God, what reaſon had he to complain of their doings?

Verſ. 22.

Pſal. 111.

Note. Sol. They are ſaid to perſecute as God, who by word or deed oppreſſe other men, and vex them externally; but becauſe they have another intention in perſecuting, doing it out of malice or envy, God out of love; and they being ſinners alſo, as well as he whom they perſecute, but God without ſin, they are moſt unlike unto God, yea wicked for their ſo doing, not only in regard of the corrupt minde, from whence their perſecutions come, but for their pride, in that being ſinful men, they take upon them as God, and for their unmercifulneſſe, perſecuting him, whom God hath ſmitten, whereas they ought rather to comfort him in this caſe, as they would be dealt withall, if they ſhould fall into the like miſery: And this is further intimated, in the next words, And are not ſatisfied with my flesh. As if he had ſaid, yee do as if yee thought it not ſuffering enough for me, that my flesh is conſumed, and I am brought to skin and bones. The vulg. rendreth it affirmitively. Yee are ſatisfied with my flesh. According to which Gregory ſaith, that detractors feed as it were upon the flesh of thoſe, whom they calumniate and ſpeak againſt, like ſavage Canibals, or beaſts: But the ſpeech is negative, Hebr. Although this may be alſo thus made the ſenſe.

Oh that my words were now written, O that they were printed in a book. Verſ. 23.
Job ſeeing, that nothing elſe would prevail with his cruel friends, who ſo greatly vexed him, but to remember them of the reſurrection, and of the judgment to come, falleth now to the ſpeaking of it; but becauſe it is a matter moſt weighty, and worthy the ſerious conſideration of all men; he ſpeaketh not of it without a preamble, expreſſing his deſire, that it might be publiſhed in writing, never to be obliterated or blotted out, but to ſtand as an everlaſting monument of his faith, all men learning of him to hold the ſame, to the worlds end, wherein he had his deſire, not only this, but his whole book, ſo ful of divine inſtruction, preparatory to that day, being committed to writing, and put amongſt the Canonical books of Scriptures; over which Gods providence ſo vigilently wattcheth, that although Heaven and Earth paſſe away, yet not one jot or tittle hereof ſhall paſſe, but all that is written herein ſhall be fulfilled, and therefore this propheſied of by this holy man ſo long before, of the reſurrection of the dead: And what Job ſaid here, Chriſt ſaid alſo, The dead ſhall heare the voice of the ſon of man and come forth, they that have done good to everlaſting life, they that have done evil to everlaſting condemnation. After the preamble Job cometh to the memorable words which he had to ſpeak. I know that my Redeemer liveth. Verſ. 24.
That is, Chriſt Jeſus ſhall come, and although he ſhall ſuffer death to ranſome us from our ſinnes, yet he ſhall live again, and live eternally, and come at the laſt day to judge all men. And I ſhall behold him not with other, but with thoſe ſame eyes, &c. Verſ. 5.
Whereby he ſheweth, that the true faith is to beleive, that as Chriſt liveth again after death, ſo ſhall all the faithful, and that in the ſame bodies, in which they lived before in this World; neither ſhall their being conſumed in the grave with worms hinder it, wherein Gregory ſaith, Euticius the Biſhop of Conſtantinople oppoſed him, declaring in his book of the reſurrection, that men riſing again ſhould have ayrean bodies and not fleſhly, yea more ſubtle then the aire, abuſing hereunto that place of the Apoſtle, It is ſown a natural body, but ſhall riſe again a ſpiritual, and as the grain caſt into the ground, riſeth not again the ſame body that was ſown, ſo is the reſurrection of the body: But all this is not ſpoken to teach, that the body riſing again ſhall not be the ſame, to every ſoule it is one body of flesh being reunited, but being then more excellent, as the grain coming up hath ſomewhat added unto it, nothing taken from it; for which it is ſaid, not to be barely the ſame, but a new body given it of God at his pleaſure; in like manner our bodies ſhall riſe the ſame, but with in addition, making them more excellent, as without blemiſh or deformity, lameneſſe, or blindneſſe, or other imperfection, which here they had, as ſpirits not carried now by the weight of the flesh downward, but upward, and not needing meat or drink, or ſleep, as now they do; yet viſible with bodily eyes and palpable, as was the body of Chriſt after his reſurrection; and he ſaith, that Tiberius Conſtantinus calling him to him in ſecret, and hearing the difference betwixt them, and reaſons, condemned his book to be burnt as heretical, and within a ſhort time after both he and the ſaid Euticius fel ſick, and Euticius ſhortly after dyed. Joh. 5. 29. Matth. 5. 2 Cor. 15.

But

Verſ. 28. But yee ſhould ſay, why perſecute we him, ſeeing the root of the matter is found in me. The vulg. Why ſay yee, let us perſecute him ſeeing the root of the word is found in him. As if it were their ſpeech, ſtirring up one another to proceed in perſecuting him ſtil, as if there were matter enough to be found in him or his ſpeeches, if they were wel looked into, ſo to do; but the Hebr. will not bare that reading, but as in N. Tran. and his meaning is, that by what he had ſaid, they might perceive ſuch a root of the feare of God to be in him, that if they would conſider it, in ſtead of proceeding to perſecute him with their virulent tongues any more, they would check themſelves for that which they had ſaid, ſaying, Why doe we ſpeak thus againſt him? And he calleth the feare of God, and the faith, of which he made this famous Declaration, the root of the word, as דבר alſo ſignifieth, becauſe growing of that word, which he declared, the word, that Ioh. 1. 1. was God, Chriſt Jeſus, who had thus inlightned him; For what man that ſpeakes for God, durſt ſpeak againſt him; that hath Chriſt the Son of God in him by faith: And ſo the reproaches caſt upon him, redound to Chriſt himſelf, with whom the true Beleiver is one.

Verſ. 29. Be yee afraid of the ſword, for wrath bringeth the puniſhment of the ſword, that yee may know that there is a judgment. The vulg. For the ſword is the revenger of iniquities, and know yee, that there is a judgment. Hebr. it is. The wrath of iniquity is the ſword: That is, iniquity cauſeth wrath to come from God, in way of revenge therefore; which is all one with the Vulg. Tran. And therefore it is herein to be preferred, and ſo likewiſe in the laſt clauſe: It is then, as if he had ſaid, if nothing elſe will move you to ceaſe perſecuting me, let this move you; the wrath of God is ready, as a ſharp ſword to be unſheathed againſt you, for this your wickedneſſe; flee therefore from it, by ceaſing thus to perſecute me any more, and let not this my warning, which I give you to flee from the wrath to come, ſeem as a vain talking unto you, but know aſſuredly, that there ſhall be a judgment at the day of the reſurrection, which no man that perſiſteth in his wickedneſſe, ſhall be able to indure.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 2. THerefore do my thoughts cauſe me to anſwer thee, and for this I make haſt.

Verſ. 3. I have heard the check of my reproach, and the ſpirit of underſtanding cauſeth me to anſwer.

Zophar, who ſpeaketh here, being moved at the day of Judgment ſpoken of, ſeemeth to have been much troubled at it, as not being able to ſay, but that Job ſpake rightly: For which he ſaith, that his thoughts, into which he entred, upon conſideration thereof, cauſed him to make haſt to anſwer, being the more put on for the reproach of his reproofs before going, Chap. 12, 13. And he would not be thought but to underſtand well, both what Job had ſaid, and how to anſwer him, and make him aſhamed, notwithſtanding all the eloquent ſpeeches that came from him, which he thought ſo excellent. And what is it, that he ſaith by way of anſwer, but a repetition of the ſame things often objected againſt Job before, and of the judgements of God in this life againſt the wicked, of whom he took Job to be now detected for one, and that moſt notorious, as his puniſhments were the greateſt that ever yet had been laid upon any man. But herein Zophar ſeemeth to wave the laſt ſpeech of Job, touching the laſt day of Judgment, as if he regarded not that ſo much, but were wholly intent to preſent judgments; as if it might hence be gathered aſſuredly, that he who is thus ſoarly puniſhed, is not righteous, but wicked, whatſoever ſhew of faith and piety he maketh.

Knoweſt thou not this of old, ever ſince man was placed upon earth, That the triumphing triumphing of the wicked is ſhort, and the joy of an hypocrite for a moment. If one man could have lived ever ſince the Creation till this time, yet it being paſt, it is now nothing; therefore no man living ſo long, but in a far ſhorter time being cut off for his ſinnes, the time of his joy and proud lifting up himſelfe for his preſent proſperity is meer vanity, and this ſpecially pertaineth to the wicked hypocrite, who taxeth other mens ſins, and for this ſeemeth to be godly and zealous, of which he rejoyceth, as if he were now lifted up above the condition of others, even to heaven, as it were; as followeth, verſ. 6. Though his excellency reach up to the heavens, &c. He ſhall be but as dung, ſtinking and filthy, and that in a moment, a point of time, as the Vulg. hath it, which is the ſhorteſt that may be, even whilſt a man toucheth the paper with his pen, and immediately taketh it off again, not ſtaying ſo long as the drawing of a line, or the writing of one letter. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 7.

His children ſhall ſeeke to pleaſe the poore, and his hands ſhall reſtore their goods. Vulg. His children ſhall be worn with poverty, and his hands ſhall render to him his ſorrow. The reaſon of this diverſity in the firſt clauſe is, becauſe the word ירגו may be derived from רצה to pleaſe, or from רצץ to teare in pieces: But becauſe there is more ſenſe in this then in the other, this is to be preferred, his children ſhall teare the poor, or rather being poor ſhall teare; or through vexation weare out, and be macerated, and pine away, and he ſeeing this ſhall be filled with ſorrow and griefe, not onely being brought down himſelf to extream poverty and miſery; but his ſorrow being hereby increaſed, that he is forced to ſee ſo ſad a ſpectacle in his children alſo. And his hands are ſaid to cauſe this, becauſe it is a puniſhment that commeth upon him for the evill works of his, the rapine and wrong that he hath done to others: And the word אונו properly ſignifieth his ſorrow or mourning, although in N. Tr. it be drawn to their goods, the very meaning is then, the wicked Extortioner ſhall be repayed in his kind, as he hath by his oppreſſions made other men and their children poor, ſo it ſhall come to him and his children, according to that of our Lord, What meaſure you mete unto others, ſhall be meaſured to you againe. Verſ. 10. Note. Matth. 27.

His bones are full of the ſin of his youth, which ſhall lye downe with him in the duſt. Here by bones Gregory underſtandeth ſuch things as are by the wicked done, wherein there is ſome ſtrength of vertue, becauſe the bones are firme and ſtrong; but the marrow filling theſe bones, being ſins, wherein he began betimes, even in his youth, and continueth ſtill in his older age, the good that he doth or ſaith is nothing acceptable to God, but as hee lived in ſin, ſo he dyeth, and ſo ſhall he be found at the laſt day, and be condemned therefore for ever. A thing worth the noting to ſtir us all up to break off from the ſinnes that have grown up together with us, and not to truſt to any good things that we do or ſpeak of, without turning and throughly reforming from our evill wayes. Verſ. 11. Note. Ier. 7. 5.

Though wickedneſs be ſweet in his mouth, though he hideth it under his tongue. Wickedneſſe is ſweet in the Hypocrites mouth, and is hidden under his tongue, when the evill which he hath in his heart is hidden under good and godly ſpeeches, and flattering ſmooth words, whereby he ſeeketh to circumvent, and to deceive his neighbour, or to ſeem godly. Verſ. 12.

Though he ſpare it, and forſake it not, but keepeth it ſtill within his mouth. That is, he will by no meanes part with this his hypocriſie by turning ſincere and upright-hearted, but continueth to take pleaſure in the evill in his heart, thus palliated over by feigned words. Verſ. 13.

Yet his meate in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of Aſpes within him. Hee hath ſwallowed downe riches, he ſhall vomit them up again, &c. That is, the evill thoughts and devices in his heart, which he ſeeketh to hide nnder the covert of good words, whereupon he fed in his mind, as upon delicious meat, ſhall prove poyſon in him, and he ſhall caſt it all up, that is, all the worldly goods which he hath thus gotten, and God ſhall in his juſt judgment make him Verſ. 14, Verſ. 15.

him to do this, when all that he hath thus gotten ſhall againe be taken from him. Oh that all ſuch as get their goods by oppreſſion, injuſtice, and deceit, would conſider this. For the preſent ſuch gain may be ſweet unto them, but it ſhall be turned, when for a while with delight it hath lyen, as it were, in their belly, into dead poyſon, cauſing them to vomit it up again, and their vitall blood and ſpirits withall, and ſo to dye miſerably. The faithfull alſo, as Gregory noteth, are ſaid to have honey and milk under their tongue, that is, ſweetneſſe, but this is, when having a love to their Brethren in their hearts, they yet ſhew it not, but ſmite them with reproofs for their ſins, being ready notwithſtanding, when the time is, to ſpeak comfortably againe to them, that they may not deſpair; as Peter, having pricked the Jewes in their hearts by his Sermon, when he perceived this, ſpake comfort unto them, telling them what they ſhould do to be ſaved.

Note.

Song. 4.

Act. 2.

Verſ. 16. He ſhall ſucke the poyſon of aſpes, the vipers tongue ſhall ſlay him. The poyſon of Aſpes ſets forth inward temptations, for which it is ſaid to be within him, verſ. 14. which at the firſt are pleaſant unto him as meat; but when Satan by his alluring temptations hath prevailed to draw to ſin, he turneth to a Viper unto him, bringing inevitable deſtruction: He rageth in his belly, where he hath held him, like meat, til that he violently breaketh out; and he, in whom he was, is deſtroyed: As it is ſaid, that the young Vipers, do by their dam, gnawing their way out through her belly, whereby ſhe periſheth: So the evil conceptions in the mindes of the wicked, at length ſlay them.

Gregor. Gregory alſo applyeth this meat in his belly, turned to the poyſon of Aſpes, to the word of God, in the minde and memory of wicked hypocrites; who beare it in their inward parts, but to their greater condemnation, it lying here as a witneſſe againſt them, and they ſhall be made to caſt it up, by him that ſaith, What haſt thou to do, to take my word into thy mouth; and hateſt to be reformed. And again, Thou hateſt inſtruction, and caſteth my words behind thee. There is no praiſe then in this, that ſuch a man hath a good memory to beare away the Sermon, which he hath heard; ſeeing he beareth away his bane, which is meat to the godly, but rank poyſon to him.

Pſal. 50. 16.

Note.

Verſ. 17. He ſhall not ſee the Rivers, the flouds, the Brookes of honey and butter. By theſe three, Gregory underſtandeth the three graces of Faith, Hope, and Charity, which come from the ſpirit of God; that is, compared to a River of water, flowing out of the belly of him, that hath Chriſts water given unto him: The wicked hypocrite ſhall never ſee theſe Rivers, Floudes, or Brooks, as they are, viz. Brooks of honey and milk. But what is Honey? It is a thing coming from above, milk out of the fleſh by the dugges here below; by honey then we may underſtand, Chriſts divinity; by milk, the comfort of his Incarnation; of neither of both which, ſhall ſuch a man have any comfort, but the truly faithful have abundance: As he that findeth a River or Brook may have his fil of water, to his exceeding great refreſhing, in an hot and dry Wilderneſſe, ſuch as this world is: They may have eyes indeed to ſee, but becauſe they perceive not; they do only think they ſee them and take comfort herein, but they do not truly ſee or taſte of them, to injoy any induring comfort hereby: Thus for the allegorical ſenſe, for the literal nothing elſe is meant hereby, but that the oppreſſor may gather Goods in abundance, but ſhall have no joy of them; for this is not to ſee theſe Rivers of wealth: Thus ſhall he be punished, that is covetous and teareth from others, either he ſhall be only a ſlave to them, to keep them, having no uſe thereof, or when he hath heaped them up together, the Enemy ſhall come and take them away from him, he never ſeeing them more.

Gregor.

Joh. 4. 10.

Note.

Verſ. 18. That which he laboured for ſhall he reſtore, he ſhall not ſwallow it down, according to his ſubſtance ſhall the reſtitution be, and he ſhall not rejoyce therein in. This further confirmeth the literal ſenſe, of ſeventeen before given: For when a man hath gathered Goods, and they be taken from him, and he injoyeth them not long, what is this, but as is there ſaid, a compulſory reſtitution made of them, yea even of them all; for which it is ſaid, According to his ſubſtance, and that which he laboured for; that is, beating his brain, and working by his power to attain it. The vulg. He ſhall ſmart for all that he hath done, yet he ſhall not be conſumed, according to the multitude of his inventions, ſo he ſhall ſuffer. But here the ſenſe is altogether reſpected, and not the words in the Originals; that the worſt which ſhall come to ſuch, might be expreſſed not only in this World, but in the World to come: And he is compelled to reſtore, that is puniſhed, as hath been ſaid, or made to ſmart, and he ſwalloweth not down his rapines, in whoſe throat they ever ſtick, even ſtick alwaies, he being not yet ſo conſumed hereby, but living to beare the puniſhment of this his wickedneſſe for ever and ever; as they do, that lye burning in the tormenting flames of Hel fire, but yet are not conſumed as other fewell, to have an end put to theſe hideous ſufferings. Laſtly, In ſaying he ſhall not rejoyce, he meaneth, that he ſhall have everlaſting ſorrow, as hath been already ſaid.

Surely he ſhall not feel quietneſs in his belly, nor ſave of that which he deſired. The vulg. His belly is not filled, and when he hath what he deſired, he ſhall not be able to poſſeſs it. Whereupon, what is the belly, ſaith Gregory, but covetouſneſſe, which by having the greateſt abundance, is not ſatisfied, but as the fire, the more wood is laid upon it, although it ſeemeth to be at a ſtay for a time, yet kindling in, is this alſo, the flame is made greater and extendeth further: But whilſt he thus coveting more, death cutteth him off, and then all his poſſeſſions go from him: And this is the ſame in effect, with not having quietneſſe in his belly, becauſe the belly that is ſtil craving and unquiet til more meat cometh into it, is not filled; and what doth the covetous man deſire, but to hold and to keep his Poſſeſſions, and to be increaſing them alwaies? and this is added as a further puniſhment, when a covetous wretch hath his deſire granted him, he being made to abound in wealth, hath it ſoon taken from him again, by death coming in the inſtant and cutting him off, as theſe Iſraelites in the Wilderneſſe: Who asking fleſh had it given them, but when it was between their teeth, they dyed: Or as the Fool in the Goſpel, who when as his grounds had but even now brought forth abundance, and he was meditating upon living plentifully thereupon, was the ſame night taken away. Verſ. 20. Gregor. Luke 12.

There ſhall none of his meat be left, therefore ſhall no man look for his Goods. The vulg. Nothing ſhall remain of his Goods. By his meat and goods the ſame is meant, but they are called his meat: Zophar going on ſtil in the allegory of the belly, of theſe nothing is left him, becauſe he is by death ſtript of all, and muſt goe as naked before the juſt Judge, as the pooreſt man that is, for all his wealth finding no favour. Verſ. 21.

In fulneſs of ſufficiency, he ſhall be in ſtraites, every hand of the wicked ſhall come upon him. The vulg. All greife ſhall ruſh in upon him. For he is by his covetous getting of worldly Goods from others, in continual danger to have them taken away again by the hands or power of ſome mighter then he, or by Theeves and Robbers, or he being cut off, his Goods may come into the hands of ſuch as he hath oppreſſed, every one coming to catch and take away a part again, and this is in effect, the ruſhing in of all greife upon him, for the 23. V. it is the ſame in effect that was ſaid before, V. 24. He ſhall flee from the iron weapon, and the bow of ſteel ſhall ſtrike him through. What is the iron weapon here ſpoken of, ſaith Gregory, but the want of temporal things, which is ſtrong as iron, breaking through even ſtone wales, and what the bow, by the Vulg. rendred, The brazen bow, But judgment ſuddenly coming upon him, for this his ſin of ſtealing; although by his neceſſity forced to it, for the Arrow ſtriking through Verſ. 22. Ver. 24. Gregor.

and ſlaying, which cometh from the bow, is not ſeen till it ſtricketh, and therefore it is thus compared, and the word נחושה ſignifieth either braſs, iron or ſteel: The poor man therefore, that is by his poverty tempted to ſteal, to avoid a bodily want, incurreth the danger of the deſtruction of his Soul, which although he neither ſeeth coming, nor feareth, yet it ſhall ſuddenly come upon him, and he ſhall not eſcape it, coming like an arrow out of a bow, and to intimate this ſudden coming of Judgment upon him, the word ſignifying ſteely, or braſen, is derived from חוש that ſignifieth ſuddenly. For the literall ſenſe, it is although the wicked eſcape one jndgment, ſo that now he thinketh himſelf, out of danger, and ſo hardneth his heart to go on in his ſinns, and another ſhall come upon him before he is aware of it, and ſlay him.

Note.

Verſ. 25. It is drawn and cometh out of his body, yea the gliſtering ſword cometh out of his gall, terrours are upon him. The vulg. It is drawn out and cometh out of his ſheath, lightening in his bitterneſs. Whereupon Gregory, it is ſayd to be drawn out, becauſe he is drawn to ſin by Satans Temptations, but becauſe he that ſinneth doth evill voluntarily; It is ſayd alſo to come out, the wickedneſs that he doth, and the evill which he ſuffereth therefore come from himſelf, as out of a ſheath, out of which a Sword cometh, whereupon the Pſalmiſt ſayth, The evill which the wicked hath done ſhall ſlay him. And it is added, Lightening in his bitterneſs, in alluding to his ſhining in worldly glory, as the rich man, Luke 16. For which Gods wrath ſhall come ſuddenly as lightning upon him, making him to be in great bitterneſs and ſorrow: And this may be taken as ſpoken againſt the rich oppreſſing and increaſing their wealth by their might; that before of the poor ſtealing for his neceſſity. The word גו here uſed, ſignifieth, Body, as N. Tranſlat. hath it, but ברק lightning or glittering, and מרר bitterneſs, from which מרורת ſignifying the gall cometh.

Gregory.

Pſal. 34. 21.

Verſ. 26. All darkneſs ſhall be hid in his ſecret places, a fire not blown ſhall conſume him, &c.

By darkneſs here underſtand the works of darkneſs, of which though many break forth in every wicked man, yet the hipocrite hideth them a long time, ſeeming to the world an Angell of light: But he ſhall not therefore go unpuniſhed, for a fire not blown ſhall burn him; that is, hell fire ſayd not to be blown or kindled, becauſe it differeth herein from other fires made by men, that they muſt be renewed from time to time, or elſe they will go out, but this is a fire created by God, and being once kindled by his breath, that is, his word, it burneth everlaſtingly: And it ſhall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle; What is his tabernacle but his fleſh? He that is then in the fleſh, that is, in a naturall Eſtate, and ſo continueth unconverted, when he dyeth it ſhall go ill with him, becauſe his place ſhall be in the everlaſting burning fire, that burneth without blowing: For of thoſe that are in the fleſh it is ſayd, that they minde the things of the fleſh, and to be fleſhly minded is death, but the converted and believing are in Chriſt, and no condemnation is to them.

Note.

Iſa 30.

Rom. 8. 5. 6.

Ver. 27 Gen. 3. Ioh. 3. Phil. 3. 20. The heaven ſhall reveal his iniquity, and the earth ſhall riſe up againſt him: By the earth ſinners are meant, becauſe when Adam had ſinned it was ſayd to him, Earth thou art and to earth ſhalt thou return, and he that is of the earth is earthy. On the contrary ſide then by heaven the righteous are to be underſtood, who are often ſpoken of as heavenly, and are ſayd to have their converſation in heaven. In ſaying then, that Heaven ſhall reval his iniquity, &c. It is meant, that as he hath wronged all ſorts of men, ſo they ſhall all cry out againſt him at the day of judgment, and his oppreſſing of the righteous ſhall cry more terrible againſt him, then the oppreſſing of the wicked, although that ſhall cry againſt him alſo: But Heaven and Earth, may alſo properly be underſtood, for although they be dumb creatures, yet they have a voice to accuſe and to teſtify againſt the wicked, for which it is ſayd, He ſhall call the heaven and the the earth to judge his people: and heare O heavens and harken O earth: intimating that they have eare to hear God speaking, and if so, they have a voice also to cry out against his enemies, such as all the wicked are, and the earth is sayd to have opened her mouth to receive Abells bloud at Cains hands. The wicked then cannot look to heaven above, or to the earth beneath, without horrour to think, even these, if other witnesses fail, shall come in to give testimony against them before the great Judge at the last day. Psal. 50. Isa. 1. 1. Gen. 4. Note.

The increase of his house shall depart, and his goods shall flow away in the day of his wrath: vulg. of his house the end shall be opened, it shall be drawn away in the day of the fury of God; Expounded by Gregory, the intention of his heart, which was hidden before, no more appearing but only what he spake and did before others shal be discovered; that is, his thoughts, which were evil or good accusing or excusing him at the day of judgment. But because גלל Jagal, doth not signify to discover or lay open, but to roule or remove away, and רבול the bough of a tree, which is the increase thereof, I rather understand his abundance of wealth, of all which he shall be stript in the day that God executeth his wrath upon him. Ver. 28. Rom. 2

CHAP. XXI.

HEre Job answering to Zophar, consenteth that all is true which he had sayd against the wicked, but many times they prosper wonderfully in this world, so that by prosperity or adversity here, it cannot be judged in what estate a man is to God-ward, but this shall appear when the day cometh, that all men shall be judged by God, till which time many wicked men are spared, living in all wealth and pleasure, but others better then they tasting much bitternesse, are by a corporeall death at length seized upon, as they be, so that in their end yet there appeareth no difference. V. 2. Heare diligently my speech, and let this be your consolations. The vulg. heare I pray you my speech, and repent, but the word נחום signifieth consolation, and the meaning is, by being silent and hearing me ye shall comfort me, who now by your galling speeches do greatly trouble and disquiet me. Ver. 2

Is my complaint to man? and if it were so, why should not my spirit be troubled? The vulg. That I ought not worthily to be affected with greife, of which the sense is easy to be given, thus had I to do only with you, although yee lade me with many calumnies, yet I would not thinke all this of force to make me sad, for ye cannot justly charge me with, the sinnes that yee object unto me, but I feare that I have spoken something that I have cause to be troubled at, in regard of God, before whom I may sinn unwittingly: And this rendring is the same in effect with the N. Translat. and Hebr. if it be not to God but to man, there is no cause why I should be troubled, but seeing it is with God and not with man, that I have communed, and complainingly argued, there is cause. Ver. 4.

Mark me and be astonished, and lay your hand upon your mouth. When I remember I am afraid, &c. Some inquiring what it is, that Job would have them to mark and be astonisht at, resolve, that it is at the words of the last judgment spoken by him, Chapt. 19. Some that it is at the things which he was now about to speake, but it was at both of them, wherein hee sheweth the great prosperity of the wicked, and at his stupendeous sufferings; into the causes whereof because men cannot dive, they may sit still in silence and and admire them, it being too great a secret for man to finde out, why the devout servants of God are oftentimes in extreame misery, and licentious proud wicked men injoy all worldly felicity, and herein he seekes to stirr them to do no more then he himself did, for he was greatly affected with fear, and astonishment at it. He beginneth and goeth on much like unto David, Ps. 73. unto which the Reader may have recourse to see the exposition: Having Ver. 5. Ver. 6. Cajetan. Philip.

ving thus prepared to heare and to be aſtoniſhed at that which he was about to ſay, now ſpeaketh it out, V. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. David in Pſ. 73. is more bref in deſcribing their proſperity, but larger in declaring the evill effects hereof in them, about which Job ſpeaketh only, Verſ. 14. 15.

Ver. 13. Gregory. whereas V. 13. he ſaith, In a moment they go down to the grave: This ſaith Gregory, is not ſpoken of as their puniſhment, their ſudden departiug out of this life, for ſo may ſome Godly man depart alſo; but that without induring hard ſufferings. Firſt they go out of this world, this being a part of their worldly felicity, whereas the righteous many times indure much miſery and pain firſt, ſo that if one could judge of them hereby, they would be counted more miſerable, both in life and death. But yet a ſudden death to a wicked man is a great Judgment, becauſe he lamented not his ſinnes before, but always took delight in them, and now being ſuddenly ſnatcht away, he hath no time to humble himſelf and to ſorrow for them, and therefore he muſt needs go to the place of everlaſting weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

Ver. 14. Gregory. Therefore they ſay to God, depart from us, we care not for the knowledge of thy wayes. What are the wayes of God, ſayth Gregory, but Humility and Peace, and therefore our Lord Jeſus humbled himſelf, and patiently ſuffered all indignities, and taught us to do likewiſe, that by humbling our ſelves, and patiently ſuffering with him, and for him, we might come to peace, that peace of which the Apoſtle ſayth, Being juſtified by faith we have peace with God: And finally that peace of God, which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, Mark the juſt man, the end of that man is peace: But the wicked through their proſperity are ſo proud, that they deſpiſe to walk in theſe wayes, and ſo for temporall things which laſt but a moment, they deſpiſe and looſe eternall.

Rom. 5. Pſal. 37.

Ver. 15. What is the Almighty that we ſhould ſerve him? And what profit ſhould we have if we pray unto him? Becauſe they ſee not God with their bodily eyes, they think that there is no God, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, The Fool hath ſayd in his heart that there is no God. They are therfore led only by ſuch things, as they ſee, and ſleight him whom they ſee not, yet ſome there are who though they ſee him with the eye of the mind, are not lead by him, becauſe they ſee no profit coming in here, by praying unto him, or ſerving him. Their bodily eyes therefore bear more ſway with them, to draw them more after things which they herewith ſee, then the eyes of the minde to the things which they ſee not.

Pſal. 14.

Ver. 16. Loe their good is not in their hand, the counſell of the wicked is far from me. Vulg. Let the counſell of the wicked be far from me. That is, they have not their worldly good under their power, but theſe goods have dominion over them: as it is not with the righteous, of whom many have been, and are rich, but they are not hereby kept under as ſervants to their wealth, but make it to ſerve them, when they take hereof to ſerve God, as David, who ſayd, I will not ſacrifice to God of that which coſt me nothing. And of the Gentiles, brought into the faith by the preaching of the Goſpel, The riches of the Gentiles ſhall come in hither: For then hath a man theſe worldly goods under, both when his heart is not oppreſſed by them through worldly cares, but if they be increaſed, he keepeth that ſtill above them, not counting his happineſs to ly herein: and alſo when he giveth freely hereof to God again, who gave them all unto him, by a right diſpencing of part, to the maintenance of his ſervice, and a part to his poore members, and herein is not ſparing but liberall. And ſuch are far from the counſell of the wicked, who think that they do moſt according to wiſe counſell, when they do herewith all good to themſelves in this life, by living hereupon, as the rich glutton, as was before ſayd.

2 Sam. 24. Iſa 60. 6. Pſal. 45.

Note. Gal. 6. 6. 2 Cor. 8.

Ver. 17. How often is the candle of the wicked put out? how oft cometh their deſtruction upon them? The vulg. An inunda tion or overflowing ſhall come upon them,

For

For theſe words, How oft cometh their deſtruction upon them? Heb. And their Affliction, Contrition, Want, Ruine, and Vaſtity, ſhall come. For the word אידם ſignifieth all theſe, for which it may well be rendred, inundation of all ſorts of miſeries: It is as if hee had ſayd, although ſome of theſe wicked ones live in all worldly felicity to the end of this mortall life, yet all of them do not, but they have their light often put out. For ſome looſe their children, whom they love moſt dearly, and this is their light; ſome their honour, and ſome their riches, which are as a light unto them, for the great joy that they take herein, as a man in darkneſſe, to whom a light is brought. Neither is this all which they ſuffer, for God even overfloweth them here and hereafter, as it were, with a floud of ſorrowes; And of theſe hee ſayth, God diſtributeth ſorrowes to them, whereby hee intimateth that in the loſſe of all before ſpoken of, and whatſoever elſe they ſuffer in this world, lyeth not all their ſorrow, but part onely, a greater part by farr being ſtill to come in another world. Sorrowes are ſayd to be diſtributed to the wicked, becauſe their ſufferings in this life are no Superſedeas to their ſufferings in Hell, but now they receive onely a ſmal portion, or part of their puniſhments, there they ſhall be payd to the full; for which the Pſalmiſt ſaith, God ſhall raine upon them ſnares, fire, and brimſtone, ſtorm and tempeſt, this ſhall be the portion of their cup: It is not ſayd, all their cup, but a portion thereof, implying more ſufferings yet to come, as to the old world, deſtroyed by the floud, and to Sodom and Gomorrah, by fire and brimſtone. Pſal. 11. 6.

They are as ſtuble before the fire, and as the chaffe which the Winde carrieth away. The wicked oppreſſour, that increaſeth in worldly wealth, ſeemeth to ſtand firmly and unmoveable, but before the great Judge, hee is but as a dry ſtubble, eaſily conſumed, and as light chaffe carried away by the winde into the fire, that never goeth out, leaſt any man hearing of the Judgements before threatned, ſhould ſay, how can this be to them that are ſo firmly and ſtrongly built. ver. 18.

God layeth up his iniquity for his Children, and rewardeth him, and hee ſhall know it. The vulg. When he ſhall reward; Exod. 20. Viſiteth the ſinnes of the Fathers upon the children: But Ezek. 18. The ſon ſhall not dye for the ſin of his Father. Theſe places are eaſily reconciled thus, Children, that when children are threatned with judgments for their Parents ſinnes, it is meant, if they imitate them in ſinning, as is alſo expreſſed, Ezek. 18. Whereunto it may be further added, according to Gregory, his iniquity is derived from him to his children by propagation, till that by baptiſme it is done away, but if growing up to yeares of diſcretion, he after this, treadeth in his Fathers ſteps, he ſhall ſuffer, both for his own ſinns and for his Fathers alſo. He ſhall reward or render it, hee ſhall know it; ſo it is Hebr. the meaning is, if he liveth long as ſome ſinners do, to a hundred years, and ſeeth the children comming of him, to the third and fourth generation, whilſt he liveth, this threatning ſhall take effect, to the making of him to pine away with ſorrow in ſeeing it. And it is to be noted, that hee ſayth after Gods rendring, he ſhall know it, his eyes were ſhut before the comming of this judgment, but by the coming hereof they are opened, and he knoweth now, what a dangerous thing it was to live, and go on in ſinn, which then he would not know, whereas the righteous ſee and know it now, and repent, but Fooles ſuch as all the Wicked are, are wiſe too late, theſe know it now and avoyd it, they know it not till then, and muſt, notwithſtanding indure it. ver. 19. Note.

What pleaſure hath hee in his houſe after him, when the number of his moneths is cut off in the midſt? After the recompence of his iniquity made to his Children, which he, if he lived long, ſhould ſee, now becauſe many wicked men are cut off ſooner, he threatneth them with deſtruction in their own perſons, v. 20. So that be it as is here ſayd, that he careth not for his houſe ver. 21.

houſe after him, that is, his Poſterity when hee is dead and gone, what becometh of them, as ſome wicked men do not, yet his own life is ſweet unto him, and he would faine live as long as may be, therefore by threatning cutting off his life, ſo as that he ſhall not live paſt the midſt of his moneths he ſeeketh to move him to repentance hereby, but ſpeaks of him as deſperatly ſet upon following his own wicked wayes, whatſoever cometh of it, either to his Children or to himſelfe. It dampeth him haply a little for a time, when he ſeeth evill coming upon him or them, but it is ſoon forgotten, and nothing can ſo far prevail with him, as to make him amend his life. Whereas that may ſeem to make againſt this, that Dives being in hell had a care of his houſe, for he craved that one might be ſent to his five brethren to warn them, that they might not come into that place of torment. I anſwer, The care of the wicked to prevent evill from their children and houſe haply may be in ſome of them, when they ſee and know what cometh of ſinning, but before that, whilſt they live in this world, they care not.

Ver. 22. Shall any teach God knowledge, ſeeing he judgeth thoſe that are high? Having hitherto ſpoken of the blindneſſe of the minds of wicked reprobates, which maketh them to go on obſtinately in ſinn, come what will come of it to them or their houſes, now leaſt any man ſhould object and ſay, is it juſt with the Lord to leave any of his creatures thus in blindneſſe, when hee giveth ſight to others, ſo that they eſcape theſe dangers, and why doth he not open their eyes alſo, that they ſeeing may prevent them? to this he ſaith, Shall any teach God knowledge, &c. As if he had ſayd, it becometh not any man to take ſo much upon him, as to reaſon thus, for it is as if he thought that God knew not what to do for the beſt. For he judgeth the excellenteſt or high ones, that is, the very Angells, making ſome to ſtand in everlaſting glory, but ſuffering others to fall, and ſhutting them up in chains of darkneſs; for if he doth thus by thoſe pure ſpirits, how dareth any man to challenge him for his dealing towards men made out of the earth, and that muſt return to the duſt?

Ver. 23. One dyeth in his full ſtrength, being wholly at eaſe, &c. In this and v. 24. 25. Hereafter reaſoning from Gods judging of high ones, he proceedeth to reaſon from that which is done amongſt lower ones, that is, men, of whom ſome dy full and abounding with wealth, wherewith they have long fed and fatted up themſelves, ſome again deſiring to get wealth alſo as wel as they, but cannot, in regard of which they live and dy in much bitterneſs of ſpirit, being vexed at their poverty: And whence cometh this diverſity of their living and dying, is it not from God? and who then ſhall be ſo bold as to ſay to him, Why doſt thou thus? For he beſt knoweth how to deal with every man. But mark what followeth, they live and dy indeed diverſly, but Verſ. 26. being dead they are all a like in the grave, for both ſorts, Lye down alike in the duſt, and the wormes cover them: So that although there be a diſparity betwixt worldly men in their life, which they live, and out of which they depart by a Corporeall Death, yet being dead, it is not better with one then with another of them; which ſheweth, that the difference is yet to come in another world, when if they that have lived in miſery here, or any of them who are Righteous and holy, ſhall be in joy, and the Wicked living at ſo great eaſe in Torment, as it was with Lazarus and Dives. V. 27.

Verſ. 27. Behold, I know your thoughts, and the deviſes which yee wrongfully imagine againſt me; ſaying, Where is the houſe of the Prince and the dwelling places of the Wicked.

Verſ. 28. Aske any of them that go by, and they will tell you. All which is as if he had ſayd, now that I ſpeak of ſome dying rich and full, and of others in poverty and want, but yet after death being alike in the Grave, I know that ye imagine ſomewhat againſt me, as if I were one of thoſe wicked worldlings, that would have kept my Goods if I could, and am now in bitterneſs of ſpirit, becauſe I have loſt them, and as being ready to ſay,

ſay, where is my houſe now, and the dwellings of my children, whom yee count wicked becauſe they dyed ſo as they did, but indeed yee judge amiſs. For aske any of thoſe that paſs by the way, that is, who count themſelves but paſſengers in this world. and therefore ſet not their hearts upon the Goods hereof, and of any of them ye ſhall learn, that this is a thing that imbittereth my Spirit, or the ſpirits of any that paſs on as Pilgrims and ſtrangers towards heaven, which only they count their country, and upon the good things whereof only their minds are ſet. For thus do all for whom Heaven is prepared, and therefore come proſperity or adverſity, they ſtand firm and unmoveable: That the truly Godly are as paſſengers, Gregory ſheweth from the ſaying of David, ſpeaking of the wicked in proſperity, I paſſed by and his place was no where to be found: Paſſing he ſaw this, that worldly proſperity is nothing, becauſe it fadeth away, and ſo is as nothing, whereas if he had not paſſed from beholding things temporall to look up to things eternall, hee could not have ſo ſayd. Hebr. Have ye not asked them that paſſe by the way, and have ye not known their tokens? Calvin ſaith, that the Expoſition before going is too much ſtrained, and will have the meaning to be, any ſtranger that goeth by, if he were to ſpend his Judgment of the things, which I have ſayd, would ſay, they are true, Viz. That by bodily ſufferings there is no judging of men, becauſe the wicked may injoy great proſperity here, and yet be ſeverely judged in the end, when the time cometh, to which they are reſerved, as followeth, V. 29. Graca Catena ſayth, that this is ſpoken by way of ſimilitude, as travellers by marks know the way wherein they are to go and ſo miſs not, but go right; in like manner when one ſeeth an Oppreſſour in great proſperity a long time, he may eaſily know to what he ſhall come in the end, even as Job ſayd before, but the like judgment cannot be given of a juſt man in adverſity, unleſs it be by the prejudice of thoſe that judge, as theſe friends of Job moſt wickedly judged of him. Some others by paſſengers underſtand the Hebrews who are Hebr. called עברים ſignifying ſuch as paſſe, they by experience could tell that men greatly oppreſſed may yet be favoured of God, and at length be delivered, as they were out of Egypt, Pharaoh and his Egyptians being deſtroyed. This indeed agreeth very well, but the Hebrews paſſed not out of Egypt, till long after Jobs time, unleſſe the Experience that Jacob had of this be alluded, who after many ſufferings in Padan Aram returned to Canaan in the end greatly bleſſed. This ſeemeth to be further fetcht, but I take that before going to be literall meaning, and the allegory of Gregory is not to be rejected, being of good uſe, and a further improving this paſſage to ſpirit-inſtruction. That the wicked is reſerved to the day of judgment, &c. Who ſhall declare his way to his face? who ſhall repay him what he hath done? This is by Gregory referred to Antichriſt, that was to come, but it is not only true touching him, but verified in all great Tyrants; They are reſerved for the day of Judgment; but in the mean ſeaſon ſuch is their power and cruelty, that he is a rare man, that to their face durſt tell them of their ſins, yea he muſt be indued with extraordinary courage and zeale, as Elijah, that dareth to do it. But reproved they ought to be by Gods Miniſters at their own perill, as the Lord ſayd to Jeremiah. But this is verified in Antichriſt above all, that no man dareth to reprove him, yea his Paraſites teach, that although the Pope leadeth innumerable Soules to hell, yet no man may ſay unto him, Lord Pope, why doſt thou ſo? As there was a law amongſt the Egyptians, that none ſhould dare to ſay, that Serapis was a man, upon pain of death; for which at the entrance of his Temple there ſtood an Image, laying his finger upon his mouth, to ſhew that all men muſt keep ſilence in this reſpect, as Auguſtine relateth.

Yet he ſhall be brought to the grave, &c. That is, he ſhall dye that is thus ſtern and terrible and ly in his tomb rotting and unable now to do any thing, yea being contemptible to all men.

Gregory. Pſal. 37.

Calvin.

Catena Graca.

Ver. 30. Ver. 31. Gregory.

Ier. 1. 17.

Auguſt. L. 18. de civit. c. 5.

Verſ. 32.

The

The clods of the valley shall be sweet unto him, and every man shall draw after him, as there are innumerable before him. The vulg. Dulcis fuit glareis coeyti. Expounded by some of the River, whereby the Poets fained, that the Soules of the wicked were carried down to Hel by the River Stix in Charons boat, where being arived his coming is sweet to the damned, that were there before: But the words are according to the Hebrew as hath been said, and seem plainly to meane thus much. The wicked being dead and buried; the clods of the grave, under which he lieth, are so sweet unto him, and so well pleased would he be, if he might for ever lye hidden there, and never rise up again to come to the judgment before spoken of. And as it is with one wicked man departed, so it is with all others; whether they dyed before or shall dye after: Thus also Catena Graca, although some expound it of the pompous burial of rich wicked men, who are accompanied with many going before and after them, to bring him to the Grave with more state.

Caten. Gr.

Gregor.

Gregory makes an allegory of the clods, that are sweet unto him, thus, They be the sinnes wherein he hath delighted, and to which by his evil example he hath drawn many more, as many, who were before him have also done: But forsomuch as this spoken of him after death, not before; it is not here shewed what he did in the time of his life, but in what a case he shall be afterwards.

CAAP. XXII.

Vers. 2. CAn a man be profitable to God, as he that is wise may be profitable unto himself? From hence Solomon seemeth to have taken that, which he saith, Prov. 3. 12. Where see the exposition, on V. 3. Psal. 16. Because also no man is so foolish, that he can think he is able to stand in

Vers. 4. judgment with God; betwixt whom and man there is no comparison, he saith, V. 4. Will he reprove thee for feare of thee? Or will he enter into judgment with thee? All which is spoken in regard of the words before used by Job to justifie himself, as not worthy such soare punishments; as if he had said, If it be so, thou must conceive thy self to have merrited somewhat at his hand by thy righteousnesse, and that there is some higher person then he, to whom he may feare, least thou shouldst complain, and so he should be brought to a judicial tryal; but if to imagine thus be absurd, all which thou hast said of thy innocency is vain, and there be in thee

Vers. 5. great wickednesse, for which the Lord is so severe towards thee, as followeth, Vers. 5. Is not thy wickednes great, and thine iniquityes infinite? Here Eliphaz falleth more foule upon Job, then he or any of his fellowes did yet, charging him directly with many grosse sinnes, from all which he could not but in his own conscience know him to be free, whereas before he spake only of the wicked in general, and this doth Vers. 6. 7. 8. 9. whereas Vers. 8. he saith, The mighty man had the earth, and the honourable dwell in it. He meaneth Job, that by his power had so oppressed, wherefore the Vulg. to make this plain, hath it, In the strength of thy arme

Vers. 10. thou didst possess the earth, and being most mighty obtaynest it.

Therefore snares are round about thee, and sudden feare troubleth thee. That is, thou art for all those wickednesses so intangled with miseries, as that thou canst not get out of them, no more then one taken in a snare; and the sudden newes of one loss after another, hath stricken feare into Vers. 11. thee: Or darknes that thou canst not see, or abundance of waters cover thee. The vulg. And thou thoughtest that thou shouldst not see darknes, or be oppressed with the force of waters overflowing. Hebr. Or darknes thou shalt not see.

Whereby

Whereby to omit other expoſitions, is meant miſeries, yet further to come, but not ſeen or perceived, til they come: That is, the torments to be ſuffered in utter darkneſſe by all the wicked; which alſo becauſe they ſhall come as the flood in Noahs time, which drowned the old World, when they were moſt ſecure; are metaphorically called an inundation of waters covering him: All which is true touching hard hearted and wicked oppreſſors, but wonderfully miſapplyed to ſo juſt a man as Iob was. But for ſo much as he had ſuch heynous crimes laid to his charge, let us beare it patiently, if knowing our ſelves to be innocent, we be likewiſe charged by the wicked inſtruments of Satan, who is the accuſer of the Brethren. Note.

Is not God in the height of Heaven ſayeſt thou? And how doth God know, &c. Here beſides all the wickedneſſes before ſpoken of, he addeth another moſt odious one to Jobs charge, and that is ſuch ignorance, as is ſcarce to be found in any, but moſt bruitiſh men, who beleive nothing, but what they ſee by their bodily eyes, and ſo that God ſeeth not the ſinnes which they commit, to bring them to judgment therefore: For who ſo is not thus bruitiſh, cannot but ſee God in his judgments from time to time, ſhewing that he ſeeth the wickedneſſes that be committed upon Earth: A ſpeech much like unto this, touching the wicked blinded with ſin; ſee Zeph. 1. 12. Pſ. 10. 11. Verſ. 12. 13. 14.

Haſt thou marked the old way, which wicked men have troden? Which were cut down out of time, whoſe foundation was overthrown with a flood. Here by the old way, wherein the wicked walked; underſtand the way of violence and oppreſſion, which was the way of the old World, but the flood then came and drowned them all: But how is it ſaid, that they were cut off before their time; for if there be a time ſet to every man, how long he ſhall live, and God who ſetteth this time, cannot be deceived: How is any man ſaid to be cut off before his time? To this Gregory anſwereth well; Wicked men being in proſperity, promiſe to themſelves long to live herein, but by Gods judgment coming upon them, they are cut off before that time; moreover God foreknowing the wickedneſſe of every one to come, appoynteth the time of each ones life: To ſome a longer, and to ſome a ſhorter; and he that ſooner fulfilleth the meaſure of his wickedneſſe, is cut off ſooner then the other, that he may do no more hurt, and for this he is ſaid to be cut off before his time: And becauſe he ſetled himſelf, as it were, in his thoughts in this World, it is ſaid, his foundation is overflown with a flood. Verſ. 17. 18. Which ſaid unto God, Depart from us, what can the Almighty do for them? Yet he filled their houſes with good things, &c. Here Eliphaz turneth the ſpeech, uſed by Job, Chap. 21. 15. 16. Againſt him, of the ſenſe whereof ſee there. Verſ. 15. Verſ. 16. Gregory. Ver. 17.

The righteous ſee it and are glad, and the innocent laugh them to ſcorn. But in what ſenſe is this ſpoken, for he that makes a mock of the errours of the wicked, and mourneth not for them, ſaith Gregory, is not righteous; as neither is he, that ſeeing judgment executed upon them rejoyceth, for the Phariſee, that ſeeing the Publicans errours and other wicked mens, inſulted over them, was condemned as proud; and he that rejoyceth at their deſtruction, ſeeing he alſo is a ſinner, is ſecure: We muſt therefore diſtinguiſh the times, when this may not, or may be done, during this mortal life we may not; but having by the grace of God obtayned everlaſting life, we may rejoyce and deride them, being condemned for their ſecurity and vain hopes, that they ſhould never have come to ſo miſerable an end, and their eſteeming of themſelves, the only happy men in the World for their proſperity: Here whilſt we live together with the wicked in this World, we muſt not rejoyce, but greive for their evil doings and ſufferings, as David, who lamented Sauls death, and ſaid, that his eyes guſhed out Rivers of water, becauſe men kept not Gods Commandements, and Lots righteous Soule was vexed at the uncleanneſſe of the Sodomites,: If it be ſaid Verſ. 19. Gregor.

ſaid Elijah mocked at Baals Prieſts for their idolitry. I anſwer, he did not ſo out of joy, but to make them aſhamed of ſo groſſe wickedneſſe, to call upon a dumb Idol.

Verſ. 20. Whereas our ſubſtance is not cut down, but the remnant of them the fire conſumeth. Vulg. Is not their erection cut down. But Hebr. it is not their, but our, and for whereas, is אם properly ſignifying [if] and it may be rendred, as an interrogative, as לא אם commonly is, Is not our ſubſtance cut down: Calvin, Surely our ſubſtance is hidden. And the word נחד ſignifieth either to hide or to cut off, but for theſe words, Our ſubſtance is קימנו our riſing. And the meaning then is; it is true, our riſing, who be the righteous, to that life and glory, wherein we ſhall laugh, the wicked being condemned to Hell to ſcorn, is yet hidden, as the Apoſtle alſo ſaith, Our life is hidden with Chriſt in God, but when Chriſt ſhall appeare, we ſhall appeare with him in glory. But to be ſure, when this ſhall be, the remnant of them; that is, ſo many as ſhall remain alive, til the day of judgment, ſhall be ſent away into the everlaſting fire of Hel.

Col. 3.

Gregor. Gregory following the Vulg. expounds all of the wicked; who though they lift up themſelves, and riſe to never ſo great an height of honour and wealth in this World, yet they ſhall be cut down by death, coming ſuddenly upon them; whereby the bodily life and all their worldly glory comes to an end, and their bodies, here called their remnant, ſhall then being joyned to their Soules, be caſt into the fire, to lye their conſuming and dying, but never quite conſumed. Some others refer it to the men of the old World, and of Sodom, the one having their pride pulled down, who were called men of renowne, by the flood, and the other by fire from Heaven conſumed. But the words being ours not theirs, neither of theſe can ſtand.

Gen. 6.

Verſ. 21. Verſ. 22. Acquaint now thy ſelf with him, and be at peace with him, and thereby good ſhall come unto thee. Receive the Law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart. Here and V. 23. Are good inſtructions laid down to be followed by all men in miſery, and by all others alſo: Gregory taking Eliphaz and his fellowes in all their ſayings, for tipes of Hereticks, ſaith, that he indeavoured cunningly to bring Job to agree to their opinion, confeſſing, that in his diſſenting from them, he could have no peace with God, nor deliverance from his miſeries, but in conſenting he ſhould undoubtedly: And to perſwade men the more to their opinions, and to harken to their ſayings, they ſay, that they be the words of God, which they ſpeak, pretending alſo Scriptures for them. Laſtly, To ſhew how they take advantage of mens ſufferings, he ſaith, If thou returneſt to the Almighty thou ſhalt be built up, &c. As if they ſhould plainly ſay, all which thou ſuffereſt, is for thy going from us in thy waies, but return, and whereas thou art deſtroyed in thy houſe, thou ſhalt be built up again, if thou putteſt this iniquity from the Tabernacle of thy heart, to be of a divers minde from us: And theſe indeed are the devices of wicked Hereticks in all times and ages, which it is neceſſary for all the faithful to take notice of; and not hand over head, to take their ſayings to be Goſpel, but to try them, that they may finde them to be ſuch, as ſay they are Jewes, but are not; but of the Synagogue of Satan, and not be drawn away by them: Only take we theſe inſtructions in general, as directions to the afflicted, and in doing accordingly, we ſhall be ſure to recover Gods favour.

Gregor.

Verſ. 23.

Note.

Revel. 3. 9.

Verſ. 24. 25. Then ſhalt thou lay up gold as the duſt, and the gold of Ophir as the ſtones of the Brook. Yea the Almighty ſhall be thy defence, and thou ſhalt have plenty of ſilver. Here by gold Gregory underſtandeth, clarity of doctrine, and by flint ſtones, ſtrength to walk aright, rendring the words firſt according to the Vulg. Lat. thus, He ſhall give for each flint, and for flint golden Rivers. The reaſon of the difference is, becauſe the word בצר twice uſed here, ſignifieth a Stone or Gold, and what is the duſt but earth, yet the rendring rendring of עפר Duſt, is better then to render it earth. It may then be thus rendred moſt agreeable to the Hebrew, And there is put, or turned duſt into gold, and in a ſtone rivers of Ophir, or in a rock. And becauſe Ophir is a place where fine gold lieth in the veines of the earth, it may be ſaid, Golden Rivers. The meaning is, for duſt or earth; wherein there is no ſolidity, ſhall be ſtrength like unto that of a Rock, and where ſuch ſtrength of grace is to live well, there ſhall be a ſhining light, ſhining as the fineſt gold, for that a good life and doing good workes ſhine, our Lord teacheth, where he ſaith, Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes. And to ſuch as doth thus, the Lord ſhall be a defence. He ſhall have plenty of ſilver, that is, abound in the knowledge of his word, which is by the Pſalmiſt compared to ſilver, and is the beginning of the ful knowledge of God, wherein ſtandeth perfect bleſſedneſſe. R. Moſes and R. Mordecai, for theſe words, Put upon duſt gold, have it; Thou ſhalt ſet upon a Tower gold. That is, thou ſhalt be both ſtrongly defended, and greatly inriched, and if it be taken according to the letter, this paſſage is prophetical touching Job, in whom it was thus fulfilled, after his ſufferings and poverty, being raiſed to ſo great wealth, and then he had joy in the Almighty taking his part, as Verſ. 26. and it appeared, that his prayers were acceptable above other mens: becauſe he muſt pray for theſe men, or elſe they ſhould have been deſtroyed, as Verſ. 27 Verſ. 28. Thou ſhalt alſo decree a thing, and it ſhall be eſtabliſhed unto thee, and the light ſhall ſhine upon thy waies. According to this the Pſalmiſt ſaith of righteous, Whatſoever he doth ſhall proſper, and this is to have the light ſhine upon his waies, and is commonly done to the juſt, that others ſeeing the good ſucceſſe which they have, might be allured to do likewiſe, yet ſometimes they are again croſſed to try their patience, and to ſhew that this not all the benefit by them to be expected, but their chiefeſt and moſt induring good is to come after death.

Gregor.

Math. 5. 16. Pſ. 12. R. Moſes Verſ. 26. 27. Pſal. 1.

When men are caſt down, thou ſhalt ſay there is a lifting up; he ſhall ſave the humble perſon. Vulg. He that ſhall be humbled ſhall be in glory, and he that boweth down his eyes ſhall be ſaved. Hebr. Becauſe they are humbled, thou ſhalt ſay; exaltation, and ſaving of him, that boweth his eyes down. And the meaning is plain, that Job attaining to ſuch a bleſſed change, ſhall be able out of his own experience to comfort others in miſery, who likewiſe humble themſelves. Verſ. 29.

He ſhall deliver the Iſland of the innocent, and it is delivered by the pureneſs of thine hand. Vulg. The innocent ſhall be ſaved, but he ſhall be ſaved by the cleanneſs of his own hands. But what cleanneſſe is there in man to be ſaved for that? Sol. There is none, but what is by God given unto him, and yet becauſe he that hath this given unto him, worketh together herewith by his own free will, it is ſaid, He ſhall be ſaved by the cleanneſs of his hands. This is plainly intimated by Paul, who ſaith, By the grace of God I am that I am, yet not I, but the grace of God with me. Here grace ſtriketh the firſt ſtroke by it, I am, ſaith he, that I am, and then here is a ſecond or ſubſequent grace, with which man in his willingneſs is joyned, The grace of God, in or with me; God then makes us clean, and by his grace when we are clean, we do good with our hands, the good will that is in us, putting us on hereunto, and yet the reward is finally beſtowed upon us, as if we were worthy of it for our works; becauſe it is ſaid, He will reward every one according to his works, ſo Gregory; but in the Vulg. the word אי is altogether omitted, ſignifying Iſland, the meaning being, he ſhall not only ſave himſelf, but by him all his neighbours ſhall be ſaved, as Iſrael by Moſes. Verſ. 30. Gregor. Rom. 3. 6.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 2. EVen to day is my complaint bitter, and my ſtroake heavier then my groaning. This he ſpeaketh, in regard of Eliphaz, his aggravating of his ſorrowes by his unjuſt calumnies, although in the end he flattered with him, that he might overcome him, and draw him to hold the errour which he did, That bodily and temporal ſuffering are alwaies a ſigne of a notorious wicked man; for when as Job expected by the comming and ſpeaking of his friends un to him to be comforted, they by their virulent tongues peirced his heart with more ſorrowes: Verſ. 3. Oh that I knew where I might finde him, that I might come even to his ſeat. Here Job having a clear conſcience towards God, whatſoever Eliphaz with his foule mouth had objected againſt him, deſireth to come before Gods judgment Seat, that he would appeare and ſpeak in his cauſe, for ſo he knew, that he ſhould be juſtified from all the evils by Eliphaz imputed unto him, as in part is expreſſed, Verſ. 4. 5 6.7. Whereas it is ſaid, Verſ. 4. I would fil my mouth with arguments, The vulg. hath it better, with interpretations. for ſo תו בחות ſignifieth, and he meaneth, that he would lay all the blame that he could upon himſelfe, judging and condemning himſelf, being aſſured, that ſo he ſhould not be condemned, but juſtified, as the Apoſtle alſo teacheth. For they that call their ſinnes to minde, to lament them with teares, caſting themſelves down as vile in their own eyes, are waſhed and made white in the ſight of God, and ſo may with confidence ſtand before him: But ſuch as do not thus, may well feare and tremble, as not knowing what things ſhall be laid to their charge, to their condemnation.

Verſ. 3. Verſ. 4. 1 Cor. 11. 33. Note.

Verſ. 6. 7. Will he plead with me in his great power? No, but he would put ſtrength into me. There may the righteous diſpute with him, ſo ſhall I be delivered from my Judge for ever. Vulg. I would not have him to contend with me, with much ſtrength, neither let him preſs me with the weight of his greatneſs, but let him propound equity againſt me, and my judgment ſhall come to victory. Upon which a good expoſition is made by Gregory, thus: When I deſire to come before his Throne to be judged, my meaning is not, that he ſhould ſhew himſelf in his majeſty, for this were enough to confound me inſtantly, or the moſt righteous man that is; but let him ſet equity betwixt me and him, that is, Chriſt the Mediator betwixt God and man, and then I doubt not, but he will judge on my ſide. But N. Tran. is word for word, according to the Hebrew, and the meaning is, as if Job had ſaid; yea tel me of the great power of God hereby, to defer me from deſiring to be by him judged, but in appealing to him I know well what I do, he will not, how mighty ſoever he is, oppreſſe me with his power, but being the juſt Judge of all the World, ſeeing me by you to be moſt unjuſtly accuſed, he will ſtrengthen me that I ſhall be able to ſtand, and ſo take my part, as that I ſhall be acquitted, as one that hath ſerved him in ſincerity; and then yee that judge me for an hypocrite ſhall be put to ſilence, and I ſhall be delivered from ſuch unjuſt Judges for ever, none daring after this to lay ſuch ſinnes to my charge any more: Whence note, what boldneſs and confidence the upright-hearted have in God, from which all the malice of the Devil and his inſtruments cannot remove them, neither ſhall they be herein deceived, as Job was not; to incourage to do as Abraham was bidden, that is, to walke before God and to be upright.

Gregor. Note. Gen. 17. 1.

Verſ. 8 Verſ. 9. Verſ. 10. Behold I goe forward and he is not there, and backward but I cannot perceive him. On my left hand where he doth work, but I cannot behold him, he hideth himſelf on the right hand, that I cannot ſee him. But he knoweth the way that I take, when he hath tryed me, I ſhall come forth as gold. Having expreſſed his deſire before, to come, even to the Seat or Throne of God, to be tryed, he here complayneth, that which way ſoever he turned himſelf ſelf to finde him, he could not yet do it, but ſtil he hid himſelfe from him; that is, he could finde no comfort from him, whereby he might be eaſed of his troubles outwardly in body, or inwardly in minde: And thus it is with the deare Servants of God in time of temptation, as David alſo complained, and Chriſt upon the Croſs. To this effect Ferus, and that rightly, if we look only at the thing here ſet forth in general; only add we more out of Gregory in general alſo, that he meant that God was inviſible in any part of the World; becauſe he is not in a part, but filleth all the parts thereof, yet unſeen by mortal eyes: And albeit we ſee not him, he ſeeth us, as being about all our paths and waies; as David more largely ſetteth forth the ſame, which ſhould make us continually to feare to do evil, as we feare an enemy, that lieth ſecretly in wait to take advantage againſt us to deſtroy us, we feare him in all places, both where he is not, and where he is; much more therefore God, of whom we cannot ſay in any place, he is not here, although we ſee him not, and he is certainly an enemy to ſuch as do evil: And more particularly he ſaith, to ſeek him before, by the Vulg. rendred, In the eaſt, or behinde, In the weſt, is to ſeek him out by ſtudy and contemplation, what he is from everlaſting to everlaſting: I can finde no beginning or ending that he hath, or to the ful know him, as he is; but here from the beginning of the World to the end we know him but in part, on the left hand I am ſure, that I ſhall not ſee him, that is, living in ſin, nor on the right living virtuouſly, and attributing ſome merit to my ſelf therefore, for which cauſe they that would finde God and comfort in him, muſt walk in the way of his commandements without declining to the left hand or to the right. Some by the foure parts of the World here ſpoken of underſtand, that his meaning is, that if he ſhould travel alwaies to finde out the cauſe of his judgments, and of all meanes, that the World can afford, yet he could not finde it out. Some, that he ſpeakes thus, leaſt any ſhould conceive, that he thought God fixed to any place, becauſe he had ſpoken before of his ſeat, and coming to it: But what meaneth he in ſpeaking of the left hand to ſay, Where he worketh. Some by the left underſtand the North, as by the right hand, the South: Saying his working in the North is ſpoken of, becauſe that in the North part of the Heaven are more ſigns and of more remarkable influence, then in the South; but if we underſtand by the left ſin, and wickedneſs, as was before ſaid, the meaning is, that upon notorious ſinners God worketh by way of judgment, ſo as that all men muſt needs take notice hereof, as upon the Egyptians and Canaanites, &c. for the words of Verſ. 10. He knoweth the way that I take. That is, although I cannot ſee him, yet he ſeeth me, and my uprightneſs; and not withſtanding theſe my great ſufferings whereby he trieth me, if he cometh once to give ſentence I ſhall come off as moſt precious before him, how vilely ſoever yee think of me.

Note.

Ferus.

Gregory.

Pſ. 139.

Note.

1 Cor. 13.

Dioniſ. Cajetan. Tho. Aqui.

My foot hath held his ſtepts, his way have I kept and not declined. That is, I have lived in obedience to him and followed him, going ſtept by ſtept in the way, which he hath commanded me to walk in, and have not declined herefrom, to the right hand or to the left, and therefore I am far from being ſuch an one, as thou Eliphaz layeſt to my charge: And to explain this further, he addeth. I have not gone back from the commandement of his lips, I have eſteemed the wordes of his mouth, more then my neceſſary food. Hebr. I have hidden the wordes of his mouth, more then my ſtatute. The word alſo ſignifieth any thing appointed, or which a man is accuſtomed to, or hath right unto it, his Portion: And becauſe treaſures that be moſt deare unto us, we lay up and hide with all carefulneſs; it is rendred in N. Tran. I eſteemed. And becauſe a mans portion for his maintenance in this life, is his food, it is rendred by food that is neceſſary: But the Vulg. I have hid in my heart. To expreſs the ſame, but no regard being had to the ſignification of the words; to hold then to the Hebrew, the meaning is, I have

Verſ. 11.

Verſ. 12.

I have hidden in my heart the words, as more deare unto me, then any portion of worldly Goods, ſet out by the divine providence unto me; be it Wealth, Honour, Food, Rayment, or any other worldly thing. Where-
Note. in Job teacheth us both how to carry our ſelves towards the word of God, that it may profit us, we muſt not heare it only, but lay it up in our hearts, by thinking ſeriouſly upon it, to reform our lives thereafter, and in what account to have it, even more then any worldly Goods, which are moſt neceſſary for this life, or any thing that tendeth to glory or delight here; all which muſt ſeem vile unto us, in regard of this word: Yea as Paul Phil 3. ſaith, As droſs or dung.

Verſ. 13. But he is in one minde and who can turn him, and what his Soule deſireth that he will do. The vulg. But he is alone. Hebr. In one. That is, immutable in his decrees, what judgments he decreeth to bring upon men none can prevent, as is explained in the latter part of the Verſ. Gregory following Gregory. the Vulg. ſaith, Seeing there be Angels, the Heavens and the earth, and other things innumerable, how can he be ſaid to be one alone? And anſwereth: That he alone is principally and of himſelf, others of him; and again he is immutable, and others mutable and waxing old, is ſaid, Pſ. 102. But he can alwaies ſay of himſelf, as he ſometime ſaid to Moſes, I am: Thus he, and that rightly; yet for his decrees of judgment, againſt a People or Nation, they are alſo immutable, but upon repentance and prayer, they may Jer. 18. 8. be reverſed, as is expreſly taught by Jeremiah.

Verſ. 14. For he performeth the thing that is appointed for me, and many ſuch things are with him. That is, in theſe my ſufferings I look at Gods decree, according to which they have befallen me; yea there may be more ſufferings yet decreed to come upon me, in his ſecret counſel, of which I know not,
Verſ. 15. in regard of which he ſaith, When I conſider, I am afrait of him: For God
Verſ. 16. maketh my heart ſoft, &c. That is, by his judgments he peirced it, as it is not with an hard heart that is impenetrable, ſo that this way afflictions are turned to good to the faithful, their hearts are hereby mollified, and made to feare and tremble; whereby they come to have God nearer to them,
Iſa. 66. 2. according to that ſaying of the Prophet, To whom am I neare, even to him
Verſ. 17. that is of a contrite heart, and trembleth at my word. Verſ. 17. Becauſe, I was not cut off before the darkneſs, neither hath darkneſs been covered from my face. Vulg. I have not periſhed for the eminent darkneſs, neither hath dark-
Gregor. neſs covered my face. Expounded by Gregory thus, I have not, neither do I ſuffer for my works of darkneſſe, and although I have ſinned, yet the darkneſs of ſin hath not hidden the light from me, as from them that are 2 Cor. 4. 4. blinded by the God of this World, that is, wicked reprobates; ſo that I ſhould go on with a full ſwinge in ſinning, but have had that ſight and ſenſe of good and evil, as to abhor from this, and to enſue that, although through the infirmity of my fleſh, I be not perfect. Heb. it is, I have not been cut off before the darkneſs, and darkneſs hath been covered from my face. But the word And, is commonly rendred Neither, but needlelly; for the meaning may well be this: My heart is ſoftened, and I was troubled, as was ſaid, Verſ. 16. becauſe I dyed not before I came into this dark region of ſo great miſeries, which I deſired rather; and becauſe the darkneſs of ſo greivous ſufferings hath covered me, bringing me almoſt into the diſpairing condition of thoſe that are in utter darkneſs for ever. For he wiſh-Tigur. Interp. ed before, that he had dyed long before, Chap. 3. And ſpake of terrours both without and within, making his eſtate moſt uncomfortable, Chap. 6. 4. Some others expound it thus, Theſe evils came not upon me unawares, neither was I covered with this darkneſs, having no thoughts of it before:
Chap. 3. 25. For the evil that I feared came upon me: Some expounding the latter clauſe, neither did death cover my face from theſe ſufferings, before they came; conſent with me in the former: Some again, I am not of ſo object a mind, as to be thus troubled, meerly for my bodily ſufferings, but for the terrour of the Almighty, of whose further proceedings against me, and casting me into pitchy darknesse, I am afraid, as if he had sayd, that darknesse to come is not hidden from my face, but I see and fear that: For although he had faith to be saved herefrom, yet in temptation he feared utter rejection, as of an enemy from Gods presence for ever. All which I have propounded, that the judicious Reader may consider and follow the best.

for

CHAP. XXIV.

WHy, seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his dayes? vulg. The times are hidden from the Almighty; but Hebr. it is interrogatively, Are they not hidden? So that in the vulg. interpr. there is a manifest presumption in that, e lea veth out the word מדוע why although it be done, least Job should be thought to have spoken atheistically, an interrogation having the force of an affirmation, if it be affirmative, or of a negation if negative, and therefore if it be read, Are not the times hidden from God? it had been, as if he had sayd, They are. But there is no need of this shift, the sense of the words, as they go in Hebrew being manifestly this: Why, or what reason can be given by these, that boast so much of the knowledge of God (that he knowing to distinguish times, and to deale with men accordingly, suffering the wicked in their greatest wickednes oftentimes here, but appointing a time to judge them thereafter) they should be so ignorant as not to know this, but run headily on in condemning the righteous that suffer here, as if this were a certain sign of Gods Wrath against them, and the prosperity of others a sign of his favour: The N. Tr. then interlacing the word seeing for the making of the sentence more full, is rather to be followed, and Cajetan also hath it so. In these words then Eliphaz and his fellowes are derided, as professing themselves to be such as know, and yet were ignorant of this distinction of time, which all know, that have the true knowledge of God and of his wayes: And all others are hereby convinced not to know God aright, who do as if they knew not this, but if they prosper in this world, blesse themselves, as Gods favorites, and looke upon the faithfull that are under great crosses, as hated by him, and hereby discovered to be hypocrites: For the true knowledge of God is to know and consider, that he hath two times, the one wherein all things fall out alike unto all; and the other when the goats shall be seperated from the sheepe; that is, the wicked from the righteous, and then these shall weepe no more, but have everlasting joy, and those that laugh now shall waile and weepe. Vers. 1. Note.

Some remove the Land marks, they violently take away the flocks and feed thereof. Now Job beginneth to reckon up the horrible sinnes of the wicked, which are so plain, that they need no explication, according to the Letter. But as notorious wicked men and oppressours, do some of them one of these things and some another, so heretickes do them being spiritually understood. They remove the Land Marks by teaching, that of the Church there are other markes then hee hath set downe in his holy word, viz. hearing Christs voice, and obeying and teaching that only to others, and what hee revealed to his Apostles for them to teach. Thus then Euthusiasts remove the land markes, who pretend Revelations and new lights, and they that follow the traditions of the Elders, without examining them by the word, that is, the Canons of the Apostles, the Decrees of Counsells, and Decretalls of Popes: And as the Removers of Land markes literally understood, are accursed, so and much more are these. Wherefore Anabaptists, and all of the reformed religion, that seperate from the Churches reformed, being but some Phantasticall particular persons, that out of an affectation Vers. 2. Gregor. Ioh. 10.

of

of singularity, take into these wayes, are manifestly Hereticks and accursed: And so are Papists that obtrude other markes of antiquity, visibility, and universality, in all which yet their Church of Rome saileth, as I have shewed in my Catechisme and Antidote against Popery. For the next particular sin, they take away the Flocks: This is done by seducing Christians out of the right way, by persecution raised up against those that they cannot seduce, and offering violence to them in their Goods or persons, or both, thus making a prey of them, whereupon they feed and fill themselves.

Vers. 3. They drive away the Asse of the Fatherlesse, and take the widdowes Oxe to pledge: By the Fatherlesse here understand also the true Christian, who is sayd to be fatherlesse, because, as it were, without a Father, in this world, because he is not yet come to his Fathers house Heaven, whilst he liveth here; and in like manner we may understand the Widdow to whom the Law, her first Husband as it were, is dead, that shee might be marryed to another, even Christ, to whom shee is here espoused indeed by beleiving, and prepared against the day of marriage, that is, the last day, but is like a widdow alone in this world till then, and so lyeth open to the violence of these persecutors; to set forth more sorts of the Goods of such taken away by whom, unto the flocks he here addeth their asses, and Oxen, of the violent taking away of all, which Job had wofull experience.

Rom. 7.

Vers. 4. They turn the needy out of the way, the poor of the earth hide themselves together. vulg. They subvert the way of the weak, and oppresse the poor together. The first clause in N. Tr. is according to the Hebrew. The other, The poor of the Earth are hidden together: That is, such Christians as are meek by nature and lowly, they work upon through their deceit, who thinke them to know more then they do, and therefore are the more apt to be led by their examples and perswasions, but they be but earthly, that are seduced by them, and are lead as it were blindfolded, for which he sayd, That they are hidden together under a black vaile, as it were, being blindly lead, as the Apostle sayth of the Gentiles, before their Conversion.

Ephes. 2.

Vers. 5. Behold as wild Asses in the Wildernesse, they go forth to their work, rising betimes for a prey, the desert yeildeth food to them and their Children. Here he plainly pointeth at the Arabian Robbers, living, In Arabia deserta, and maintaining themselves and their Children by Robberyes, which they commit, partly upon passengers, and partly upon Neighbouring places, which are more fruitfull, from whence they coming in companies take cattell, and live thereupon. And this also doth Gregory expound mystically of arch Hereticks, who that they may procure the more reverence to themselves for their austerity of life, live not amongst others, but go alone into solitary places, to which others being drawn by the admiration of them, they take their opportunity to work upon them, and to draw them to their own superstitious wayes. A very right description truly of the Popish Eremites, who go this way to worke, and perswade others to do the like; and these are, as it were their Children, for whom, and themselves even in such barren places they get food enough of such silly people as come unto them from time to time, V. 6.

Vers. 6 They reap every one his corn in the feild, and gather the vintage of the wicked: the vulg. They reape the feild which is not their own, and cut down the vintage of them whom they have oppressed: But in the first clause the word Not, is not in Hebr. but is inserted in vulg. to make the sense to hold the better. For what evill imputation is it for a man to reap his own Corn: therefore it is rendred, Agrum non suum, his own, because by violence made his own, and such as these Robbers made account of as their own, although the corn feild of another: Whereas also the vulgar hath it, They reape the feild, this is all one with the corne in the feild, for the next clause, of them whom they have oppressed, herein although the vulg. goeth eth alſo from the Hebr. Yet in the ſenſe there is no difference, if by the wicked we underſtand the oppreſſed by them, whom they count their wicked Enemies, and therefore worthy to be thus dealt withall; or if by the wicked we underſtand, ſuch as they were, their impartiality in getting booties is hereby ſet forth, like hungry dogs they ranged about, and were ſo greedy of making a prey of other mens goods, that they ſpared not the vinetage of another, but ſerved all mens Yards alike that came in their way. Some becauſe the word ורקשו here uſed cometh of לקש The later Raine, underſtand it, as if it had been ſayd, they keep all men ſo in awe, that none dare to gather the vinetage of their wicked Companions, but let their Grapes hang till they be full ripe by the later rain, and they note, that this word is oppoſed to that which went before of cutting down Corn feilds, for that cometh of קצר to ſtreighten, and implyeth an haſty cutting of them down, even before the Corn was full ripe, for fear of being prevented by the owners cutting, and carrying it away before them. Some will have the word רשע Wicked a Nominative, rendring it thus, and the wicked gather the vintage, that is, not Corne alone will ſuffice theſe Robbers, but they ſteal away the Grapes alſo, and whereas the Verb being a Plurall ſeemeth to make againſt this reading, the Noun being a ſingular, they ſay by the Noun רשע may be underſtood the multitude of the wicked, that do thus, they being all as one, and therefore are accordingly ſpoken of; For my part I think it is beſt to read it, The vintage of the wicked; and that is ſo called becauſe they gathered it, that were wicked Robbers, and being thus taken away it was theirs, as the Corn feilds before ſpoken of were theirs, that is, entred into and taken as their own, but woe to them, that thus take and make other mens Goods their own, for they ſhall be judged for it another day, which God hath ſet, although they be merry herewith for the preſent. R. Abraham. Note.

They cauſe the naked to lodge without cloathing, that they have no covering in the cold. That is, they exerciſe not their rapine only againſt men that have feilds and vineyards, but even againſt them that have nothing but clothes on their backs, and to cover them with, when they ſleep in the night, the higheſt degree of ſavage cruelty that can be, eſpecially that being alſo added which followeth, v. 8. Ver. 7.

They are wet with the ſhowers of the mountaines, and imbrace the rock for want of a ſhelter. That is, being thus denuded, they are driven alſo from houſe and home, being forced to live in the mountaines and deſert places in extream miſery, ver. 9. 10. Greater cruelty in them is yet ſpoken of, their rage againſt Orphans, and againſt the naked before ſpoken of, who having nothing but a few Ears of Corn, upon which to feed, by rubbing them in their hands, having them alſo pluckt away from their mouthes, being thus famiſhed. Verſ. 8.

Which make Wine within their walls, and tread winepreſſes and ſuffer thirſt. The vulg. Inter acernos eorum meridiatiſum, Commonly expounded of theſe robbers made rich by Rapine, and dining merrily herewith in the midſt of abundance, the poor that tread their winepreſſes having yet ſo little for their labour, that they have not enough of the ſayd wine which they make to quench their thirſt: but N. Tranſlat. goeth ſo, as if all this were ſpoken of their poor Servants only, whom they have taken away from the Widdowes, their Mothers making them to work in making their wine, but keeping them moſt Poorly. For the Words here uſed שוהרים ſignifieth Walls, that is of a City, and צהר to ſhine, whence וצהר cometh ſignifying Oyle, light, or noon day, for which Jerom rendreth it, Meridiati ſunt, by a word taken from noon day, which is commonly put for dining plentifully and then reſting; but I rather prefer making oyle for theſe Robbers of the Olives taken away by them, and then treading their Wine preſſes with great labour, but keep ſhort in reſpect of neceſſary food, becauſe it Verſ. 11.

followeth immeadiatly after the deſcription of men, brought to miſery by them, Verſ. 9. 10. as pertayning to the ſame.

Verſ. 12. Men groaned from out of the City, and the Soule of the wounded cryeth out, yet God layeth not folly to their charge. Vulg. God ſuffereth him not to go unrevenged. Hebr. God putteth not an inſulſe, or unſavoury thing. For תִּפְלָה ſignifieth In ſulſum, aut inſipidum, and שׂוּם from whence יָשִׂים cometh, ſignifieth either to put, or diſpoſe; and ſo the meaning is, Theſe horrible wickedneſſes are committed, God permitting it to be done ſo, and yet it ſhall appeare in the end, that nothing is unſavoury or corrupt, as meat without ſalt, in all his doings; the puniſhment and revenge to be taken upon ſuch, being deferred til the day of judgment: At which ſenſe the Vulg. looking with regard to the proper ſignification of the words, rendred it, as was ſaid before, but even ſo, it ſhould be: Will not ſuffer him to go unrevenged: Becauſe the word is a future, for our N. Tran. it is altogether from the ſenſe, and it would be read thus; God diſpoſeth not, or will not diſpoſe of any thing unjuſtly; Although for the preſent it be thus: and all this is ſpoken to ſhew, that the ground whereupon Eliphaz and his fellowes meant, was falſe, Viz. That God laieth not ſo great ſufferings, as he did upon Job, upon any juſt man, for if by his permiſſion wicked men come ſo much to abound with worldly wealth, on the contrary ſide, righteous men may be here impoveriſhed, and ſuffer greivouſly: The one having his judgment deferred, and the other the reward of his righteouſneſs til the laſt day: For the thing here ſpoken of, the violence of wicked robbers is ſhewed to be ſo great, that they not only do the outrages before ſpoken of, in feilds and Vineyards, and to ſuch as dwell ſolitarily, but alſo ſometimes invade and kil, and wound in the greateſt frequency of people, cauſing lamentation and ſorrow amongſt them.

Verſ. 13. They are of thoſe that rebel againſt the light. Here by light ſome underſtand the light of nature and reaſon, contrary to which they do in ſinning, as was before ſaid; ſith that it is againſt conſcience, placed in every natural man thus to do: Some underſtand God who is light, and in him is no darkneſs, whereby he ſhould be hindred from ſeeing any thing done by men, and ſome light properly taken for the light of the day, which they decline and go in the dark, to do theſe works of darkneſs: But this laſt is too much feared, forſomuch as it is one thing to decline the light, and another to rebel againſt it: But it may be taken either of the other two waies; for they that wrong the pooreſt and weakeſt of Gods Servants, rebel againſt God, and ſhall be proceeded againſt accordingly by God, yea, take the pooreſt and moſt impotent in general, ſuch as poor fatherleſs children and widdows be; and what wrong or oppreſſion is done to them, God taketh as done to himſelf: And for that light called Conſcience, againſt this, wicked doers rebel, becauſe it telleth them that they ought not ſo to do; and when they preſume yet to go againſt the dictate hereof, it judgeth and condemneth and troubleth them many times ſo, that they can have no quiet, although they want no worldly thing: But when I looke upon Verſ. 14. The murtherer riſeth with the light and killeth. And V. 15. is, having ſpoken of that, which they do in the night, he concludeth, that They know not the light. I conceive that by their rebelling againſt the light, is principally meant, their doing of ſuch horrible wickedneſſes, even in the day time, when one would think, that the light ariſing, ſhould awe them and make them afraid, they yet in diſpite hereof, as rebels againſt their Soveraign, whom all other men feare, feare it not, and againſt the command thereof, break out into the moſt crying ſinnes of all others, murther: But becauſe they cannot come to commit the foule ſin of adultry, but in the dark; nor break through into ſome houſes, but when all in the houſe are aſleep, he ſaith, they obſerve the darkneſs of the night for theſe.

Exod. 22. 22.

Rom. 2.

Ver. 14.

For the morning is to them as the ſhaddow of death, if one knoweth them they are in the terrours of the ſhaddow of death. Heb. For together, or all one to them, is the morning the ſhaddow of death. That is, The morning and the ſhaddow of death are all one to theſe Night-Owles that go about, and their wickedneſſes in the night: And for the next words, they be כי ובר becauſe he is known, the light morning coming on, is as the Terrours of the ſhaddow of death, a true deſcription of a Theef that breaketh into an houſe and ſtealeth in the night, but the light of the morning coming, whereby he is found out, he is ſtricken with feare through the guiltineſs of his conſcience, becauſe he muſt dye for it, as all breakers into houſes muſt, ſo that he is even already as a dead man. Verſ. 17.

He is ſwift as the waters, their portion is curſed in the earth, and he beholdeth not the way of the vineyards. Heb. He is light upon the face of the water. And thus it is rendred in Vulg. Lat. The meaning is, they are as a light thing upon the ſtreames of water running ſwiftly and carrying it away with ſpeed, for ſo doth the foule adulterer and theef, ſo ſoon as the light appeareth, that none can overtake or lay hold upon them: Some, that it is ſpoken in reſpect of their ſwift paſſing on, from one wickedneſs to another, or their never being ſetled after ſuch wickedneſs committed, but alwaies ready to be overturned, as a ſhip that is unballanced, and ſo to be drowned in the Sea, which ſeemeth to be the beſt; and this may be taken as ſpoken of Pirates that rob at Sea, and the next paſſage of robbers by Land, whoſe portion is ſaid to be curſed upon earth, for they that get Goods unjuſtly, get the curſe of God together withall: He beholdeth not the way of the Vineyards. That is ſay ſome, to run away by them, which were common waies to Cityes, but by ſome other obſcure by-way, that he may not be found: Some becauſe Vineyards were planted in moſt temporate and comfortable places; he ſhall not have any comfort at length of his ſtolen Goods: Some, he ſhall not poſſeſs Vineyards, but in his own or his childrens time, if he hath gotten great wealth, come to great poverty: Gregory will have the walking in the way of the Vineyards, for ſo the Vulg. rendreth it, to be in the way of the Church; which is often compared to a Vineyard, in the right faith and doing good, as therein is continually faith taught, this way the wicked, whom the God of this World hath blinded, ſee not, becauſe they ſee it not to walk herein to be ſaved, and therefore periſh everlaſtingly: And as he applieth it, Hereticks ſee not, becauſe they are blinded with errour, and ſo are in the number of thoſe that are curſed alſo: This allegory is good, but for the literal ſenſe, becauſe hee in the words before going ſaid; His portion is curſed upon earth, This I conceive, is added to ſhew, that he hath no portion of the Vineyards, that is, whereſoever he dwelleth and hath his poſſeſſion upon earth, it ſhall not be like a Vineyard yeilding ſweet fruites, of which he ſhall have any true comfort, and which is fenced about by Gods providence and carefully kept, as Vineyards are; but curſed ground, as the earth was to Cain, that fel into the like ſin; and therefore when he filled the ground, it yeilded no increaſe, but Briars and Thornes, whoſe end is to be burned, and ground left to be troden under foot, and deſtroyed by wilde Beaſts, as it is threatned to Judah, bringing forth for ſweet grapes, ſoure and wilde grapes. Verſ. 18. Gregor. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Gen. 4. Heb. 6. Iſa. 5.

Drought and heat conſume the ſnow waters, ſo doth the grave thoſe that have ſinned. Hebr. Heat, yea drought conſume ſnow waters, Hell his ſin. The vulg. His ſin paſſeth from ſnow waters to overmuch heat, and even to Hell. Whereupon many of the Fathers have taught, that the wicked are tormented in Hel with extream cold, as well as with extream heat; applying alſo to this, that ſaying of our Lord, There ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, which is an effect of cold: But I ſee nothing in this text, for which to take occaſion to enter into this diſpute; for the compariſon is made betwixt Verſ. 19.

heat and drought and Hell, and ſnow and ſin; ſin therefore is as ſnow, and Hell, wherein the ſinner ſhall be puniſhed, as drought and heat, whereby the ſnow water, that is cooling and refreſhing in the time of Summer, to thoſe that live in places where it is even then to be had, is conſumed by heat coming, and no drop thereof any more appeareth: So ſhall it be with wicked robbers and murtherers, here they may have ſomewhat to cool them, when in travelling about ſuch abominable wickedneſſes they have heat themſelves, but there is not a drop of water to cool them, being tormented in thoſe flames; as appeareth by Dives craving it, but having it unto him denyed: Here by their wicked courſes they have gotten wherewithall to live for a moment in pleaſure, for to drink wine or water, as their neceſſity required at their pleaſure, but there muſt indure extream drought and heat, and have no remedy againſt it any more, their ſin being now quite conſumed; that is, The things of this life, in getting which they ſo fowly ſinned, and wherewith they refreſhed themſelves: For ſo is the golden Calfe, which the children of Iſraell worſhipped, is called their ſin; and for the like reaſon, the comfortable things of this life gotten by rapine, may be called his ſin, that thus getteth them. Junius will have this compariſon to hold thus, When death cometh, the name and memory of the wicked vaniſh, as ſnow waters, which are the lighteſt waters, before the heat of the Sun in a dry time. Calvin, they perſiſt in theſe their ſinnes, wherein they have been nuzzelled up, even to their graves. Gregory reading it, Let him paſſe from ſnow water to heat, or let his ſin paſſe, and even to Hell. Saith, That by ſnow water, which is extreamly cold, is meant a wicked life, wherein appeared no heat of vertue; for to be extreamly cold is to live in ſin, without all ſenſe of piety, or feare of God; in which ſenſe it is ſaid of the Angel of the Church of Laodicea. I would, that thou wert either hot or cold. And by heat, an evil heat, as in thoſe that are hotly ſet upon errour, before they were frozen as it were, and had no motions in them towards goodneſs, but being intoxicated with errour, they are carried on madly in the worſhip and ſervice of God; ſhewing the greateſt heat of zeal that can be: But all things are done according to their erronious conceptions, and in this way they go in unreclaimably, even til they come in Hel: For he applieth all things as allegorically ſpoken, in alluding to Hereticks, under the perſons of theſe wicked ones: And although I ſee not, how this can well be gathered hence, yet it is true, that he ſaith, There are ſuch, that firſt are moſt wicked, then taken with errour, wax moſt fervent in that way, and from this they never turn, til they come in Hel; that ſome ſuch at the leaſt may be moved to conſider of it, and repent.

Luk. 16.

Junius.

Calvin.
Gregor.

Revel. 9.

Note.

Verſ. 20. The womb ſhall forget him, the worm ſhall feed ſweetly on him, and he ſhall be no more remembred, and wickedneſſe ſhall be broken as a tree. That is, For his name upon earth, when he is thus dead and gone into torment, that ſhall be nothing, but as a Tree that is fallen down by tempeſt, and rent up by the roots, is burnt in the fire, and then no more thought upon, ſo ſhall it be with the wicked: And to the ſame effect, Jude ſpeakes of wicked Hereticks, as of Trees twice dead and plucked up by the rootes. And he ſpeaks of the womb forgetting him, taking his whole life together, from the firſt to the laſt, and what he hath done, whereby he thought to purchaſe to himſelf an honourable remembrance amongſt poſterity, ſhall all be buried in oblivion: And for this body, that he hath fatted up, it ſhall be but meat for the wormes.

Jud. Epiſt.

Verſ. 21. He evil intreateth the barren, that beareth not, and hath not done good to the Widdow. Vulg. He hath fed the barren, whereupon ſome expound it of wicked mens feeding Whores, and maintaining them for their pleaſure. Gregory of feeding the fleſh, which is barren in reſpect of goodneſs, but neither of them ſpeak here to the purpoſe: For the word here uſed, ſignifieth, not to feed, but to do evil, and although there be another word

Cajetan.
Gregory.

רעה

רעה like unto it, ſignifying to feed, yet it is a word ſignifying alſo to teare and to break, wherefore it is ſuch a feeding, as whereby that which ſhe hath is fed and lickt up, and ſhe is made yet more miſerable, who was afflicted before in that ſhe had no Children: The meaning then is, according to Vatablus, the Wicked before ſpoken of, have alſo this Wickedneſs in them which is againſt nature, that he who hath a wife that is barren, whom he had need to comfort, uſeth her the more unkindly therefore, and not like Elkana, that loved Hannah, or Jacob more loving Rachel, or following the proper ſignifycation of the word, their cruelty in oppreſſing is ſo great, that it extendeth even to women moſt afflicted, that have no Children to comfort them, or Husband living to provide for them. Vatabl.

He draweth alſo the mighty with his power, he riſeth up and no man is ſure of life. vulg. Detraxit fortes in fortitudine ſua, Expounded of his Tyranny, exerciſed not only over ſilly weak women, but as his authority and power is, he uſeth it againſt the greateſt, whom he hath brought under him: For this is the manner of Tyrants, to have a care that none live in their dominion that be mighty, unleſſe they will live in all ſervile ſubjection to them. If any dare do otherwiſe, when ſuch riſe by coming to have power, or wrath ariſeth in them, his life ſhall immediatly be in great danger, as Naboths was who durſt deny to Ahab, what he deſired; And this is to be conſidered by men of might, as a moſt wicked thing, making them conſorts with theſe notorious wicked men before ſpoken of, both in ſinn and puniſhment, that ſhall come: In the tranſlations there is no difference in reſpect of the ſenſe, and the word, משך ſignifyeth to draw, or to draw forth. Ver. 22. Vatablus. Note.

Though it be given him to be in ſafety, whereupon he reſteth, yet his eyes be upon their wayes: vulg. God hath given him place for repentance, and he abuſeth it to pride, but his eyes be in his wayes. Hebr. It is given to him to be ſafe, and he leanes upon it, ſo that the vulgar too much differeth herein, neither doth it attain the ſenſe in any meaſure, which is, he that is the tyrant before ſpoken of, having drawn other mighty men to his part, ſecureth them by his promiſes, and unto this they lean, but ſtill he is miſtruſtfull, and hath an eye to their wayes, that if he can take any of them tripping, he may hereupon pick a quarrell, and cut them off, when he hath made them moſt confident; ſo Innius, whoſe rendring the Hebr. may well bear the word Though, only being prefixed, Though he giveth him ſecurity whereupon he leaneth, For Tyrants and Uſerpers have guilty conſciences, and hereby they are made always ſuſpitious. Ver. 23.

They are exalted for a little while, but are gone, and brought low, &c. They are cut off as the tops of the eares of Corn. Verſ. 24.

For the former part of this verſe it needs none Expoſition: For the later it may be underſtood of the like violence, whereby Tyrants ſhall be cut off, by which they have cut off other mighty and great men; for many write of Tarquinius, that he ſent one to his Sonn, who ſhould have raigned after him, that might draw him into his Garden to talk with him about the Eſtabliſhing of his Kingdome, and he, when he was come thither ſtruck off with his ſtaff, the heads of many Poppyes, hereby giving him to underſtand, that he muſt deal ſo with his Nobles, and then ſhould ſit ſure. Thus alſo Traſibulus the King of the Mileſians is ſayd to have done, to make the like Demonſtration, by ſtriking off with his ſtaffe certain Eares of Corne.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXV.

Ver. 2 Verſ. 3. Dominion and fear are with him, and he maketh peace in his high places: Is there any number of his Armies, and upon whom doth not his light ariſe? Theſe words of Bildad ſeem to have reference to that which Iob had ſayd, Ch. 23. deſiring that he might come to the ſeat of God, to argue about his caſe, provided that God would not oppreſſe him with his Majeſty, and greatneſſe, To this Bildad here ſayth; this was an audacious provoking of God into the liſts indeed, for a man to ſpeak thus, for why, with him are Dominion and fear; or as the Vulg. hath it, Terrour more aptly, as if he had ſayd, he is the Ruler of the whole world, and of ſuch dreadfull majeſty, that it is enough to ſtrike any man dead, that ſhall approach neare unto it, and this Majeſty he will not lay aſide for any mans pleaſure; but what meaneth he by ſaying, he maketh peace in his high places: Vulgar, In ſublimibus ſuis; it may be referred either to places or perſons, and therefore by ſome the Heavens are underſtood, which move always orderly one by another, there being no jarring amongſt them; by ſome, Tempeſts coming from above, which are ſoon appeaſed again by his power: Some underſtand the Angells of Heaven, amongſt whom there is Unity and Concord, and never any varience, ſo that there ſhould be any need of keeping a Court, as it were, to heare and determine caſes, as Iob deſired, that it might be about his caſe. For they all unanimouſly ſubmit to the Will of God, neither is there any of them that makes complaint before him. Therefore Iob did ill to offer to make a diſturbance there, where there was all peace; and this ſeemeth to be the beſt: Is there any number of his Armies, as if he had ſayd, yet of Angells he hath Armies innumerable, ſo that it is the more to be admired, that he needeth ſuch conſtant, and continual peace amongſt them, for it is not ſo with men, the mightieſt among whom yet is of little ſtrength, and his forces are as nothing in compariſon; but amongſt theſe peace can hardly be kept: And this is ſpoken to ſhew the dreadfull power of God, as the next words to ſhew his wiſdome and omniſcience and beneficence: And upon whom doth not his light ariſe? For hereby is meant, that he both ſeeth and knoweth all things in Heaven and in Earth, and is beneficiall to all, making his Sun, which is his light, to ſhine upon all parts of this world, whereby all things are made to grow that ſpring out of the earth and have life in them, to the uſe and benefit of Men both Good and Evill: He then that is ſo Mighty, ſo Wiſe, and ſo Good, how can any man tax him for any hard meaſure offered unto him, or provoke him to come into judgment, as if he had any thing to ſay againſt his moſt ſevere proceedings, for the mighty, good, and wiſe God can do nothing but juſtly and righteouſly. And if it be ſo it is vain for any man, ſuffering miſery, to ſeek to juſtify himſelf, there being cauſe enough in him, or in any man that is borne of a woman to ſuffer in all extreamity, as he ſheweth, Verſ. 4. See the ſame, Chapt. 4. 17.

Ver. 4. Ver. 5. Behold even the Moone and it ſhineth not, and the ſtars are not pure in his ſight. See a paſſage touching the Angells, like unto this, Chapt. 4. 18. The meaning is, that the very ſhining of the Moon and the Stars, is nothing in compariſon of his ſhining in purity and holineſs; and therefore the purity of the moſt righteous man is nothing for him to bear himſelf upon, as Iob ſeemed to him to do, which ſenſe is made up thus full, V. 6. wherein man is called a Worm, as Pſ. 22. In compariſon of the Heavenly Lights.

Ver. 6.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVI.

HOw haſt thou helped him, that hath no power? How haſt thou the arme that hath no ſtrength? Becauſe Bildad had ſo magnified the power and wiſdome of God, hereby to deter Job from entring into the liſts with him, to contend with him by argument, Job now derideth him for his ſo doing; becauſe God needed none of his help, to keep Job from grapling this way with him: For ſimply to aſſert and defend, and predicate the Power, Wiſdome, and Goodneſs of God, is not evil but good, and the duty of every man; but for one to do it out of pride, or contentiouſneſs, or in way of oſtentation of his wiſdome or eloquence, is worthy of blame, yea of deriſion; or hereby to infer, that a juſt man is wicked and worthily under ſo great ſufferings as Job was. Some ſay, that Job derided him thus for ſtanding up in the defence of God, as if he feared that if Job ſhould come to argue with him, he might get the better of it, and therefore he ſought to ſtrike ſuch terrour into him, as that he ſhould not dare thus to challenge God any more, but this is as ridiculous, as Bildads ſpeech, which Job ſo much derided. For Bildad was not ſo ignorant, but that he knew God and his Wiſdome better then ſo, as to fear any mans prevailing againſt him. Verſ. 2. Chryſoſt. Pineda.

To whom haſt thou uttered words? and whoſe Spirit came from thee? vulg. Whom wouldſt thou teach, not him, that made Spiramentum: as if it were meant that Bildad in ſaying ſo, went about to teach God, as if he knew not, that every man hath that ſpirit of Underſtanding, which is in him from God. But the words are Hebr. as in N. Tranaſla. the meaning not differing from the vulg. For to bring forth words to teach, what is it but to teach, and in ſaying, Whoſe ſpirit came from thee? he meaneth nothing elſe, but who giveth thee underſtanding to conceive and ſpeak thus but God, and what an abſurd thing then is it for thee to ſpeak thus of him, as if he could not ſpeak enough for himſelf, whithout whom thou couldſt have ſayd nothing: The word here uſed for ſpirit is נשמה and there be two other words, that ſignifie the ſame, רוח and נפש betwixt which R. Ezra diſtinguiſheth thus, The firſt ſetteth forth Reaſon being ſeated in the heart, and it is the beginning of life. The third the Concupiſcible, and is ſeated in the liver. Verſ. 4. R. Ezra.

Dead things are formed from under the waters, and the Inhabitants thereof: Vulg. The Giants mourn under the waters, and they that dwell with them, The word מרפאים ſignifieth Sanation, but another word coming from the ſame root, Giants, or dead, and the word rendred, are formed, or mourn, is יחוללו to bring forth, or to ſorrow as one wounded. For the meaning, Job here beginneth to ſpeak parabolically and darkly, that is, ſo as is not eaſy to be underſtood, as appeareth by the words, Chapt. 27. 1. and Chap. 29. 1. where it is ſayd, Job continued his parable, and to ſpeak in parables is to ſpeak ſo as not to be underſtood without interpretation, as is taught by our Lord, ſaying; I ſpeak to them in parables, that hearing they may hear and not underſtand. So this ſaying of Job is miſticall, being well rendred either dead or Giants, according to Gregory, who ſayth, that by them are meant proud Tyrants of this world, who are as the Gyants full of cruelty; and dead they may be ſayd to be, becauſe dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, theſe mourn under the waters, when for their Tyranny they are oppreſſed and pulled down by thoſe over whom they raigned, for unto waters be People compared, Rev. 17. 15. & they that dwel with them are ſuch as under their authority Tyrannize over the people alſo, for they ſhal all be oppreſſed with troubles ariſing from the People, as by a floud of waters overflowing and bearing down Verſ. 5. Matth. 13. Gregor. Gen. 6. Note.

down great Trees: And this is good for the allegorical ſenſe, for the literal, by Gyants under the water, may be underſtood Whales, which are of a monſtrous greatneſs, and bring forth under the waters, as the word ſignifieth: For what are Gyants but men of monſtrous and great bodies, and ſuch, and more vaſt are theſe in the waters, ſome having been ſeen, as Pliny ſaith, ſo great that they have equalled in breadth and length, four acres of Ground: And of theſe Iob ſpeaketh, to ſhew the almighty power of God, that made them; taking occaſion to ſpeak hereof, from the ſpeech of Bildad. And he beginneth here with Fiſhes, as wherein the power of God multiplying them and preſerving them, appeareth more then in earthly things: for none upon Earth are ſo great as Whales, neither do any earthly creatures multiply as Fiſhes do: And which is moſt obſervable in the Hyſtory of the Creation; God is ſaid to have made great Whales in particular, and to have bleſſed the fiſhes, bidding them increaſe and multiply: As he did not to the creatures, brought forth by the earth; ſo that they both multiply faſter, and when the time was, that earthly creatures were deſtroyed, none of them periſhed: For thoſe that dwell with them they are other fiſhes in general, which are in the Seas where they be, and in particular little fiſhes, that are noted alwaies to ſwim with them, as guides of their way, that they may not unawares, coming into ſhuddy places, be mired there. Ariſtotle calleth them Muſcles, Pliny Muſticets.

Gen. 1. 21. 22.

Verſ. 6. Hel is naked before him, and deſtruction hath no covering. Here he ſpeaketh of Gods wiſdome and omniſcience, taking occaſion from Bildads ſpeech, ſaying, Upon what doth not his light ariſe? It is true ſaith Iob, for Hel the darkeſt place of all others, is not hidden from him, as alſo Prov. 15. 11. and Pſ. 139. And it is not covered ſaith Ferus, but open for him to whom he will caſt thereinto.

Verſ. 7. He ſtretcheth out the North over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing. Here Iob proceedeth to other wonderful works of God, declaring his almighty power, beginneth with the North, as he had before ſpoken of the South, Chap. 9. 9. But what is meant by the empty place, over which the North part of the Heaven is ſpread? Anſw. The aire under it, which ſeemeth for the rarity and thinneſs thereof to be an empty place, and for this it is ſo called: And the North, ſaith Iunius, is put for the whole Heaven, Pars pro toto, and this is a great wonder, the Heavens and Earth to be founded upon nothing. Gregory becauſe it is parobolical, which is here ſaid, expoundeth it thus, By the North underſtand the Devil, who freizeth up mens affections towards good, as the cold coming out of the North the waters, for which he is ſaid, to place his Throne in the ſides of the North: He is ſtretched out over emptineſs, when he poſſeſſeth that heart, which is void and empty of all grace; as the unclean ſpirit returneth to the houſe ſwept and empty: But whereas by the earth hanging upon nothing, he underſtandeth the Church, which as good ground, is made fruitful by the preaching of the word: I ſee no reaſon hereof, unleſs it be added, ſupported by nothing, but by his Almighty power againſt the Devil and all his curſed inſtruments.

Gregor.

Iſa. 14. 12.

Math. 13.

Verſ. 8. He bindeth up the waters in his thick cloudes, and the cloudes are not rent under them. This is another act of divine power, and Solomon ſaith the ſame in effect, although varying the word, He bindeth up the waters in a Garment. For the myſtery, by the waters, ſaith Gregory, underſtand divine knowledge, for ſo Solomon ſaith, The fountain of wiſdome is as deep water out of the mouth of a man: And by the cloudes, wherein this water is bound, the Apoſtles, of whom Iſaiah ſpake by the ſpirit, ſaying, Who are theſe that flee like clouds? For as from the clouds rain diſtilleth moderately, and watereth and maketh the earth fruitful, but all the waters therein are not powred out together; for if they were, they would inſtead of making the earth fruitful, oppreſs it and deſtroy the fruits thereof: So the Prov. 30. 4.

Prov. 18.

Iſa. 60.

the Preachers of the Goſpel, diſtil knowledge by moderate ſhowers, as it were, having abundance bound up in them, ſo as they ſee it moſt likely to avail for the good of their hearers, miniſtring milk to Babes, but holding in that which is as ſtrong meat, til men be grown to more ſtrength: Preachers that want knowledge are as cloudes without any waters bound up, having no more then what they ſoon diſtil to the little profit of their hearers: Againſt whom Iude inveigheth in his Epiſtle, ſaying, Cloudes they are without water, carried about of the windes. Whereby he taxeth their unprofitableneſs: For the Preacher muſt abound in knowledge, in all points of divinity, both for doctrine and interpretation of the Scriptures; and therefore read, and meditate, and preach, and give himſelf wholy to theſe things, as Paul required Timothy to do; that he might both ſave himſelf, and thoſe that heard him. Note. Heb. 5. 12.

He holdeth back the face of his Throne, and ſpreadeth his cloude upon it. What is the Throne here ſpoken of, but Heaven? According to that of our Lord: He that ſweareth by Heaven, ſweareth by the throne of God, and by him that ſitteth thereon. And Heaven, ſaith the Lord, is my throne, and the Earth my footſtool. How he holdeth the face of Heaven, the next words ſhew, he covereth it with cloudes many times, that we cannot ſee it. Myſtically by the face of his Thron, we may underſtand the knowledge of his glory: For this is held from us ſo in this World, that we cannot perfectly know him as he is, but in the life to come we ſhall; but now through a cloud of ignorance our underſtanding is ſo darkned that we cannot: To which effect alſo the Pſalmiſt ſaith, He came fleeing upon the Cherubims, &c. And under his feet was darkneſſe. In Heaven where Cherubims and Seraphims are, there is fulneſs of knowledge, whereof the Cherubims are a type, but upon earth beneath, where we are, there is darkneſs invincible, in many things, which ſhall not be done away til we depart from hence thither; which ſhould make us willing to be diſſolved, that our comfort and happineſs this way may be perfected. Verſ. 9. Math. 5. 34. 1 Joh. 3. 3. Pſ. 18.

He hath compaſſed the waters with bounds, til the day and night come to an end. This is plainly ſpoken of the Sea, by the power of God, kept within bounds continually to the Worlds end, and not ſuffered to go any further to drown the Earth: But whereas an opinion hath taken place amongſt many learned men of great antiquity, that the waters of the Sea are higher then the Earth; and therefore, that this is not done without a miracle, the truth is, That they are lower, and therefore it is ſaid, Com. 2. The waters under the Earth: And Philoſophers generally hold the ſame, thoſe parts into which God gathered the waters, being hollowed and made lower to containe them; only there is a kinde of order of ebbing and flowing ſet to the Seas, according to which by courſe they flow further into the earth, yet no further then God hath ſet their bounds, as is alſo declared, Job 38. 11. And if at any time it gaineth ground in one place, it looſeth as much in another. Verſ. 10.

The pillars of Heaven tremble, and are aſtoniſhed at his reproof. Some by pillars of Heaven, underſtand the glorious Angels, who are as glorious Pillars, ſtanding there for ornament: As the Temple built by Solomon of braſs, were not ſet up to beare any part of the Temple, but for an ornament to it, of ſtability and firmneſs: For the good Angels are likewiſe eſtabliſhed here for ever, and are much more for glory to it then the Sun, Moon, and Stars. Yet they, if God ſhould reprove them, being nothing to God their Creator, muſt needs tremble out of a conſcience of their own imperfections, compared with his perfection. Some underſtand the Firmament of Heaven it ſelf: According to which the Lord ſaith, The powers of Heaven ſhall be ſhaken. And the Prophet; I will ſhake the Heavens and the earth, and the deſire of all Nations ſhall come. Of which ſee my expoſition upon the place. Some underſtand the Mountaines, which are ſo high, that they Verſ. 11. Math. 24. Hag. 2. 6, 7.

ſeem to be pillars of Heaven, ſupporting it; theſe are ſhaken by earthquakes, and ſometimes with great aſtoniſhment, removed out of their places; of either of which if we take it to be ſpoken, or of all, the ſpeech tendeth, to the ſetting forth of Gods dreadful power, that all men might Gregor. feare and tremble before him. Gregory is ſo for the Angels meant here by pillars; that he is alſo and cheifly for men of eminency in the Church, which is often ſet forth by the name of the Kingdome of Heaven: Becauſe Peter, James, and John, are ſo called: And of ſeven pillars, whereupon Wiſedome buildeth her houſe; Solomon ſpeaketh, and of one of the ſeven Churches in Aſia, to which it is there alluded in the number of ſeven, that is, The Angel of the Church of Philadelphia is promiſed to be made a pillar in the houſe of God, not to be removed any more; yet if any of theſe be reproved by God, they are made to tremble; yea they all tremble at his word, and ſo doth every one to whom God is neare, and with whom he dwelleth: For Paul himſelf ſaith, That he had ſufferings without, and terrours within, in reſpect of his ſinnes, from which he could not get to be free. Rom. 7. 2 Cor. 12.

Gal. 2. Prov. 9. Revel. 3. Iſa. 66. 2.

Verſ. 12. He divideth the Sea by his power, and by his underſtanding he ſmiteth through the proud. He divideth the Sea, the Sept. hath, He quieteth the Sea: And the word רגע ſignifieth either: But it is moſt commonly expounded of dividing the waters from the dry land, at the firſt placing ſome above and ſome beneath, and the word מים ſignifieth waters, there-
Gen. 1. fore it may be read, He divideth the waters, and then it plainly hath reference, to the dividing of the waters at the firſt: But becauſe the word ſignifieth the Sea alſo, and Job hath been all this time ſpeaking of the wonderful things, which God daily doth by his power, and can do; the other ſignification would rather be followed, To make quiet. For the Sea is moſt raging, and it muſt be an Almighty power, whereby it can be quieted, when ſtormes ariſe therein, and therefore this may well be ſpoken of, as arguiug Gods infinite power: But then what is meant by the proud one; whom he is ſaid to ſmite through? Some ſay, the Devil, ſome, the Whale, which by tempeſts is ſometimes driven againſt a Rock, and dieth; or driven to ſhore, from whence he cannot go again, and ſo is taken and dieth: Some, Pharaoh, who with his Egyptians, was drowned in the red Sea: And they will have the dividing of the Sea, to be underſtood, of the dividing of that Sea, but if Job lived long before that, as he did at the leaſt; when he uttered theſe words, it cannot ſtand, and yet the word, רהב if it be ſo underſtood, agreeth very well: Becauſe when the deſtruction of the Egyptians is ſpoken of, and of the Babilonians together, it is ſaid, That he ſmote Rahab and Babylon. Laſtly, Some underſtand by the proud one, the Sea it ſelf; which is ſtricken through as it were, by Gods rebuke, when Chap. 38. 11. he ſaith to the proud Waves thereof, be ſtil, they all being hereby ſo ſtricken, that they dare go no further: I prefer that of the Whale, becauſe the Sea is no where called רהב but the Whale is, and the rendring by quieting, or making whiſt and ſtil, as having the Sea in as great awe, as a Gyant hath a Pigmee.

Verſ. 13. By his ſpirit he hath garniſhed the Heavens, his hands have formed the crooked Serpent. For the Lords garniſhing the Heavens, with the Sun, Moon, and Stars; I ſhall not need to ſpeak, but why is the forming or creating of the crooked Serpent ſpoken of together? It is moſt probably thought, Chap. 9. 9. that by the Serpent, here a ſign or conſtellation in Heaven, called the Dragon, is meant: and it is ſo called for the crooked appearance thereof, in the forme of this Serpent: For he ſpake before of the North part of Heaven, ſet upon an empty place, and before, that of Arcturus and Orion, and the Pleiades, other conſtellations amongſt Aſtronomers ſo called in the South. Now therefore coming to ſpeak of the Heavens again, He ſetteth their garniſhing forth in general, to ſhew the wiſdome of God, who made theſe curious works therein, and in particular, in that conſtellation: But ſome ſay, that he joyneth the works of God in Heaven above, and in the waters, which are loweſt, where Dragons or Whales are, as meaning, That if a man looketh over all the World, to Heaven above, or theſe parts that be loweſt, Gods power and wiſedome ſhineth every where in the creatures, which he hath made in one place or another. The Reader may chooſe whether of theſe he pleaſeth: For the allegory, Gregory following the Vulger Lat. Obſtet ricante manu ejus eductus eſt coluber fortuoſus, He playing the Mid-Wife, as it were, with his hand, the crooked Serpent was brought, or drawn out. Saith, That as before in ſpeaking of the proud one peirced through, he meaneth the Devil, and by the waters, peoples; who were gathered together and brought into one by the preaching of the Goſpel: and thus put into a condition of reſt and peace, who could have none before, whilſt they were under the Prince of the Aire; and then when they came to this pacifick eſtate, the envious Serpent was peirced and ſlain, as it were, his power now ceaſing, for which he is ſaid by the death of Chriſt, to have been deſtroyed: So now the Heavens were garniſhed; that is, The Church with Preachers, as light ſhining as the Stars of Heaven in all parts; and the Devil, that old crooked Serpent, lurking before in the hearts of unbeleivers, is drawn out or caſt out, as an abortive birth, by the hand of a mid-wife: By the power of Chriſt Goſpel working faith, to which purpoſe he ſaith, When the ſtrong man armed keepeth the houſe, all is quiet; but a ſtronger then he cometh, he caſteth him out and divideth the ſpoiles. For the reading of the Hebrew, may well beare it חוללה יו Coletah jado, His hand hath tormented, for the word ſignifieth Cruciari to torment, or Parturire, to bring forth with pain; ſo that Gods making of the Serpent, is not here meant, but his making him with ſorrow to come forth, and let them go free, whom he formerly poſſeſſed: And this is his putting of the childes hand upon the hole of the Aſpe, to bring him forth that he may harbour no more in any heart appointed to life. A notable place ſetting forth the glory of the Church of Chriſt, after that he had overcome and deſtroyed the Devil by his death; ſhe is garniſhed in her miniſters, as the Heavens with Stars, ſhining by preaching holineſs and miracles in all parts; and the people of whom the Church conſiſteth, being before as holes for the crooked Serpent the devil to winde into; are ſet free from this foule feind to ſerve God in holineſs and righteouſneſs, that we may adorn our chriſtian Profeſſion, by ſo doing all our daies; they that do not, having no part in this happineſs.

curious

Gregory. Eph. 2. Heb. 2. 15. Iſa. 11. Note.

Lo theſe are parts of his wayes, but how little a portion is heard of him, but the thunder of his power who can underſtand? Job having hitherto ſpoken moſt magnifically of God, as man is able, to ſupply the defects in Bildads ſpeech, now concludeth with this Epiphonema to his greater praiſe, that all theſe things are but particles, or ſmall parcels of his powerful works; there are more works yet by him done, and to be done, ſhewing his power and glory; that if theſe be compared to them, they are but as a drop of water, or a few drops to a great ſhower of rain, for the word שמץ the leaſt part that is; being therefore rendred by the Vulg. Parvam ſtillam, a little drop: But what meaneth the next words? The thunder of his might who can underſtand? Gregory, who referreth that which Job ſpake hitherto, to the things done by Chriſt, coming and ſuffering in the fleſh; ſaith, That it is as if he had ſaid, Theſe be great matters, which have been heard by us to be done, but the thunder which is the voice, that he being Almighty God ſhall utter at his ſecond coming, who can tel, how terrifical it will be? For the thunder is called the voice of God, Pſ. 29. And becauſe it is of all things, whereby God uttereth himſelf, the moſt terrifying and ſuddenly ſtriking, he compareth the terrour of his ſecond coming hereunto, or taking a compariſon from hence, which we know how terrible it is, and ſaying, The Thunder of his mighty, coming then who can underſtand, or know what it will be, he meaneth, that meaneth, that no heart can conceive, how terrible that will be, it will be terrifying; paſſing all the underſtanding of man. For if his voice when he came in humility ſtrook thoſe through fear to the ground, who came to apprehend him, what will that voice of his when he cometh in Majeſty do, that we may all tremble now in thinking upon our ſins, that we may then have comfort from him to ſupport us in the midſt of theſe Terrours, as his Apoſtles, to whom he ſayth, Then lift ye up your Heads with joy, for the time of your Redemption draweth nigh.

Ver. 14. Gregor.

Note.

CHAP. XXVII.

Verſ. 2. Verſ. 3. Verſ. 4. Gregory.

AS God liveth, who hath taken away my judgment, and the Almighty who hath vexed my Soule. All the while that my breath is in me, and the ſpirit of God in my noſtrills; My Lips ſhall not ſpeak wickedneſſe, nor my tongue deceit. Here ſaith Gregory, it is plain, that Jobs ſpeeches are to be underſtood as parabolicall; that is, as ſpoken by way of ſimilitude, and therefore admit of ſuch a kind of interpretation, and not only according to the Letter, becauſe it is ſayd, v. 1. Job continued his Parable. Wherefore it is to be held, that as he ſpake thus of himſelf, ſo he ſpake of the Church of God

Note.

And it is to be noted, that whereas Atheiſts and wicked men, when they ſuffer, look not up to God; but account it to come thus to them by fortune, yea when they ſee others ſuffer, that may ſeem to be better, and the worſe to proſper; they think either that there is no God, or that God regardeth not humane affairs, whereby they are hardned to go on in their ſins; but the Faithfull contrariwiſe look up to God in all theſe things, and if for ſin they ſuffer, or not having done ſo wickedly; they conſider that in the one caſe God hath done juſtly by them, to be ſtirred up to repentance: And in the other, that although the judgments, whereby they ſuffer, ſo that they are puniſhed, as if they had traded in ſinn; and lived without the fear of God, yet that the Devill, by whom, or by whoſe inſtigation they ſuffer ſuch things, hath no power of himſelf to deal thus by them, but being by God permitted: And therefore he ſayth not the Devil, but the living God took away his judgment and vexed him; theſe laſt words being added to explain the former, as if he had ſayd, although he was judged not as a juſt, but a moſt wicked man, ſuffering extreamly, yet even theſe his ſufferings were moderated by Gods providence, and came not without his will upon him, wherefore he reſolved, that all his ſufferings and the extreamity of them, notwithſtanding he would not whilſt he lived ſpeake as the wicked, that God takes no care of things hapning here below, nor as they his Enemies would have him, that theſe judgments came juſtly upon him for his wicked practiſes: And this is the Reſolution of the Church, and of every faithfull member thereof, againſt the indeavours of Hereticks, to hold them conſtantly to the truth in all things, and not to yeild to any one of their errours, wherewith they ſeek with all their power to infect them, for thus when Errours ſpring up, they that are approved are known, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, and the unſound are diſcovered. And touching this laſt he ſpeaketh more particularly, V. 5.

Verſ. 5.

God forbid that I ſhould juſtify you, till I dy I will not remove mine integrity: For to conſent to a ly is to juſtify it, and them that ſpeak it, and to juſtify ſuch is to juſtify the wicked which is an abomination, as wel as to ſpeak or do wickedly according to that Woe to them that juſtify the Wicked, and condemn the Righteous. And the ground wherupon he went in thus ſpeaking, was, that he had a clear conſcience, not making a ſhew through Hypocriſy, but being upright-hearted, and ſo reſolved by Gods Grace to continue to the end of his life, whatſoever he ſuffered or ſhould ſuffer, for which he addeth, v. 6.

Iſa. 23.

and

My Righteouſneſs I hold faſt and will not let it go, my heart ſhall not reproach me as long as I live. For his Heart reproacheth or reproveth him that doth evill, whatſoever good ſhew he maketh before men, only, If our Hearts condemn us not, as John ſayth, we have confidence towards God, and whatſoever we aske he will give unto us: And then our Heart condemneth us not, when in integrity of Heart we do good, and not doing good outwardly have deceit in our hearts inwardly; which ſtill are unclean, and wicked through the evill thoughts that be therein. Therefore Jeremiah ſaith, Let us throughly ſearch our hearts, and return, and ſeek the Lord: Let us lift up our Hearts and hands: To ſearch our Hearts is to ſearch the internall things of the Heart, to cleanſe out all evill from thence, and to lift up our hands and Hearts is to do out of a pure heart only that which is good, he lifteth up his Heart and not his Hands that prayeth, but liveth in ſin, and he lifteth up both Heart and Hands that prayeth, and liveth well, thinking good Thoughts, and doing good Actions of Righteouſneſſe, and mercy.

Verſ. 6.

1 Joh. 3.

Lament. 3.

Let mine Enemy be as the wicked, and he that riſeth up againſt me as the unrighteous. Here Gregory diſtinguiſheth betwixt the Wicked and the unrighteous, ſaying, every wicked man is unrighteous, but not every unrighteous man wicked. For Wickedneſs or impiety lyeth in this, that a man is an Enemy to the true faith, and to the Faithfull, but unrighteouſneſs or iniquity in this, that he who holdeth the true faith, is yet unequall and unjuſt in his doings, as the word ſignifieth; of which ſort of men it is ſayd, that they confeſſe Chriſt with their mouths, but in their Deeds they deny him. And in ſaying, Mine Enemies are as the Wicked, for ſo the vulg. rendreth it, and not let them be; the word As is not a note of ſimilitude, but as if he had ſayd, they are both very wicked and unjuſt, as Iohn ſaith of Chriſt, We ſaw his Glory as the Glory of the only begotten ſon of God: where (As) is no note of ſimilitude, but hereby the ſame is ſet forth. For the word Let them be, it is ſo Hebr. And therefore it is not to be varied, he prayeth God that he would declare them to be ſuch, and that they might not be ſpared any longer, thus unjuſtly to inſult over him, wherein God heard him, as is ſhewed, Chap. 38.

Verſ. 7.
Gregor.

Tit. 1.

Ioh. 1.

For what is the Hope of a Hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his ſoul. That is, if an Hypocrite by diſſembling getteth much, when God cometh to require his Soul away, what good hath he of this? for ſo the word תאר ſignifieth to ask or to require, and it is notably exampled in that belly-God, who got ſo much, that now he meditated upon nothing but eating and drinking and making merry.

Verſ. 8.

Luk. 12.

Will God heare his cry when trouble cometh upon him? Will he delight himſelf in the Almighty, will he alwaies call upon God? He proſecuteth the argument in hand, the hope of the Hypocrite at that day; when his Soule ſhall be taken away, ſhall be nothing; for although he crieth to God, he will not heare him: And the reaſon is plain, he that turneth away his eares from hearing the Law, he ſhall cry to the Lord, that gave the Law, and he will not heare him: As is threatned alſo, Prov. 1. and fulfilled Math. 25. Where the fooliſh virgins come and cry, Lord open to us, but are bidden, Depart yee workers of iniquity, I know yee not. Then follow two properties of the Hypocrite.

Ver. 9.
Verſ. 10.

1. He delighteth not in the Almighty.

2. He calleth not alwaies upon God. For the firſt, The hypocrite howſoever he maketh a ſhew of great piety towards God, yet it is not for any true delight that he taketh in him, but his delight is in Worldly things; God and his word, being made but a ſtale to gain theſe; or that he may the more unſuſpectedly take his ſenſuall pleaſure: For the minde of man cannot be without its delight; if it delighteth in earthly things, the delight

Note.

Phil. 3. lights in Heavenly languiſheth, as contrariwiſe if it delighteth in heavenly, thoſe are look'd at, but as droſs and dung, there cannot be an equal delight
1 Ioh. 2. 15. in both: For which Iohn ſaith, Love not the World, nor the things of the World; for he that loveth the World, hath not the love of the Father in him. For the ſecond, The hypocrite, although he praieth in time of danger or trouble, yea before men alſo, that he may have their praiſe, yet he prayeth not alwaies, as we are bidden to do, and as every faithful perſon doth:
1 Theſ. 5. 17. According to that of the Apoſtle, Pray continually, and in all things give thanks. That is, Both in diſtreſs, in the publick place of Gods worſhip; in thy Cloſet, in thy bed, and walking abroad: As Iſack is ſaid to have gone out into the feilds, to meditate and to pray: And as it is ſaid to Timothy,
1 Tim. 2. 8. Let men lift up pure hands in every place without wrath or doubting.

Verſ. 11. I will teach you by the hand of God, that which is with the Almighty will I not conceal. Here Iob repreſenting the Church; ſaying, I will hide nothing from you, but teach you all; for ſo the true Church of God doth, Gregor. as we may ſee in Paul; ſaying, I have hidden nothing from you, but have
Act. 20. declared unto you the whol counſel of God. And therefore this muſt needs according to the judgment of Gregory, convince the preſent Church of Rome, to be no true Church; becauſe they conceal the commandement againſt Images, expounding it out of their Catechiſmes, and what elſe they luſt out of the word of God, by forbidding the people to read it, and take only ſo much of it, as their Prieſt think good to teach them; whereas he ſaith, I will teach you by the hand of God. This is ſpoken to ſhew, That what the Church of God teacheth, is done by his guidance and direction, becauſe ſhe is herein led by the ſpirit: As our Lord ſaid, He ſhall lead
1 Theſ. 2. 13. you into all truth. And therefore the word preached, and written by the Apoſtles, is called, The word, Not of man but of God.

Verſ. 12. All yee your ſelves have ſeen it, why then are yee altogether vain? He ſaith, That he will teach them, and yet he granteth that they knew it, although they improved not their knowledge, but ſpake vainly, and vilely notwithſtandiug; whereby he attributeth nothing to them yet, but aggravateth their ſin, as indeed every mans ſin is aggravated by this, that
Luk. 12. knowing the wiſdome of God he doth it not, but contrary things.

Verſ. 13. This is the portion of a wicked man with God, and the heritage of oppreſſors, &c. Iob having made a preparative to his parobolical ſpeech, now uttereth it, whereby if nothing elſe had been meant, but the judgments of God to come upon hypocrites and wicked oppreſſors; how had it been parobolical? By oppreſſors therefore, or the violent, as it is rendred in Gregor. Vulg. Hereticks, ſaith Gregory, are to be uudeſtood, Who are called violent, becauſe the violent turn the Scriptures, to maintain their errours.

Verſ. 14. If his children be multiplyed, it is for the ſword: and his offspring, &c. in Vulg. Nephewes ſhall not be ſatisfied with bread. Who be his children, but ſuch as are drawn by him into errour? For they are thus as it were, begotten by him, and they are ſaid not to be ſatisfied with bread, whereby to live; becauſe the true word of God is bread, wherewith they are not fed, but with errour, which is as poyſon to the Soule; and ſo be their childrens children, that is, Such as are afterwards drawn likewiſe by their followers: But they fall by the ſword; that is, The ſharp ſentence of the Deut. 32. juſt Judge at the laſt day, whereby they ſhall be cut off, as by a ſword, for which it is ſaid, The ſword of God ſhall be drunken with the blood of the ſlain.

Verſ. 15. Thoſe that remain of him ſhall be buried in death, and his widows ſhall not weep. That is, He alſo, that is the author of hereſie, ſhall be cut off, Gods judgment coming upon him, and then if there be any ſtil of his ſect remaining, they dying, ſhall be buried in perpetual oblivion, there being none left now to uphold ſuch damnable errours; and for the weaker ſort, which in their life time followed them, they ſhall not be ſorry for their cutting off; for by this means they are reduced to the unity of the true faith, they being dead and gone that held them from it, to whom they were married or wedded, as it were, as long as they lived, for which they are ſet forth by the name of their Widdows, or elſe they weep not, becauſe through a falſe hope they beleeve, that it goeth well with them, and ſo they perſiſt ſtill in errour.

which

Though he heapeth up Silver as the duſt, and prepareth Rayments as the clay. Yet the juſt ſhall put it on, and the innocent ſhall divide the ſilver. By ſilver here underſtand the words and ſayings of God; many of which Hereticks gather together, to defend their errours, but they are of no more force for their ends then the duſt, which the winde eaſily bloweth away: And by Garments Armour, wherewith to go forth to fight, but they are herewith no better clad, then if daubed over with clay: For of falſe Prophets ſuch as Hereticks are, abuſing the words of God, we read, as of daubing with clay, or untempered morter, which ſhall not hold. They then, that is, Hereticks prepare them; but the juſt, that is, They that ſtand for the true faith put them on, not as they, as brittle clay ready to be waſhed off again with rain, is put on upon a Wall, but as ſolid and ſubſtantiall Armour indeed, which is done, when any one of them taketh the ſame word, brought by Hereticks, and hereby confuteth and confoundeth them: For this is David like to kill Goliah or to cut off his Head with his own ſword; And the ſame being alſo called the innocent divide theſe ſpoils of ſilver taken from them, when they rightly expound to the People the words brought by them for their confirmation and edification in the true faith, as it is ſayd of Timothy, that he ſhould ſhew himſelf a work-man that needeth not to be aſhamed, dividing the word of Truth aright, and of the word ſet forth by the name of ſpoile, ſee Pſal. 119. Where David ſayth; that rejoyced in the word as in great ſpoiles, as the Hebrews robbed the Egypts, and with ſpoiles of ſilver and Gold taken from them, Built and inriched the Sanctuary.

Verſ. 16.
Verſ. 17.
Ezek. 14.

He buildeth his houſe as a moth, and as a booth which the Keeper maketh: Hereby is ſhewed that Oppreſſors may get them great Eſtates, but not continuing any more then a Garment eaten with Moths, or the Houſe which the moath makes it in a Garment that is ſoon fading, or a ſleight booth or bower made of boughs for ſhadow by the Keepers of vineyards, that is ſoon pulled down again: Thus alſo Hereticks and they that are led by them hope to have an enduring houſe in Heaven, but this their hope being founded upon corruption, when death cometh, fadeth, in ſtead of coming to an houſe there, they being caſt into the bottomleſs pit.

Verſ. 18.

The rich man ſhall lye down, and ſhall not be gathered, he openeth his eyes and he is not. From the Goods of wicked Oppreſſours he here paſſeth to their perſons; ſuch an one ſhall dy, but not be gathered; that is, to the ſouls of the Faithfull, as contrariwiſe it is ſayd of Abraham, Iſaack, and Iacob: and ſuch like, that they were gathered to their Fathers, and at the time of the Reſurrection after the long ſleep of death, he awaking again ſhall find that he is none of the Congregation of the Saints, but to his everlaſting confuſion ſeperated from them, as the Goats from the ſheep, to hear that dreadfull judgment denounced againſt him and ſuch as he was, Go ye curſed into hell fire, &c. And herein alſo Hereticks ſhall be like unto them, and the rich, as Gregory noteth, who have been deceived by them, and miniſtred unto them liberally of their Goods, and by their countenance and power ſupported them, thinking that in ſo doing and withdrawing themſelves, and means from Chriſts own Miniſters, they acquitted themſelves moſt worthily. A thing worth the conſidering by ſuch as are carryed away by the Gatherers of new Churches in theſe our times; ſo full of Schiſme and Faction.

Verſ. 19.
Hebr. 12. 23.
Matth. 25.
Gregor-

Terrours

Verſ. 20. Terrours take hold on him as waters, and tempeſt ſtealeth him away in the night. The vulg. Inopia, for terrours, as בלהות ſignifieth, after the taking away of the wicked by death before ſpoken of, now it is ſhewed, in what miſery he ſhall be after death; Viz. He ſhall be overwhelmed with miſeries in exceeding great abundance, as he that is caſt into a deep pit ful of water: But the ſimilitude is not taken from waters, becauſe there ſhall be no ſuch plenty of waters there: For Dives begged for one drop to cool him, when he was there and could not obtain it; as he had denyed the leaſt releife to Lazarus, the very crumbs that fel from his Table, but becauſe there ſhall be as great abundance of fire, into which he ſhall be caſt to torment him there, as there be of waters in a great and deep pit: For which it is ſaid of Tophet, that the breath of the Lord as a River of brimſtone kindleth it; Tempeſts ſteal him away in the night. Hereby tempeſt, that tempeſt is to be underſtood, of which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh; ſaying, A devouring fire ſhall go before him, and a mighty tempeſt round about him. And hereby he is ſaid to be ſtolen away in the night, becauſe as men in the night ſleep ſecurely, and then the Theef cometh and ſtealeth away their Goods, ſo their Soules are taken away unexpectedly to theſe torments, when they feare them leaſt: As is ſhewed in the parable of the rich Glutton, and by the like compariſon from a Theef breaking through and ſtealing in the night; made both by Chriſt and his Apoſtle Peter: So that Job, who wrote the firſt of all others, was inlightned to teach the ſame, touching the Lords proceedings againſt the wicked, in death and the day of judgment, that is written in the New Teſtament.

Iſa. 30.

Pſ. 50.

Luk. 12.

Math. 24.

2 Pet. 3.

Verſ. 21. The eaſt winde carrieth him away and he departeth, and as a ſtorm hurleth him out of his place. Having in the former verſe ſaid, that he ſhould be ſtolen away by a tempeſt, now in amplifying this he addeth, An eaſt winde, Vulg. A burning winde. As Exod. 10. 13. An eaſt winde is ſaid to have brought the Locuſts upon Egypt, to conſume the good things thereof, as if it had been ſeinged by a fire; and the Eaſt winde is commonly noted to have a blaſting quallity in Corn, as in thoſe ſeven eares of corn, which Pharaoh ſaw in his dream, blaſted with the eaſt winde; the meaning is then, That the tempeſt before ſpoken of, ſtealing away in the night, ſhall be a moſt peircing tempeſt, as the eaſt winde, there being nothing by meanes hereof now left him; that is, Of ſubſtance, wherewith he before abounded, but as all chaffe now, he ſhall go into the fire, when as the good corn ſhall be carried into the barn; and as a ſtrong tempeſt hurleth a Tree out of his place, rending it up by the roots, ſo that it groweth no more, but ſtarveth and becometh fewel for the fire, ſo ſhall the wicked be carried from worldly felicity to helliſh miſery, therein to remain for ever.

Gen. 41. 6.

Ver. 22. Verſ. 23. Gregory. For God ſhall caſt upon him, and ſhall not ſpare, he would fain eſcape out of his hand. Men ſhall clap their hands at him, and hiſs him out of his place. When God ſcourgeth here, ſaith Gregory, He doth it to ſpare the perſon ſcourged, if by his judgments he be reformed; but when he ſtriketh by death, and by his finall judgment caſting into Hel, then he caſteth upon the wicked and ſpareth him not, but laieth on load upon him importable for ever, giving him no eaſe: Of this Jeremiah ſaith, I have ſtricken thee with the ſtroak of an enemy, with a cruell caſtigation, why crieſt thou, thy greif is incurable? For the next words, the Vulg. hath it, He that fleeth ſhall flee out of his hand. That is, He that at Gods ſtriking in this life feareth, and ſo fleeth ſin, ſhall not be thus proceeded againſt, but eſcape the judgment to come; but others that are not reformed, to them the judgments ſmiting them here, ſhall be but the beginning of theſe endleſs torments hereafter: For the next words the Vulg. hath, Stringet ſuper eum manus ſuas, He ſhall binde up his hands upon him. Which is the ſame in effect with that of the Apoſtle, Lift up your hands that hange down. And intimateth the

Ier. 30.

Note.

Heb. 12. 12.

ſinners

ſinners, applying himſelf after correction to do better, his hands that before were feeble towards the doing of good, being now ſtrengthened to do good, for this is as it were, a binding of them up from acts of injuſtice, that they may be uſed to acts of juſtice and mercy: Thus ſome profit by the judgments of God, and ſo are ſpared, although ſmitten here: And not only ſo, but ſeeing Gods judgments upon others, this makes them to flee ſin, and thus to binde up their hands, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, That the juſt ſhall rejoyce, when he ſhall ſee the revenge of the wicked, he ſhall waſh his hands in their blood; that is, He ſhall take occaſion by ſeeing to what a terrible end they come, to waſh his hands from guiltineſs by ſinning likewiſe: And ſhall hiſs at him beholding his place, that is, Whereas, before he admired the wicked man for his proſperity, not beleiving that which was taught and threatned againſt him, now ſeeing his fall, he ſhall by hiſſing ſhew, in what deriſion and deteſtation he hath his waies; publiſhing now every where the praiſes of God, who is ſo juſt in executing judgments according to his word, to which he therefore now giveth more heed; thus Gregory according to that reading: and indeed theſe words, Fleeing he ſhall flee, are according to the Hebrew, but the next are not, He ſhall binde, but clap his hands at him, and hiſs him from his place. Of which yet the ſenſe may be the ſame, the man that fleeing ſin upon the ſight of the irrevocable ſentence of judgment upon the wicked, eſcapeth out of this danger; now having his eyes opened to ſee into his vanity, that delighted himſelf ſo much in having abundance, for indignation he clapeth his hands and hiſſeth at him, and ſuch like; as being men not ſo excellent before in his eſteem, as now vile and baſe; and this is the improvement of Gods judgments, which all that are appointed to life make: And this is the ſhameful end of reprobates, who are of ſo wicked a condition, as was before ſaid; that all they that take ſuch courſes, may in time feare and be aſhamed, and all that heare of their judgments, may not be taken with their preſent proſperity, to admire and applaud them, but looking at their end, be admoniſhed to flee doing likewiſe, and if they have; now to repent and turn from ſuch waies.

Pſal. 58.

Note.

CHAP. XXVIII.

SVrely there is a veine for Silver, and a place for Gold, where they finde it. Iron is taken out of the earth, and braſſe is moulten out of the ſtone. He ſetteth an end to darkneſſe and ſearcheth, out all perfection. That is, As ſilver and gold appeare not at the firſt, but the veines, where they lye being opened, yet they come not to their bright ſhining, but by the heat of a fervent fire: So men are put into the fire of adverſity, that being tryed, they might ſhine in grace here, and in glory hereafter; but yet ſuch are not, but in the true Church, as ſilver and gold lye not, but in their proper veines: And this moſt probably he ſpeaketh againſt theſe his enemy-like friends, who judged him wicked, becauſe he ſuffered in the fire of adverſity and miſery; for he had before ſaid, That he ſhould come out of his tryal as gold; although he lay long in obſcurity, to this effect Gregory: But Chryſoſtome ſaith, That in theſe words Job ſheweth that the reaſon of Gods dealings towards his faithful Servants, in laying great ſufferings upon them, is occult and hidden from men, til he is pleaſed to lay it open, as is ſilver and gold lying hid in the earth til that by digging men finde them out: And ſo men come to finde out theſe and other mettals lying hid in the ground; but the cauſe why the faithful ſuffer ſo much in this World, is ſo hidden, that men cannot ſee into this, til that God ſheweth it; ſo that hereby he proveth it to be temerity and raſh-

Verſ. 1.
Verſ. 2.
Verſ. 3.

Iob 23. 10. Gregor. Chryſoſt.

neſs in them to judge of him, that ſome foule ſinnes wherein he lived, were the cauſe, why he was under ſo great judgments: And herein he ſeemeth to have reference to that, which he had ſaid of himſelf, Chap. 27. 5. 6. That he would not ceaſe to juſtifie himſelf in reſpect of his integrity, although he ſuffered even unto the death; becauſe the reaſon of his ſo great ſufferings was unknown and could not be found out by men, although they could by their skil pry into things lying hid in the bowels of the earth; this being a far more myſtical and inſcrutable thing then theſe: And what hath been ſaid of ſilver and gold is true, touching other mettals alſo, Iron and Braſs, for all lye hidden in the ground, til that being found out they are by the fire and art of man made uſeful for him; and then their excellency and uſefulneſs for ſeveral purpoſes appeareth, the baſeſt of them being for ſome things more uſefull, then the moſt precious, as Iron to make weapons to fight withal in time of War, and inſtruments to cut and til the earth at all times, to make it the more fruitful; where-

Verſ. 3. as he further ſaith, He ſetteth an end to darkneſſe, and ſearcheth out all perfection. The meaning is, that as theſe mettals lying in darkneſs a long time, yet are at length by Gods providence brought to light, who giveth to men the underſtanding to finde them out, and to try them, and to perfect them by bringing them into ſuch formes, as that they may be moſt uſeful for men: So ſhall his faithful Servants in whom there is abundance of grace and virtue, although they ſeem not to be ſuch, when they lye in the darkneſs of miſery in this World; yet they ſhall be brought forth out of all their troubles, and made to appeare precious, and of great uſe in his Church, being the riches and glory thereof, as gold and ſilver, through their faith and underſtanding in the word, and the ſtrength and defence thereof by their teaching, ſounding out the truth aloude in all places, as Bels made of braſs and ſteel, and peircing the enemies as with weapons of Iron, Swords, Spares, and Darts, making them to fall down, and to become worſhippers of God and his Son Chriſt: And when this done, all perfection is found out; that is, The waies of God are more perfectly known, and men are not ſuffered any longer to err ſo fouly in their judgments touching the Godly, as before whilſt they lay in miſery they did, but they ſhal ſee as in the light, and acknowledge, that God dealt not ſo by them out of wrath for their ſinnes, but for their tryal and greater

Note. good: And therefore whoſoever hath judged otherwiſe of any unblamable liver for his ſufferings, let him now confeſs his errour and repent, and do no more ſo, but wait to ſee the end both of them, which ſhall be peace; and of the wicked, who for a time are in proſperity, but their end ſhall be miſery and horrible deſtruction, as in the Chapter before going, The ſtones of darkneſſe and the ſhaddow of death. This is added, becauſe he had ſpoken before of braſs moulten out of the ſtone, which lay in the greateſt darkneſs, til it was found out; as a further amplification of that before going, touching the occult and hidden proceedings of the Lord in the cuſes before ſpoken of.

Verſ. 4. Ferus. The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant, even the waters forgotten of the foot; they are dryed up, they are gone away from men. Ferus, who expoundeth all that went before as comparative, wherein Job compareth wiſedome, and the finding out thereof, with the finding out of other things; to ſpeak whereof he cometh, Ver. 12. and ſaith, That by diverſe compariſons he ſheweth, how hard it is to finde out true wiſedome, which is to ſalvation; for men by ſearching finde out Silver and Gold lying deep in the earth, ſo likewiſe Iron and Braſs, for which they peirce into moſt dark and hidden places of the earth, to ſuch earth, which is meant by the words before going: Here he cometh to another compariſon, to ſet forth the diſcovering to men other things lying hid from them in the earth; as namely, ſprings of water, coming from high mountaines not troden upon with the foot of man, yet theſe breaking forth from the bowels of the earth, make Rivers and great floods, of which men have the uſe and benefit; and theſe waters are ſaid to have broken out from the inhabitant, that is, from Mountaines and Rocks, being placed here and there, as inhabitants conſtantly dwelling in their places; and to be forgotten of the foot; that is, lying hid in thoſe parts of the earth, that men travel not nor tread upon, or to dig out which, as they do mettals, they labour not, but they flow forth of their own accord, yet theſe are dryed up by the labour of man, as Junius hath it, and go away; that is, Sometimes are drawn out by men, who make deep wels into the ground to come by them, and ſo draw them out as faſt as they ſpring out of the earth. Junius.

with

As for the earth out of it cometh out bread; and under it is turned up as it were fire. Here is another thing, that cometh out of the earth, which is moſt neceſſary for the ſuſtentation of man, and that is Corn, which he by tilling the ground, and husbanding it attaineth to, for the making of bread: For the fire under it, ſome will have it to be brimſtone, and ſome the flint, out of which fire is ſmitten: But Cajetan beſt, the precious ſtone found in Perſia, called therefore Pyrites perſicus, of which Pliny writeth, that being held hard in a mans hand, it burneth: So likewiſe Iſidorus; for from grain growing out of the earth for mans uſe, he proceedeth to another marvellous thing lying hid therefore, but by mans ingenuity found out; Viz. Precious ſtones, for of theſe he ſpeaketh expreſly in the next words; The place of it are Saphir ſtones, of which they write, that being ſmitten with the Sun beames they fire, and it is admirable that is written of Agates, that are precious ſtones in the bottome of ſome Rivers, which being taken out, burn by the caſting on of water, and by oyle are again extinguiſhed, and Carbuncles give light like fire in the dark night. Verſ. 5. Cajetan. Plin. l. 36. Chap. 19. Iſidor. l. 19. 4. Verſ. 6.

There is a path which no fowle knoweth, and the Vultueres eye hath not ſeen. Having ſpoken, Verſ. 6. of the duſt of the earth being gold, now he deſcribeth the parts, where this gold lieth; they are ſo barren, as they bring forth nothing elſe but gold, nothing for Fowles to feed upon, no not diſcernable by the eye of the Vulture, which excelleth in ſeeing a far of, but turneth not his eye thitherwards, as wherein nothing is to be found, for the ſuſtentation even of fowles, and ſo they have no way, as it were in ſuch places: Of this ſort it is ſaid, there be ſome very barren mountainous places in Spaine, thus Albertus, Thomas Aquinas, Dioniſius: But men make their waies even here to dig and finde out gold, being in this more perſpicatious, then the very vultures. Ver. 7. Albert. Tho: Aqui. Dioniſ.

The Lions whelps have not troden it. For Lions whelps, Hebr. The ſons of pride, or of ſtrength, and ſo the Septuag. rendreth it, but what are theſe amongſt the Beaſts, to which he now cometh, but Lions? He goeth on further to ſhew, how occult treaſures in the earth are from other living creatures, but only men; But as for man, He putteth forth his hand to the rocks, he overturneth them by the roots. Which is, when he diggeth them down to finde out this treaſure. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9.

He cutteth out Rivers amongſt the rocks, and his eye ſeeth every precious thing. That is, by his labour and wiſedome to finde out treaſures in the bowels of the Mountaines, he cutteth them through, ſo that he draweth Rivers through them by opening channels, wherein they may run and waſh the inner parts of the earth, ſo as that by this meanes they may ſee if there be any gold lying hid there. Verſ. 10.

He bindeth the floods from overflowing, &c. That is, As he maketh the waters to run through mountaines, ſo he dricth, by thus doing, the channels wherein they uſed to run, that he might ſee if any treaſure lay at the bottome hereof: But to what tend all theſe compariſons, but to ſhew, that wiſedome which is more precious then gold, or precious ſtones, or Verſ. 11.

other mettalls is ſo hidden that without great ſtudy and labour it is much leſſe to be fouud out and attained unto, as is expreſſed, v. 12.

Verſ. 12. Verſ. 13. But where is wiſdome to be found, and where is the place of underſtanding? Man knoweth not the price thereof, neither is it found in the Land of the living. And becauſe it is not to be found by humane Wit and Labour as other mettalls and precious things hid in the Earth are, man not priſing it according to the worth, leaveth the ſearching for this, and is wholly intent to the other, and ſo he is a rare one living upon Earth, that findeth it out; for which it is ſayd; Neither is it found in the Land of the Living. For he that will get Wiſdome muſt ſeek for her more then for Gold, and therefore moſt men ſeeking mucke for their Land, and droſſe more then her, are never likely to obtain her, and thus doth every one that toyleth for worldly gain, but takes little or no pains for Wiſdome.

Prov. 8. 10. 11. Note.

Gregor. Gregory by Wiſedome here, as Proverb. 9. underſtandeth Chriſt the wiſedome of God. And about this Wiſedome Iob moveth two Queſtions.

1. Where is Wiſedome to be found?

2. What may a man give for it? and anſwereth them both only negatively: To the firſt, V. 14.

The Depth ſaith it is not me. And to the ſecond, V. 15. It is not to be gotten for Gold, or ſilver. Whereby it appeareth, that Chriſt through whom we may be worthy of life and Salvation, is not to be bought by any thing that we can do, but is freely given to thoſe that ſhall be ſaved, and life by him, whereby the abſurdity of thoſe men appeareth, that aſcribe unto man the doing of ſome works for which he is worthy, and ſo obtaineth Chriſt and Salvation; for ſalvation implyeth one in a miſerable and ſinfull caſe before, and therefore one that can do nothing meritorious of ſalvation; for what is ſalvation, but a being ſaved out of miſery and ſin, from which how can the ſinner do any thing to redeem himſelf? And that theſe paſſages are thus myſtically to be underſtood, he proveth, becauſe it is ſayd, The Gold and Chriſtall cannot equall it. For what reaſon elſe can be given, why Gold and Glaſſe ſhould be joyned together as moſt precious, when the one is far inferiour to the other, yea of no value in compariſon of it: Touching Ratification and Salvation not coming of mans merit, but of Gods Grace, he ſaith excellently, Grace found not any merit in man for which it ſhould come, but makes it after it comes: And God coming to a minde unworthy makes it worthy by coming thereunto, and makes merit there which he might renumerate, who found only that which he might puniſh.

Verſ. 17.

Hominis meritum non et veniat gratia invenit ſed poſtque venerit facit.

For theſe words, Not found in the Land of the living upon Earth, he following the Vulgar, hath it, In ſuch as live ſweetly upon the Earth. That is, in pleaſures which take up their Hearts; For in ſuch Wiſedome is not found, becauſe he that increaſeth knowledge, increaſeth greif, as Eccleſiaſtes ſayth, therefore he that liveth in pleaſure, and greiveth not for his ſinnes is a Fool, and wants this Wiſedome: Wherefore of Mourners it is ſaid, They ſhall be comforted. But of Laughers, that they ſhall wail and weep: For the Depth ſaying, It is not in me, Hereby underſtand wicked diſſemblers, that dig deep to hide their evil Counſells, for although they think themſelves wiſe, yet their wiſdome ſhal prove Fooliſhneſs, The ſea ſaith, it is not in me, What doth the Sea ſet forth, but ſuch as are ful of worldly bitter cares and troubles, being never quiet, but raging and tempeſtious. In ſuch true wiſdome is not found, For the VViſedome which is from above is pure and peaceable, but where ſtrife and contention is, this is carnall, ſenſuall, and Deviliſh. And this was figured out in the Egyptians and the Hebrews, they were full of trouble through the ſwarms of flies, theſe had the Sabboth, that is, Reſt and quiet.

Eccl. 1. Matth. 5.

Iam. 3.

Verſ. 15. It cannot be gotten for gold, neither ſhall ſilver be weighed for the price thereof. Having ſhewed where Wiſedome is not, now he cometh to ſhew for what what it cannot be gotten, and by Gold here underſtand the Holy Angells, who cannot be the price of our Redemption, but Chriſt, the Son of God only, for they are pure like fine Gold, without all impurity of ſin, as the beſt of men in this world are not yet, being but Creatures, and finite, they cannot do this great work which is proper to the Creatour only. By ſilver underſtand alſo inſpired men, who wrote the Word and unerringly ſet it forth, which is likened to ſilver tryed ſeven times in the fire, as the Prophets and Apoſtles. Yet neither they nor Angells can be our Wiſedome and Righteouſneſs; and it is denyed to be in them to make us thus wiſe, leaſt for their glorious miniſtring unto us in things pertaining to ſalvation, we ſhould look at them as Authors hereof unto us, which Chriſt only is: A thing to be noted againſt the preſent Papiſts that rely ſo much, and attribute ſo much to the Saints departed, as having merited for them by their works of ſupererogation, for this is an opinion ſtarted up amongſt them ſince the time of this Gregory, being by him unknown, and the merits of Chriſt only predicated. Pſal. 12. Note.

It cannot be valued with the Gold of Ophir, with the precious Onix, and the Saphir, The vulg. For gold of Ophir, hath the Colour of India, and כתם ſignifieth both Gold, and ſometime, Nota aut macula, and ſo Gregory taking it for Coulours made by painting upon the black bodies of the Indians, ſaith, that hereby painted words of Eloquence, whereby the wiſe men of this world paint over their black Errours and Superſtions, and ſo ſeek to commend them, is ſet forth; this is nothing to the plain truth of Chriſt, which his Miniſters ſet not forth in any ſuch manner, but in the plain evidence of the ſpirit: Here then Iob paſſeth from the price of our Redemption, and ſhewing what that is not, to compariſons betwixt other things moſt precious, and it ſhewing that none of them all is comparable hereunto; For the Onix ſtone and the Saphir, he alſo ſaith, that they are not ſo precious as ſome other precious ſtones: why then omitting others, doth he firſt ſpeak of theſe? Sol. For their Colours, the Onix being red and the Saphir of the Colour of the Sky, and hereby man in his Creation, being made of red Earth is ſet forth, and the Holy Angells pure as the Sky and Heavenly, neither, of theſe are comparable to Chriſt our Wiſedome. Then going on in this Compariſon, further he ſaith, The gold and the Chriſtall cannot equall it. In which words, he putteth two things together, one far inferiour to the other, but by the Gold holy men are ſet forth, being precious for virtue, and ſhining through faith and patience like gold, and by chriſtal glaſs they being changed in heaven, as it were into chriſtal for their tranſparency, the glory that is within appearing as it is, as well as that without, which it doth not here no more then it is ſeen through a golden cup what is within it, but in a Chriſtall Glaſſe that which is within ſheweth it ſelf in the proper colour thereof; to demonſtrate which it is ſayd, that before the Throne of God was a Sea of Glaſs like Chriſtall, ſo that one Saint ſhall then be ſeen and known to another in his very inward parts, which he cannot now ſo clearly be, there being ſo many Hypocrits that ſeem holy. Verſ. 16. Gregory. 1 Cor. 2. 4. Verſ. 17. Revel. 4. 6.

And the exchange of it ſhall not be for jewells of fine gold. Vulg. Veſſells of fine gold, Hebr. כְּלִי־פָז Veſſells, Armes, Inſtruments, or Ornaments of fine gold. Theſe, ſaith he, were the Holy Fathers, the Prophets, and Apoſtles, who were moſt excellent amongſt men, but yet not comparable to Chriſt, as the light inlightned is not to the light inlightning, nor the Juſtice juſtified to the Juſtice juſtifying: Such a veſſell of Gold was Moſes and Elias, Peter and Paul, but when they come to be ſpoken of in compariſon of Chriſt, they are nothing, V. 18.

The Topaz of Ethiopia ſhall not equall it, neither ſhall it be valued with pure gold. The Topaz is a precious ſtone of diverſe glorious colours, and Ethiopia, a Country of black men, hereby then may be underſtood, the faithful of the Gentiles who were black before by ſin, and their Converſion prophe- Verſ. 19.

ſied

ſied of by the name of Ethiopia, The land of Ethiopia ſhall ſtretch out her hands to thee. Amongſt theſe there were ſome ſhining by variety of graces, but none comparable to Chriſt, ſeeing he was born moſt holy, they but adopted to be holy, but born in ſin. For the next words; the vulgar hath it, Neither ſhall it be compared to the cleaneſt tincture: the ſame word טהור being uſed that went before, V. 16. only here, the word Clean is added, which was before wanting; and hereby the ſame faithfull perſons are to be underſtood, who count not themſelves clean but by dipping in the water of Baptiſme, being of themſelves foul and unclean, and ſo not comparable to Chriſt. I have here omitted, V. 18. touching which yet ſomething would be ſayd, it being in vulg. High and eminent things ſhal not be remembred in compariſon of her, but Wiſdome is drawn out of ſecret places, N. Tr. No mention ſhall be made of Corrall or of Pearl, for her price is above rubies: And the two firſt words ראמות and גבש ſignify precious ſtones, but none other names hereof do I find, and therefore the vulgar without ſpecifying them hath it high and excellent, as if he had ſayd, if there be any things elſe yet more precious, they are nothing to Wiſedome; For the laſt words the vulg. is to be preferred, the Hebr. being משך חכמה Wiſdome is drawn out of corners, whereby muſt needs be meant hidden places, whereby the incarnation of Chriſt is ſet forth, God being in him hidden under the appearance and form of a man, a ſervant, but drawn forth and manifeſted by ſigns, and wondrous works which he did.

Verſ. 18.

Whence cometh wiſedome? Where is the place of underſtanding? Seeing it is hidden, &c.

Verſ. 20.
Verſ. 21.

Here Job not having yet found out the place where Wiſdome is, reneweth his inquiry after it; Whence cometh it? this is hidden, becauſe he is the only begotten Son of the Father, and his begetting is ſo latent, that the Prophet Iſay ſaith, Who can declare his generation? And for the place where he is, it being the minde of man, and this being hidden from all other men, and unknown in whoſe heart and minde he dwelleth, it might well be added; And where is the place of underſtanding? But it may trouble the Reader, moſt which followeth, It is hidden from the eyes of all men living. For Moſes ſaw the Lord, and ſpake with him face to face; and Jacob ſaw him, and he appeared to Abraham, and was ſeen by Iſaiah: And yet John ſaith, no man hath ſeen God at any time, and no man ſhall ſee God and live; how ſhall theſe contradictions be reconciled? Sol. When Moſes is ſaid to have ſeen and talked with God, yet it is manifeſt, that he ſaw him not as he is to be ſeen, becauſe that after this he deſired to ſee his face, and had it not granted unto him: If he had ſeen, and did often ſee and talk with him, according to that ſeeing; why did he deſire after this to have his face ſhewed unto him? He ſaw him then only by ſome repreſentation ful of glory, but he ſaw not as he was ſeen; that is, God in his eſſence, no more did any other of the Prophets: And therefore according to it, he is ſaid to be ſeen by the eyes of men living, but not by ſome Idea or repreſentation. Or by the living we may underſtand, ſuch as live in ſin, for ſo ſoon as God cometh to be ſeen of man, he dieth to ſin: In which ſenſe alſo it may be ſaid, No man ſhall ſee God and live. For he that ſeeth God by faith, liveth no more in ſin, but ſaith with the Apoſtle, If we be dead to ſin, how ſhould we live any longer therein? Whereas it is added, And kept cloſe from the fowles of the aire. There are ſaith Gregory, ſome fowles are ſpoken of in holy Scripture, whereby Devils are meant, as where it is ſaid, The fowles of the aire devoured the ſeed caſt in the way. And where Chriſt ſaith, The Foxes have holes, and the fowles of the aire have neſts, but the Son of man hath not whereupon to lay his head. For here by Foxes are meant, cunning and ſubtle Devils, and proud Devils fleeing aloft, theſe have harbour in mens hearts, but Chriſt not: Again by ſome fowles the faithful are meant, as where it is ſaid, that muſtard ſeed

Iſa. 22.

Chap. 9.

Rom. 6.
Gregor.

Matth. 13.

groweth

groweth to a great Tree, and the Fowls of the Aire come and make their Neaſts therein, that is, in Chriſt, who is hereby ſet forth, for even from theſe is Chriſt hidden in his divine Eſſence, although ceaſing to live in ſin, as was ſayd before, they attaining to be above the condition of other men, and more high elevated, they ſee him ſo, as others do not.

Deſtruction and Death ſay, We have heard the fame thereof, &c. Having ſhewed that naturall men ſee not where wiſedome is, neither do the faithfull ſee it with their Bodily eyes, to which it is inviſible, but by their ſpirituall they do; Now he cometh to Devills and damned ſpirits, meant by Death and Deſtruction, theſe he ſaith hear the Fame thereof, becauſe that by the Preaching of the Goſpel Chriſt is publiſhed every where, ſo that the Worſt cannot ſay, but that they have heard of him, but they ſee him not, becauſe their Eyes be blinded, and herein lyeth their Miſery. Ver. 22. Math. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 4. 4.

But God knoweth the place thereof, he underſtandeth the way thereof: That is, although it be hidden from the eyes of men and Devills, yet he knoweth the place thereof, becauſe it is in him, for the Father and Son are one; he in the Son and the Son in him, but how this is unknown to us, that live here, and he knoweth the way, that is, this his wiſedomes taking fleſh, both how it was, and before it came to paſs when it ſhould be: Or otherwiſe God knoweth the place thereof in man, in whoſe heart it is, and in whoſe not, and the way of coming thereof into mens Hearts; but touching thoſe, in whoſe Hearts this wiſedome hath place, it is not ſo to be held, that God only knoweth this as that they in whom it is, are ignorant of it, for they have a white ſtone, and hereon a new name written, which no man knoweth but he that hath it; And what is this new name but the name of himſelf taken notice of, to have Chriſt the wiſedome of God in him to his Salvation? Verſ. 23. Revel. 2.

For he looketh to the Ends of the Earth, and ſeeth under the whole Heaven: That God knoweth in what heart Wiſedome is, he hereby ſheweth, that he beholdeth all things, and men in all parts of the World. All things are naked and manifeſt in his ſight. And if all things be known unto him, then in what heart wiſdome is, ſo Nicetas: but Cajetan, he knoweth all things, ſo as that he giveth wiſedome to ſuch as have it, and therefore knoweth where it is: From hence he proceedeth to particulars, Verſ. 25. Whereby his knowing and ordering all things by wiſedome, is proved. Verſ. 24. Heb. 4. 13. Nicetas. Cajetan.

To make the weight for the winds, and he waieth the waters by meaſure; When he made a decree for the rain, &c. For that weigheth and keepeth down the windes at his pleaſure, and appointeth them where and when to blow, and ſtinteth the waters of the Sea, ſetling them bounds, how far they ſhall go, and no further; and likewiſe the rain and thunder without doubt knoweth the ſecrets of all theſe: And therefore all things under the Heavens, and in ordering all things ſo as he hath done, he ſhewed. That he did ſee and declare wiſedome, prepared it and ſearched it out, as followeth, V. 27. That is, That he not only ſaw and knew it, as was ſaid before, but in his doing thus declared it to man, ſo that he might in his works ſee it: As the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 1. and be affected with feare, love, and reverence, towards God; and beleive in, and ſerve him all his daies: And to the ſame end he addeth two words more, his preparing and ſearching it out for man by this meanes, who could not of himſelf come to know it or how to attain unto it. Verſ. 25. Verſ. 26. Verſ. 27.

And to man he ſaid, The feare of the Lord is wiſedome, and to depart from evil is underſtanding. Here by his ſaying to man, Vatablus underſtands, that he ſaid, by his ordering all things ſo, as hath been declared, that men by fearing him, and learning this from his works, and beleiving and worſhipping him, and obeying him, as he ſeeth all things do, might be Ver. 28. Vatablus.

be made truly wiſe; and by fleeing diſobedience and ſin, intelligent: But why is this ſaid to be wiſdome, which is an act of the will; ſith wiſedome lieth in the intellectual part of man? To this Ambroſe ſaith, becauſe the end of knowing is willingly to live and do accordingly; therefore he that doth not ſo, whatſoever underſtanding he hath, is a fool, becauſe he attaineth not the end hereof, which then only is wiſedome, when from underſtanding it cometh into act through a good will ready to do accordingly in all things: As he that hath learned any art or ſcience, but will not exerciſe it, makes all his knowledge therein fruſtrate and nothing worth. To conclude then, this declaration what wiſedome is, tendeth to call men off from their indefatigable labouring and earneſt indeavouring after Gold and other mettals hidden in the ground, which when by digging they have peirced moſt deep, yet they are no whit the nearer to the ineſtimable treaſure of wiſedome, to get the feare of God, and an heart to depart from all evil, which who ſo doth, hath Chriſt the wiſedome of the Father in him: But he that hath not, although he may ſeem to be wiſe by this wiſedome, yet indeed he is not, for he hath only a Lamp, but no oyle therein.

Ambroſe. Ser. 16. in Pſ. 119.

Note.

CHAP. XXIX.

Verſ. 2. OH that I were as in months paſt, and as in the dayes when God preſerved me; when his candle ſhined upon my head, and by his light I walked through darkneſſe. In this Chapter Job maketh a commemoration of the great favour which God ſhewed unto him in times paſt, not out of oſtentation or vain-glory, for being now in miſery he could not record theſe things, but to the aggravation of his greif: Therefore he was by theſe men, who laid foule ſinnes to his charge, forced to ſpeak, as here he doth; that their mouths might be ſtopped, ſith that if he had been ſo wicked as they charged him to be, God would never have bleſſed him ſo greatly as he did, making men by this meanes ſo highly to honour him, as is here declared: And becauſe theſe bleſſings are common to the righteous and to the wicked, and whatſoever man he be, that hath wealth and authority in this World, may be honoured by other men through adulation and flattery, to curry favour with him, for their own advantage: He further proveth, that the honour which he had, was upon good ground, Viz. his Juſtice, Charity, and Wiſedome; wherewith God had indued him, as appeareth; Verſ. 12. 13. 14. &c. to Verſ. 17. For although wicked men being very wealthy, and preferred to places of rule and authority, may be had in great honour therefore, yet when the loving, charitable, and juſt, are ſo honoured and eſteemed of; it is a certain ſign of ſingular favour, wherein they are with God: Howſoever it is not alwaies their lot, to be thus reſpected here, but the beſt are ſometimes in greateſt miſery in this World, and therefore accounted worſt, yea although their outward eſtate be proſperous, and the worſt are accounted beſt by the wicked; ſuch as the far greater part of men is. Neither is it to be thought, to have been ſpoken out of vain-glory, in what honour and proſperity he had been; as neither by any other true faithful Servant of God, although they that commonly do ſo, are juſtly judged to do it in a vanting way and in pride: For as the Apoſtle ſaith in the like caſe; all ſuch may truly ſay, Yee have conſtrained us to this ſeeming boaſting: As Samuell alſo did in the like caſe. Thus much in general upon this Chapter: More particularly Job doth firſt here deſcribe his felicity in reſpect of worldly things paſt. Firſt, In what God preſerved him; Verſ. 2. Secondly, In that his light ſhone upon him; that is, He kept him from loſſes, and made made his eſtate proſperous, Verſ. 3. Thirdly, The ſecret of God was in my tabernacle. V. 4. And this he ſaith, was in his youth: Whence it may be noted, that Job was ſanctified betimes, and even from his youth walked with God, as Enoch did: For what elſe can be meant by the ſecret of God being in his Tabernacle, but that even there, where he was hidden from all mortal eyes, he had ſoliloquies with God by meditation and prayer, and moſt probably God in token of his acceptation, ſome times ſpake unto him tocomfort and incourage him in the good way, wherein he was; as he did to Abraham and Jacob, and ſome other holy men, frequently of old. Job then was a rare and extraordinary man for ſanctity, in that he feared God even in his youth, in which age others commonly are given to eating and drinking; robbing their Parents of their money, hunting whore-houſes, and dicing, and other heinous ſinnes, for which it is meet, that juvenile breaking out ſhould be bound and brideled by accurate reaſons; as Plutarch ſpeaketh: But the example of Job, ſhould be the invitation of other young men; to every of whom it is ſaid, Remember thy Creator in the daies of thy youth. The word חרם ſignifieth either, My childe-hood, youth, or winter. Becauſe that age commonly is frozen as it were in vice, no virtue then ſpringing or ſhewing it ſelf: For Jobs wiſhing himſelf to be, as then he was: Chriſoſt. ſaith, That he wiſhed and prayed for this; that they, who now deſpiſed him, as moſt wicked, might ſee their errour and repent, and his praying for this, was not without effect, as by the ſequell was proved, when he far exceeded that, which he had formerly been; yea he had more then his wiſh granted him, for he had twice ſo much, and in that proſperity he lived a very long time; whereas he ſpake but of months and daies, that is, ſome ſhort time: So God giveth more to his faithful Servants oft times in this World, then they ask or deſire; for they ask but for bread, and he ſometimes giveth them abundance: And good reaſon he had to wiſh thus, becauſe theſe men meaſure mans righteouſneſs by his proſperity or adverſity, would not otherwiſe beleive, but that this rare Saint of God, was a moſt wicked man: But what is meant by his walking in Gods light, in his darkneſs? Olympiodorus ſaith, The keeping away of all adverſity and loſſes from him: But Cajetan better, Whereas he himſelf at that time ſpecially, that he ſpeaketh of, Viz. In his youth was in the darkneſs of underſtanding, and ſo unable to walk or ſpeak, or do wiſely, through Gods inlightning him he was able. Fourthly When the Almighty was with me, and my children round about me. Here he calleth him Almighty, whom he had called God before when he was young, whereby ſome think, is intimated, that when he grew to mans eſtate, and had Wife and Children, Gods almighty power yet appeared more in wonderfully iucreaſing his ſubſtance, and working in the hearts of his Children and Servants ſo, that they were about him, as circles about a point, or center; all looking at, and obſerving him, to do as he directed them, for both may well be underſtood by the word Children. A notable deſcription of a family rightly ordered, wherein the Almightly is with his bleſſing, that Children and Servants may all labour to be ſuch, and Parents and Maſters indeavour by all good meanes to make them ſuch.

Note.

Note.

When I waſhed my ſteps with butter, and the Rock powred me out Rivers of oyle. Here fifthly, he ſetteth forth Gods beneficence towards him in the abundance of Butter and Oyle, and he ſpeaketh of his feet, as waſhed herewith, according to the manner of the wealthy, dwelling in hot countries, who uſed to have their feet waſhed, and annoynted often with oyle, and of oyle out of Rocks, in great plenty, becauſe Olive Trees grew upon Rocks and Mountaines, and ſo no part of his ground was unfruitfull, and if the Rocks which were barrenneſt, yeilded commonly little Olives to him, they yeilded it plenteouſly. See the like in the bleſſing, Deut. 33. 24.

Verſ. 4.

Plutarch de inſtituend: juven.

Note.

Eccle. 12.

Chryſoſt.

Note.

Olympiod. Cajetan.

Verſ. 5.

Note.

Verſ. 6.

O The bleſſings that be upon godly and well ordered families. And hitherto of Iobs proſperity, now for the honour which he had amongſt men for this and other bleſſings by God beſtowed upon him.

Verſ. 7. 8. When I went out to the gate in the City, &c. The young men ſaw me, and hid themſelves, and the old roſe up and ſtood. The gate was commonly a place of Judicature, where Judges and Kings uſed to go and ſit to judge cauſes, that were brought before them, and by the way if there were any young ones playing, or ill occupied, or idle, they, for fear of ſo wiſe and ſevere a Judge againſt Evill durſt not be ſeen, and the ancient ſtood up to give him Honour, as it ſhould be done to men moſt excellent, for Reverence ſake.

Verſ. 9. Verſ. 10. 2. Princes were ſilent, and layd their hands upon their mouths, and ſo did Captains alſo for reverence to him, whereby we may ſee in what Eſtimation he was had for his wiſdome; his ſpeeches in compariſon of other mens being counted ſo worthy, that they were aſhamed to ſpeak, when he was in preſence, as who thought, that they ſhould but diſgarce themſelves if they ſpake. And ſo indeed ſhould all that be of weaker parts do in the preſence of thoſe, that are far ſuperiour in wiſedome and Elocution unto them.

Verſ. 11. 3. The Eare that heard bleſſed me, and the Eye that ſaw me gave witneſs to me. As the Queen ſayd of Solomon, that ſhe heard much of Solomon in her own Country; but coming and ſeeing him, ſhe pronounced his ſervants bleſſed that ſtood continually in his preſence; ſo Job here deſcribeth himſelf as ſomewhat like Solomon, Wiſedome and utterance, ſuch as heard of him, ſaying, that he was greatly bleſſed of God in this, but much more they that were preſent to behold his carriage, and wiſe demeanure in all things.

Verſ. 12. Becauſe I delivered the poor that cryed, and the fatherleſs. Here after ſpeaking of Gods and mans bleſſing him, he cometh to ſpeak of the cauſe, whereby he approveth his righteous and charitable dealing with all men againſt the foul calumnies of theſe his vexing freinds: he delivered the poor whoſe cauſe was good, but againſt whom men of might ſetting themſelves, thought by their purſes to carry it, and to winn the day: And this was no ſmall praiſe unto him, or to any Judge that uſeth ſo to do: For this Theodoricus a King is praiſed by Caſſiodore, that he coming to the Throne, ſayd; Amongſt the religious cares of the Common-wealth, which God helping, we meditate upon, one is the eaſing of the low, which we take to heart, that we may erect the obſtacle of our piety againſt the power of the proud, that audaciouſneſs may do nothing with us, whoſe purpoſe is to tread under foot proud things. And by thus doing, Job ſaith, that he cheared the Widdows heart, and the bleſſing of him that was ready to periſh came upon him. This is the ſecond thing whereby he is commended, viz. his great clemency, when ſome that in the rigor of the Law for Treaſon againſt him, ſhould have been put to death; he was ſo mercifull, that he pardoned them: So Chriſoſt. ſaith of Theadoſius a godly Emperour, that he having ſpared ſome that were thus guilty, and being praiſed for it, ſayd; I would to God I could revoke thoſe back again to life, that have dyed for their Treaſons againſt me: Then Job upon the premiſes concludeth, that he put on Righteouſneſſe as a Garment, and as a Diadem, whereby we may gather, that Kings then ſate in their Robes and Crowns in their own perſons, to judge their people; and that Moſes ſate to judge in his own perſon, who is ſayd to be King in Jeſhurun, his Hyſtory declareth; and it is ſayd likewiſe of Auguſtus Caſar, and of many other Emperours: Now Job, becauſe he did as was before ſayd, ſayth, that he ſate clad with better garments then Kingly Robes and Diadems, viz. With Juſtice and Judgment, becauſe as upon a mans Body nothing can be ſeen but the Garments which he weareth, ſo nothing could be ſeen in him but Righteouſneſs in all his proceedings betwixt man and man, Caſſiodor.

Ver. 13.

Chriſoſt.

Verſ. 14.

man, and judgment and mercy towards Offenders, that were capable of mercy.

I was eyes to the blind, and feet to the Lame: A Father to the poor, the cauſe that I knew not I ſearched out: Here a third good property of a Judge, to be Eyes to the blind; that is, to ſee for them that they may ſuffer no wrong, who are ſimple and of little underſtanding, and know not how to ſpeak for themſelves, and ſuch like alſo are to be underſtood by the lame; they are ſuch as are not able to go by their own ſtrength to this Warfare of contending in Law, as wanting wealth wherewithall to go againſt their mighty Adverſaries, to withſtand them in their violent proceedings againſt them. Herein then Job acquited himſelf moſt worthily, in that he by this wiſdome and care, that all ſhould have juſtice done unto them, took their cauſes upon himſelf, ſeeing and going for them by providing; that they might in nothing be wronged: And thus he was not only a freind, but a Father to the poor; For what Father can do more for his Children, then that Prince, who provideth thus for the pooreſt and meaneſt of his Subjects; And in any caſe that was difficult, or when ſin, that was ſecretly committed, was hard to be found out; he ſifted and ſearched out the matter moſt diligently and wiſely, as Solomon is ſayd to have done in the caſe of the two Harlots that ſtrove before him. Verſ. 15. Verſ. 16.

I brake the jaws of the Wicked, and pluckt the ſpoile out of his Teeth: Here is a fourth excellent property in a Judge, as to ſhew mercy and to judge for the oppreſſed and Poor, ſo to uſe ſeverity towards wrong doers, making them to reſtore the things which they have wrongfully taken away, for this is to pluck the ſpoil out of their Teeth, wherefore ſuch as contrariwiſe have teeth like ſpears and knifes to make a prey of the poor, under their Dominion, are monſters and not men, and muſt much more look to be proceeded againſt, in greateſt ſeverity; by the great Judge of all the world. Verſ. 17. Note. Prov. 30. 14.

Then I ſayd I ſhall dy in my neſt, and multiply my dayes as the Sand. The Sept. for the Sand hath, the Palme tree, ſome the Phenix, but the word ſignifieth the ſand, and ſo is every where taken, it is an Hyperbole, it being meant very long and comfortably: Having abounded ſo in the Acts of Juſtice and Charity, for ſo much as God maketh all good promiſes to ſuch, he was perſwaded, that without being exerciſed with ſuch brunts of extream ſufferings, he ſhould after long injoyment of peace and proſperity here, have finally departed out of this life full of riches, dayes, and Honour, as it is ſayd of David, that he did; and Job himſelf at length is alſo ſayd to have dyed thus, Chap. 4. and of men rich and in proſperity, it is elſe where ſpoken, as making their neſts on high, and this word Neſt implyeth the Phenix, to be meant by the Word חול rendred the ſame, for the Phenix is ſaid to live many years, even five hundred, and then in her neſt to dy by the heat of the Sun kindling a fire therein, wherewith ſhe is burnt to aſhes, and out of her aſhes a long time after cometh another Phenix. Verſ. 18. Obad. 14.

My root was ſpread by the waters, and the Dew lay all night upon my branches. Here Job doth further ſet forth his proſperity, by a ſimilitude taken from a Tree planted by the Waters ſide which groweth and fructifieth abundantly, as the Righteous are deſcribed, Pſ. 1. Verſ. 19.

My glory was freſh in me, and my bow was renewed in my hand: That is, having lived many years in honour and proſperity, there was no fading or decay hereof, but I was herein like a bay Tree, that is always green. And my bow was renewed, That is, my Warlike forces were ſtrong, and rather increaſing then decreaſing, becauſe a bow is an Inſtrument of Warr, ſo it is ſayd of Joſephs bow, that it abode in ſtrength. Verſ. 20. Gen. 49. 13.

To me men gave eare, and waited; and kept ſilence at my Counſell: That is, ſuch a gift I had in Oratory, as that my Auditors were held, as it were by the Eares, in great attention to my words, whenſoever I ſpake; as Luci- Verſ. 21.

an faith of Alchides magnus, and my Counſell was attended to in all ſilence, as an Oracle: And this is a great gift in Kings; gaining them great love and Honour, and therefore ſo laboured for by them all, V. 22. 23. The ſame thing of the Eſtimation, wherein he was for his Eloquence, is further amplyfied by a compariſon taken from the rain, the ſpeeches uttered by him being as gratefull to his Auditors, as the rain to the dry and thirſty ground, ſo Moſes, Deut. 32. 2.

Verſ. 24. If I laughed on them, they beleived it not, and the light of my countenance they caſt not down. Here Job further ſheweth, that all his carriage was ſo grave and reverent, able to awe all his Subjects about him, as that if at any time he laughed upon them, they feared, that it was not becauſe he was well pleaſed with them, but rather in way of deriſion, as being offended at their doings, as zealous Elijah laughed at the Prophets of Baal, who was wont always to ſpeak terribly againſt ſinners: For the next words, The light of my countenance they caſt not down, The Vulgar hath it, Fell not down to the ground; But againſt the Heb. verity, and the meaning is, if I did at any time laugh, ſuch an awfull reverence was wrought in them by my ſeverity and gravity, that they did even then carry themſelves reverently towards me, ſo Vatablus: Others, they were very carefull, that nothing might be done, whereby of merry I might be made ſad, but ſought by all means to cheriſh this ſigne of complacency in men, as men joying in it, and never accounting it any point of folly in me, as it is in many, according to the ſaying, By much laughter thou mayſt know a Foole. V. 25. I chose out their way, and ſate cheife, and dwelt as a King in the Army, and as one that comforteth the mourners. Thus alſo Hebrew: But Vulg. If I would goe amongſt them, I ſate firſt. But the meaning is not of his going to them, but appointing them the way wherein they ſhould goe, by giving them good Laws, according to which they ſhould live; for of a Lawgiver and Judge is the cheife ſeate in all Countreys; thus he ſheweth in times of peace, how he had the honour to teach, direct, and rule, then he further addeth that he dwelt as a King in the Army, in time of Warr, ordering all martiall affaires, as he did the civill in time of peace, and how that as a Leader he went before them in every good way, being an example to them, whom they following might doe well. Laſtly, he ſheweth to what end or iſſue he did drive all his doings and ſayings, Viz. To the comforting of the mourners; and this ſhould be the ayme of every Magiſtrate, not to preferr and make proud ill deſerving favourites, or to fill his owne Coffers, but comfort ſuch as are ſad and heavy hearted, for the many ſufferings under which they are, by doing them all right, and taking off all their greivances, and hitherto of the literall ſenſe; now becauſe all this is ſayd to be ſpoken by way of Parable, Verſ. 1. It ſeemeth, that ſome further matter is herein aimed at, and that, ſaith Gregory, is to ſet forth the ſtate of the Church of Chriſt, under the New Teſtament, firſt honourable and much attended to, and abounding with all ſorts of ſpirituall Riches, but afterwards becoming deſpicable by means of Hereticks corrupting the Faith divers wayes, and making it odious and ridiculous, as Iob ſets himſelf forth to have been, Chap. 3. To ſhew that Job in this Chap. ſetteth forth in his own perſon the proſperity of the Church; at the firſt he ſaith, As I was in the dayes of my youth, when the ſecret of God was in my Tabernacle; that is, His Law in my heart to doe it; for in the Tabernacle was the Arke in the ſecret moſt holy place, and in the Arke the Teſtimony, or two Tables of the Law: For then the Church or any faithfull ſoule is in an happy caſe, when ſhee thus hath the Law within her heart and not in her mouth onely, to walke exactly according to it in all things: But contrariwiſe it is a miſery to have the Word of God in open view, but not in ſecret, as it is with Hypocrites, none talke more of it, then they, but how doe they ſet their hearts to live according to it? O what an emptineſſe is there in them in reſpect of this ſecret, even in their ſecret thoughts.

Vatabl. Per multum riſum poteris cognoſcere ſultum. Note. The myſtery. Gregor. Verſ. 4. Note.

When

When I waſhed my ſteps, or feet with butter. If this be underſtood of the feet of Chriſt, as Job was a tipe of Chriſt, as was ſhewed at the beginning of this Book, the Preachers of the word are to be underſtood by his feet; becauſe as upon feet he is carried all about the World by them, for which their ſound, is ſaid to have gone into all the earth: And how beautiful are the feet of thoſe, that bring glad tidings of peace, &c. Their feet be waſheth with butter, when he moveth the hearts of their hearers to offer liberally to their ſuſtenance of their worldly goods: For when due ſtipends are given by hearers to their Preachers, as men after weary labour are refreſhed by waſhing of their feet, ſo after wearineſs by the labour of preaching injoyned, this beneficence of their hearers refreſheth them: Not that they ſhould preach for this end, to be thus refreſhed and nouriſhed, but that being refreſhed they may preach, not that the action of preaching ſhould paſs to the intention of feeding; but that the Miniſtries of ſuſtentation, may ſerve to the profit of preaching: So Paul ſaith, That he looked not at the gift, but at the fruit; that is, The grace wrought in the hearers hearts by preaching, making them to yeild ſo fat fruits, and the waſhing of their foot-ſteps thus in butter, then was moſt remarkable; for they brought even all and laid it there in token of their ſuper-abundant grace, and where they ſet footing, there were daily more and more converted, ſo that in all places they tread, as it were, upon fatneſſe, contrary to the manner of theſe times, wherein they are this way far enough from fatneſſe, all places where they come being lean and barren. But if by the feet the hearers be underſtood, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh both of head and feet, and other members of Chriſts body, the Church then the feet of this body are waſhed in butter, when the Preacher hath reſpect to their weakneſs of underſtanding; and the wounds of their Soules by ſin, that he carefully applieth himſelf to the inlightning and converting of them, as that being turned they are made to abound in all fruitfulneſſe to the great comfort of their Soules, for the Rock flowing out Rivers of oyle, hereby the annointing with the gifts and graces of Chriſt by his ſpirit, is ſet forth: For the Rock ſaith Paul was Chriſt.

Verſ. 6.

Pſ. 19. Rom. 10.

Note.

Rom. 12.

When I went out to the Gate, &c. The ſeat which Job ſaith here, that he prepared, ſetteth forth the Pulpit, wherein the Preacher teacheth; the young men hiding themſelves, light and vain perſons, that feare reproof for their vanities, who will therefore be as ſeldome ſeen in the Congregation as they can, lying hid in ſome other places, wherein they take more delight, the old men riſing up, and doing reverence are grave and ſober, diſcreet and holy pious perſons, for men are not thus ſpoken of alwaies, that be old, but ſuch as in whom there is wiſedome and gravity, as in the ancient, others although old in yeares, are children; for which we ſometime read of children an hundred yeares old: And to prove this, God ſaid to Moſes, when he did bid him chooſe ſuch as he knew to be Elders, in which ſaying he implyed, that they were not ſuch only in reſpect of their old age, for then he needed not to have inſerted thoſe words, for every one knew, who were Elders thus, and it ſhould not have been ſaid; Such as thou knoweſt to be Elders. By the young men alſo we may underſtand, Hereticks newly ſprung up in the Church of God; by the old, ſuch as perſevered in the true faith alwaies, the one ſort hid themſelves, not daring to appear, after they were confuted, and a ruling power was in the Church to ſuppreſſe all ſuch, which when it is wanting, every one is bold to ſtand forth and vent his errours; the other ſtood up and did reverence, applauding and reſting in the determinations of the Church: A thing to be conſidered in theſe our daies, wherein the frame of ſuch government being pulled down, there is no end of the multiplying of errours: For their being ſilent and laying their hand upon their mouth, this

Verſ. 7.
Verſ. 8.

Note.

Num. 11. 16.

Note.

this alſo is a further explication of the ſame, Hereticks that are bold to ſpeak and publiſh their errours, when there is no Government, have their mouths ſtopped by the authority hereof. ſo that although for a time they utter hereſies, and ſtand to the maintaining of them: As Arrius who held three perſons and three Gods; and Sabellius one God and one Perſon, Mannicheus, becauſe he found virginity praiſed in the Scripture, condemned marriage, and Jovinion findeth marriage allowed to all, deſpiſed virginity; yet theſe their errours being condemned by the Church, they were afterwards ſilent, and they that held with them, durſt ſpeak no more: But it is ſaid only, they laid their hands upon their mouths, their hearts haply being ſtil the ſame, that they were before; but none durſt now any more utter them: And he ſpeakes of Captaines and Nobles, that were made ſilent, becauſe that even arch-Hereticks were put to ſilence, and durſt not ſpeak any more, ſo as they did before.

Verſ. 11. The eare that heard me bleſſed me, and the eye that ſaw me beare me witneſſe; That is, The Preacher ſpeaking and teaching the truth, ſuch as beleive ſpeak all good of him, and he ordering his converſation in all things accordingly; they that ſee the unblamableneſſe of his life, and are hereby turned to live likewiſe, give him witneſſe, by becoming ſuch as they ſee him to be; the unbeleivers and wicked ſtil neither bleſſe nor give teſtimony to him, but carry themſelves as enemies both in word and deed: As it is ſaid, Phil. 3. 18. That they are enemies to Chriſt, and therefore muſt needs be enemies to his faithful Miniſters; and although they utter not themſelves in words, but herewith bleſſe, yet if their deeds be evil, they are convinced hereby to deny him, and not to give teſtimony to him; and conſequently to deny God, and to be unbeleivers and under damnation: Wherefore let evil ſpeakers of their Preachers, be aſhamed and feare, whatſoever their lives be, and likewiſe evil livers, how ſeemingly good ſoever their ſpeeches be.

Note.

Tit. 16. 1.

Verſ. 12. Becauſe I delivered the poor that cryed, and the fatherleſſe. This alſo the Church doth, when the Preacher abſolveth the poor penitent ſinner ſeeking to him, from his ſinnes, according to the authority given him by Chriſt, that ſaid, Whoſe ſinnes yee forgive, they ſhall be forgiven. And the fatherleſſe are delivered, when the ſame having before gone with the Prodigal from their heavenly Father, and ſo for the time were as fatherleſſe and helpleſſe children, are now by the preaching of the word, converted and brought home and reconciled unto him: In which termes the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of converſion, for ſuch before were without God, but now of his houſhould.

Ioh. 20. 23. Luk. 15. 2 Cor. 5. 20.

Eph. 2. 12.

Verſ. 13. The bleſſing of him that was ready to periſh came upon me. Here he ſtill goeth on in the ſame allegory, for who ſo liveth in ſin, til he is converted, is ready to periſh; there is but a ſtept betwixt him and death for evermore: For every Tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, hath now the Axe laid to the roots thereof, to cut it down, that it may be caſt into the fire: But he that converteth him, delivereth him from death, for He ſaveth a Soule, and hideth a multitude of ſinnes; and I made the widdows heart to ſing for joy. Hereby the Widdow, the faithful may be underſtood, who live in this World, as it were in widdow-hood, for what is a widdow but Relicta, a woman left behinde of her Husband, when he dieth? So the faithful are ſaid to be left by Chriſts going away from them, when he died, but by preaching his reſurrection and aſcention, and coming again to take them to himſelf, to be alwaies where he is; their hearts are made to rejoyce.

Luk. 3. 7.

Jam. 5 18.

Joh. 14

Verſ. 14. I put on righteouſneſſe and it clothed me. That is, All manner of righteouſneſſe, for ſin maketh naked, but righteouſneſs clotheth, ſo that a man, who is righteous in ſome thing, but unrighteous in ſome other, is covered on one part, but naked on the other; and ſo lieth open to the peirc-

ing

ing weapons of his ſpiritual enemies, as if he had no covering on him at all: Thus James ſaith, He that keepeth all the Commandements, and faileth one poynt, is guilty of all. As if a City be well fenced with wales and gates, but one little door ſtands open, all the fencing profiteth not to defend it, becauſe the ſubtle enemy ſeeing this, entereth it here and deſtroyeth it: As the Phariſee, that faſted and paied tithes duly was well fenced, but only one door ſtood ſtil open to the ruine of his Soule, and that was elation of minde; when he ſaid, I am not as other men, or as this Publican. By abſtinence he overcame gluttony and drunkenneſſe, by freely paying tithes of all avarice, but in that he did not herein, Militare authori, ſed elationi. That is, Fight for God the author of all good, but that when he had done ſo he might vaunt himſelf, this was his deſtruction, and the ruine of his City. And judgment as a diadem. The righteous Governour putteth on judgment, as a Diadem or Crown, when he keepeth Court in his own heart, and conſidereth of the judgment, that he is to give in any caſe by the law of God, which is, As yee would that men ſhould do to you, ſo do yee to them. And proceedeth accordingly, not looking herein at any reward upon earth, but in Heaven, as the Crown is for the head, the higheſt part of the body, and not any part downward; of ſuch Solomon ſaith, All his cogitations are judgments. Things being in his own heart examined, as was before ſaid, before that he proceedeth to give judgment.

Iam. 2. 10.

Luk. 18.

Math. 7. 12.

Prov. 12.

I was eies to the blinde and feet to the lame, &c. Of Jobs ſpeaking thus of his own good deeds without pride; enough hath been ſaid before, and a famous Preacher of the Goſpel ſet forth by him, did ſpeak alſo of the good things in himſelf, but not out of oſtentation, but for the edification of others; who might learn of him, being thus revealed, which they could not do, if his Goodneſſe had been concealed: Wherefore our Lord ſaith, Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in Heaven. Now the order whereby Job proceedeth in publiſhing the good which he did, is to be noted; 1. He put on righteouſneſſe, then he was eies to the blinde, &c.

Verſ. 15.

Matth. 5. 16.

1. He was good himſelf, and then he did good to others: For whoſoever is not juſt in his dealings, is not accepted of whatſoever he doth by his worldly Goods to others: For a man is more then his Goods; and therefore if he doth not give himſelf to God, what is his giving of his Goods unto him in releiving the poor? How can he be pious in giving to another, that is, By living wickedly impious to himſelf: For it is written; Thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour as thy ſelf. And therefore he firſt pittieth himſelf that pittieth his neighbour, as the unjuſt dealer doth not; for how can he be good to him, that is naught to himſelf? Two things muſt neceſſary concur, that we may be accepted of in doing good; the man that giveth and the thing given, both muſt be good; but ſpecially the man, who is much more look'd upon, then the thing given by him: Therefore he that giveth to the needy, but refreineth not from unjuſt dealing, giveth but his worldly Goods to God, and himſelf to ſin, then are the branches and fruits of charity, rightly put out, when they ſpring from the root of juſtice: But what is meant by this; I was eies to the blinde, and feet to the lame. The blinde are ſuch, as by reaſon of their ignorance ſee not which way to go; the lame ſuch as ſee the way, but are not able to go in it: Wherefore the Preacher is eies to the blinde, when by his teaching he is inlightened, and feet to the lame; when they that haulted through their natural weakneſſe, are ſtrengthened by being made ſpiritual: For the fleſh is ſaid to be weak, and the Law impoſſible to be kept hereby, becauſe weak: And of the Jews haulting, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in his Epiſtle to them: Leaſt that which is lame be turned out of the way. He doth then allegorically denote two ſorts of people here, the Gentile that

Note.

Rom. 8. 3.
Heb. 12. 13.

that was blind, and the Jew that was lame; to the one of which the Church is Eyes, when they be inlightned, to the other feet, when by her teaching, they are made to come into the unity of the same true faith, and whereas the Jew went before, but as it were upon one foot only, viz. The Law and old Testament, now the other is added also, viz. The Gospel, that going upon both, he might be lame no more.

Note. I was a Father to the poor, He sayth not a Benefactor or a freind, but a Father; to intimate, that he looked upon them with a paternall affection as upon his own Children: For some give to the poor, but are not as Fathers to them in love; but fearing the censure of the great Judge at the last, they are moved to excercise charity towards them, but is he as he ought to be, that releiveth the poor, when he doth it more out of love then out of fear: For if this love be wanting, if I give all my Goods to the poor it is nothing: To apply this to the Church or Preacher, he is a Father to the poor in spirit, when he comforteth them out of greatest good will by telling them, that

Math. 5. theirs is the Kingdome of Heaven, as Christ teacheth. And the cause that I understood not, I diligently searched out: Here is another point of goodness, viz. for a Judge to inquire diligently, to inquire into cases before that he judgeth, that his proceeding may not be temerity but Justice; for to what end else did the great Judge say, that he would go down and see whether the wickedness of Sodom were so great, as he had heard, when as all things as well far of as neer are naked, and manifest in his sight; but to teach Kings and Judges to take pains, to finde out the truth in all things, so that here are al good things to be done towards men put together. 1. Justice. 2. Judgment. 3. Charity. 4. Paternall affection. 5. Pains taking to judge and determine aright, which must be in every Ruler. The

Note. last of which, viz. Searching out matters which he understandeth not, the Rulers of these times had need to think upon, who have undertaken to judge and determine about Church Government, which is a thing not to be

Mal. 2. 7. understood by them, but by inquiring of the Preist, whereby not one or some few whom they think good to choose are meant, but the whole body of the Ministry, of which all that desire to dispute about this point, are to be licensed to come, that upon hearing of the most eminent for learning, the Rulers may be able to determine, and settle this business aright, and this would be both a discharge of Conscience, and well satisfying to all good men, whereas the way that is now gone is unsatisfying to thousands.

Ver. 17. I brake the jaws of the Wicked, and pluckt the spoile out of his Teeth: This the Preacher doth when he converteth Souls, for the jawes of the Devill are now, as it were broken; and the Souls that were his prey, pluckt away, as the Lamb pluckt by David out of the mouth of the Lion, for to a Lion is 1 Pet. 5. 8. the Devill compared: Who goeth about like a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour.

Ver. 18. Then I said, I shall dye in my nest, &c. The nest is a place of Rest, where young birds are fed and brooded by their Dammes, and therefore by it may be set forth the state of the Faithfull; who although they have trouble in the world, yet they have peace with God, and rest through Faith, and Joy in tribulation; as knowing, that they are under the feathers of the Almighty; and Christ, who as an head is ready to brood all those under his Wings, whom he gathereth to him, by converting them to his Faith.

Rom. 5. Psal. 91. Matth. 23.

Vers. 19. My root was spread out by the Waters, &c. The Root is an occult and hidden thing, and therefore denoteth the Heart, the waters are instructions coming as Waters from Heaven, when the Heart then secretly receiveth and meditateth upon these instructions, the Root is spread out by the Waters, And the dew fell upon my Harvest: So the vulgar, the Dew is Gods Grace, the Harvest the good corn growing ripe that it may be cut down, and brought into Gods Barn, the Kingdome of Heaven. For by Grace, saith

Paul,

Paul, I am that I am, and his grace was not in vain in me, for I laboured more then they all, The Dew then is upon the Corn to be reaped in harveſt, when by Grace the ſeed ſown in the Heart groweth dayly and cometh up in labouring in the work of God abundantly: For the word קציר here uſed, it ſignifieth both Meſſis and Ramus. 1 Cor. 15.

My glory was freſh or renewed in me, and my bow was renewed in my hand. Verſ. 20.
Then is the Glory of the Faithfull renewed, when the old man being put off, the new is put on, which is righteouſneſs and holineſs, and by the bow here may be underſtood the word of God in the hand of the Preacher, whereby he ſhooteth and peirceth the Hearts of his Hearers with ſorrow for their ſinnes. For according to this it is ſayd, He hath bent his bow and prepared his arrowes, in the miſticall ſenſe; and again, with bow and arrows they ſhall go up thither. Eph. 4. 24. Pſa 7. Iſa. 7.

To me men gave eare, &c. Here the attention of the faithfull, not of Hereticks, to the preacher of the truth is ſet forth. Verſ. 21.

After my words they ſpake not again: For this is the property of good hearers to reſt in the truth taught, and not to carp or cavill at it, And my ſpeech dropped upon them, That is, was ſo moderated, as that it flowed not down faſter then they were capable of it to profit thereby, but herein reſpect was had to the Edification to the weakeſt in underſtanding, both for the matter and manner of ſpeaking: A thing to be noted by all Preachers that ſpeak either in ſo high a ſtrain or of ſuch deep matters, or in ſuch a running manner, and ſtand ſo long, that they weary their auditors, and edify them little or nothing. Verſ. 22. Note.

They waited for my words as for rain, &c. An excellent and neceſſary property of an hearer, to be even as the thirſty ground, coming with a longing deſire after the word preached, through the need that he findeth himſelf to have thereof, and the delight which he taketh therein. Verſ. 23.

If I laughed on them they beleeved it not, and the light of my countenance they caſt not down. The Preacher is ſayd to laugh or ſmile upon the people, when he is not alwayes ſeverely reprooving them for their ſinnes, but together with ſeverity mingleth lenity, for if he be all lenity and pleaſantneſs amongſt them he ſhal be deſpiſed, if all ſeverity he ſhall be hated: he muſt therefore ſo laugh that he may not be deſpiſed, but feared, and be ſo ſevere that he may not be hated but loved, and therefore all his carriage muſt be moderate and grave, which if it be ſo, when he is gentle and merry amongſt them, they will not think it to come from lenity or vanity to deſpiſe, but reverence him ſtill, and ſo they ſhall not caſt down the light of his countenance by counting him ridiculous and vain, which if he be profuſely given to laughter, they will be ready to do. Verſ. 24.

I choſe out their way and ſate cheife, and as a King in the Army, as one that comforteth the Mourners: Here both the ſeverity and lenity of a Ruler in the Church are further ſet forth; ſeverity, in that he ſaith, As King in the Army, and Lenity in that he comforted the mourners: To ſhew both which in the Church, there was in the Ark a rod, and a pot of Manna; a Rod to chaſtiſe ſinners, and Manna to refreſh the penitent, and the good Samaritane miniſtred to him that was wounded, Wine and Oyl, wine to waſh and with ſmart to cleanſe out the Corrupt bloud, and Oyle to heal, and Moſes doth expreſſe abundance of love to the people of Iſrael, having ſinned by Idolatry, when he ſtood before God to plead for them; when he ſayd, pardon them; if not, blot me out of thy book, and yet when he came amongſt them, the ſeverity of a King in an Army ſtirring up the Levites to ſlay the Idolaters: And to this tendeth the ſaying of David: Thy Rod and thy ſtaffe comfort me. Whereunto we may add Samuel calling for thunder, and then praying for the people: For that Preachers have their Armies, ſee 2 Cor. 10. 4. The weapons of our warfare are mighty. Verſ. 25. Pſ. 23.

CHAP. XXX.

HAving ſpoken of his good Deeds in the former Chapter, and none of them who were ſet upon calumniating him, ſpeaking any thing by way of contradiction it is manifeſt, that they could not; but Job was ſuch an one as hath been ſayd: Whence note, how full of virtue and goodneſs he was, to the ſhame of Chriſtian-Rulers and Governours, that have few or none of theſe good qualities in them, but the contrary; yet he had neither the Law of Moſes to inſtruct him, nor the precepts of the Goſpell to direct him, but only the light of nature, the Law written in his heart, as Ferus ſaith, although I do not herein ſubſcribe unto him, becauſe by many things which he ſpeaketh, he ſeemeth to be indued with a ſupernaturall light, God revealing things unto him, and if he came of Abraham, as is ſuppoſed, he might receive many divine inſtructions from him: but if ſo, Rulers and others ought to propound him to themſelves, as their pattern, as one ſet up by God thus to ſpeak, and thus to do, from his youth upward.

Note.

Ferus.

Verſ. 1. But now they that are younger then I, have me in deriſion, whoſe Fathers I would have diſdained to ſet with the Dogs of my flock. Here the great alteration which befell Job, is ſet forth in reſpect of theſe worldly things; ſo that in his example as in a glaſs, we may ſee the immutability and inconſtancy of all wordly things, not to ſet our hearts upon, but counting them vanities, to ſeek after things ſolid and permanent, ſuch as is the Kingdome of Heaven and the riches thereof: In ſetting forth this great alteration, he beginneth with young mens deriding him; contrary to that which they had done before in fearing and hiding themſelves at his coming forth: But what meaneth he by ſaying, that he diſdained to ſet their Fathers with the dogs of his flocks? For he had before ſpoken of himſelf as not diſdaining, but being a Father to the Pooreſt: Chriſoſt. ſaith, that ſuch as had many flocks, kept Dogs for their greater ſafegard, through the coming of Wild beaſt upon them, and appointed ſome over them to provide meat for them and to feed them, which was as baſe an office as could be; But the Fathers of theſe Deriders were ſo vilely qualified, that he diſdained to appoint ſuch to any Office about his things, whereby they might have a living with his dogs, as the prodigall Son with the Swine, not for their poverty ſo much as for their vile and baſe conditions, and their being affected with nothing but external things, and being void of all fear of God, and compaſſion towards men in miſery, ready rather through ſcoffing at them, to aggravate it, then to eaſe it; which maketh any ſoul abominable to God, and to all good men. This is morally applyed by Gregory to Hereticks deriding ſuch as cleave to the truth, if they come to have any pre-eminence through the favour of worldly Rulers; and he ſaith, I diſdained to ſet them with the dogs of my flock: That is, the Church diſdaineth to number them being dead amongſt Saints departed, who are called dogs of the flock, becauſe by their preaching of the truth they ſcared away wolves and foxes, that is, ſpiritual Enemies from the ſheep of Chriſt; for even they would be taken to be Defenders of theſe ſheep, and ſomtime purchaſe fame to themſelves by preaching Chriſt and doing miracles, for which it is ſayd, many ſhall come in that day and ſay, We have propheſied in thy name, and caſt out devills, &c. But theſe things prove them not Saints, but their not thinking rightly of God and his Doctrine, and their want of Love to their Brethren, and quarrelling and perſecuting them, prove them wicked Hereticks and unworthy to be numbred amongſt faithfull Paſtors, whatſoever wonders they do. For when Chriſt would give a ſign of ſuch as are his Diſciples, he gave not this

Note.

Math. 6.

Chriſoſt.

Gregory.

Math. 7. 21.

for

for a ſign, hereby ſhall men know that yee are my Diſciples, if yee work miracles, or ſpeak with the tongues of men and Angels; but if yee love one another of thoſe that are in the prophetical office, but teach not, we read in the Prophets by this name of Doggs, They are all dumb Doggs, And therefore zealous and painful Preachers without any diſgrace may be ſet forth under the name of Doggs of the flock, in the ſenſe before ſpoken of. And they are ſaid to be young, that are Hereticks in compariſon of the Church, becauſe they came out and had their birth, as it were, from the Church, according to that; They came out from us, becauſe they were not of us. And all theſe things do notoriouſly agree to Papiſts, they and their Fathers, the moſt arch Hereticks are younger then the evangelical Church, having their beginning in after times; no man at the firſt being called Papa, ſignifying Father, becauſe it was forbidden, but all Paſtors were Brethren: Again, great auſterity of life do ſome of them ſhew, and are eloquent enough, and ſome miracles have haply ſometimes been done by them, though not ſo many as they boaſt of: But they think not rightly of God, in reſpect of his free grace, and the impoſſibility, and unlawfulneſſe of repreſenting him by an Image, nor of Chriſt being our only Mediator and Advocate, and they are in continual hoſtility againſt ſuch, as reform from their errours, and therefore the beſt of them are moſt unworthy, and ſhall not be numbered amongſt the Doggs of Chriſt flock, but contempteouſly turned out from having any ſhare in the Heavenly Manna, wherewith they ſhall be fed in the Kingdome of Heaven: And whatſoever they brag of their antiquity, is meer vanity, for they are but younger in compariſon of the true Church of God; and therefore it followeth. Whereunto might the ſtrength of their hands profit me, in whom old age was periſhed. The vulg. The virtue of whoſe hands was to me as nothing, and they were thought unworthy of life. Expounded by Gregory, of their foreſa d excellencies, being by the Cuhrch deſpiſed and counted as nothing: But the Hebr. and N. Tran. are all one, the ſenſe yet being the ſame, the old age, which theſe Hereticks boaſt of, that is, antiquity failing them, if it be well looked into: Some render the word כלה ſometime abundance, but it properly ſignifieth perfection, and ſo may well be taken for a perfect and good old age; this periſheth from the wicked, when they never attain unto it, according to the letter: And in ſpeaking of their ſtrength not profiting him, in this ſenſe Job meaneth, that they were a ſluggiſh and ſloathful kinde of people, for which he cared not for imploying them about any matter.

Joh. 13.

1 Ioh. 2.

Note.

Math. 23.

Verſ. 2.

For want and famine they were ſolitary, fleeing into the wilderneſſe, in former time deſolate and waſt. From whence to Verſ. 8. Is a deſcription of men for their evil qualities, expoſed to all manner of miſery and want, living more like wilde Aſſes then men; and in thus deſcribing them, he uſed ſo many words, to declare the moſt low, into which he was now fallen, to be a ſcorn and deriſion to ſuch: For the literal ſenſe, nothing needeth explication, for the typical, if Hereticks be by theſe men figured out, they are ſpoken of as being in want and famine; becauſe that although they read and ſtudy about things pertaining to God and religion, yet they are things beyond their reach, or frivolous, whereof no benefit or food cometh to their Soules, and for their going into deſolate places, they not being to teach in Churches, withdraw themſelves into Wilderneſſes, and deſert places, where they may be in ſecret; having ſome whom they ſend out to call Diſciples to them: For according to this our Lord ſpeaketh of falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets, ſaith, If they ſay he is in the wilderneſſe, beleive it not. For their eating of hearbs and the barks of Trees, Verſ. 4. This the teachers of errours do, becauſe they practice things commanded that be of leaſt moment, but things more weighty commanded by the Law of God, they neglect to do: For this is call-

Verſ. 3.

Gregor.

Verſ. 4.

Math. 23. ed by Chriſt, a tithing of Mint and Comin and Anniſſeed, which are but hearbs bearing ſeed: For barks of Trees, this ſetteth forth the outſide of the letter, which they gnaw only upon, but peirce not into the trne meaning, from whence they may get ſuſtenance indeed, which is in part alſo verified in Papiſts, that do the leaſt things, obſerving mens traditions, but neglect the greater, being towards adulteries, cruelties to Soules and Bodies moſt licentious, and taking the word at the letter there, where being ſo taken it profiteth not, Viz. In theſe words; Take eate, this is my Body; for the fleſh profiteth nothing. And in part in our Sectaries who go to ſolitary places to teach, and through their ſhallowneſſe can peirce no further then the bark or outſide, as in the point of ſeperating, becauſe it is ſaid, Seperate and come from amongſt them, and in the point of Pædobaptiſme, becauſe it is ſaid, Go teach and baptize. Thus Gregory following the Vulg. Tran. And herein the next words are, They eate the roots of Juniper. Although in N. Tran. They cut down mallowes by the thornes, and cut up the roots of Juniper. But their cutting in their hunger-ſtarved eſtate is to eate them, and therefore it cometh all to one, and hereby is meant their aiming at worldly gain, through the covetouſneſſe of their hearts, as all Hereticks do; for which a root is here ſpoken of, and covetouſneſſe is ſaid to be the root of all evil, and the root of Juniper, becauſe the branches that come from this root are pricky; and what are the ſinnes into which they hereby fall, but as pricks cauſing great vexation and ſorrow? for which it is ſaid, They that will be rich, fall into many noyſome and fooliſh luſts. And this may be taken as a note of hereticks, whether Papiſts or Sectaries amongſt us; the root, out of which their pricking branches ſpring, is covetouſneſſe; as will plainly appear to every one, that looketh into the iſſue, to which they drive all their teaching, the Papiſts their doctrines of Purgatory, praying for the dead, the merit of good works, the ſupremacy and power to grant indulgences, &c, the new Sectaries, who are for gathering Churches, conſiſting of the rich and wealthy, that their gain may be the greater.

Math. 26. John. 6.

1. Tim. 6. 9.

Verſ. 5. They were driven forth from amongſt men, they cried after them as after a theef. Vulg. Who taking theſe things out of the valleys, when they had found all did run to them with crying. The word rendred, From amongſt men, Hebr. is גו The midſt, this the Vulg. Tran. taking for the middle betwixt two Mountaines, rendreth it Valley, N. Tran. The midſt of men; but how can this agree with the premiſes, wherein it is ſaid, That they were in deſert places, that did this; yet the word גרשו ſignifieth expelling, and if it be rendred ſo, how can the rendring taking be juſtified? The ſame word alſo ſignifieth Tollere, to take: But for the laſt clauſe, no reſpect is had to the Original by the Vulg. In regard of the proper meaning of the words, which are as in N. Tran. but to the ſenſe fitted to the words before going: But take me theſe words as they are; They cried after it, or upon the finding of it, As a Theef: For the word is עליו upon him or it: And therefore may be referred to the thing taken; read we then the whole Verſe thus; They took from the valley, they cried upon it as a theef. That is, Theſe hungerſtarved baſe men, little differing from Beaſts, take their food before ſpoken of from valleis in the Wilderneſſe, where if they finde any little food of Hearbs or Roots, they ſhout for joy; as a Theef robbing upon the way, for the booty or prey gotten by him, for ſo the word יריש ſignifieth: Hereby then is ſet forth, the extream want, wherein theſe miſcreants, of whom Job complaineth, were, who yet now inſulted over him in his want: And for Hereticks figured out by them, the meaning is, That they, if they can finde any ſentence in Scripture that ſeemeth to make for them, for this they exult, and utter themſelves accordingly, by exulting clamours, as if they had gotten the day: And by a Valley is the Scripture ſet forth, becauſe as a place, water cauſing ſing fructification in the faithfull, that by meditation, are planted by them.

Note.

To dwell in the clifts of the Valleis, &c. The Vulg. They dwel in the deſarts of the Brooks, in the caves of the earth. Vel ſuper gloriam. That is, A ſlippery place of a diſcent. Hebr. In the fracture of Brooks, to inhabite the holes of the duſt, and the Rocks; for the word is כפ'ם Rocks, from whence cometh the word Cephas, a Stone, which was given to Peter for a name. Having ſhewed the miſerable caſe of theſe deriders, in reſpect of their food; now he ſheweth it further in reſpect of their habitation, which was as baſe and harſh as their food; and if this be applied to Hereticks, they dewl in the ruptures of torrents or Brooks, or forſaken places thereof, becauſe the things which godly Teachers leave and vilely account of in compariſon, that is, Worldly things, upon them their hearts be fixed, as was partly touched before; for by the brooks of water may fruitfull Teachers be well ſet forth, becauſe by their teaching they water, and make men fruithfull as brooks by their overflowing the Ground. And they dwell in the holes of the duſt or Earth, becauſe they act many foul wickedneſſes in ſecret, ſeeking thus to hide them from the Eyes of men, and upon ſteep rocks, from whence upon the ſlipping of one foot, they fall down to the bottome and periſh. For thus wicked Hereticks in ſecret do many ſhamefull things, as Jude ſpeaketh; and both they, and ſuch as beleive their lies, fall into damnation at the laſt, as Paul teacheth.

Verſ. 6.

Joh. 1.

2 Theſ. 2. 8.

Under the buſhes they brayed. and under the nettles they were gathered together. Vulg. Who rejoyced in theſe things, and counted it a delight to be under thorns. But N. Tranſlat. agreeth beſt to the Hebrew words, only for nettles we may put thiſtles, and for braying, tumultuating or making a clamour, but by this noiſe made by them, their expreſſing of their joy is meant, in ſuch poor fare, and to be under buſhes in ſtead of better ſhelter, which is the caſe of every Vagabond: If we apply it to wicked Hereticks, they may be ſayd with joy to be together under Thorns or Thiſtles, becauſe worldly Goods and honour, which they ſeek after, are not without pricks of cares and fears mixed with their joy taken herein. For whoſoever, is mancipated to the world is like unto an Heifer uſed to the treading out of the Corn, which cometh willingly to this work and labour, for the love of the Corn from day to day. So it is ſayd of Epharim, that he was like to an heifer that treadeth out the corn, As the Iſraelites that loathed Manna, and preferred the Onions of Egypt, for what is this, but ſleighting of ſpirituall things, to go willingly about the getting of ſuch things as afterwards cauſe many Tears, as the Onyon bringeth water from the Eyes, for ſo ſhall worldly Goods unjuſtly gotten, or cheifly beloved, do to wordlings in the End, when through gaining the World they looſe their Soules, as Eſau wept and cryed when he ſaw, that for the meſſe of pottage ſo greatly Preferred by him, he loſt the bleſſing.

Verſ. 7.

Note.

Hoſ. 10

Note.

They were Children of fooles, yea of baſe men; and viler then the earthy: vulg. In terra penitus non parentes, but I think it ſhould be, Patentes, not appearing upon earth, That is, ſo low and baſe as the word נכא ſignifieth, as if hidden and obſcured within the earth, but upon it no way conſpicuous: ſome ſaith Gregory, are as fools, but noble, as the humble, who are content to be counted fools, by that fooliſhneſs which is called the fooliſhneſs of God, yet wiſer then the wiſdome of men, in that they deny all humane wiſedome, and forſake all things for Gods ſake, for ſuch are the ſons of God, and ſhall be as Judges at the laſt day ſitting upon Thrones with his Son: But others are fools and baſe alſo, that be worldly wiſe, for ſuch nobility is baſenes, as of thoſe that ly obſcurely under the Earth, having no more name upon it for ever; for they only appear upon earth that ſhew the inward virtue of their minds by their outward good doings, they appear not that do not.

Verſ. 8.

Gregory.
1 Cor. 1.

But now I am their ſong and by word, they abhor me, they flee far from me

Verſ. 9.

Verſ. 10. me, and ſpare not to ſpit in my face. Having thus deſcribed thoſe his Deriders, now he proceedeth to ſhew the diſgraces, by them done unto him; wherein there is nothing, that needeth Expoſition, but only by ſpitting in his face, he meaneth, by diſgracefull words; their ſpitting out of their venome againſt him: for ſo in affliction the wicked are ready always to calumniate the Righteous as Hypocrites, and now ſhewed to be without all true piety, what ſhew ſoever they made of Righteouſneſſe and Holineſſe.

Ver. 11. Becauſe thou haſt looſed my cord, and afflicted me, they have looſed the bridle before me. The vulg. He hath opened his quiver and afflicted me, and hath put a bridle in my mouth. Hebr. My cord is looſed, and he afflicteth me, and they take away the bridle from my face. But whether it be rendred Cord or Quiver, this is to the ſame Effect, the meaning being, that the cauſe of theſe baſe mens inſolencies againſt him, was, that God at this time ſhewed himſelf to be as an Enemy to him, not ſparing to let the Arrows of his diſpleaſure to flee at him, and peirce him fore, of which he complaineth, Chap. 5. 4. Some by the looſing of his Cord, underſtand that whereby men were before time held and kept as it were by a cord from ſuch irreverence and contempt: But I prefer the former which is Gregories, who ſaith, the quiver

Vatabl.

Gregor. keepeth the Arrows in ſecret till they be pulled out, and therefore, Job ſpeaketh hereof as hereby pointing at the ſecrecy of Gods Judgments, till he bringeth them forth, no man knowing before what he hath gainſt him; or to what end he ſmiteth him, till that he in time be pleaſed to reveal it: They take away the bridle, That is, whereby I ſhould be kept in, and made to refrain from ſpeaking ought againſt God through impatience, for theſe their inſolencies cauſed by my ſufferings, make me to break out in my ſpeech more then I ſhould do, ſo am I vexed hereby of this Bridle David ſpeaketh

Pſ. 39. ſaying, I did hold my mouth in as by a bit or bridle: or by taking away the bridle, underſtand theawe in which they formerly ſtood being in his preſence but now it was taken away ort caſt off.

Verſ. 12. Upon my right hand riſe the Youth, they puſh away my feet, and they raiſe up againſt me the waies of their deſtruction. Vulg. At the right hand of the Eaſt my calamities forthwith aroſe: & the word פרח ſignifieth to ariſe or flouriſh, & from riſing the Eaſt called Oriens hath the name, and youth or Childhood from a flower coming of this word. But for Calamities aroſe, Hebr. is nothing, but they aroſe, upon the right hand of the riſing they aroſe, That is,

Gregory. ſaith Gregor. Even from the people of God, who are ſet forth by the right hand calamities and ſufferings came to Chriſt, meant by the Eaſt; as the Prophets ſometime call him, for from whom came his ſufferings, but from the Jews, and he is the Son of Righteouſneſſe ariſing in the Eaſt, and his

Mal. 4. Star was ſeen in the Eaſt. They puſh away my feet. By feet, if we underſtand the inferiour ſort of Chriſtians who are as the feet of Chriſts Body the Church; in ſaying thus he meaneth in the perſon of Chriſt, they, that is, the Jews partly through ſubtile perſwaſions, and partly through fear, drive many of theſe weak ones away from me, as they did when they made them, who a little before had cryed to him Hoſanna, to cry out, Crucifie him, but then they brought them into the ways of their deſtruction, that they might all periſh together as many thouſands of the Jews did by the hands of the Romans, and before and after divers ways, and that not only bodily, but eternally through the ſame unbeleif, wherein they were all bound up together even to this time.

Verſ. 13. They marr my path, they ſet forward my calamity, they have no helper. Vulg. They have ſcattered my goings, they have wrought treacherouſly, and prevailed, and there was none to help. But Hebr. it is, There was no helper to them. And treachery ſpoken of in the Vulg. there is no word Hebr. but it is inſerted, and of the Tranſlators own head; for the ſenſe, it is, That they, Jobs baſe enemies before ſpoken of, put him to ſhame, and confounded him ſo by their inſolencies, that he knew not which way to take; and in ſaying, They had no helper, he meaneth as he ſaid before, they were miſerably poor, and deſtitute of all worldly comforts, and bleſſings, wherby they ſhould take ſuch courage unto them, thus to triumph over him in miſery, thus alſo Vatablus; yet ſome expound it thus; They need no help, they are ſtrong enough of themſelves to this: Some thus, They have none advantage or benefit hereby, but contrariwiſe it ſhall at length, redound to their own hurt, for ſo all the evil done by the wicked to the righteous, ſhall finally work to their greater and more juſt condemnation: According to that of the Apoſtle: Be terrified in nothing by your adverſaries, which to them is a cauſe of deſtruction, to you of ſalvation.

ed

Vatablus.

Note.

Phil. 1. 28.

They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters, in the deſolation they rolled themſelves upon me. Here are two ſimilitudes, whereby Job ſetteth forth how violently and ſwiftly his deſpiſers, before ſpoken of, came upon him; how violently by a great flood of waters, how ſwiftly by wheels, that run down an hill upon ſuch as are below over them and cruſhing them: Such a breach, ſaith Gregory, is made by all manner of ſin flowing over in the Church, when the wall of Diſcipline and Government is pulled down, Verſ. 15. He hath another ſimilitude taken from the winde, whereby his ſafty paſſeth away as a clond: For all grace wherein ſalvation lieth, is ſoon blown away, and the Church cometh to nothing, where it is thus, but is turned into a company of Sectaries, carried away by divers damnable errours, to perdition.

Verſ. 14.

Gregor.

Note.

Verſ. 15.

And now my Soule is powred out upon me, &c. Having ſet forth his miſery, by the things which he ſuffered at the hands of men; now Job proceedeth further aggravating them, by ſhewing, that within his own Soule and heart, he had alſo great perplexity, in regard of his bodily life, ſo much weakened, and his diſconſolate eſtate to God-ward, who ſeemed no other ſometimes to him, but as a cruel enemy, as Verſ. 21.

Verſ. 16.

From his Soule melting and affected with intollerable trouble, he proceedeth Verſ. 17. To his bones and ſinews, complaying of their being peirced and taking no reſt in the night; of like things to which he ſpake before.

Verſ. 17.

By the great force of my diſeaſe, my garment is changed, it bindeth me about, as the coller of my coate. By his garment here, his fleſh and skin is to be underſtood, which was ſo waſted and ſhrunk, that he was hereby girt up as it were about his throat, and made almoſt unable to ſpeak. Allegorically the Garment ſetteth forth, the Church, or Congregation of beleivers, many of whom through perſecution were changed, turning from the faith to Judaiſme or Idolitry, and their Teachers almoſt throtled by their enemies indeavouring to keep them from ſpeaking any more in the name of Jeſus: For of theſe it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt be clothed with all theſe as with an ornament. In ſpeaking of Chriſt, whoſe tipe Job was.

Verſ. 18.

Gregor.

Act. 4.

Iſa. 49.

He hath caſt me into the mire, and I am become like duſt and aſhes. That is, According to the allegory, I am in my members, that will not be changed, vilely accounted of as the very mire and duſt and aſhes troden under foot: For ſo the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, We are made as the filth of the World, and the offcouring of all things.

Verſ. 19.

1 Cor. 4. 13.

Thou art cruell to me, &c. Here he ſpeaketh of God as cruel, becauſe he ſhewed him no pitty, although he ſuffered ſuch greivous things, ſo Jeremiah 6. 23. 50. 42. It is ſaid, Cruel and not mercifull. But how could he ſay, that God was turned or changed to be cruell to him? For ſo it is, Hebr. and in Vulger Lat. When as there is with him no variableneſſe or ſhaddow of change, it is to be underſtood, that Job herein ſpake, as God ſeemed now unto him, his dealings towards him being ſo greatly altered as they were, before multiplying all bleſſings upon him, now all

Verſ. 21.

Iam. 1. 17.

ſorts

ſorts of miſeries, for to ſpeak properly, God never changeth, but is alwaies the ſame; and when he is ſaid to repent, it is ſo ſayd for mens repenting,
Ier. 18. 10. whereupon he doth not what he threatned, or promiſed; for even theſe his variable doings at ſundry times, are all by him appointed before from eternity, and they are but effects of the changes in us to evill or good.

Verſ. 22. Thou lifteſt me up to the winde, and cauſeſt me to ride upon it, and diſſolveſt my ſubſtance. Here Job further aggravateth his miſery, by comparing what he was now, with that which he had been formerly, then moſt high lifted up, for riding is often put for elevation in this World, and God is ſaid to come upon the wings of the winds, but now as low brought down: For he looked now for nothing but death, as Verſ. 23. 24.

Verſ. 24. Howbeit he will not ſtretch out his hand to the grave, although they cry in his deſtruction. Vulg. But thou doſt not put forth thy hand to my conſumption, although they fall, thou wilt ſave them. But thus it differeth far from the Hebrew, which is neither according to N. Tran. nor to it: For to render it word for word, it is, Alſo he will not ſend out his hand or prayer, if at his contrition there be a cry to them. For שׁ ſignifieth prayer, as well as a Tomb or Grave, but For this word להן rendred to them, it is to be noted, that it is a feminine, and the meaning is, of avoyding death before ſpoken of, I have no hope, for I cannot by prayer prevail with him, to ſend out his helping hand, to pluck me out of theſe dangers, neither ſhall any others have help, if when he ſmiteth, they ſhall woman-like cry out through impatience, and not patiently beare that which he laieth upon them: They that follow the Vulger Lat. are generally for this ſenſe, although God afflicteth his faithfull Servants to extreamity, yet it ſhal not finally be to their deſtruction but ſalvation.

Verſ. 25. Did not I weep for him that was in trouble. Here Job addeth one thing more, which made him marvel, that God did not yet commiſerate him, Viz. The compaſſion that he had in his proſperity towards the miſerable, Matth. 7. for what meaſure a man meteth to others, ſhall be meaſured to him again;
Matth. 5. And the mercifull ſhall obtain mercy: Thus did David; and of Gordianus an Emperour one writeth, that he would weep at the beating of a boy at ſchool: For this tenderneſſe of heart Job expected, that he ſhould likewiſe have been pitied now, but others uſed him clean contrariwiſe, as is ſaid, Verſ. 26.

Verſ. 27. My bowels boyled and reſted not, the daies of affliction prevented me. Gregory expounding this of the Church, whoſe bowels of compaſſion are moved towards his Children, that falling into ſin, are indangerd in reſpect of their Soules for ever: But the plain meaning is, through extream pain I had, as it were, an hot boyling within me, which extreamly tormented me, and that without ceaſing, a torment next unto that in Hell fire, and therefore intollerable.

Verſ. 28. I went mourning without the Sun, I ſtood up and cried in the Congregation. The vulg. Without favour or heat, through paſſion. That is, Silently, as bewailing my own death at hand, not ſeeing that any others were likely to do this funeral office to me: The word חמה here uſed may be derived either from חמם to heat, or from חמר whence חמה fury or wrath cometh; if it be rendred by fury, he hereby ſheweth his quiet bearing of Gods judgments, leaſt by being impatient and vexing hereat he ſhould incur his diſpleaſure more: A good example by us all, to be followed in our ſufferings. If by the Sun which is light and makes the day, but when it is away, it is night, he meaneth, in the night, having no reſpite from his ſorrow day or night, Without fury I cryed in the congregation. For ſo Gregory readeth it, dividing theſe words without fury, from thoſe that went before, and putting them to theſe, I cryed, &c. giving this for the ſenſe, I in my proſperity went mourning to ſee the wickedneſſe of men under my my dominion, and when I ſpake and reproved theſe in the Congregation, I did it without fury, in great patience and moderation: And I ſee nothing in the Text againſt this reading, and if his bowels boyling, ſpoken of, Verſ. 27. Set forth his compaſſion towards Sinners, all will well agree being ſo taken; but becauſe all this followeth after the evil that came to him for good, Verſ. 26. It is rather to be taken, as a continuation of his expreſſions of miſery, for his crying in the Congregation, the meaning of this may be gathered, Verſ. 9. where he ſaith; That he was a Brother to the Dragons and young Owles. Who make a dolefull noyſe, he being one, as it were of their company, cryed likewiſe, for the ſorrow of my heart. Verſ. 29.

My ſkin is black upon me, my bones are burnt with heat, my harp is turned to mourning. His extream torments, are here yet more ſet forth, as it were by fire: Gregory will have the falling away of many, in the time of Antichriſt, ſet forth through the heat of his perſecution, thus becoming as black and blaſted; and by bones the ſtronger Chriſtians, and by fleſh or skin the weaker, whereat all expreſſions of joy by muſicall inſtruments ſhall ceaſe in the Church, all that ſtand ſtill being filled with ſorrow and heavineſſe. Verſ. 30. Gregory.

CHAP. XXXI.

I Have made a Covenant with mine eies, why then ſhould I look upon a maid? The beginning of fleſhly concupiſcence is in the eyes, and the ſeeing thereof, and other outward ſenſes; for hereby as by windows, evil concupiſcence of all ſorts is let into the minde: And therefore Jeremy ſaith, Death hath come up by the windowes, and entred into our houſes. And of luſting coming by looking with the eyes, our Lord ſpeaketh ſaying, He that looketh upon a woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery already with her in his heart. And Peter ſpeaketh of eyes full of adultery, and John of the luſt of the eyes; which is, When the World is by the eyes let in to be beloved in the heart: It was by looking upon the forbidden Fruit, that Evah ſinned, and David ſaw Bathſhebah, whereby luſt was kindled; and Achan the wedge of Gold, and coveted it: Therefore to prevent evill luſt in the minde, theſe windowes muſt be ſhut, and men muſt not look upon that, which they may not luſt after: And thus the beginnings of evill are reſiſted, wherefore Job was extraordinarily carefull to keep his Veſſel in holineſſe, in that he exceeded the Law of Moſes, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery. And fulfilled the Law of Chriſt, by reſolving againſt looking upon a woman to luſt after her: And for any man not to do thus, is dangerous; as the next words declare, V. 2. For what portion of God is there from above, and what inheritance of the Almighty from an high? As if he had ſaid, If I ſhould have done otherwiſe, and by looking have been carried to luſting, I ſhould have had no part or portion in God, or in his heavenly Inheritance, into which no unclean thing ſhall enter: Yet it is to be underſtood, that it is one thing to be aſſaulted by fleſhly motions in the minde, and another thing to conſent by delighting herein, in the one caſe, a man only ſuffereth by an onſet, but giveth the repulſe; in the other he is ſubdued and bound: Wherefore the Apoſtle comforteth us in the one caſe, ſaying, No tentation hath befallen you, but humane. Hereby intimating, that whilſt we live here by reaſon of the corruption of our nature, we cannot but be tempted, yet if then we reſiſt, it is but humane, if we conſent it is deviliſh; and in ſtead of having any part in the inheritance on high, Deſtruction ſhall be to the wicked, and a ſtrange puniſhment to the workers of of iniquity. Vulg. Alienation to the workers of iniquity. And Hebr. it is, נכר ſignifying eſtranging, according to which it is ſaid of the wicked, Ephe. 2. 12. That they be ſtrangers from the common-wealth of Iſraell. And this ought to be a comfort to the righteous in their ſufferings, the wicked in the mean ſeaſon injoying their pleaſure, for they are but as Oxen, put into the beſt paſtures, to be fatted againſt the day of ſlaughter, theſe like to Oxen kept under the yoake which ſhall live: To them is given whatſoever they deſire here, becauſe they are as perſons deſperately ſick, to theſe the Phyſitian is more ſtrict, and denied things deſired, that they may be healed and live, there being no hope of them, but that they muſt dye: They go through green and pleaſant waies to the pit, theſe through rough waies to their heavenly country; and becauſe the wicked ſhall have nothing to do here, but as ſtrangers be ſhut out, they are ſpoken of accordingly: Alienation ſhall be to them, That Inheritance ſhall be as a thing alienated from them.

Verſ. 1. Ier. 9. Math. 5. 28. 2 Pet. 2. 14. 1 Ioh. 2. 15. Gen. 3. 2 Sam. 12. Ioſh. 7. Verſ. 2. Revel. 22. 1 Cor. 10. Verſ. 3.

Verſ. 4. Doth not he ſee my waies, and count all my ſteps? According to this David ſpeaketh, Pſal. 139. And by waies, ſaith Gregory, Mens doings are to be underſtood, by ſteps all particular paſſages in the courſe of their lives, the moſt minuite of which God keeps account of, as may be gathered from that ſaying of our Lord; Who ſo is angry with his Brother unadviſedly, ſhall be in danger of judgment; he that ſaith Racha, of a councell, but he that ſaith thou fool, of Hell fire. So that not only the fouleſt reproaching in wrath is ſet upon the ſcoare, but the thought of the minde: And in this the ſight of God in looking into our waies, exceedeth the ſeeing of all others, in that he ſeeth thoſe evils in us, that we cannot ſee, to puniſh them, and to the comfort of the righteous he ſeeth every good thing by them done in ſecret to reward them.

Note.
Matth. 5. 25.

Matth. 6.

Verſ. 5. If I have walked with vanity, or my foot hath haſted to deceit;
Verſ. 6. Let me be weighed in an even ballance, that God may know my integrity: God is ſayd to know what is in man, when he maketh him to know it, for he doth not come to know any thing in time, but all things from Eternity: Thus he ſaid to Abraham, now I know that thou feareſt me, when he went to offer up his Son Iſaack at his command, that is, now be it known to thee that I take notice of thy obedient mind, and declare the ſame unto thee, that thou mayſt know it to thy comfort, and confirmation of thy faith. So Job deſireth, that he might be dealt withall, that God by appearing and ſpeaking in his behalf, might make it known to him, that notwithſtanding all his ſufferings he favoured him, and there ſhould be a good Iſſue of them: And becauſe herein he deſired but to be dealt with according to the uprightneſs of his heart, he prayed that he might be weighed in Gods ballance, which he knew was juſt and equall, and not in the unequall ballance of men. Gregory by the ballance here underſtandeth Chriſt in whom a man is weighed when he liveth according to the Example which he hath given him, according to that of Peter; Chriſt hath ſuffered for us, leaving us an example, that we ſhould follow in his ſteps. And at him Paul ſaith, as at the Authour and finiſher of our faith, we are to look, that as he looked at the glory and deſpiſed or ſet light by the ſhame, ſo we ſhould do in all our ſufferings; Job then in wiſhing that he were weighed in the ballance, deſireth that his life might be examined according to this pattern, either for his doing good or patiently ſuffering evil, or fleeing all ſin ſo far forth, as a man yet having fleſh in him as well as ſpirit, could do: For it is not with the beſt man living here as with Chriſt, in whom was no ſinn, but in every man is ſin, only in the Righteous ſuch as Job was, it raigneth not, that the luſts of it ſhould be by them fullfilled: It is, but it is reſiſted, cut off as it were to the root, but not ſuffered to ſpring up, according to that Exhortation; Let no root of bitterneſs ſpring up to trouble you.

Gregor.

1 Pet. 2.
Heb. 12.

Rom. 6.

Heb. 12. 16.

Verſ. 7. If my ſtep hath turned out of the way, if my heart hath walked after mine eyes, eyes, if any blot hath cleaved to my hands. After declaring his innocent and upright living, now Job cometh to purge himſelf by imprecation, and becauſe he had diſclaimed all going out of the way with his foot, the letting in of luſt into his Heart by his Eyes, and threatned the workers of iniquity with deſtruction, he mentioneth theſe three in his conditionall curſing of himſelf.

Firſt, If my ſtep hath turned out of the way, Becauſe a man ſteppeth with his feet, but then doth his ſtep turn out of the way, when an evill Cogitation ariſing in his mind, he conſenteth to it, his Heart goeth after his Eyes, when as unawares by looking upon a mayd, as was before ſayd; his heart is inflamed with concupiſence; and a blot cleaveth to his hands, when he worketh any evill by doing any injuſtice or wrong, or not with his hands & goods gotten herewith help others in their neceſſities, for upon both theſe he dilateth himſelf further in the verſes following: For both he and every good man hath evill thoughts ariſing in his mind, and their eyes in things, whereby the heart is tempted; but neither doth the heart follow the eyes nor the feet nor hands, when ſuch motions are valiantly reſiſted. The meaning is, that Job went as far in fighting and conquering ſin, as humane infirmity poſſibly could, and ſo muſt every one do that would have a part in God, as was before ſayd.

Then let me ſow, and another eat, yea let my off-ſpring be rooted out. There is no difficulty in the underſtanding of this according to the Letter, to this judgment he layeth himſelf open, that is, wicked in his Heart or works, if he laboureth in tilling the ground whereof increaſe cometh, to have it taken away and devoured by others; as it was with the wicked Jews, of whom the Prophet in ſetting forth their judgments, ſaith, Your land ſtrangers devour it in your preſence; and as the fruits of the Earth ſhall not ſtand by him, ſo ſhall not his poſterity, but be rooted out alſo, to make whom rich he feared not to commit ſo great wickedneſs, as they are in the Pſalms often curſed in themſelves and in their Children alſo. Allegorically this is applyed to wicked Paſtors and Teachers, for every Teacher is a ſower of the ſeed of the word; but if he doth not according to that which he teacheth others, he ſoweth and eateth not, but others eat, into whoſe hearts this good ſeed falling moveth them to bring forth fruit, of which they have comfort, as one that is hungry of his eating good bread: For to eat is to do according to teaching, therefore he not doing, but teaching only, eateth not of that which he ſoweth and ſo is ſtarved in his own Soul. And becauſe they who are moved to do after a while ſeeing his evill Example fall from doing good again to evill as he doth, they are like to the poſterity of a man accurſed, which are rooted out, becauſe they fall away again from the Grace whereby they ſtood, being now as trees plucked up by the roots, as Jude ſpeaketh of degenerating brethren. Such a Teacher is like unto the woman that was the Mother of the dead Childe, which ſhe had killed by overlaying it in her ſleep, ſo he falling aſleep in ſin, contrary to his teaching, whereby he had brought forth ſome Children, overlayeth them as it were by the weight of his wickedneſs and killeth them again: But as this Mother ſtrove with the Mother of the living Child to have it, ſo Preachers, that be of a wicked life ſtrive to get ſuch as are converted by faithfull Teachers to themſelves, that they may have the glory of them, but Solomon called for a Sword, and then it was ſoon diſcerned, who was the true Mother; ſo the ſtrict Judge of all the World by the Sword of his Judgment at the laſt ſhall determine of this matter, rightly, the godly Preacher going away with the Glory of Children converted and living conſtantly, the life of Grace by his good teaching and Example, and ſuch ambitious Teachers that live wickedly with ſhame and confuſion for ever: How aptly this of Gregory written above a 1000. years ago, agreeth to our Gatherers of Churches ſprung up of late dais let any unpartiall Reader judge, and therefore not be ſeduced by them,

Verſ. 8.

Iſa. 1. 7.

Gregor. Math. 13.

Note. Jude Epiſt.

and let them he aſhamed of this their ambitious way now; that they may not be finally put to ſhame for ever.

Verſ. 9. Ver. 10. Ver. 11. If my heart hath been deceived by a woman, if I have laid wait at my neighbours door, Let my wife grind to another, vulg. Let my wife be an whore to another. For this is an hainous crime; an iniquity to be puniſhed by the judges. V. 12. It is a fire that conſumeth to deſtruction, &c. Here Job purgeth himſelf from the moſt hainous ſin of Adultery, as he had before profeſſed his chaſtity in his very thoughts: For this is a far more foul ſin, although very looking upon a woman to luſt after her be adultery in heart, and therefore he calleth it a crime which is much more then that which is called a ſin, ſith that no man liveth and ſinneth, but the Righteous man committeth no crime; For then he is faln from his Righteouſneſs, as is taught, Ezek. 18.

1 Joh. 3. 9. 10. And is condemned for a Child of the Devill: For theſe words, An iniquity to be judged by the Iudges. Vulg. Iniquitas maxima, Hebr. פלילים Of judgments; That is, ſuch a crime judgments, that is, alone making a man guilty of many great ſinnes, and therefore ſubjecting him to many judgments: The Adulterer, ſaith Chriſoſt. is both a covetous perſon and a Theif; for which Adultery being ſpoken againſt by the Apoſtle, he addeth alſo theft and covetouſneſs: And Solomon comparing an Adulterer with a Theif that ſtealeth for his neceſſity, ſheweth him to be more abominable. but I ſhal add no more here becauſe I have more fully ſet forth the odiouſneſs of this ſin in my Catechiſme upon Com. 7.

Chryſoſt. 1 Cor. 6. 9. 10. Prov. 6. 30.

Verſ. 13. If I did deſpiſe the cauſe of man ſervant or maid ſervant, when they did contend with me. Job being ſo admirable for continency, and other virtues that ſhone in him, and ſo bleſſed of God and advanced, as was ſayd, Chap. 29. 8. 9. 10. leaſt he ſhould be thought yet to have been proud; eſpecially becauſe he ſpake ſo diſdainfully of ſome poor men, Chap. 30. 1. 2. 3. Now he purgeth himſelf from this ſin of pride, which is moſt incident to thoſe, that are rich and in authority, eſpecially being alſo eminent for other virtues: For what greater humility then to be willing to come to plead and contend in judgment with his own poor Servants, as not making account of himſelf to be any other by nature but as they are, and one that ſhall come naked before the great Judge at the laſt day as well as they, no difference being put between Princes and Beggers then, but all without any reſpect of perſons, proceeded alike againſt, as they ſhall be found to have done good or evil; and that theſe were Jobs conſiderations which made him humble, appeareth, V. 14. 15.

Verſ. 14. What ſhall I do then when God riſeth up? and when he viſiteth, what ſhall I anſwer him? The vulg. to expreſs it more, hath it, When God riſeth up to judge; implying that at the day of judgment he that hath been proud and lifted up in his minde for any virtue wherewith he was indued, or for any wealth or authority that he had over other men in this world, ſhall not be able to anſwer it, but muſt ſpeechleſs be caſt as low down then as he had by pride lifted up himſelf on high in this world.

Verſ. 15. Did not he that made me in the womb, make him? By nature all men are alike, for the ſame God made all, as Solomon alſo ſaith, The rich and the poor meet together, and God is the maker of them both. Which he ſeemeth to have taken from this place; God did not at the firſt give one man dominion over another, but he bad man rule over the Beaſts of the field, the Fowles of the aire, and the Fiſhes of the Sea. But by divine providence, in regard of the ſinnes of men, ſome have ſince been ſet up to rule, to whom others muſt be obedient, that ſin might be the more ſuppreſſed, and all things amongſt men the better ordered; yet even they that are in authority, muſt ever remember, that it is not for themſelves, that they are thus advanced, to ſwell in pride and to deſpiſe thoſe over whom they rule, but for their profit and good; they being at their firſt coming into the World in all things like unto them, and the time ſhall come, when they

Gregor. Note. Gen. 1. 28.

they ſhall again be depoſed and made like the pooreſt, together with them to ſtand before Gods judgment Seat: And therefore walk humbly, although by taking gravity and auſterity upon them towards ſinners, as neceſſity requireth, they bare themſelves on high to the terrifying of all ſuch, that they may be in their places reverenced, as Job had been; yet in humility of minde, making themſelves equal to the loweſt, not diſdaining them in their juſt pleadings againſt them, or addreſſes to them in the way of equity and right; both then in all men muſt go together, continency and humility, integrity and humility, and charity and humility: For whatſoever light of virtue ſhineth in thee, if it be not joyned with humility, it is darkneſſe and no light, as humility without virtue, is but hypocriſie and baſe flattery.

If I have withheld the poor from their deſire, or have cauſed the Widdows eyes to fail, &c. Having ſpoken of his pleading the cauſe of the poor, Chap. 29. Now next to his humility, he purgeth himſelf from all aſperſion of unmercifulneſſe, declaring, to the ſtopping of his calumniators mouths, his charity: And here be two poynts of charity. 1. Giving to the poor. 2. Doing this readily and without delay; for he made not the eyes of poor widdows to fail, by long waiting for that, which they hoped to have given them: And herein every good Chriſtian muſt be like unto Job, to give, and to give readily to thoſe that be in neceſſity, according to his ability. Ver. 16.

Or have eaten my morſel alone, and the fatherleſſe hath not eaten thereof; For from my youth he was brought up with me, and I have guided her, &c. Having ſpoken of his charity, and ready giving to the poor, and in particular to the widdow, he here addeth, which was before omitted, the fatherleſſe, repeating his mercy to the widdow again in ſaying, Guided her: For towards fatherleſſe and widdowes eſpecially muſt mercy be ſhewed, and charity exerciſed, and in what love he did this, he ſheweth by ſaying, He was brought up with me as a Father. Of which title ſee Chap. 29. 16. Verſ. 17.

If I have ſeen any periſh for want of cloathing, &c. Of feeding the hungry he ſpake, Verſ. 17. 18. Now of cloathing the naked, which is another act of charity, Math. 25. Verſ. 19. 20.

If I have lift up my hand againſt the fatherleſſe, when I ſaw my help in the gate. Let mine arme fall from my ſhoulder-blade. The vulg. When I ſaw my ſelf ſuperior in the gate. That is, If any poor fatherleſſe perſon, contended with me in Law, and the right was judged to be on my ſide, yet I took not the advantage againſt him, that I might have done; but conſidering the judgment to come, wherein if God ſhould lift up his hand againſt me, and deale with me as he might in juſtice; I dealt by him in mercy, as I deſire then to be dealt with: A notable leſſon for all men that go to Law, if they have overcome, not to be extream, to take all the advantage by the Law given unto them; the contrary to which is moſt commonly practiſed: And for the Gate here ſpoken of, where cauſes are judged at the enterance of Cityes, Gregory noteth well, that it was to good purpoſe thus ordered, that men at difference ſhould here be judged, and cenſured, to teach ſuch as come to live in the City that they ſhould live together in concord: And excellent are his motions about charity, to the poor, upon Verſ. 17. 18. Following the Vulg. Wherein it is: If I deſpiſed him that paſſed by, becauſe he had no cloathing. And the Hebrew word ראה ſignifieth as to look or ſee, ſo to ſee with contempt: According to Jobs example, let the rich man, who giveth clothing or food to the hungry or naked, take heed, that he overthroweth not his charity by doing it with diſdain, in regard of his poor and miſerable eſtate: For the poor to whom thou giveſt, are not to be looked upon only as they now are, but as they ſhall hereafter be in Heaven, rich and heirs of that Kingdome Verſ. 21. Verſ. 22. Note. Gregor.

Jam. 2. 5. dome, and therefore, for whom thou ſhouldſt do a little here, that when thou ſhalt be turned out from all thy worldly Wealth naked and poor, and from thy houſe here, they may be thy freinds and receive thee into heavenly habitations hereafter, as the Debters to whom the unjuſt Steward Luk. 16. was beneficiall did him being turned out of his ſtewardſhip: They are then to be lookt upon not as baſe deſpicable perſons, but as Patrons, which ſhall be one day able to do more for thee by far, then thou doſt for them, thy giving to them being as a ſowing of ſeed upon a faithfull ground, that will yeild an hundred fold increaſe, and what is it that thou ſoweſt, but things temporall; and what the things be reaped but eternall? Led thus being turned into Silver, and Copper into Gold. But this is not to be underſtood of all that be naked and hungry and poor, but with whoſe poverty Math. 5. is joyned poverty of ſpitit, and Hunger and thirſt after Righteouſneſs, whoſe is the Kingdome of Heaven; and who ſhall have to do there, they of whom Chriſt ſaith, whereas ye did it to my poor members ye did it to me, who theſe poor be I have ſhewed elſewhere.

Verſ. 23. For deſtruction from God was a terrour to me, and by reaſon of his highneſs I could not indure. Having ſpoken of many good things that were in him, Continency, humility, Charity, and Equity, now Job cometh to ſhew that all theſe came not from himſelf, but from the fear of God and his grace keeping him in continuall awe, even in his proſperity, ſo that he durſt not do any otherwiſe, leaſt deſtruction ſhould befall him, and the high Majeſty of God, when he ſhould appear to judge him, ſhould prove terrible to him. For the fear of God which maketh one to flee ſin and to do good, is not ſlaviſh, but filiall, and a great grace of God, and the very ſame with love, ac- Pſal. 97. 10. cording to that of the Pſalmiſt, Ye that love the Lord, hate the thing that is evill.

Verſ. 24. Col. 3. 5. If I have made gold my hope, &c. Here Job purgeth himſelf from another evill; viz. Of the Idolatry of covetouſneſs, as the Apoſtle calleth it. For he that truſteth in worldly riches cannot truſt in God or have him for his God, but turneth to an Idol or falſe God, for which it is given us in charge, Pſ. 62. 10 Prov. 23. 5. If riches increaſe ſet not thy heart thereon, And he that doth ſo, fixeth his hope upon the waters, which flow away, or upon that which is winged, as an Eagle that flyeth away ſuddenly.

Verſ. 26. If I beheld the Sun when it ſhined, and the Moon walking in brightneſſe: Many have been notorious Idolaters for their worſhipping of the Sun, Moon, and Stars; therefore Job having purged himſelf from the Idolatry of Covetouſneſs, now purgeth himſelf alſo from all guilt in reſpect of this Idolatry committing with the hoaſt of Heaven, but becauſe there ſeemed to be no need that he ſhould thus purge himſelf, ſeeing there was not in Gregory. any the leaſt ſuſpition of his running into ſo groſſe a Crime, he being ſo devout a worſhipper of God as he was, there muſt needs ſayth, Gregory, ſomewhat elſe be meant hereby, and that is, his not delighting in the glorious lights of this world in compariſon of the everlaſting light of Heaven: Although then he looked at theſe lights, and was hereby comforted, yet his delight herein was nothing to that, which he took in the light of Gods countenance, and his favour clearly ſhining upon him, and yet this is The Allegory. not all, which is here meant, but allegorically by the Sun ſhining his good Matth. 5. 16. works are meant, for of ſuch it is ſayd, Let the light of your good works ſo ſhine before men, &c. Now at this ſhining light the faithfull with Job look not when they are not in their hearts lifted up for them, but referr all to the Glory of God. By the Moon in the brightneſs thereof the praiſe of men which the faithfull have for wiſdome or excellent gifts, or their good deeds, and at this they look not neither, who are not hereby lifted up by pride but are ſtill of an humble heart. Or becauſe the light of the Sun ſhineth by day, and the Moon by night, it may be alſo underſtood of the praiſes of the Righteous and the praiſes of the Wicked, for the Faithfull look not at the praiſes of the one or of the other, to be puffed up hereby, but rather are humbled and ſorry, remembring him that hath ſaid: Woe to you when all men ſpeak well of you, &c. For thus Phermio an Orator, that was but an Heathen man, having made an Oration, and therefore praiſed of all men, wept, ſaying, That he feared he had not well ſpoken, becauſe it was applauded by all: For his kiſſing of his hand with his mouth, this he ſaith, he did not, as ſome, who having done well, applaud the works of their hands with their own mouths, there being nothing to move them ſo to do, but their own vain glory: But according to the letter, if by the looking at the Sun or Moon, idolatry be underſtood, and looking at them to worſhip them; by his hand kiſſed by his mouth, the kiſſing of the hand is meant, which is done with a congee, by way of reverence: For theſe words: If my heart hath been ſecretly inticed. Hereby he meant not only that he was not puffed up to carry himſelf proudly at any thing that was good in him, nor at mens praiſes, or praiſed himſelf with his mouth, but that he did not ſo much as entertain an high thought of himſelf in his heart; for not only the waies before ſpoken of are heinous, and ſhall be judged, and all that walk therein, as followeth, Verſ. 28. but even proud and high thoughts of a mans ſelf, although they never break out into Action. Luk. 6. 26. Verſ. 27.

praiſes

This were an iniquity to be puniſhed by the Judg, for I ſhould have denyed the God that is above. Of iniquity to be judged, ſee before, Verſ. 11. Whereas he ſaith, I ſhould have denyed God, the meaning is, whoſoever taketh praiſe to himſelfe for any good in him, or done by him, carryeth himſelfe as the Author hereof, and ſo in effect denyeth the true Author, God, from whom he received ſtrength ſo to doe. For that of the Apoſtle is true touching every man: What haſt thou that thou haſt not received: and if thou haſt received it, why boaſteſt thou thy ſelf as if thou hadſt not received it? Verſ. 28. 1 Cor. 4. 7.

If I rejoyced at the deſtruction of him that hated me, or lifted up my ſelf when evill found him, neither have I ſuffered my mouth to ſin by wiſhing a curſe to his ſoul. Now hee cometh to another ſingular vertue in him, love to his very Enemies, touching which a man would wonder, how hee came to know, that hee ought thus to do, having not yet heard that place, Love your enemies, and thoſe that hate you. But the Spirit of God inſtructed him herein, and not to curſe, but bleſſe, as the Apoſtle teacheth: So that Job was as one living in the time of the Goſpel, long before either Law or Goſpel, whereby it appeareth that the will of God, and the teaching of his Spirit was alwayes the ſame, the new commandement being none other but the old, as St. John ſpeaketh. But how may that of the Pſalmiſt then be juſtified, The righteous ſhall rejoyce at the vengeance. Gregory anſwereth, we muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt an Enemy and a wicked man; for every one that is our Enemy is not wicked, neither is every wicked man our Enemy. Moreover it is one thing to rejoyce at deſtruction coming to a wicked man, who if he had continued would have oppreſſed the faithfull, and upon whoſe fall better men are advanced to rule and authority, and another to rejoyce hereat, becauſe he is my Enemy in particular, and therefore hated by me: For this is a wickedneſſe, but to rejoyce when wicked men fall for the ſake of others righteous, that were oppreſſed by him, is no ſin; but it is a thing whereat we ought to be effected with joy, and generally at the rooting out of the wicked, becauſe the ſtate of the Church is thus bettered, but we muſt take heed that it be not for any private enmity betwixt them and us. Math. 5. 45. 1 Joh. 2. 7. Pſ. 58. 10. Gregor.

If the men of my tabernacle ſaid not, Oh that we had of his fleſh wee cannot be ſatisfied. Verſ. 31.

Theſe words are added to the former, Verſ. 29, 30. further to commend his love towards thoſe that hated him; for although he were put on by his domeſticks, who ſeeing their Maſter deſpitefully uſed, would have been revenged, by tearing the fleſh of ſuch his Enemies; yet he was not moved hereby, but but contained and kept them in from violence using against them, as David did Joab from doing execution upon Shimei, that railed upon him; and Christ his Disciples that would have had fire cal'd for from heaven to destroy the Samaritans that would not receive him offering to come into their City. Thus Isidor. also & Cajetan. Gregor. expoundeth it of the malignity of his own servants towards whom notwithstanding he was patient; as he shewed love towards Enemies abroad, so he did towards these that were malevolous against him in his own house: wherein he saith, that Job was a type of Christ, the Jews whom he calleth his own, amongst whom he came, persecuted him, and sought his life, and could not be satisfied without crucifying him in the flesh: But others who were converted to the faith, both of Jews and Gentiles, loved and longed for that flesh of his, of which he said, My flesh is meat indeed. And in saying, When shall we be satisfied with his flesh, is intimated, that the truly faithfull should think, that they had never eaten enough thereof, but still desire it from time to time.

Isidor. Cajetan. Gregor.

The Allegory.

Vers. 32. The stranger did not lodg in the streets, but I opened my doors to the travellers. Here Job sets forth his hospitality to strangers, doing herein like unto Lot, and as the Apostle exhorteth, and the Prophet Isaiah likewise. But as Gregorie saith, it is to be noted, that he speaketh first of his pacifick disposition towards his Enemies, and then of his hospitality, because the heart must first be made clean from malice and wrath, and then charity is to be exercised, that we may be accepted; the person must first please God, and then he will be pleased with his doings, but not otherwise, as it is to be noted in Cain and Abell, God had respect to Abell and his Sacrifice, &c.

Gen. 18. Heb. 13. Isa. 5. 8.

Var. 33. If I covered my trangressions, as Adam. Here another virtue in Job is set forth for our learning, not conceal or hide, but to confesse our sinnes before men: According to that of James; Confesse your sinnes one to another, and pray one for another.

Iam. 5.

Vers. 34. Did I feare a great multitude, or did the contempt of families terrifie me? That I kept silence and went not out of the door. That is, In confessing my sinnes, I regarded not the shame and contempt, that I exposed my self unto, by reason of the multitude standing by to heare it; In saying which he intimateth, that such as had sinned, then used to confesse their sinnes in the Congregation, as it is said, That they who came to Johns baptisme, were with him confessing their sinnes, and they that had sinned by curious arts in Ephesus, came and confessed their sinnes before all men, and burnt their Books: From whence yet cannot be inferred auricular confession to a Priest, but penitent confession of a mans sinnes, whereby others have been scandalized in the Congregation, that the bond in sin may be loosed: For his going out of the door, it is another phrase to expresse the same confessing with his mouth, which is as it were a door of utterance, and then doth a man go out of his door, when he either refraineth not for shame to confesse his sinnes openly, or to confesse and stand to the truth beleived; he that hideth them, doth like Adam, when he brought himself and us all into misery, and nothing is more natural to men to do likewise: But if we would be forgiven, we must not hide them either from God or man, it being better to be put to shame here for a time, then to confusion hereafter for ever.

Luk. 3.

Act. 19. 18. 19.

Note.

Ephe. 6. 19.

Prov. 28. 13.

Vers. 35. That mine adversary had written a Book. Many times before Job desired, that he might come before God, and that he might have answer from him, and the like he doth now again; And here he beginneth to draw to a conclusion of his speech, so continuing it, Vers. 36. 37. Wherein he desireth nothing else in effect, but that his adversaries, and he might be judged by God speaking from Heaven, all that he had said being written in a Book, and what they had said in way of calumniating him: For so he doubted not but his adversaries themselves being the writers, if they would set down all, that he had said truly; he should be justified and they condemned.

demned: Then ſhould he weare their calumnies as a Crown, being not diſgraced, but rather honoured thereby, God taking his part againſt them. Ver. 36.

I would declare unto him the number of my ſteps, as a Prince would I go neare unto him. Vulg. Throughout all my ſteps I will declare it, and offer it as to a Prince. The Hebrew may indifferently be rendred either way, but this laſt ſeemeth to have beſt ſenſe, the meaning being, That he had ſuch a confidence in the clearneſſe of his conſcience, to be by the Judge juſtified, that he would upon his appearing with all ſpeed, offer it to that high and mighty Prince, being ready with all willingneſſe to heare his ſentence. Verſ. 37.

If my Land cry againſt me, or the furrows thereof complain. If I have eaten the fruits thereof without money, or cauſed the owners thereof to looſe their life. Then let it bring forth Thiſtles in ſtead of Wheat, and Cockle in ſtead of Barley. This ſaith Gregory, is ſuch a ſpeech, as that it cannot be underſtood according to the letter, for whoſe land or furrows ever complained againſt him, for eating his own fruits growing thereupon, without laying out money for them: It muſt therefore be underſtood allegorically thus, By Job ſpeaking this, a Rector of a Church is ſet forth, by this land and furrows, the People over whom he is ſet; ſome yeilding him leſſe maintenance, and ſome more; as the furrow yeildeth leſſe Corn then the redge: Againſt that Rector then, that taketh maintenance and preacheth not diligently to his People, both rich and poor cry out as moſt unconſcionable: For he eateth their fruits without paying money; that is, Exerciſing ſpiritual husbandry amongſt them, which is the price, that as money he ought to give: And becauſe for want of this agriculture, they from whom his maintenance cometh, looſe the life of their Soule through ignorance, infidelity, and many wickedneſſes wherein they are left for want of illumination and ſanctification by the word; he ſaith further, and cauſed the owners thereof, to looſe their life. Then let me have thiſtles for wheat, and thornes for barley. So the Vulg. that is, Let me both be roughly handled and put to ſmart and pain from men; and to be accurſed from God for ever: And what Job here ſaith, ſhall be fulfilled, to all ſuch Paſtors as feed themſelves, but labour not in this husbandry, the care whereof is committed unto them; and this Allegory from the ground to the people, is more confirmed by the parable of the Sower: When ſome fell upon good ground, &c. Becauſe the ground is there expounded to be the hearers of the word: But although Gregory could finde none but an allegorical ſenſe in theſe words, yet other Expoſitors have; Job having made an end of ſpeaking of his virtues, in all other things againſt the calumnies of theſe men, now becauſe there might one thing more be objected againſt him, Viz. That he attained not to all his wealth ſo juſtly, but that there were poor labouring men, that tilled his ground, whom he had not ſatisfied, by paying them for their labour, as it is complained of cruel owners of Corn, Jam. 5. 1. That they who laboured in reaping their feilds, whoſe wages was kept back, cryed againſt them; he finally purgeth himſelf from this: And then the crying of the land and furrows, is to be taken, as ſpoken by a Proſopoeia, as the earth, upon which Abels bloud was ſpilt, cried againſt Cain therefore: And for the words following; Or cauſed the owners thereof to looſe their life. Vulg. Afflicted the Soule of the husband-men. Hebr. Made the Soule of the Owners, or Lords thereof to fail. The meaning is, If I have taken the fruits of other mens grounds, and hereupon lived deliciouſly, as is the manner of many Rulers to do, and it ſtands them all in hand diligently to conſider, whether at this day they do ſo or no, to the pampering of their own bodies, with their impoveriſhment; Then let the ground bring forth, &c. That is, let it be to me accurſed ſo, as that I may never reap any Verſ. 38. Verſ. 39. Verſ. 40. Gregor. Matth. 13. Gen. 4. Vatablus.

plentifull increaſe of it any more; but as Cain, When I expect wheat have Thiſtles, &c.

CHAP. XXXII.

BEING now to enter upon the long oration of Elihu, continued ſix Chapters together, becauſe no mention hath yet been made of him amongſt other of Jobs friends; it is neceſſary to inquire how he came to be one amongſt them, and when and upon what occaſion he came, and who he was: For his coming, it is conceived, that it was after that he heard of the going of the other three by conſent to viſit Job, they being all Kings and wiſe men; he thought, that he would alſo go to heare their conferences, not doubting, but that he ſhould heare many wiſe ſentences uttered amongſt them, whereby he might benefit his underſtanding: For his perſon, he is ſet forth by his name Elihu, ſignifying, He is my God: Olympiodorus ſaith, God hearing: But wherefore he interpreteth it ſo, I know not, it may alſo be rendred, He is my ſtrength. An excellent name, and therefore the name of many of the people of God, as of the Grand-Father of Samuel, of a certain Prince of the Tribe of Manaſſeth, of the Nephew of Obed-Edom, and of the brother of David: And not only his name is ſet down, but more then is ſaid of any of the other three, his ſtock whereof he came. The Son of Barachel, a Buzite of the kindred of Ram. Whereby it ſeemeth, that he was by Original a Son of Nahor, the Brother of Abraham: For his Sons are ſaid to be Hus and Buz; ſo Philip, Necetas, Beda, but Gregory ſaith, That he is called a Buzite, from a City of the Auſitidan countrey, and this is more probable, becauſe he is ſaid after this, to be of the kindred of Ram therefore an Buzite, called from the City whereof haply he was Ruler: But ſome, and Jerom eſpecially place the Anſitidan region in Idumea: Touching Ram, ſome think, that this was one name of Abraham, firſt called Ram, when he was in Ur of the Caldees, then Abram after he was come out, and God promiſed to exalt him, for Abram ſignifieth an high Father. Laſtly, Abraham a Father of many Nations, for this maketh the Cald. Pharaph. which hath it, Of the kindred of Abraham. And this is followed by Jerome, Beda, and Philippus: If the queſtion be, whether he were not of the kindred of that Ram mentioned in the genealogy of David, who came of Pharez, it is anſwered, no; For that Ram lived long after. Gregory upon the Name, Countrey, and Kindred of Elihu, allegorizeth thus, Elihu, ſignifying He is my God. Is the name of this arrogant man, who had the knowledge of God indeed, and boaſted not a little hereof, but by reaſon of his pride and ſelf-conceitedneſſe, he was a type of all ſuch as lift up themſelves, and are proud of their knowledge; for which he is alſo ſaid to be of the kindred of Ram, Excelſus, or High, for high-mindedneſſe, and therefore though he were the Son of Barachel, ſignifying, Bleſſed of God, yet he is a Buzite, that is contemptible, for God deſpiſeth the proud and giveth grace to the humble; and therefore it is to be noted, That when Job was bidden to ſacrifice for the other three, no ſacrificing for Elihu is ſpoken of, but Who is this, ſaith the Lord, that darkeneth counſell by words without knowledge? Where in ſaying, Who is this? He ſpeaketh as to reprobates at the laſt day: Depart yee workers of iniquity, I know you not. A man of excellent parts then to ſpeak, although he be herein the Son of bleſſing, for his eloquence and ready utterance of things pertaining to the knowledge of God, yet if he be proud, is contemptible and vile in Gods account, and one for whom there is no ſacrifice, as there is for thoſe, that have gone aſtray through errour, but afterwards

1 Sam. 1.
2 Cron. 12. 10.
1 Cron 26. 7.
Chap. 27. 18.
Verſ. 2.
Gen. 22. 21.
Gregor.
Hugo.
Tho: Aqui.
Hyeron.
Cald.
Pharaph.
1 Cron. 2. 9. 1.
Gregor.
Note.
Jam. 4. 6.
Chap. 42. 2.
Matth 27. 1.
Iam. 5. 18.

wards have been turned: For the words of v. 1. So theſe three men ceaſed to anſwer Iob, becauſe he was righteous in his own eys: It is not meant that he was ſo indeed, but in their opinion, for he confeſſed that he had ſinned divers times: Touching Elihu it is ſayd alſo, that he was angry with Job becauſe he juſtified himſelf, and with his freinds becauſe they found not what to ſay more againſt Job, whom they had all condemned to make good their aſſertion, and herein he did afrer the manner of a man that is proud of his wit and piety, he is offended at Job as taking more holineſſe upon him, and aſcribed more to himſelf then he thought was fitting, in reſpect of all manner of virtues, and at his freinds, as thought by him to be ignorant men in compariſon of himſelf, ſo proud men think none ſo good or ſo wiſe as themſelves, in things pertaining to God and to religion, and who ſo doth thus is a follower of Elihu. Verſ. 3. 4. Note.

Then Elihu ſayd, I am young and yee are very old, therefore I durſt not ſhew mine opinion. Here he beginneth as if he had been full of humility, as he was younger in years, ſo being willing rather to hear his Elders ſpeak, then to ſpeak himſelf, which is a thing commendable in young men, but under this cloak of words lay hid much pride and vain glory, for he preſently diſcovereth what he was, viz. one that thought himſelf wiſer then they all, for he ſayth, There is a ſpirit in man and the inſpiration of the almighty giveth underſtanding. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 8.

Great men are not alwaies wiſe, neither do the aged underſtand judgment: For of pride and vain glory ſaith Gregory, there be four ſorts. Ver. 9. Gregor.

Firſt, When a man thinketh that he hath the wiſdome that is in him, from himſelf, as he, whom the Apoſtle put in mind, ſaying, What haſt thou, that thou haſt not received? &c. 1 Cor. 4. 7.

Secondly, when he acknowledgeth that it cometh from God; but that he was worthy of it; as the Phariſee that thanked God that he was not as the Publican, contrary to whom, as Paul, who ſayd, by the Grace of God I am that I am. Luk. 18.

Thirdly, when he thinketh that he hath more in him then he hath, as the Angell of the Church of Laodicea, who ſayd that he was rich and wanted nothing, yet he was poor, miſerable, blind, and naked. Revel. 3. 20.

Fourthly, When he thinketh himſelf wiſer then all other men, in two of which Elihu groſly faulted, for he aſcribed more to himſelf then was in him, and deſpiſed the wiſdome of others in compariſon of his own, as the Phariſee alſo did, preferring himſelf: And this is to do like the Devill, who would aſcend up on high above the other Angels, and ſet his throne beſides the Throne of God, but he had a fearfull fall, and ſo ſhall all the Proud have. Iſa. 14. 12.

Leaſt yee ſhould ſay we have found out wiſedome, God thruſteth him down and not man. Vulg. Deus projecit eam, & non homo. But Hebr. it is him, and the word נדפו ſignifieth, hath reproached him; the meaning is, Elihu would now ſpeak, and deſireth to be heard by the other three, leaſt they ſhould think that it was not want of wiſedome to anſwer Job that made them now ſilent, but they ſeeing that by no words of men he would have his mouth ſtopped, ceaſed therefore to ſpeak any more, becauſe they would leave him to God, who alone could caſt him down: Thus Iſidorus. Verſ. 13. Iſidorus.

Now he hath not directed his words againſt me, neither will I anſwer him with your ſpeeches. Herein ſaith Gregory, he rightly perſoneth a proud hearer, who takes nothing as ſpoken to him, but all againſt the ſins of other men. All the Preacher ſpareth not to ſpeak againſt his pride, as well as againſt the Errours of others, for he will not beleive that he is proud, but humble, and thinks himſelf wiſer then his Teacher: For his not anſwering in their words, it is meant, being applyed alſo to the arrogant in the Church, by maintaining ſuch opinions as Hereticks who are without the Church do, and oppoſing the truths taught in the Church by words, but Verſ. 14. Gregor.

by Deeds, wherein they go contrary to that which the Church teacheth from time to time.

Verſ. 15. 16. 17. Elihu makes a kind of rhetoricall flouriſh, wherein he ſheweth Eloquence, but little matter worth the ſpeaking upon: Whereas N. Tr. hath theſe words, v. 17. I wil ſhew mine opinion, the vul. hath it, I will ſhew my knowledge. whereupon Greg. ſaith the arrogant love to ſpeak, not for the benefit of the hearer, but ſhew to his knowledge, of which he is moſt proud: But for this he is like unto a veſſell without a cover, touching which the Law ſaith, that it ſhall be counted unclean, ſo the man that putteth himſelf forth to ſpeak, that he may ſhew all the knowledge that is in him, and keepeth not rather a cover hereupon, is judged for this to be proud, and ſo unclean, for it is

Iam. 1. 19. Iam. 3. 1. our duty to be ſwift to hear, ſlow to ſpeak, and not be many Maſters for fear of the greater condemnation: Thus He and the word דעה indeed ſignifieth my knowledge. But to utter a mans knowledge for the Edification of others, as the faithfull Paſtors of the Church do, is not pride, but zeale; for ſo he that deſireth to be a Byſhop, deſireth a worthy work, viz.

1 Tim. 3. 1. 2 Tim. 4. 1. For the diligent teaching that is in ſuch an one required, and accordingly Timothy is exhorted to preach the word, and to be inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon.

Verſ. 18. For I am full of matter, the ſpirits within me conſtraineth me, my belly is like wine, that hath no vent, it is ready to burſt like new bottles. A moſt high degree of pride in a young man thus to arrogate to himſelf as if he were a Prophet like Jeremiah, who uſed ſome ſuch words of himſelf or an Apoſtle, for of the Apoſties it is ſayd, New wine muſt be put in new veſſells, otherwiſe they will burſt: Whereas Gregory ſayth, that all this came from pride in Elihu, Chriſoſt. contrariwiſe praiſeth him that having ſo much matter to utter he could ſo long contain himſelf from ſpeaking out of modeſty and reverence to his Elders: But Chriſoſt. was herein in an Errour, as may be gathered from the cenſure of GOD ſpoken of before; Only Verſ. 21. 22. He ſaith well, that for reſpect of perſons he would not uſe flattering titles, for ſo he ſhould indanger himſelf to be by God cut off, who is offended at it, when a man is to teach and to ſet forth his truth, and to call ſin in whomſoever.

Ier. 20. Math. 9. 16. 17. Chriſoſt. Verſ. 21. 22.

CHAP. XXXIII.

HERE Elihu after the Exordium going before in generall to them all, pitcheth ſingularly upon Job, ſtirring him up with patience and attention to hear him, verſ. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. As he hath done before, Chap. 32. So he goeth on ſtill, ſaith Gregory, in the loftineſſe of his mind to ſpeak to Job in a mageſteriall manner, as if he were far above him in Wiſdome, and Job were not able to reaſon with him, whereas he ſaith, verſe 2. My tongue hath ſpoken in my mouth, He meaneth that he would not ſpeak clamourouſly, but as it were whiſperingly to his eare in ſecret, then commending himſelf he ſayth, v. 3. My words ſhall be of the uprightneſſe of my Heart, &c. V. 4. The ſpirit of the Lord hath made me, & the ſpirit of the Lord hath given me life. V. 6. I am formed out of the clay. In ſpeaking which, he ſheweth that he was not ignorant of the manner of Gods making man at the firſt, as it is ſet forth by Moſes.

Verſ. 2. 3. 4. &c. Gregory. Gen. 2.

Verſ. 8. 9. Thou haſt ſaid I am clean without tranſgreſſion, neither is there iniquitie in me. Here he beginneth to object againſt Job that which he had in part ſpoken in way of Apology to clear himſelf from the evill imputations layd by his freinds, upon him, but not taking them in the ſenſe wherein he ſpake, he vainly reproved him therefore: For Job ſpake thus only in regard of his great and grievous ſufferings, which by doing injuſtice or wrong, or living in

in any groſſe ſinnes, he had not deſerved, as the Lord himſelf acknowledged, Chap. 2. Telling the Devil that he had ſtirred him up againſt Job without cauſe, ſo that by his puniſhments it was no part of the Lords meaning to lay Job open to be a notorious ſinner under the vale of piety and holineſſe, of which he made formerly ſo great a ſhew, but only to try his faith, and patience, that the Devill might finally be confounded, and Job again more exalted.

Behold in this thou art not juſt, I will anſwer thee that God is greater then man: That is, this cannot be righteouſly ſpoken, becauſe all men are ſinners before God, and therefore being leſſe righteous and GOD greater in righteouſneſs, wiſedome, and power, none can without ſin, when they ſuffer, plead their innocency, or freedome from iniquity, and therefore the Righteous being ſmitten, ſhould rather in ſilence ſuffer being perſwaded of the righteouſneſs of that great Judge in all his proceedings, who judgeth no man but for reaſons known to himſelf, although unknown to man, and not cry out as being too harſhly dealt withall, which indeed is true, but miſapplyed to Job, who cryed not out, as conceiving the contrary, but being neceſſitated hereunto by the erronious ſurmiſes and inferences made upon his ſufferings, by theſe three men to render him odious to the world, as a notorious ſinner. Verſ. 12.

Why ſtriveſt thou againſt him? for he giveth not account of his matters: For God ſpeaketh once, yea twice, yet men perceive it not. Here Elihu ſheweth, how vain Job was in deſiring to reaſon with God, as thinking if he could come to talk with him, he ſhould ſoon bring him to ſay, that he had dealt too harſhly with him, or that notwithſtanding all theſe his Sufferings, he accounted him righteous, and would tell him the reaſon why he thus judged him; and ſo withdraw his hand from him again, and reſtore him to a proſperous eſtate. For God ſpeaketh once, yea twice, yet men perceive it not. The vul. God ſpeaketh once and wil not repeat it the ſecond time, Heb. He will not Cantare, ſing it twice, For it is, לֹא־שָׁנָה יְדַבֵּר and the meaning is, he ſpeaketh in his word, and what he hath ſayd therein, we muſt in all caſes look at and not think further to be particularly ſatisfied by extraordinary anſwers whenſoever we deſire, but by the anſwers that God hath made to others, we are to learn his will towards us: As when Paul having a prick in the fleſh; the buffetings of Satan, touching which he ſought unto the Lord, he had anſwer, My grace is ſufficient for thee, for my ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſs. At this he muſt look that is afflicted, who is a true ſervant of God as he was, and be herein comforted, and likewiſe in all other caſes, we my find what God hath once ſpoken, and this is all the ſpeaking for our ſatisfaction, that we muſt expect moreover, as Gregory ſayth, Gods ſpeaking is by his Son JESUS CHRIST: So that when he took fleſh his word came into the world, as he is by John called, and although he had formerly ſpoken divers ways, yet now this is his only ſpeaking, or by his ſpeaking once we may underſtand the immutability of God, both in his word, and decree, and works, he reverſeth nothing unleſſe it be upon repentance and turning from ſin he ſpareth men from the judgments threatned, whilſt they live in this world, but look what he ſhall ſpeak in way of judging at the laſt day, ſhall never be reverſed of Gods ſpeaking once, yea twice, ſee Pſ. 62. 11. whereas he ſaith, in the preſent Tence, God ſpeaketh; If it be doubted how this can be underſtood of the word of God, which was not yet written; or of Chriſt or his ſentencing of men at the laſt day: It is eaſily anſwered, with God there is difference of times; for all are preſent unto him, and therefore he ſpeaketh in the preſent of things future. Verſ. 13. Verſ. 14. Gregor. Iohn. 1. Hebr. 1. Ier. 18. 10.

In a viſion in a dream, when deep ſleep falleth upon men; in ſlumbring upon the bed. Having ſayd, that God ſpeaketh once, now he ſheweth the divers ways of Verſ. 15.

of his ſpeaking, yet whatſoever he ſayth any of theſe ways is but more fully to ſet forth the ſame things that he plainly ſpeaketh for our inſtruction and learning in other places: Thus Abraham had Gods will revealed to him by viſion, and other Prophets had viſions, and Joſeph had dreams, yea Pharoah had his dream alſo, and Nebuchadnezzar, and Belſhazzar a viſion, but things to come were herein ſet forth ſo darkly, that none but Joſeph and Daniell could intepret them: but of ſpeaking by Dreams and in the dark of the night a man being aſleep in bed, the means of coming to have divine Revelations made unto men, ſayth Gregory, is ſet forth, and the dark revealing of things unto them in this world: For as a man in ſleep hath his ſenſes bound up, ſo the ſenſes muſt be a ſleep, as it were, and the deſire to earthly things in him; that would underſtand heavenly, the mind muſt not be ſet on things below, but on things above, from the cares of the world he muſt be ſequeſtred and at reſt as a man in bed; as Moſes went from the Congregation up to the Mount, and being alone with God had his will revealed unto him, and he went likewiſe to the Ark, to conſult with him thereabout from time to time. And when theſe ways or any other men know all that they can whilſt they live here, they know but in part, and ſee but as in the night in compariſon of that, which God knoweth touching the cauſes and ends of his doings in all things, and of the knowledge ſhall be in the life to come to all the faithfull.

Gregor.

Note.

Col. 3. 1.

Verſ. 16. Verſ. 17. Then he openeth the ears of men, and ſealeth their inſtruction, That he may withdraw man from his purpoſe, and hide pride from man: That is, when the mind is quiet from the noiſe of worldly tumults, which hindred them from hearing; then the Ears of their minds are opened, and they are reformed by his chaſtiſements, as by moſt profitable diſcipline, that is, as in vulgar, Deliver him from pride. The meaning is, man being thus inſtructed by chaſtiſement, is hereby withdrawn from the evill works, which he practiſed before, and conſequently from pride, which what it is elſe, but for a man to lift up himſelf in diſobedience againſt God in refuſing to be ſubject to him by living according to his commandements.

Verſ. 18. He keepeth back his Soul from the pit, and his life from periſhing by the ſword. Here is the benefit of divine diſcipline by chaſtiſements, as followeth by way of explication.

Verſ. 19. He is chaſtned with pain upon his bed, &c. Where by Bed, Gregory underſtandeth, pleaſures of ſin wherein a man lyeth as upon a bed, but being by chaſtiſement healed of the corruption making him to do ſo, he riſeth and taketh up his bed and walketh, as it is ſayd to the diſeaſed man whom Chriſt healed, which he doth, that in ſtead of living any more in ſinfull pleaſure, putteth his ſhoulders under the burthen of toilſome labour, in ſuffering for his manfull reſiſting of ſinn. So that his life abhorreth bread, and his Soul dainty meat: His fleſh is conſumed away that it cannot be ſeen, And his bones ſtick out that were not ſeen his Soul draweth near to the Grave, &c. Here Elihu goeth on to ſhew the great afflictions, whereby God diſciplineth ſome to bring them to his Kingdome. They are ſo ſick and weak that their ſtomack quite faileth them, and ſo their fleſh is waſted, and they come even to the brink of the pit of death. From hence that of Pſ. 107. 18. ſeemeth to be taken: Gregory ſayth, that hereby the benefit coming by afflictions is ſhewed, for thus they that before took delight in vain pleaſures of this world, were ſo mortified unto them, that they abhorred from them all, feeding upon Godly ſorrow and penſiveneſſe in thinking upon them. For by bread Chriſt is ſometime ſet forth, ſometime the Doctrine of the word, ſometime the grace of ſpirituall gifts, ſatisfying and refreſhing the Soul; as where the Prophet ſayth, He that ſtops his Ears that that he may not hear bloud, and ſhutteth his eyes that he may not ſee evill, he ſhall dwel in the high places, and bread ſhall be given to him. For what is it to

Joh. 5.

Verſ. 20. 21. 22.

Gregor.

Iſa. 33.

ſtop

ſtop a mans eares from hearing blood, but from being lead by the temptations of fleſh and blood; and what is this bread, that ſhall be given to ſuch a man, but the refreſhing of ſpirituall grace? Sometime the doctrine of Hereticks, as the Harlot repreſenting them, faith, Hidden Bread is ſweet. Somtime any corporall food, ſo ſometime by bread is ſet forth carnall pleaſure, as Lament. 1. A people ſighing and mourning ſeeketh bread. That is, The delights of this life; by the fleſh waſting, and bones not ſeen before appearing, is alſo allegorically meant the ſame fleſhly pleaſure, which by affliction weareth away, and then the ſtrength of grace ſet forth by bones, that could not before be ſeen, appeareth: For till ſufferings come, it is unknown what grace is in a man, but then it is manifeſted, as in the Apoſtles being ſcourged and charged not to Preach any more in the name of Jeſus, then their ſtrength in grace ſhewed it ſelf by their anſwering; We muſt rather obey God then you. And in that they went away rejoycing. Laſtly he is ſaid to draw neare to the Grave, becauſe by afflictions men are humbled and ſee into their own wickedneſſes, which they did not before, and how worthy are to be proceeded againſt in all ſeverity and rigour, ſo that if they were dealt withall according to their deſerts, they muſt needs be deſtroyed.

Prov. 9.

Note.

Act. 4.

If there be a meſſenger with him, an Interpreter, one of a thouſand, to ſhew him his uprightneſſe. Then he is gracious to him, and ſaith, Deliver him from going into the pit, I have found a ranſome. Vulg. If there be an Angel ſpeaking for him, one of the like things, that he may declare the equity of man, he will have pity on him. By Gregory expounded of Chriſt thus, A poor man being brought ſo low, as hath been ſaid, by the ſight and ſenſe of his ſinnes, if the Angel of the covenant, that is, Chriſt ſpeakes for him, who is like unto man in one thing only altogether, and although he were alſo in other things alike, there was great difference betwixt him and other men: The one thing, wherein he was altogether like was, in that he was a very man, conſiſting of Soule and Body as man doth; borne of a woman and mortal, the things wherein he was not like, he was conceived by the overſhadowing of the holy Ghoſt, and without ſin, moſt holy born of a Virgin, he laid down his life, and at his own will took it up again. And this Angel ſpeakes for ſinful man repenting and beleiving in him, both by his blood ſhed for him; which as the Apoſtle ſaith, ſpeakes better things then the blood of Abell: And by his prayer, John. 17. for his declaring of the equity or righteouſneſſe of man, that was by becoming our Righteouſneſſe, for he was made of God unto us Wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, &c. For we have none of our own, but when we come by faith to be made one with him, his righteouſneſſe is made ours, none of our ſinnes being now imputed unto us: For the next words; Then he is gracious to him, and ſaith, Deliver him that is going into the pit, &c. The difference in the Tranſlations is little, and herein Chriſt is ſet forth, ſpeaking to the Father, deliver the wretched man before ſpoken of, being neer to the Grave, let him not dye eternally, that is ſo turned from all pleaſure-taking in ſin, that he mourneth and is ſorry therefore, and confeſſeth himſelf worthy to dye, let not ſuch an one dye eternally, but ſave him, for I have paid his ranſome in dying for him.

Verſ. 23.
Verſ. 24.

Gregory.

Heb. 12. 24.

1 Cor. 1. 30.
Phil. 3.
2 Cor 5.

Hitherto Gregory, and the Vulg. followed by him, but the Vulg. ſince goeth thus, If there be an Angel ſpeaking for him, one of a thouſand; That he may declare the equity of man. Wherein it agreeth well with the Hebrew, for the word מליץ ſignifieth both, one ſpeaking and an Interpreter, מלאך An Angel or meſſenger. But haply Gregories copy was falſe printed, Unus de ſimilibus, being put for, Unus de mille. Whereby he was lead ſo to expound it; yet take we it rightly, a Speaker or Interpreter one of a thouſand, it may be expounded of Chriſt, who is ſaid by the Preacher to be one of a thouſand: For when a man afflicted is brought ſo low low in himſelf, as hath been ſaid; he is to know that there is an Angel, a comforter above all Angels, ſaid to be one of a thouſand; wherein a certain number is put, for an uncertain, a very great number, as the Angels are ſaid to be twenty times ten thouſand; and who can this be but Chriſt often ſet forth by his name, as Mal. 4. The Angel of the Covenant; and Revel 12. 7. Michael and his Angels, and Judes Epiſtle, Michael the Archangel, or Prince of Angels: Neither can any meer Angel be ſo called, One as God. As Michael ſignifieth, and Prince of Angels. For although there be orders of Angels, ſome Archangels, ſome Angels, yet of the higheſt order, there is not any one above the reſt of his order; ſo that of any ſuch it cannot be ſaid, one of a thouſand: The Angell then here ſpoken of, is neither an Angel by nature, as the Jeſuites now teach, grounding hereupon the invocation of Angels, and conſequently of Saints departed: For Gregory the great Biſhop of Rome, as great in learning as he was, could not finde any other Angel here commended unto us, but Chriſt: Whence note by the way, how far the Church of Rome is degenerated now from that, which it was moſt anciently; that none may be deceived by the pretence of antiquity: And by the Judgment of the ſame Gregory, the main Tenet of Papiſts, that the Biſhop of Rome is Epiſcopus Epiſcoporum, the head of the Church, and of all the Biſhops thereof, and Chriſts Vicar, that cannot err, is a plain making of him Antichriſt, or the forerunner of Antichriſt: For ſo in his Epiſtle to John Arch-Biſhop of Conſtantinople, he ſaith, That whoſoever taketh upon him to be univerſal Biſhop, and Biſhop of Biſhops, is either Antichriſt for this his pride, or his forerunner: But to leave this, the Angel here ſpoken of is not a Miniſter of the Goſpel; who becauſe he is a meſſenger of God, for this his office is called an Angel of the Lord, Mal. 2. 7. and Revel. 1. 2. 3. For although ſuch an one be מליץ an Interpreter, or Legate, or Embaſſador, as the word ſignifieth, and ſo Philip was to the Eunuch, and we ſaith Paul, As the Embaſſadors of God. Yet that which is added, one of a thouſand, agreeth to none but Chriſt, he then is the Elocutor and Interlocutor and Interpreter, above all others ſpeaking aloud for us miſerable ſinners, and ſpeaking betwixt God and us, both by his blood and prayer, as was before ſaid; and interpreting the will of God unto us, and his moſt hidden myſteries, according to that, No man hath ſeen God at any time, but his only begotten Son hath revealed him. But Calvin and Junius, by the Interpreter here ſpoken of, underſtand a faithfull Preacher, who is a rare man, and therefore called one of a thouſand, that applieth the promiſes of the Goſpel, to the comforting of one that is brought ſo low, as is before ſaid; whom ſo doing and declaring to him being troubled about his ſinnes, his righteouſneſſe by Chriſt, he ought to beleive and to be comforted herein, and then it ſhall be ſo unto him indeed, and Chriſts blood ſhall be his ranſome: Again, this ſeemeth to make that of the Pſalmiſt, ſaying, Great was the company of Preachers. And at the firſt there were twelve Apoſtles, and twelve more ſent out to preach; yet admitting that touching Chriſt, as the principal thing intended here, his Miniſters, which are as he for the comforting of a troubled Soule, are not to be excluded: And all this from, Verſ. 19. to Verſ. 24. ſeemeth to be ſpoken for the comfort of Job, if by confeſſing his ſinnes and repenting in this low ebb of miſery, he would take into the way of comfort: Whereby it appeareth, that Elihu, although conceited of himſelf and his own wiſedome, ſpake by the ſpirit of God, and that about the greateſt myſtery of our Salvation: So, that his ſpeeches are to be thought none otherwiſe of, then as parcels of the holy Scriptures, from which as from other parts, excellent inſtructions may be gathered for our inlightening and comfort.

Eccle. 7. 28.

Act. 2. 8.
2 Cor. 5. 20

Joh. 1.
Calvin.
Junius.

Verſ. 25. His fleſh ſhall be freſher then the fleſh of a child, he ſhall return to the daies of of his youth. That is, A poor diſtreſſed man being thus comforted by Chriſt is renewed, as it were, again in his age, through the grace of regeneration, as the Eagle reneweth his age by caſting his bill: For ſo is every one converted to the faith of Chriſt, being born again of the incorruptible ſeed of the word to indure ſo for ever. Pſ. 103. 1 Pet. 1.

He ſhall pray to God, and he ſhall be favourable to him, and he ſhall ſee his face with joy, for he will render unto man his righteouſneſs. That is, Being renewed, as is afore ſaid, he ſhall pray and be accepted, and finally ſee him as he is in everlaſting glory; and that for the righteouſneſſe of the man Chriſt, the Interceſſor before ſpoken of: Others may pray, that live ſtill in ſin, and not be accepted of, nor ever come to ſee his face, but be ſhut out from his preſence; notwithſtanding their making of many prayers unto him. Verſ. 26.

He looketh upon men, and if any man ſaith, I have ſinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not: He will deliver his Soule from going into the pit, and his Soule ſhall ſee the light. This is the ſame in effect with that of the Apoſtle, If we confeſſe our ſinnes, he is faithfull to forgive them. As the Prodigal alſo found it true, And David after that he had ſinned, and herein he looks back again to Verſ. 18. He keepeth his Soule from the pit. The vulg. Looking at men he ſaith, I have ſinned. And ſo it is Hebr. And the meaning according to Gregory is; The man that repenteth him of his ſinnes, looketh at the examples of Godly men, living before him, and finding how unlike his waies are to the waies of ſuch men, he is humbled therefore, and confeſſeth his wickedneſs: And this argueth one, that now beginneth to have his eyes opened, as they were not before, but blinde: For till that his eyes be opened, he ſeeth nothing in himſelf, of which he hath need to repent, but now he ſeeth the foulneſs of his ſinnes, and therefore his heart is againſt them, and ſet to live righteouſly: And this is the beginning of righteouſneſſe in him, that was wicked before; but there are many who confeſſe, that they are ſinners, but yet are not hereby proved to be righteous, becauſe, if any man reproveth them therefore, they are angry with him, for how doth he repent, although he confeſſe, that is not willing to heare wherein he hath ſinned, by another in any particular, but defendeth and ſtiffely juſtifieth himſelf: Such then confeſſe their ſinnes, but beleive not that they are ſinners, they think by confeſſing there ſinnes, to be adorned, not to be humble, to ſeem penitent perſons, not to be: For the next words, And it profited me not. The vulg. hath, I receivid not as I was worthy; the word is שוה To adequate: So that it may be rendred as well equally, as I deſerved, as it profited not, as the word alſo ſignifieth, and the Vulg. is rather to be preferred, becauſe the true penitent perſon doth not only confeſſe, that no profit cometh to him by ſinning, but hurt, but alſo that the evil which he ſuffereth in this world, how great ſoever it be, is not ſo great yet as he deſerveth: He that doth not ſo, is not truly penitent, although before he ſuffereth, he confeſſeth himſelf to be a ſinner and worthy of all judgments; yet when he cometh to ſuffering, and ſo is tried, he ſheweth that he was never truly penitent, becauſe he murmureth, and why doth he murmure, but becauſe he thinks himſelf puniſhed, not leſſe, but more then he deſerveth, as none truly penitent do. Touching Verſ. 28. The word is to be underſtood of the Convert, who delivers his Soule, when by his will he worketh with the grace of God in thus repenting. Verſ. 27. 28. 1 Joh. 8. Luk. 15. 2 Sam. 12. Gregor. Note. Iſte per confeſſionem peccati ornari voluit non humiliari, vel humilis videri non eſſe. Note.

Loe all theſe things worketh God oftentimes with man. To bring back his Soule from the pit, to be inlightned with the light of the living. The vulg. For often times, hath it, Three times, and Hebr. it is פעמים שלש Three times. Whereupon Gregory excellently ſaith, that there be three degrees of perplexities and troubles, through which God bringeth ſuch men as ſhall be ſaved. Verſ. 29. Verſ. 30. Gregor.

1. First, of leaving the ſinnes wherein they have formerly ſo long lived, which is at the time of the converſion of a ſinner, for it muſt needs be greivous to one that hath lived and delighted long in any ſinn, to leave and loath it, as was noted upon v. 20. the man converted doth, it was as meat and drink unto him before, how hard therefore for him to part with it, and to make tears his meat for it, to mingle his drink with weeping, for when he thinks of turning the pleaſure which he took in his former converſation comes to his mind, and the longer he hath lived therein, the faſter it holdeth him. Here then ariſeth greife and anxiety in the mind; the ſpirit calling him away from theſe pleaſures, the fleſh calling back to them: on the one ſide the love of a new converſation inviteth him, on the other the uſe of the old perverſe one impugneth it, on this ſide the love of the heavenly country burtheneth in him, on that the carnall concupiſence in himſelf ſlayeth him: For the great pain and trouble that is in leaving ſin, Chriſt compareth it to the cutting off of the right hand, or plucking out of the right eye, which oh how great a ſmart and pain it is: Thus much for the firſt.

2. The ſecond, is in time of temptation, that followeth ſometime after converſion, before the ſtrong man armed keeps the houſe in quiet, but now being expelled, he laboureth by all means to enter again and repoſſeſs it; as it is ſayd of the evill ſpirit gone out of a man he cometh with ſeven more worſe then himſelf to enter again: And now the Devill by his Aſſaults moſt greivouſly terrifieth and troubleth the Soul, and conſcience of a man, to the making of him to pine away in his fleſh, ſo that his bones ſtick out, as verſ. 21. Which two degrees are notably figured out in the Children of Iſrael coming out of Egipt, and after that, wandring in the Wilderneſs: Their coming out of Egipt was full of trouble and anguiſh, becauſe ſo ſoon, as Moſes moved for it; they were by Pharaoh more harſhly uſed, then ever before: After they were come out, for a time the Lord uſed them gently, and would not lead them that way, in which they ſhould ſee war for a time, leaſt they ſhould be diſcouraged, but having brought them through the Red Sea, and making them to ſee the Egyptians drowned and caſt up upon the ſhoare, ſoon after they were diverſly aſſaulted and troubled, many things fell out that made them to murmure, and upon their murmuring they were macerated and conſumed by divers judgments forty years together.

Matth. 13. 44.

3. The third degree of perplexity is, when death draweth near; for then a man conſidereth that he is near the time of giving account of all his doings before a moſt ſtrict judge and if he knoweth any thing in himſelf, he is ſure that God knoweth more, and if he knoweth nothing, yet God may know ſomething; as Paul ſaith, that he knew nothing by himſelf, yet was he not herein juſtified; for no man liveth ſo ſtrictly, but, but he muſt needs acknowledge, that he is not yet without all ſinn, ſeeing James ſaith, In many things we ſinn all: and John, If we ſay that we have no ſin, we deceive our ſelves. And this perplexeth him greatly, he being not for this reaſon certain whether he ſhall be accepted or not, and this third is touched upon, verſ. 22. but after this before a man departs out of this life, God cometh by his ſpirit and fully inlightneth him, ſo that he beginneth already to pertake of the joyes of Heaven, as is concluded, Verſ. 28. His life ſeeth light, when having prayed and humbled himſelf, again the light of Gods countenance is lifted up upon him: And it is to be noted, that his life ſhall ſee light, not his death, for none dead in ſin have this priviledge, but the living and before perplexed and troubled, as hath been ſayd. For the words following, Verſ. 32. &c. Elihu having hitherto ſpoken moſt divinely, ſheweth himſelf again as he was, although inſpired to ſpeak thus for our Good and Inſtruction, yet a palpable Brag-adochian, and full of pride and vain-glory.

1 Cor. 4.

Iam. 4. 2.

Verſ. 31. 32. 33.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXIIII.

THe eare taſteth words as the palate meat: Of this ſee before in the words of Job, Chapt. 12. 11. And this Elihu ſpeaketh to prepare thoſe that were willing enough to hear him, viz. Jobs three friends, whom he calleth wiſe men, v. 2. Deſiring them to conſider of what he was further about to ſay, and hereby to judge of Iob whether he did not from his own words juſtly accuſe himſelf for wicked, or no, as they alſo before had done, but yet ſeemed ſince, by more words uttered by Iob, to have their mouthes ſtopped. Verſ. 3.

Let us chooſe to us judgment, let us know amongſt our ſelves what is good: Here the proud man, that he might ſeem to have ſome humility in him, joyneth himſelf with the other three, and like other Teachers, that be proud, do ſometimes ſpeak words of humility, although in their hearts they lift up themſelves above all others, and therefore this acquitteth them not from pride and arrogancy; whereas he ſaith, verſ. 5. Iob hath ſayd, I am righteous, God hath taken away my judgement: Should I lye againſt my right? my wounds are incurable without my tranſgreſſion. What the words of Job were, ſee Chap. 13. 18. I know I ſhall be juſtified, Chapt. 23. 10. When he hath tryed me, I ſhall come forth as gold, Chap. 27. 2, As God liveth who hath removed my cauſe. Verſ. 4. My lips ſhall not ſpeak iniquity, nor my tongue deceit, &c. And in what ſenſe they were ſpoken, and it will eaſily appear that Elihu fowly perverted them, and ſo goeth upon an imaginary ground in his invectives againſt Job. Verſ. 4. Note. Verſ. 5. 6.

VVhat man is like Job, who drinketh up ſcorning like water? Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, &c. Wherein he bewrayeth himſelf not to be humble or a true Teacher, like Paul, not deſirous by his ſpeaking, if Job had ſayd any thing amiſs, to bring him to repentance therefore, but one of a large conſcience, that would lay more to his charge then he had ſpoken, and deſirous rather to commend his own wit then to edify his hearer: For Paul writing to the Corinthians, in whom he had ſome things to reprove; beginneth firſt with their high commendations, and then proceedeth to reproofe: But the proud Teacher omitting all the good things that be in his Auditours, falleth upon ſome things only, that are amiſs in them, taunting them moſt inſolently hereby, which is the way rather to exaſperate and harden them againſt his Reproofs, though juſt, then to bring them to amendment; Whereas commending that which is good in them. Firſt maketh ſuch away to reprove Evill, that their hearts being hereby now to love him, they can hardly do any other at his reproofes, but be aſhamed and amend whatſoever is amiſſe in them: The like courſe alſo doth the ſame Apoſtle take, 1 Cor. 11. 2. When he would reprove ſome other abuſes in them: For the vile taunt wherewith he taunted him, by the ſcorning wherein he was ſo ready as one that drinks in water, he meaneth his deriding of ſuch as reproved him, and ſo walked with the wicked, as Pſal. 1. the ungodly are noted to do. Verſ. 7. 8. 1 Cor. 1. Note.

For he ſaith, It profiteth a man nothing, if he ſhould delight himſelf with God: Ver. 9.

This alſo was not any of Jobs ſpeeches, but gathered herefrom falſly by Elihu, to make his caſe the more odious, upon theſe his ſpeeches ſo wreſted, he falleth to the vindicating of God from all unrighteouſneſſe, and ſheweth it to be a groſſe fault to impute any unto him, Verſe 10, 11, &c. 18, 19. In ſaying, There is no iniquity in God; but he rendreth the work of man to him, and dealeth by every one according to his wayes: This is in part true, but if Gods dealing in this world be meant; the other part of his ſpeech is falſe: Verſ. 10.

Eccle. 8. For there be righteous men, ſaith Solomon, to whom it falleth out as to the wicked, and wicked men to whom it cometh as to the righteous, although in the World to come, indeed every one ſhall ſurely be rewarded according to his works: If hee would herein have ſpoken truly, he ſhould rather as Gregory noteth, have ſaid; There is no iniquity in God, although he doth not render to every one according to his works in this World. For that which is not by us underſtood, is not produced out of unjuſt ballances, his judgments are unſearchable, and his waies paſt finding out.

Gregor.

Verſ. 12. God will not condemne without cauſe, nor ſubvert judgment. This is alſo moſt true, but by Elihu miſapplied, for it is one thing to condemne and another to afflict, ſeeing we are afflicted, that we may not be condemned, but being corrected be ſaved; as both Solomon teacheth, Prov. 3. 12. and Heb. 12. 9.

Verſ. 13. For who hath given him a charge over the Earth, and who hath diſpoſed the whole World? That is, None hath thus done, but of his own will he made all things in a moſt excellent manner, and therefore he doubtleſs ruleth and ordereth all things, touching men moſt righteouſly.

Verſ. 14. Verſ. 15. Gregor. If he ſetteth his heart upon man, if he draweth his ſpirit and breath unto him. All fleſh ſhall ſoon fail, and return to aſhes together. God ſetteth his heart upon man, ſaith Gregory, when he hath a minde to ſave him, then he draweth his ſpirit and breath unto him, by making him to look up only to God, and to the things of his Kingdome, and ſaith, Spirit and breath. Denoting hereby his inward cogitations and outward actions, becauſe the breath is drawn by the organs of the body, which are outward; and ſo both in the thoughts of his heart and all his actions, he is wholy intent to him, to which when he is come, The fleſh faileth. That is, Whoſoever is fleſhly is brought under, and the body of ſin burnt, as it were, by the fire of the ſpirit into aſhes, and ſo having no more ſtrength: To expreſſe which Jer. 31. Jeremiah ſaith, After that thou turneſt me, I repented, and when thou ſhewedſt me I ſmote upon my thigh. For what is it for a man to ſmite upon his thigh, but to ſubdue carnal concupiſcence: Some take theſe words as ſpoken to prove, that God doth not deal unjuſtly or harſhly with men, becauſe if he would ſet himſelf thus to do, and not rule rather according to mercy, then according to his power, his might is ſuch, as that as he gave man breath and life at the firſt, ſo he can eaſily withdraw it again, and when he hath done ſo, what is any man, but one failing and ceaſing any more to be a man, yea becauſe now very duſt; as the word עפר ſignifieth: According to the other expoſition, theſe words: If he ſetteth his heart upon him. Are underſtood of man, ſetting his heart upon God, according to this; if God ſetteth his heart upon it, that is, upon this thing without regard of mercy as well as juſtice to deſtroy man, his breath would ſoon be gone and he turned to duſt: And this is to be preferred, as beſt agreeing with the words before going.

Verſ. 17. Shall he that hateth right, govern? Wilt thou condemn him that is moſt juſt? Vulg. Can he be healed that loveth not judgment, and how doſt thou ſo greatly condemne him that is juſt? The Hebr. is וחבש ſignifying either Dominari, or alligare, to binde up. As the Chyrurgion bindeth up a wound to heal it, and the other words are, Hating judgment, So that it may either be underſtood of God, and as ſpoken to the ſame effect that he ſpake before, or of man ſuffering by the ſtroak of God, but becauſe the next words are: Wilt thou condemne him that is moſt juſt? Hebr. Very juſt. I rather take it to be ſpoken of God to clear him from all aſperſion of injuſtice: And then theſe words ſerve to convince him of too great arrogancy, that dareth thus to challenge God. And this is further proved, Verſ. 18. Is it fit to Verſ. 18. ſay to a King, Thou art wicked, &c. By an argument, A minore ad majus, and if not to a King, much leſſe to God, in juſtifying of a mans ſelf, but the the Vulg. rendreth this alſo; Who ſaith to a King, an apoſtata. but Hebr. it is האמר where ה is not of an Interrogation, and cannot be rendred Who, but whether or no is any man ſo bold with a King to ſay, Thou art wicked. The word Hebr. is בליעל one without a yoake, Belial, or if ה be taken for a particle demonſtrative, denoting him that was ſpoken of before, it may be rendred after theſe words moſt juſt, he ſaith to the King wicked. It is he that thou cenſureſt, for whom it is free to condemne the higheſt amongſt men, even Kings and Princes, but for opening the mouth againſt him, it were extream madneſſe in any man to do it, if he dareth to do it, he ſhall be ſure to heare of it from him; and that therefore he is Belial, although he be a King, as thou Job haſt been, if it be taken the other way, it is not true, for ſome men have been ſo bold, as to call a King ſo, and to tel him, Thou haſt done fooliſhly: As Samuel did Saul, and Eliah Ahab.

How much leſſe to him, that accepteth not the perſon of Princes. Where the former words are in a ſmaller print, intimating that they are not in Hebr. But ſupplied by the Tranſlators, to make the ſenſe good, according to the rendring of Verſ. 18. But leave we them out as the Vulg. doth, and read it, That accepteth not, &c. And then it is a reaſon, why he is no leſſe bold to charge Kings with wickedneſſe, then other men, being all his creatures, as well the higheſt as the loweſt. Verſ. 19.

In a moment they ſhall dye, and the people ſhall be troubled at midnight, and paſſe away: and the mighty ſhall be taken away without hand. that is, The higheſt are of ſo little ſtrength, if God cometh to ſmite them, that they dye ſuddenly, At midnight, That is, in the darkneſs of ignorance and the dead ſleep of ſin, as it is with men commonly at midnight; ſo the fooliſh rich man in the Goſpel, heard a voice ſaying to him; Thou fool, this night will they fetch away thy Soule from thee. And the Bridegrome cometh at midnight, and in Egypt the firſt born were ſlain at midnight, and the hoaſt of Sannacherib; and becauſe the wicked are alwaies paſſing on in this way throughout all their lives, it is ſaid not Tranſibunt, ſaith Gregory; That is, They ſhall paſſe, but Pertranſibunt, They ſhall paſſe through, and the mighty ſhall be taken away without hand. That is, Without ſeeing the hand that ſmiteth them; which is a divine force, inviſibly cutting aſſunder the thred of their lives in a moment, as with their wicked hands to be ſeen, imbrued in blood, have through their power taken away and ſpoyled others. If any ſhall think that he may ly hid and ſo eſcape this ſeverity, it is reſolved no, the blackeſt darkneſſe of midnight ſhall not hide him. Verſ. 20. Luk. 12. Math. 25. Gregor. Verſ. 21. 22.

For he will not lay upon man more then right, that he ſhould enter into judgment with God. Vulg. For it is no more in the power of man, that he ſhould come to God to judgment. Hebr. He will not put upon man any more, for it is עוד To come into judgment with God. In expounding this, Gregory is very large, by mans coming into judgment with God, underſtanding that judgment, of which the Apoſtle ſaith; If yee would judge your ſelves, yee ſhould not be judged. And this is when a man keepeth court, as it were, in his own conſcience, examining his evil doings, acknowledging them and condemning himſelf therefore, and ſuffering by extream grife and ſorrow in his minde for them; For in him that judgeth himſelf as he ſhould, there is nothing wanting that is in a Court of juſtice; for the conſcience accuſeth, and heapeth up all the evils that a man hath done againſt himſelf, reaſon condemneth him, and feare bindeth him, and greife tormenteth him: If the words be thus underſtood, they muſt be taken as a preſcription of a remedy againſt the miſeries that they ſhall be in, that dye in darkneſs, ſleeping as at midnight ſecurely in their ſinnes. That man that would not have it fall out thus unto him, muſt prevent that judgment, when all men ſhall be brought before God to judgment, by Verſ. 23. Gregory. 1 Cor 11. 33.

by comming into judgment with him whilſt he liveth here: And then this is as if he had ſayd, whereas now man hath done evil; and no evil that he doth, lyeth hid from God: This is all that God putteth upon him therefore, or requireth at his hands, that he may eſcape Deſtruction, that will otherwiſe ſuddenly come, viz. To come ſpeedily into judgment with God, by judging himſelf, as hath been ſayd: For further illuſtration whereof he ſaith, that this tormenting of our ſelves by ſorrow for our ſinnes, was figured out by the fire which the Preiſts were commanded to kindle every morning in the Tabernacle, and to keep it continually burning; for ſo he that would eſcape Hell fire, ought firſt in the morning to ſet himſelf awork about judging himſelf for his ſinnes, and ſo mourn dayly for them: And as Jeremy being in the Dungeon was bidden to put Ropes under his Arms, and old rags, that he might be lifted out and not periſh there; ſo he that would be lifted out of the dark dungeon of ſinns, muſt take the help of Gods Laws, binding them about him, that looking hereat he may be put to pain and ſorrow, conſidering his miſerable Eſtate through his breaking of them, which are ſo harſh, and ſo terribly threaten ſinners, and be heaved up hereby out of this dungeon by having now more regard unto them, to live according to them; and that he may not be pained and peirced hereby unto deſperation, look at old Examples of the Faithfull, and how many of them have faln and been judged and yet have had mercy again extended unto them, and ſo have been ſet in a ſalutiferous Eſtate: Thus Gregory by allegorizing, which becauſe it is for matter moſt true and uſefull for us, I have thus largely ſet down. But for the literall meaning, it is, that wicked men are not to expect further warning, before that God cometh into judgment with them to cut them off; which as he ſayd before, ſhall be done ſuddenly, and not after the manner of men, that keep Courts of juſtice, apprehending, and committing and ſetting a day to judge Malefactors; then hearing Witneſſes and pleadings, and ſo proceeding to judge them: And this Elihu ſpeaketh, becauſe Job had deſired that he might come to the Throne of God, and plead his cauſe with him: And thus underſtood, we may note that now is all the time that God giveth unto man to repent; that he may eſcape his judgments, he will give him no more warning by a judiciall proceeding in time: But if he expecteth this, and ſo delayeth; he ſhall be deceived, and feel his ſtroak to his everlaſting deſtruction before he ſeeth it coming, and who then is ſo hard hearted as not to be awakned hereby from his ſecurity to ſpeedy repentance: Some will have the meaning to be, that God in judging men will lay no more to their charge then he juſtly can: Some that God hath not put it into the power of man to come and bear a part with him in judging what is fit for him to do.

Note.

Ier. 8.

Note.

Iſidor.
Tigur.
Vatabl.

Verſ. 24. Gregory. He ſhall break in peices mighty men without number, and ſet others in their ſtead: As at the day of judgment innumerable men ſhall be caſt away and broaken with Gods juſt judgments, which ſhall be done openly and viſibly, and others received into his Kingdome, ſo it is now dayly done, although we ſee it not ſo plainly; many that ſeem to be ſtrong in Faith and Grace, either have it not in truth or fall away and periſh, but others being before void of Grace, are converted, and ſo are ſet inſtead of them into the ſtate of Grace and Salvation. As the Jews being rejected the Gentiles were taken into Gods favour in their ſtead, and Judas was broken in peices, but the theif upon the Croſſe, was healed and ſaved.

Verſ. 25. Therefore he knoweth their works and overturneth them in the night, that they are deſtroyed: Becauſe God is ſayd before to break multitudes in peices, and he is moſt juſt; it appeareth, that he knoweth their moſt ſecret evill works, and when they know not or are not aware of it, he overthroweth them therefore. And here Gregory noteth, that the might ſetteth forth ſin, and that by ſinning men are blinded, one ſinn being by Gods judgment, made unto them the cauſe of another, whereof yet they have no perceivance vance any more, then a man can ſee colours in a dark night; and by being filled with all manner of ſin and wickedneſs, they come to be overthrown in regard of grace, and ſo [a]re deſtroyed everlaſtingly: As the Gentiles being darkened firſt by idolatry, were after given over to a reprobate ſenſe: And this is the caſe of Beleivers under the Goſpel, even innumerable Chriſtians are broken in peices, according to the phraſe uſed, Verſ. 24. For even of them many be called, but few choſen, which was before by Jeremiah, ſaying; The daies come, that the City ſhall be built unto the Lord, by the Tower of Hananeel, to the gate of the corner: And the meaſuring line ſhal go over againſt it by the hil Gareb: the vul. Tr. Ultra normam menſuræ. For what is the Lords city here ſpoken of, but the Church, which cometh from the Tower Hananeel, ſignifying the grace of God, to the gate of the corner joyning two walls, together, whereby Jews and Gentiles are ſet forth, who together make one Church, but the meaſure not ſtaying here, goeth yet a great way further, beyond the meaſuring line, to ſhew that there ſhould be very many in the Church, who ſhould walk by no rule, and theſe be the innumerable to be broken to peices.

Rom. 1. 19.

Ier. 31. 38. 39.

He ſtriketh them as wicked men in the open ſight of others: Becauſe they turned back from him, and would not conſider any of his waies, &c. For theſe words, In the open ſight of others. In vulg. is, In the place of the ſeeing. So likewiſe Hebr. that is, The true faithful Servants of God, who are not in darkneſſe but in the light, ſeeing and making uſe of theſe his judgments againſt the wicked, to feare him the more.

Verſ. 26. 27.

When he giveth quietneſſe, who then can make trouble? And if he hideth his face, who can behold him? Whether it be againſt a Nation or a man only. That is, Hereby it appeareth, that great men who are Tyrants, are ſmitten by God, as was before ſaid, at the cries of the poor coming up unto him againſt them, becauſe as when a mans waies pleaſe God, he ſhall have peace and proſperity, let men work againſt him what they can; but contrariwiſe if he for his wickedneſſe abſenteth himſelf, as it were, not looking now any more with a favourable eye upon him, how can that Prince, yea or if it be a Nation, that turneth wicked, behold the light of his countenance; that is, His face turned towards him, or if any were to uphold him in ſuch a proſperous condition; or although men be wicked, and GOD beareth with them for a time, during that time, none can overthrow their quiet: But this time being out, and their ſinnes being full, as it was ſaid of the Amorites, they ſhall not now ſee GOD any more looking upon them in favour, but in wrath filling them with trouble.

Verſ. 29.

Gen. 15.

That the hypocrite reign not, leaſt the people be enſnared. Vulg. Who makes a man an hypocrite to reigning for the ſinnes of the people. Hebr. From the reign of an hypocrite, from the ſnares of the people, or from a man an hypocrite reigning. Which words have reference to Gods hiding of himſelf, Verſ. 29. They being here named, from whom he hideth himſelf for their wickedneſſe, Viz. The King that is an hypocrite ſo called, becauſe when he was thus by the conſent of the people preferred, they expected all good from him, but he proveth contrary, an Oppreſſor, and a ringleader in waies of vice and errour; and The ſnares of the people. That is, From the people being thus enſnared and ſubjected by one that proveth contrary to their expectation, but worthily becauſe they deſerve none better: As it is ſaid of Phocas, when he was Emperour, a certain devout man pleading with the Lord, and ſaying, Why doſt thou make ſuch a man Emperour? Had an anſwer thus, Becauſe I could not finde any worſe to ſet over you being ſo wicked.

Verſ. 30.

Surely it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have borne chaſtiſement, I will not offend any more, &c. Proud Elihu falleth to teaching of Job again, a man wiſer then himſelf, what he ſhould have done upon his greivous ſufferings, and to have juſtified himſelf as unworthy hereof.

Verſ. 31.

Should

Verſ. 33. Should it be according to thy minde, he will recompence it, whether thou refuſe or chooſe, and not I, therefore ſpeak what thou knoweſt. The vulg. Hath God required it, Eam, of thee, becauſe it diſpleaſed thee; for thou beganneſt to ſpeak, not I, and if thou knoweſt any better ſpeak. Hebr. Shall it come from thee what he ſhall recompence, becauſe thou haſt refuſed, becauſe thou haſt choſen and not I, and what thou knoweſt ſpeak. Gregory following the Vulg. ſaith, By theſe words, Hath God required it of thee, &c. He meaneth, if I have ſpoken otherwiſe, then I ought to do, thou ſhalt not anſwer for it, neither is it his will, that thou ſhouldſt judge me therefore, though thou beeſt offended at it, but God ſhall judge me: and for thee thou haſt no cauſe, for not I but thou beganneſt to ſpeak: But herein I can ſee no ſuch good ſenſe, as to reſt in it: And others following divers Tranſlations, ſatisfie not in any ſenſe given by them; but keep we cloſe to the Hebrew, and this will appear to be the meaning: Having in the former words ſhewed him, what he ſhould ſay in all humility, now to preſſe him to it, he putteth it to his own conſcience, to ſay, whether he thinketh that God will be directed by him, how to deal with him, becauſe he ſeemed in his ſpeeches beforegoing, to refuſe his dealings, by patiently bearing his ſufferings; and to chooſe ſome other way of being dealt withall; which Elihu ſaith, that he would never do, neither thought he it lawful: contrary to which if Job knew any thing, he willeth them to ſpeak out, as Junius rendreth it.

Gregor.

Verſ. 34. 35. Let a man of underſtanding tell me, and a man of Wiſedome hearken to me. Job hath ſpoken without knowledge, &c. Here inſolency breaketh out again in Elihu againſt Job, after many things ſpoken by him very divinely, and all the arrogant likewiſe, although ſometimes they ſpeak very well, yet they ſoon ſhew themſelves what they are, and the pride that is in them.

Verſ. 36. My deſire is, that Job may be tried to the end, becauſe of his anſwers for wicked men: Verſ. 37. For he addeth rebellion to his ſin, &c. The vulg. My Father, let Job be tried to the end, ceaſe not from a man of iniquity. The word אבי ſignifieth either, My Father or my will. But I rather take it, that Elihu now turneth himſelf to God, ſeeing that all which he or the other three had ſaid, was but loſt labour towards the making of Job to humble himſelf, and confeſſe his ſinnes, he would not take of his puniſhments, but ſtill hold him under, as he was well worthy: For the next words they are Hebrew על־תשבות For the returns in men of wickedneſſe. That is, His anſwers returned, which are common in wicked men: For although Job ſaid nothing, it ſeemeth by Verſ. 37. That he ſhewed ſignes of deriſion and diſdain, at all that had been ſpoken, which made Elihu to rage now againſt him, and ſay, He addeth rebellion to his ſinnes, and clapeth his hands, &c.

CHAP. XXXV.

Verſ. 2. Verſ. 3. THinkeſt thou that to be right, that thou ſaideſt, My righteouſneſſe is more then Gods: For thou ſaideſt, What profit ſhall I have, if I be cleanſed from my ſin? This alſo Gregory noteth, was no where ſpoken by Job in theſe words, but whatſoever he ſpake neare unto it, could not juſtly be reproved, as hath been before ſhewed.

Verſ. 4. Verſ. 5. I will anſwer thee, and thy companions with thee. Look to the Heavens, &c. Elihu having laid a falſe foundation to himſelf, of another Oration, though it be true, which he henceforth ſaith, yet herein he ſpeaketh nothing that toucheth Job, but may afford profitable inſtruction to us: He proveth by the higheſt of the Heavens, then which God is higher, that man cannot profit or hinder God, if he be righteous or wicked: For how ſhould any thing done by him reach up to God, when as they cannot reach up to theſe viſible Heavens: We may by that which we do, profit or hurt men like to our ſelves, and our ſelves alſo; becauſe If thou beeſt wiſe, ſaith Solomon, thou art wiſe for thy ſelf; and if thou ſcorneſt, thou alone ſhalt bear it: And David, My goodneſſe extendeth not to thee, but to the Saints upon Earth: If God ſpeaketh at any time as being troubled at mens ſinnes, as where it is ſaid, it greived him at the Heart, that he had made man: this is but after the manner of men in ſtooping to their capacity, and not becauſe indeed he, is ſubject to any paſſion, as men are, that we might be the more affected with our ſinnes, for our provoking of God, and repent and turn from our ſins, becauſe our greiving of him cannot be but to our great greif, for ſuffering by his taking revenge upon us, and to our confuſion, as Jeremiah ſaith, Do they provoke me to anger and not themſelves to the confuſion of their own faces?

ſhould

Prov. 9. 12. Pſal. 16. 1. Gen. 6. Ier. 31.

By reaſon of the multitude of oppreſſions, they make the Oppreſſed to cry, &c. Having ſhewed before that men may hurt or profit one another in generall, now he proceedeth to declare the ſame more particularly. For the Oppreſſions here ſpoken of, they are not only to be underſtood in reſpect of worldly things, by taking away of which, poor men are made to cry out, but in reſpect of ſpirituall Oppreſſions, whereby the Soul is made poor, and miſerable, and blind, and naked, as the Lord ſaith of the Angel of the Church of Laodicea: For they oppreſſe others this way, that by their evill Examples corrupt their minds from the ſincerity of the truth, drawing them to ſin and Errour: For this is a more greivous Oppreſſion then that, becauſe Oppreſſors in reſpect of our Goods, do but ſeek to invade, and deprive us of things without, wherein our happineſſe lyeth not, theſe of Goodneſs within, in which our happineſs lyeth: Theſe rage through the love of things, theſe through the hatred of virtues, thoſe envy that we have any thing, theſe that we live: Thoſe ſtudy to take away outward things that pleaſe them, theſe to diſpute inward things that diſpleaſe them. By how much therefore the life of manners excelleth the ſubſtance of things, ſo much the more greivous is the oppreſſing evill livers that offer violence to our manners: And yet to ſhew, that there are not a few, but very many that do ſo, it is here ſayd, Through the multitude of Oppreſſors, and for the Arme of the mighty they cry out: Which is added to ſhew, that wicked men if they have power, what they cannot effect by evill examples, they will compell to for fear of their power ready to be uſed againſt the uncorrupted virtuous: And whereas he that ſeeketh to corrupt by his evill example, uſeth only the voice of perſwaſion; he that for fear will make men yeild to that which is evill, ſpeaketh by the Arm of Tyranny; whilſt we ſee the examples of evil actions, we do but hear the noiſe of a Corrupter in our ears, but when by force we are compelled to ſin, we feel a Tyrant in our hearts: But the minds of theſe that are unmoveably fixed in God, do as much contemn theſe things, as they know them to be againſt his will: For expecting the rewards of Eternity, they take ſtrength from adverſity, knowing that the harder fight they have, the more glorious Crown of victory they ſhall have: And therefore being preſſed with Adverſity, they increaſe in ſpiritual ſtrength; as the fire which ſeemeth by blowing to be put out, hath the flame thereof increaſed, ſo they by that, through which it is thought they will be made to fall, are more ſtrengthned.

Verſ. 9. Gregor. Revel. 3. Note.

But none ſaith, Where is God my Maker, who giveth ſongs in the night? Having ſhewed how men cry out for oppreſſions, V. 9. now he toucheth upon the cauſe of ſuch impatience, and crying out, it is for want of conſideration, that our ſufferings come all from God; although men be the Inſtruments, and if they that ſuffer conſider this, and beleive in, and fear him, they ſhall in the night of Adverſity have ſo great joy, that it ſhall make them inſtead of crying out to break out, into ſinging, as did Paul and Silas, who

Verſ. 10.

Act. 16. Pſal. 32. had been ſore ſcourged, and immediately at midnight in priſon ſung a Pſalm. And David having ſaid, Thou art my refuge from the preſſure that hath compaſſed me about, addeth, My Exultation. As to Ezek. a book was given wherein were written Lamentations, a ſong and woe. For what is this book, but the book of God, wherein joyfull things are written, but withall heavy ſufferings to be born, cauſing ſorrow and lamentation firſt, and then ſhall follow ſinging for ioy. Now that we may be comforted in theſe things, we muſt look to God our Maker, which we do when we conſider, that he, who made that which was not, leaveth it not without Government, being made: he who made man, never leaveth him to be unjuſtly tormented, neither doth he ſuffer through neglect that to periſh, that is, who created that which was not, that it might be: And this ſeemeth by Elihu to be ſpoken in anſwer to the queſtion made by Job, Chapt. 21. 7. Why do the wicked live, and Tyrants oppreſſe the poor? It is becauſe no man looketh to his Maker, and if he would, he ſhould have joy to alienate his ſorrow that is oppreſſed.

Verſ. 11. Gregor. Who teacheth us more then the beaſts of the Earth, and makes us wiſer then the fowles of Heavn. By the Beaſts of the Earth ſayth Gregory, we may underſtand ſenſual men who ſet their minds upon the baſe things of this world, and by the Fowles of the Air, the proud, who are elevated in their own conceits upon the wings of arrogancy, as birds that fly aloft in the aire. Of the firſt of theſe the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, ſaying, Be not ſo rude and ignorant, as the horſe and mule: And the Apoſtle, There be ſome whoſe God is their belly, their Glory their ſhame, that mind Earthly things. Of the other, Nebuchadnezzar, Herod, Pharoah, and Diotrephes, together with the Phariſee, are Examples: Or by the beaſts underſtand the wicked, of whom it is ſayd, Man being in honour, underſtandeth not, but is like to the beaſts that periſh, by the fowls, Devills, who are called the Prince of the Aire, and are ſet forth by the fowls of the aire in the parable of the ſower, that went out to ſow. Now man who is one that knoweth God, as was before ſayd, is taught more then theſe, that is, to be heavenly minded, when they are earthly, to be humble, when they are proud, to be righteous, when they are wicked, and to be godly wiſe, when the Devill is maliciouſly ſubtile like the Serpent: If by the beaſts of the Earth, and fowles of Heaven we underſtand the creatures properly ſo called. The meaning is, although they have ſome underſtanding by the inſtinct of nature, for which ſome of them be admirable, eſpecially the fowles of the Aire, whoſe cryes or ſingings are often ominous, and ſo be many of their doings, as of the Stork, the Crane, and the Swallow, that know to go out of cold Countries in Winter, and to come again in Summer, yet God hath put more underſtanding into man, ſo that he ſhould not do like them, one making a prey of another, as beaſts and birds of prey do, and Oppreſſours of whom he ſpake before, do likewiſe: But this is horrible ingratitude to God, and an intollerable abuſe of this his gift of underſtanding.

Pſal. 32. Phil. 3. 17. 18. Luk. 18. Pſal. 49. Eph. 2. Matth. 13. Ier. 8.

Verſ. 12. Gregor. There they cry, but none giveth anſwer, becauſe of the pride of evill men: That is, juſt men, who know God that made them; being oppreſſed by the wicked in this World, cry out unto God to be delivered, but he anſwereth them not by delivering them, becauſe evill men that oppreſſe them, are herein proud, to lift up their hands againſt God, in ſmiting of his Servants, and their ſucceſſe in ſo doing puffeth them up more and more, they taking this for a ſign of Gods favour, and good liking of their Tyrannicall proceedings, that their condemnation at the laſt may be the greater: For when the Righteous being oppreſſed cry unto God for deliverance, it is more for the good of theſe that perſecute them, then through the deſire that they have to be freed from their ſufferings: For ſometimes when God ſtandeth up by his power, and miraculouſly ſaveth his faithfull Servants, even the moſt hard hearted ſeeing it are converted, as Nebuchadnezzar at the ſight of the miraculous deliverance of the three Children whom he caſt into

Note. Dan. 2.

to the fiery Furnace: But if they be ſuch, as God will not ſhew any mercy to, he anſwereth not the deſires of the righteous, oppreſſed by them, becauſe of the intollerable pride of Perſecutors, that by their ſucceſſe in theſe their wicked waies, being ſtill lifted up higher, they might take the greater fall in the end: So that wicked Perſecutors are in worſe caſe, when they proſper in their deſignes againſt the juſt, then when they are ſtopped in their proceedings, and the juſt are delivered out of their hands, for now they take heart to themſelves, to go on in their evill waies to inevitable deſtruction, whereas by being ſtopped, ſo as hath been ſaid, they might have been converted and ſaved: For this it is ſaid, Proſperity ſlayeth the fool. And of Antichriſt, that he hath power given him to do, a thouſand two hundred and ſixty daies, and that he maketh war with the Saints and prevaileth, and likewiſe of Antiochus, Epiphanes, his forerunner, or theſe words; For t he pride of evil doers. May be expounded of thoſe, that cry and are not heard to be delivered from their oppreſſions, becauſe they are not humbled, but proud and wicked ſtil: Some will have theſe words, They have none anſwer for the pride of evill doers. Underſtood thus, They of whoſe oppreſſions he ſpake before, are not heard to be delivered from proud oppreſſors, but are ſtil kept under by them. Laſtly, Some underſtand it of oppreſſors themſelves, who may pray for ſucceſſe in their waies, or as Dives in Hell torments, but have no anſwer of comfort: But I reſt in the firſt, being in all things as true, as occult and witty; and yet it may look as well at the unworthineſs of thoſe that cry for their unhumbled and unconverted hearts, in either of which caſes no man muſt look to prevail, although they make many prayers, and for pride of heart in ſuch as pray in particular, and want of humility. See the example of the Phariſee, Luke 18.

Note.

Prov. 1. Revel. 11. Dan. 9.

Note. Iſa. 1. 14.

Surely God will not heare vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it. Vulg. For God will not heare in vain, and the Almighty will behold, or into the cauſes of every one. The N. Tran. Is here moſt exactly according to the Hebr. And therefore Gregories or others Expoſitions hereupon, are without ground: The meaning is plain, as he had yeilded this as a cauſe, why men praying are not heard, ſo here he giveth a reaſon thereof: They are not heard becauſe they pray unhumbled and unſanctified, and ſuch vain men praying, God will not heare, or regard it whatſoever they ſay. Verſ. 13.

Although thou ſaieſt, thou ſhalt not ſee him, yet judgment is before him, therefore truſt thou in him. Here is incouragment for ſuch as in humility and faith, purging their hands from ſin, and extending them to do good, ſeek unto God, although for his long delaying to anſwer them, they may think, that he ſeeth or conſidereth not, as the Vulg. hath it, For there is judgment before him. That is, He will deal juſtly and mercifully by thee at length, yea and whilſt he delaieth to anſwer, he is working thy cure, as the Chyrurgion, that is long in cutting a putrifyed ſoare, not ſeeming to regard the deſires of the pained Patient, that praieth him to have done, but knowing what is neceſſary to be done for his beſt good, he ſtill keepeth him under his hand; ſo God many times dealeth with a faithful perſon, whilſt he thinketh, that he neglecteth him, he is curing of him; therefore ſaith he, Truſt thou in him: Stay thy ſelf upon this, that he knoweth what is beſt for thee, and therefore if he deferreth his anſwer, it ſhall be for thy good. Verſ. 14.

Note.

But now becauſe it is not ſo, he hath viſited his anger, yet he knoweth it not in great extremity. Vulg. For now he bringeth not in his anger, neither doth he revenge wickedneſſe very much. Hebr. And now for his wrath is no viſitation, and he knoweth not in a multitude very much, בפש מיחך Beraſhmad in multitudine valde, Or now becauſe nothing, his anger hath viſited, and בפש באך may be rendred in a very great multitude: And Verſ. 15.

ſo it will come neare to N.Tr. If by a very great multitude we underſtand, Of miſeries. But in Vulg. both the Original is varied from, and the ſenſe altered, which is, Becauſe men in miſery do not ſo; that is, Put not their truſt in him, but becauſe of his deferring to anſwer, fall to deſpair, their viſitations are in wrath, and they ſhall not know or finde God thus working for their good, although they be very much viſited, or with a very great multitude of judgments and troubles in this World.

Verſ. 16. Andh itherto Elihu hath ſpoken well; but Verſ. 16. in ſaying, that Job therefore multiplied words in vain, he ſhewed again the great arrogancy of his minde.

CHAP. XXXVI

HERE Elihu reſumeth that argument again, which he had in hand, Chap 35. 2. Where he challenged Job for ſaying, My righteouſneſſe is more then Gods. Contrary to which he ſaith, Verſ. 3. I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and I will aſcribe righteouſneſſe to my Maker. But herein again, he ſheweth his arrogancy, becauſe that in way of boaſting of his ſuperabundant knowledge, he ſaith thus, and Verſe 2. That he hath yet more to ſay for God: It is the part indeed ofevery good Teacher to fill himſelf with ſuch knowledge, to ſpeak for God again and again, that all men may aſcribe unto him the glory of moſt exact righteouſneſſe, and of all goodneſſe: But herein lieth a fault, if he venteth his inoſtentation, not that God may be reverenced, but that he for his eloquence and great learning may be praiſed.

Verſ. 3.

Note.

Verſ. 4. For my words ſhall not be falſe, he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee. Vulger, Perfect knowledge ſhall be proved unto thee. But we ſhall not need to alter the word, but only to expound it, and this Vatablus doth well thus; Perfect knowledge. That is, God is with thee. Or I know, that thou accounteſt whatſoever cometh from God, to he ſpoken accordiug to perfect wiſedome and knowledge; and therefore my ſpeeches ſhall be of force with thee touching Gods equity and righteouſneſſe in all his dealings, for ſo much as I ſhall ſpeak nothing but his truth, and what comes from him.

Vatabl.

Verſ. 5. Behold, God is mighty, and deſpiſeth not any; he is mighty in ſtrength and wiſedome. Vulg. God caſteth not away the mighty, ſeeing he is mighty. Hebr. Caſteth not away or refuſeth not the mighty ſtrong heart. It is an argument drawn from Gods ſupremacy, and the ſoveraign power that he hath over all, to prove that he is not againſt the power and authority of men, if it be uſed as it ought to be: But if he that is in authority, abuſeth it, to the elevating of his heart in pride, looking upon his ſubjects, as if they were not made by the ſame hand, or of the ſame mettal with themſelves, and deſpiſing their counſel, he thinketh himſelf only wiſe, becauſe he is greateſt; God will pull him down and make him deſpicable, as he did Nebuchadnezzar: For men being all equal by nature, one is lifted up above others becauſe of ſin, to uſe his power for the ſuppreſſing of it only; otherwiſe being as David, who ſaid, My eyes are not haughty, I have no proud looks. Taking of his power, as Gregory ſaith, that which helpeth, and to expel that which tempteth, to look upon himſelf, ſet up hereby as but equal yet with others, but in the zeal of revenge taking upon ſin, to preſer himſelf before them: As Peter, who had a principality in the Church committed unto him, yet having to do with Cornelius, that carried himſelf too lowly towards him; he ſaid, I alſo am a man. Thus making himſelf equal to him, but when with Ananias and Saphira, he extended his power to the ſtriking of them down dead, for their lying to the

Iſa. 14.

Pſal. 141.

Gregory.

the holy Ghoſt: And Paul alſo to the Theſſalonians ſaith, We were as little ones amongſt you, but to the Corinthians ſinning: Will you that I come unto you in a rod, or in the ſpirit of meekneſſe? The cheife place therefore is ruled well, when we rule rather over vices then men: The ſcope of Elihu in thus ſaying, was to prove Job wicked, and God juſt; becauſe otherwiſe God would not have turned him out of his ample poſſeſſions, as he had done. And to theſe words anſwereth, Verſe 6. He giveth not life to the wicked, but right to the poor. That is, Such as abuſe their ſoveraign power to pride, ſhall come to ruine, but the humble, as in equity it is meet, ſhall be preſerved. 1 Theſ. 2.

He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous, but with Kings are they on the Throne, &c. Here he further amplifieth that which he ſaid of Gods righteous, dealing with mighty men, that be righteous, they are not brought down but eſtabliſhed. Verſ. 7.

Then if they be bound in fetters, and held by cords of affliction, he will ſhew them their works. Gods eyes are not only upon the righteous reigning, but alſo upon the wicked; ſo that the one being exalted, the other are pulled down: As Manaſſeth, who was, as is here ſaid, bound and carried into Babilon; but then being better inſtructed by his chaſtiſement he came to live in proſperity again, as followeth, Verſe 9. 10. 11. Verſ. 8.

But if then they obey not, they ſhall dye by the ſword, and periſh without knowledge. That is, The ſword of Gods juſtice cutting them off, and after death, like the fooliſh Virgins, go into perdition. Verſ. 12.

But the hypocrites in heart heap up wrath, they cry not when he bindeth them. That is, When they are bound in bonds of affliction, before ſpoken of, they cry not in prayer, but heap up wrath againſt the day of wrath: As Paul maketh up this ſaying, They dye in youth, and their life among the unclean. Vulg. Their Soul ſhould dye in a tempeſt, and their life amongſt the effeminate. Hebr. Either in childhood or an hard death, כנרתה and for amongſt the unclean is amongſt harlots. The hypocrite having born himſelf as a pure and holy perſon, when he is in the bonds of miſery, crieth not out in confeſſing his ſinnes and praying, becauſe he is aſhamed ſo to do, although he be kept under, even to the death; for he had rather dye then diſcloſe any thing againſt himſelf, that he may be ſaved, for ſo he thinketh that his wickedneſſe, which alwaies before hid, will come to light to his perpetual diſgrace, according to Verſe 13. But here it is ſhewed, how they ſhall ſmart for it, by dying a tormentiug death, as their life hath been lead in ſecret in all fleſhly pleaſure: For this is noted to be a property of an hypocrite to be given to the fleſh: Both by Peter, and by Jude in Epiſtle: And in all this Elihu girdeth at Job, as being ſuch an one. Verſ. 13. Rom. 2. 4. Verſ. 14. Note. 2 Pet. 2.

He delivereth the Poor in affliction, and openeth their Ears in oppreſſion: Here he returneth again to the humble brought to obedience by affliction, of whom he ſpake, Verſ. 10. In the ſame phraſe of opening their Eares. Verſ. 15.

So he would have removed thee out of the ſtrait into a broad place, &c. To Job it was not ſo, ſaith he, as God would have been ready to have dealt by him, if he had not ſtopt his Ears againſt diſcipline, refuſing to confeſs his ſinnes, and ſtanding upon his juſtification. Verſ. 16.

But he fulfilled the judgment of the wicked: That is, brought upon himſelf judgments to the full. Ver. 17.

Becauſe there is wrath, beware leaſt he take thee away with his ſtroak, then a great ranſome cannot deliver thee. Vulg. Let not Wrath therefore overcome thee, that thou ſhouldeſt oppreſſe any man; nor the multitude of places incline thee. But in more corrected Tranſlations it is, multitude of gifts. But all that cleave to the Originall have it as in New Tran. which is moſt true, ſo that Elihu doth not here counſel Job as he may ſeem according to the Vulgar, Verſ. 18.

Vulgar, what to do; if he ſhould recover his former proſperous Eſtate, but that being beſet with ſo great miſery, declaring the wrath of God to be great againſt him, he ſhould ſpeedily repent, as not knowing how ſhort a time he ſhould live to do, and if hapned to dy thus, then no ranſome could ſave him from everlaſting deſtruction: If he ſhould think by his riches to be ranſomed, as men are out of captivity from the Enemy, he addeth V. 19.

Verſ. 19. Will he eſtrem thy riches, no not the gold, nor all the forces of ſtrength: The word שׁוּע firſt and cheifly ſignifieth crying, then riches; but becauſe he ſpake before of ranſome, it is beſt rendred riches: According to this Saint

1 Pet. 1. 18. Peter ſaith, that we are not redeemed with corruptible things, as Gold and ſilver, &c. And if a man think by his great power yet to be delivered from death, all the ſtrength of men cannot do it, as we may ſee in Pharoah and his hoaſt, and in Sannacherib King of Aſſyria.

Verſ. 20. Deſire not the Night when people are cut off in their place. Vulgar, Protract not the night that peoples ſhould come up for them. Expounded by Gregory thus, Being faln into temptations, cut off the darkneſs of ſadneſſe the ſooner, leaſt what high things thou haſt thought in tranquility, turn in thy trouble to the couſuſion of darkneſſe, Heb. Reſpect or deſire not the night for the aſcendings of people under them: The word עֲלוֹת alſo ſometime ſignifieth cutting off, and תחת either under them, or for or in their place: This being very obſcure, divers Expoſitors bring divers Expoſitions, but the true dependeth upon the right rendring of the word שׁאף Anhelare, earneſtly to deſire, the meaning then is, think not long for an opportunity to come ſecretly and ſuddenly, as in the night upon others, to rob and ſpoil them of their poſſeſſions, as ambitious worldly Kings do oftentimes, thus by invading their Inheritances, expelling them and placing their own men in their ſtead: As Iudg. 18. the tribe of Dan did by the men of Laiſh; who dwelt ſecurely, and ſo in the night of their ſecurity, came upon them and expelled them out of their land, and took it into their poſſeſſion. For Job being a King, as hath been before ſayd, and by Elihu counted a Tyrant, he may well be thought in exhorting him to turn from other ſinnes, that God might reſtore him again to his Priſtine Wealth and dignity; now to come to ſpeak againſt this, as a moſt capitall one, viz. of lying in wait, as Robbers do in the night, and ſuch ſometimes as fight to get other mens Lands and Goods from them to inlarge their own, and being thus underſtood, the words agree, whether they be rendred aſcendings of of peoples under them; That is, being ſubdued thus by him a King coming ſuddenly upon them with his army or Aſcendings of people in their ſtead, by force expelling them that he comes upon; and pla-

2 King. 17. cing others in their room, as the King of Aſſyria, having ſubdued the land of Iſrael, brought others from divers places to dwell in their City Samaria: And this is a good Admonition indeed for Tyrants, but miſapplyed to ob; who abhorred from ſuch doing, as appreareth, Chapt. 30. 31.

Verſ. 21. Take heed, regard not iniquity, for this haſt thou choſen rather thon affliction. vulgar. Thou haſt begun to follow this after miſery: Hebr. Thou haſt choſen this from perverſneſſe, or pravity, or adverſity firſt cauſed hereby. And the meaning is, ceaſe from ſinning, which I cannot ſee that thou hitherto doſt, but rather increaſeſt it; more malignity being cauſed in thee by that which thou haſt before ill done, and more miſery and ſufferings therefore, rather then being made penitent, and ſo in way of deliverrnce: And this he ſpeaketh in relating to that which he had ſayd before, that Job juſtified himſelf

Note. above God; for who ſo doth thus, and makes no better uſe of his ſufferings, chooſeth ſin, or preferreth it ſtill, as it were, when by his chaſtiſement he ſhould rather be reclaimed from it, and ſo is wel worthy, without any commiſeration to be had of him to ſuffer ſtill, and to periſh in his ſufferings: And to chooſe from, is better rendred After then Rather, which perplexeth the ſenſe, but rendring it From, makes it plain, becauſe he that doth thus is firſt afflicted, and then inſtead of repenting, there followeth in him more ſinning.

afflicted

Behold God exalteth by his power, who teacheth like him? vulg. God is high in his ſtrength, none amongſt the Law-givers is like unto him. The ſenſe being the ſame, but New Tranſlat. better rendreth the words: Here Elihu labours to make Job and all men patient in affliction, and to aſcribe when they are moſt ſharply dealt with all, Juſtice, Equity, and Mercy to him, patiently reſting in his wayes of teaching, as wherein he excelleth all other Teachers. For though he ſeemeth to be very harſh in laying ſuch greivous things upon men, yet they that fear and truſt in him, ſhall ſurely be delivered, when by judging them he hath wrought this good work in them, whereas other Teachers are not able to do ſo to them that are taught by them. Verſ. 22.

Who hath injoyned him his way, or who can ſay thou haſt wrought iniquity? vulg. Who can ſearch out his waies: Hebr. Who viſiteth upon him his wayes. Here Elihu after extolleth the ways whereby God teacheth men, proceedeth to prove the ſame, by this, that there are none above him to be his viſitors, to reprove or allow by their authority what he doth, but he is Lord over all, ſo that no man can ſay, that what he doth is unjuſt, what way ſoever he taketh with men, for he doth all things for the beſt of ſuch as love him, and are choſen of his purpoſe. Verſ. 23.

Remember thou magnifie his work which men behold. Every one may ſee it, man may behold it afar off: For Men behold, the vulg. hath, Men ſing, the word שיר ſignifieth to ſing, and שורר a Singer, yet it is alſo rendred Behold, the meaning is to the end, that thou mayſt fear to ſpeak againſt him in any thing, look up to his works of creation, the Sun, Moon, and Starrs, and hence learn of what power and wiſdome he is, as Rom. 1. 19. to reverence him whatſoever he doth to thee. Rom. 8. 28. Verſ. 24.

Behold God is great and we know him not, neither can the number of his years be ſearched out. As he had by other ſuper-excellencies extolled God before, ſo now he proceedeth further in the ſame argument, praiſing him from his immenſity, of which we cannot attain to a perfect knowledge, and his Eternity being without beginning, or end of his daies, as elſewhere it is alſo ſpoken of him. Verſ. 26.

He maketh ſmall the Rain, &c. From ſhewing the excellency of God in himſelf, now he cometh to ſhew it in his works, in the making the rain and the clouds, of which enough before, and in Pſalmes, v. 29. Can any underſtand the ſpreading of his clouds, or the Raies of his tabernacle? he ſpreadeth his light upon it, and covereth the bottome of the ſea: vulg. If he will extend his clouds as his tent, and lighten with his light from above, he ſhall cover the things of the ſea, Heb. Yea if he ſhall underſtand, That is, can any, &c. Us in New Tr. which is to be preferred, he goeth on to his great works of Thunder, and Light ning, which alſo ſhew him to be moſt great and terrible; the Thunder is called the noiſe of his tent, or dwelling place, becauſe it is Gods voice terribly uttered from Heaven, the Seat of his Majeſty, of which ſee, Pſal. 29. This he ſaith none can underſtand, becauſe that although the Philoſopher aſſigneth it, (viz. The kindling of a fat vapour exhalled from the Earth into the middle Region of the Aire by the heat of the Sun peircing it: For then as an hot iron thruſt into water maketh a noiſe, ſo is this terrible great noiſe made in the Clouds, which are ſometimes ſayd to be round about Gods habitation) yet no man can underſtand to the full, how this noiſe of thunder crack after thunder crack is made ſo ſtrangely, ſtriking men and other things here, and as God will, ſome being burnt within, no outward burning appearing upon them in a moſt miraculous manner: But what is meant by this, Covereth the bottom of the Sea? Hebr. The roots of the Sea, and what are theſe but the mountains about the Sea, from whence as Sap cometh from the roots of a Tree into it, ſo Springs of water run into the Sea and the rain falleth down by them into it. And for the Clouds covering the Verſ. 27. Verſ. 29.

the Mountaines, Pliny noteth, that ſometime a vapour is upon a Mountaine as thick as a cloud, which is a ſign of ſome terrible tempeſt to come: Gregory of all this makes this allegorical expoſition, The Apoſtles are as the rain in their heavenly Doctrine, for which as hath been ſhewed upon other places, they are often thus compared in their teaching, they alſo are as clouds, but falſe Teachers as clouds without water, and they thundered and lightened, when joyning miracles to their teaching, they ſtruck ſuch feare into rude and barbarous men, that when as by wars they could not be terrified and made quiet, hereby they were; and that, as he hath it following, the Vulg. Covering the hinges of the Sea; that is, The extream parts of the World: And whereas as followeth, Verſe 31. By them he judgeth the people, and giveth meat in abundance. Hereby is ſet forth how Preachers are by God made as Judges over the people, to abſolve from ſin, and to binde up in ſin; and the ſame, that are as thunder and lightning terrible to all parts of the World, which ſhineth ſuddenly from one end of the Earth to the other, miniſter alſo meat to the Soule; as the clouds, out of which both rain and thunder come, cauſe Corn to grow, and Graſs, which are meat for Man and Beaſt: For the literal ſenſe, he judgeth the people by them, when being provoked by ſin, he turneth Rain and Thunder into judgment, many being by it coming inordinately impoveriſhed, famiſhed, deſtroyed, and ſome burnt and made terribly to periſh; but others upon whom the rain falleth as a bleſſing, are comforted and inriched, and the thunder is made a meanes of ſafeguard unto them, their enemies being hereby deſtroyed, as in the daies of Samuel, he praying, God thundered upon the Philiſtims, and ſlew them: And in the time of Aurelianus an Emperour, the Chriſtian band that was in his Army, prayed in the want of water, and there came thunder and rain, whereby his Army was refreſhed, and the tempeſt ſmiting upon the face of the enemy, advantage was given to the Army, to the overthrowing of them, whence for the perpetual remembrance hereof, it was called Cohors fulminea.

The Allegory.

Verſ. 31.

Sam. 7.

Verſ. 32. With clouds he covereth the light, and comanded it not to ſhine, by the cloud that cometh betwixt. The noyſe thereof ſheweth concerning it, and the Cattel alſo concerning the vapour. Vulgar, He hath hidden the light in his hands, and commanded it to return again; he telleth his friend thereof, that it is his poſſeſſion, and that he may aſcend unto it. Hebrew, Above his hands or clouds. For בכפים ſignifieth either, He hath hid the light, and commandeth concerning it, in that which accurreth, or in the returning commandeth concerning it, Which is all one with the Vulgar in ſenſe; He commandeth the light of the Sun, when it hath been for a time hidden by the clouds, which are his hands, as it were, held under it, to ſhew it ſelf and ſhine again: It is an explication of that which went before, Verſe 31. Shewing, how by the clouds dropping down rain, and the light of Heaven; that is, The Sun after this ſhining, and ſo having intercourſe one with another, he judgeth people, as there was ſaid, and giveth them meat: For this cauſing of the Sun to lye long hidden, and rain and cold to abound extraordinarily, is a judgment; but coming by intercourſe, a bleſſing: And ſo the ſenſe of theſe words is plain, only he paſſeth herein from one light of lightening to another of the Sun ſhining, as he might well do, although he mentioned not it before particularly; becauſe the Sun is the light, cauſing that light, as hath been already ſhewed: But for the words of Verſe 33. It is harder to finde out the true meaning, to finde which yet we ſhall have recourſe to the Hebrew Text, which is this; He ſhall ſhew his friend concerning it a poſſeſſion above aſcending, or upon an aſcent. The meaning whereof is, As he judgeth the people in this World, as is aforeſaid, by faire weather and foule; ſo if any man be his friend, as it is ſaid of Abraham, that he was, he will ſhew to him concerning concerning his wayes wherein he goeth towards man; a far greater matter concerning them, whereby he ſhall have more comfort, Viz. The heavenly Inheritance which is above, which he ſhall ſee by faith here, and to the Poſſeſſion whereof he ſhall come hereafter: Many other expoſitions there be, but I will neither trouble my ſelf, nor the Reader in mentioning them; for this is the right meaning, as will eaſily appeare to the Judicious, if he looketh well to the ſignification of the words in the Hebrew Text, and ſo greater comfort is here ſpoken to thoſe that love God, and are his friends, then this World can afford; as before comfort was ſpoken to all ſuch, in reſpect of Worldly bleſſings; although for the preſent, they be in great miſery.

CHAP. XXXVII.

AT this alſo my heart trembleth, and is moved out of his place. Heare attentively the noiſe of his voyce, and the ſound that goeth out of his mouth. Here Expoſitors agree not about theſe words, At this, Whether they be to be referred to the thunder before ſpoken of, or to the words following, which he was now about further to utter, touching other works of God, whereby he alſo ſpeaketh, or other ſounds that are heard extraordinarily, when God at ſome particular times is pleaſed to reveal himſelf, and his will to men; as when he came down upon Mount Sinai, with a great noyſe both of thunder, and a voice diſtinctly ſpeaking out his commandements; and in the time of the Goſpel, cauſing a great noyſe and ruſhing to be heard, when he filled his Diſciples with the holy Ghoſt: By Ezekiel alſo he cauſed a great ſound to be heard of the Cherubims, Wings, and Wheeles; and by John when he made his Revelation to him of things to come. And to this I rather ſubſcribe, becauſe of the ordinary thunder and lightening, he had ſpoken enough before; and although this is alſo called his voice, yet it is not ſaid to be the voice coming out of his mouth, which ſeemeth rather to be of ſound, tending to inſtruction; as Aquinas well noteth, and as the noyſes at ſpeciall times before ſpoken of did: And ſuch a noyſe cannot but cauſe trembling, as that alſo, which ſhall be made at the day of judgment ſhall moſt do; When the Heavens ſhall paſſe away with a noyſe. As Peter ſpeaketh, ſuch ſounds therefore he biddeth us here to attend unto, which have alwaies filled men with feare and amazement, that the Majeſty and dreadfulneſs of God being hereby conſidered, we may ſtand in awe and humble our ſelves before him; and not be lifted up, out of an imagination of any goodneſſe in us, that will hold with Gods juſtice, when he ſhall ſhew himſelf and ſpeak as he doth in the next Chapter.; When Job himſelf humbly acknowledged his ſinnes, and durſt not ſtand any more upon his own juſtification: So that theſe words may ſeem to come from the ſpirit ſpeaking in Elihu, to prepare to the hearing of God ſpeaking there; and that at the firſt he ſaid not in vain; The ſpirit within me conſtraineth me. Gregory taking theſe words, as cohering with thoſe going before, Verſe 33. Where he ended with the poſſeſſion above; that is, The heavenly Inheritance, ſaith, That Elihu in ſpeaking of his trembling, and his heart removing out of the place; ſheweth, That when a man entereth into this conſideration, his heart is removed, becauſe it is now gone from worldly things, upon which it was ſet before; being altogether taken up with heavenly: But who ſo doth thus, doth it not without feare and trembleing, to think in what danger he was before, whilſt his heart was ſet upon Worldly things; of looſing this glorious Inheritance, and being caſt into the pit of deſtruction: And for the words of Verſ. 2. He hath, He ſhall heare an hearing in the terrour of his voice. That is, Whoſoever

Verſ. 1.
Verſ. 2.
Exod. 20.
Act. 2.
Ezek. 1.
Tho: Aqui.
2 Pet. 3.
Chap. 32. 18.
Gregor.
Note.

ſoever cometh to the like conſideration of that Inheritance, is not without terrour at his voice, and the ſound that cometh out of his mouth: For he thinketh upon the ſinnes which he hath done, the worldlineſſe of his minde formerly, and the frauds and oppreſſions, whereby he hath gotten worldly Goods; and his uncharitableneſſe, together with the terrible ſentence of the ſtrict Judge: In regard of all which he cannot but tremble and feare, when his eyes are opened, to ſee in what danger he was of looſing that glory every moment, and of falling into ſuch extream miſery; although by Gods grace he hath his eares opened to heare the voyce, whereby he is turned and comes to better hopes; for he heareth not only the voyce, but the ſound of his mouth, which alwaies is terrifious, although it be a ſounding of that which tendeth to comfort, to ſuch as he meaneth to ſave: As it is ſaid, not only of Iſrael hearing it
Heb. 12. 21. at Mount Sinai, but alſo of Moſes, that he trembled and quaked: In all which he ſpeakes excellently, but only the words are not, He ſhall heare an hearing; but heare yee. But to the ſame effect, as if he had ſaid, As I tremble at hearing, ſo do yee in the ſenſe hitherto ſpoken of, if yee would have this comfort.

Verſ. 3. He directeth it under the whole Heaven, and his lightnings to the ends of the Earth. Hebrew, His light. That is, In coming with the ſound of his voyce to men, for their converſion, as hath been ſaid, he is not partiall, but by the ſame teaching, he ſendeth forth light into all parts of the Earth; ſo that none can complain, if they come not finally to that Inheritance, that he wanted light to ſee, how he might attain thereunto.

Verſ. 4. After this a voyce roareth, he thundereth with the voyce of his excellency and will not ſtay them when his voyce is heard. Here may ſeem to be a deſcription of the ordinary thunder, roaring after the lightning: But it is alſo by Gregory thus allegorized upon after light, whereby a man cometh to ſee and conſider what he hath been, he is terrified and ſorroweth for that, in which before he joyed; and hereby, as by thunder, he apprehendeth the greatneſſe and almighty power of the Lord: And he ſhall not be found, when his voyce ſhall be heard. For ſo he readeth it, that is, The ſpirit of the Lord, by what way he cometh into his heart:
Joh. 3. According to that ſaying of our Lord, The winde bloweth, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but thou knoweſt not whence it cometh, or whither it goeth, ſo is he that is born of the ſpirit. But Hebrew, He will not retard or ſupplant them, when his voyce is heard. That is, Who ſo heareth and obeyeth his voyce, ſhall not be deceived, or for his former ſinnes be kept Pſal. 95. 8 from the Inheritance before ſpoken of, but certainly attain unto it, but ſuch as harden their hearts, and will not heare this voyce ſhall.

Verſ. 5. God thundereth marvellouſly with his voyce, great things doth he which we cannot comprehend. By that which hath been ſaid, it appeareth, that GOD doth wonderous things by his thundering voyce, peircing the hearts of the penitent with ſorrow: But being about next to ſhew other mighty works of God, he prepareth to attend thereunto, by ſaying, Verſ. 6. Which we cannot comprehend. And what theſe are is ſhewed, Verſe 6. For he ſaith to the ſnow, Be thou on the Earth, and likewiſe to the ſmall and great rain of his ſtrength. The Snow is here mentioned, as wherein God ſpeaketh, as by a voyce, his wonderful power, for it is wonderfull, that in the loweſt part of the Aire, it ſhould be turned into Snow, and not above, where it is coldeſt, that it ſhould ſnow upon the Earth, but never upon the Sea, as Pliny ſaith, That ſnow ſhould lye continually upon Mount Ætna, where fire flameth out, that no ſnow falleth in Ægypt, but in Tartaria, an hot Country, ſometime it ſnoweth in Summer & the time of heat, that it fatneth the Ground, that the white ſnow ſometimes bringeth forth red Worms; of the ſmall rain he ſpake before, but now both both of small and great wherein his power is seen.

He sealeth up the hand of every man, that all men may know his work: Heb. in the hand of every man: That is saith Gregory, if any man will not be moved by his works of wonder to fear him, but both against them and his Ministers teaching, harden themselves to go on in sin (for they, as hath been often shewed are set forth by rain and clouds) yet they carry a witnesse continually about them, which is as a Testimony sealed up against them, in their hands; and this is each mans own work, which his conscience knoweth, whereby he shall be condemned at the last day. Vers. 7. Gregor.

Then the Beasts go into Dens, and remain in their places. Here after speaking of mens knowing and having each one his evill work sealed up in his hand (which as Gregory saith, is shewed by their keeping out of the sight of other men, when they do evill) here, I say, followeth something, whereby is shewed that beasts being terrified by storms and Tempests in the night, which is their time of their going forth to seek their prey; keep in their Dens fearing to come out, to expresse which further to be his meaning, he addeth, v. 9. Out of the South cometh the whirlwinde or tempest, and cold out of the North: That is, making them so to do, the Vulg. For the North hath Arctnrus, of which see before, Chapt. 9. 9. Vers. 8. Vers. 9.

By the breath of God frost is given, and the breadth of the waters straitned: The Vulg. God blowing frost bindeth up, that is, the waters: Again the waters are poured out most largely. But herein the Translator followed his own sense, because the South and he North were spoken of before, supposing this to be a further amplification of the effects of these two winds, the one causing frosts, the other dissolving both frost and snow, upon the melting wherof waters flow abundantly and inlarge the Rivers into which they run: But it is rather to be taken as an effect of the North wind only, called here, Gods breath, which doth both bind up the Earth with frosts and steighters the waters by Ice, with which they are bound in, for in either of these the wonderfull power of God appeareth, which should make all men to fear him, which is the scope of all his discourse. Vers. 10. Ps. 147.

Also by watering he wearieth the thick cloud, he scattereth the bright cloud: And it is turned round about by his counsels. &c. He causeth it to come, whether for correction, &c. He is said to weary the thick cloud by watering, by a Prosopopeia, which is done, when abundance of water cometh therefrom, sometime in way of judgment, and sometime of mercy, as is further added. The words, Whether for correction, or for his land, or for mercy, The vulgar hath, Whether for a Tribe, as the word שבט also signifieth, Or for his Land: But the Sept. also herein agreeth with New Translat. and it is a distinction of the effects of rain and weather, as hath been before sayd, coming as a curse or as a blessing, to the wicked as a curse, but to his Land denoting the Righteous, as a blessing. Vers. 11. 12. 13.

Dost thou know when God disposed them, and caused the light of his cloud to shine? Having spoken to all of them at large about the wonders which God worketh, v. 14. He turneth again to Job in particular, challenging him to say if he knew these things touching the Clouds, that is, how God causeth it to be so, for that it is so we all know, but that knowledge is too wonfull for any man, and is in God only from hence, v. 17. He proceedeth to things here below, how our Garments are made warme, the South wind blowing: Wherein wee cannot be warm enough before, if it be a North wind, of which variety of Effects of the Winds, who is the cause but God. Vers. 15. Vers. 17.

Hast thou with him spread out the skie, which is strong, and as a molten looking Glasse, God hath done, and doth all these Acts of power, which argue him to be infinitely greater then any man, how then darest thou (O Job) Vers. 18.

challenge him to come as it were, into the liſts with thee, thinking if he would to have the better of it. For the thing here ſpoken of, after thick clouds, and bright clouds made and called ſo by bright lightening, he proceedeth here, as ſome think to the Heavens which are higher then the place of Meteors, but it is rather to be held, that he cometh lower to the Aire about us, which is often called Heaven: And Gen. 1. the Firmament, to intimate the firmneſſe thereof, as it is here ſayd to be ſtrong, and as a Looking Glaſſe, becauſe although it be thin, yet it is firmly eſtabliſhed, and being ſtirred, as when the wind bloweth, it appeareth to be very ſtrong by the effects thereof, and therefore arguing an almighty power, that makes it ſo, and like Glaſſe, through which for the tenuity of it, we may ſee up to the ſky and Stars above, the word לשחק will alſo bear the reading of it by the Heavens, the ſky or Clouds which are in the Aire.

Verſ. 19. Tell us what we ſhall ſay unto him, for we are covered with darkneſſe: A notable ſcoff, the meaning, we confeſſe our ſelves to be ſo ignorant, that we know not what to ſay to his great works, ſo wonderfully and beyond our capacity hath he made them, and therefore if we were to come to ſpeak before him as thou wiſheſt, that thou mighteſt do, about the ſecrets of providence; we know much leſſe what to ſay, and therefore do thou we pray thee tell us.

Verſ. 20. Shall it be told him that I ſpeak? ſurely if a man ſpeaketh he ſhall be ſwallowed up. vulg. VVho ſhall tell him what I ſpeak? if a man ſpeak, he ſhall be devoured: Hebr. for if a man ſpeaketh, he ſhall be devoured and ſhall it be told him, becauſe I ſpeake, or the laſt clauſe may be rendred, thus, For if he ſpeaks man ſhall be devoured: That is, if God ſpeaketh, man who before he cometh to ſpeak, thinks that he ſhal be able to reaſon with him, ſhal be quite confounded, and his words as it were, ſwallowed up by his profound wiſdome, and he made unable to ſpeak one word for himſelf. For it is with men when they hear God ſpeak, as when they have ſeen ſome glorious apparition, wherein he hath ſhewed himſelf being as dead men; for ſo the people of Iſrael hearing him ſpeak from mount Sinai were filled with ſo great fear, that they thought if he ſhould ſpeak in their hearing any more, they ſhould all dye. For the firſt clauſe, it is as if he had ſaid; I for my part dare not be ſo preſumptuous as to cauſe it to be told him, that I have ſayd I would ſpeak face to face as Job hath deſired; far be it from me to wiſh any ſuch thing, for ſo I ſhould ſoon pay for my boldneſs.

Verſ. 21. And now men ſee not the bright light that is in the Clouds; but the wind paſſeth and cleanſeth them.

Verſ. 22. Fair weather cometh out of the North. vulg. But now they ſee not the light, the Aire ſhall ſoon be gathered into clouds, and a winde paſſing fugateth them. The New Tranſlation agreeth beſt with the Hebrew, and for the meaning it is to be underſtood, that Elihu having interrupted his diſcourſe about Gods wonderfull works, by ſpeaking to Job again by name: Now returneth again to the ſame argument, for having before ſayd much of the Clouds, now he ſpeaketh of another wonderfull work of God about them, that one while they hide the light from us, that is, the light of the Sun from ſhining, as when the aire is overcaſt with clouds, but within a while the wind ſcatters them again and faire weather beginneth towards the North; the vulg. rendreth it Aurum, Gold; becauſe of the golden colour of the ſky appearing when it is faire, and indeed זהב doth ſignifie Gold, With God is terrible Majeſty; vulg. Terribble praiſe: the word is הוד Majeſty, Power, Honour, or Confeſſion, that is, honour for all that was ſayd before of him; and praiſe which men do with all fear and reverence give unto him, as Kings and Judges are exhorted to do, Pſal. 2. And therefore Job muſt needs be cenſured who is ſo unreverent towards him.

Verſ. 23. Here the reaſon is ſhewed why men carry themſelves ſo reverently towards God, although we cannot find out the reaſon of his mighty acts, yet it is certain, That in plenty of juſtice, he will not afflict. For which it is ſaid; Therefore men do feare him, and he reſpecteth not any that are wiſe of heart: Hebrew, Verſe 23. Much juſtice and judgment he will not afflict. That is, Although he be excellent in power yet he will not afflict, and make the innocent to ſuffer; which is moſt true if it be underſtood of eternal judgments; or of judgments here coming in wrath; but if he ſpake it of Job it was not true: For the next words they are the ſame in part with that ſaying of the Pſalmiſt; There is mercy with thee, therefore ſhalt thou be feared. But who are the wiſe-hearted that he reſpecteth not; as is ſaid in the laſt words; The Vulg. hath it; That ſeem to be wiſe. As alſo it may be beſt expounded ſuch as feare him; and the wiſe in their own heart or conceit, are here oppoſed the one to the other; and becauſe he took Job to be of this ſort, he again girdeth at him herein, who he thought not to feare God, becauſe he ſpake as ſeemed to him moſt inſolently. Verſ. 24.

it

CHAP. XXXVIII

WHO is this that darkeneth counſel by words without knowledge? God is ſaid, Verſ. 1. To have anſwered Job out of a whirlewinde, and in anſwering it is ſhewed here firſt, what he ſaid to Elihu; for ſo it is taken by Gregory and Ferus, and others commonly, then what he ſaid to Job, the one he condemned, as a man that he knew not, or would take no notice of; as was partly touched before, Chap. 32. The other although he ſpeaketh ſomewhat ſternly to him, by way of caſtigation, for ſome words that came from him through the extremity of his paſſions, yet he left not after this, his terrifying of him without comfort, he but repenting hereof and humbling himſelf, was both more juſtified, then his three friends, in his ſayings; and finally had his captivity turned, and was bleſſed much more in theſe worldly things, then ever before. Elihu is ſaid by his words, to darken knowledge, ſaith Gregory, becauſe he ſpake out of arrogancy; for although he ſpake the truth, yet by proud ſpeeches intermingled, that which he ſpake according to knowledge was darkned in him, and unacceptable, as wicked ſpeeches, which are as all ſin, counted darkneſs, for ſo Alms-Deeds done in pride or vain-glory, and prayers are rejected, Mat. 6. Then to Job he ſaid; Gird up thy loynes like a man, and I will demand of thee, and anſwer thou me. To gird up the loyns, ſaith Greg. is commonly put for girding by continency, becauſe luſt lieth in the loynes, and they are girt, when they are kept in and flow not forth; according to which it is ſaid, Let your loynes be girt about, & your lights burning. But becauſe Job was continent, he is not bidden to gird up his loyns in this ſenſe, but to keep pride from ſwelling in him therefore: But it is not to be taken either of theſe waies in this place, but rather that he ſhould ſtrengthen himſelf, as a valiant man, prepared to the encounter with him, if he could; becauſe he had before deſired, that he might come to his Throne to contend in judgment with him: But now ſaith the Lord, I am come and thou haſt thy deſire, anſwer me then to that which I ſhall ask thee: But touching Gods demanding, and mans anſwering, Gregory again ſaith, this is done three waies. Verſ. 2. Note. Verſ. 3. Gregor. Luk. 12.

1. By ſeverely puniſhing, as he did Job, when he anſwered by patience.

2. By propounding ſome very hard thing to be done, as to Abraham, to ſacrifice his Son, which he anſwered by obedience.

3. By opening or hiding things from us, he asketh us, as he did Paul, by abundance of revelations, to ſee whether he would be puffed up, which he anſwered by humility; for he ſaid, we are not ſufficient of our ſelves to think a good thought, and again, In me, that is in my fleſh, is no good thing: 2 Cor. 3. 5. Rom. 7.

thing. So Job having been hitherto demanded by ſufferings, is now demanded by words; whether he ſuch, and ſuch ſublime things, that ſeeing he did not, he might alſo anſwer in humility, how greatly ſoever he abounded in knowledge, as his former ſpeeches ſhewed that he did.

Verſ. 4. Verſ. 5. Verſ. 6. Gregory. Where waſt thou, when I laid the foundations of the Earth? Who hath laid the meaſures thereof, if though knoweſt? or who hath ſtretched the line upon it? Verſe 6. Whereupon are the foundations of it faſtened, or who hath laid the corner ſtone thereof? Here becauſe mention is made of the corner ſtone of the Earth laid, and this cannot be properly underſtood, he will have all taken allegorically: By the earth, the Church is to be underſtood, or Congregation of all ſorts, that heare the word of God, as in the Parable of the ſower, the hearers are ſet forth by the earth, the foundations, becauſe they were firſt in imbracing and propagating the faith, to whom others were ſoone added, were the Apoſtles, as they are ſet forth, Epheſians 2. 20. For to prefigure them, the high Prieſt bare upon his breſtplate twelve precious ſtones, to ſhew, how deare thoſe twelve were to the Lord: And it is to be noted, that he ſaith foundadations in the plural number, not foundation, for then Chriſt muſt have been meant who is the foundation; and ſuch a foundation as that no man can lay any other; wherefore by foundations the Apoſtles are meant, nad by one principal ſtone, called the corner ſtone, upon which both theſe foundations and all the reſt of the building reſteth, CHRIST JESVS: Where it is to be noted, That it was a doctrine not learned in Gregories time, that the Pope of Rome is the foundation of the Church, and that when the Lord ſaid to Peter; Upon this Rock I will build my Church. He meant Peter and his ſucceſſors in the Biſhoprick of Rome: And to make this Expoſition good, he ſaith, That Gods laying of theſe foundations are ſpoken of, as a thing done, before that Job was born, becauſe that in the counſel and decree of God, it was thus done from before the beginning of the World. Who hath laid the meaſures thereof, if thou knoweſt, or who hath ſtretched the line upon it? That is, Who took in ſome of the Nations or particular perſons into the Church, excluding others: As it is ſaid of Paul, that a man at Macedonia appeared in a viſion to him in the night, and ſaid, Come and help us; when as he thinking to goe into Aſia, was by the ſpirit forbidden: Likewiſe one offering to follow Chriſt, was anſwered; The Foxes have holes, and the fowles of the Heaven have neſts, &c. To put him off, but another was called to follow him, and delaying, and ſaying, Let me go firſt and bury my Father. He was not permitted, but bidden again; Let the dead bury their dead, but follow thou me. And when the Temple was to be meaſured, Rev. 11. It is ſaid, Leave out the outer Court and meaſure it not; wherby who are ſet forth, but ſuch as are in the broad way, and why ſome are within the meaſure and ſome without, who can tel but God only? And hitherto of the allegory: Other Expoſitors expound it altogether according to the letter, as Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, Phillippus, &c. And thus the meaning is, whereas Job complained of Gods harſhneſſe dealing with him, as if he had ſaid, (O Job) What art thou to complain thus, as if my providence ordered not things rightly towards thee; when as by the very earth, out of which thou and all men were firſt made, (when Adam was made out of it, as the common ſtock from whom all men came) My juſt and wiſe proceedings appear in making and eſtabliſhing it, as it were, by line and meaſure, and that I am not unjuſt in the framing of any part thereof; but have done all things for the beſt benefit of my creatures, both Men and Beaſts living thereupon: Is it probable, theſe things being ſo, that I will lay any judgments unjuſtly upon man, for whoſe ſake I have made them all: Surely when I did theſe great works, I had no man with me to counſel me, or to keep me from erring, and for thy part, thou Matth. 13. 1 Cor 3. 11. Note. Act. 16. Matth 8. Cryſoſt. Theod.

wert

wert then, Non ens, and long after, and what a preſumption then is it in thee to call any of my doings now in queſtion, as if I that have hitherto done and ordered all things, ſo as that no exception could ever be taken hereunto, had in thy particular caſe done amiſſe: Moreover man did not only not counſell me, but forſomuch as he had not then any being, he could not then, neither can he ſince ſee into the reaſon of my doings, but they muſt needs lye hidden from him any further then I have been pleaſed, or ſhall be pleaſed to reveal them, and if it be ſo in reſpect of things naturall, how much more in reſpect of things ſupernaturall, or of things that I ſometimes do extraordinarily towards the Sons of men. And if it be ſo (O Job) thou oughteſt to have been ſo patient in thy ſufferings, as not to have expoſtulated with me hereabout, but to have layd thy hand upon thy mouth. And upon the ſame Grounds it is the part of us all humbly to acknowledge our own ignorance touching Gods ſad providences towards us in any particulars, and when any one of us ſuffereth extraordinarily, when we have with an upright heart lived in his fear, in ſilence to bear it without complaining of his dealing harſhly with us, or being diſcouraged from the good way wherein we are, as being ſure that after he hath thus tryed our Faith and Patience, he will crown us again with greater bleſſings, as he did his faithfull Servant Job, for ever. The coherence of the anſwer here made by God unto Job with his ſpeeches before going, being thus ſet forth, and the ſcope and drift of the place: Now for the Expoſition of the things ſpoken according to the letter it is eaſily made: God before the making of any man, to ſhew his Wiſdome, Power, and Goodneſs towards him, made the Earth; whereupon he dwelleth, and out of which he is ſuſtained moſt wiſely eſtabliſhing it, as upon moſt ſure foundations, never to be moved and he made it, as a Carpenter buildeth and layeth the foundation of an houſe by line and meaſure, the Heavens being as it were the Roofe, the Aire the middle part, and the earth the baſis or foundation, which alſo is ſet upon its own foundations the center, wherein all the parts thereof meet, as all the lines of a circle do in its center, for which alſo this is called the corner ſtone, whereby the foundations of a building, the ſides of the walls coming together and reſting upon it are ſuſtained. Note.

VVhen the morning ſtars ſang together, and all the Sons of God ſhouted for joy. By the morning ſtars here, who can be underſtood, but the Angels; being all as bright morning ſtars for their heavenly Glory? For in the beginning God made the Heaven and the Earth: Firſt the Heaven, whereby both it, which is above our ſight, called otherwiſe the third Heaven, or the Emperian Heaven, which is the Throne of God; and the Seat and Habitation of his Angells, and the Angells the Inhabitants thereof are meant, and alſo the ſtarry Heaven, then the Earth had the foundations thereof layd, and at the laying of them the Angells ſang Praiſes to God. And they as Gregory ſaith, are ſet forth by the name of morning ſtars, becauſe as the morning ſheweth that the Sun is coming, ſo the Angells appearing at the birth of Chriſt, the Son of righteouſneſſe, a great multitude of them ſang, Glory to God on high, on Earth peace, good Will towards men. This then is the thing here pointed at, and whereas it was not done thus till long after, it is to be underſtood that God, to whom all things are preſent, calleth and ſpeaketh of things to come under the old Teſtament, as already done, when they are not to be done, till under the New. And the Sons of God at the laying of the foundation of the Earth, that is, of the Church, then ſhouted for joy, as the Angell foretold to the ſhepheards, ſaying, I bring you tidings of great joy that ſhall be to all people: And at this Elizabeth the Mother of John Baptiſt rejoyced, and Zachary his Father brake out into theſe words of bleſſing God, Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael: And Simeon & the Apoſtles, and all other faithfull people at the coming down of the Holy Ghoſt, and the Samaritans being converted, and the Apoſtles even in

Verſ. 7.

Gregor.

Act. 2.
Act. 8.
Act. 4.

in the midſt of their ſufferings. For the literall meaning, they that adhere only to it, by the morning ſtars underſtand all the ſtars, holding them to be ſo called for their riſing and beginning their motions in the Eaſt, where the morning firſt appeareth, and that the ſtars are alſo called the Sons of God; becauſe by him created in ſuch ſhining Glory, and that ſinging and ſhouting together, is aſcribed to them, becauſe of their ſweet Harmony and conſent in their daily motions, making muſick in Gods Ears, as it were, and ſome hold that this muſick is audible, although the ſound thereof cometh not to our Eares; but all this is confuted by the conſideration of the time of their ſinging, which was at the laying of the foundations of the great frabrick of the earth, which was before the making of the ſtars, Viz. The firſt day, whereas they were made the fourth day: Therefore as moſt Expoſitors underſtand it of the Angels, let us underſtand it all, yet not as they generally do of the ſame called Stars, and the Sons of God; if, as Gregory ſaith, it be ſpoken allegorically, as it ſeemeth to be, but if the literall ſenſe be followed, and it be here ſhewed, what was done at the Creation; we may by the ſame Angels, underſtand both Stars and Sons: of ſetting forth Angels by the name of Stars, ſee Revel. 1. The ſeven Stars are the Angels of the ſeven Churches. And for morning Stars, ſee Iſa. 14. 12. Where the Angels that fell are altogether called by the name of Lucifer, the Son of the Morning; that is, Morning Stars, implying that the Angels at the firſt had the name of morning Stars, or Angels indifferently: It is meant then, that thoſe Inhabitants of Heaven paſſed not over that great work of creating the Earth, as it was not meet that they ſhould, without a Jubilee of praiſe to the Creator; implying the joy that they took therein, as a work moſt excellently wrought, and what is man then ſo inferiour to Angels as the Earth, out of which he was made to Heaven, but only in reſpect of his Soule, that he ſhould detract from him in reſpect of any thing done by him?

Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9. Verſ. 10. Verſ. 11. Who ſhut up the Sea, as it were, with doors, when it brake forth as iſſuing out of the womb? When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkneſſe the ſwadling band. And brake up for it my decreed place, and ſet bars and doores; ſaying, Hitherto thou ſhalt come. Upon theſe words, When it iſſued as it were, out of the womb. There be divers expoſitions of ſome, conceiving it to be ſpoken of the gathering of the waters together into one place, when they at the firſt covered the whole face of the Earth; but this was rather a bringing of them into a Womb or Priſon, as it were, then an iſſuing out, which impleth the inlarging of them in reſpect of their place: Some ſay, that this womb is Gods omnipotency, wherein theſe waters all were before their creation, as in a moſt fruitful womb, as alſo were all other things, and when they were created they came forth, and when put into one place, ſhut up as with doors: Others ſay, That this womb is the earth, out of which God by his almighty power firſt brought forth the waters all over the earth covering it, and then gathering and ſhutting them up in one place; for when God created the Heaven and the Earth in the beginning, nothing is ſaid of the waters; ſo that moſt probably they were in the earth, which being created they immediatly iſſued out and covered it, but upon the third day were brought from this overflowing, to a place about which bounds were ſet, where are ſhut in as at this day: And this I take to be the beſt, and without all exception, although I have nothing to ſay againſt the ſecond. Gregory hereupon allegorizeth thus, The Sea ſetteth forth Perſecutors, the womb out of which their rage to perſecute the Church of God cometh, is their malicious heart; As the Pſalmiſt ſaith, He hath conceived miſcheife and brought forth iniquity. This iniquity is conceived, when thonghts of perſecuting ariſe in the minde, and it is brought forth, when it is acted accordingly: But God ſhutteth up this Sea, as with doors doors, when he ſuffereth them not to proceed ſo far as they would, but ſaith to ſuch proud waves, Thus far yee ſhall come and no further; as is ſaid, Verſ. 11. And to the Sea are the wicked compared, where he ſaith, They are like the raging Sea, that never is quiet. And the Pſalmiſt, He ruleth the raging of the Sea, and the madneſſe of his people. Where the one is compared with the other, and Pſalm. 2. Why do the Gentiles rage. Alluding to the ſame: And this is a ſingular comfort to the faithfull in all times of perſecution and trouble, when the power of perſecuting enemies ſeemeth to be irreſiſtible, to conſider, that they are but as the raging Sea yet, which moveth no further then he appoynteth it, to whom he ſetteth the bounds, within the compaſſe whereof they muſt keep; ſo how far ſoever Perſecutors go, it is no further then God hath appoynted them, as for place ſo for time, and the perſons overwhelmed hereby: And all this being ordered by his providence, who ſo dearly loveth us, no doubt, but it ſhall be turned to the beſt: For the cloud made the covering thereof, and thick darkneſſe the ſwadling bands. Hereby is ſet forth, the darkneſſe of ignorance and malice, caſt over their eyes by the God of this World, making them to dare blindly to go on thus, to their own ruine in the end, through the unbeleife of their heart; and that whereby they are reſtrained from going any further, is called Swadling bands, to intimate, that when God will, theſe raging Perſecutors ſhall be bound feet and hands, as weak Infants with ſwadling bands, and ſo unable to ſtir any more to hurt his Church or any members thereof: For the literall meaning, ſome by the cloud and darkneſſe clothing the waters, as it were, underſtand the darkneſſe at the creation, ſaid to be upon the face of the deep: Some, the clouds over the Sea, covering it often times as a garment, whereby it ſeemeth to be bound in, as with ſwadling bands, when it is herewith compaſſed, although not hereby ſo bound, as not to run any further, for which there are other boundaries ſet as doors, Verſe 10. 11. But what is the meaning of theſe words; Brake up for it my decreed place. Vulgar, And compaſſed it with my bounds. Hebrew, And laid upon it my Statute. For שבר ſignifieth Statuere, diſcernere, as well as to Break, And being thus rendered, it is eaſie to be underſtood, but obſcured by the rendring of New. Tran.

Niceta. Dioniſ. Cajetan. Title. man. Hyeron. Beda. Pillip. Gregor. Allegory. Pſal. 7.

Isa. 57. 20. Pſ. 65. Note.

2 Cor. 4. 4.

Verſ. 10.

Haſt thou commanded the morning ſince thy daies? and cauſed the day-ſpring to know his place, That it might take hold of the ends of the Earth; that the wicked might be ſhaken out of it? Vulg. And ſhaking haſt thou held the extream parts of the Earth, that the wicked might be ſhaken out of it. Hebr. To lay hold upon the wings or extream parts of the Earth. And thus the ſenſe is plain, but not according to New Tran. and the Vulg. although it ſpeakes to the ſenſe, goeth from the words in the Originall without cauſe: It is, as if he had ſaid further to Job, Haſt thou ever had the power to make the light of the morning to appear, or to ſhake the earth, by laying hold upon the ends thereof, to bring wicked men into it, by ſwollowing them up to their deſtruction, as God doth ſometimes by earthquakes, and as he did Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, by an earthquake, making the earth to gape and to ſwollow up both houſes and men in divers places: And laying hold upon the wings of the earth, is ſpoken of, in alluding to the manner of men; as of Samſon, who laid hold upon the poſts of the houſe, wherupon the Philiſtims were to their deſtruction. For the allegory, by the morning underſtand, Chriſt borne of the Virgin Mary, for then to ſhew the morning riſing, or the day-ſpring from an high, as Zachary calleth it, a Star came and ſtood over the place where he was born, ariſing firſt in the Eaſt, to the wiſe men; that came from thence to worſhip him: Of the ordering of this mornings riſing, none but the moſt high hath power, or in reſpect of the time: And whereas morning is named the ſecond time; Haſt thou made the morning to know her place? The Church is meant by the morning, of which it is ſayd, Song. 6. Who is this, that riſeth as the Morning? And in ſpeaking of making her know her place, the place prepared for her in Heaven may be underſtood: Touching which our Lord ſaith, I go before to prepare a place for you, for in my Fathers Houſe are many Manſions: And at the end of the world, Come yee bleſſed of my Father into the Kingdome prepared for you: And then he laying hold upon the ends of the Earth by his judgments, with fire and brimſtone ſhall ſhake all the wicked out of it to hell fire for ever and ever; as is taught, Matth. 25. Of this ſhaking alſo, not only of the Earth, but of the Heaven, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh ſaying; He ſhall ſhake not only the Earth, but the Heaven.

Verſ. 12.

Gregor.

Ioh. 14. Matth. 25.

Heb. 12. 26.

Verſ. 14. It is turned as clay to a ſeal, and they ſtand as a Garment, Vulgar, It or the ſeal ſhall be reſtored as clay, and ſtand as a garment. Hebr. It is turned or perverted as a clay ſeal, &c. This is ſpoken as a further amplification of that which was before ſayd touching wicked men and their ſhaking out of the earth, he being as a Seal of clay, when this is done, is perverted becoming now but as a garment, by the putting on of which he is neatly formed or faſhioned, but Death coming he is corrupted as a Garment eaten with Moths, being eaten with worms and changed into duſt from whence they were taken, that is, all men. Now for the ſetting forth of man by a ſeal of clay, the reaſon of his being thus called is for the image of God ſtamped upon him in his creation, he being but clay taken out of the earth, and for ſinn dealt with, as he is worthy, this Seal diſanulled as a clay Seal may eaſily be, and he being now from the image of God, who is everlaſting, turned to be like a corruptible Garment, having nothing but an outſide, all that is good within him being corrupted and maimed; for ſo David compareth man to a thing conſumed by Moaths as Garments are, hence concluding him to be vanity, a very nothing in reſpect of that which he was by his creation. Some underſtand this of the change of things in appearance, when the light ariſeth from that which they ſeemed to be in the night, the wicked, that have robbed in the night by their Garments put on diſguiſing themſelves, as that they cannot beſt known; others underſtand it otherwiſe, but becauſe this ſtands with beſt reaſon and ſenſe I reſt herein: And ſo the ſtate of man is ſet forth to be ſuch, as that for that excellent one wherein he was firſt made, being like unto God, he is turned to be but as it were a man of clouts, a dead and contemptible thing; howſoever he decketh himſelf with garments, that he may appear glorious.

Pſal. 39. 11.

Junius.

Note.

Verſ. 15. And from the wicked the light ſhall be holden, and their high Arm ſhall be broken. Here the miſery of ſinners is further ſet forth in reſpect of the light, as man falling into ſin had his underſtand darkned, and was deprived of that light, which he had before, ſo they that live and go on in ſin ſhall finally be deprived of everlaſting light, being caſt into utter darkneſs, and then how highly and proudly ſoever they carryed themſelves, they ſhall be made weak, and poor, aud low for ever.

Verſ. 16. Haſt thou entered into the ſprings of the Sea, or walked in the ſearch of the Depth? The Lord having a little digreſſed in his ſpeech from the works of creation to terrify wicked men; now returneth again unto them, and he ſpeaketh of mans inability to ſearch into the depth of the Sea, to prove hereby, that he is much leſs able to ſearch into the ſecrets of his doings, to finde out the reaſon hereof: From hence he paſſeth on to the ſame effect, to ſpeak of mans not being able to know what is within the Gates of Death, or in what Eſtate each one is after Death. Then to his inability to finde out the breadth of the Earth, which he hath made; That is, the whole compaſs of it; for although there be ſome men, who pretend, that they can do this, yet their determinations herein are but conjectures upon uncertain Grounds. From hence he proceedeth to the light and darkneſſe, touching the place whereof, and how there is this intercourſe of day and night night continually he is ignorant: And touching all theſe he concludeth, that man of himſelf cannot have the knowledge becauſe he was unborn, when Sea, and Earth, and Light, and darkneſs firſt were, as was alſo touched upon before, V. 4. Verſ. 21.

Verſ. 17.

Verſ. 18.

Verſ. 19. 20,

He paſſeth on to mans ignorance touching the Snow and Hail, which he ſaith, that he prepared againſt the time of trouble, of battell and warr. Which is commonly underſtood of cauſing theſe to come as judgments upon wicked men, becauſe a miraculous hail, with which fire was mingled was one of the judgments of Ægypt, and hailſtones in Joſhuah his time were caſt down upon the Canaanites. And for hail this often falleth in a tempeſtuous manner; and doth much hurt to Corn and other growing things, but for ſnow, that moſt commonly fatneth the Ground, and makes it the more fruitfull, yet ſometimes both men and beaſts in deep ſnows are wildred and deſtroyed, and this is here called Gods making War as it were with men for their ſinnes. But how Snow or hail, are thus at ſome times inforced, or come to be made, man knoweth not, but only Conjecturally. Verſ. 22. 23.

By what way is the light parted, which ſcattereth the Eaſt winde upon the Earth? By this ſcattering light lightnings are beſt underſtood, becauſe they ſometimes are in one place and not in another. But for ſcattering the Eaſt winde, we may with better ſenſe, and as agreeably to the Hebrew, render it, Scattering from the Eaſt upon the Earth, only the word From, is here underſtood, and by theſe words the place is ſhewed, from which lightnings for the moſt part come, for ſo Chriſt ſpeaketh hereof, As lightning cometh from the Eaſt and ſhineth to the weſt, &c. Verſ. 24.

The ſame of lightning for explication is again repeated, together with that work of watering with Rain even the Wilderneſſe, where no man liveth, by which his providence appeareth even over the wild beaſts, that keep there. From the Rain he proceedeth to the Ice, hard like a ſtone, covering the waters. Verſ. 25. Verſ. 29.

Canſt thou binde the ſweet influences of Pleiades? or looſe the bands of Orion? Canſt thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his ſeaſon? or guid Arcturus with his Sonnes? Of theſe ſignes, ſee before, Chap. 9. 9. For Mazzaroth the Vulg. hath Luciferum: Some expound it of the Planets, and ſome of Stars in generall, in ordering of which, and bringing forth now ſome, then other ſome, the wonderfull wiſedome and power, and providence of God appeareth, doing herein as a Generall by his Armies. He ſetteth forth his Almighty power again, by inſtancing in the clouds, raining and lightning. Verſ. 31. Verſ. 33. Verſ. 34. 35.

Who hath given wiſedome to the inward parts, and underſtanding to the heart? From other works of Creation, he proceedeth here to man, who if he hath any wiſedome, muſt aſcribe it unto God; and therefore not think himſelfe able to come into judgment, and reaſon with him. For Verſe 39. 40. 41. ſee Pſalm. 104. and Pſalm. 147. Verſ. 36.

CHAP. XXXIX.

KNoweſt thou the time when the wilde Goats of the Rock bring forth, or when the Hindes calve? The vulg. For wilde Goats hath Ibices, ſome, a beaſt partly like a Goat, partly an Hinde, whatſoever it be, the thing for which it is here ſpoken of, is that which is common to it and the Hinde, the ſecreſie of the bringing forth, no man knowing when it is; but for the Hinde, it is noted to be with great difficulty, Pſal. 29. Where it is ſaid, That the voice of God maketh the Hinde to calve, upon which, ſee the nature of the Hinde: The Lord in ſetting forth admi- Verſ. 1.

rable providence over his Creatures upon Earth, Beasts, and Fowles; having begun with Lions, Chap 38. 39. the King of Beasts, and the Ravens, singleth out some others, that be of greatest note, wherein man is posed, not being able to know the waies or secrets of these, much lesse of God that made them all. Gregory who hath his moralls upon all things, having shewed that by the Lions spoken of, Chap. 38. The Apostles are set forth, to whom people being converted, were as a prey, so much good did it them, as their meat: And that by the Ravens, the Gentiles black by sin, are set forth, who are fed by God, when converted with the consolations of his word; saith, That in the South parts about Nilus in Egypt, that are called Ibices, but in the East aud West parts, little four-footed Beasts, that keep upon Rocks, and bring forth there, are thus called: And for the Hindes he saith, That they destroy Serpents, and their nature is in swimming over Rivers, to go one after another, and each one to lay her head upon her that goeth before, the better to be borne up in the water, and when the foremost is weary, she cometh behind, and so the rest by course: By which Beasts, Preachers are set forth, who bring forth upon the Rock Christ, upon whom they beare themselves all together, and through virtue received from him, as the Hindes, kill Serpents, that is, Sinnes, where they come, and by becoming all things to all, and bearing their burthens with much difficulty, bring forth in a most admirable manner; for the words, Verse. 2. Canst thou number the months that they fulfill? Or when they will bring forth. That is, Can any man know, when they will be formed to new Creatures, who are under the Ministers teaching, here being so much required for the making of them such. 1. Knowledge. 2. Life of grace. 3. Growth. 4. Strength as it were of bones, as in a Childe that is born into the World.

Gregory.

Vers. 2.

Vers. 3. They bow themselves, bring forth their young ones, and cast out their sorrowes: Ministers of the Gospel bow themselves when they stoop to the capacity of their Auditors, giving milk to babes and not strong meat; for then there is most likelyhood of bringing forth unto God. The Vul. for these words they cast out their sorrows, hath it, Emittunt rugitus, They mourn as extreamly pained in bringing forth: For the faithfull Servants of God travell not thus without much anxiety and sorrow, by reason of the hardnes of the peoples hearts and of their indocibleness, and the Hebrew will better bear this rendring: They send out sorrowes.

Vers. 4. Their young ones are well liking, they are fed with corn, they go forth and turn not to them again: That is, these spirituall Children thus brought forth are fed with the Word, till that through their being thus fed they are filled so with Knowledge that they can live now the life of Grace, without being further taught by men; according to that which was propheſied, They shall no more teach them, saying, Know the Lord, for they shall know me from the greatest to the least: But alasse who cometh to such perfection of knowledge in these daies, and if they do, how many keep it and loose it not again? So that they have continuall need of teaching still, although not in the first principles, such as this is, Know the Lord, one God and three persons, &c. To worship and serve him only, and not any Idols or false Gods. And because to know God, is to live and do so in all things as he requireth, there is need alwaies by Preaching to be stirred up hereunto, as by stirring up a fire it is kept burning, otherwise it goeth out; so Zeal against sin must by Preaching be stirred up from time to time, as the fire in the Temple was dayly renewed.

Note.

Vers. 5.

Vers. 6, 7, 8. Who hath sent out the wilde Asse free, or who hath loosed the bands of the wilde Asse. Verse 6. 7. 8. Whose house I have made the Wilderneſſe, &c. Here is another wonderfull thing in the Creatures, the Asse being of all Beasts, that men use for labour, the stilleſt and sloweſt in going, and most easily ruled, for which it is said; The Oxe knoweth his owner and the Asse his his maſters crib. Yet God hath made one ſort of them very ſwift and indomable by man, feeding them by his providence in barren Wilderneſſes, eſpecially in the Wilderneſſe of Arabia, where this ſort of Aſſes moſt abound, and of their ſwiftneſſe in running Xenophon writeth ſaying, That Cyrus paſſing that way with his horſemen, there were many of them, who being ſtirred, ran ſo ſwiftly away, that ſome horſemen following, could not come neare them, then ſtanding ſtill, but when the horſemen approached, they fell again a running as before, thus deluding them; and to theſe the Wilderneſſe is as an houſe, where they keep: neither can men take or bring them away from thence, and although there be little food, yet by Gods providence, they are ſuſtained and ſtrengthened hereby to this ſwiftneſſe. Now of this he telleth Job, to intimate, that whereas he in proſperity, had great and ſpacious grounds indeed, to keep his Aſſes and Oxen in, and an ample family, as men count ſpacious and ample, ſo that he was the greateſt man in all the Eaſt, as was before ſaid, yet Jobs grounds and houſe was nothing to his, and that both he and all men might know hereby, the greatneſs and excellency of God above men, who hath the vaſt Wilderneſſe, as an houſe wherein to keep abundance, both of theſe and of other wilde Beaſts, and keeping them luſty, where but very little food is to be had, and although men cannot rule them, becauſe they are too ſwift for them, yet God can and doth; which ſhould make man to reverence him ſo, as not to dare to lift up his voice upon any occaſion againſt him: And from hence alſo we may gather, that a little is enough to ſuſtain men in the wilderneſſe of this World: As the Children of Iſrael alſo were here ſuſtained, having nothing to eat, but what God ſent them down from Heaven from day to day, forty yeares together, that as it is ſaid of nature; Exigno natura contenta, It is content with a little, ſo we ſhould be as the Apoſtle exhorteth us, ſaying, VVhilſt we have food and rayment, let us herewith be content. Which maketh both againſt Gluttons and Drunkards, whom nothing will ſuffice but exceſſe, and againſt the covetous, who thinking all that they have to be too little, either murmure at their having no more, or gaping after abundance, are ſet upon getting theſe Worldly things without end, by hook and crook, right and wrong: Some take occaſion from hence, and becauſe it is further ſaid, Verſe 7. He deſpiſeth the multitude of the City. From hence ſome take occaſion to commend an Eremiticall and ſolitary life, far from the frequency of people, to be the more free to divine contemplations: But this is far fetch'd and rather proveth them that do ſo, when there is no neceſſity, as in time of perſecution, to be no better then wilde Aſſes. The Allegory of Gregory is far better here, who will have the faithfull by this deſcription ſet forth, who becauſe their minds are taken up with heavenly things, deſpiſe the courſes of thoſe that are altogether for worldly, are baſely counted of by the world as Aſſes, which are moſt ſilly and dull; but indeed ſuch only are free, all others like Aſſes under the yoak of the World, in whom the ſpirit and generoſity of minde; that is, in theſe is altogether wanting, becauſe he ſaith, VVho hath ſent the wilde Aſſe out free? For it is a freedome not to covet or deſire the Goods of this World, or the dignities hereof, contrariwiſe it is ſervitude and bondage to covet them; for proſperity being affected in worldly things, preſſe the minde, as it were, with a yoake of ſervitude and adverſity, when it is feared: But he that hath ſhaken off worldly deſires from his minde, injoyeth a certain felicity in this life, when he joyeth not much in proſperity, nor is ſtraitened by adverſity: How worldly men are yoaked, Chriſt ſheweth, ſaying; Come to me all yee that be weary and heavy laden, take my yoake upon you, for my yoake is eaſie and my burthen light. But it is an harſh heavy yoake to be under worldly temporall things, to be ambitious of earthly, to hold things fading, to deſire to ſtand in things not

Iſai. 1.

Xenoph. l. 3. de Cyr.

Note

1 Tim. 6.

Gregor.

Note.

Math. 11.

not ſtanding, to deſire things paſſing away, and not to be willing to paſs away with things that paſſe away. For whilſt all things againſt a mans deſire flee away, which before afflicted the mind with a deſire of getting, they afterwards preſſe with a fear of Looſing. In ſaying, Who ſetteth the Wilde Aſſe free? He meaneth, who but God; ſo God can free mans mind from theſe deſires, but man cannot free himſelf, ſo is he held hereby when he thinketh to ſhake it off through the fear of want to come; he is ſtill held faſt hereby; therefore to God we muſt ſeek, that he would ſet us thus free, and as Chriſt ſaith, If the Son makes you free, yee are free indeed. The Chriſtians that thus neglected worldly things for Heavenly, were hereby traduced by Heathens, that they were a ſloathfull Generation like the Aſſe. But Tertullian anſwereth in their behalf; ſaying, We are accuſed to be idle perſons, and ſuch as refuſe to imploy our ſelves in worldly buſineſſes. How can this be? We living amongſt you and being habited, inſtructed in Trades, and of the ſame neceſſity, that ye are, to get our livings by labour. For we are neither Brachmans nor Gymnoſophiſts of the Indians; for ſuch, alſo other Philoſophers, did nothing towards a living, but gave themſelves wholly to ſtudy, we are not, Silvicolæ, Livers in Woods, as Exiles, only we temper our ſelves, that we may not uſe the things of this life ill, or without meaſure: Therefore we dwell in this world together with you, not without Courts, Bathes, Taverns, Shops, Stables, Faires, and other Commerces. Whereby we may ſee, that no Chriſtians did then count it a point of piety to ſequeſter themſelves from the Society of men, to live either Eremites, Anchorites, or Cenobites, but each one in his Lawfull calling, tending his buſineſs as other naturall men did.

Grave jugum & dura ſervitutis pondere eſt ſubeſſe temporalibus, ambire terrena, retenere labentia, velle tenere tranſeuntia ſtare in non ſtantibus, &c. Ioh. 8.

Tertul. Apol. 42.

Verſ. 9. Will the Unicorn ſerve thee, or abide by thy Crib? This is alſo another notable Beaſt, in which the power of God doth greatly appear: It is by the Vulg. rendred, Rinoceros, by ſome it is alſo called, Monoceros, but that is the Greek name taken from the one horn that it hath, becauſe μονος ſignifieth one, and Ceros, an horn, Unicorn the Latine, and he hath the name of Rinoceros, form the growing of his horn from his Noſe. To ſet forth his great ſtrength, it is ſayd, of Iſrael by Balaam, He hath the ſtrength of an Unicorn. It ſeemeth by the various diſcription made of him by divers Writers, that there be more ſorts of them, one called la Rinoceros, and another Monoceros or Unicorn. Ælianus ſaith, that there be wild Aſſes in India of the bigneſſe of an Horſe, having one horn in the midſt of their foreheads, in length a Cubit and halfe, and ſo ſharp, that herewith he peirceth through the hardeſt things. Of this Pliny writeth, that he is like an horſe in his body, his head like an Hart, his feet like an Elephant, and tail as a wild Boar; having an heavy lowing, and one black horn two cubits long, Strabo ſaith that he is as long as an Elephant, but of ſhorter thighs, and therefore not ſo high, in form like an Oxe of a Box colour, or an Elephants, his Rictus or opening of his mouth, like a wild boare, and his skin ſo thick and hard, that the ſharpeſt inſtrument of Iron cannot peirce it, and this beaſt alſo is one that cannot be taken alive by man. But becauſe God can, he is mentioned as another of his works of wonder. Man may make uſe of many other beaſts to do his Husbandry work, but of this, though fitted by ſtature and ſtrength to do moſt, he is able to do none, and therefore a poor weak worm to God-ward.

Numb. 24.

Ælian. lib. 5.

Pliny De ferís judicis. Strabo lib. 16.

Verſ. 13. Who gave the goodly Wings to the Peacocks? Or Wings and feathers to the Oſtrich? But before I ſpeak of this, a word more of the Unicorn: The mighty men of this world, are hereby ſet forth, ſaith Gregory; who lift up their horns on high, againſt which it it is ſayd in the Pſalms, Lift not up your horns on high: For long it was, before that Kings and Emperours could be brought in to labour in the Vineyard, as the Unicorn cannot be made to work, but rather with their terrible horns puſhed and peirced men men, that imbraced the faith of Chriſt; neither could the Apoſtles, the moſt able of all other men, take them, but God in his good time brought them into the feild of his Church, and ſince by their ſtrength, they have done him great good ſervice. But to return to the Peacock and Oſtrich, The Vulg. hath it, Pennæ ni Struthionis ſimilis eſt pennæ heodis & accipitris, An Oſtriches Feather or wing is like that of the Ierfaulcon or the Hauke: The meaning according to Greg. is, The Oſtrich hath wings as well as the Hauke, but the Hauke fleeth moſt ſwiftly, and the Oſtrich cannot flee at all. Hebr. it is, The Wing of the Singers or Cryers extended, is the wing of the Stork, or Oſtrich: For the word חסידה ſignifieth both, to make ſenſe in our tongue, the wings of theſe birds or Fowles, that are noted, for ſinging or crying, are extended, if the wings of the Stork and Hauke be, that is, the Oſtriches, that cry ſo loud have their wings ſpread, as if they could, and were about to flee as well as a Stork or Hauke, but the one fleeth not, as was ſayd before: And the other two do a far off, as the Stork over the Sea in time of cold, coming again in time of warmth, of which Jeremiah alſo ſpeaketh, or moſt ſwiftly, as the Hauke. And by whom this is done, is it not God that putteth this marvelous difference. Pagnin. (becauſe רנן ſignifieth to exult, as well as to cry or ſing, and the Peacock is a fowle, that exulteth much in reſpect of his painted tail, when he ſetteth it up to make it ſhew moſt glorious) ſaith, that haply the Peacock is to be underſtood here; but it is moſt improbable, becauſe if Peacocks were meant, God would not only have given ſo light a touch upon it, and then paſſed on to the Oſtrich, without ſaying any more of it, contrary to his manner in ſpeaking of any other Creature, neither doth he in all this diſcourſe propound two to our conſideration together, but one alone, as being admirable enough for us to meditate ſingly upon, before we come to another, neither is there any word in the Text ſignifying who gave, and if כנף be rendred wing, the New Tranſlation were much miſtaken in thinking, that the Peacock was here pointed at, ſeeing his beauty is not ſo much in his Wings as in the feathers of his tail. It is then certainly, a compariſon which is here propounded betwixt the Stork, and Hauke, and Oſtrich, of which laſt the Lord meant to ſpeak further, as upon a Creature greatly to be noted for the wonderfulneſſe thereof, both in the form and ſtrange qualities of leaving Egs, which yet by Gods providence are cared for, and come many of them to be living Oſtriches, although by their Damm thus neglected, either in reſpect of ſitting upon them to bring them to life, or when they begin to live; of feeding them. For rendring the word חסידה Oſtrich, I ſee no reaſon, becauſe חסד is mercy, and the Oſtriches have none in them, but the Stork ſo much, that ſhee pecks her ſelf, till the bloud runneth out to feed her young ones. Touching the Oſtrich, ſhee is between a beaſt and a fowle, having ſo thinn Feathers, and ſo heavy a Body, that ſhee cannot flee, but only lifts up her wings and runneth very ſwiftly. Ælianus ſaith, that the Oſtrich is almoſt as great as a Camell, being therefore called Struthio Camelus; and becauſe her buttocks are bare and without Feathers, ſhee cannot ſit upon her young to bring them to life, yet ſome ſay that ſhee layeth 80. Egs, and having a faculty of diſcerning, which of them will prove Oſtriches, and which will come to nothing, ſhee leaveth ſome of them upon the ſand, and upon other ſome ſitteth and hatcheth them, but this appeareth to be a fiction, becauſe the Lord ſaith, that ſhee leaveth them for want of wit to conſider, to what dangers they ly open, and of memory to finde them out again being layd, but God by his providence through the heat of the Sun, hatcheth and giveth them life, and ſuſtaineth them moſt admirably, for which this, as another great wonder in nature is worthy to be ſpoken of, to ſhew the almighty power of God. Allegorically the Oſtrich ſetteth forth the Hypocrite, who ſeemeth to have, wings whereby to ſoar up towards Heaven, but worldly things lye ſo heavy in his minde, that

Gregory.

Ier. 8.

Pagnin.

Ælian.

Allegory.

that he cannot ſtir from the earth, and his feathers be too few to flee thus withall: That is, his graces, whereof he hath none but common to the wicked and the righteous, praying and preaching with the mouth, hearing with the eare, keeping daies of faſting, and almeſ-giving, and paying of tythes; but herein the hypocrites of theſe times, come ſhort of thoſe of old, ſome not duly paying or willingly paying any, and they that do, not being ſo ſtrict as herein to go to the tythe of Mint, Annis, and Comin; although the Lord ſaith, that this ought to be done alſo: For the graces, wherewith his feathers muſt be thickened, but in him wanting, they are love, joy in the ſpirit, meekneſſe, and humility, temperance, faith, and ſo forth, as they are together ſet forth, Gal. 5. 22. And if the hypocrite be repreſented by the Oſtrich, then the Godly indeed and ſincere are here ſet forth by the Stork and Hauke, which hath a little body, but many feathers, ſo that ſhe can eaſily flee upward; that is, little fleſh and a great deale of ſpirit, againſt which, although the fleſh ſtriveth, yet the ſpirit prevayleth, and they are hereby lead, and made like ſpirituall bodies, and to have their converſation now in Heaven, to which their bodies ſhall verily be made apt to aſcend, as Chriſt did in body, when they ſhall be changed and made like unto his glorious body.

Rom. 8.
Phil. 3. 20.

Verſ. 14. Which leaveth her eggs in the earth, and warmeth them in the duſt. Here an hypocrite is further deſcribed by his careleſneſſe in reſpect of his people, if he be a Paſtour, or of his Children, if he be a Father; for ſuch a Paſtour, although he preacheth, yet he travelleth not through care of the Flock committed unto him: As Paul, till Chriſt be formed in them, but leaveth them in the Earth, as it were, and in the duſt for want of any diſcipline uſing through an earneſt deſire to ſee them reformed, whereby it cometh to paſſe, that notwithſtanding all his teaching and preaching, as they were earth and duſt, ſo they are ſtill, and as hotly ſet upon the duſt and dung of this World, as if they had never heard of not ſetting their hearts hereupon; for which it is ſaid, Warmeth them in the duſt. And ſo as when the Oſtriches egg cometh to be hatched, it is but an Oſtrich like her ſelfe: So they that live under ſuch a Miniſtry, are but hypocrites like to their Teachers, having a forme of godlineſſe only, but void of the power of it, coming indeed to the word preached, and the Sacraments, and praying long and often, but not keeping themſelves unſpotted of the World, by not doing any thing that is baſe and wicked, after the manner of worldings, by lying, ſtealing, deceit, oppreſſion, or following in ſecret the luſts of the fleſh, or by pride, envy, malice, or deſire of revenge, or ſtrife, or debate, ſlandering, rayling, or bitter ſpeaking: For by theſe or any of theſe they are ſpotted, as one upon whom black and ſtinking dirt is caſt; yea Jude calleth them ſpots and blots, and as they are ſpots, ſo they want another ſubſtantiall point of pure religion; that is, Charitableneſſe, for both theſe put together, make a pure religious Perſon: To viſit the Fatherleſſe and Widdowes in their adverſity, and keep a mans ſelfe unſpotted of the World. All other religion, when this is not done, being vain: The Paſtour then that hath no more care of theſe things, then an Oſtrich of her eggs, to propound and ſtir up to all of them, as wherin the power of religion lyeth, or having preached them up crieth them down again, in his own life and example, or that is not vigilant againſt the groſs ſinnes of the people, both to cry out againſt them, and to cenſure particular perſons that be ſuch, by the exerciſe of the keyes committed unto him, is not tender hearted, as the Miniſter of Chriſt ought to be, but hard-hearted, as the Oſtrich againſt her own eggs, and all his labour is in vain, although through his fooliſhneſs he is not ſenſible hereof, and therefore feareth nothing: And as it is with the Paſtour, ſo it is with the Parent, that leaveth his children upon the Earth, by bringing them up in an earthly and worldlymanner, ſeeking

Note.
Gal. 4. 19.

Iam. 1.

Iud. Epiſt.

Verſ. 16.

to

to warme them with the duſt and droſs of worldly wealth, but not in the information and feare of the Lord, at the leaſt no further, then that feare of God for outward performances, as hath been already ſaid, that wherein the power of it conſiſteth, being neglected, the fleeing of all ſin, and doing of all good: And if they be judged hard-hearted, whether Paſtours or Parents, that do thus, what do they elſe, as long as they do ſo, but labour with an impenitant heart; whereby They heap up to themſelves, wrath againſt the day of wrath. And although in this their way they feare nothing, their labour is vain; and ſo when the Lord of the Vineyard cometh to pay his labourers, that which they have done, being all vain, they ſhall be diſmiſſed without any ſuch pay, and be paid according to their works by the juſt Judge, who to them That by patients continue in well doing, ſeek immortallity, will give everlaſting life, but to evill doors, ſhame and contempt.

Eph. 6.

Rom. 2. 4.

Rom. 2. 7.

As the Oſtrich thus hardneth her ſelf againſt her eggs, having no feare for the want of knowledge and underſtanding, of which God hath deprived her: So ſuch Paſtours and Parents are fooliſh, and it is for want of wiſedome, that they do ſo, as hath been ſaid, to their own utter ruine afterwards; according to the ſaying, Quos vult pardere dementat Jupiter. God infatuateth them, whom he will deſtroy.

Verſ. 17.

When ſhe lifteth up her ſelfe on high ſhe ſcorneth the horſe and his rider. Here by the Horſe and his rider in the Allegory underſtand, the faithfull Servants of God, in whom the fleſh is as it were, the Horſe, and the ſpirit the rider; the Oſtrich ſcorning, theſe is the wicked hypocrite, who keepeth his wings cloſe to his body, when he wanteth power, and is kept under, but when at any time he cometh to have power, he is bold to uſe the true faithfull Servants of God moſt contempteouſlly, before he keepeth low through fained humility, but now he lifteth himſelfe up on high through pride, and doth deſpite unto the very ſpirit of God, in deſpiſing them: And herein the Popes of Rome, have notoriouſly diſcovered themſelves to be Oſtrich-like hypocrites, being in times paſt, Servi ſervorum Dei. But now though they write themſelves ſo ſtill, Domini dominantium: Above Kings and Emperours, moſt deſpitfully uſing thoſe of the reformation, who are as the Horſe and his rider, ſtirred up againſt them for their abominations, and not much unlike unto them are all that having ſometimes ſhewed themſelves ſo lowly, that whatſoever they ſuffered, they were yet contained through reverence to the higher powers, from lifting up themſelves, but having gotten oppertunity feare not to do it: But this Horſe and rider will be too good for all ſuch Oſtriches in the end, and then they ſhall ſmart for ſuch contempts and elevations; as is ſhewed, Revel. 19.

Verſ. 18.

Revel. 29. 11. 12.

Haſt thou given the Horſe ſtrength, haſt thou clothed his neck with thunder. For the Horſe, what a courageous Creature the war Horſe is we all know, that is right bred, and therefore we ſhall not need to proſecute the deſcription of him according to the Letter; but allegorically with Gregory underſtand by the Horſe, as before Verſe 18. Gods faithfull Servants, who through the ſpirit of God that is in them, are moſt courageous and without feare of any Creature: To ſuch God giveth ſtrength. Firſt, To ſubdue ſin in themſelves, then clotheth their necks with thunder, terriblely to thunder againſt the ſinnes of others; as the courageous Horſe filleth the aire with neighing when amongſt others he goeth to battell. According to this James and John were called, Boanerges, Sonnes of thunder. And not without reaſon is this ſpirituall Horſe ſaid to be clothed about his neck with thunder, when as the noiſe that he maketh by neighing, is within coming from his throat; but to intimate, that he weareth the Law, which he preacheth as a chain about his own neck, which is, when he is graced by living according to the ſame.

Verſ. 19.

Prov. 1. 8.

Verſ. 20. Canſt thou make him afraid as a Graſhopper? the glory of his noſtrils is terrible. The Horſe is here further ſpoken of, by way of compariſon with a Locuſt or Graſhopper, becauſe Locuſts alſo are ſaid to go forth as an Army, and God raiſed a mighty Army of them againſt Pharaoh and the Ægyptians, and they are by John deſcribed as repreſenting war Horſes: But although they have ſome forme of Horſes, yet they are not herein like unto them ordinarily, that they can do nothing with all their accommadations about them like unto war Horſes, they are afraid of man, and are weake creatures, unleſs they be extraordinarily ſtirred up by God, but the war Horſe is naturally feirce and courageous, and cannot be terrified; but whereas the Graſhopper ſingeth weakly, he neigheth ſtrongly and terribly: For the allegory, that which is here further added, ſetteth forth a ſecond property of a faithfull Servant of Chriſt, as one was ſet forth before in his ſtrength and ſtrong neighing, like terrible thundering, Viz. The ſtirring up of himſelf by his neighing to be more heavenly,

Prov. 30. Exod. 10. Revel. 9.

Verſ. 21. for which after his neighing ſpoken of, he ſaith, He paweth the Valley with his feet. The vulg. nearer to the Hebrew, He diggeth the earth with his hoofe. That is, treadeth worldly things under foot, when he is ſtrengthened, as aforeſaid, which he doth, that eſteemeth not of them in compariſon of Chriſt, but counteth them droſſe and dung, as Paul did.

Phil. 3. 7. 3. As the Horſe rejoyceth to go to war, ſo the faithfull Preacher at temptations by ſufferings, wherewith he is aſſaulted in time of his ſpirituall warfare, as the Apoſtles did, when they were ſcourged for preaching Chriſt, they rejoyced; and as by the courage of Horſes, courage is put into the man, ſo by the courage, and exultation of the Preacher in ſufferings, other Chriſtians are incouraged cheerfully to incounter with

Act. 4. Verſ. 23. ſufferings likewiſe. 4. Becauſe it is ſaid that the Horſe ſo cryeth, Ah, ha; at the ratling of the ſpeares, and ſound of the Trumpet, at which others are afraid; ſo the faithfull Servants of God, ſhall not feare at the laſt day, the things that others feare, the terrible ſignes appearing in Heaven, and Trumpet ſounding; but as Chriſt biddeth them, lift up their heads with joy, for the time of their redemption draweth neere, and likewiſe, whereas the wicked are terrified at the approach of death, they triumph as Conquerours, as knowing that it is but a diſſolution, that they may be with Chriſt. Laſtly, As it is ſaid of the Horſe, That he ſmelleth the battell a far off. So that it cometh not upon him unexpectedly; in like manner the courageous Chriſtian is alwaies in expectation of ſufferings, and therefore they cannot come unexpectedly upon him, but being prepared for them, when they come he is not hereby terrified, as others are: For the literall application, it is the ſame that hath been often ſpoken, from ſuch ſtrength and courage by God put into an Horſe, but not into a Graſhopper, to be made for his infinite power, that doth all this, to reverence him, and for our parts each one in particular

Rom. 8. 1 Cor. 15. Phil. 1. 23. Verſ. 25.

Note. ſeeing the diverſity of gifts by God given to divers Creatures, one having that which another hath not, and yet that creature in ſome reſpects not ſo free, as others that want them are, for the Horſe with his courage ſerveth man and not himſelfe in war, the wilde Aſs hath not that courage, but more ſwiftneſs, and ſo keepeth himſelf from ſervitude, and ſo doth the Unicorn; ſeeing I ſay, it is thus with Beaſts, we ought to be content, although other men have more given to them in any reſpect then

Note. we have, for it is the will and providence of God, that makes it thus to be. Laſtly, Becauſe many of the creatures of God ſpoken of, and further to be ſpoken of, do far excell men in ſtrength, and are formidable to them, yea the Horſe would be, if he were not unto man ſubdued, but all are ſubject to God, and by God theſe courageous Horſes are made ſubject to men; let us much more be aſhamed to be rebellious againſt him, being fully aſſured, that if we ſtill hold on ſo, how great ſoever any of us be in this World, we ſhall be reduced to ſubjection, though not of our own will yet of neceſſity, to Gods Jaylor the Devill, who ſo proudly deſpiſed or careleſly neglected to ſerve God, as he required.

any

Doth the Hauk flee by thy wiſedome, and ſtretch her wings towards the South. Vulg. An ex ſapientiam tuam plumeſcie. And the word תאבר ſignifieth either Volare or Plumeſcere, to fly or to grow feathery. And it is by Gregory underſtood, of her caſting ſome feathers, and other growing anew, for which purpoſe the Hauks that be wilde, get them into warm places, and ſpread their wings ſouthward to the heat of the Sun, that the old feathers may come out from yeare to yeare, and new ones grow: Allegorically, as by the Hauk before in another reſpect, ſo here underſtand, the faithfull for this, that they being heat by the ſpirit of God, wherewith Chriſt the Son of righteouſneſs ſhineth upon them, caſt off the old man with his luſts and concupiſcence, and put on the new: Of renewing their age like the Eagle, ſee Pſal. 103. And being born anew, John 3. 5. And of becoming new creatures, if we be in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 17. But it is to be noted, that the Hauke is ſaid, Expandere; To open wide her wings towards the South, to denote a mans laying open of his ſinnes towards this Sun, by humbly confeſſing them, whereby they may be made to ſhed off, and new to come in their ſtead, becauſe he that confeſſeth and forſaketh his ſinnes, ſhall have mercy, but not otherwiſe.

Verſ. 29. Gregor. Ephe. 4. 24. Prov. 28. 13.

Doth the Eagle at thy command make her neſt on high. She dwelleth upon the Rock, &c. And ſeeketh her pray a far off. The Eagle is another wonderfull thing in nature for her high flying, even above all other Fowles of the aire; and for her looking with open eyes upon the Sun, when it ſhineth brightly; and according to her high flying, ſo ſhe maketh her neſt upon the top of an high moſt harſh and craggy Rock, ſitting there expoſed to winde and weather: Hereby the faithfull are ſet forth, who are made ſo not by the will of man but of God; as the Pſalmiſt alſo compareth them to an Eagle, for ſuch a man maketh his neſt upon a craggy Rock; when for the love of God and heavenly things, he careth not what hardſhip he indureth in this World, being as well content with poverty as with riches, with bonds as with liberty of body, and with death as with life here, and he ſeeth more into the myſteries of God, then any other man, being comforted at the ſight of him herein, wherein others cannot look, or with their eyes behold, through the weakneſs of their underſtanding; according to that of the Apoſtle, The ſpirituall man diſcerneth all things, the naturall cannot, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. For this Eagles ſeeking of her prey a far off, this ſetteth forth the Saints ſeeing the joys of Heaven by the eye of faith, from which they are yet far; but feed hereupon by comfort, which they take herein.

Verſ. 27. 28. 29. Pſal. 103. Phil. 4. 11. 1 Cor. 2. 15.

Her young ones alſo ſuck up blood; and where the ſlain are, there is ſhe. That is, Referring it to weaker Chriſtians, although they cannot ſee ſo far into the things of God, yet they know Chriſt crucified for them, and ſhedding his blood, and by faith, and receiving his ſupper, they fed upon his blood; for to expreſs this to the Corinthians, that were yet as babes, he ſaith, that amongſt them he deſired to know nothing but Chriſt and him crucified; that is, to inſtruct them in nothing elſe, as being uncapable yet of more profound teaching, Where the ſlain are, there is ſhe. To the ſame effect of that of Chriſt, Where the dead carcaſe is, theither will the Eagles reſort. Whereby is meant, that as the Eagles follow Armies, that when any be ſlain, they may prey upon them: So the Chriſtian is where Chriſt is, who was ſlain for our ſinnes, living in his Church, where his body or fleſh is to be eaten, and after death, ascending to be alwaies where he is, first in Soul, then both body and Soul, reunited at the last day to eat of the hidden Manna, and so to be blessed for evermore.

Verſ. 30.

CHAP. XL.

Vers. 2. SHall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? He that reproveth God let him answer it. Here the Lord, after many questions moved to Job, presseth him to answer (sith God by that which hath been sayd clearly appeareth to be of infinite Power, Wisdome, and Goodnes) and to declare what excellency was in him, wherein none else could compare with him; if he could, because he stood so much upon his Righteousnesse, and if he could not, then to repent of that which he had spoken, and to cease to speak any thing magnifically of himself any more. For whilst man compareth himself with other men, it may seem to him, that he is extraordinary, and ought not to be dealt withall in rigour, but let the most just man that is, look up to God; and consider the super-excellencies that are in him by his creatures so wonderfully and variously indued with qualities, excelling those in many things that be in man, and then he shall finde nothing in himself, whereof to boast, but cause of humiliation and silence, howsoever the Almighty is pleased by his severest judgments to try and prove him. And accordingly Job having heard all this, humbleth himself and resolveth upon silence, and not once to mutter more against Gods doings, thus declaring his humble subjecting of himself unto him, whether to live or dye: For he Vers. 4. Vers. 5. saith, Behold I am vile, what shall I answer thee? I wil lay my hand upon my Mouth. Once have I spoken, but I will not answer, yea twice, but I will proceed no further. As if he had sayd, whilst I had to deal with men, I was bold divers times to answer them, and to justifie my complaint, that I made at the first, Chapt. 3. and to speak as if I were wronged, and as wishing to come and plead my cause before thee, but now that Majesty hath vouchsafed to speak, I see thy excellency to be incomparable, and my vilenesse in comparison of thee to be so great, that I will not come into the lists to contend with thee, but loe I am here in silence ready to beare what-

Note. soever thou layest upon me. And as Job, so the best man living, shall not be able to speak when God appeareth, if he be lifted up with any conceit of his own Righteousnesse, as thinking that he hath not so ill deserved, as to suffer what he doth. And therefore let us set our selves in Gods presence now whilst we live; if by pride or any way else we have offended, and as if he already were come to reprove, humble our selves unto him, confesse our vilenesse, and cease speaking presumpteously or doing wickedly any more, and so we shall finde mercy again at his hands as Job did. For if so just a man as Job had his mouth stopped, and now saw so much vileness in himself, that he thought himself unworthy to answer one word; how much more shall wicked men then when God shall appear to judge the quick and the dead, see their abominable vileness, and be confounded hereat, being stricken speechless, and so be taken away and bound hand and foot and cast into utter darkness, as the man that came to the Marriage Supper of the King without a wedding Garment was.

Vers. 6. 7. The Lord beginneth to speak again out of the Whirlwind, as he did, Chapt. 38. 1. And he spake thus to humble Job, who before had too much lifted up himself; to Elijah he spake with a soft and still voice, when he spake to comfort and instruct him, but to Job his voice came out of a Whirlwinde to terrifie and humble him. But when it is sayd, that God spake, it

Gregor. is to be understood by his Angell, as Gregory sayth, Although he sometimes speaketh without an Angell mediating betwixt him and men, yet this is, when no voice is heard with the Ear outwardly, but by Revelations made to the Heart inwardly, as he ſpake to the Prophets: but when he ſpake by words and ſillables to the bodily Ear, he uſed his Angells for his Inſtruments of ſpeaking, as when he gave the Law upon mount Sinai, where the Lord is ſayd to have ſpoken all thoſe words, the Apoſtle ſayth, that the Law was given by the Mediation of Angells, for it was ordained by Angells in the hand of a Mediator. Gal. 3. 19.

when

Wilt thou alſo diſanull my judgment, wilt thou condemn me, that thou mayſt be righteous? The man that is juſt being ſmitten, if he finds himſelf greived at his ſufferings, hereby doth in effect condemn the proceedings of God in ſmiting him, although he ſpeaketh not; but is ſilent as Job now reſolved to be. For he doth not acknowledge his judgments to be juſt, unleſſe in taking part as it were with God, he riſeth up againſt himſelf, ſaying, I am worthy to be thus dealt withall, although I know nothing by my ſelfe. For if there be no ſinn in him, for which he is made ſo greivouſly to ſuffer; yet becauſe God hath another end by ſufferings to make a juſt man more juſt, and to increaſe his Grace in him, that is, the Grace of patience, that he may have the more ſure hope, it is in him a condemning and diſanulling of Gods judgments not to confeſſe that he is juſt in all his wayes and righteous in all his works. And therefore Job having not done ſo ſince his three freinds came to viſit him, the Lord to make him take notice of this his overſight thus challengeth him, as if to juſtifie himſelf he condemned him, that we may all learn in our ſufferings to ſtand ſtifly ſtill to the juſtifying of Gods proceedings againſt us, though we know not the cauſe, even as we would not be found guilty of ſo hainous a crime as this, to condemn God in any of his proceedings, but ſuch as howſoever we ſuffer, ſtill give Glory to him, that we may finally be Glorified by him for ever. Verſ. 8. Note.

Haſt thou an Arm like God? Or canſt thou thunder with a voice like him? When God ſpeaketh of his Arm and voice here, or elſe where, it is ſpoken of him, we muſt not conceive with the Anthropomorphites, that he hath ſuch parts, or a Body whereby he uttereth a voice, as man doth; but hereby as by ſimilitudes he is ſet forth by condiſcending to our capacities, who knew no ſtrength in man to do mighty things but his Armes, nor voice, that he can utter; but by his tongue and through his Throat. And in this ſenſe God is alſo ſometimes ſet forth as an Eagle having wings, under which ſhee covereth, or upon which ſhee beareth her young ones, and by an Hen. But the Arm of God is his almighty power, and his voice his wiſedome, for which Chriſt by whom all things were made, is called the Power of GOD, and the Wiſedome of GOD, and his mighty hand and ſtreched out Arm, And the word which was with God and was God. Verſ. 9. Pſal. 91. Matth. 23. 1 Cor 1. 24. Luk. 1. 51.

Deck thy ſelf with Majeſty and beauty, and aray thy ſelf with glory and excellency: Abaſe every one that is proud. For this the Lord doth, as he ſaith, Eſa. 2. Here Job having humbled himſelf to God, hath further reaſon ſhewed him, why he ſhould ſo do, Viz. Becauſe he cannot deck himſelf with Majeſty, and Glory as God doth, neither can he abaſe the proud as he can, and therefore as an infirme Creature, that cannot ſave himſelf, it became him to demeane himſelf towards God moſt humbly. Of Gods Glory and Majeſty, it is often ſpoken in the Pſalms, and how he can abaſe the proud, is ſhewed in his bringing of a floud upon the Giants drowning them all, and his deſtroying of proud Pharoah and his hoſt, and Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar; but alaſs what can the mightieſt of men do, unleſs God ſtrengtheneth him. Now every man that liveth in ſinn is proud, but upon ſome God looketh to make them repent; as Chriſt looked upon Peter, and then he was abaſed by being made to weepe bitterly, to his greater future exaltation; upon others he looketh to confound them, and to bring them down that ſtand ſtifly and ſtoutly in their ſinnes, and will not be humbled. Verſ. 10. Verſ. 11. Gen. 6.

Behold

Verſ. 15. 16. Behold now Behemoth which I made with thee, he eateth graſs like an Oxe. His ſtrength is in his loines and his force in the navell of his belly. What is meant by Behemoth is not amongſt Expoſitors agreed: The word Behemah ſignifieth a Beaſt, of which Behemoth is the plurall number, Beaſts: Some moſt abſurdly hold that it is a Beaſt, which we know not, of a monſtrous greatneſs, called by the name of Behemoth, being ſeven miles long and broad, his head a mile, and his tail a mile, eating up daily the graſs growing upon a thouſand Hills, which being tread down one day, ſpringeth abundantly again the next, and that this Beaſt God will kill at the time of the reſurrection thereof, to make a feaſt for his Saints, thus Lyra out of ſome Rabbins: Some again will not have any one Beaſt, but all Beaſts meant hereby, as the word ſignifieth, in ſome of which all the things here ſpoken of are, and they were made the ſame day that man was, and therefore being that which is here ſaid, Made with thee. agreeth well, if the word be ſo underſtood. 3. Some underſtand the Elephant by Behemoth, either for his excellency above all other Beaſts in the bigneſs and ſtrength of his body, ſo called, becauſe equall herein to many Beaſts put together: And there are many that ſay, that the Hebrews call the Elephant commonly by his name, and none other, for which both they and the Hebrews many of them underſtand the Elephant, and all things in the deſcription agree moſt aptly to this Beaſt, and it is not probable, that God having ſpoken of other mighty Beaſt in particular, wherein his power doth moſt notably appear, would omit particularly to ſpeak of the Elephant, the greateſt and mightieſt of them all: And that which is ſaid of Behemoths being made with him, doth well agree to the Elephant, if either we look at the time of the creation of the Beaſts and of Man the ſame day, or the familiarity of Elephants with men, being ſo apt to learn their qualities, and having memory and underſtanding like men, and a kinde of love to them, if they be brought up with them, doing them great good ſervice, both in peace and war, and keeping watch, as it were, about mens houſes, and peculiarly poſſeſſed by Kings, whereof Job was one: Some alſo note, that he repreſenteth Oxen in his hornes by the fangs that grow out of his mouth like hornes, but yet in his trunk he is unlike him, although in eating graſs and boughs of Trees alſo like him: For the ſtrength alſo ſaid to be in his loines, it well agreeth to the Elephant, who is ſo ſtrong, that he can beare an woodden Tower upon his back, and upon that two and thirty men ſtanding to fight therefrom, and with his trunk he overthroweth Trees, and then feedeth upon them.

Lyra. 2. Torſter. Marinus. Vatab. Tigur. Eugubin. Titleman. Oſor. 1 Mach. 6.

Verſ. 17. He moveth his tail like a Cedar, the ſinews of his ſtones are wrapt together. This ſeemeth not to agree to the Elephant, becauſe being ſo great a Beaſt, he hath ſo little a tail and without haire, as that it cometh not down to cover him behind, as other Beaſts tailes doe, neither hath he any uſe thereof ſo much, as to beat flies away from annoying him in his Poſteriorums, but only with the wrinkles of his hard skin there, upon which they come, he by contracting it killeth them: But the word rendred Moveth. Hebr. is חפץ to love or to pleaſure in, or is pleaſed with, for the compariſon made with the Cedar, it ſeemeth to be in reſpect of the ſmall leaves, which that great Tree hath in compariſon of other Trees, being narrow and pricky at the end, like thoſe of the Fir Tree; and the meaning is, the Elephant, a great Beaſt, hath a leſſer tail then other Beaſts, and with few haires upon it, as the Cedar hath ſmaller leaves, and yet takes as much pleaſure in it, as if it were greater. The ſinews of his ſtones are wrapt together. This alſo agreeth to the Elephant, which is moſt remarkable for his genitall members, being for his greatneſſe very ſmall, and in a manner wrapped up in his body: And as theſe be, ſo is his luſt ſmall to the Female, never coming together with her for Generation, but

Ariſtot. Ælian.

but in ſecret, and when ſhe is once filled, not having to do with her any more, as ſome ſay, all his life time; and ſhe bringeth forth only one at a time, and that no bigger then a yeare old Calfe, although it groweth afterwards to be the greateſt of all Beaſts by far: But that of the Elephants coming together, never but once in their life time for generation, who can beleive, becauſe that ſo, there being but one bred for two, the old dying, though they live long as ſome ſay, two hundred or three hundred yeares, they would either by death naturall, or by being killed, decreaſe in time and be worn out, till that none were left upon earth; for Verſe 18. His bones are like ſtrong peices of braſſe, like bars of Iron. Which is ſo ſaid, becauſe he is the ſtrongeſt of all other Beaſts. Verſ. 18.

He is the cheife of the waies of God, he that made him, can make his ſword to approach unto him. The Vulg. and Hebr. have the beginning of the waies of God, it being ſaid thus of the Elephant, not becauſe nothing was made before it, but haply either none of the Beaſts, or it is thus ſaid, becauſe the cheife amongſt the Beaſts, called the waies of God, becauſe that in making of them, whereof many be ſo exceedingly ſtrong, God took away to declare his power upon earth unto men; for his making of his ſword to approach unto him, ſome think that this is done, when he is hunted and killed by the Indians, for of their hunting of them, both Ariſtotle and Ælianus write: Some, when the Unicorn peirceth and killeth him with his ſharp horn, and this being done indeed, it may be ſaid to be done by the ſword of God, but it is rather to be thought, that the meaning is, however he be the ſtrongeſt of all Beaſts, and none dare approach unto him, yet God hath a ſword whereby he can cut him off when he pleaſeth; that is, By his power, which nothing can reſiſt, Verſe 21, 22, 23. ſhew his feeding and places of his aboad, he is not a Carnivorous wilde beaſt, but harmleſs, for all his great ſtrength, other Beaſts feeding about him without feare, and he is ſhaddowed by the Trees in watery places, in which he much delighteth, by reaſon of his great heate, and neere a Tree he getteth him, in the ſhaddow thereof to reſt him by leaning againſt it, becauſe he cannot bend his knees to lye down. Verſ. 19. Verſ. 21.

He drinketh up a River, and haſteth not; he truſteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth. The word יעשק ſignifieth, To oppreſſe or to take by force, Rapere. And therefore it may be read, he will do, as it were, ſome violence to a River, when he cometh to drink at it, he drinketh through the greatneſſe of his body, and of his thirſt ſo great a quantity, that the running of the ſtream is even ſtaied hereby, as if it were by force for the time: And it is ſaid, he haſteth not, becauſe as Ælianus writeth of him, he drinketh not, till he hath firſt by going into and ſtirring the water made it pudly, for he loveth not clear waters; and for the quantity, Ariſtotle ſaith, That he drinketh fourteen Ampharas or Tankers in the morning, and eight at night; but as Ælianus alſo ſaith, he goeth long without drinking, even daies together, that which is ſpoken of the River Iordan, is added by way of Hyperbole, further to ſet forth the ſame. Verſ. 23. Ælian.

He taketh it with his eies; his noſe peirceth thorow a ſnare. He will take it with his eyes as with an hook. But Hebr. There is no hook ſpoken of, and Vatablus giveth this for the ſenſe, he when he beginneth to drink, is ſo greedy of it, that he thruſteth in his head up to the eyes; but it is rather meant, that in his eye, all the water that he cometh to, is ſcarce enough to quench his thirſt, as the common ſaying is, Better fill his belly then his eye: And hitherto of Behemoth, as hereby an Elephant is thought to be meant: Now the Fathers generally and many new Writers alſo hereby underſtand, the Devill, who is let forth by the name of Beaſts or Behemoth, for they are all one, becauſe he being made an Angel of Verſ. 24. Vatabl. Auguſt. l. 11. De Gen. Ad lit. Hyeron.

Ambroſ. l. 1. de pœnit c. 13. Cyril. l. 9. in Johan. c. 6. Chriſoſt. Rom. 27. in Malh. Catena Græc. Origen' Gregor. Gloſſaord. Ferlin. Raban Tho: Aqui. Philppius. Toſtatus. &c.

of light at the firſt by falling, was abaſed as a beaſt, as it is ſayd of man being in honour, that he became like to the Beaſts that periſh, Pſ. 49. So the Devill falling was like to Beaſts, the Serpent, the Lion, the Dragon, to all which he is compared; and herein to all Beaſts, that he periſheth, having alſo in him the evill qualities of all Beaſts, the ſubtilty of the Serpent, the cruelty of the Lion or Dragon, the devouring and deſtroying quality of all Beaſts, yea even of the gentleſt, which if they come into Orchards or corn-feilds, or other like Grounds, they deſtroy with their mouths and feet all things, as the Ox with whom is he compared, and ſayd to eat hay like him, of which by and by. As therefore men by living like Beaſts come to be beaſts, as the dogged and quarelſome are dogs, the Drunken are Swine, the Luxurious, Horſes, the Cruel, Lions, the Subtill to deceive, Foxes, the poiſonous tongued, Serpents, &c. Of which we read in divers places of the holy Scriptures, ſo the Devill for his being like the Beaſts is called Behemoth And to ſhew that a man who liveth like a Beaſt, is a very beaſt, through following his ſenſuall Luſts, and his want of the Knowledge of God only to be high and excellent; one man Nebuchanezzar had his underſtanding taken from him, and like a Beaſt, was driven from amongſt men, and eat Graſs like a Beaſt, and lived amongſt Beaſts ſeven years. Moreover to make it the more probable, that the Devill is meant by Behemoth in this place, the words before going are to be looked at, Look upon every one that is proud, and bring him down, Verſ. 13. For who ſo proud as the Devill and by man not to be ſubdued, if he had meant the Elephant, he would not certainly have brought him for an Example of ſuch pride, for he is by man to be ſubdued, as all other Beaſts, as both David ſheweth, and James affirmeth wherefore when he inſtanceth in Behemoth, ſaying, Behold him, ſome other thing muſt needs be meant, and not the Elephant, and this is the Devill. And to the Elephant agreeth not that which followeth, v. 19. He is the beginning or cheif of the waies of God: But to Angells who were firſt made the firſt day of the Creation of the world, whereas the Beaſts were all made upon the ſixth day neither is there any thing in the next words to the contrary, Which I made with thee: For in ſaying thus, may as well be underſtood one madeany of the ſix days, as upon the ſixth, becauſe, as Gregory noteth, it is ſayd of all the ſix dayes as of one day: Thus the Lord made the Heavens and the Earth in the day that he created them and every plant of the feild: Which may be underſtood as ſpoken of the matter, out of which all things were made, that is, the Earth, ſo that although man were not made the ſame day, that the Angels were, yet for ſo much as the Earth was then made, containing the matter out of which he was formed: he might be ſayd to be made with them, and they with him, or he is ſayd to be made with him, now that by him he was thus ſmitten to try his power upon him; and thus he ſaith, I have made him with thee, that is, to come but with thee, that thou finding thy ſelf unable to deliver thy ſelf out of his hands, mayſt not dare to conteſt with me. And in ſaying, Whom I have made with thee, he meaneth not making, as of Beaſts and other Earthly Creatures, but as of one after Gods image as man is, for in the Angells there is ſome Repreſentation of his Glory and Holineſs by their firſt Creation, as in man of his Dominion, Righteouſneſs, and Holineſs.

Pſal. 8. Iam. 3.

Gen. 1. 1.

Gen 2. 4.

But how is this that true touching the Devill or Devills, becauſe they are called Behemoth, in the plurall number (becauſe although they are as one, and accordingly are ſpoken of in the words following, in reſpect of their evill qualities; yet they are merry) that he is ſayd to eat hay or Graſſe like the Oxe?

Anſw. By Graſſe man may well be underſtood, becauſe it is ſayd of him, All fleſh is Graſſe, and the Glory of it as the flower of the feild, Eſa. 40. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 24. The Devill then eateth Graſſe or Hay like the Oxe when he eateth up and devoureth fleſhly men in greateſt proſperity, as he doth when they they dye, as we may see in the Example of the rich Glutton, Luk. 16. And all men that are withered like hay, having no sap or substance of Grace in them. For as men generally are likened to Grass, so some are as Hay or stubble, 1 Cor 3. 11. 12. devourable or combustible, that is, which may and shall be devoured by Beasts, that is Devills, or the fire of the last day. Sometime indeed the Devil is likened to a roaring Lion, but then men whom he devoureth come under the notion of flesh, because flesh and bloud properly are the food of Lions. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

His strength is in his loines, and his force in the Navell of his Belly. What loines or navell hath the Devill, that is a spirit? Vers. 16.

Answ. By his loins may be understood lust in men, because the loines are the seat of the seed of Generation in them: And by the Navell lust in women, it being the seat in them. Yet some will have by the loines understood lust, and by the belly, intemperance about meats and drinks, which as the Apostle saith, are for the belly, but God will destroy both it and them, because they say the Navell is not in women the seat of their seed, but the womb. Not to contend about this, it is certain, that from the belly full fed cometh lust both in men and women, and therefore it is said, Sine cerere & baccho friget venus, Without Bread and Wine venery is frigid. In saying then that his strength is in his loins and Navell of his belly, he meaneth the loins and bellyes of Libidinous and intemperate men and women, these are said to be the Devills, because by these sinfull courses which they take, made his, and therefore, whereas the Apostle saith, that the Fornicator is the member of an Harlot, so he may be said to be the loynes of the Devill, and she the belly of the Devill, whereby his power cometh to be thus great, and he to be so mighty to eat, and to lift up multitudes of men and women, as the Oxe doth Grass or hay, as Balaam sometime said of the Children of Israel, in respect of himself and his Moabites, and of the like condition are Gluttons and Drunkards of both Sexes. For all Whoremongers and Whores are strong instruments of the Devill, Women to overcome men, and men women, and his very members, which they give to sin to serve him and it, contrary to that of the Apostle, Rom. 6. And the like is to be held touching Gluttons and Drunkards; especially Drunkards, who are strong instruments of the Devill; greatly prevailing against temperance almost in all men. Rom. 14. Note. Gregory. Philip. 1 Cor. 4.

He lifteth up his tail as the Cedar. By his tail the end of the Body is set forth, because it is joyned to it behind; hereby therefore saith Gregory, Antichrist is set forth, who is strong as a Cedar, and therefore as with a Cedar lifted up, beateth down all that stand before him, and because he cometh towards the end of the World, he is set forth by the tail of this Behemoth, and to confirm this, the Dragon in the Revelations, who also is the Devill, is set forth by his tail drawing and casting down the third part of the stars to the Earth, which I will not say but that it may be the true meaning, only whereas the Antichrist to come is limited to the later end of the World, and held to be but one man, that should have such power only three years and half properly understood. I cannot herein consent unto him, because this tail hath been long already lifted up on high as a Cedar above all the Trees of the Forest whether spirituall or secular, and began about a hundred years after Gregory his writing of this, and was then by him described so; as that he cannot be gathered to be any other then the high and haughty Bishop of Rome, each one in his time being, Vir ejusdem farinæ. For he is, saith he, the Antichrist or forerunner of Antichrist, that lifteth up himself above all other Bishops as their Prince and Head, in his Epistle to John Bishop of Constantinople. And as this great strength is ascribed to Behemoth in his tail, so the Locusts are said to have tails and stings therein, and Crowns of Gold upon their head, for the Kingly power which they take upon them. And Isaiah expresly calleth the false Prophet Vers. 17. Gregor. Revel. 12. 4. Revel. 9. 7. 10. Isa. 9. 15.

the tail. Some by his tail underſtand men ready to dy, becauſe the tail is at the end of the Body, and death is their end, becauſe at the end of this life the Devill beſtirreth him moſt, being ready about the wicked dying, to beat him down into the pit of Hell, I prefer the former. The ſinews of his ſtones are wrapt together: Here by his ſtones are ſet forth the divers luſts wherewith libidinous men through the great pleaſure that they take herein, are intangled; being ſo faſt held hereby, as Abſoloms head by the bonghs of an Oak, growing in ſuch a perplexed manner together that he was held hereby, till he was ſtricken through by Joabs Darts: For ſo men lead by fleſhly luſts are held hereby, till they be deſtroyed. that all may take heed, that they be never thus intangled, for although they think that they will hereafter repent, yet they ſhall not be able, but be held faſt to their everlaſting deſtruction. To this Effect the Preacher ſaith, That the woman is more bitter then Death, whoſe Heart is as ſnares and nets, and her hands as bands; that is, The Whoriſh woman.

Philippus.

Note.

Eccle. 7. 26.

Verſ. 18. His bones are like ſtrong peices of Braſſe, like barrs of Iron: Vulg. As pipes of braſſe, his Cartilage as barrs of Iron. Whereupon Gregory ſaith, that his bones ſet forth thoſe men, who are parts of the Devill, as it were, that to ſeduce others to Errour, uſe much Eloquence, and fain great holineſs and power that they have with God to do miracles, for ſuch are as brazen pipes making a pleaſing ſound, whereby many being taken are both drawn away to pernicious Errours, and ſo hardned herein, as that they cannot be reduced. Therefore they are ſet forth by the Apoſtle to be as ſounding braſſe and tinkling Simball, the Cartilages or Griſtles, that ſeem to be as bones alſo, but are ſofter and weaker; yet in this Behemoth be as Bars of Iron, are ſuch Hereticks, as who, although they have not the eminent parts that be in the other to allure and to deceive; yet are moſt harſh and cruell, perſecuting to the Death, ſuch as will not be ſeduced to their Errours, and like barrs of Iron breaking in peices, and uſing all barbarous cruelties againſt them. As we have had too much Experience in bloudy minded Papiſts, and the Anabaptiſts in Germany, and the Arrians of old, and before all Hereticks of Heathen Perſecutors. Whereby we may take notice what they all are, even the Devills Bones and Griſtles to abhorr from their waies. The Hebr. אפק׳ ſiguifieth Pipes, but גרמ׳ either bones, as it is again rendred in New Tranſlat. but becauſe it is a diſtinct word from עצמ׳ put firſt, the Vulgar hath it, Cartilages.

Gregor.

1 Cor. 13.

Note.

Verſ. 19. He is the cheiſe of the waies of God, he that made him can make his ſword to approach unto him. Having ſet forth the great ſtrength of the Devill by his parts, now he giveth a reaſon why it muſt needs be ſo, that there is ſo great power and wiſdome in him. He is the cheiſe, or as the Vulg. hath it, The beginning of the waies of God: That is, by his creation the moſt glorious and firſt made of all his works, for he was the moſt glorious of all the Angells. And this his Glory Gregory taketh to be ſet forth, Ezek. 28. Where the Prophet deſcribeth the King of Tyre, V. 12. Thou ſealeſt up the ſum, full of wiſdome and perfect in beauty: That is, thou wert ſo in the image of God as an image in a ſeal; Man indeed was made after the image of God, but the Angels, as being more compleat, had the image of God ſtamped upon them, as a ſeal, being of perfect wiſdome and beauty. V. 13. Every pretious ſtone was in thy covering, the Sardius, Topbaz, Diamond, &c. To the number of nine, that is, thou wert covered or cloathed with the Beauty of all the nine orders of Angells, ſet forth by thoſe nine pretious ſtones, there was a confluence of the Beauty of them all in thee, V. 14. Thou art the anointed Cherub that covereth, and wert in the holy mountaine, &c. See my Expoſitions upon that place. And Ezek. 31. 3. Where the King of Aſſyria is deſcribed to be like a moſt high Cedar, and V. 5. His height was exalted above all the Trees of the feild. And V. 8. The Cedars in the Garden of God could not hide him, not any tree in the Garden of God was like unto him in his beauty, That is, he was higher and more ſpread with Glory, then our firſt Parents placed in Eden. And hereunto may be added, Iſa. 14. 12. That which is ſayd of the King of Babilon, O Lucifer Son of the Morning, &c. Yet for our comfort it is added, He that made him can make his Sword to approach nnto him: That is, can & will reſtrain him ſo, that he ſhall with all his ſtrength do no more againſt men, then he permitteth him to do, as we may ſee both in Job and in the Swine of the Gaderens; And as this is a comfort, ſo hereby is intimated, how much more God is able by his ſword to reach and ſubdue man, that he may not be proud, but humble: Of his Swords reach to theſe Angells, Iſaiah ſpeaketh, ſaying, I inebriate my Sword in Heaven, and Moſes of its reaching to men, Deut. 32. 41.

Gregor.

was

Surely the mountaines bring him forth food, where all the Beaſts of the feild play. By monntains here the great men of this world may be underſtood, upon whoſe evill and corrupt manners, ſpringing from their Wealth and power the Devill feedeth: By all the beaſts playing here, all his Devills; who are as beaſts, as hath been before ſayd, and they are all ſayd to play upon theſe mountains, becauſe they are delighted greatly in their ſinnes, whereby their Soules come to be a prey unto them, and many more by their evill Example and countenance. Verſ. 20.

He lyeth under the ſhady Trees in the covert of the Reed and Fennes: That is in cool places, and ſuch are all that be luke warm, in them the Devill reſteth quietly, as being in this their luke warmneſs delighted, as from whoſe hearts the fervent love of God is withdrawn, pleaſures being more loved by them then God, and the profits of this world, that all the fervency of their affections are ſet upon inſuing of them, and withdrawn from God, in whoſe cauſe they are very cool, but fervent; if any thing be done to the prejudice of this their profit. In the zealous and Godly he cannot lye down and reſt, for there the Sun is too hot for him, by reaſon of their love to God and wrath againſt him, and all his ways, which they hate and abhor. In the covert of the Reed and fennes, Reedes grow high and are goodly to look upon, but hollow within, and ſo light, that they are ſhaken with the winds, and therefore moſt aptly are Hypocrites hereby ſet forth, that are hollow hearted and deceitfull, and yet by lifting up themſelves on high, and making a ſhew of great Devotion, they appear and ſeem to men to be goodly plants. And they are alſo hereby ſet forth, that are not ſetled in the wayes of piety, but inconſtant and blown about with every wind of Doctrine. For of John the Baptiſt Chriſt ſayd, What went ye out to ſee? A Reed ſhaken with the Wind? In making way to ſhew what and how excellent a man he was, and therefore denying him to be ſuch, but implying that ſome were ſuch, Viz. The men before ſpoken of, the Hypocrite, and the unconſtant, being ſomtime of one Opinion and ſometime of another. By fenns which are full of watery moiſture, may be underſtood ſuch as were before ſpoken of being called the Reins and Navell of his Belly, voluptuous perſons being full of the moiſture of ſinfull pleaſures, amongſt theſe alſo the Devill reſteth and takes delight to be, as amongſt thoſe, that are after his own heart, and in whom as in ſoft and watry Ground he can eaſily make impreſſions with his feet which he loveth to do; as Beaſts to ſtand in watery places in the heat of Summer when the Sun is hot. To ſet this forth further, Chriſt ſaith, That when the evill ſpirit is gone out of a man, he goeth through dry places without water, ſeeking reſt and finding none. So that he can find no reſt amongſt men in whom the water of worldly pleaſure is dryed up, and now ceaſeth to be. And touching Reeds alſo he ſaith, that he will not break the bruiſed Reed; implying hereby, that he would not, neither came he to deſtroy the cruſhed Kingdome of Judea, which was ſo full of Hypocriſie and inſtability towards God and his truth, but to ſave them, if they had not rejected him likewiſe, whereas Verſ. 21. Note. Matth. 11. Matth: 13. 44.

whereas he addeth; the ſmoaking flax he will not quench, it is meant, the Preiſts ſo called, becauſe they did wear linnen and were then gone from being fiery through Zeal to be but ſmoaking, yet he did bear with them by the long Suffering of his patience, and deſtroy them by the might of his power.

Verſ. 22. The ſhady trees cover him with ſhadow, and the willowes of the Brook compaſſe him about Hebr. and vulg. the ſhadows cover his ſhadow; That is, wicked men, that are as it were the Devills ſhadows, protect and defend Wickedneſs, and thoſe that walk herein, it being called a ſhadow becauſe ſuch as live herein, are in the ſhadow of Death, as it is intimated in that

Iſa. 9. ſaying of the Prophet, The people that ſate in darkneſſe, and the valley and ſhadow of Death: Repeated; Matth. 4 16. When Chriſt the light came into Galilee. A thing to be conſidered by all that favour evill doers; they are very ſhadows or pictures of the Devill, and they are but ſhadows and no men, walking in the ſuburbs of utter darkneſs that live wickedly. For

Note. ſuch was Galilee of the Gentiles, and the Gentiles of other Countries before their converſion. Touching the Willows here ſpoken, they are green but without fruit, yea they make barren, and therefore hereby are ſet forth men barren and fruitleſs in Goodneſs: Of the Willows in Babylon, ſee Pſal. 137. And yet how the faithfull are likened to Willows by the Rivers, Iſa. 44. Upon that place in my Expoſition thereupon,

Verſ. 23. He drinketh up a River and haſteth not, he thinketh that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth: The vulg. Wondereth not. The word יחפז ſignifieth either to haſten or to be amazed or driven into an Admiration. Gre-

Gregor. gory following the Vulgar, underſtands by the River, which he drinketh up and wondreth not at it; Mankind being compared to a River, becauſe that ſo ſoon as a man is born he is running on towards Death, as the Rivers into the Sea, and even to Death everlaſting before Chriſts coming, and therefore for his ſwallowing up of an whole River of them; he makes no great matter of that, neither wondreth at it, but ſince the coming of Chriſt and his being baptized in Jordan, and inſtituting Baptiſme for the waſhing away of our ſinnes, he is confident, and that not without Ground, that the very River of the Baptized will moſt of them run into his mouth alſo, and they are called Jordan, becauſe ſuch as have gone through Jordan, as it were, when through the Water of Baptiſme are now diſtinguſhed thus from others living in ſin before, thoſe run continually as flowing waters in any River into the Abyſſe or Sea of Deſtruction, theſe as the River of Jordan, becauſe falling to ſinning again after Baptiſme, they are as the running waters of Baptiſme flowing into the dead Sea of Sodom, and ſo devoured or running into the Devills mouth as well as they.

Verſ. 24. He taketh it with his eyes, his noſe peirceth through ſnares. Touching the divers rendring of it by the vulg. He ſhall take him in his eyes as with an hook, ſee before: But whereas there the word It, hath been expounded, as having reference to the River before ſpoken of, if by Behemoth the Elephant be underſtood, now if the Devill be meant by him, as hath been made moſt

Gregor. probable by ſhewing how all things hitherto ſpoken aptly agree to the Devill, we may, as Gregory doth, underſtand it thus. The Lord taketh the Devill by his Eyes being drawn to prey upon Chriſt, as another man by procuring his Death, for hereby the Devill was deſtroyed, Hebr. 2. 15. But he looking upon him and ſeeing him to be a man like unto us, made at him, as his common manner was at other men, to ſwallow him up alſo, but in ſo doing he did but as the fiſh, which ſeeing the bait, is by his Eyes drawn unto it, but not ſeeing the Hook, it is therefore, though ſwallowing it unawares, alſo thereby deſtroyed. For though the Devill knew Chriſt to be the Son of God, yet he knew not, that by his Death his own Kingdom ſhould be overthrown, and this made him ſo adventurous as he was, and becauſe God thus took him as a fiſh, the vulgar Expoſition made bold for further Explication, to put in the word Hook, and this is added for a concluſion about Behemoth, for our comfort; for he being ſo powerfull as hath been ſaid, and ſwallowing up Rivers of men, and not doubting, but to do the like by all the baptized alſo, it was neceſſary in the end, and therefore God out of great goodneſs after theſe things ſpoken of, concludeth thus, ſhewing that he would provide a remedy againſt this evill, that all ſhould not be devoured, but by Chriſt, the Devill ſhould have ſuch a blow given unto him, as that to his true faithfull Servants, he ſhould have no power to devoure any one of them, but lye as a monſter deſtroyed, although to ſuch as confeſs God with their mouths, but deny him in their deeds, he is the ſame devourer, ſwallowing all them down, as before, to the worlds end; and ſo the next words are likewiſe to be referred to God, and not to the Devill, as ſhewing not what he ſhonld do further, but what God ſhould do to him. Viz. Peirce his noſe with his ſnares ſet for him, which the Vulg. rendreth, Sudes, That is, ſharper poles in the water, ſtuck faſt into ground, that when a Beaſt cometh to drink, his noſe is peirced and hurt hereby, but the word מוקש ſignifieth Snare or Net, unto which the next word ינקב Shall peirce, agreeth not ſo well, take we it then as meant of ſuch ſnares, as are apt unawares to peirce the noſe, as hath been ſaid, and hereby the Elect of God may well be underſtood, who when Satan attempteth the drinking in of them, prove as peircing Sudes to him, whereof he hath more pain and ſorrow, for his being foyled by them then joy; for they reſiſt him ſtrong in the faith, and make him as one hurt, to flee from them with ſorrow, their weapons wherewith they fight againſt him, not being only defenſive; The ſheild of faith, the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, and the helmet of hope. But alſo the ſword Of the ſpirit, which is ſharp and peircing. Ephe. 6.

to

CHAP. XLI.

IN the Hebrew and vulgar Latine, the former nine Verſes of this Chapter, are made part of Chap. 40. But becauſe both in them and Chap. 41. the ſame argument only touching Leviathan is handled, it ſeemeth better to put altogether into one.

Canſt thou draw out Leviathan with an hook, or his tongue with a cord, which thou letteſt down? Pineda is long here in queſtioning about the word Leviathan, and whether a Dragon, that is, an earthly creature, or that great Fiſh the Whale, be hereby ſet forth, or ſome ſingular one, and not the Whale in generall: And whether hereby according to the Letter, the Whale be not firſt deſcribed, and under the ſimilitude hereof the Devill, or whether the Devill only be not hereby meant, as before by Behemoth: But breifely touching the name, it cometh of לוה to adhere, or to be aſſociated to, as Leah called her third Son Levi, ſaying, Now my Husband will cleave unto me, becauſe I have borne him three Sonnes, and ך Me, and whereof cometh, תנן A Serpent, ſo that Leviathan is a Serpent cleaving or aſſociated to me, and for what reaſon this name is given, wee may eaſily conceive, and ſo what Creature is ſet forth hereby, even the Devill, who aſſociated the Serpent unto him at the firſt, and is therefore called, The old Serpent the Devill, and Satan. Otherwiſe, A great red Dragon, having ſeven heads and ten hornes. And therefore all the Fathers generally underſtand, as by Behemoth, ſo by Leviathan the Devill: Iſidor alſo and Toſtatus, Leocaſtrenſis, and others; They that ſtand for ſome other Creature, will either have the Dragon, which is of a monſtrous greatneſſe, underſtood hereby, who liveth ſometimes upon the land, ſometimes in the water: Some the Whale, which is far greater, and to whom the parts of Verſ. 1.

Gen. 3.

Revel. 12. 3. 9.

Camarenſis. Tho. Aquin.

of the deſcription following, do better agree, and the very firſt words; Canſt thou draw out Leviathan with an hook? Which muſt needs be underſtood of a Creature in the Sea, where all Fiſhes are, to whom it is peculiar to be taken and drawn out with an angle hook: I ſhall in the expoſition of the words, look at both the Whale and the Devill, to ſet forth his own Almighty power, and mans impotency, the Lord ſaith, Canſt thou draw out Leviathan with an hook. This is impoſſible for man to do, but God who made him can do it, although he be of ſo mighty and vaſt a body, as eaſily, as any other Fiſh by an angle.

Gregory. Touching the Devill ſet forth by Leviathan, Gregory hath a ſingular conceit of this name, They joyned to me. As if he had it from his bringing of men by his temptation, to eat of the forbidden Fruit, and ſo to be joyned to him in miſery, when he promiſed greater felicity, ſaying, Yee ſhall be as Gods. And ſo they were joyned to him, by beleiving rather in him, then in God: Now touching that which is ſaid here of taking the Devill with an hook, he in ſaying thus proſecuteth that which he had ſaid before of him, under the name of Behemoth, Chap 40. 24. He taketh him with his eyes. Whereby ſeeing the bait upon the hook, he is drawn to it, and taken; and as God doth by Behemoth, ſo now being about to ſpeak of Leviathan, ſetting forth the ſame Devill, he ſaith, Canſt thou draw him forth with an hook? As if he had ſaid, I know thou canſt not, but I can and will, when he ſhall come to the bait, Chriſt before ſpoken of, and ſo as hath been there ſet forth. But here in ſaying, Or his tongue with a cord, He ſheweth further, that when he ſhould be ſo taken by Chriſt, as was aforeſayd, he ſhould have his tongue tyed up as it were with a Cord from uttering herewith his falſe Doctrines by Idolatrous Preiſts, Philoſophers and Wizzards, as he had done in former times: For Chriſt coming and by his death deſtroying the Devill, theſe that were as his Tongue, and his ſhrines alſo were put to ſilence, by the power of his word and ſpirit, curbing them from ſpeaking ſo any more.

Verſ. 2. Canſt thou put an hook into his noſe, or boare his jaw through with a thorne. Having ſpoken of taking of the Whale, now he cometh to ſpeak of his carrying away after the manner of Fiſhes, or of holding him faſt, that he may not get away again: The word rendred Hook, in Vulg. is, Circulus, a Ring, and for Thorn, Ærmilla, a Chaine. Hebr. אגמן an Hook, or a Bulruſh, upon which the Angler having taken Fiſh, hangeth them, making it round to carry them away, and the next word חוח is a Synonima hereunto, for of ſuch vaſt greatneſs is the Whale, that he cannot be thus held, much leſs carried away by man, but God can do it; as he Iſai. 37. ſaid of Sennacherib the proud King of Aſſyria, I will put an hook into his noſtrills. And of the ſame man called Leviathan, and a crooked Serpent, and Dragon, ſee Iſa. 27. 1. Touching the Devill, he is held by the power of God, as by an hook, that he cannot go ſo far as he would, either in tempting to ſin, or doing hurt to the body, and this life or the things thereof, and when he is devouring any of his faithfull people, he is ſo by the ſame power boared through, that they have a way made for them to come out of his danger again; as Peter, whom Satan deſired to winnow, and by his temptations he was brought to deny Chriſt, but he had ſoon a way made for him, to come through his jaws again, when he repented and wept bitterly.

Verſ. 3. Will he make many ſupplications unto thee, will he ſpeak ſoft words unto thee? If this be applyed to the Whale, it muſt be by a Proſopopeia by his humbly praying his ſubjection being meant, it being not a thing that is done, but by inferiours to their ſuperiours; but apply we it to the Devill, he is ſo much in ſubjection to God, and ſtandeth in feare of him, that he dareth not to ſpeak to him, but by way of intreaty, and with humble words; as he did to Chriſt, when he knew him to be the Son of God, hewith an whole legion of Devills humbled himſelfe unto him, praying him not to ſend them into the deep before time; and again, to ſuffer them to go into the heard of Swine. Math 8.

Son

Will he make a covenant with thee? Wilt thou take him for a Servant for ever? This alſo agreeth beſt to the Devill, for he maketh, as it were, a covenant with God, becauſe he tempteth none of his faithfull ones, but ſuch as to the tempting of whom he agreeth, and when he tempteth them, it is but according to covenant; as betwixt Maſter and Servant, that the one may have his will fulfilled, and the other his; for ſo the Devill hath his will, when by ſmiting or drawing to ſin, he effecteth that, which in his malice he deſireth; for what doth he deſire, but to miſcheife men, and to make them ſin? And God as the Maſter, much more hath his will, when by miſcheife and hurt done thus unto them, they come to a greater good reformation, of ſome things yet amiſs in them here, and a more ſurpaſſing weight of glory hereafter: yea when ſin, to which any of them have been drawn, is turned to an occaſion of ſorrow, and purging and purifying of himſelfe yet more, by more frequent praying, and more diligent watching, but how is the Devill Gods ſervant for ever? Sol. By ſuffering in the torments of Hell, after the day of judgment, the Elect then glorified in Heaven ſeeing it; he ſerveth by this meanes to make the glory and happineſs of the Elect to ſhine the more, as when upon a black ground a white work is ſet, the white ſeemeth and ſheweth much whiter. Verſ. 4. 2 Cor. 4. 17.

Wilt thou play with him, as with a bird? Wilt thou binde him for thy maidens? The Whale is to terrible for men to play withall, or binde; and therefore touching him, this is ſpoken to ſet forth, how much afraid we are of him, but with God it is not ſo, to him he is of no more force then a little bird, or a man, whom he can binde at his pleaſure: Touching the Devill, Gregory here noteth a third ſimilitude, whereby he is ſet forth. Viz. By a Bird, as before by Beaſts, and a Whale or Dragon; by Beaſts Behemoth for their ſenſuality, for his malice by Dragon or Whale, and by a bird for his proud lifting up of himſelfe: And as he hath the name of a Beaſt, becauſe he tempeth ſome to live ſenſually, ſo of a Dragon, becauſe ſuch as he cannot tempt by fleſhly luſts and intemperance, he tempteth by malice and envy, and as he cannot tempt to either of theſe, he tempteth by pride; whereas he ſaith, Canſt thou play with him? Vulg. Illudis ei, canſt thou deceive? as thou maieſt a Bird, which by hiding the net, and laying Chaffe and Corne is done to Birds, and thus the net is unawares brought over them and they are taken; thus man cannot do by the Devill, but God can, as was ſhewed before by the ſimilitude of a bait laid for a Fiſh, and he alſo can binde him for his maidens; that is, Such maidens as are ſpoken of, Prov. 9. Where Wiſedome is ſaid to ſend out her maidens, that is, The firſt Preachers of the Goſpel, inſtructed with power to work miracles, and to caſt out Devills, being by Gods power bound, ſo that they could not reſiſt them, although in themſelves as weak as poor Maid-Servants, for they were not of the greateſt, but of the leaſt, and for their worldly power, moſt contemptible, before whom the Devill lay as faſt bound. Verſ. 5. Gregory Shall the companions make a banquet of him? Shall they part him amongſt the Merchants. The ſame that were called before Maidens, ſaith Gregory, are here called companions, and Negotiatours or Merchants, Maidens at the firſt for their timerouſneſs, then companions or friends, for the will of God revealed and made known unto them. Laſtly, Negotiatours, For the buſineſs about which they are imployed, giving inſtructions and receiving a return of faith from the inſtructed; for which the Kingdome of Heaven is ſaid to be like a pearle, travelled and ſought for by a Merchant, and the virtuous woman giving girdles to Merchants, ſetteth forth the Verſ. 6. Gregor. Ioh. 15. Matth. 13.

the Church exercising Merchandise: The Vul. according to this Exposit. hath it, Shall freinds cut him in peices, and Negociatours divide him? And this is done to the Devil, when his members the Wicked are cut off from him, by being perswaded at the hearing of the word preached to turn from their sinnes, because that being limbs of the Devill before, now they are seperated from him, and are through the joy that the Preachers have herein, as most delicate meat unto them, which that they should be, was shewed to Peter in the similitude of a sheet, wherein were all manner of Beasts and fowles, and the voice coming to him, Up Peter, kill and eate. And this Christ shewed to be his meat, when he was about to convert the Samaritans, and as meat being eaten is incorporated with them that eat it, and thenceforth is of their substance; so sinners converted are now no more members of the Devill, but of Christ, flesh of his flesh, and bone of his bones, and one also with all the Faithfull, that have been from the beginning of the World, to be alike made blessed, together with them for evermore.

Note.

Act. 10. Ioh. 4.

Eph. 5.

Vers. 7. Canst thou fill his skin with barbed Irons, or his head with fish-spears? vulg. Wilt thou fill the drag nets with his skin, Et gurgustium piscium, With his head: Hebr. The word בשכורת signifieth Pilis acutis, with sharp stakes, and צלצל a Knife or Fish-spear, or a Fishers Umbraculu, a shaddowy cottage. And the meaning, touching the Whale is nothing else, but that his skin is so hard and impenetrable that fisher-men cannot peirce it with their sharpest instruments, much less can his head be taken off and layd as other fishes into such Cottages, it being so vast a Creature, yea the Head so wonderfully great.

Gregor. Touching the Devill, by his skin we may understard either the ignorant or inferiour persons, by his Head the superiour and wiser of the world: In saying then, Canst thou fill his skin with sharp Iron, or woodden instruments, He meaneth, neither thou nor any man can peirce the common sort so by preaching the Gospel, as to take them, & bring them into the net which is the Church, as it is compared, Matth. 13. But I can do it, as was afterwards proved by Experience, when multitudes of the inferiour, and unlearned sort of the Jews were converted: And the like was done afterwards, when Philosophers and Kings, who were as the Head, were converted also, being taken by fishers of men, as Christ sayd, that he would make those, whom he called to the Ministry of the Gospel. And all these are set forth by his skin and Head, because that before this, they cleaved as close to him as ones skin to his Body, and were as his head devising how to promote his Kingdom, and using their power to this end and purpose. And speaking of his skin first and then of his Head, the order whereby he proceeded in converting the wicked is set forth, first, the common sort were taken, then after that, the Wiser and more potent also, there being at the first not many wise, not many mighty called, but the foolish and vile of this world being chosen to confound the wise and the mighty.

Ioh. 1. Math. 11.

Vers. 8 Lay thine hand upon him, remember the battel and do no more. vulg. Add not to speak any more. Heb. Add no more: The meaning is, ponder and weigh as with a ballance in thy hand, the Good that shall come unto thee by suffering by his violent dealings against thee, if thou patiently beareſt them; and the hurt of murmuring, for then a far more terribble Battel by the most high will be made against thee, and therefore speak no more by way of complaining against God, as if he had dealt too harshly with thee, by letting the Devil loose upon thee so far as he hath done. A necessary consideration for us all to make us patient in all Adversities; for it is better to indure the hot fit of a Fever, then the hot burning of Hel fire, and therefore better patiently to suffer any pains or loss, then by murmuring to indanger our selves in respect of that fire.

Note.

Vers. 9. Behold the hope of him is vain, shall not one be cast down even at the sight of him?

him? None is ſo fierce as to dare to ſtirr him up, who then is able to ſtand before me? The former words here in vulg. are His hope ſhall deceive him, and he ſhall be caſt down headlong, all men ſeeing it. And being thus underſtood it is taken, as ſpoken to the comfort of Job and other faithfull perſons ſuffering by means of the Devill: For although his power be ſo great as hath been ſayd, yet his hope hereby to overcome ſuch ſhall be fruſtrated, and at the laſt day all men and Angels ſeeing it, he ſhall be caſt down headlong into Hell fire. Touching the Whale it is meant, that he by tempeſtious weather is ſometime caſt upon the ſhore, and then men come about him and take him, as one that by caſting down headlong hath his limbs broken, and ſo is diſabled to defend himſelf any more: Vatablus and ſome others refer it to the fear, wherewith men are taken at the very ſight of the Whale, when they go a Whale fiſhing, and have ſome hope to take him; but the word יטל Iuttal ſignifieth Projicietur, he ſhall be taken up, or caſt out as a light thing, may well bear this conſtruction, the Whale ſo confident of his own ſtrength, whereby he hopeth to overthrow all, againſt whom he ſtirreth, hath this his hope ſometime fruſtrated; and this is when he is caſt out of the Sea by tempeſt, they ſeeing it who are ready to make a prey of him. For the next words, Verſe. 10. they are eaſy to be underſtood, the meaning being, that although God can caſt out the great Whale, as hath been before ſayd, yet men dare not meddle with him, but upon that advantage of his being caſt upon the ſhore, and how much leſs then ſhould any man dare to ſtir up and provoke me? Verſ. 10. Vatabl.

Who hath prevented me that I ſhould repay him; whatſoever is under the whole Heaven is mine. See the like ſpeech to this, Rom. 11. 35. The meaning is, when I caſt up the whale upon the ſhore, as hath been ſayd, making him no more terrible to men, or according to the Allegory, when the Devill is by me caſt out, as it is ſayd, When a ſtrong man armed keepes the houſe, all is in quiet; but when a ſtronger then he cometh, he caſteth him out. This is not done by me, becauſe I am any mans Debtor, but of my meer Grace and Mercy the evill ſpirit is caſt out and the good ſpirit entreth in, and ſo men are ſanctified and ſaved, that none may attribute any thing to himſelf but all to God, if he hath Grace or any good thing here, or be delivered from ſufferings, as Job now had need to be, but hereby the Lord teacheth him not to expect it, as due unto him; but out of his undeſerved favour, as being accepted before him. Verſ. 11.

I will not conceal his parts, nor his power, nor comely proportion. Here the Lord returneth to ſhew the terribleneſs of the Whale and Devill, by further declaring, what manner of Creature he is, how ſtrong, how ſtrongly compacted his limbs and ſcales, and what a ſtir he maketh in the Sea when he aſſaulteth thoſe that travell thereupon. Verſ. 12.

Who can diſcover the face of his Garment? who can come to him with a double bridle? Who can open the doores of his face? his teeth are terrible round about: Vulg. Who can enter into the midſt of his mouth? Heb. Into the doubling of his bridle who can go? And becauſe the mouth of a Beaſt and the middle of it is the place into which a bridle is put, the Vulg. not amiſs rendreth it, The middle of his mouth, It being meant, that it is ſo horrid a ſight for his monſtrous teeth and jaws that none dare approach near unto it, much leſs enter into it; his teeth are ſayd to be 120. Each tooth four cubits long, his mouth ſo wide that he ſometims ſwalloweth up an whole ſhip. For as Olans ſaith, in Norway a whale was ſeen, the opening of whoſe mouth was two and twenty foot long, and his jaws two and twenty, and ſome relate it for a truth, that the Whale in time of any danger to her young ones by greater fiſhes, reviveth them into her mouth. For the face of his Garment that is underſtood of certain fleſhly excreſcencies growing out about his Eys, by means whereof he is ſo covered about his Eyes, as that he cannot ſee his way, but is guided by a Muſcle, going before him, as both Pliny and Ælianus write. Verſ. 13. Verſ. 14. Pliny. Olans. Philoſtratus. Ælian.

write. Touching the Devill, by the face of his Garment underſtand that which is covered, as with a Garment, when he tempteth to ſinn, becauſe he many times tempteth by pretending Good to the party tempted, when as under that pretence moſt deadly evill lurketh; as when he tempted Evah to eat of the forbidden fruit, under pretence of being made hereby as God. Now when the Devill cometh thus to any man, he cannot of himſelf diſcover it, but God can, and doth to his Elect; to make them to beware hereof, and ſo of coming into his Mouth to be devoured. By the doors of his face underſtand Teachers of Errours, who ſo cunningly palliate their Errours over by the ſhew of truth, that none can diſcover them, but ſuch, as to whom God layeth them open. And they are called the doors of his mouth, becauſe by means of them, many are made to enter into the mouth of the Devill. By his teeth ſayd to be terrible round about the ſame, falſe Teachers may be underſtood, who as faithfull Preachers being as Gods Teeth teare vices in men, and the old man that they may be ſacrifices unto God, ſo they tear and deſtroy virtue that they may be ſacrifices of the Devill. And round about they are ſayd to be terrible, becauſe Earthly Potentates are about them to ſtrike terrour into them, if they refuſe to come into theſe doors to be thus ſacrificed.

Verſ. 15. His ſcales are his pride, ſhut up together as with a cloſe ſeal: They are joined one to another: Touching the Whale, this is ſo plain that I need not to ſay any thing upon it, touching the Devill, his ſcales, of which he is ſayd to be proud are the hard hearts of the Wicked, into which the ſword of the ſpirit cannot enter nor peirce them to make them repent, to ſet forth which there were ſeen ſcales, as it were, falling from Pauls Eyes when Ananias put his hands upon him, before his inward Eyes, that is, his heart was covered thick over with the Devills ſcales: So that faith by the preaching of the word could not enter, and theſe ſcales are upon the Hearts of all wicked Reprobats who are far from being moved at any thing that is ſayd againſt their ſins, that they rather ſtand to defend them, as with a Bucklar repelling the ſharpeſt reproofs whereby they can be aſſaulted in the Preaching of the word; and theſe ſcales are joyned cloſe one to another, to ſhew that ſuch are linked together in Evill, and ſo as ſcales lying cloſe together be the ſtronger againſt all peircing, in like manner they harden one another againſt Reproof. But let this be thought upon, whilſt they do thus they are the Devils ſcales, or that hardneſs is by reaſon, that he hath ſet his ſcales upon their Hearts as Bucklers againſt Reproof, whereby they might be converted and ſaved, ſo that now there is poſſibility of it.

Act. 9.

Verſ. 18. By his neeſing a light doth ſhine, and his eyes are like the Eye-lids of the morning. By the neeſing of the Whale cauſing a light ſhining, is meant the abundance of white frothy water, which he caſteth out at his noſtrills, and for his bright Eyes, Olans writeth of the Norway Whales, that their Eyes ſhine in a dark night like a fire, ſo that Marriners have often thought when they have ſeen them, that they ſaw a great fire. Touching the Devill Gregory firſt teaching how neezing ariſeth (Viz. an inflatian riſing from the Breaſt, which when it findeth not the pores open for it to go out thereby, it toucheth the Brain, and ſo going out by the Noſe vehemently ſhaketh the Head) ſaith that the Elation of the Devills inſtruments when they have gotten power in this World againſt the juſt is hereby ſet forth, which finding no paſſage by pores to do that hurt unto them, that they would, becauſe God ſtops them in their proceedings, are toucht and ſhaken in their heads, that is, much troubled; but all commeth to nothing, only it goeth out by the noſe, that by their expreſſing of their wrath, ſhewing how full of fury they were againſt them. And this elation ſhall ſpecially be in the Antichriſt, who ſhall moſt terrifie the faithfull, and rage moſt againſt them: his Eyes like the Eyelids of the morning are ſuch as preach him up, crying down Chriſt as the night, and his Doctrine as darkneſs, making men beleeve, that that now firſt the light of the Day beginneth to appear when he cometh.

Olans. l. 21.

Gregory

Out of his mouth go burning Lamps, and ſparkes of fire leap out. This is ſpoken of the Whale, becauſe he is of an hot fiery nature, as Ariſtotle ſaith, and therefore needeth much breathing, and becauſe he is full of fury, he is deſcribed, as ſending out fire at his mouth, and ſmoake at his noſtrils, Verſe 20. 21. Whereat coales of fire are kindled; as David ſaith of the Lord, 2. Sam. 22. 9. When he was inraged at his Enemies: Touching the Devill, the Lamps going out of his mouth, are Teachers of errours, pretending to be Lamps and lights, the ſmoake out of his noſtrils, ſet forth, the darkening of the eyes of men, ſeeing the wonders done by them, to deceive the very Elect if it were poſſible, ſeething Pots may ſet forth the fervency of thoſe that are ſeduced by them, who are not only as ſeething Pots, but as burning coales of fire, ſo hotly ſet are they upon promoting Antichriſtianiſme and moſt damnable errours, wherewith they are bewitched, through Antichriſts illuſions. Verſ. 19.

In his neck remaineth ſtrength, and ſorrow is turned into joy before him. Touching the Whales neck, Ariſtotle ſaith, That amongſt Fiſhes none but Whales and Dolphins, and ſuch as breath, have necks, and the Whale having ſo great an head hath a neck proportionable to it, very great and ſtrong; the word rendred, Remaineth. Hebr. is לִין Pernoctabit, Shall reſt all night. So ſpoken, becauſe the Whale ſleepeth, as alſo the Dolphin doth, his head erected out of the water, and lying above, And ſorrow is turned into joy before him. Heb. יָרוֹץ Rejoiceth. That is, When other Fiſhes in the Sea have ſorrow, for their being devoured by him, he rejoyceth as having taken a prey: Touching the Devill, his neck is ſaid to be ſtrong, to ſhew his great ſtrength to overcome and deſtroy men, againſt whom he fighteth, becauſe a thick great neck, as Ariſtotle ſaith, is a ſign of a man ſtrong and ſtout, but a ſlender neck of one weake and Puſilanimous: for ſorrow before him made matter of joy; that is, When he prevaileth by tempting, to bring men to ſin and damnation, therefore he rejoyceth and exulteth at it, which was notably expreſſed, when Popiſh Idolatry being practiſed in this Land, Robbin good-fellows, and Fairies ſo commonly appeared, making a ſhew of dancing, and much mirth by laughing: Gregory, here following the Vulg. VVant goeth before his face. Makes another Allegory, but becauſe neither word is herein rendred rightly, I paſſe that over. Verſ. 22. Ariſt. l. 3. de. Partiarivald.

The flakes of his fleſh are joyned together. The word מִפְלֵי ſignifieth Parts, The parts of his fleſh. It being meant, that not only his ſcales were hard, as was ſaid before, but thoſe parts of his fleſh, which are ſoft in other Fiſhes are hard in him, and impenitrable, and the ſame is ſet forth further by the word יָצוּק Are ſtraitened or compacted cloſe. Touching the Devill, the parts of his fleſh, as was ſaid before of his skin, and head, and ſcales, the wicked are, who by their holding cloſe together in their wicked opinions, are the ſtronger againſt the faithfull, to put them to the more trouble, whereas if they be divided, they are the weaker; for whith the Pſalmiſt prayeth, Divide them (O Lord) and Paul, that he might the better eſcape, made a diviſion betwixt the Phariſees and Saduces, and God divided the tongues of thoſe that built Babell: Therefore we have warning often given us, to take heed of diviſions, and not to forſake the Aſſemblies, and love, and unity, is every where commended unto us in the truth, whereby we may be made the ſtronger againſt Satan and his Limbs: For the next words, Gregory following the Vulg. He ſends againſt him thunderbolts, neither are they carried to any other place. Will have theſe words ſpoken by way of comfort to the faithfull, when they might even deſpaire, their adverſaries the Devill and his Limbs being ſo ſtrongly compacted, their God yet is able, and will ſtrike him with a thunderbolt, which ſhall be at the laſt day: But becauſe the Hebr. can by no meanes be drawn to this, I leave it. Verſ. 23. Pſal. 55. Note. Gregory.

Verſ. 24. His heart is as hard as a ſtone, and as a peice of the neither milſtone. In ſome other Creatures, as in an Horſe and Oxe, ſaith Ariſtotle, ſome bony or griſtly hardneſs in part is found ſometimes, but the Whales heart is all as it were a bone, and this bone, as a ſtone, and for a Peice of a neither milſtone. Vulg. hath, The ſmiths Anvill. Touching the Devill, the hardneſs and obſtinacy of his heart is ſuch, that having ſinned he can never repent, and like unto him be thoſe Limbs of his, that through The hardneſſe of their hearts cannot repent, but heap up to themſelves wrath againſt the day of wrath. Other Irons by the beating of the hammer, are turned into another forme, but ſuch never, but alwaies remain as an anvill in the ſame ſhape, and ſo ſhall remain to be hammered to their extremity of ſorrow in Hell, when their hearts ſhall be made ſenſible of torments everlaſtingly.

Rom. 2. 4.

Verſ. 25. When he raiſeth up himſelfe, the Mighty are afraid; by reaſon of breakings they purifie themſelves. Vulg. When he ſhall be taken away, the Angels ſhall feare, and being terrified ſhall be purified. The word rendred in New Tran. Raiſeth up himſelfe. Heb. is משהר From his lifting up, or taking away. אל The Mighty. By Vulg. rendred Angels, becauſe of their great might, and thoſe Angels that fell, being taken and bound in chaines of darkneſs, as Jude ſpeaketh, the good Angels that ſtood being warned by their harmes, were the more carefull to keep their ſtanding in holineſs, as at this day. Touching the Whale being applyed to him, it muſt go according to New Tran. even the Mighty are afraid, when he moveth againſt them, and counting themſelves even dead men, if God doth not preſently deliver them from that danger, they pray to God and repent them of their ſinnes: But apply we it to the Devill, and the Vulg. Agreeth beſt, the Devils fall being here ſet forth, and the good Angels confirmation at the ſight of it.

Iud. Epiſt.

Verſ. 26. The ſword of him that laieth at him cannot hold, the ſpeare, the dart, nor the Habergeon, &c. Verſe 27. 28. 29. Where all manner of weapons are reckned up, with which although the Whale be aſſaulted by many men, yet he cannot hereby be prevailed againſt: For the Habergeon here ſpoken of, it is a breſtplate, wherewith men being fenced, yet are not ſafe againſt him: for ſling-ſtones, Verſe 28. they are ſpoken of, becauſe ſlings of old were uſed in war, as Lucretius ſaith, Arma antiqua manus ungues denteſque fuere, & lapides, Hands and nailes and teeth, were armes of old, and ſtones. And ſome of Benjamin were famous for ſlinging of ſtones out of ſlings at an haires breadth: Touching the Devill, it is meant, that howſoever the Preachers of the word arme themſelves againſt him, by the ſword of the ſpirit; that is, The word of God, and darts taken out of the ſame, and breſt-plates of patience, yet when Antichriſt cometh, all theſe will be of none avail to beat him down, that he may not deſtroy and devoure Gods people, but the greateſt patience to beare his perſecutions wil be, by his force broken, till that God coming againſt him, deſtroyeth him; as the Apoſtle ſaith, and becauſe his power is ſo great, that even the beſt men can do nothing againſt him, it is ſaid, He ſhall deceive, if it were poſſible, the very Elect. But yet hereby is ſhewed, that the faithfull Preachers of the word, ſhall not forbeare through feare, to draw the ſword of the ſpirit out againſt him, or to aſſault him with Darts, Speares, or Arrows, Slings, ſtones, and hammers, although neither he nor his fellows ſhall eſteem ought hereof: Every one of theſe, Gregory, by his ſubtlety of invention, makes a divers allegory, of which becauſe I take not to be ſo ſolid, I paſs over, only we may hereby ſee what many of us, who truſt that we are Braſs or Iron, ſtrong to ſtand againſt any perſecution, as Peter ſometime did; if ſuch hot perſecution ariſeth, are in danger to be but as ſtubble, as Verſe 29. It is ſaid, That to this Leviathan, Speares ſhall be as ſtubble. That we may not truſt to our own ſtrength, but to the help of Lucretius.

Iudg. 20.

2 Theſ. 2. 8. 9.

Math. 24.

Note.

Pſal. 20. 8.

of God only, and then we ſhall be able to ſtand indeed, howſoever aſſaulted.

Sharp ſtones are under him, he ſpreadeth ſharp pointed things upon the mire. Vulg. Under him ſhall be the beames of the Sun, and he ſhall put Gold under him as dirt. This is added to ſhew the hardineſs of the Whale, ſharp ſtones being by him lyen upon, he feeleth them not, no although he lyeth down upon the points of ſwords, he feeleth them not, through the impenetrability of his skin any more, then if he lay upon ſoft mire, and agreeable to this reading is the Sept. alſo, and the words חרוס חרש ſignifie, ſharp Rocks or Shels: Touching the Devill and his cheife inſtrument Antichriſt, hereby is ſhewed, That the faithfull cannot by aſſaulting him prevail, ſo if they ſhould think of any policy, whereby to overcome him by obſerving where he lyeth, there to ſtick many ſharp inſtruments of Iron, that by lying down thereupon he might be peirced, or in ſome pit made in the ground, but ſleightly covered, unawares falling thereinto, be deſtroyed: In a word it is meant, that as by force, ſo by policy, there is no withſtanding of him by man, but only by the wiſe God. Verſ. 30.

He maketh the deep to boile like a pot, the Sea like a pot of oyntment. Here the Whales vaſtneſs and power is further ſet forth, that he moveth the Sea with ſuch violence, that by the waves thereof a riſing, it ſeemeth like a boyling pot, ſo Pliny alſo writeth of the Whales in the Indian Seas: Touching the Devill, he makes a boyling, and great commotions, in the ſea of this World, by his boiſterous inſtruments the wicked, who by him are continually ſtirred up to ſtrife and contention, and are like the raging Sea, that never is quiet, as the Prophet ſpeaketh. Verſ. 31. Iſai. 47.

He maketh a path to ſhine after him, one would think the deep to be hoary. That is, The Whale by the foame coming of his mouth, maketh the Sea where he goeth to ſeem white; ſo that hereby as by a path it may be known which way he went: Touching the Devill, it may be ſeen alſo where he hath his path, by the worldly ſplendor and wealth, to which they attaine by fraud, injuſtice, and wrong, to which hee tempteth them. Verſ. 32.

Upon earth there is not his like, who is made without feare. Here the Lord concludeth upon the premiſes, that as in the Sea, ſo upon earth, there is no creature comparable to a Whale, for the vaſtneſs and ſtrength of his body and courage, for he feares none, either ſingle or coming together in troupes againſt him; ſo the Devill is principalities and powers above all powers in this World, and is ſo obſtinate in his waies of malice, that the feare of God cannot any whit reſtrain him herefrom, any more then his Limbs, wicked Reprobates living here upon the Earth. Verſ. 33. Ephe. 6. 12.

He beholdeth all high things, and is a King of all the Children of pride. That is, The Whale being ſo mighty, looketh with diſdain upon all others, that be high and great, as whoſe ſtrength is contemptible in regard of his, and he is as a King over them all, be they never ſo mighty or haughty, in reſpect of any thing in them: And much more the Devill looketh, even at the moſt high, with an envious eye, aſpiring to be like unto him, as Iſa. 14. 12. And for all proud perſons, let them take notice of it, he even he is their King, and to his Kingdome they ſhall go, the Children of pride, by an Hebrew phraſe, are all they called, that be notoriouſly proud. Verſ. 34.

CHAP.

CHAP. XLII.

Verſ. 2. Chap. 45. I Know that thou canſt do every thing, and no thought can be hidden from thee. Job had before ſaid, I will anſwer no more: How then is he now brought in anſwering again, as it is ſaid, Verſe 1. Sol. He meant that he would not anſwer by ſpeaking, as he had done before, that God ſpake unto him by way of complaining or juſtifying himſelfe in reſpect of this, that he thought himſelfe too harſhly dealt withall, by ſufferiug ſo great judgments, but that he would not ſpeak in way of confeſſing his ſinnes and vileneſs, he had no meaning that he would ſay nothing, in acknowledging, that God can do every thing, and that no thoughts of the heart can be hidden from him; he ſpeaketh thus, as confeſſing, that he had now learned, that it was in Gods power to bring him from the depth of miſery again to the height of felicity; ſeeing the Almighty can do in every thing what he pleaſeth, both touching the making and ruling, and again, ſubduing and deſtroying any creature, although moſt potent above others, and therefore having brought him ſo low, he could eaſily raiſe him up, and reſtore him as much as ever he had loſt, and more alſo: And becauſe he found by his ſpeeches uttered unto him, that he ſaw into the thoughts of his heart, and inclinableneſs to deſpaire through the violence of temptation, he further addeth further; No thought can Gregor. be hidden from thee. Gregory applyeth this to Leviathan the Devill, who by his ſubtlety deceiveth men, as was before ſhewed, in ſpeaking of his principall inſtrument Antichriſt, no policy or ſecret ſtratagem of his can be hidden from God, although it be from men, but that he ſeeth it and knoweth how to turne it to the beſt, to his faithfull Servants; and in the end, to bring down the pride, and confound all the counſels of the Devill: Nicetas. Some becauſe the word בצר ſignifieth, Abſcindere, or Prohibere, to cut off, or To withhold. Refer it to God, taking this to be the meaning, No thought that thou haſt in thy minde, can any waies hinder or hold thee from effecting, whether touching man or any other creature, which way ſoever it be taken it is true, God is the ſearcher of the hearts, and tryer of 1 Sam. 16. the reines; He ſeeth not as man ſeeth, but he ſeeth into the heart. And he ſeeth all the fraud, that is in the Devils heart, for his ſpeaking ſo proudly Iſa. 14. of aſcending and ſetting his Throne, by the Throne of the moſt High, was not vocall, but the ſpeech of his heart, and it is moſt certain, that none can hinder God from doing all his thoughts and counſels; according to Pſal. 33. 11. which the Pſalmiſt ſaith; The counſell of the Lord ſtandeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart from generation to generation. We may therefore put them all here together, neither mens nor Devils thoughts are held from thee by concealment, neither canſt thou be withheld fom fulfilling thine, or fruſtrating theirs,: Then Job upon this conſideration, proceedeth to confeis the weakneſs and erroneouſneſs of his own thoughts, and of the thoughts of others, touching him ſo beſet with miſery.

Verſ. 3. Who is this that hideth counſell without knowledge? Therefore I uttered that, which I underſtood not. In the firſt part of the Verſe, he uſeth the words ſpoken by the Lord, againſt proud Elihu; Chap 38. 2. Not excluding himſelf and the reſt of his friends, from being guilty of the ſame evill ſpeeches: And it is, as if he had ſaid, Thou mighteſt well (O Lord) challenge both me and them for ſpeaking ſo, and for my part I confeſs, I ſpeak ſome things without knowledge, for I knew not that which I now do, for I thought my diſeaſe incurable, and mine eſtate irreparable, and therefore ſpake as one proceeded againſt in extremity of wrath, and not at all in mercy, for which I complained as taking my ſelfe to be wronged; on the other side they to aggravate my misery, judged me for my sufferrings a wicked Hypocrite, whom God had met withall, according to his deservings, and spake as holding that by adversity or prosperity in this world it were made manifest, who were Hypocrits and who sincere Worshippers of God. For either of these ways men hide Counsell without Knowledge, that is, bewray their ignorance, because God hath sometime in his secret Counsell a purpose to try and purifie, and to deal better by them whom he judgeth here, and contrariwise by prosperity always continuing in this world, to fat up against the day of slaughter: But touching Job, in thus saying, he meant nothing else, but that his or any mans Wisdome being compared with Gods wisdome is Ignorance, and so whatsoever Good is in him, he hath no cause therefore to be lifted up, but to be humbled, when God cometh to shew himself, as did Abraham, saying, I am dust and ashes, and Moses a most learned man, when God appeared, I am not eloquent; and Isaiah when he saw God sitting upon his Throne, Woe is me for I am a man of polluted lips, and Jeremiah, I am a Child and cannot speak, and the winged Creatures, when God was over their heads, are sayd by Ezekiel to let down their wings, which were streched out before, to shew that men, who are lifted up before, when God appeareth are most demiss in their thoughts and speeches. But whereas Gregory taketh these words of Job to be spoken of the Devill, because he hideth counsel without Knowledge, when he cunningly setteth upon Christ and his members, thinking to prevail against them, but knoweth not, that there is one wiser then he, from whom none of his counsels can be hidden; I see no reason of imbracing that his Expofition, and therefore rest in that which hath been already sayd; but for that which Job confesseth here against himself, it is not to be taken as an Argument, that he sinned in his speeches, but spake as not so well instructed as now he was. And if any man thinks himself wise, this should humble him, that God will one day appear, and then alass, what will the Wisdome of the Wisest prove? Verily a thing nothing worth.

on

Gregory.

Ezek. 1. 25

Note.

Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak; I will demand of thee, and declare thou to me. Here Job after the acknowledging of his Ignorance, desireth God to instruct him better, by his demanding the humble desire of his Heart, to be made wiser being set forth, and by Gods Grace hearing and answering it, his taking notice thereof to increase divine Knowledge in him. It may seem strange here, that Job having craved Audience to his demand endeth so demanding nothing, but he is to be understood in thus saying, as desiring nothing else, but for so much as without Gods teaching him he should do nothing but err in speaking of divine things, that God would instruct him so hereabout, that he might be able to teach others; thus also Nicetas and Tygur. Interpr. Whence we may learn for this Understanding, to apply our selves with all earnestnes to God by prayer, as David and Solomon did.

Vers. 4.

Note.

I have heard thee with the Hearing of my Ear, and now mine Eye seeth thee. It is conceived that we may the better make a coherence of these words with the former, that Job having desired answer from God, whereby he might more clearly see and know his will touching him, had his desire immediatly granted, God that spake to him before out of a whirlwinde, now vouchsafing to shew himself in some Glorious apparition unto him, whereby he more fully knew his Glory and his own vileness, which made him break out as he did.

Vers. 5.

Therefore I abhor my self and repent in dust and Ashes. Thus Eusebius saying, That he saw God the Son, who in an humane shape appeared unto him, as a proludium of his incarnation, as also to the three Children in the fiery furnace, and hereby he was yet more inlightned and comforted in respect of the happy issue, that he should now have out all his troubles as they then had, to this also subscribeth Titleman, Dionisius, Isidor, although Gregory

Vers. 6. Euseb. de demonst. Evang. c. 4.

Gregor. gory ſayth, that by his ſeeing was his ſeeing with the Eye of his mind, by being better informed by the communication which he had with God. And Chriſoſt. ſayth the ſame, and Olympiodorus, Tho. Aquinas, Cajetan, Vatablus, and Rab. Moſes. For this ſpeech of Job cometh in not upon that Communication and inſtruction had hereby immediatly, but the petition, Verſe 4. Being firſt put up for it, and if after this he heard ſomewhat more, as formerly for his further information, he would not have diſtinguiſhed ſo betwixt his firſt hearing and his ſecond: Moreover the words would have been ſet down, and if it be ſayd, by the like reaſon he ſaw nothing, becauſe it is not related, I anſwer, His own ſaying that he ſaw with his eyes, was relation enough to ſhew that it was ſo: And now he repeateth, that he did ſo much overſee himſelf to ſpeak as he did before, & abhorred himſelf in duſt and Aſhes: In ſaying ſo acknowledging that in compariſon of the moſt glorious God, he was but a dead carcaſs, vile and worthy to be abominated of God, notwithſtanding any wiſdome or Grace in him, becauſe by the overweening conceit that he had of himſelf, he had fruſtrated it as nothing worth.

Verſ. 7. And the Lord ſaid to Eliphaz the Temanite, my wrath is kindled againſt thee and thy two Friends, becauſe yee have not ſpoken of me the thing that is right, as my Servant Job hath. It may ſeem ſtrange, ſaith Gregory, that God having reproved Iob in ſpeaking to himſelfe, doth now commend and prefer him to Eliphaz, but he did ſo, becauſe that although the moſt juſt man that liveth is not without ſin, when he cometh to be compared with God, yet being compared with other men, he is approved as righteous: And from hence again it appeared, that Iob ſinned not by that which he ſaid, even in the greateſt extremity of his ſufferings; for as the Lord began with his commendation to the Devill, ſo he endeth with it to Eliphaz, whereas he ſaith, Yee have not ſpoken of me ſo rightly, as my Servant Iob. The reaſon hereof is unknown to man, for to man they may ſeem to have ſpoken more rightly, as being in all their ſpeeches for

Note. God, but Job in many for himſelfe: Hence therefore note, That ſome, who ſeem unto men more righteous, are not accepted of before God, when others are, that ſeem leſs to men, for ſuch are Hereticks and Hypocrits, thus Gregory; but Eliphaz and both his friends might eaſily enough be ſeen by men alſo not to have ſpoken rightly, becauſe they judged Job wicked for his ſufferings, and to do this is a great ſin, Rom. 2. And they intimated that which was falſe, that ſufferings here, argue a wicked man: But in that Job muſt offer their ſacrifices for them, it appear-

Verſ. 8. Note. eth, that God is placable towards ſuch as err out of ignorance, if they turn from errour to the Church of God again: And till they do ſo, no ſacrificing for them is acceptable; for Job typifying the Church, muſt ſacrifice for them, that they might not have their folly laid to their charge, and ſuffer accordingly, through the wrath of God ſtirred up thereby.

Verſ. 9. And they did ſo, and God accepted Iob. Whereby is ſhewed, that ſuch as have ſinned, eſpecially in taking upon them to be Leaders in Hereſie, Note. muſt humble themſelves to be lead by others, who have not erred likewiſe; for ſuch only are accepted, and by their prayers, the erring may come to be accepted and pardoned: For the Orthodox are Gods Servants, Hereticks not till that by meanes of Gods Servants they be converted, and to God by their praying reconciled.

Verſ. 10. And the Lord turned the captivity of Iob, and he prayed for his friends, &c. The vulg. God turned at the repentance of Iob. But the Jeſuite himſelfe confeſſeth the firſt to be the true reading, God miraculouſly brought back the Cattell, which the Sabeans and others had taken from him;

R. Moſes. ſo R. Moſes. And it is not improbable, the Hebrew is turned, the turning of Job.

Verſ. 11. To make up his eſtate again, God moved all his friends hearts, to come and contribute liberally to his loſſes: Then it being ſhewed how his Cattell

Cattell were doubled, Verſe. 12. 13. He telleth of the three Daughters which he had. The firſt called Jemima, ſignifying the day, as coming of יום the ſecond Kezia, by interpretation Caſſia ſmelling ſweetly. The third Keren-happuch, the horne of Stibinum, ſo ſome, but Pagnin, the Horne like a pretious ſtone, the Carbuncle, and פוך an anguler Stone, which is the faireſt; ſo that they had all their names from their beauty, and the firſt ſpecially called Jemima, for a remembrance of his night of adverſity, turned into the day of proſperity; as Ioſeph called his firſt Son Manaſſeth, becauſe God had then ſo advanced him in Ægypt, that he forgate all his adverſity, becauſe Manaſſeth ſignifieth forgetfulneſs: And in theſe names Gregory findeth this allegory; in the name Jemima, Day is ſet forth, what we are that beleive ſo ſoon as converted, Children of the light and of the day. In the name Kezia or Caſſia, The ſweet ſavour that they are unto God, and in the name Keren-happuch, The ſong of exalters, which we ſhall come to ſing aloud as with a Cornet in Heaven hereafter: And making Iob a figure of the Church, he ſaith, That his doubled proſperity ſetteth forth, that the Church of God, towards the end of the World, ſhall be greatly increaſed by the converſion of the Jews, as alſo is propheſied by Iſaiah. Touching their beauty it is ſaid, None were ſo faire as they, and he gave them Inheritances amongſt their Brethren: Hereby is ſet forth the ſingular beauty of beleiving Soules, and women the weaker ſexe, are made a type hereof, to intimate that the weakeſt true Chriſtian, excelleth in beauty all others, how faire and gloriouſly ſoever they be ſet forth; and females ſhall have inheritances in Heaven as well as Males, for there is no difference, Male and Female being in Chriſt all one, although under the Law, the Females had none inheritance.

Verſ. 14.

Verſ. 15.

Note.

Gal. 3. 28.

And Iob lived after this one hundred and forty yeares, and ſaw his Childrens Children to the fourth generation, and ſo he dyed being full of daies. Which phraſe is uſed, only in ſpeaking of ſuch as live well; for others, although their lives be long, cannot be ſaid to be full of daies, becauſe they are ſpent in darkneſs: And if the Allegory from Iob to the Church holdeth in this alſo, it is ſhewed, that after the converſion of the Jews, the World ſhall not forthwith come to an end, but a hundred and forty yeares likewiſe after, which alſo is intimated by the Prophet Iſa. Where he ſpeaketh of Children a hundred yeares old after the creating of Ieruſalem, a rejoycing.

Verſ. 16.

Finitum eſt totum opus in omnes libros canonicos cum Novi, tum veteris Teſtamenti in 34. annis, 16. die Martij, Anno Domini 1649. Ætatisq; ſuæ 67.

Trinuni Deo Patri filio aſpici tui ſancto, cujus auſpicijs, ad Eccleſiæ Anglicandæ illuminationem, & nominis ſui gloriam, ſit omnis Laus, honour & Gloria in ſæcula ſæculorum. AMEN.

August. prologus in Psalme.

OF Things inspired by the Spirit of God, the Prophets, saith Auguſt. deliver ſome things, the Hiſtoriographers others, the Proverbs others, but the Book of the Pſalmes, what is profitable of them all. It foretells things to come, commemorates the Ghoſts of the Ancients, gives the Law to the Living, and ſets down the manner of things to be done. And that I may ſpeak breifly, is a certain common Treaſury of good Doctrine, adminiſtring aptly, things neceſſary to every one: For hereby we may know how to heal the old wounds of the Soul, and the ſpeedieſt remedy for new, in arts to uſe Saluti ſerous perſeverance, and in paſſions to ſuccour againſt divers Damnations, that vex the Soul. And this is done by a certain modulation and delightfull ſinging, ſtirring up mens minds to Piety; for the ſpirit ſeeing mans mind reluctting againſt the way of Virtue, and to be more inclined to the Delights of this life, then erected to the way of Virtue; hath mingled the force of his Doctrine with delightfull modulations, that whilſt the hearing is pleaſed with the ſweetneſs of the Verſe, the profit of divine Doctrine might together be inſtilled, after the manner of wiſe Phiſitians, who to make their Patients the more willingly to receive their diſtaſteful medicines, which yet are for the Bodily Health, anoint the top of the Cap with ſweet Honey. A Pſalm ſung by many together is the tranquility of Soules, the ſignifier of Peace, reſtraining troublous waves of diſtempered Cogitations, repreſſing Anger, repelling Riot, ſuggeſting Sobriety, congregating Freindſhip, bringing the differing to Concord, and reconciling Enemies: For who can call him any longer his Enemy, together with whom he ſends out the ſame voice of ſinging to God. Singing Pſalmes, fugates Devills, invites Angells to be an help, it is the ſheild of Nocturnall Terrours, the reſt of Diurnall Labours, a Defence to Children, an Ornament to young men, a Solace to old men, and the beſt Grace to Women. It decoreth Solemnities, mitigateth Godly Sorrow, and brings Tears out of a ſtony Heart. It is the work of Angells, the ſpirituall Incenſe of the Heavenly Hoaſts: And what is it, that is not to be learned out of the Pſalmes? Not every magnitude of Virtue, Rule of Juſtice, Deſency of Chaſtity, the Conſummation of Prudence, the Rule of Patience: Doth not all whatſoever is called Good, proceed from the Pſalmes? The Knowledge of God, the perfect prediction of Chriſt to come in the fleſh, the Hope of our common Reſurrection, the Fear of Puniſhments, the promiſe of Glory, and the Revelation of Myſteries?

Baſil. magnus.

For the Author of the Pſalmes, he ſaith, that nine of them only were made by David, the reſt by four holy men choſen by him, who indited them ſeverally, as the holy Ghoſt came upon them; Aſaph, Eman, Ethan, Iduthun: But the contrary to this will be found to be true by their Titles. He alſo ſaith, the firſt Pſalm only is without a Title; but indeed there are more, as Baſill notes, and it will appear to any Reader. They without Titles were of the Lord, and to be ſung by all, ſome are intituled by Halaluja, praiſe the Exiſtence or being, which are Hymnes compiled for the praiſing of God, being likewiſe to be ſung by all, ſome upon particular Occaſions, as their Titles ſhew; for particular perſons, Baſill alſo ſaith, that the Pſalmes are intituled by men, as this man or that was the cheife Singer of this or that Pſalme, and theſe only are intituled by David, of which he was the Præcentor or cheife Singer.

PSALME. I.

BLeſſed is the man, that walketh not in the Counſell of the Ungodly, &c. Here are three degrees, whereby men are drawn to ſin, and conſequently to miſery. 1. When it enters into the thought, ſet forth by counſell. 2. Is brought forth into act, meant by way. 3. When a man doth not only commit ſin, but labours to corrupt others alſo, ſet forth by ſitting in The ſeat of the peſtilent, Or ſcornfull, as the word לצים ſignifieth, but in Vulgar Lat. Peſtilent. Becauſe as the Peſtilence infects very many where it is, ſo pride and ſcornfulneſs almoſt all: Again, by the wicked, ſaith Baſill, either Atheiſts or Idolaters are meant in Scripture, by ſinners corrupt livers, and by the peſtilent corrupters of others; the meaning in breife is, That he or ſhe is bleſſed, that keeps his minde from thinking evill, his feet from walking in any evill way, and his hands from acting it; and if he hath, makes it not his ſeat by hardning his heart, to go on in ſin, ſetling upon the lees thereof; and this, ſaith Auguſtine, was Chriſt only, who ſaith, Abiit ille, He went after the counſell of the ungodly, that fell into ſin, Stat, he ſtandeth that delights in it, Sede, ſitteth, That is, So fixedly ſetled in evill, that he cannot get looſe, tiſi he be by him delivered, that Neque abiit, nec ſtetit, nec ſedit. Verſ. 1. Baſil. Auguſt.

But his delight is in the law of the Lord, &c. 1 Tim. 1. The law is not given to the juſt. That is, That he ſhould be under it, but by meditation in it continually: For it is one thing to be in the law, another to be under it, as Auguſtine ſaith, To be in it, is to do according to it; to be under it, to be dealt with according to it. Verſ. 2.

He meditates therein day and night. That is, Either without intermiſſion, or in the day of joy, and the night of ſorrow: Other things here following are plain, but Auguſtine applyeth the Tree here ſpoken of to Chriſt, whereas it is meant of any godly man; and whereas The way of the righteous, is ſaid to be Known to the Lord. It is meant approved, which he makes appear by bleſſing him in all things that he undertaketh.

PSAL. II.

HERE the perſecution that ſhould be raiſed up againſt the Chriſtian Religion, both by Jews and Gentiles, is propheſied of, and how vain it ſhould be to hinder the proceedings of the Goſpel, for it ſhall, notwithſtanding be propagated amongſt the Gentiles in all Countries and Nations, and the wicked enemies thereof ſhall be confounded, for which all Kings Act. 4. 25.

and Kingdomes, are exhorted to ſubmit to Chriſt, being threatned with perdition, if they do not.

Calvin. Calvin expounds it firſt of David, who was the Lords Anoynted, againſt whom many enemies, both of the Jews and Nations about, conſpired to prevent his comming to the Kingdome, or to overthrow him being ſet up, and then of Chriſt and his Church, as appeares by the Apoſtles application of theſe words, ſo Act 4. 24. For Davids Kingdome was but Umbratill or typicall, and therefore what was ſpoken thereof, is moſt compleatly fulfilled in Chriſts, and he ſaith, That they conſulted together againſt the Lord, becauſe againſt him, who the Lord had appointed to be King, and this may well deter the wicked of the World from perſecuting Gods Church, becauſe in ſo doing, they make war, as it were, againſt God, and comfort the faithfull, becauſe it is not againſt them, but God that they rage thus, who is of power ſufficient to confound them all.

Verſ. 3. Let us break their bands aſunder, &c. This is by Baſill applyed to the Baſil. faithfull, here exhorted by David to contemne the power of their enemies, and not for feare of them, to be detained in the bands of their ſinnes: But it is better by Auguſtine and Calvin applyed to the foreſaid raging Gentiles and People, brought in ſpeaking thus by a Proſopopeia, for the Pſal. 12. wicked think it a bondage to be ſubject to God and his Chriſt, the pride of their hearts being ſo great, that they will indure no Lord over them.

The word rendred anoynted, Hebr. is, Meſſiah, as Kings are generally called, and Jeſus eſpecially, Dan. 9. Ioh. 4. Bands were ſignes of ſubjection, Ier. 27. See the like phraſe, Iſa. 44. 15. 53. 8. Lam. 4. 10. &c.

Verſ. 4. The Lord will laugh them to ſcorn. That is, In their miſery will be ſo far from helping them, that he will increaſe it, as men aggravate the miſery of one another, by deriding them therein; See the like, Pſal. 59. 9. Prov. 1. 26. 28. The word אדון The Lord, ſaith Ainſworth, ſignifieth Ainſworth. my ſtaies, or ſuſtainers, it comes of אדן a ſtay or Pillar. And Lord comes of a Saxon word Lafors, which comes of Laef, To ſuſtain.

Verſ. 5. Then the Lord will ſpeak to them in his wrath. That is, Having ſeemed
Calvin. for a time to have ſleighted all their wicked attempts againſt Chriſt, ſuffering them to go unrevenged, when he ſhall ſee his time, he will be thus ſilent no longer, but ſpeak in his wrath; That is, Really execute, judgments upon them.

Verſ. 6. I have anoynted my King upon Zion. That is, Firmly ſetled Chriſt for Auguſt. King of my Church, for the Church is both holy as Zion was, and for the eminency ſet upon an Hill, Matth. 5. As a City ſet upon an hill. And this the Lord doth, and brings men into ſubjection, though they reluct againſt it, as was before ſaid.

Verſ. 7 This day have I begotten thee. This is not ſpoken in reſpect of Chriſts di-Baſil. vinity, for ſo he was begotten of the Father before all time, and is eter-
Calvin. nall as the Father, but as he is man, and was conceived in the fulneſs of time, and made of a woman, Gal. 4. Some, ſaith Calvin, will have this begetting referred to his divinity, expounding this day of a perpetuall act, but by (This day) is better underſtood any ſolemne time of his manifeſtation in the fleſh to be he, that by all the ſacrifices and types was pointed at obſcurely under the Law, as Pſalm. 118. 24. Ioh. 1. 14. Rom 1. 4. He was declared to be the Son of God, when he raiſed him from the dead, ſee alſo Act. 13. 22. Heb. 5. 5. For the firſt words; I will tell the decree: This is ſaid to ſhew, that Chriſts incarnation and paſſion, ſhould publickly be divulged and made known, ſo that none, except by their own default ſhould be ignorant of it, but might know and beleive and be ſaved; of the uſe of the word Till for preaching, ſee Pſal. 22. 23. Act. 2. 12. Exod. 9. 16. as Ainſworth notes.

Verſ. 8. Ask of me, &c. Accordingly Chriſt did ask, John 17. 5. But it is rather to be taken, ſaith Calvin, as a propheſying only, that thus it ſhould be, The heathen ſhould far and wide become his inheritance. Which is, when they are made the ſubjects of his Kingdome, by the preaching of his word. Calvin.

to

Thou ſhalt rule them with a rod of iron, &c. That is, ſaith Auguſtine, breaking the fleſh and corruptions ſo in peices in them, as that it can never come together in them again, as the peices of a broken earthen pot cannot, and becauſe corruption in men, is ſet forth ſometime by a body, as Rom. 7. 23. And by an old man, Ephe. 4. 24. The allegory from an earthen pot, may well ſerve to expreſs mortification in the converted; yet Calvin applies it to obſtinate enemies, who ſhall thus violently be deſtroyed, and never be able to make head again, and indeed becauſe he concludeth with periſhing, When his wrath is kindled. And ſuch a rigid ruling over the faithfull agreeth not to Chriſts lenity, it is beſt to underſtand it of obſtinate and malicious enemies, ſuch as the Jews were, and therefore periſhed by the Romans Armes, and heathen Emperours, not ſuffered to continue long in their power, but by ſpeedy death cut off one after another, and their ſubjects conformable to themſelves by the ſword, famine, and peſtilence; as was propheſied under the ſimilitude of horſes, Revel. His Scepter or rod, is his word or will, which worketh irreſiſtibly againſt the greateſt forces in all the World. Verſ. 9. Auguſt. Calvin.

Bewiſe (O yee Kings) This is ſpoken to cry down all worldly wiſdome as nothing, he onely being hereby ſhewed to be wiſe, that ſerves Chriſt, others fooles, and ſuch are even the greateſt Kings with their wiſe counſellors: And Kings are cheifly exhorted to this ſervice, becauſe they of all others are hardeſt to be brought to it for their pride and highneſs of ſpirit, but if they muſt ſerve, ſurely all their people muſt do likewiſe, or elſe it will not be ſafe for them, in Feare, or reverence. That is, Being afraid to offend him, who is ſo terrible to his wicked enemies, and with reverent behaviour, and not as thoſe that ſleight ſo powerful a Lord, neglecting to bow the body to him in prayer, or to give that reverence to him, which all Subjects do to their King, when he comes ſpeaking to us by the myſtery of his word, and in his houſe, which is, as it were, his Chamber of preſenſe; ſith he is in the midſt of two or three gathered together in his name, and the place where God is in a ſpecial manner is feareful, according to that of Jacob, how feareful is this place, it is the very houſe of God, the Gate of Heaven: And he addeth Rejoice. Leaſt they ſhould take ſome diſtaſte of this ſervice for the feare ſpoken of, as if they that betake themſelves to the ſervice of God ſhould do that, wherein they ſhould have nothing but continuall feare, like ſlaves; ſo Auguſtine, leaſt that which he ſaid, ſhould ſeem to be a perſwading of them to miſery; he adds, And rejoice. Intimating as Calvin hath it, that by ſerving the Lord with feare, a ground is laid of true joy, all other joy and mirth, that men make not grounding hereupon being madneſſe, and ſuch as hath an woe annexed; according to that of our Lord, Woe to you, that laugh now, for yee ſhall wail and weep. But he proceeds, ſaying, not only Rejoice, but With trembling: Leaſt our joy ſhould go on into the effuſion of temerity, that it might avail to a circumſpect keeping within the bounds of ſanctification, or as Calvin hath it, leaſt they ſhould wax wanton in their joy, thinking themſelves bleſſed, as being drunken with vain joyes, being ſtill enemies to God, he exhorts them to an humble and modeſt ſubmiſſion: And whereas he bids them, be Wiſe or intelligent, ſaith Auguſtine, as if he had ſaid, Be not ſorry for me being King over you, as if your good were taken from you, but underſtand, that this is expedient for you, that yee ſhould be under and ſerve him, that can give you underſtanding and teach you indeed, that yee may not raſhly domineer, but in ſerving him, the Lord of all, exult in moſt certain bleſſedneſſe, Verſ. 10. Verſ. 11. Math. 18. Gen. 28. Auguſt. Ne ad miſeriam valere videretur quod dictum eſt, ſed rurſus ne ipſum pergeret in effuſionem temeritatis, additum eſt, cum tremore. Calvin, Ne ſuo more diſcivi ant & manibus gaudijs corij ſe beatas fugant, dum inimici deo ſunt, ad ſupplicem & modeſtam ſubmiſſionem eos hortatur. Auguſt.

neſs, being made cautious and circumſpect, that by pride yee fall not from it.

Kiſſe the Son. Sep. and vulgar Lat. Receive nurture or inſtruction. Cald. Receive doctrine. Reſpecting rather the ſenſe, then the ſignification of the word: By kiſſing here is meant, loving and obeying and reverencing, and as one ſaith it well, in doing homage and in way of promiſing fidelity: of kiſſing, ſee Gen 41. 40. 1 Sam. 10. 11. 1 King. 19. 18. Hoſ. 13. 2. Job. 31. 27. So Subjects kiſſe the Kings hand at this day, in token of ſubjection, and mutuall love, and the Baalites kiſſed Baal, to ſhew that they were his Servants. Kiſſe the Son then is as much as be ſubject unto him and ſerve him as your King and God, but the word rendred Son, is בר ſignifying, as Calvin hath it, Son, or Elect, but by him rendered Son, that it might the better anſwer to Son before ſpoken of, ſome render it, Pure, which he rejects; and by kiſſing he underſtands honouring, for he that honoureth the Father muſt honour the Son, and pray to the Father through him. When his wrath is kindled a little, or ſhortly, or in a ſhort time. Which the beſt rendring of כמעט in a little, or little time, which is ſo ſpoken, as both Auguſtine and Calvin note; to ſhew the ſudden coming of Gods judgments upon his wicked enemies, when they think themſelves ſafe, for which he alſo ſpeaks of their periſhing (In the way) before they think that their end is neere, going on therefore in their ſinnes in all ſecurity, for ſo commonly is the laſt judgment ſpoken of, as the coming of a Theife in the night. Matth. 24. 2 Pet. 3. Revel. 3. Luk. 17 27. Bleſſed are they that truſt in him. This ſhall be the end of the unbeleiver, but of the faithfull kiſſing the Son bleſſedneſs for ever, which is added for his comfort, againſt terrour that might lay hold upon him, by reaſon of the threatnings beforegoing, as Ioel 2. after terrible things ſpoken of, it is added; He that calls upon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved.

Calvin.

PSAL. III.

A Pſalme of David, when he fled from Abſalom, of his fleeing, 2 Sam. 15. And the cauſe of this judgment, 2 Sam. 12. His foule ſinnes of adultery and murder, for theſe he laments, Pſalm. 51. and having obtained pardon, he prayeth here with confidence, that he ſhould be delivered.

Verſ. 2. Calvin.

Many ſay to my ſoule, there is no help for him in God, Selah. Some ſaith Calvin, render it, Many ſay of my ſoule. But it is to be underſtood, as if he had ſaid, Theſe their words tending to ſhew, that his caſe was deſperate, and that God could not, or would not help him, went to his heart and cut his very ſoule: For all Iſrael ſaving a few more conſtant friends about him, were ſuddenly fallen from him to Abſalom, which when his enemies conſidered, they made no queſtion but to prevail againſt him, and that he ſhould by no meanes eſcape out of their hands, howſoever he truſted in God, that he ſhould help and deliver him; For the word (Selah) added, ſome think it to be put for Amen, or Verily; ſome for the World, but becauſe Salal ſignifies to lift up, he takes it to be a note of lifting up the voice in conſent: Ainſworth noteth, That this Pſalme is intituled Mizmor, taken from a word ſignifying pruning or cutting of ſuperfluous twigs, becauſe the matter herein contained, is ſet forth in few words, all ſuperfluous ones being cut off, and there be of others, two other titles, Tehittah, Hymnus, and Shir, Ode in Gr: as Mizmor is Pſalmus: one ſignifying praiſe, the other a Song; and for Selah, he concurs with Calvin, it is a warning to lift up the minde or voice voice or both in Admiration, the Cald. renders it, For ever, and to that of Elevation, and Admiration, and Marking, do I ſubſcribe is cheifly for an Allegory here taking this Pſalm to be propheticall concerning Chriſt, becauſe he ſaith, I lay down and ſlept and roſe again, implying Chriſts ſleeping by death and riſing again. And then by Abſolom he will have Judas underſtood, who by falling to his Enemyes the Jews, that were exceeding many before, did increaſe their number; for they alſo ſayd the ſame in Effect of Chriſt, that is here ſpoken, he truſted in God, if he will have him, let him come now and ſave him: For theſe words, To my Soul, the common reading is, Of my Soul, but herein I prefer Calvin, becauſe (Hebr. it is ולנפש moſt properly ſignifying, To my Soul, and being ſo read, the ſenſe given by him is good. Auguſt.

Ainſworth.

Davids Enemies ſeeking to put him out of allhope of help from God, he yet hereſheweth that this could not make him to hold his peace, or ceaſe from truſting in God as his ſheild and ſure defence, and Reſtorer again to his Kingly Glory, although for the preſent he was put from it, and made to flee, and leave his City and Throne, where he had hitherto raigned glorioufly, to another. Verſ. 3.

I cryed to the Lord with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy Hill. This ſayth Calvin, ſome expound of Heaven, but he of Mount Sion, where the Tabernacle was, ſhewing hereby, that although he had ſent the Ark back to the proper place there, as he did, 2 Sam. 15. 24. Yet he certainly beleived, that God would thence hear him, and give him a gracious anſwer, as well as if he had been there preſent. For he thought it not fit though he were forced to flee, that the Ark ſhould be taken out of its place to go with him, having no direction from God for it. And ſurely he doubted not, although the Ark was a ſign of Gods preſence, to which they muſt reſort that would be heard, when they prayed, but that the Lord, who is ſayd to have dwelt there, could and would hear him, who reſpected ſo much this holy ſign, that his heart was ſtill to it, though in body he were removed far off from it. Of his crying to the Lord, ſee 2 Sam. 15. ſoon after which, to ſhew his confidence, that he was heard and ſhould be reſtored, he penned this Pſalme, being herein, and in the threatning of his wicked Enemies with deſtruction, V. 7. Propheticall. Verſ. 4. Calvin.

I layd me down and ſlept. That is, to ſhew what my confidence in Gods protection was, when I was in the midſt of theſe great dangers, I ſlept and took my Reſt, as at other times, not being diſquieted by thinking of my preſent dangerous condition, as is the manner of worldly men in danger, they lye down haply when night comes indeed, but through fears and cares poſſeſſing their minds they cannot ſleep, but tumble and toſſe all night. Some ſaith Calvin, render it by the future, ſuppoſing an Enallage temporis, to be here: I will lay me down, becauſe the laſt word, The Lord will ſuſtain me, is the future. But it is as if he had ſaid, my ſecure condition hath been, and ſhall alwaies be ſuch during this my great danger, that it hath not hitherto broken my ſleep, and what I ſay now, I am confident I ſhall be able to ſay to the end of it, I lay down and ſlept night after night, for the Lord that hath hitherto, will ſtill ſuſtain me. But how could David be thus confident of Gods help, ſeeing he had ſinned ſo greatly againſt him? Sol. He had repented and greatly humbled himſelf for his ſins, and obtained pardon, and therefore now he might well with comfort and confidence look up to God again, nothing doubting but that he would protect him and confound his Enemies, although he juſtly ſuffered this indignity at their hands, for a time to be thruſt from his Kingdom, becauſe he had ſo groſſely ſinned againſt him, as he had threatned by his Prophet Nathan, yet at the ſame time he layd him a Ground of Confidence, ſaying, that he had pardoned his ſin that he ſhould not dy. And juſt ſoever it was with God after this to puniſh him thus, yet they that were uſed as inſtruments to do Verſ. 5. Calvin. 2 Sam. 12.

do it, ſinned greatly againſt his revealed will, in ſeeking to put David down, whom the Lord had anointed and ſet up to continue King till his Lives End. Whence note, that the Servant of GOD having faln fouly, but by his Grace repented and riſen again by amendment of his Life, is no leſs deer to God after this, then he was before, and may as confidently ſeek unto him in diſtreſs, although the Judgment, under which he is, be for the ſame ſin. For when God puniſheth in this caſe, his End is not to deſtroy but to vindicate his Honour from diſparagement, in regard of which it would otherwiſe be indangered amongſt his Enemies, being ready to ſay, his Servants may commit any groſs ſinn, and yet never ſmart for it, but others ſhall be cruelly deſtroyed. Get therefore but to be Gods Servants, and do what ye luſt, ye ſhall never ſuffer for it: This is touched upon, 2 Sam. 12. Becauſe thou haſt made the Enemies of God to blaſpheme, &c.

Note.

Firſt, To ſtrike the more Terrour into his Servants, and to make them fear more to ſin.

Secondly, To purge them as Gold by the fire of the furnace.

Thirdly, Who ſo preſumeth to do any thing againſt the King, which is unjuſt, although he hath ſinned groſly, ſhall not Impunè ferre, neither may the meaneſt of men be proceeded againſt, but according to Juſtice and Equity.

Verſ. 7. Thou haſt ſmitten all mine Enemies upon the Cheek bone, thou haſt broken the teeth of the Ungodly. Here David prayeth with ſuch Confidence, that God would ariſe and ſave him, upon the Gronnd of his Faith in him before ſpoken of, that as if it had been already done, that with the ſame breath he doth both pray for it, and publiſh it as done: And he allúdes to that which men uſe to do to beaſts that bite, for they ſmite aud break out their teeth, ſo that they can do no more hurt with them. So the Lord in his good time ſmites the wicked Enemys of his Servants, that though they do them much hurt for a time, yet being thus ſmitten and their ſtrength being taken away, they are able to do ſo no more.

Verſ. 8. Salvation belongs to the Lord. Heb. Salvation or Hoſanna to the Lord, as Matth. 21. 7. They cryed Hoſanna to the Son of David, aſcribing their Salvation to him, ſo here David being ſaved from Abſolom and the Conſpiratours with him, aſcribes it wholly to the Lord, from whom it comes, as we ought all to do at all times. And becauſe his being delivered from this danger and ſaved, was a bleſſing to all the People of Iſrael, as conducing to their Peace and proſperity, he concludeth ſaying, Thy bleſſing is upon thy people, Selah. Of which enough before, v. 2.

PSAL. IIII.

To him that excelleth in Niginoth a Pſalm of David: Some for theſe words, To him that excelleth, have theſe, Ad ſæculum, for ever, as if it were meant that is ſhould be uſed as a Pſalm at all times, but becauſe the word נצח ſignifieth to overcome or excell, it is moſt commonly rendred hereby, the moſt skilfull and cheif in playing upon the inſtrument here ſpoken of being meant: Calvin, Prafectò in Niginoth, and this word Niginoth comes of נגן to ſtrike, as he that ſtrikes a muſicall inſtrument to make muſick therewith, wherefore it was an Inſtrument ſo called: And David compiled this Pſalm, but at what time it is not ſayd: Some refer it to the time of Abſoloms Rebellion: Some of Sauls perſecuting him, and this laſt is rather to be imbraced, becauſe ſome paſſages imply a longer continuing trouble, then by Abſolom, thus Calvin. But becauſe he ſpeaks of his being ſet at liberty, which cannot ſo well be underſtood, but of his Liberty from Saul's Tyranny, and alledgeth this as a Ground of his confidence to be heard and ſaved now likewiſe, I rather prefer the other, referring it to Abſolons Rebellion.

Calvin.

to

O God of my Righteouſneſs, Here David doth not aſcribe Righteouſneſſe to himſelf, as if he were without ſin, but becauſe his Enemies did unrighteouſly riſe up againſt him, he pleads the Goodneſſe of his cauſe againſt them, praying God, who is the Protector of them that unjuſtly ſuffer by the conſpiracies of Wicked men, to be on his ſide, that how potent ſoever they were, they might not prevail. For indeed without Gods help his caſe was deſperate, when all Iſrael joyned with Abſalom againſt him. But he lookt unto God as his ſtrength and Patron, as he is of all thoſe that ſuffer wrong, yet not for his own Righteouſneſs, but for the Lords mercy, as the next words, Have mercy upon me, ſhew. In a ſtreight thou haſt inlarged me. Some will have this ſpoken of his inlargment to come, although ſpoken as already paſt, for his certain confidence, that it ſhould be ſo: But it may better be underſtood of Deliverances paſt; whereupon his Confidence was grounded for this, as we muſt do in our diſtreſſes, recounting what God hath done for us to be more confirmed for time to come. Verſ. 1. Note. Note.

O Sons of men, how long my honour to ſhame. David having beſought the Lord for his help, and now nothing doubting of it, is bold to expoſtulate with his Enemies, that went about to put him from his Kingdom, contrary to Gods will, who had ſo notably ſet him up, that none of them could be ignorant of it, and he calls them (Sons of men) in oppoſing them, and their weakneſſe to Gods power, for thus ſometime he ſayth, That they may know themſelves to be but men, yea even the greateſt and proudeſt of them, intimated in the word אישׁ Iſhim here uſed, being commonly put for cheif men: My honour or glory to ſhame, here muſt neceſſarily be underſtood, Will yee turn, and becauſe it is ſayd, How long? Calvin and ſome others think, that an hint is given of Davids dangers by Saul, in which he was long, and not of thoſe by Abſalom, which were but ſhort, but becauſe David was not come to the Glory of a King in Sauls time, for he was alwaies then either in lurking places or in exile, their going about to turn his Glory to ſhame, muſt needs be after that he had many years raigned Glorioufly, their conſpiring together to put him down, ſetting up another againſt him, even his unnaturall Son Abſalom. And though they were but a few daies in doing this, yet it might well be ſayd to be long; for they came with Abſalom to Jeruſalem and there ſtayed to conſult; and for Abſalom openly to go in to his Fathers Concubines, and after conſultation; not content with Davids leaving the City and Kingdom to him, fleeing away with a ſmall Retinue, they proceeded to ſeek his life alſo, and to the good King, being all that time in ſo great miſery, it could not but ſeem to be long, and ſpoken of accordingly. If any man be moved to think otherwiſe by theſe words, How long, let him look to Verſe 8. and compare it with Pſalm. 3. 5. And he ſhall find David lying down to ſleep in both places and riſing up again in ſafety, implying the ſame thing ſpoken of in both places, and that the time of Davids ſtreights ſpoken of here was not long, becauſe but as it were the time of once reſting only, which is but a night. But to return to the Verſe, he chargeth them with the love of vanity and lyes, meaning that they vainly perſwaded themſelves, that they ſhould prevail, and if any man ſayd that they ſhould, now that God was offended with David for his foul ſinning before, wherein they were ready to harken to him, this he calls their ſeeking of a ly. Verſ. 2.

Auguſt. turns all this into an Allegory, reading the words thus, Uſq; quò graves corde, how long will ye be hard-hearted even til the coming of the Lord to Judgment, being taken up with the vanities of the world, and neglecting to imbrace the truth, wherein only is ſalvation, and ſeeking after lyes, that is, truſting to any thing elſe for life, and not to Chriſt alone; and indeed, Auguſt.

2 Theſ. 2. 11. Beleiving a lye is thus ſpoken of in the antichriſtian crew to their damnation.

Baſil. And Baſil ſayth, Graves corde, are the laden with malice, and the Sons of men carnal perſons, and their vanities which they loved, were their Idols, &c.

Verſ. 13. Know that the Lord hath ſet apart the Gracious to himſelf. The word is חסיד one to whom he hath ſhewed mercy and Grace, and who accordingly is gracious. The Vulgar Latine, Magnificavit ſanctum ſuum, as the words alſo ſignify. The meaning is, the Lord had mercifully and wonderfully ſet pious David in the Throne, and therefore his prayers ſhould be heard to uphold him in it, and all their attempts that ſought to put him down, ſhould be fruſtrated: And to this Effect Calvin, who noteth, that the word פלה Calvin. ſignifieth to ſegregate, ſo God had ſegregated him from amongſt all others to be King, and therefore doubtleſs he would have him continue: and he rendreth חסיד Benignum, kind, all implying him one for his mildneſs and clemency fit to be King, becauſe nothing doth more become a King, and therefore he being a man ſingularly choſen of God, he ſheweth hereby, that he was by his Grace thus fitted for this high calling. The Selah added to the former Verſe, called by Auguſt. Diapſalma, but expounded, Fiat, ſheweth Auguſt. that this is not to be joyned to that, and therefore he queſtioneth what it ſhould mean, that this is begun with a Conjunction Copulative And, for it is Hebr. And know, Anſ. and is often redundant amongſt the Hebrewes, and yet here haply is implyed that he conceived this firſt in his minde, and then uttered it with his voice, which he did for the wonderfullneſs of the thing ſpoken of. For he expounds His holy one, of Chriſt, whom he ſayth, he made wonderfull when he brought him from the Grave and Hell, and ſet him in the higeſt Heavens: But for the Conjunction ו rendred And, by others it is and may be rendred But.

Verſ. 4. Tremble and ſin not, Vulg. Be angry and ſin not. But the word ſignifieth, Tremble or fear greatly, and it is plainly an Admonition to his Enemies, who were very inſolent in their Rebellion; but he ſeeks here to ſtrike terrour into them, that they might, for fear of God, whom they made war againſt, deſiſt from their wicked enterprize. And to this End he bids them in ſecret betwixt God and their own Souls, examine and conſider, and ſo they ſhould find that their doings could not, but be highly diſpleaſing to God. Ainſworth for Tremble yee: hath Be ſtirred or moved, for the word רגז Ainſworth. ſignifieth an inward moving, and is uſed ſometime for moving by anger, Proverb. 29. 9. Ezek. 16. 43. ſometime by fear, Pſal. 18. 8. Deut. 2. 25. According to the former if it be taken, that Epheſ. 4. 26. May ſeem to have the Ground here, Be angry but ſin not, and if it be Expounded by Anger, the ſenſe muſt be, Be moved with wrath and indignation againſt your ſelves, for your wicked rebellion, and proceed not thus to ſin ſtill: If, With fear, then the ſenſe is, as hath been already ſayd, and is rather then to be preferred.

Verſ. 5. Offer to God the Sacrifices of Righteouſneſſe: Some, ſaith Calvin, think, Calvin. that this is ſpoken by way of Exhortation to his Enemies to turn from ſin to Righteouſneſs, which is called an Offering of the Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs, becauſe the End of ſacrificing is for Reconciliation with God offended by ſin, now ſacrificing without turning thus will not avail, but thus it will, according to Pſal. 50. Offer to God thanksgiving, and pay thy Vowes, &c. And Rom. 12. 1. But he thinks their ſacrificing here taxed, and the confidence which they had therein. Becauſe the Tabernacle was now theirs and the Alter, but he was driven away and could not come to make any Oblation there. Wherefore they perſwaded themſelves, that they ſhould have Succeſs, but David not, and ſo it is as if he had ſayd, your confidence in God is vain, although ye bear your ſelves upon your ſacrificing, ſith ye all are poluted with a foul ſin, therefore if ye would be accepted ye muſt offer Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs, and ſo put your truſt in the Lord, otherwiſe yee truſt in him in vain, for the Sacrifice of the Wicked is abomination to the Lord. Prov. 15.8. But herein is not much difference from the former, but only his Exhortation is inforced with an intimation of the vanity of Hypocrits, who though for outward duties, they think to be accepted and proſpered, yet they ſhall be utterly deceived.

ces

Many ſay, who will ſhew us good? That is, vain and worldly men, that truſt not in God, but if they be in ſtreights or want for the preſent, are ready to diſpaire of ſupply, and deliverance, as haply was the caſe of many now with David. But he contrariwiſe prayeth, and by Faith expects aſſuredly, Lift up the light of thy Countenance upon us, (O Lord) meaning by a favourable aſpect, whereby we may be comforted through a ſenſe of it in our miſeries, and in thy good time have deliverance out of our dangers, as after a dark and tempeſtious night poor ſea-faring men by a lightſome clear and calm day coming on. But this comfort is not but in JESVS CHRIST through Grace ſhewed to our Souls to the Remiſſion of all our ſins, Luk. 2. 32. To be the light of the Gentiles. Heb. 1.3. His expreſs image, Vulg. Lat. renders it, Signatum eſt ſuper nos lumen, as if it were an aſſertion of the comfort already found, and aſſured, but the word is an Imparative, Lift up, implying a Prayer: Calvin thinks that David inlargeth himſelf here, and ſpeaks generally of worldly minded men, what they cheifly deſire, and wherein they place their Felicity, Viz. In ſome externall Good for the body and this preſent life: but he contrariwiſe, and all the faithfull in Gods Grace and favour whatſoever becomes of their Bodys and outward Eſtates. Some take it as ſpoken of his Enemies, as longing after a good day and victory over him; but whilſt they did ſo he continued in prayer, that the light of Gods Countenance might be towards him, uſing a Phraſe borrowed from men, who ſhew their Good Will to others by a loving and kind look, according to that, Spem fronte ſerenat, and the light of the Kings Countenance is as a Cloud of the Later Rain.

Verſ. 6.

Calvin.

Prov. 15. 16.

Auguſt. underſtands it as a voice of the carnall, who comes from the dead to tell us of the happineſs to come, becauſe thou ſpeakeſt of putting our truſt in the Lord, Verſe 5. as if ſo doing we ſhould be bleſſed: But he anſwers, the Light of thy countenance, is ſealed in us: It cannot be ſhewed what Good they partake of, that truſt in God, for it is an internall thing; but as ſurely impreſſed in the Hearts of the Faithfull, as the Kings Image upon his Coin, Gods image, which is in Righteouſneſs and Holineſs being renewed in them: And therefore he addeth, Thou haſt put joy into my heart, ſo that it is not to be found without, but within.

Auguſt.

Thou haſt given joy in my Heart, ſince the time that their Corn, &c. That is, Having obtained thy favour which I have prayed for, my heart is joyfull though I be in ſtreights by reaſon of mine Enemies. See the like, Rom. 5.1. Since the time, or whilſt they have outward and fading joy in the increaſe of their Corn, and wine, and other fruits of the Earth, and wordly Riches; whereby is intimated how vain and unſatiſfying carnall mens joyes are, and that true and induring Joy, is to be had only in Gods Favour and Grace.

Verſ. 7.

I will lay me down together, of this ſee before, Pſal. 3.5. Only whereas he ſayth, Together, underſtand with the joy before ſpoken of, and confidence wherein he ſought unto God. For ſuch and ſuch only may ſleep quietly, and ſhall be ſure to be kept in ſafety.

Verſ. 8.

PSAL. V.

Calvin. TO the cheif Muſician on Nehiloth, a Pſalme of David. The word Nehiloth, ſaith Calvin, is by ſome rendred Inheritances, by ſome Armies, they that are for Armies, by the word על upon, underſtand Againſt, as if it were meant againſt the Armies of his Enemies, they that are for Inheritances, hold it to be a prayer for the Tribes, which were Gods inheritances, but he for an inſtrument of Muſick. And Ainſworth determins it to be a wind inſtrument, called Nehiloth, as that with ſtrings is called Neginoth, for Nehiloth, is ſo uſed, Iſa. 5. 12.

Ainſworth.

Verſ. 1. Hearken to my words my Lord my God, &c. For the occaſion of this Pſalm, nothing can certainly be ſayd, but David being often in danger by Saul and other Enemies, we can only generally conceive, that he made this Pſalm to be commonly uſed during thoſe times. And he doubles and trebles theſe words, Give eare, hearken, mark the voice of my crying, to expreſs his Earneſtneſs, and for the ſame reaſon he ſayth, Not only my God, but my King, and Jehovah.

Verſ. 3. In the morning I will diſpoſe my ſelf to thee, and watchfully look: that is, For an anſwer, being confident that I ſhall have it.

Verſ. 5. Mad men or vain-glorious Fooles ſhall not ſet themſelves before thee: The word tranſlated thus comes of הלל to praiſe ones ſelf, and becauſe it is a mad part for any man ſo to do, it is commonly uſed to ſet forth mad men, Pſal. 73. 3. Pſal. 75. 5. 132. 9. Eccl. 2. 2, 12. 7. 9. 10. 13. Iſa. 44. 25.

Ainſworth.

Verſ. 8. Lord direct me in thy Righteouſnes becauſe of my Adverſaries, &c. That is, ſayth Calvin, according to thy mercy and Grace towards me, direct me to walk ſo, as that my Enemys may have no advantage againſt me, but I may be kept out of their ſnares craftily layd for me; to expreſs which, further he adds, Direct thy way before me: Lead me in that way, which thou knoweſt to be moſt ſafe for me, and whereby thou meaneſt to bring me out of their dangers. But ſome he ſaith, that becauſe his Enemies were ready to pry into his doings, if they could in any thing eſpy any ſlips in him, he prayeth that God would guid him ſo by his Grace and ſpirit, that he might do righteouſly in all things.

Calvin.

Baſil. magnus. Baſil: Lead me in thy Righteouſneſs, not mine, which is imperfect, Becauſe of mine Enemyes, that is, My ſpiritual Enemies, which indeavour to turn me out of the right way, to which it may well be drawn allegorically. Auguſt. rendring it, Direct my way before thy face: Expounds it, as if he had prayed that he might keep in the right way in ſecret, where none ſeeth but God, that he might approve of him, & ſo he makes the next words a Reaſon, For there is no truth in their mouthes, their judgments are falſe and not to be regarded: But the words being Hebr. Thy way before my face, will not bear this: I prefer the Expounding of theſe words by Righteouſneſs regulated by GODS Law, for this is his way wherein we are commanded to walk, and therefore he pray eth that this may ever be before his Eys, and then the next words declaiming againſt the falſhood of his wicked Enemies, are ſpoken by way of oppoſing it to Gods truth, this is to Salvation, their lyes to Deſtruction of thoſe that beleive & are led by them. And this is true not only in conſpirators againſt Gods faithfull Servants here ſpoken of, but in Arch-Hereticks alſo, falſhood is in their mouths, and they that beleive them, beleive lyes to their Damnation, being ſwallowed down through their throat as it were, by the grave and Hell. Their Throat an open ſepulcher, ſo called becauſe they gaped to devour the Innocent, as the grave, dead Carcaſes: This Rom. 3. 13. is applyed to men in common, for having ſaid, They are all corrupt, Auguſt.

Verſ. 9.

Note.

2 Theſ. 2.

rupt, and become abominable: He proceeds to amplifie this corruption in theſe words, and herein he goeth not from the meaning of the ſpirit, ſaith Calvin well, becauſe ſuch as the wicked enemies of the faithful be, are all the unregenerate, through the corruption of their nature, whether Jews or Gentiſes, till they be converted and changed by grace into new Creatures. Calvin.

Let them err (O God) Let them fall from their counſells, &c. The word rendered Err, doth alſo ſignifie, Periſh. And therefore may be taken both waies; he meanes, by being infatuated, when they thought to take wiſe counſell againſt him doing fooliſhly, that he might eſcape and they come to ruine, as he ſometime prayed particularly againſt Ahitophel, that God would turne his wiſedome into fooliſhneſs; and then, Let them err from their counſells. Is as if he had ſaid, Whereas the end of their conſulting is againſt me, make them to miſſe of this their divelliſh end, and let their counſells be turned to their own ruine: And as the faithfull Servants of God pray, ſo to their comfort it ſhall be; and therefore having prayed for this, there is no need to take care in this caſe, but to caſt our care upon God, who will catch the ſubtleſt in their ſubtlety, turning their wiſedome into fooliſhneſſe, his Servants in the meane ſeaſon, taking their reſt, although be holpen in their conſultations by all the ſubtleties of the old Serpent the Devill. For they have rebelled againſt thee. And thus he ſaith, to ſhew, That the wicked perſecuting the righteous, do through him ſtrike at God himſelfe, though they think nothing leſſe, and account them whom they maligne and perſecute, moſt baſe and contemptible. Verſ. 10. Note.

And let them all rejoice that truſt in thee, &c. Here is the end of Davids praying againſt his wicked enemies, that by their miſcarrying in their counſels, he might be preſerved and they confounded; this being done, joy ſhall be to all the righteous, from the example of one thus protected in deadly danger, aſſuming a truſt to themſelves of finding the like favour in all their dangers, and this did moſt affect David, that by his being preſerved, joy ſhould generally come to the Church, and aſſurance of Gods protection, and ſo it ought to be with us; the common good of the Church being more lookt at then our own, and likewiſe her miſeries, to joy more for the one, and to ſorrow more for the other. For the laſt words; Favour, defend, or compaſſe them about with a ſheild. Hebr. Crown them. But the ſimilitude of a ſheild being uſed, ſheweth, that crowning is put for defending by his favour compaſſing them round about, as a crown the head of a King. Verſ. 11. Note. Verſ. 12.

Ainſw. With favourable acceptation thou wilt crown him about. And this ſhall be to him, as a ſheild to a ſouldier, covering the head in the day of battell.

PSAL. VI.

TO the cheife muſitian on Neginoth upon eight. Of Neginoths ſee before, Pſal. 4. Now more expreſly it is ſhewed to be an inſtrument of muſick, or harp with eight ſtrings, ſome to the eighth tune, which was high, and of this, mention is made again, 1 Chron. 15. 21. Auguſtine taking this Pſalme to be made in the perſon of the Church, ſuffering greatly in this World; by the eighth underſtands the time to come of the everlaſting felicity of the faithfull, as if it were made with reſpect unto that; And this, he ſaith, Is called the eighth, becauſe to come after a naturall or carnall life, lead under nature and the Law, and a ſpirituall under the Goſpel, which may well be underſtood by ſeven, becauſe the body conſiſts ſiſts of foure Elements, and the ſpirit is ſet forth by three, as in that precept; Thou ſhalt love the Lord with all thy heart, ſoule and minde. Some others, he ſaith by eight underſtand, eight thouſand years, as if it were meant, that Anno eight thouſand after ſeven thouſand compleat, ſhould be the laſt day, which he confuteth, and by as good reaſon may we Reject the other, as a forcing of the Scriptures. And as little reaſon is there for Baſils expounding it of Circumciſion, becauſe That was upon the eight day.

T. W. Calvin. This Pſalme is by ſome thought to be made upon occaſion of ſome great ſickneſſe; by ſome, of ſome great miſery, and overthrow, ſuſtained by his enemies, for which he complaineth of his weakneſſe: But neither ſeemes right, for if David had been ſmitten with any ſuch great ſickneſſe, we ſhould doubtleſſe have had it related in his hiſtory, and of any overthrow of his forces that he had at any time, we read not, but altogether of victories and prevaylings. Wherefore Baſil is to be preferred, who expounds it of his foule ſinnes, into which he fell through his weakneſſe, and for which he was threatned to be purſued with judgments, by the Prophet Nathan. To cleave then to his expoſition only.

Baſil. Magnus.

Verſ. 1. Correct me not (O Lord) in thy wrath. Although adultery and murther caſt men out of their Inheritances, yet deale not ſo with me, by calling theſe my foule ſinnes to remembrance.

Verſ. 2. Heale me for I am weake, &c. That is, through the fleſh prevayling againſt the ſpirit, and carrying me to ſuch foule ſinnes, Heale me for my bones are broken. That is, The ſtrength of ſpirit, cogitations which I pray thee therefore to renew in me.

Verſ. 3. My Soule is much terrified. In recounting the ſtrength of temptations and my own weakneſſe. But thou (O Lord) how long. I have by repentance turned unto thee, confeſſing my ſinnes, ſo ſoon as thou ſenteſt to reprove me, but how long delayeſt thou to turne to me in mercy: For although his ſinnes were immediatly pardoned, yet he indured the conflict of temptations ſtill by meanes of his ſufferings, which he deſires, may now be withdrawn, as the Phyſician withdraweth his Corraſives when the ſoare is healed.

Verſ. 4. Be turned (O Lord) deliver my ſoule. Here he beggeth two things.

1. That the Lord would ceaſe to perſue him with his judgments.
2. That he would not finally reject his ſoule.

Verſ. 5. For in death there is no remembrance of thee. That is, By praying to thee to obtain mercy, for that muſt be done in this life, and if any ſhall think to do it after death, they ſhall be deceived, as Dives, and the fooliſh Virgins, and they (Matth. 7. 21. He is not therefore to be underſtood, as meaning that there is none other life to come, for he knew the doctrine of the reſurrection; as appeares, Pſal. 17. ult. Pſal. 22. 24. 92. &c.

Verſ. 6. I made my bed every night to ſwim with teares, &c. That is, In conſideration of my ſinnes I weep bitterly, and continue ſo to do every night in my retiredneſſe, ſo that he made all his life a practiſe of repentance: And thus do many true penitentiaries, yea all that have fallen into foule ſinnes, they cannot think upon them without extream ſorrow, and therefore never fall into them any more, as David did not, and if any man doth, it is an evidence againſt him, that he was never yet truly penitent.

Note.

Verſ. 7. My ſight is dim and waxeth old for all my enemies. To whom we give advantage againſt us by our ſinnes, and as weakneſſe and feebleneſſe brings a dimneſſe upon the ſight; ſo weakneſs occaſioning the prevayling of ſin, hinders the ſight of the minde.

Verſ. 8. Depart from me all yee workers of iniquity. Here David ſeemeth to have found by ſome inward comfort, that God had heard him, and therefore after ſuch greivous complaining, he now takes courage to him to inſult over his enemies, who by reaſon of Gods diſpleaſure againſt him for his ſinnes, ſinnes, were confident that they ſhould prevail over him, but he bids them depart from him, and not wickedly attempt any thing againſt him more, for if they did, they ſhould but work againſt themſelves, falling by their own practiſes, as he had prayed, Pſal. 5.10. and now he tels them that God had heard his prayer.

Let all mine enemies be aſhamed, &c. To move his enemies the more, he here by way of malediction prophecieth of their confuſion, fleeing away for feare and ſudden coming to ruine; all which was verified in Abſalom and his adherence, and this ſhall be the end of all malicious perſecutors of any of the Saints of God. Verſ. 10.

PSAL. VII.

SHiggaion of David, which he ſang to Jehovah upon the words of Chuſh ſon of Jemini. The word Shiggaion coms of Shagah, ſignifying delight or wandring in pleaſure, Prov. 5.19.20. Wherefore it may be rendered Davids delight. See the ſame word, Hab. 3. 1. And it ſeemeth, ſaith Ainſworth, to be ſo called, for the divers matters here ſet forth according to art, and ſo cauſing the more delight: The Cald. renders it, Davids interpretation of the Law. But upon what ground I know not: Calvin ſaith, That ſome will have it a muſicall inſtrument, ſome a delightful verſe, wherein it was made, as Saphick or Phaleucian, to which he ſubſcribs, utters, that it is intituled Shiggaion from the firſt word of other ſongs, according to the tune whereof this muſt go, as amongſt us ſome Pſalmes are to be ſung, as others: I hold it to be a kinde of ſong compoſed in ſuch a verſe as he moſt delighted in, whereas Ainſworth this either for rendering it Davids errour, it is abſurd, becauſe ſo errour ſhould come from the ſpirit of God, as both this and all the reſt did. Upon the words of Chuſh the ſon of Jemini. That is, ſaith Ainſworth, of Saul, the ſon of Kiſh, by the change of one letter, called Chuſh, a Blackamore, for his black and wicked conditions, for which the wicked are thus compared, and to this the argument of the Pſalme agreeth, Verſe 4. &c. Where he imprecateth himſelfe, if he had done ſo, as it ſeems, he had charged him: Therefore I cannot aſſent to Calvin, who denyeth it to be meant of Saul, and turnes it to ſome other man of his houſe thus called, becauſe David reverenced Saul, as the Lords anointed; and therefore it is improbable, that he would brand him with this black brand; but however, he reverenced him ſo, as not to lay hands upon him, yet he did not ſometime forbeare to impeach him, as overcredulous againſt him that was innocent, and unjuſtly and unreaſonably perſecuting him, which was a foule blot unto him: His other reaſon, that when he ſpeakes of Saul, he plainly names him, and therefore it is not likely, but he would have done ſo here likewiſe, if he had meant him, is of little force; for it is enough to make it appear, that he meant him, becauſe the whole ſcope of the Pſalme is to juſtifie himſelfe againſt the aſperſions by ſome evil tongue of a perſecutor caſt upon him, and to pray to God againſt him, and to threaten him; and how Saul aſperſed him ſometime we read, to his men, and to Jonathan, but not of any other of Jemini, that is, Benjamin, till Shemei came out and railed againſt him, which was long after, in Abſaloms time, and the Caldee hath it, Upon the deſtruction of Saul the ſon of Kiſh of the tribe of Benjamin. For the word דבר here uſed, doth as well ſignifie matter as words.

Auguſtine and Baſil, by Chuſh underſtand, Huſhai the Archite, of whom ſee 2 Sam. 16. That he went back to Abſalom under a pretence of friendſhip, to overthrow the counſel of Ahitophel, and having by his word done it, ſaith Baſil, David made this Pſalme, aſcribing all to God, and therefore they render it, Upon the words of Chuſi, calling Huſkai by this name:

Ainſworth.

Calvin.

Ainſworth: Ier. 23. 13.

Calvin.

1 Sam. 24.

Auguſt. Baſil. magnus.

name: but Chuſh is the ſon of Jemini, Huſhai a Proſelyte of another country, dwelling in a place from whence he had the name, Archite in the Tribe of Joſeph, of which ſee my expoſition upon, 2 Sam. 15. 32 And therefore it cannot be him: Some think Shemei to be meant, called Chuſh for his back conditions, of whom alſo ſee, 2 Sam. 16. And what I have ſaid there hereupon: Junius agreeth with Calvin, and if Shemei be underſtood, and this Pſalme to have been made when he fled from Abſalom alſo, I ſee nothing that makes againſt it, but rather for it, becauſe he ſaith, If I have done this, &c. V. 4. as meaning the crime objected by Shemei, that he had been cruel towards Sauls houſe; let the Reader follow whether he pleaſeth.

Arnob:
Burgenſis:

Verſ. 2. Leaſt he teare me in peices like a Lion. He prayeth Verſe 1. againſt his perſecutors, but here he mentions one eſpecially as the head of the reſt Abſalom, if we follow the laſt expoſition of the title, if the firſt Saul. Auguſtine turneth all this into an allegory, as if by Chuſhi ſignifying ſilence, Judas were meant, and by Jemini, ſignifying a right hand, the office, to which he called him, uſing him as an Apoſtle, as his right hand, but he ſecretly plotted miſcheife againſt him, and ſo was cut off; leaving this, as a ſtreining of Scripture, let us look only to the true literal meaning, according to which this is to be underſtood, either of Abſalom or of Saul.

Auguſt.

Verſ. 4: (Yea I have releaſed my adverſary lightly.) Thus Ainſworth diſtinguiſheth this clauſe, and that moſt rightly by a Parentheſis, whereas others render it, If I have not delivered my adverſary without cauſe: But here is no word ſignifying, Not: And therefore it is better to render it ſo, neither is there any word ſignifying If, but And or Yea, וחלצה from a word ſignifying to divide, the meaning being, that he went away rather, and ſtood not to reſiſt Abſalom, but left Jeruſalem to him to avoid bloodſhed, or he kept himſelfe and men from laying violent hands upon Saul in the Cave, dividing betwixt his perſon and his garment, when he cut off a skirt thereof and not him, as he could have done, the thing, the doing whereof he diſclaimes, in the firſt words, ſaying, If I have done this thing, Is commonly underſtood of ſome thing then commonly divulged to his diſgrace, but not determined what, but moſt probably he meant Shemei, his upbraiding him by his bloodſhed to attain the Kingdome, being innocent from ſuch crimes objected againſt him, he appeales to God, praying him to judge him, if theſe things objected were true in a moſt ſevere manner, not to give example to others, to imprecate themſelves, as the manner of prophane perſons is, when they have done evil to juſtifie themſelves by calling upon God, for this is to make him the Patron of an evil cauſe, and therefore in revenge of ſuch groſſe impiety, he ſometime ſtriketh ſuch impudent imprecatours immediatly. We ſhould learne of David in all things to walk ſo innocently, as that we may with a cleare conſcience flee to God, in caſe that ſlanderouſly any foule evil be laid to our charge. Baſil, If I have done this. If I have riſen up againſt my Father, as my ſon doth againſt me; If I have rendred evill to mine enemies. That is, Sought Abſaloms deſtruction as he hath ſought mine, for nature it ſelfe would not ſuffer me to do it: Let me fall by mine enemies empty. That is, Being deſtitute of my hope in God, for he hoped by Gods help that he ſhould not come into the hands of his enemies: This laſt clauſe excepted, I think he cometh neereſt of all others to the genuine ſenſe of the words.

Note.

Baſil.

Verſ. 6. Awake up to me, the judgment that thou haſt commanded. Whilſt God left David in miſery, his enemies geting the City and all things in their hands, he ſeemed to ſleep and not to come up and ſit in the ſeat of judgement, therefore he prayeth him To ariſe and lift up himſelfe and to awake. As a Potent and juſt Judge, to maintain him in the Throne, wherein he had had ſet him againſt the attempts of his proud and malicious Enemies, and this he calls the Judgment, which he had commanded, becauſe he ſought it not at the firſt, through ambition, of himſelf; but it was by GOD, that he was commanded to feed his People Iſrael. Or ariſe and be exalted, as Baſil hath it, is not meant of local motion, or as if GOD at any time were low, but becauſe he is ſo in the Opinion of wicked men, when he ſuffers them and takes not revenge upon them for perſecuting his faithfull Servants, but ariſe by being avenged upon them, In the Judgment thou haſt commanded: That is, commanded to men in caſe of Wrong done, by releiving the Oppreſſed, or which thou haſt commanded to be promiſed in thy name that thou wouldſt releeve the Oppreſſed. Baſil. magnus.

And the Congregation of Peoples ſhall compaſſe thee about: That is, With praiſe, for he alludeth, ſaith Baſil, to that which they then uſed to be done when they ſang praiſes to God, to do it ſtanding round about the Alter. Calvin refers it to all peoples ſtirred up to praiſe God at the hearing of his juſt dealings. Verſ. 7. Baſil.

The Lord ſhall judge the Peoples: When the Righteous are upheld, and the wicked judged, this is not to be aſcribed to chance, or fortune, but to divine Providence, ordering it thus: Judge me according to my righteouſneſs; But elſewhere he ſaith, Enter not into judgment with thy Servant: But there he meaneth to puniſh him, as he by his ſins deſerved; for ſo no fleſh ſhall be juſtified, but all muſt be condemned, here he meaneth judging betwixt him and his Enemies whom he accuſeth, as perſecuting him unjuſtly, he on his part having given them no cauſe by wronging any man, but the Devil and their own malice only ſtirring them up: And the former words, The Lord ſhall judge the peoples: are a ground of this his Petition, it being as if he had ſayd, Thou art the Judge of right and wrong in all men: Of all Countreys and Nations, therefore let me injoy this common good with others. if I be wronged, ſhew thy ſelf ſuch a Judge towards me, by delivering me and confounding mine Enemies. Verſ. 8. Baſil.

Make the malice of the wicked to ceaſe, and direct the Righteous; that is, Judg them by breaking their forces, and turning their Counſells into fooliſhneſs, that they may not be able to go on in perſecuting the Righteous, and the Righteous may walk or be in ſafety: So that a double good of puniſhing the Wicked is here intimated: Verſ. 9.

Firſt, The ſtaying of them, by diſabling them from perſecuting.

Secondly, the ſafety of the Righteous, and peace. But who are theſe Wicked, and who theſe Righteous? the next words declare, The Righteous God proveth the Hearts and Reines, not ſuch as make a ſhew, but ſuch as are of an upright Heart, and who be ſuch God knoweth, although man doth not.

God judgeth the juſt, and him that deſpiſeth God dayly: Or it may be read, God is a juſt judge, and God is angry every day. And this is moſt followed, and moſt agreeable to the Hebr. Vulgar, God is juſt, and ſtrong, and patient, but the word זֹעֵם ſignifieth Angry, or provoked to Anger, and if it be ſo read, Provoked to anger every day, it is beſt, becauſe otherwiſe it is liable to exception, ſith God is patient and long ſuffering, and how can this be, if he be angry every every day, which is the part of an impatient and cholerick perſon. Some Salve it by ſaying he is executing his wrath againſt ſome or other dayly, but not without having firſt long born with them in great Patience. Verſ. 11.

If he be not turned he will whet his ſword. This is by ſome applyed to God thus: If the Enemy, that is, the wicked turn not from his wickedneſs, God will whet his Sword, and bend his Bow, &c. That is, He will in hoſtile manner come againſt them as men uſe to do againſt their Enemies, with ſwords and bows and arrows to ſlay and kill them up, whether they ſeem to be neer to judgment or not, for which he uſeth two ſimilitudes, of a Sword, that ſmites the neere, and of Arrows, wherewith he ſhoots at them, that ſeem Verſ. 12.

to be furtheſt off. By ſome it is applyed to Davids Enemies, wheth er Saul, or Abſalom called a Lion, V. 2. As if he had ſayd by way of Irony, if he change not his mind, as I am ſure he will not do, he will uſe all manner of hoſtile means to deſtroy me, yea he hath already done it in his thoughts, ſo ſtrongly hath he prepared for it, But he ſhall travell with miſcheife, and bring forth a lye: He ſhall be able to do nothing leſs, then what he vainly hopeth to do againſt me.

The firſt Expoſition hath been moſt anciently received, and then the words, Verſe 14. He hath travelled with miſcheif, &c. Are underſtood as a threatning of the Wicked further, when God ſhall come in ſuch hoſtile manner againſt them, that they ſhall find themſelves utterly diſappointed of their hopes, which were that they ſhould always injoy proſperity; although they went on in their ſins, and particularly in perſecuting the Righteous: And being thus underſtood, they will moſt aptly follow that which was ſayd before, God is a righteous Judge, and God is angred every day: and here he is ſo angred, that if the wicked turn not from their ſins whereby they anger him, he will thus and thus deſtroy them, and theſe words, he wil prepare Arrows for the Perſecutors, will excellently agree, as ſhewing againſt whom he bends his bow, whereas if it be underſtood of the Enemy, as preparing Arrows for the furniſhing of his Army with weapons againſt David; there muſt be a ſudden falling off from that which was ſayd immediatly before, He will bend his bow: Seeing he that bends his Bow and prepareth Arrows, doth both for himſelf to uſe them, againſt ſuch as he would deſtroy, and not for others of his Army: for they do each one whet his own Sword, and bend his own Bow, and make ready Arrows accordingly. So that if Davids Enemy had been meant, it would rather have been ſayd, Prepare Arrows for the Righteous, wherefore I conclude with the firſt, for which is Baſil. Cald. Paraphr. Ainſw. and many others. For the words, V. 14. All note, that conceiving is before travelling; but here travelling as a Woman in labour goeth firſt: The Reaſon whereof is, that the Wicked are ſo hotly ſet upon the Evill which they maliciouſly intend, that they would be immediatly acting of it if they could tell how, even before they have conceived by what means, but in fine they bring forth but a lye, that is, They find that their own Hearts lyed to them, when they promiſed good Succeſs, but they had evil. For their haſt to perpetrate miſcheiſe is intimated in the word rendred Perſecutors, V. 13. which properly ſignifieth Ardentes, Burning. That is, with a Deſire to do miſcheif, and this admits of no delay. A notable common place, both ſetting forth the Evill caſe of the Wicked, eſpecially attempting any thing againſt the Righteous to move them to Repentance; For thou haſt God for thine Enemy warring againſt thee, whoſe Force thou canſt not reſiſt, and the Greedy Deſire of the Wicked to do Evil, but their Conception ſhall all prove abortive.

Note.

V. 15. 16. Are nothing elſe but an Amplification of this, ſhewing that they ſhall not only be diſappointed, but fall into the Miſcheif deviſed againſt others, the ſame pit and Cave.

PSAL. VIII.

Ainſworth.

TO him that excelleth on Haggithith; Gittith cometh of Gath, ſignifying a Wine Preſſe, and was the name of a City of the Philiſtims, and of a City of the Levites, called Gath-rimmon, Ioſh. 21. 15. Whence Obed-Edom, that dwelt there, was called a Gittite, 2. Sam. 6. The Caldee, to be ſung upon the Harp that came from Gath: the Sept. At the Wine preſſes, Or it was made at the removing of the Ark from the houſe of Obed-edom the Gittite, or it was committed to him to be ſung.

Out

Out of the mouthes of Babes and Sucklings thou haſt ordained or founded ſtrength. David being about to ſtir up himſelf and others to praiſe God for his ſingular Goodneſs towards man above all other Creatures, beginneth with an Admiration of his Excellency, V. 1. And then in ſpeciall, enters into a Contemplation of his Goodneſs towards man. Verſ. 2.

1. In a propheticall manner ſpeaking of that which was to be done by Children many hundreds of yeares after, for the Aſſerting of his infinite mercy in ſending his Son Jeſus Chriſt into the world to ſave us from our ſins. For ſo the Lord applyeth their crying, Hoſanna to the Son of David in the Temple. And thus both Baſil and other ancients, and ſome new writers alſo underſtand it: But Calvin will have it meant of Gods wonderful providing for them, by turning their Mothers bloud into milk, and giving them the faculty to ſuck, thus nouriſhing and preſerving them, which ſufficiently convinceth all Gainſayers of Gods wonderful providence towards the weakeſt, and moſt ſhiftleſs of all Creatures. Wherefore he condemns them as abſurd; who vary the word מפי from the mouth, into בפי By the mouth, and ſuch for fooles as apply it to Childrens beginning firſt to ſpeak; or to the Regenerate; who become as little Children. And for Chriſts applying it to their ſpeaking to his praiſe, he ſaith, it may be drawn to that by way of Argument, A minore ad majus; But I adhere to the common received Interpretation: For this is alledged by Chriſt, as now moſt notably fullfilled, and being thus underſtood it agreeth beſt with the words following, Becauſe of thy Enemies, and to confound the Enemy: For when Hoſanna came out of the mouthes of Children, the Phariſees were indeed confounded, for it is ſaid, They had indignation at it, and bade him rebuke them, but by this Scripture had their mouthes ſtopped, having nothing more to object againſt ſo plain an Evidence of his being ſent of God for Salvation. And the Phariſee is alſo the called Enemy, and Avenger, becauſe taking themſelves to be wronged by Chriſt, they ſought by ſlaying him to be avenged upon him. Some apply it at large to any that wil revenge themſelves, thus as enemies to God, taking his Office out of his hands, but this is forced here: Apply this as Calvin doth, to babes in common in reſpect of their Suſtenance, and it may as well be applyed to the young of Beaſts. To conclude therefore, David was carryed by a Spirit-rapture herein to a thing to come; Which Baſil ſayth, was indeed miraculous, that out of the mouthes of Babes, divine words ſhould ſo come, whereof they had no underſtanding in their Hearts, and therfore he noteth that it is ſayd, From the mouth of Babes, as being made by the Spirit thus to ſpeak, not from babes, as knowing and beleiving and ſpeaking accordingly. Thou haſt ſtabliſhed ſtrength, this is by our Lord rendred, Thou haſt perfected Praiſe: So the Sept. here, which tranſlation Chriſt and his Apoſtles commonly followed, becauſe the Greek was then the moſt common known tongue, and it is according to meaning, which is that God ſtrongly ſetled his praiſe againſt all Oppugners, by that Acclamation of Babes, ſo that all his Enemies could not overthrow it, though they were mad, and barked at it, even as a ſtrong building perfected cannot be overthrown, if ſet up by God, as the Church alſo is ſayd to be, Matth. 16. 16. Matth. 21. 16 Baſil. Calvin.

Thou haſt made him little leſſe then God. But the Sept. render it, Then the Angels. And ſo it is rendred, Heb. 2. 7. And applyed to Chriſt, but Hebr. it is, אלהים God, by which name the Angels alſo may be underſtood, as well as Kings and Judges upon earth: But how it may be applyed to Chriſt, ſeeing it ſeemeth to be ſpoken of men in common, is the queſtion: For that which is here ſaid, is true in Adam, made after Gods Image, and ſet over all other earthly creatures, and although man be ſo baſe, as being made of the duſt of the earth, and vilifying himſelfe yet more by ſin, that it is a wonder, that God ſhould give ſo great reſpect unto him, yet there is not the like reaſon of Chriſt, who was an holy thing from the Womb, and the very Son of God, for which he calleth him ſo, and Verſ. 5.

bids all the Angels to worſhip him, as is ſhewed, Heb. 1. Anſw. To this Baſil ſaith nothing, as not applying it to Chriſt, but to man in common, who, he ſaith, is by ſin made a little leſſe then the Angels, becauſe mortall, but he ſhall live again, and leſſe then himſelfe, becauſe having dominion at the firſt over the Creatures, they willingly obeyed him, but now not without much care, and evil uſing and danger, cauſing his dominion to be full of feare: Calvin anſwereth well, that this is ſpoken, firſt and properly of Adam in the ſtate of innocency, but ſince man being by ſin fallen from that excellency, and ſo little of that glory left unto him, yea being a ſpectacle of miſery, Chriſt cometh, to whom all things ſpoken of, the honour and glory of man do moſt aptly agree; and becauſe in him is reſtored to man what was loſt in the firſt man, for the comfort and benefit of all that by faith are joyned unto him, the congregation of the faithful, who are Chriſt body, may well have it applyed to them, as who do through him ſo abundantly partake of Gods ſpecial favour; for thus the firſt man and the ſecond are compared, 1 Cor. 15. Rom. 5. And the good comming by the ſecond, paralleled with the evil by the firſt. Auguſtine having allegorized much about the winde-preſſes in the title of this Pſalme, upon theſe words, What is man, or the Son of man. The one being called אנוש from miſery, the other בן־אדם The Son of Adam or man. Saith, That by the firſt, is meant man in the ſtate of ſin and corruption, by the other man regenerated by grace, yet called the Son of man, becauſe made more excellent by the change of his minde, and life from old corruption, to newneſſe, and from an old to a new man, whereas he that is ſtil carnal is miſerable; and then aſcending from the body to the head Chriſt, he extols his glory, as being ſet over all things, even the Angels and Heavens, and the whole World, as is elſewhere ſhewed, that he is, Ephe. 1. 21. And then leaving the higheſt things, he deſcendeth to Sheep and Oxen. Whereby we may underſtand, ſanctified men and Preachers, for to Sheep are the faithful often compared, and Preachers to Oxen, 1 Cor. 9. Thou ſhalt not muzzel the mouth of the Oxe that treadeth out the Corn; the Beaſts of the feild ſet forth the voluptuous, that live at large, going in the broad way; The fowles of the aire, The lifted up by pride. The Fiſhes of the Sea, Such as through a covetous deſire of riches, peirce into the lower parts of the earth, as the Fiſhes dive to the bottome of the Sea, and becauſe men paſſe the Seas again and again for riches, he addeth, that paſſeth through the way of the Sea, and to that of diving to the bottome of the waters, may be applyed, 1 Tim. 6. 9. They that will be rich fall into many noiſome luſts, that drown the ſoule in perdition. And hereby ſeem to be ſet forth, the three things of the world, of which it is ſaid, They that love them, the love of the Father is not in them. 1 Ioh. 2. 15. The luſt of the heart being ſenſuality, The luſt of the eyes, covetouſneſſe, to which is added the pride of life, above all theſe Chriſt was ſet, becauſe without all ſin, neither could any of the Devils three temptations which may be referred hereunto, prevail with him. And all theſe, as wel as Sheep and Oxen are in the Church; for which it is ſaid, That into the Ark came all manner of Beaſts, both clean and unclean, and Fowles, and all manner of Fiſhes, good and bad came into the net, as it is in the Parable. All which I have ſet down, as of which good uſe may be made by the diſcreet Reader.

Calvin.

Auguſt.

PSAL. IX.

TO The cheife muſician upon Muth-Labben. Some hereby underſtand, the counter-tener, as Junius, Ainſworth, &c. Some the beginning of a

Pſalmes

Pſalme, according to which the tune ſhould go; Some a muſical inſtrument thus called: Some again becauſe Ben is named, as one of the cheife ſingers, 1 Cron. 15. 14. will have it intituled from him; ſome going to the ſignification of the words, upon the death of Labben; that is, Goliah, ſome upon the death of Nabal, by inverting the words, as Pagninus, Auguſtine, and Baſil, Super occultum Filij. Referring it to the myſtery of the Son of God, by death overcoming all ſpiritual enemies for ever; and this from the Sept. which hath it, Upon the ſecrets of the Son. Theodotion, Of the Son of David. Amongſt ſo great varieties, it is hard to determine, but becauſe it is ſaid, Verſe 5. 6. Thou haſt brought the wicked one to perdition; the deſolations of the enemy are wholly wiped out to perpetuity. There muſt needs be ſome greater deſtruction meant here, then either of Saul, or Abſalom, or other men in Iſrael, enemies to David, or of forrain enemies, Philiſtims, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, &c. Viz. Of ſpirituall enemies, whom Chriſt by his death deſtroyed, Heb. 2. 15. And therefore I with the moſt ancient Expoſitors, refer it to the death of the Son of God, the utter overthrow of all infernall forces being wrought hereby, and here propheſied of, as the ground of greateſt comfort, yet forſomuch as the deſtruction of Davids enemies did not obſcurely typifie this; we may firſt underſtand theſe things literally of them, and then myſtically of ſpiritual enemies ſubdued by Chriſts death.

When mine enemies turned backward they ſtumbled and fell, or periſhed from thy face. Having praiſed God, Verſe 1. 2. Here he ſheweth the cauſe of this his ſo great thankfulneſſe, Viz. His enemies overthrow, not ſome but all, for God in time delivered David from all his enemies, Pſal. 18. 2 Sam. 22. 1. And this he aſcribes to God, by ſaying, From thy face: Teaching us likewiſe to aſcribe all our deliverances to God, and to praiſe him therefore. Verſ. 3. Note.

Thou haſt made my judgment: That is, Haſt righted my cauſe, finding my enemies unjuſtly to have riſen up againſt me, as a Judge ſitting upon the judgment ſeat, judgeth for the wronged, and againſt thoſe that wrong them, acquitting the one and doing execution upon the other: And if we would in miſery look up to God with confidence, we muſt likewiſe take heed that our cauſe be good, and let none that unjuſtly trouble any, think finally to proſper. Verſ. 4.

Thou haſt blotted out their name for ever. And he cals them altogether, The wicked one: Becauſe they all periſh, that be wicked perſecutors and rebels, as one man, and they periſh forever, not only here but hereafter in Hel-fire: Auguſtine applyeth all this myſtically, as is intimated Verſe 1: That it ſhould be applyed, for, I will ſpeake, ſaith he, Of all thy wonderfull works. And what ſo wonderful, as the turning of the ſpiritual enemy backward, whether the Devil, as when he ſaid, Get thee back behinde me Satan. Or the old man, which is turned backward, when he is put off and the new man put on: Thou haſt made the judgment mine, the voice of the Son of God unto the Father, men judged and condemned me as wicked, but thou haſt made it to work on my ſide, which was by thus deſtroying death, and him that had the power of it, the Devil, and raiſing me up to greater glory: Thou haſt rebuked the heathen: That is, After thy reſurrection (Thou O Son of God) giving gifts to thy Apoſtles, didſt ſet them to rebuke the wickedneſſes of the Heathen in all places, whereby The wicked one came to be deſtroyed: That is, Sin reigning before in our mortal bodies, and The name to be blotted out for ever and ever. Becauſe a ſinner being converted, and ſin in him mortified, he is no more called wicked but righteous, being juſtified from all his ſinnes, and that unto eternity, ſet forth by theſe words; Ever and ever: Verſ. 5. Auguſt.

Thou haſt deſtroyed Cities. Here ſome, ſaith Calvin, will have an Irony, as if David had derided his enemies, by ſaying, (O yee mine enemies) yee Verſ. 6. Calvin.

yee have in your thoughts the ruine of me, and of my Houſe and Kingdome, and yee are ſo ſtrong I grant, that none can keep you from deſtroying my Cities, and putting them and me out of all remembrance; but God ſitteth upon the Throne, who judgeth all men in righteouſneſſe and therefore yee ſhall be diſappointed of your intentions, Verſe 7: 8: Some read it interrogatively, yet ironically, (O enemy) are deſtructions come to an end, and Cities ſo waſted, that they can never be repaired, No it ſhall not be ſo, The Lord ſitteth in the Throne: Some again, The Sept: deſolations of the enemy are wholly ended, &c. But he preferreth the firſt; but when I conſider, that the deſtruction of the wicked is the theam in hand, not their deſtroying of others, and that David ſpeaks unto Jehovah, Verſe 4: 5: Thou haſt deſtroyed the heathen, and blotted out their name for ever: I cannot but think that he goes on to amplyfie the ſame further here; Thou haſt deſtroyed Cities: That is, Thou O Lord, For he hath not only judged particular perſons, but whole Cities and Nations for ſin; as Sodom and Gomorrah; &c. And the Nations of Ægypt, and in Canaan: Their memoriall is periſhed with them. Hebrew, המה rendred in Vulgar, Cum ſonitu. So that the ſound hereof ringeth all over the World, and ſo indeed it ſignifieth, athough I deny not but המה ſignifieth them alſo, but then it muſt be reade, the memorial of them, then with a gemination to make the deeper impreſſion: And for the firſt words of the V. (O enemy) deſolations are come to a perpetual end, or are perfected for ever. So that the deſolations of the wicked ſhall never have end; they may better be read ſo, for it begins האוֹיב (O enemy) and there is no need to turn it into a Genitive, but we may take it, as an Apoſtrophe to the wicked enemy, whereby David inſulteth over him upon the premiſes, Verſe 4, 5. And then goeth on in ſpeaking to the Lord again, Thou haſt deſtroyed Cities.

Auguſt: Which Auguſtine proceeding in his allegorical expoſition, underſtands of thoſe perſons, members and faculties that come, as it were, and dwell together to miniſter to ſin, thus making whole Cities, but are deſtroyed when theſe evil luſts and affections by the word are mortified, and the old man is turned into the new.

Verſ. 11. Praiſe the Lord inhabiting Zion. which is ſo ſaid, becauſe his houſe was there, and in oppoſing him to all falſe Gods, to whom houſes were by ſuperſtitious perſons built in other parts, yet he did not ſo inhabite there, but that he fils Heaven and Earth, only providing for the weakneſſe of his people under the Law he would have an houſe amongſt them, for a ſign of his ſpecial preſence, where all ſacrifices muſt be offered to Calvin: him and not elſewhere: From hence Calvin rightly gathers, that this Pſalme was not made for the victory obtained againſt Goliah, becauſe the houſe of God was not then built in Zion, nor the Tabernacle neither.

Verſ. 12. Becauſe inquiring bloods, he remembers them, &c. That is, According to his juſtice, he revengeth the blood of the weak and poor, unjuſtly ſhed

Note. by wicked perſecutors, and tyrannical Judges; ſo that there is cauſe, why wicked enemies raging againſt the innocent ſhould tremble and feare, they may wrong and kill them, but God will inquire into it, and be revenged upon them; and contrariwiſe there is cauſe, why ſuch as ſuffer unjuſtly ſhould be comforted, becauſe God will take their part, although he may ſeem to deſer it.

Verſ. 15. The heathen are ſwallowed up in the pit which they made. That is, The wicked, for they are all before God, as heathens that know not God, and he only is counted one that knows him, who feares and obeys him: And in ſpeaking of their Pit and Net, he intimates, that they do not only perſecute the righteous with open force, but by ſubtle devices, which they can hardly diſcern, as the Hunter or Fowler deales with Beaſts and Fowles to take them, but the comfort is, their Pits and Nets, ſhall be turned to their own ruine by the wiſe God, in compariſon of whoſe wiſedome, the wit of the wiſeſt is but fooliſhneſſe.

God

God is known executing judgment. That is, When he from time to time thus turnes the crafty devices of the wicked enemies of his people againſt themſelves, he is known and cannot but be by all, whoſe eyes are not blinded, acknowledged to be a moſt wiſe and righteous God, to deter them from the way of wickedneſſe, and to incourage in the way of righteouſneſſe. Higgaion Selah, that is, as Ainſworth renders it, Meditation Selah: Shewing that this ought to be ſeriouſly conſidered of: The word Higgaion is again had, Pſal. 92. 3. Being mentioned amongſt other muſical inſtruments, whereby we may gather it to be one of them, for there is, Saltery, Nable, Higgaion, and Harp. The reſidue of the Pſalme Verſe 17, 18, 19, 20. Is nothing elſe, but a confident aſſertion, of the everlaſting deſtruction of the wicked, and of the remembrance wherein God hath the righteous, though afflicted and much impoveriſhed, and a prayer for judgment upon the wicked, under the name of Heathen: And for terrour to be laid upon them, that they might finde themſelves to bee but miſerable, as indeed they are, and ſo bee confounded in reſpect of their own weakneſſe, and abate of their feirceneſs againſt the righteous, as perceiving their ſtrength to be but weakneſs, and able to effect nothing againſt them, but that the worſt will be their own in the end: Hereupon Auguſtine ſaith, To know a mans ſelfe, is the beginning of true humility.

Verſ. 16.

Verſ. 17.
Verſ. 18.
Verſ. 19.
Verſ. 20.

PSAL. X.

BECAUSE this Pſalme is without a title, the Sept. and all Ancients make it a part of Pſal. 9. And ſo put them together into one, making the next the ten, and thence forth reckoning one ſhort of the Hebr. account, whereby this is the ten: And indeed it tendeth almoſt to the ſame, that Pſal. 9. doth, for here is a complaint againſt the wicked, whoſe doom is there ſet down, yet ſo as that their remaining ſtill is intimated in part, becauſe he prayeth againſt them, Verſe 19, 20. After which here followeth a lamentable complaint; Why ſtandeſt thou afar of (O Lord) As if the Lord had not yet fulfilled that, of which he ſpake before touching their deſtruction. Then to move the Lord the more to haſten it, he complaineth, that they perſecuted the poor, Verſe 2. And contemned Gods judgments, as if he were not God, that had threatned them, Verſe 3, 4. And yet injoyed proſperity, which made them more inſolent and ſelfe-confident, Verſe 5. 6. And by this meanes more notoriouſly wicked, Verſe 7, 8, 9, 10. And yet more to ſleight the Lord, Verſe. 11. In the ſecond place, he repeateth his prayer, Verſe 19. of Pſal. 9. Ariſe (O Lord) why do the wicked deſpiſe God. Verſe 12, 13. Adding a motive hereunto, Viz. His ſeeing of all injuries, and the confidence of the poor oppreſſed, that he did both ſee and would be revenged, Verſe 14. 15. Laſtly, He repeateth the propheſies of comfort before uttered, of the deſtruction of the Heathen, and the releif of his poor people, Pſal. 9. 5. 9. 15, 17. ſaying, The heathen are periſhed of his earth, Oh Lord, thou haſt heard the deſire of the poor, to judge the Orphan and the poor. Concluding alſo in a manner as he did Pſal. 9. for there it is, Strike terrour into them, that they might know themſelves to be but miſerable men. Here, That the man out of the earth may not terrifie any more. In all this Pſalme there is nothing difficult, only whereas Verſe 6. it is ſaid, He thinks that he ſhall never be moved from generation to generation. Auguſtine applyeth it to Antichriſt, who like Simon-magus thinks by his evil art, to paſſe from the Generation of men to the Generation of God, being in high account, and from this never to be moved: Then he deſcribes him by his

Verſ. 1.

Verſ. 2.

Verſ. 3. 4.
Verſ. 5. 6.
Verſ. 7. 8 9.
10.
Verſ. 11.
Verſ. 12. 13.
Verſ. 14. 15.
Verſ. 16. 17.
18.

Auguſt.
Verſ. 6. 7.

his mouth, ſpeaking blaſphemies, and by his fraud deceiving the poor, for whom he thus lyeth in wait, for he ſhall deceive if it were poſſible, the very Elect.

PSAL. XI.

To him that excelleth, of David to be ſupplyed thus, a Pſalme of David, and ſo it is ſupplyed in Sept. Tran. It ſeemeth to have been made, when he fled from place to place from Saul. Flee yee to your mountain as a Bird. The Verbs Plural here, ſaith Calvin, is by the Rabbins turned into a Singular, Flee thou. Becauſe they could not ſee otherwiſe, how it ſhould agree to one man, David alone, but there is no ſuch need of going from the word in the Text, becauſe David was not alone, but had many others with him, fleeing together from the preſence of Saul, who ſought to ſlay him, 1 Sam. 23. and 24. Ainſworth is for the double reading, flee thou, that is, David, and yee, that is, His company with him: For the next word, Mountain. It is without any thing prefixed, either To or From. And therefore ſome read it, From your mountain: But forſomuch as they fled into the Wilderneſſe, where there were Mountaines and ſtrong holds, it is moſt probable, that any ſuch place is meant, where they might think to be moſt ſafe, and out of danger; For they are ſometime ſaid to have been on one ſide of the Mountain and Saul on the other, ready to overtake them, but that news coming of the Philiſtims invading the Land, he was inſtantly called off. As a Bird. That is, Being full of feare, for ſo the Bird being in danger to be taken, fleeth from her neaſt, Prov. 27. 8. and 1 Sam. 26. 10. He likeneth Saul to one perſuing a Partridge in the Wilderneſſe.

Calvin.

Verſ. 2. That they may ſhoot in ſecret againſt the upright in heart. That is, Againſt me, how ſecretly ſoever I lurk, for I ſee ſtil, that I am in daily danger of death by Saul and his forces; thus Calvin, but ſome, ſaith he, underſtand it of Sauls practiſes againſt him ſecretly and cunningly, when he ſeemed not to attempt any ſuch thing, which is alſo true, becauſe he formerly for a pretence, offered to make him his Son in law, aiming at his deſtruction: And thus Baſil expounds it of ſubtleties, ſaying, That David here brings in ſome, counſelling him to flee, to whom he anſwereth with indignation, How ſay yee to my ſoule, Flee as a Bird, they bend their bow, &c. Their plottings againſt me are but as Spiders webs, for they are wicked, and in the preparation of the wicked againſt the righteous, there is no force, for nothing is weaker then a treacherous perſon.

Calvin.

Baſil. magnus.

Verſ. 3. For the foundations are razed, and what hath the juſt done? It is a metaphorical ſpeech, whereby David ſheweth, that he was even as a man, whoſe houſe was ready to fall down upon his head, becauſe the foundation thereof is demoliſhed, he had ſometime by one meanes ſaved himſelfe, ſometime by another; but now his caſe began to be deſperate, there being no place left, wherein he might ſave himſelfe any more: And this ſeems to have been, when after many ſhiftings about, he thought, that if he tarried in the Land of Iſrael, he ſhould not be ſafe, but at ſometime or other, fall into the hands of Saul, and therefore he fled into the Philiſtims country; yet for his part, he was juſt and had done nothing worthy of this enmity on Sauls part againſt him, yea he was juſtified out of Sauls own mouth, when he ſpared him in the Cave, and another time, when he took away a ſpare and a water-pot ſtanding by him, when he could as eaſily have taken away his life, whereupon he covenanted to ſuffer him thence-forth to live in peace, but kept no touch; and this breach of his covenant, is not amiſſe thought by ſome to be pointed at alſo, as Calvin ſaith, when he ſpeakes of the foundations razed: But whereas he

1 Sam. 27. 1.

1 Sam. 26. 21.

Calvin.

he ſaith, Some expound theſe foundaions of the ſnares, which his enemies laid for him, or their preparations, by reaſon of which they made juſt account that he ſhould not eſcape, it is frivolous and altogether diſagreeable to the context, becauſe it is added, What hath the juſt done? Auguſtine turneth all this into an allegory thus, I truſt in God, ſaith he, that holds the true faith, How ſay yee then, that I ſhould flee to my Mountain. That is, Yee Hereticks, who are daily ſeeking to draw the ſimple to your parts, how dare yee ſay, if yee will injoy Chriſt, yee muſt come to us, who are a Church conſiſting of none but holy perſons, but yee live a mixt multitude, and communicate together good and bad: For ſo Donatus taught, that they, that would have part in Chriſt, muſt come out of ſuch mixt Congregations, and joyne themſelves with the pure and holy, and not reſt in the Baptiſme received from the wicked, but be baptized again by the holy: And Chriſt is aptly ſet forth by a Mountain, for the Church built upon him, is ſaid to be like a City ſet upon an Hill, and he is a ſtone out of a Mountain, growing ſo, as that he filleth the whole Earth; and Iſa. 2. We read of a Mountain lifted up higher then all Mountaines: But I truſt in God, and ſo am already upon this Mountain; yee by pride make Mountaines of your ſelves. The wicked bend their bow, &c. Though they boaſt of their holineſſe, they are wicked, becauſe full of contentions and violence. By their bow he meaneth, their beating of their braines, and by their arrows, places of Scripture carnally underſtood, theſe they ſhoot and that very dangerouſly, when they deceive the ſimple hereby, to the wounding of them, as it were, with venomed arrows, and this is done in ſecret, in the moon-light, becauſe in Conventicles, to which they are drawn, to the poiſoning and deſtroying of their ſoules: Thus Auguſtine moſt aptly expreſſing the practiſes of theſe times, that all, who are indeed upright hearted, may take heed of ſuch. Auguſt.

The Lord in his holy habitation, the Lord his throne in Heaven, &c. Herein lay Davids comfort, and muſt lye the comfort of every one wrongfully perſecuted, that God beholds it, who approves the righteous, but hates the wicked, Verſe 5. He is not in Heaven, lying in Bed, as it were, as Epecurus taught, neglecting things below, but in his Throne as a Judge, hearing and marking mens cauſes, and ready to give judgment and to do execution accordingly. Verſ. 4.

He ſhall rain upon the wicked, ſnares, fire and brimſtone. Here he ſhews the end of Gods ſitting in his Throne in Heaven. Viz. Not only to judge of every one, but to reward them according to their deſerts, the wicked with his terrible judgments, fire and brimſtone, wherein it is alluded to Sodom, before which he putteth ſnares, leaſt any ſhould think to eſcape; as if he had ſaid, They ſhall be taken, as by ſnares, whetherſoever they flee, and held to indure his judgments: And he ſpeaks of raining ſnares, to ſhew the ſuddenneſſe thereof; as men going abroad in faire weather, are ſuddenly ſometimes drenched with a great rain falling upon them: By theſe metaphors, ſaith Baſil, are ſet forth inevitable condemnation, the abundance of puniſhment, the readineſſe of the judgment, and the power of deſtroying the firſt being ſet forth by ſnares, the ſecond in tempeſts, the third in winds, the fourth in fire. Verſ. 6. Baſil. Condemnationem inevitabilem ſupplicij abundantiam, Plagæ promptitudinem, & vim conſumend per hæc ſignificavit.

PSAL. XII.

TO him that excelleth on the eighth. The Cald. upon an inſtrument of eight ſtrings, Auguſtine as upon the title of the ſixt, by the eighth underſtands, the day of judgment. I ſubſcribe to the Cald. This Pſalme is thought by Calvin to have been made, when Saul ſought by fraud to circumvent David, and to deſtroy him, willing his men to ſpeake him Calvin.

faire, that he might be the more ſecure, which I think not improbable; herein we are taught by Davids example, when corruption prevails generally amongſt all men, to flee to God by prayer, to help it, being aſſured, that if we do thus, we that ſuffer by them, and know not how to eſcape their frauds and inſolencies, ſhall by Gods help be preſerved; and he brings in God promiſing this, aſſimulating his word of promiſe to ſilver tryed ſeven times in the fire, that is, The moſt pure, having in it no deceit or droſs of falſity, ſo that we may ſafely rely upon it, in all things. V. 2. With a double heart, is Hebrew, An heart and an heart.

PSAL. XIII.

THIS Pſalme, as the twelve, tends to ſhew in what ſtreights David was by reaſon of his enemies, making him to preſs the Lord by his prayers, for helpe without delay, and yet when his caſe ſeemed to be moſt deſperate, his faith quailed not, whereas Verſe 1. he ſaith, Lord, how long wilt thou forget me. It is not meant, that there is any forgetfulneſs in God of his Servants, but in their apprehenſion, when being in diſtreſs and praying, they are not yet delivered.

Verſ. 1.

Verſ. 2. How long ſhall I take counſels in my ſoule, anxiety is in my heart. He ſpeakes after the manner of a man, being in danger daily, thinking therefore ſometime upon one meanes of eſcaping, and ſometime upon another, being yet anxious of the event, which way ſoever he taketh.

Verſ. 3. Lighten mine eyes leaſt I ſleep the death. That is, The ſleep that is death, for ſo death is called, 1 Theſ. 4. John 11. And he prayeth, that his eyes may be lightned, meaning, that he might ſoon have comfort, for want of which he fainted now, even as a dying man, his eyes through faintneſs waxing dim: As it is ſaid of Sauls men, purſuing the Philiſtims, when they were adjured to go on without eating, they fainted, and Jonathan taſting a little honey, ſaid, That his eyes were inlightned thereby, 1 Sam. 14. 29.

Verſ. 5. I will ſing to the Lord, becauſe he hath dealt bountifully with me. David in his greateſt danger beleived ſo, and by faith aſſured himſelfe of deliverance, that he rejoyced and ſung, as Paul and Silas in Priſon, and as Peter ſaith, Rom. 5. 1. Being juſtified by faith we have peace with God, and joy in tribulation. And to this meaſure of faith muſt we ſtrive to attain, which may make comforts and ſalvation to come preſent unto us, and fil us with joy therefore; As Abraham ſaw Chriſts day and rejoyced. The word rendred Dealt bountifully. By Calvin. Bene, beneficiall, is by ſome rendred, Recompenced me, inferring merit in him preceding, but this is frivolous and againſt the evidence of Scripture; as where it is ſaid, Who hath given unto him to be recompenced, &c. And the word, ſaith Calvin, ſignifieth nothing but to be very beneficial.

Act. 16.

Note.

Joh. 8.

PSAL. XIV.

Verſ. 1. Calvin. THE fool hath ſaid in his heart, there is no God. This Pſalme, ſaith Calvin, is by the Rabbins expounded, as prophetical, ſetting forth the ſufferings of his people Iſrael by the Gentiles, at and after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans, ſo that they make them the fools, denying God in their hearts, and eating up his people, &c. But he underſtands it of Saul and his people, ſhewing by their practiſes againſt David, whom the Lord had anointed, that they thought there was no God to take care care of him, and to provide that he might come to the dignity, to which God had appointed him, and thus it is expounded of the Jews, Rom. 3. 10, 11. &c. 19. Auguſtine whom I rather ſubſcribe to herein, underſtands it both of Gentiles and Jews, and ſo indeed it is applyed by Paul, Rom. 3. 9, 10. Yet the firſt words are expounded by him only of the Gentiles, the next, God looked upon the Sons of men; of the Jews, The fool hath ſaid in his heart. For none even of the Philoſophers, durſt deny that there is a God, but in their thoughts many do, even all the workers of iniquity, who live licentiouſly, and are enemies to the godly, and yet think in the end to go ſcot-free; for this is in effect to ſay in his heart, that there is no God, as the next words ſhew, and likewiſe to take no care to do good works, as thinking the doing thereof but loſt labour; to expreſs which he addeth, They are corrupt and do no good. Auguſt.

The Lord looked down from Heaven upon the Sons of men. That is, ſaith Auguſtine, Upon the Jews, called Sons of men for honours ſake, in reſpect of the Gentiles, who were in times paſt but as bruit Beaſts to themward, having no knowledge of the true God; and by the next words, They are all corrupt, Both Jews and Gentiles, and he is ſaid to look down from Heaven, not as if he did not alwaies behold all men in all their doings, but this is ſpoken of him to prove this univerſal corruption by Gods own Teſtimony, who certifieth his holy Prophets, that it is thus, to the end that they may declare it: And by ſaying thus, he alſo ſeeks to ſtirr us up to an awful regard of the divine Majeſty, making us to feare to ſin, for we are in the eye of the Judge continually. And what doth the Lord look upon us; For whether there be any that underſtands and ſeeks after God. Whereby is intimated, That as fooliſhneſs before ſpoken againſt, is the ground of all wickedneſs, ſo knowledge is the ground of goodneſs, the underſtanding muſt be inlightned in the knowledge of God, and then we are in the way of doing good, but not otherwiſe: And that we might know, who are thus inlightned. Calvin noteth well, that it is added, and Seek after God. For he hath no true wiſedome, that doth not with all earneſtneſs ſeek unto God by prayer from time to time. Verſ. 2. Calvin. Note.

They are corrupt, Or become rotten or ſtinking, for ſuch the wicked are before God, and ſuch he ſheweth here, were the Jews as well as the Gentiles; and here the Vulgar Latine, betwixt this and the next Verſe, addeth, Their throat is an open ſepulcher, &c. From Pſal. 5. 9. Pſal. 10. 7. Pſal. 140. 3. Iſa. 59. 7. But theſe words are not here Hebrew, but immediatly it follows; Do not all the workers of iniquity know, eating up my people as they eat bread. That is, ſaith Auguſtine, When being ſet over a people to govern them well, intend not this, but taking meanes from them, live deliciouſly and in pleaſure; and ſuch are ſaid not to call upon God, although they pray, becauſe their affections are towards ſin Calvin, as Auguſtine underſtands this, as ſpoken againſt Paſtours and Rulers amongſt the Jews, who knew, and yet dared to do thus wickedly, perſecuting and deſtroying, not Infidels, which yet were not tollerable, but Gods one people, which was moſt abominable: For the phraſe of eating up, there is a like to it, Micah 3. 1. Yee pul off the skin, and teare the fleſh from the bones. And the ground of this and all other wickedneſs followeth, They call not upon God, That is, They are not intent to his worſhip and ſervice, part being put for the whole. Verſ. 3. Verſ 4 Auguſt: Calvin:

There they feare a feare. That is, ſaith Calvin, Where they were moſt ſecure, judgment to their terrour came ſuddenly upon them: Some, becauſe fearing is threatned to the wicked, at the ſhaking of a leafe, Deut. 28. Expound this likewiſe, as if a feareful and trembling diſpoſition were meant, that ſhould often come upon them, filling their life with anxiety and doubtfulneſs; to expreſs which the Vulgar hath it, There were they taken with feare, where no feare was. And this Auguſtine followeth, Verſ. 5.

applying it to the Jews, fearing the loſſe of their Kingdome by the Romans, but not fearing the loſs of the Kingdom of Heaven, which they ought to have feared and not the other. For God is in the Generation of the juſt: That is, To take their part againſt their wicked Oppreſſors, by bringing fearfull Deſtruction upon them, according to the former words, דור rendred Generation, here ſignifieth alſo Seculum, for ever, according to which ſome take it, and ſo give this for the meaning, God is with the juſt alwayes, but forſomuch as the words being ſo rendred, muſt go thus, God for ever juſt. That Senſe cannot ſtand out the firſt, and this is moſt comfortable.

Verſ. 6. Ye reproach the Counſell of the poor, becauſe the LORD is his truſt. That is, Deriding them for their reſting upon God for help, when they are deſtreſſed, and yet no help cometh: For in this caſe prophane men taunt and deride the faithfull as fooliſh, and vain in their hopes, as Sannecherib the Jews, and they Chriſt hanging upon the Croſſe.

Verſ. 7. Who ſhall give ſalvation to Iſrael out of Zion. After complaints againſt the Wicked, he falls to prayer again; not as if he were uncertain, who ſhould ſave Iſrael, for his adding Out of Zion, ſheweth, that he looked up to the true God whoſe Ark was in Zion, towards which they were to pray, as the place, from whence God promiſed to manifeſt his power when his people called there upon him. Who ſhall give? Then, is as much as if he had ſayd, Oh that thou wouldſt Lord give Salvation, whoſe ſeat is in the Ark between the Cherubims, for from thee we expect and hope for it, and from none other. But if this Pſalm were written in Sauls time, how could he ſpeak of Zion where the Ark then was not, but in Kireathjearim? Anſw. He ſpeaks Prophetically of that which ſhould be, as if it had then been, neither is it neceſsary to aſſent that this was made in Sauls time, but afterwards as common to all times, wherein there be many ſuch fooles, who do what they luſt againſt the Righteous, and deride them for their Piety towards God, as thinking that none ſhall have any benefit by ſeeking to him, as is expreſſed, Job 21. 15. Againſt ſuch this is a common place of Comfort, when they prevail moſt; For God who is for the Juſt, is ready bent to terrify and confound them, yea he will give Salvation not to ſome few only, but to all his Iſrael in his good time; that is, Not only temporall, but Eternall Deliverance by Chriſt; whom I doubt not but he here pointeth at, for the comfort of the whole Church of God in all times and Ages. Thus alſo Auguſt. Auguſt. Who ſhall give Salvation, but he whom ye have deſpiſed and derided, that was before ſpoken of: Ye have mocked at the counſel of the Poor: He came in the form of a poor Servant, and therefore yee ſcorned him, but he ſhall be the Salvation of Iſrael. And that he is meant, appears more by the words added, Out of Zion, for it is written, The Redeemer ſhall come out of Zion. Rom. 11. 26. And this is called in the next words, a turning of the captivity of Gods people, for accordingly it is ſayd, Thou haſt led captivity captive, Pſa. 68. 18. which is applyed to Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. 8. And for this Jacob ſhall rejoyce, and Iſrael ſhall be glad, one and the ſame Church of God, the Company of the Faithfull being meant by both theſe names.

PSAL. XV.

HERE becauſe there are many Hypocrites in the Church, David deſcribes the true Worſhipper of God by his upright Heartedneſſe, juſt Dealing, ſpeaking the Truth, and doing Good, and none Evill to any.

Verſ. 1. Who ſhall dwell in thy Tabernacle? That is, Who is by the Lord counted truly religious; The Tabernacle, to which ſuch reſorted to ſacrifice, being men-mentioned, and not the Temple; becauſe it was not yet built. And he asketh the Lord, ſayth Calvin, becauſe men are unſound and unfit to judge.

He that walks uprightly and doth juſtice, &c, He deſcribes the true Godly man by righteous dealing, and Duties of the ſecond Table, omitting to ſpeak of the Duties required in the firſt, not that any man can be ſuch, who neglects thoſe Duties; but becauſe a multitude of men frequented the Tabernacle, and could not be taxed for their defects this way, who therfore thought themſelves to be holy and acceptable to God: He ſingleth out thoſe ſigns that were moſt neceſſary to be ſpoken of, which were but in a very few: And the ſame was the caſe of the Jews, in the time of other Prophets, and of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, which made both him and them to preſs upon them the Commandements of the ſecond Table, alſo ſaying ſometimes nothing of the firſt, Iſa. 1. Jer. 5. Matth. 19. 18. Rom. 2. That ſpeaks the Truth in his heart, not from his heart, ſayth Calvin, But in his heart, which although it may ſeem an hard kind of ſpeaking, yet it ſerveth beſt to expreſs Davids meaning; for he notes ſuch a kind of conſent and Symphony of the Heart and Tongue that the ſpeech might be a lively Image of the affection lying hid in the Heart. So that he ſpeaks the Truth in his Heart, who ſpeaks in his Heart, what he ſayth with his tongue, and not as deceitfull perſons, who ſpeak fair with the Tongue, but in their Hearts think otherwiſe; Enmity and Injuſtice lurking there, when they ſalute the moſt kindly, and proteſt moſt ſeriouſly, that it is true which they ſay; as is before complained, Pſal. 12. 1.

Verſ. 2.

Calvin. Talem cordis & linguæ conſenſum et Symphoniam notat, ut ſermo ſint viva latentis affectus imago.

That ſlandreth not his Neighbour: The word rendred Slandereth, as Ainſworth noteth, ſignifieth going about with Tales and ſlanders, and therefore רגל ſignifieth a foot, and this is ſtrictly forbidden, Levit. 19.16. as a bloudy ſin.

Verſ. 3.

A vile perſon is rejected in his Eyes. Some ſayth Calvin, underſtand theſe words, as if the lowlineſs of the righteous in their own eys, were here meant; ſo the Cald. He that is deſpiſed in his own Eyes, and contemned. And this the Hebr. will bear alſo, but becauſe the next words of his honoring of them that feare the Lord are oppoſed to theſe, it ſtands with better Reaſon to render them as before, for the Wicked who is the vile perſon, is contemptible in the Eyes of the Righteous, although full of Riches and worldly Honour, and ſuch as fear God, although poor and deſpicable for wordly wants, moſt honorable. So Eliſha deſpiſed Jehoram the King, 2 Kin. 3. Jam. 2. The poor having faith are preferred before the rich Infidell, whereof Jerom yeilds this reaſon, The Wicked rich man bears the image of the world, the poor Godly man the Image of Chriſt: And who doubts whether Chriſt be to be preferred before the Word? yet Calvin makes a queſtion here whether due honour is not to be given to the rich being in authority, although wicked, & anſwereth affirmatively, as indeed it muſt needs be anſwered, it being a thing due to them by the Law of God; For Caſar muſt have The things of Caſa, and give to every one his due; honour to whom honour: And it is ſayd, Obey God, and honour the King. And this in reference to him, who hath thus exalted him and put his own title of God upon him, and others in Authority under him to judge the People. For if ſuch might be deſpiſed, becauſe wicked, the foundation of their power would be ſhaken, and conſequently the foundation of the Common-wealth, of which the King having his due honour, and not being deſpiſed by the People, is the cheif corner ſtone, as we have lately by lamentable Experience been taught in this Kingdome: A vile perſon then is deſpiſed in the Eyes of the Righteous, Salvo cuique loci ſui honore, the perſons of the higher powers may not be deſpiſed, but their vices, and although not every one, yet the Prophet of the Lord ought to ſpeak freely againſt them, and thus Eliſha did, and Elyah, and Samuel to Saul, being in their place, even above the higheſt to reprove, & to debaſe them for their vices for their

Verſ. 4.

Hieron. In ſat. 2. Dives impius gerit imaginem mundi, Pauper pius Imaginem Chriſti. Matth. 22. Rom. 3. 6. Pſal. 82.

their humiliation, not to make them contemptible to the People; before whom to honour even Saul Samuel at his Entreaty returned. And every one ought ſo to deſpiſe the vices in them, as not to flatter them therein, nor to follow them for any fear or favour: And thus to underſtand theſe words of deſpiſing the Wicked is more agreeable to the Context, the Scope whereof is to ſet forth the Righteous by their behaviour towards others, and not by that which they are in themſelves: So that although every righteous perſon is vile in his own Eys, yet that is not here ſpoken of as being no part of Davids propoſition in this place, That ſweareth to evill, and changeth not: Sept. that ſweareth to a neighbour, for the Word רעה ſignifying Evil, when it cometh of רוע otherwiſe a freind, and one together with whom a man liveth, may be taken both ways, and for a neighbour or freind it is taken, Prov. 6. 24. If it be taken for Evill, it is to be underſtood of dammage to himſelf, he having been by overſight or fraud drawn to ſwear that which afterwards he ſeeth will be to his loſs or hurt, becauſe by performing it, Evill will redound unto him, yet the Conſcience of his Oath worketh with him ſo, that he changeth not, but doth as he hath ſworn.

1 Sam. 15.

Calvin. Here Calvin maketh two queſtions.

Firſt, Whether a man compelled by a Theif upon the High-Way to ſwear not to diſcover him, but to meet him at ſuch a place, and to deliver to him ſuch a ſum of Money, be bound to do it: And anſwereth no, for this would redound to Evill, not only to himſelf, but to the Common-Wealth, and it is Evill to himſelf, to which when a man hath ſworn he changeth not, but not to others. For in this caſe, as he ſinned in ſwearing, through fear to do that which is unlawfull, Viz. To give maintenance to a common Enemy to the State, ſo he ſhould add another ſin of doing unlawfully: And therefore he muſt repent; and God who forgiveth all ſins to the Penitent, to forgive him. This is not yet to be extended to all inforced Oathes, if they be inforced by ſuch as have Authority: For ſuch are to be kept being about things in their own nature indifferent; as that Oath put upon the People, 1 Sam. 14. Not to eat ought that day, for when it was broken by Jonathan unwittingly, God was angry, and being ſought unto would give no anſwer, till the breaker of the Oath was found out. But if it be to do Evill, whoſoever adjures thee thou art not bound to keep it, for the reaſon before going; For David having ſworn againſt Nabal in ſuch a caſe, kept it not, and bleſſed God, that he was turned from keeping it.

1 Sam. 25.

Calvins other queſtion is, Whether a man being drawn by Deceit to ſwear to his own Dammage, be bound to keep it? Anſw. Yes, and of this we have a Ground in Joſhua making Oath to the Gibeonites, that deceived him, yet not daring to break it, and when Saul many ages after out of blind Zeal brake it, a judgment of a three years Famine followed, 2 Sam. 23. To theſe another queſtion may be added, Whether a man be not bound as well by a bare promiſe, as by an Oath? Anſw. He is bound, but not ſo ſtrongly, only if this promiſe were made adviſedly, and he were not deceived, or the perſon to whom, prove not unworthy, he is ſo bound, that he ſins and makes himſelf guilty of lying, that keeps it not, but otherwiſe he is guiltleſs, and no Law can take hold upon him.

Ioſh. 9.

Verſ. 5 Calvin. That putteth not his money to uſury. Here by Uſury Calvin underſtandeth any Injurious way of Gain by the loſs of another, inforced by neceſſity to hire any thing of him for a Rent. And he ſayth, that there needs not much diſpute about this ſin; The word נשו Biting, expreſſing it ſuffiicientty to be oppreſſors in our letting of mony or any other thing, for thus they are bitten and devoured that need help from their rich Neighbours: They labouring each one in his Calling, grow poorer and poorer, and the Lender without Labour, richer and richer, and that out of their Loſſes: Therefore againſt this the Rule given by Chriſt, is by every one that hath mony or monyes worth to lend or let, to be followed, As yee would that men ſhould do unto you, ſo do yee unto them. Of Uſury, I have ſayd ſo much already upon Exod. 22. that I ſhal not need here to ſay any more: For the next words, And receives not a gift againſt the Innocent, This is ſpoken firſt, and cheifly of Judges taking Bribes, and therefore judging for thoſe whoſe cauſe is evill, and againſt him whoſe cauſe is good, whom they ought to give Sentence for, but it alſo extends to Lawyers, that take fees or hire; for ſo the word ſignifieth alſo to plead againſt the Innocent, and to any that for Gifts take part againſt them.

unto

PSAL. XVI.

Michtam of David. מכתם ſignifieth fine Gold, and therefore Michtam being put for the title of this, ſheweth that it is a Golden or moſt precious Pſalm: ſee the like Title, Pſa. 56. &c. to Pſa. 60. Othersas Calvin hath it, ſay, it is the beginning of a Verſe, ſome a kind of modulation, to which he aſſenteth, I reſt in the firſt.

This Pſalm is ſpoken in the perſon of Chriſt, as Auguſt. ſayth, and is made manifeſt by the laſt words, V. 10. Thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell. Which Peter ſheweth to be ſpoken of Chriſt, Act. 2. 27. in reſpect of his humane nature; ſo Baſil and Ainſworth, and others, although Calvin and ſome following him expound it, as ſpoken of David himſelf. Auguſt.

Preſerve me (O God) for I hope for ſafety in thee: So it is ſayd, that Chriſt In the dayes of his fleſh cryed to him that was able to ſave him. The man Chriſt cryed and was ſaved, and the ſame was God, to whom he cryed one with the Father, and therefore together with the Father called upon and delivering him. Verſ. 1. Or I truſt in thee. Heb. 5. 7. Baſil.

Thou haſt ſayd to the Lord, my good not unto thee, Sept. Of my Goods thou haſt no need, but others better, my goodneſs or Juſtice extendeth not to thee; for if a man be wiſe or juſt, he is wiſe for himſelf, and even by the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, God is not benefited, for he needs it not, who is Juſtice it ſelf. The Cald. reads it, My Good is not given but of thee. Hebr. it is without a Verb, My Goodneſſe not to thee: For the firſt words of this Verſe, Chriſt is brought in ſpeaking to himſelf thus, Thou haſt ſayd to the Lord. And that which is ſpoken here in the perſon of Chriſt, is alſo ſpoken as by David and every other faithfull perſon, who ſayth thus in his heart unto God, that no Good can redound from him to God; and therefore cannot be meritorious at his hands, that he ſhould be bound to make him retribution therefore, For who hath given vnto him firſt, that he ſhould recompence him; for of him, for him, and through him, are all things, Rom. 11. 35. Although out of his Grace and mercy he will undoubtedly, Rom. 2. 7. That Chriſt ſpeaking here is not to be conſidered apart from the Faithfull, will eaſily appear, if we look but at the Union which is betwixt Chriſt and the Faithfull, they in him, and he in them. Verſ. 2. Prov. 9. 12. Job. 35. 7. Note.

To the ſaints which are on the Earth they, the excellent, all my delight in them. Thus Hebr. Verbatim, the word rendred They, being commonly put for Are; the meaning is, That Chriſts Good, that is, His Juſtice extends to the Faithfull whom he calleth Saints, becauſe being juſtified by Faith, they purge themſelves, as is ſayd, 1 Joh. 3. 4. And it muſt needs be that the truly faithfull are Saints, becauſe Faith hath this inſeperable adjunct to purify the Heart, Act. 15. 9. And this Sanctification making them Saints, cometh from Chriſt, according to that, Joh. 17. 19. I ſanctifie my ſelf for their ſakes, that they alſo may be ſanctified by the truth, and the Saints are ſayd to be exellent or noble, becauſe all unſanctified ones, are vile & baſe in compariſon of them, as the fleſhly and earthly in compariſon of the Spiritual and Hevenly. All my Verſ. 3.

delight in them; therefore the Church is called Hephzi-bah, Eſa. 62. 4. according to the word here uſed: and this ſhould move us to turn Saints; for who would not be excellent and honorable, and ſuch as are the Lords delight and not baſe and vile before God? It is not Wealth and worldly honour or wiſdome that brings to this, but only the Grace of Sanctification.

Note.

Verſ. 4. They ſhall multiply their idolls or ſorrowes, afterwards they haſtned. Thus Hebr. and Vulg. Lat. Their ſorrowes, as indeed the word עַצְּבוֹתָם properly ſignifieth, but it is put alſo for Idolls, the ſerving whereof cauſeth unto men many ſorrows. Auguſt. expounds it of the Saints before ſpoken of, their ſorrows or infirmities being multiplyed, they haſten to Chriſt to be healed, and reading the next words, I will not gather together their conventicles of blouds, That is, Their carnall Conventicles, being made propitious by the bloud of Cattel: I will not remember them with my lips, but they ſhall be forgotten with a ſpirituall change, they being no more called ſinners or Enemies, but Saints, Freinds, and Brethren. Thus Auguſt. and Baſil expounds it of ſuffering by Perſecutors, from which the Faithfull are ſoon delivered; again, the Lord providing for their deſtruction, ſo as that their names are no more remembred in our New Tranſlat. Their Sorrows ſhall be multiplied that haſten after another God, their drink offerings of bloud I will not offer, &c. And it is commonly expounded by ours, of the Godly care, which the true people of God have to keep themſelves from being any way guilty of Idolatry, by refraining even from any outward Conformity to Idolaters, or naming them, as is injoyned, Exod. 23. 13. Joſh. 23. 7. That is, as Gods. To this Expoſition I would willingly aſſent, but that the words מהרו אחר cannot well bear this ſenſe, They haſten after another God, but, Afterwards they haſten, And becauſe the Tranſlation followed by Auguſt. and Baſil. I will not gather their Convinticles of Bloud, hath no Ground in Heb. for the words ſignifie, Offering drink Offerings of Bloud, I cannot ſubſcribe to any of their Interpretations neither; but rather I conceive it to be here meant, that even the Saints in times paſt, multiplyed Idols and falſe Gods to themſelves, but the light of the Goſpell coming, they haſtned to Chriſt, leaving Idolls, and ſaying, their drink offerings of bloud, I will no more offer or mention their names in praying: but the name of the true God only; for which he addeth, V. 5. The Lord is the part of my portion, and of my Cup. This being the voice of every Saint, and as for Drink Offerings of Blond before ſpoken of, their offering of bloud in ſtead of Wine for drink offerings, and that of their Children to Molock is meant. In ſaying, The Lord is the part &c. He alludeth to the parting of the Land of Canaan amongſt the Iſraelites by Lot, and to the ſame Effect he ſayth, V. 6. The lines are fallen to me in pleaſant places, I have a fair inheritance, Becauſe when they parted that land, they did it by meaſure with lines. He meaneth that the Lord is every Saints part, in which he reſteth fully ſatisfied, as they were to be with their parts in that pleaſant land, and this is when a man reſteth in the will of God, whether it be in reſpect of divine Worſhip and faith, giving himſelf wholly over to be guided by his word in all things, and not beleiving any thing divers therefrom, or in reſpect of Liveiyhood in this world, be it great or ſmall, in proſperity or adverſity. And three ſimilitudes are uſed.

Verſ. 5.

Verſ. 6.

1. of Part, Portion, or Lot.

Calvin.

Secondly, Of a cup denoting the increaſe for maintenance ariſing herefrom.

Thirdly, Of an Inheritance denoting ſtability, ſo that he cannot be deprived of it again for ever: And ſuch ought the Lord to be to every one of us, and he, to whom he is not, is ready to be carryed away to ſuperſtitions, and divers errours and evill ways, to the deſtruction of the Soul. Auguſt. expounding it of Chriſt, ſayth, That he ſpeaks of himſelf, together with his Church, which is one with him, even his Body. The Lord is the Churches part, the World with the tranſitory things thereof, the part of worldling

Auguſt.

the

the Lord is their cup, the worldlings is the cup of vain pleaſures, and he reſtores not Chriſt but them to their Inheritance which they had loſt, but he had never loſt it.

I will bleſſe the Lord, who counſelleth me; even in the nights my reines inſtruct me. Here all wiſedome to cleave to God, and to make him our portion is acknowledged to come from God, and by his reines inſtructing him, he meaneth inward inſpirations from God, who is the ſearcher of the heart and tryer of the reins: And in ſaying nights in the Plural number, he intimateth a continual ſupply of grace, that we ſtand in need of, time after time, or elſe we cannot ſtand, which confutes them that aſcribe power to a mans own will, to chooſe the good, whereas indeed it cometh of grace, that we are ſo well inſtructed. Verſ. 7. Calvin.

Auguſtine applying it to Chriſt, by reins underſtands his inferiour parts; that is, his Humanity, and by the night the night of death, to which he was taught to be ſubject as he was man: Baſil expounds it of the darkneſs of temptation about the time of his death: And forſomuch as he is ſaid to have learned obedience by that which he ſuffered, Heb. 5. 8. I incline to Auguſtine, as moſt probably applying it to Chriſt, as before, and the rather becauſe he ſpeaks ſoon after, of his fleſhes not being ſuffered to ſee corruption, Verſe 9, 10. Which can agree to none other but to Chriſt. Auguſt.

Therefore my heart rejoiceth, and my glory is glad. For glory here is commonly tongue put, as being meant, becauſe it is the inſtrument of glorifying God, ſee Pſal. 30. 12: Pſal. 57. 9. Gen. 49. 6. And the Vulgar Lat. rendring it tongue alſo, is by Auguſtine expounded of the tongues uttering Gods praiſes, for the joy conceived in the heart, but the word Hebrew is, כבד Cheboth, glory. The meaning of both theſe Verſes is, That Chriſt ſo aſſuredly truſted in God, that after his ſuffering death, he ſhould be raiſed again, and aſcend up into Heaven, that in looking at this he had great joy, notwithſtanding his greivous ſufferings, knowing, that his body, meant by his fleſh in the next words, ſhould not be left long in the grave to be corrupted, but that he ſhould riſe again the third day, as followeth, V. 10. Verſ. 9.

For thou wilt not leave my ſoule in the ſepulcher, nor ſuffer thy holy one to ſee corruption. Calvin who expounds all this Pſalme of David, ſaith, That by theſe words he meaneth, that the Lord would deliver him from everlaſting deſtruction, and from temporany alſo by the hand of his enemies, for he was confident, that the Lord would ſtand ſo on his ſide, that they ſhould never have power to ſlay him, and though he muſt one day dye, yet he ſhould not dye eternally, but finally injoy everlaſting life: For this had been but poor comfort, that he ſhould be delivered from the danger of bodily death, ſeeing who ſo is thus delivered, muſt after a ſhort time dye, but herein is comfort indeed, to be ſaved from everlaſting deſtruction, and to have joy and pleaſures in the Kingdome of Heaven for evermore, as Verſe 11. For herein David comforted himſelfe, that by not leaving his Soule in the Sepulcher, he meaneth, His not giving him over to deſtruction, appeareth by the like ſpeech, Pſal. 49. 16. The Lord will redeem my ſoule from the hand of the Sepulcher. Whereas Act. 2. 30. This not leaving of his Soule in the Grave, is applyed by Peter unto Chriſt, he ſaith, That David herein looked unto Chriſt indeed, as at whoſe riſing again the third day, he pointed in theſe words, but becauſe Chriſt is our head, and we his members, and what is done to the head ſhall aſſuredly be done to the members, he was confident hereupon touching his own deliverance from corruption alſo, and raiſing up out of the Grave to everlaſting life: But Peter doth not only apply it to Chriſt, but denyeth it to have been fulfilled in David, who ſaw corruption, and lay in his Sepulcher in his duſt till that day, wherefore although David took comfort in ſpeaking before of this, and Verſ. 10. Calvin. Act. 13. 35.

it may be by every faithful perſon applyed to himſelfe, to his unſpeakable comfort, that in Gods good time, his body ſhall alſo be raiſed again, and be delivered from corruption, wherein it ſo long lay, yet it muſt needs be acknowledged to be a propheſie touching Chriſt properly, and applycable to David and to other faithful perſons, only by reaſon of their neer relation to him, as for whom and not for himſelfe only he roſe again from the dead, the corrupting of his fleſh by lying longer there being thus prevented, and though it be otherwiſe with us his members, who lye in the Grave and are corrupted, yea the time ſhall come, when we ſhall be raiſed to life alſo and ſee it no more, but injoy pleaſures at Gods right hand for ever, as followeth Verſe 11. And thus others both ancient and modern generally underſtand it: But for the word, Soule, and Grave, or Hell. Hebr. שְׁאוֹל it being of large extent, as being commonly oppoſed to Heaven above, it is generally put for low places in the earth, as Heaven for all high places above the earth, not only where God and his Angels and Saints are in glory, and where the Sun, Moon, and Stars are, but where the clouds and meteors are, and the Birds of the Aire flee: So it for Hel, the Grave, yea and the Whales belly wherein Jonah was, Jonah 2. 3. Is called the belly of Hel, and other holy perſons being delivered from deadly dangers, are ſaid to be delivered from Sheol, Pſal. 18. 6. Pſal. 30. 4. 86. 16. 116. 3. for the word Soul נֶפֶשׁ it alſo is diverſly uſed, ſometime for the breath, Job 41. 12. Therefore all living things that breath are called living Soules, Gen. 1. 20. 24. And becauſe the life is in the breath, it is often put for life, ſometime for the perſons of men, Act. 7. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 20. Sometimes for the bodies, Pſal. 35. 13. 105. 18. And ſometime for dead bodies, Numbers 5. 2. 9. 10. 19. 11. 13. And thus it may beſt be taken here, and the word Sheol for Grave, coming of Shaal to ask or crave, becauſe the Grave alwaies cryeth Give, give, being never ſatisfied with innumerable dead bodies, but ſtil alwaies craving more: To make this a ground of Chriſts deſcent in Soule into Hell, as many Ancients do, is altogether from the ſcope of the place, that being no where plainly ſet forth, and this word being commonly uſed in the old Teſtament for the Grave, when any of the Saints of God dying, are ſaid to have gone into or deſcended into Sheol, muſt needs be wreſted here touching Chriſt by them that underſtand Hel; that is, The place of the damned hereby, that even the Saints are commonly ſaid to have gone thither, ſee Gen. 37. 35. Job 14. 13. 17. 13. Eccleſ. 9. 10. Ezek. 32. 21. 27. It being the common receptacle of all both good and bad, for the

Verſ. 11.

11. Verſe, Thou will ſhew me the way of life. Hereby nothing elſe is meant, but that Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, entred into everlaſting life, aſcending bodily into Heaven, where is the preſence of Gods glory, filling with joy and pleaſure for ever and ever, and not only ſo, but that he is there at the right hand of God, that is, In higheſt honour and glory, exalted above principalities and powers, and every name that is named, either in this World or in the World to come: And becauſe he is thus highly advanced, not for himſelfe alone, but for all true Chriſtians his members, whom he will one day receive unto him, that where he is they may be alſo; every one of us that beleiveth, may to our unſpeakable comfort ſay the ſame, and what worldly pleaſure ſoever any man hath, it is but vain, unleſs his comfort be in Gods preſence by his grace and favour here, and by his glory hereafter aſſuredly by faith expected.

Note.

PSAL.

PSAL. XVII.

A Prayer of David. Heare (O righteous Lord.) Others, Heare O Lord my righteouſneſſe, or juſt cauſe. But the words may beſt be rendred, Righteous Lord, As Chriſt prayed afterwards, O righteous Father. For it is a ground of confidence to ſuch as feare God and pray in ſincerity, that God being righteous will accordingly accept of their prayers, and do for them, whereas men are of a perverſe diſpoſition, and are ready to judge their praying hypocri[illegible]. Verſ. 1.

Concerning the works of men, by the words of thy lips, I have kept me from the paths of the deſtroyer. Hebr. I have kept, or obſerved the paths of the breakers through. For ſo the word פָּרַץ ſignifieth, ſee Jer. 7. 11. Ezek 18. 10. The meaning is contrary to the doings of the wicked, by reaſon of thy word alwaies in my heart to direct me, I have marked the waies of ſuch as break out by rebellion, theft, or robbery, how evil they are to decline and avoid them; ſome other expoſitions are mentioned by Calvin, but he reſteth in this alſo, and this is further confirmed to be the ſenſe. Verſ. 4.

Uphold my goings in thy paths. As if he had ſaid, I do not, neither can obſerve their paths, to avoid them without thy grace, therefore do thou uphold me, &c. Verſ. 5.

Ariſe, O Lord, prevent him, or diſappoint him. Hebr. Prevent his face. His face being put for him, as if he had ſaid, Now that my enemies machinate miſcheife againſt me, come out with thy judgments firſt againſt them, that they being hereby cut off, I may be delivered. From the wicked thy ſword. It is moſt commonly read, With thy ſword. But it is thus Hebr. and thus the ſenſe is good, becauſe the wicked is but as the ſword of God, which can do nothing without him, as Aſſur is called his Rod, and therefore it is well rendred New Tran. Which is thy ſword. And to ſhew this to be the meaning, he varyeth the words, Verſe 14. ſaying, From the men of thy hand, the men of the World, whoſe bellies thou filleſt with thy hid treaſure, or thy hidden thing. That is, Abundance of worldly goods, by meanes whereof, they live deliciouſly every day, the reaſon of, which is hidden from them, and yet appeares not, but ſhall be made manifeſt, that they were but fatted up like Oxen againſt the day of ſlaughter: So that the godly have no cauſe to be troubled to ſee wicked worldlings abound in wealth and themſelves in poverty, and kept to courſe fare, for this is their portion in this life, they being to have none in the life to come, but to be caſt out to miſeries everlaſting. Verſ. 13. Iſa. 10. 5. Verſ. 14. Note.

I ſhall ſee thy face in righteouſneſſe, I ſhall be ſatisfied in waking with thy Image. Having ſpoken of the affluence of worldly things about worldly men, wherewith their Children were ſatisfied, Verſe 14. Here he ſheweth what ſhould ſatisfy him, Viz. The ſight of Gods face, and his likeneſs when he ſhould awake, which he aſſuredly beleived he ſhould do in Gods good time; now he ſeeth the face of God in righteouſneſs, who is approved of God to be upright-hearted, and beleiveth in Chriſt, one day to come to that Eſtate, that he ſhall ſee as he is ſeen; that is, Shall ſee God in his glory, to the making of him perfectly bleſſed for ever: And this ſhall be when he is awakened to riſe up at the day of judgment, when mortality ſhall put on immortality, which is Gods Image here meant. Calvin rejecting this, ſaith, That he beleived to ſee God, propitious to him by grace, wherein the greateſt happineſs of man lyeth, and he expounds his awaking, by waking out of troubles and dangers, which ſometime aſtoniſhed him and ſtrook him dead, as it were, but he was confident of deliverance out of them, which he cals awaking, and then he ſaith, He ſhall be ſatisfied with his Image or likeneſs, which we ſee not only in the light of the Verſ. 15. Calvin.

2 Cor. 4. 7.

Goſpel, but alſo in many documents of his grace: But awaking is uſed ſometime elſewhere, for awaking out of ſleep in the duſt, as Iſa. 26. 19. For coming out of trouble no where, and of our bearing Gods Image, or being like unto him in glory, ſee 1 Cor. 15. 49. Pſal. 73. 20. Phil: 3: 20: And ſeeing his face in the ſenſe before ſpoken of, 1 Cor: 13: 12: 2 Cor: 3: 18: As Ainſworth noteth, and citeth R: Manahem, ſaying, That ſeeing his face in juſtice, is, when being raiſed again after death, we ſhall ſee him in the Heavenly paradiſe, and this is that which Pſal: 17: is called the Image ſtored up in light.

Ainſworth. R. Manahem in Deut. 4.

PSAL. XVIII.

THIS Pſalme is alſo ſet forth, 2 Sam: 22: Where the Title hath been already ſpoken of.

Verſ. 2. The Lord is my Rock, my Munitio, my Deliverer. He celebrates the Lord diverſly, to ſhew, that in what danger ſoever any of his faithful Servants is, he is allſufficient to ſave and deliver them, that we may not diſtruſtingly ſeek to any other in time of danger but to God alone.

Verſ. 4. The ſorrows of death compaſſed me, the floods of wicked men. The word rendred ſorrows, ſignifieth alſo cords, and ſo it is taken by ſome, for David was beſet, as it were, with ſnares, and the word rendred ungodly, Hebr: is בליעל which is commonly put for moſt notoriouſly wicked, coming of Beli, not, and Iagnal, aſcend, or as Jerom hath it, Yoake, they are ſuch as will beare no yoake, and ſhall not have any place above in Heaven; He uſeth ſo much variety to ſet forth the dangers and ſtreights wherein he was, that he might ſtir up himſelfe the more to praiſe God, who had delivered him from them all, and for example to us, and to ſhew that high ſtreines of eloquence ſometimes in praiſing God, are good and not to be blamed, ſo that pride be away, and the praiſe of God only be aimed at.

Verſ. 6. He heard me out of his holy Temple: That is, From Heaven, ſaith Calvin: The Cald. He received my prayer, from the Pallace of his Sanctuary, which is Heaven.

Verſ. 7. Then the Earth moved and ſhook. Calv. He moved and the Earth trembled: But not ſo agreeably to the Hebr. this is a diſcription of Gods terrible Judgments coming upon the wicked, as if it were by a mighty and great Earthquake, ſee the like, Pſal. 82. 5. Deut. 32. 22. 2 Sam. 22. For the Foundation of the Mountains, it is Of the Heavens, becauſe the Heavens ſeem to be founded upon the mountains that are very high.

V. 8, 9, 10, 11. It is further ſhewed in what majeſty and Terrour God cometh to take vengeance upon the Wicked, and with what velocity: for which he ſayth he comes fleeing upon the Wings of the Wind; and upon Cherubims, that is, Angells repreſented by thoſe in the Sanctuary, to which he had reſpect, in ſaying thus to make men look up to the true God, who was ſayd to dwell there between the Cherubims: He ſpeaks alſo of Clouds and Darkneſs and burning fire, with which he cometh, ſetting forth hereby Thunder and Lightning, as by the Winds terribble Tempeſts, that by theſe things as arguing Gods power and Terribleneſs, we may be ſtirred up to take notice thereof, and to fear and tremble before him.

Verſ. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. From V. 12 to V. 20. He further amplifieth the ſame, how mightily God confounded his Enemies and delivered him, as if he had come with Thunder and Lightning againſt them, which ſome think to have been done according to the Letter; but this, ſayth Calvin, is not credible, becauſe if ſo, it ſhould have been ſet forth in the Sacred Hyſtory touching David.

V. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. The Lord hath rewarded me according to my Righte- ouſneſſe,

onſneſs, &c. In mentioning his Righteouſneſs here, David doth not mean his Exact living in all things according to Gods Lawes, but the Righteouſneſs of his cauſe in reſpect of Saul and other Enemies, who unjuſtly roſe up againſt him: For they doubtleſs layd to his charge, that he was a Rebell, a Robber, and a Patron and Protector of Wicked men about him, and ambitious of the Kingly Dignity, being prickt on hereunto by his own pride: Againſt this he appeals to God, deſiring him to judge betwixt him and his Enemies, pleading his Righteouſneſs and cleanneſs of his hands in his ſight, becauſe God knew that he ſought not the Kingdom but by him appointed thereunto, neither could all his Enemies rage againſt him make him tranſgreſs the Law of Love and righteous dealing, even towards thoſe that dealt unrighteouſly and maliciouſly with him.

I have not wickedly departed from my God, or wickedly faln, which is to be underſtood as hath been aforeſayd, the way that he hath ſet me into I have walked in and none other to come to my Kingdom. Verſ. 21.

I have kept me from mine iniquity: That is, Which mine Enemies call mine and lay to my charge, and I ſhould have faln into, had I not been kept by thy Grace, but had been carryed by the ſwinge of fleſh and bloud, as men commonly are in the like caſes: So that here is no ground for any mans being exactly righteous and without all ſin, or expecting mercy from God as a reward due to him, for this he utterly diſclaimeth in many other places, as Pſal: 38: Pſal: 51: &c. Verſ. 23.

With the merciful thou wilt be mercifull: That is, In thy dealing, ſhewing ſuch grace and mercy, and with the upright and pure, dealing according to their innocency, howſoever men deal with them: This he found to be true by comfortable experience in himſelfe, and from hence he infereth this doctrine generally for the comfort of all others in the like caſe. Verſ. 25.

With the perverſe or froward, thou wilt be perverſe: This may ſeem not to be rightly ſpoken of God, with whom is no perverſneſs, but all juſt and candid dealing with all men, but the ſame is ſayd, Levit. 26. 21. being ſpoken by the Lord, as putting upon him the perſon of an Enemy, meaning nothing elſe but that he would deal by them according to their deſerts, ſo that they ſhould find him as croſs and contrary, and implacable towards them, as they were contrary in their walking towards him through their obſtinacy and hardneſs of Heart, ſtiffely going on to diſhonour him without end. Verſ. 26.

For thou wilt ſave the poor people, Here a reaſon is rendred, or it is ſhewed, how the Lord would be Gracious to the Gracious, and perverſe to the perverſe (Viz.) by ſaving the one and exalting him, and bringing down low the other, calling him the poor or humble, and the other high lookt or proud, as humility is commonly the badge of the Gracious, pride and looking on high, of the Wicked. Verſ. 27.

For thou ſhall light my light. That is, Turne my adverſity into proſperity, and ſorrow into joy, it being uſually in holy Scripture by darkneſs to ſet forth ſometime ſin, ſometime ſorrow, and by light joy and proſperity. Verſ. 28.

By thee I ſhall break through an Army: This he ſpeakes in aſcribing his victories to God, and his ſubduing of Cities fenced with ſtrongeſt wals, and although it be ſpoken in the Future-Tenſe, yet he meaneth, that he had done ſo, for this Pſalme was compiled after his warrs ended, and the Future is often put for the Pretertenſe, Hebr: and the Preter for the Future: Verſ. 29.

He hath ſet me upon my high places: That is, He hath advanced me and brought me to this honour, and whereas he was a valiant warrier, whom no enemies could withſtand, he aſcribes this alſo to God, Verſe 34: He taught his to war, and by his ſtrength he brake bows of Steel, being a man Verſ. 33.

man but of a little ſtature. And in publiſhing Gods goodneſs towards him by ſubduing his Enemies before him, he goeth on to V. 43. where he ſaith, Verſ. 43. Thou haſt made me the head of the Gentiles, &c. That is, Of the nations round about, which were wont to be infect Enemies to the Jews, as Edom, Ammon, Moab, &c. For they were all brought under by David. The former words of the Verſe. Thou wilt deliver me from the contentions of the People, are ſpoken to ſhew, that by God were appeaſed the tumults againſt him in his own Kingdome; and the laſt words, the people I have not known ſhall ſerve me: And Verſe 44. By the hearing of the Ear they ſhall obey me, the Children of ſtangers ſhall be lyers, or ſhall lye unto me. To amplify Gods mercy yet more towards him in bringing ſome under without battell; being ſo terrified, that they voluntarily ſubmitted to him, as thinking it ſafeſt for them ſo to do, as being both a preventing of his making war againſt them, and a ſtrengthning of them againſt their Enemies, by coming under his protection as the Gibeonites ſometime had ſubmitted themſelves to Joſhuah. And becauſe many of them did thus out of fear only, their hearts not going a long with their outward ſhew, he ſayth, that they lyed to him, that is, Fained, that by the fame which they heard of him, they were moved out of the love of his virtues to ſubmit themſelves to him; Which how it was verified in David doth not appear, but in Chriſt figured out in David, theſe things were all fulfilled perfectly, he was the head of all Nations; for he is the head of the Church conſiſting of all Nations, and moſt of theſe were unknown unto him as man, as being far remote from Judea, and by hearing of him, they were brought to ſubmit unto him, when the Apoſtles came and Preached him amongſt them: For they are ſayd to be ſuch as he knew not, becauſe he regarded them not, to provide for their Salvation, as he did for the Jews. See my Expoſition on Iſa. 55. 5. And becauſe many of them did but

Luk. 3. fainedly yeild to receive his faith, and to be baptiſed into his name, their hearts not being moved to repent, as appeared in thoſe that came to Johns baptiſme, and Joh. 2. ult. They are ſayd to have lyed to him. And they all are called Strange Children, becauſe of the Gentiles and not of the Jewiſh Nation, and brought only by fear to ſubmit, as the next Verſe ſheweth, yet all

Verſ. 45. which receive the Goſpel are not ſuch, for ſo many as heartily ſubmit unto it, being moved with repentance, are one and the ſame with beleiving Jews, Gal. 3. 28. But all others ſtrange Children ſtill, and ſhall not inherit with the Children, Gal. 4.

Verſ. 46. Calvin. The Lord liveth, and bleſſed be my rock. Calv. Let the Lord live: Saying, It is ſpoken after the manner of men, who uſe to make ſuch Acclamations to their Emperours, whom they love and honour; and although the word may be rendred the Lord liveth, yet being taken as ſpoken in the Optative-Mood, the ſenſe will be good, if by living we underſtand his ſhewing himſelf to live by Executing Judgments againſt the wicked Enemies of his People, and delivering them out of their danger, and magnifying them by granting them a Peaceable and proſperous Eſtate, for then he appears to live indeed, being otherwiſe counted dead by the Wicked, and not having power to take Revenge upon them. But it may be read, the Lord liveth, more properly accordiug to the Hebrew word, being underſtood as before.

Verſ. 47. God giveth me Revenges. New Tranſlat. It is God that avengeth me, but the firſt is according to the Hebr. neither ought it to ſeem ſtrange, that God ſhould be ſayd to give power to men to revenge, which he forbiddeth all men, for David had power by God committed unto him, as being King, and ſo his revenging was but condignly puniſhing, as God had appointed him to do, it is revenge taking by private men that is forbidden, and if Kings and Judges do not, they themſelves ſhall dy for it, as Ahas ſparing Benhadad, but yet it is not lawfull for them to take Revenge, otherwiſe then God hath appointed, uſing the Sword committed unto them, at their own will to tyranny; thus Calvin, but the words may go as in New Tran. it being all one, He giveth me revenge, and he avengeth me.

ranny

Magnifying ſalvations of his King. New Tran. He giveth great deliverances to his King. For by ſalvations, the Lords ſaving of him divers times is meant, and he cals himſelfe his King, becauſe he attained not the Kingdome by his own ſeeking, but was thereunto choſen of God: And whereas he addeth, He ſheweth mercy to his Anointed, and to his ſeed for evermore. Hereby he both denoteth his being anointed by Samuell, and the continuance of his royal ſeed till Chriſts coming, and thenceforth in him to reign for evermore; whence it appeares that he ſpeaketh ſo of himſelfe in this Pſalme, as that he ſets forth ſome things in himſelfe, as the type concerning his ſeed Chriſt, as hath been before ſhewed. Verſ. 50.

PSAL. XIX.

THe Heavens declare the glory of God. This is by Auguſtine expounded allegorically of the Apoſtles, who were as the Heavens, and Chriſt as the Sun, for they declared Gods glory in all Countries, and their ſound went out into all Lands, when by preaching they ſounded out the glad tidings of ſalvation every where; and herein Saint Paul ſeemed to be the Leader, who uſeth theſe very words, Rom. 10. 18. In ſpeaking of hearing the Goſpel preached, for having asked, have they not all heard, he anſwers, Yea their ſound went out into all Lands, and their words to the ends of the World. Calvin rejecteth this expoſition for two reaſons. Verſ. 1. Auguſt. Calvin.

Firſt, Becauſe when this was written to the Romans, their ſound had not thus gone out into all Lands, but many Nations were in darkneſs ſtill, yea even to this day.

Secondly, Becauſe ſo he ſhould ſpeak of the light of the Goſpel before the Law, which he comes to ſet forth, Verſe 7. But this were prepoſterous, and for the Apoſtles producing this, to prove that the Gentiles had heard, he ſaith, That he meaneth the voice of theſe Heavenly bodies, which made known unto all by their equal and orderly motions and influences, the God that made and governs them, ſo that they might learn to beleive, and to love and feare him: And of this he ſpeaks there, to ſhew, That his preaching to the Gentiles was according to the will of God, forſomuch as they were never excluded from all teaching, although they had not ſo manifeſt teaching as the Jews: But his firſt objection hath been already by me anſwered, upon Rom. 18. By ſaying, It may be underſtood as prophetical; for the ſecond, it had been indeed prepoſterous to begin to ſpeak of the light of the Goſpel firſt, which came laſt, if that only and properly were here meant, but forſomuch as teaching of the heavenly bodies is firſt and properly meant here, which was before the giving of the Law, it is orderly thus to begin, although there be in the words an higher and myſtical ſenſe alſo of teaching by the Goſpel: And whereas it is ſaid, That Pauls drift was to prove from theſe words, that the Gentiles ought to be taught as well as the Jews, it is plainly to prove the neerneſs of the word of the Goſpel to all, as the words before going ſhew; neither can it be made good that Peter alledged it rightly, to prove the hearing of all in the ſenſe before ſpoken of, if that hearing only had been meant of the ſound ſpoken of, that is ſtood for, becauſe it is the hearing by which faith in Jeſus Chriſt cometh, and what force there was in the teaching of Celeſtial bodies to bring to this, let the Reader judge. But to return to the Pſalme, I can neither aſſent to Auguſtine, expounding it as altogether allegorically only, nor to Calvin expounding it only literally, or to Baſil who long before him did likewiſe, for it is both literally to be underſtood and myſtically alſo; for the firſt, The Heavens declare the glory of God. Becauſe by beholding them and their glory, we may learn how glorious he is that made them, and the faire Firmament: But what is meant by one daies telling of another, and one nights certifying another, Hebrew, Day to day uttereth ſpeech, and night to night teacheth knowledge. Verily that by the daies ſucceeding the night, and then again, the nights ſucceeding the day, Gods ruling and governing of the Celeſtial bodies, the Sun and the Moon, whereby this is cauſed, plainly appeareth, to ſtir all men up to give him praiſe and glory. Calvin mentions two other expoſitions, but without approving them.

of

Verſ. 2

First, That every day and night produceth ſomewhat as a further document of Gods glory.

Secondly, Which is obſurd, that the day and night do confabulate between themſelves of Gods glory.

Verſ. 3. No ſpeech, no words, their voice is not heard. Thus Hebr. but to be ſupplyed thus, There is no ſpeech, there are no languages, where their voice is not heard. The meaning, although divers men muſt ſpeak, one to one country people, another to another, as he is able to ſpeak in this or that language, and none can ordinarily ſpeak to more, yet the heavenly bodies making this intercourſe of night and day, ſpeak to all at once in all parts of the World, their motions and orderly riſing and ſetting, being as it were, a declaring by word of mouth the power and glory of God, who made and governs them from day to day; whereas ſome give the ſenſe without this ſupplement, thus, It is true, the day and night have no voice to ſpeak properly, no ſpeech, no language, yet the Sun and Moon that have their lives in all parts, going through them with their light and influence, cauſing now night and then day, do as ſenſibly ſhew Gods glory all over the World, as if they did ſpeak with a lively voice, as Verſe 4. This is by Calvin counted frigid, but if it be taken thus either, I ſee not but that the ſenſe may be good, and therefore Ainſworth hath both the other and this alſo; and then it is, as if he had ſaid, Although I grant to ſpeak properly the day and night, and the cauſes of them have no voice, yet I ſaid rightly, Verſe 3. That day and night ſpeak, forſomuch as their intercourſe in all Lands ceaſe not, as it were, to ſpeak this continually, which I have ſaid.

Verſ. 4. Their line is gone out through all the Earth. Calvin, Their writing. Vulgar Lat. Their ſound. Hebr. קַו ſignifying a Line, as Iſa. 28. 10. Whereby is meant an eaſie way of teaching, ſo that the ſimpleſt and they that are of leaſt underſtanding may learn hereby, the glory of God being by the heavens to ſuch as behold them as perciptible, as a delineation or portraiture of any thing being drawn to ſuch as behold it: By writing it cannot ſo properly be rendred, becauſe that is by letters and words, which the unlearned cannot read; that of a ſound is followed, Rom. 10. 18. Becauſe the Sept. hath it ſo, and paſſages of the old Teſtament are commonly alledged according to the Septuagint, as being then beſt known, the word ſignifieth not Sound, but Line. And it is put for a building alſo, Zecha. 1. 16. Job 38. 5. But in this ſignification it agreeth not ſo well in this place, but if we read it, Their line or Delineation. It will be found a moſt fit expreſſion to ſet forth their teaching by the ſight, even thoſe of leaſt capacity by that which every one can know, and then aptly followeth, Their words are gone out into the ends of the World. Becauſe an emblem being ſhewed, and the ſignification of it being declared by word of mouth, any man may underſtand the meaning, In them he hath ſet a Tabernacle for the Sun. Having hitherto ſpoken of the Heavens in general, and of the day and the night cauſed, the one by the riſing, the other by the going down of the Sun; now he leaving all other Celeſtial lights, the Moon and the Stars, as being not ſo well known with their conſtellations and influences to the Vulgar ſort, he pitcheth upon the greateſt heavenly heavenly light, and that which indeed is to all vegetable things, as the Soul to the Body, for nothing that ſpringeth out of the Earth can grow and proſper, unleſs the Light of the Sun comes to it, but decayeth and dyeth. And of this all men every where ſee the Glory, and in it the Glory of the Creator, to whom the Sun is but a Servant, and by his appointment to us, having for this the name שמש from miniſtring or ſerving, as the Cald. word ſignifieth: And the Tabernacle ſayd to be ſet in Heaven, for the Sun is a moving Tabernacle, wherin this great light is carryed moſt ſwiftly round about the world in 24. houres, as Verſe 5. 6. And it is ſet forth by two compariſons. Verſ. 5.

First, Of a Bridegroom.

Secondly, Of a mighty man or Champion; the one coming out of his Chamber, becauſe its riſing ſeemeth to be ſo to us, and the other with all chearfullneſs coming apace into the Palæſtra, as being ſure through his great ſtrength to prevail. For as the Bridegroom is richly adorned, ſo is the Suns riſing in great Glory, and the ſtrength of a mighty man is unreſiſtable by Weaklings, ſo the ſtrength of the Sun lying in the heat thereof peirceth into all places, and nothing can hinder it, which is meant by ſaying, Nothing is hid from the heat of it, which vivifieth and quickneth all things which grow out of the Ground, being deep enough rooted, and makes to bring forth leaves and fruit, but making things to wither, that want rooting; myſtically by the Heavens and Sun and their ſound going out into all lands, underſtand, as hath been already ſayd; but whereas by the day Aug. underſtands the Divinity of Chriſt, and by the night his Humanity, and by the Firmament, firmneſs of Faith, and by the Suns Tabernacle, the Virgin Maries womb, out of which Chriſt came ſo glorioufly, the Angells declaring it to the Shepheard with ſo great Joys, or a Tent wherein a Generall is in time of War and cometh forth to fight and to ſubdue his Enemies, either by making them to yeild or deſtroying them, and that in ſuch powerfull manner that all the world is not able to reſiſt or hinder him from prevailng, it ſhall ſuffice only to name or mention theſe Expoſitions, and the Judicious Reader make uſe hereof as he ſhall ſee cauſe. The myſtery

The Law of God is perfect, converting the Soul, Calvin Reſtoring the Soul: To the ſame Effect the word ſignifieth, the returning of it from going aſtray to the indangering thereof; as is the caſe of every Soul, and is ſaved, when converted from the Errour of his way, Jam. 5. 18. The word rendred Law, is, תורה ſignifying Inſtruction, is moſt commonly put for the ten Commandements, Deut. 33. 4. Mal. 4. 4. &c. Sometime for all Moſes his writings, Gal. 4. 21. For the Prophets, 1 Cor. 14. 21. For the Pſalms, Joh. 10. 24 Chap. 15. 15. And ſometime we read of the Law of works and the Law of Faith, as Rom. 3. 27. Here the whole word of God is to be underſtood, of which it is ſayd, That it is profitable to teach and to inſtruct, that the man of God may be perfect unto every good work, 2 Tim. 3. 16. And for this cauſe it is ſayd to be perfect, in Oppoſition to ſuch as ſay and teach, that Traditions are alſo neceſſary. For herein the way to life is perfectly and fully taught; and by preaching this Doctrine all that beleive are ſaved, 1 Cor. 1. 21. And what place then is there for Traditions of men, unleſs to overthrow this Law, as our LORD chargeth the Phariſees to have done, Matth. 15. For the Coherence of theſe words with the former, the Pſalmiſt having hitherto ſhewed what means all Countrys and Nations had to come to the Knowledge of God, yet through mans corruption inſufficient to ſave, but rendring all that live not in the fear of GOD inexcuſable: Now he commeth to ſhew what means, the Iſraelites had above others, whereby they might be ſaved, that both they and we ſince, who injoy theſe means, might be ſtirred up to walk more worthy of them, leaſt our condemnation be the greater: The teſtimony of the Lord is ſure, making wiſe the ſimple. By Teſtimony the two tables of the Commandements are meant Exod. 25. 16. 31. 18: Verſ. 7.

And they are thus called, becauſe they are, a Record teſtifying to all ages what the Will of the Lord is, Joh. 5. 39. And they were given with great Conteſtation and preſſing of all men to keep them, and ſuch as do not, this will be a Witneſs againſt to condemn them, as worthy of all manner of curſes: The Goſpel is alſo called a Teſtimony, 1 Cor. 2. 1. 2 Theſ. 1. 10. And Chriſt, Teſtis, a Witneſs, Iſa. 55. 4. Revel. 1. 5. And becauſe in all parts of the word of God, a Teſtimony is held out unto us, declaring and aſſuring us, what the good Will and pleaſure of God is, according to which if we live we ſhall be bleſſed, but curſed if otherwiſe, the whole Bible is commonly diſtinguiſhed into two Teſtaments, the Old and the New: Therefore as by the Law, ſo by the Teſtimony the whole word of God is to be underſtood, and this is ſayd to be true or faithfull, becauſe it doth truly and faithfully teſtify unto us the will of our heavenly Father, ſo as none other writings do, but if we ſhould follow them, or unwritten Traditions, we might be deceived, the word rendred ſimple, is פתי Eaſy to be perſwaded or to beleeve, the ſame word is uſed in a bad ſenſe, Prov. 14. 15. 9. 6. In a good ſenſe, Pſal. 116. 6. As alſo in this place: For he muſt be ſilly and fooliſh, that will by the word be made wiſe to Salvation, 1 Cor. 3. 18. That is, denying all worldly Wiſdome whereby an humane reaſon may be yeilded of divine myſteries, as of the incarnation of the Son of God, of the Trinity in the Godhead, the Reſurrection and Regeneration, and Chriſts giving us his fleſh to eat, &c. For if he will not be perſwaded of theſe things, but ſo far forth as in his own reaſon he can ſee cauſe, he ſhall never be made wiſe by the beſt Wiſdome, which is to the ſaving of the Soul. The Sept. renders it, Parvulum, and ſo doth Calvin, and this is all one, becauſe the ſimple are as little Children, very credulous, and therefore theſe things are ſayd to be revealed to babes and Children, and unleſs one become as a little Child he cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Verſ. 5. The ſtatutes of the Lord are righteous, &c. his precepts pure, &c. The word rendred Statutes, is פקודי Viſitations, And his Statutes are ſo called becauſe he threatens to viſit with his judgments the Tranſgreſſors thereof, Exod. 20. 5; 32. 24.

Ainſworth. Ainſworth beſides this hath another Derivation from Hiphchid, to commit to ones charge to keep, but I reſt in the former. Now Gods Statutes are ſayd to be right, to intimate, that whoſoever will live rightly muſt be guided by them, our own Imaginations are crooked and will guid us wrong, if we be lead thereby: See Ezeck. 18. And they are ſayd to rejoyce the heart, becauſe ſuch as regulate their lives hereby have peace of Conſcience, which is a continual feaſt, all joy that is in walking in our own wayes, being vain and deceitfull. It is true indeed, peace of Conſcience cometh by faith, Rom. 5. 1. But then this peace is perfect when we live in no known ſin, whereof the Conſcience may accuſe us, but contrariwiſe teſtifieth for us, though we have a godly care in all things to walk by the rule of his Statutes, as is touched, Rom. 2. 15. The precept, or precepts, That is, The Laws of God, of which ſo ſtrait charge is given, Are pure and give light to the eyes, becauſe hereby, As a clear burning light, we may ſee how to walk with God, and to pleaſe him, as Enoch did: For which, Pſal. 119. Part 14. It is ſayd, Thy word is a Light unto my feet, &c. So that whoſoever liveth not by precept, walketh in darkneſs, and goeth he knows not whither; If it be ſayd Light came into the world when Chriſt came, before all men were in darkneſs. I anſwer, this is ſpoken partly, becauſe all the world, beſides the Jews were without the Law, having only the Law of nature to guid them, and partly becauſe the Light of the Law was but little in compariſon of the Light of the Goſpel: But Precepts, Statutes, Teſtimonies, and Law of God are allone & by either of them, the whole word of God is meant, & not that part contained in the 10. Commandements only, which is nothing perfect, becauſe none could keep them without ſinning, but the Goſpel, unto which the Law brings us, makes perfect, and brings to Heaven, as Joſhuah did the Hebrews to Canaan, but Moſes could not.

Law

The feare of the Lord is clean. Calvin, Sincere. By feare in this place is meant, The way of worſhipping God, for Iſa. 29. 13. The Lord ſaith, Their feare towards me was taught by the precepts of men. But Matth. 15. 9. In vain do they worſhip me, teaching for doctrines the precepts of men. The worſhip of the Lord then is clean, when according to the rule of his word, but it is foule and abominable, when according to mens inventions: And becauſe the Law was given with great terrour, making men afraid; it may be taken as another title of the ſame, and becauſe it teacheth men how to live in the feare of God. It indures for ever. So Chriſt ſaith of the law, heaven & earth ſhal paſs, but not one jot or tittle of the law, Mat. 5. 19. The judgments of the Lord true: when God had given his law he added judgments, which he would have paſſe upon Offenders, Exod. 21. 22. &c. For which in beginning to ſet them down, he ſaith, Theſe are the judgments, &c. And becauſe the judgments there following, are in caſes between man and man, ſome will have theſe Laws or Ordinances only meant, whereby it is appointed, what offenders againſt their neighbours, or in any matters concerning the ſecond Table, ſhall be adjudged to; but Calvin diſlikes this, becauſe the ſcope of this place, is to ſet forth the praiſe of the word or Law of God in general, that men may be drawn to the love therof, and therefore as by feare, Statutes, Precepts, &c. The whole is ſet forth in like manner by judgments, to which I ſubſcribe. Verſ. 9.

More deſirable then Gold, then much fine Gold, or Gold of Ophir. This is added to ſhew, that he doth not ſufficiently priſe the word of God, that eſteems it not above all earthly Treaſures, for the riches of wiſdome and grace to be attained hereby. Verſ. 10.

In keeping them there is great reward. But becauſe no man doth perfectly keep them, this reward cometh of grace to Beleivers, not of works. Verſ. 11.

Who knoweth his errours. Becauſe he hath ſaid, in keeping Gods Precepts, There is great reward. Now leaſt any man ſhould ground this Tenet hereupon, that Salvation is to be attained by his own Righteouſneſſe, this is added to ſhew, That all men are ſo ful of ſin, if their lives be ſtrictly examined according to Gods Laws, as that they can have no hope of coming to that reward by keeping the Law exactly, ſith all men do ſo err from this Rule, as that he cannot number the times how often he doth ſo: And therefore in the next words, he prayeth God to cleanſe him from ſecret and hidden ſins, whereby the beſt may ſtand guilty and not know it. So that the Church of Rome in requiring men to confeſſe all their ſins once a yeare to the Prieſt, exacts of them that which is impoſſible, we muſt confeſſe our known ſins to God, and for the pardon of our occult, pray to be cleanſed; that is, Juſtified by Chriſts blood, and to be ſanctified by virtue coming from him, through the working of his ſpirit within us. Verſ 12.

Inhibit thy Servant from preſumptions, leaſt they get dominion over me. As he prayed Verſe 12. for pardon; So now for grace, to be kept from ſinning for time to come, and ſo muſt we all daily do: And he asketh pardon of ſins of ignorance, but to be kept from preſumptuous ſinning, which is, when a man knoweth it to be evil and yet will do it, for which kinde of ſinning there is no ſacrifice but cutting off, yet even to ſuch ſinning are the beſt ſubject, unleſſe God keep and reſtrian them, and to be brought under their dominion, as the next words imply, and this alſo is called, The great offence. Being therefore thus ſubject to ſin, & indangered hereby without Gods ſtanding alwaies by us to keep us, let us never ceaſe drawing neer to him by fervent prayer, and then he will be neer to us and keep us, as is here deſired. Let the words of my mouth and the thoughts of my heart, &c. We muſt not only labour to be kept from ſinnes of deed, but of word Verſ. 13. Note. Verſ. 14.

and thought alſo, and to be thus kept, all our ſtrength lyeth in God only; and his ſtrength is made ours by prayer, as the laſt words of the Pſalme imply, O Lord my ſtrength and my Redeemer.

PSAL. XX.

Calvin. THIS Pſalme is by Calvin expounded of David, as if the prayers contained Verſe 1, 2, 3, 4. Were made by the Church, or preſcribed to be made for him, and the exultation, Verſe 6, 7. &c. Were in ſul aſſurance of being heard, and that he ſhould in all his devotions be accepted of and be eſtabliſhed, when all his enemies ſhould fal; thus alſo ſome others, Auguſt. but Auguſtine underſtands it as a propheſie touching Chriſt, whom God heard, and was ſo well pleaſed with and exalted, wherein the Church triumphed, crying down his and his Churches enemies, but making acclamations to him and her as highly exalted; and this is alſo followed by Ainſworth, yet not ſo as to exclude the other, which is firſt to be received as the proper and literal ſenſe, and then it may be allegorically applyed, as hath been ſaid.

Verſ. 1. The Lord heare thee in the day of tribulation, the name of the God of Jacob protect thee. According to the firſt ſenſe, the Church of the Jews here pray for David, whoſe tribulations were many, that he might well come out of them all; by the name of the God of Jacob is meant his power, for his name is a ſtrong Tower to all that flee unto him, Prov 18. 10. And God is ſet forth with this addition, in alluding to Jacobs words, Gen. 35. 3. I will make an Alter to God, who heard me in the day of my tribulation. And God ſtiles himſelfe the God of Abraham, Iſaack, and Jacob, for ever, Exod. 3. 15. According to the myſtery David hereby propheſieth of Chriſts being heard by the Father, when in his great tribulations he called unto him, as is ſhewed, Heb. 5. 7.

Verſ. 3. Remember all thy Oblations and burnt Offerings, turn to aſhes or make fat. So the Hebrew word רשוה ſignifieth, and is rendred the firſt way, Gen. Tran. The ſecond, Calvin, New Tran. Accept thy burnt offerings. Becauſe when God accepted ſacrifices, he ſent fire from Heaven to burn them to aſhes, as the Sacrifices of Solomon, and of Eliah, and as is generally held of Abel, the Oblation called Minchah conſiſted of Flower and Oyle, being otherwiſe called Peace-Offerings or Meat-Offerings, the burnt Offering was wholy conſumed by fire, being a Lamb, Goate, Ram, or Bullock; but of the meat-offering, part only was offered, part eaten. Both ſorts were often offered by K. David, and ſo Solomon at the beginning of his Kingdome, that it might be auſpicious, offered a thouſand burnt Offerings, and ſo did all godly Patriarks before and Kings after, and from them a cuſtome was taken up amongſt the Heathen and the Romans in particular, not to go forth in any expedition againſt their enemies, but having firſt done Sacrifice to their Gods. Chriſts Sacrifice was that of himſelfe, when he gave his life a ranſome for us, and by this once offered, eternal redemption is attained for us.

Verſ. 5. We will rejoyce in thy ſalvation. The words are ſtil directed to David, although ſome take theſe words indifferently, either for the ſaving of David, or the Salvation that cometh from God upon prayer; Calvin prefixeth, That we may rejoice. As if here were only propounded what the Church would do, if God ſhould ſave her King, Viz. rejoice and ſet up Banners in token of thankfulneſs: But becauſe here is no word That, I rather aſſent to them, that underſtand it as an expreſſion of the Churches preſent joy, out of an aſſured hope that it ſhould be ſo, as ſhe had prayed: But in Chriſts being ſaved from that, which he feared the whole Church

Church doth moſt of all rejoice and triumph as Conquerours, as is ſaid, Rom. 8. 37.

Lord ſave the King, heare us in the day that we call. Thus the Sept. and Vulg. But New Tran. and Calvin, Lord ſave, O King heare us; making a diſtinction as there is Hebrew, but whereas Calvin refers this to King David, as if it had been ſaid, Inable him to help us when we need I think it doth not ſo well agree, becauſe it is beyond the condition of any King, except Chriſt, to be thus prayed unto, ſo that if he had been meant by King, it ſhould rather have been ſaid, Lord ſave, Lord inable the King to ſave, &c. I rather approve therefore that which he ſaid of Chriſt being meant by King in this place, who together with the Father is to be called upon and adored, and the Cald. to put it out of doubt rendreth it; O word of the Lord redeem us, O mighty King heare us in the day of our invocation. Verſ. 9.

PSAL. XXI.

O Lord, The King ſhall rejoice in thy ſtrength, and in thy ſalvation, how very glad ſhall he be? This Pſalme followeth aptly after the former, where all good is prophefied of to the Lords Anointed, or Meſſiah, David and his Succeſſors, the cheife of whom is Chriſt, and indeed he alone, to whom both that Pſalme and this doth moſt fully agree, for Pſal. 20. 9. He is the King, called upon by his Church, and here it is ſaid, God gave him life for ever and ever, V. 4. 6. So as he did not to David, or to any other of his Succeſſors, but to Chriſt alone. He rejoiceth after his ſufferings with joy unſpeakable in Heaven, for which it is ſaid, How greatly ſhall he rejoice. And the word rendred, Rejoiceth. As Ainſworth noteth, is the ſame with Meſſiah, if the letters be tranſpoſed: And he was ſet on the right hand of God in glory and majeſty, according to Verſe 3. Thou haſt ſet upon his head a Crown of pure Gold. And Verſe 5. Glorious majeſty and honour haſt thou put upon him. Verſ. 1. Verſ. 3. Verſ. 5.

Thy hand ſhall finde out thine enemies. That is, None of Chriſts enemies ſhall be able to lye hid ſo, but by his power they ſhall be brought forth, and be all moſt terribly puniſhed; according to Verſe 9. Thou wilt ſet them as an Oven, &c: And fire ſhall eat them. For Chriſt alwaies had, hath, and ſhall have enemies, either openly fighting, or ſecretly plotting againſt his Church, but herein lyeth our comfort, that they ſhall at length be all deſtroyed, and this deſtruction is commonly ſet forth, by moſt hot burning and tormenting fire; wherefore let us patiently wait upon him, whatſoever we in the interim ſuffer at their hands, and let all the enemies of the truth be diſmaied. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9. Note.

He ſhall deſtroy their fruit from the earth, and their ſeed, &c. Not only upon the wicked ſhall the wrath of God ſeiſe, but upon their Children alſo, as Com. 2. To the third and fourth Generation, and they are properly their ſeed, who follow them in wickedneſs, as almoſt all commonly do: And if any one doth not, but turneth, he ſhall dye. Verſ. 10. Ezeck. 18.

Thou wilt ſet them as a Butt, with thy cords or ſtrings thou wilt prepare againſt their faces. The word rendred Butt, ſignifieth Shoulder. Butt is uſed to ſet forth a Butt, becauſe earth heaped together to make a Butt to ſhoot at, is in appearance like a ſhoulder, and being rendred thus, the next words moſt aptly follow, of preparing his bow-ſtrings to ſhoot againſt them: Some, ſaith Calvin, render it Shoulder, as denoting a cruel kinde of death, by binding the body round, and ſo caſting it down from an high Rock, becauſe being thus bound it appeares, as like an heap, as the word שכם ſignifieth, as well as ſhoulder: But I reſt in the former, as Calvin alſo doth, and others generally. Verſ. 10.

PSAL.

PSAL. XXII.

TO him that excelleth, upon the Hind of the Morning, a Pſalme of Davi.

This Pſalm is alſo a Propheſie touching Chriſt, who is meant by the Hind of the Morning: Becauſe he was by the Jews hunted to death, as the Hind by Dogs, and that in the morning, Joh. 18. 28. And becauſe that in the morning he aroſe again, for the Reſurrection is alſo ſet forth by the morning, Pſal. 49. 14. And to an Hind is Chriſt compared, Pſal. 18. 33: Cantic: 2. 9. 17. Chap. 8: 14. Some render it, Upon the morning ſtar, and although the word be no where elſe ſo uſed, yet thus it well agreeth to Chriſt, who is called the bright morning Star, Revel. 22. 16. Some, The ſtrength of the morning, As אילת ſignifieth: and this indeed is the morning ſtar, becauſe it riſeth before the Sun, and is the beginning of Light, The Vulgar Latine, For the morning ſuſception, which Auguſt. followeth: Laſtly, ſome without any tranſlating readit, Upon ſtateth haſhachar, holding it to be a common tune, wherein this Pſalm is to be ſung, but I reſt in the firſt: And who ſo ſhall look into V. 16. and 20. Where dogs purſuing him, are expreſly ſpoken of, cannot but follow the ſame.

Verſ. 1. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Theſe words being uttered by Chriſt upon the Croſs, ſhew, That this Pſalm was made of him, and is Propheticall. In ſaying, My God my God, his firm Faith appeared, and in ſaying, Why haſt thou forſaken me: The ſenſe of Pain and Sorrow which he felt, and continued it from the time of his Souls beginning to be heavy to the Death the night before, untill now that he was ready to give up the Ghoſt, for although a man beleiveth in greateſt ſufferings, who is truly faithfull; yet his ſtraights and Sorrows continuing ſtill, God for the time ſeemeth to his ſenſitive part to be gon away, and to take no further care of him, and according to this our Lord cryed out in theſe words, his Faith being yet unſhaken and he being ſtill free from all ſinfull infirmity, as other men even of the beſt ſort; no nor David himſelf, who alſo ſpake thus of himſelf, as Calvin judgeth: And he mentioneth the words of his roaring, to ſhew the Extremity of his paſſions, for he bearing our ſins ſuffered greivouſly indeed, and not in ſhew only, as ſome fondly imagine.

Verſ. 2. And his calling night and day, V. 2. was notably fullfilled in Chriſt, who going apart from his Diſciples the night before, prayed, Father if it be poſſible, let this Cup paſs from me: And now about the ninth hour of the day, my God, my God, &c. Auguſt. expounding it of Chriſt conſidered with his members, underſtands by the night, Affliction, by the Day proſperity, for the Removall of one of which they prayed, and for the continuance of the other, but are not heard, becauſe it is good for them to be afflicted, but I paſs this as a conceit.

Verſ. 3 But thou art holy, inhabiting the Praiſes of Iſrael: That is, Conſtantly Gracious, as thou haſt promiſed to poor ſinners ſeeking unto thee, but ſpecially to thy choſen people Iſrael, from whom he therefore ſayth, that he had continuall praiſes therefore, as if he dwelt in the midſt of Praiſes, which he ſpeaketh to ſupport his Confidence in his moſt greivous Calamities, as if he had ſayd, thus it is with me, but I will not diſpair of help from a God thus certainly mercifull always to his People, but perſevere ſtill in prayer, as we alſo ought to do in all times of miſery: Some ſayth Calvin, take this as oppoſed to his miſery, but thou art in the height of Felicity being always bleſſed and praiſed, but he rejects this. To ſhew that the ſenſe before given is the true meaning, and that he founded his confidence upon Gods mercifulneſſe and readineſſe to hear and help, the next words do further confirme, Verſ. 4.

Our Fathers hoped in thee, &c. For the words following V. 6. But I am a Worme and no man, neither are they to be underſtood, as if he diſpaired of help, but thereby he intimateth his miſery to be greater then any of his peoples, he being dealt by, not as a man, but a Worm, whom every one deſpiſeth, and treadeth under his feet. For hereby the low Degree of Chriſts humiliation is ſet forth, being ſcorned and derided more then ever any man was, as is further expreſſed, V. 7. 8. and to this agreeth that, Iſa. 53. 3. He is deſpiſed and rejected of all men. Verſ. 45. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 7. 8.

Thou haſt brought me out of my Mothers womb, &c. Here another argument of comfort and confidence, becauſe God was his preſerver in the womb, and brought him forth ſafe from thence. For as Calvin hath it, though this be ordinary and common both to man and beaſt, yet it is no leſs then a miracle, that the Child is kept alive in the Womb, and periſheth not in the midſt of thoſe Excrements, and in coming forth, that it dyeth not by being ſtill kept in from ever ſeeing the Light. The force of this Argument lyeth thus, thou didſt then preſerve me when I could not call upon thee, and therefore now much more I praying night and day unto thee ſhall be preſerved. Then follows another Argument. Verſ. 9. 10. Calvin.

Be not far from me, for Adverſity is nigh, and there is none to help me. For God wil be merciful unto and ſave them, that in their Diſtreſſes flee to none but him, and little hope can they have, that ſeek to others, either Gods or Saints departed, as the Papiſts do. Verſ. 11.

Bulls have compaſſed me about, &c.

Herei s further expreſſed by whom Chriſt was ſo diſpitefully uſed, as hath been ſayd, Viz. By Bulls, Lions, and Dogs, which being inraged are moſt fierce, and not to be withſtood by the power of a man, but he muſt needs periſh by them, and theſe were the cheif Preiſts and Rulers, and the Scribes and Phariſees raging againſt Chriſt, till they had brought him to the Duſt of death, That is, to death by crucifying him, as the laſt words of V. 16. do declare. They peirced my hands and my feet: But Hebr. it is, כארי As a Lion in my hands and feet. But כרה ſignifying to dig, the Sept. and all our Expoſitors render it hereby, they digged or peirced: the Chald. They did Lion-like bite, which Ainſworth following, renders it, They Lion-like peirced, and indeed it muſt thus be neceſſarily underſtood, or elſe there will be no ſenſe: Calvin thinks the word to have been corrupted by the Jews כארי being written for כרו to avoid ſo manifeſt a Teſtimony, that Jeſus who was thus peirced when he was crucified, was the Chriſt. But there is no need, neither is it ſafe to admit of any corruption, of the Hebrew here or in any other place, for it is not unuſual amongſt the Hebrewes, who were moſt conciſe in their writing, ſometime to underſtand ſome other word to make up the ſenſe, which what can it be here, but the word Peirced, they peirced my hands and feet, as if a Lion ſhould do it with his Teeth. Moreover if this Teſtimony were obſcured, ſo that no evidence could be drawn herefrom, yet V. 18. is plain, They divided my Garments amongſt them, and caſt Lots upon my veſture. Calvin applying this firſt to David, ſayth, that by Garments his Goods are to be underſtood, the ſpoils whereof his Enemies took: But forſomuch as we read not of any ſuch thing ever done to him, but he always rather took the ſpoils of his Enemies, it is better to underſtand it of Chriſt only. Verſ. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. Verſ. 18.

Thou art my ſtrength, Here the word אילתי which is in the Title, is uſed again to intimate that Chriſt was herein the Hind or ſtrength of the morning, in that God was his ſtrength, ſo that though he were hunted by dogs to the death, yet he did ſoon powerfully riſe again. Verſ. 19.

My only one from the hand of the Dog: That is, My Soul alone, and deſtitute of all other help, as Pſal. 25. 16. 35. 17. New. Tranſlat. My Darling; as if his Soul were called, My only one, becauſe moſt dear unto him: It is not to be doubted indeed, but that as every mans Soul or Life, ſo his was moſt dear unto him, yet becauſe Verſe 11. he ſayd, There is none to help, I doubt Verſ. 20.

doubt not but his ſolitary condition is meant here, thus alſo Calvin, Ainſworth, &c.

Verſ. 21. Thou haſt heard me from the horns of Unicorns. He had complained before of Bulls, Lions, and Dogs, now having prayed for deliverance from Dogs and Lions, he puts both them and Bulls, and whatſoever ſavages elſe, men or Devills, like wild beaſts hunted after his life together, calling them by the name of Unicorns, whoſe ſtrength lyeth in their Horn, which is but one, and herewith they fight moſt fiercely: Now he ſayth that GOD had heard him, meaning that he had ſhewed it by anſwering his Prayer, in delivering him from Death, if this ſhall ſeem not to agree to Chriſt, becauſe he had his life taken away upon the Croſs, Calvin anſwers well, it was more miraculouſly and by greater power reſtored after Death, then if he had been delivered from the Croſs, as it is a greater miracle to revive the Dead, then to heal the moſt dangerouſly ſick, and to ſtay the Life going away.

Verſ. 22.23. 24. 25. From Verſe 22. to Verſe 25. The whole Church is ſtirred up under the name of Iſrael and Jacob to praiſe God for this, as a ſingular mercy towards us all, by his Reſurrection being confirmed, touching his being the true Meſſiah, by virtue from whom we all that by faith are one with him ſhall alſo riſe again at the laſt day.

Verſ. 26. The poor ſhall eat and be ſatisfied, their heart ſhall live, and they ſhall praiſe the Lord: Here the Prophet alludeth to the Sacrifices at times of thanksgiving, the greateſt part whereof were eaten by the Offerers, and the poor to whom they diſtributed part, whereby they were ſtirred up to praiſe God, their hearts being thus revived, which were for want ready to faint before, whereby he ſheweth, what refreſhing to the poor in ſpirit, the Feaſt of the Lords Supper ſhould be under the Goſpel much more, as wherein the Faithfull eat and drink the Body and Bloud of Chriſt to make them live Eternally, according to Joh. 6. 54. And for this ſo great a benefit, praiſe God exceedingly, whence this Supper had of old the name of Euchariſtia, or thankſgiving, there being alſo at the firſt, love-Feaſts annexed, whereby the worldly poor were refreſhed, which hath ſince been turned into a cuſtome of offering mony to be diſtributed amongſt them; and whoſo hath this worlds goods, and now Exerciſeth not charity, cometh to this peace Offering moſt unworthily, becauſe eating before God at holy Feaſts was never of old acceptable unto him, but when part was given to the Poor, that they who had none might by their beneficenſe be cheared up alſo, to the increaſe of the thankſgiving to Gods greater praiſe and Glory.

Note.

Verſ. 27. They ſhall remember and turn to the Lord, even all the ends of the Earth: That is, When God ſhall have raiſed up Chriſt, reſtoring life again unto him, all Nations even moſt remote ſhall be converted to his Faith: So that this is a Propheſy of the Converſion of the Gentiles, who are ſayd to remember and turn, as who had a long time worſhipped falſe Gods, forſaking the true, as if they had quite forgotten him.

Verſ. 29. All the fat of the Earth ſhall eat and worſhip: That is, The Feaſt of the Goſpel ſhall be ſo communicated to the poor before ſpoken of, (who are mentioned firſt, becauſe they firſt received the Goſpel) that the rich ſet forth by the fat ones of the Earth ſhal not be excluded: for even Emperours and Kings, and other great ones of the Earth, That is, men of great Eſtates here came in alſo and did partake of the Supper or feaſt of the Lord, and became true worſhippers of God, & this it ſeemed good to the Spirit of God to add, that rich men who fear God might not be diſcouraged when they ſhould afterwards hear how hard it is for a Rich man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. And they ſhall bow that go down into the Duſt, their Soul liveth not: That is, Whoſe Soul liveth not by an Hebraiſme, it being meant, that he who is of moſt deſperate condition, being without hope of Life and Salvation, his ſins are ſo notorious, ſhall eat alſo of this feaſt, and be turned to God to worſhip and ſerve him, being thus plukt out of the Jaws of Death and and everlaſting Deſtruction, as it were being before this every hour ready to ceaze upon him. The New Tranſlat. None can keep alive his own Soule: As it agreeth not with the Hebrew, ſo it makes the ſenſe more perplexed: Some by him that goeth down to the Duſt, whoſe Soul liveth not, underſtand the moſt miſerably poor, who have nothing to feed upon, whereby their life may be preſerved, yet ſhall feed alſo of this feaſt as well as the rich, and praiſe God. Ainſworth is for either ſpiritually poor and miſerable, becauſe moſt wicked or worldly poor, and there is an Expoſition of Baſils, underſtanding by the Rich, the Rich in faith and Grace, touching which, or the Rich properly ſo called, he is indifferent. But becauſe it is ſayd, The fat of the earth, I prefer the former, and that the cloſe of the Verſe may beſt anſwer to the firſt part, the later by thoſe that are going to the duſt, underſtand the miſerably poor: So that here is a common place of comfort for all, both richeſt and pooreſt, if they be Subjects of Gods Kingdom of Grace, their Souls ſhall be alike fed by him and ſaved, becauſe this promiſe followeth immediatly after theſe words, Verſe 28. He ſhall raign over the Gentiles.

A ſeed ſhall ſerve him, they ſhall be counted to the Lord for a Generation: That is, Of them before ſpoken of, V. 28. 29. a ſeed of the Gentiles begotten of the uncorruptible ſeed of the word, which ſhall be counted to the Lord as his people for ever, for the word דור rendred Generation, doth not only ſignify ſo, but ever to the worlds End, and therefore not only the Converſion of the Gentiles is here propheſied of, but all this Churches continuance to the end. Verſ. 30.

They ſhall declare his righteouſneſs to the Generation that ſhall be born: That is, The Faith of Chriſt by this Seed imbraced, ſhall be publiſhed from one Generation to another, and Juſtification thereby alone: For he hath done this, that hath been ſayd, that is, Will do it without fail. Verſ. 31.

PSAL. XXIII.

THE Lord is my ſhepheard, I ſhall not want or be left deſtitute: David being in proſperity looks up to the Lord here as the Author of it, as well as in adverſity he had always ſought unto him, teaching us in his example to do likewiſe, and not then to be proud and to magnify our ſelves, as if by our own providence we had attained to ſuch an Eſtate, as the manner of moſt is, but a Caveat is given here againſt Deut. 8. 10. And he ſetteth forth the Lord by the name of a Shepheard, and by conſequence himſelf, and all beleivers as his ſheep, to ſhew their ſafety, which muſt needs be under ſuch a ſhepheard, whoſe Eys are always upon every one of them Day and Night, and who is every where preſent to each one as to all the flock to feed and defend them from wolves, and to cure them as need requires, and to reduce them from their wandrings. For he is not far from every one of us, and he that keepeth Iſrael neither ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth, Pſal. 121. 4. Verſ. 1. Note. Act. 17.

He proſecuteth the Allegory of a Shepheard, and Sheep, declaring to his praiſe, that he both guided, fed, and watred him in quiet: And for this he reſolveth not to fear, although he ſhould be in the Shadow of Death, V. 4. becauſe this Shepheard had a ſtaff wherewith to pull him out of danger unto him, as well as a Rod to correct him: But hereby is intimated, that in the midſt of greateſt proſperity, we ſhould meditate upon heavy adverſity which may befall us, although we be the ſheep of ſuch a shepheard, and it is a ſinfull preſumption for any man to think, that he ſhall never be moved: But in adverſity this is our comfort, that the Sufferings under which we are be his rod, and when it ſeems good unto him, and need requires, he hath his shepheard ſtaff to pull us out of them again. Verſ. 2, 3. Verſ. 4. Note.

Verſ 5. 6. Having hitherto ſpoken of himſelf as a Sheep, now he concludes as a faithfull and beloved man, having his Table by Gods providence fully furnished, his head anointed with oil, and his cup overflowing, intimating by all theſe a full and proſperous Eſtate, having not only for neceſſity of Life, but for delight, and wherewith to be beneficiall to others, and that in ſpite of his Enemies, who laboured to bring him to miſery and want. And hereupon he reſts confident to be always proſecuted with good, and voweth thankfullneſs accordingly, by his much frequenting the houſe of God to praiſe and to make Oblations to him always, during life, Hebr. To the length of Dayes, And this he calls a dwelling in his houſe: For after our ſerving of God diligently in his houſe in this world, we ſhall dwell in his Heavenly Tabernacle or houſe for ever and ever. And this was lookt at by David, when he promiſed himſelf good and mercy all the Days of his Life: For he was not confident that he ſhould have continuall proſperity without any intercourſe of Adverſity for ever, becauſe he ſhewed before, that his thoughts were upon walking in the ſhadow of death, as knowing greivous Afflictions to be ſtill incident unto him, but he beleived that God who had hitherto been ſo good unto him as to deliver him from them all, would likwiſe from time to time deliver him, for which he voweth this thankfulneſs, to dwell in his houſe continually, as hath been ſayd.

PSAL. XXIV.

A Pſalm of David whereunto is added in Sept. prima Sabbati.

Auguſt. Baſil. AND this is followed by Auguſt. and Baſil although it be not Hebr. and as Baſil ſayth, not in ſome Greek Copyes. They alſo expound it accordingly of Chriſt, who roſe from Death the firſt day of the week, and aſcended into Heaven. And whether this be added to the Title or no, the Verſ. 1. Expoſition is not to be miſliked which referreth it to Chriſt and to his Church. For now indeed the whole world is the Lords, and the Inhabitants meant by the fulneſs thereof, becauſe that whereas the Jews only were in times paſt his peculiar People, all Nations were made his, by the preaching of the Goſpel: Whereas Calvin Expounds it as ſpoken to pull down the Calvin. pride of the Jews, who did bear themſelves aloft upon this, that they only were the Lords people, by ſhewing, that not only Judea and the inhabitants thereof were his, but the whole Earth and the Inhabitants of all the World alſo, he ſayth ſomewhat indeed, but not enough to ſet forth the full ſenſe: For what though all the Earth and all men be the Lords by Creation, what is this to abate the Jews pride, if they only were from amongſt them all choſen, and all others left as Reprobates to perish in their ſins. But to tel them of Gods taking in all Nations to be his people, and that none ſhall dwell in the holy mountain of the Lord, but ſuch as are of pure hearts and clean hands, might well humble them, being ſo wicked and filthy through licentious Verſ. 2. living as they were: But what is meant by this, He hath founded it upon the waters or Seas, and eſtabliſhed it upon the flouds: And what is this to the Argument in hand, if the taking in of the Gentiles to be his people, be here propheſied of? For the meaning, the word עַל ſignifieth Above, and the meaning is, whereas at the firſt, the Waters covered all, yea the higheſt mountains, God by his almighty powver hath ſet it above them and keepeth it above them, that they neither do nor can overflovv it any more, although there be Waters enough to drovvn all again. And this is no leſs then a continuall miracle, and vvorthy to be predicated to his praiſe throughout all the World, Job. 38. 6. 7. &c. to V. 11. The Lord hereby magnifieth his power exceedingly, as paſſing all the underſtanding of man, how it comes to paſs that that the Earth hangeth in the midſt of the World, having nothing but inviſible foundations to ſuport it or to keep the Waves of the Sea from overflowing it, for they are kept in by nothing but the power of his command within their ſhoares, as within doors and bars. For the agreement with the argument in hand, Auguſtine ſaith, Hereby is myſtically meant, that he hath ſet his Church above the waters of adverſities, ſo that how high ſoever they ariſe, it is kept ſtil above them in ſafety, and ſo ſhall be for evermore, or it may agree thus, he will take in all Nations to be his in grace, becauſe all be his Creatures, he made them ſo admirable an Habitation at the firſt, and upholds it ſtil, ſhewing hereby how much he regards them, therefore he wil now extend his favour further towards them, by taking them in to be his people. Auguſt.

But ſith it is the good pleaſure of God thus to deal by all Nations, it is worth the inquiring, who amongſt all theſe ſhal dwel in the holy Mountain of the Lord, for all ſhall not; For many are called but few choſen. He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, &c. A paſſage much like unto that, Pſal. 15. But here it is added, He ſhall receive bleſſing from the Lord, and righteouſneſſe from the God of his ſalvation. That is, The bleſſing of aſcending and abiding in the holy place, and juſtification by faith, in his Saviour making him worthy. Verſ. 3. 4. Verſ. 5.

This is the generation of them that ſeek thy face, Jacob. That is, the true ſeed of Jacob or Iſraell, who ſought by prayer and ſaw God, when he wreſtled with him, whence the place where was called Peniell, from ſeeing God, according to which it is ſaid, John 1. 43. An Iſraelite indeed, in whom there is no guile. And it is ſaid, This is the generation. To denote a Generation which is from above of the ſpirit, as all others be from beneath of the fleſh, as John 3. And becauſe Chriſt is the head of this Generation, having ſaid that they ſhall dwel in the Mountain of the LORD; that is, Heaven on high, he foreſeeing in the ſpirit, Chriſts aſcention into Heaven, as the firſt fruits, and the opener of the way to all his members, calleth to the Heavens by a Proſopopeia. Verſ. 6. Rom. 5.

Lift up your heads (O yee Gates) and be lifted up yee everlaſting doors, and the King of glory ſhall come in. For Chriſt is the King of Glory, and he together with the Father is ſo mighty, For all power, ſaith he, Is given to me in Heaven and in Earth. And he doubteth the ſame ſpeech, for the joy that he had in the contemplation hereof; others I confeſſe are for another ſenſe, ſome that the Temple to be built by Solomon is meant, as Calvin, but becauſe thoſe Gates were not everlaſting, his comming into and filling the houſe in a cloud, cannot ſtand: Some, Chriſts entring into the Virgins Womb, ſome his coming and dwelling in our hearts by faith: But becauſe it agreeth beſt with the premiſes to expound it, as hath been ſaid, I reſt in that. Verſ. 7. Calvin.

PSAL. XXV.

TO thee O Lord I lift up my Soule. David praying here unto God, teacheth us in his example, when we pray, to do it with our hearts lifted up and not our voice only, as Hannah alſo did, and ſo we ſhall be ſure that praying in faith, as in the next words, we ſhall be heard and not be left to confuſion; but they who ſin by being enemies to us, and perſecuting us without cauſe, ſhall be confounded, as is meant by the words of Verſe 3. Verſ. 1.

Remember not the ſinnes of my youth. That he might obtain mercy, he prayed for the pardon of his ſinnes, not ſleightly, or looking at them which he had more lately committed, but even in his youth, intimating, That the ſinnes of youth if they be not pardoned, ſhall indanger the Soule as Verſ. 7.

wel as ſinnes of age; that young perſons may not think, that they may follow the luſts of their hearts and the delights of their eyes, and in ſo doing go ſcot-free, but know, that if for theſe, by turning to God and praying, they attain not forgiveneſſe, they ſhall be brought to judgment, and that no man can expect favour from God, except his ſinnes be firſt pardoned.

Verſ. 9. He will direct the poor. That is, The poor in ſpirit, that think themſelves ſuch, in reſpect of all riches of goodneſſe.

Verſ. 14. The ſecret of the Lord to thoſe that feare him, to make them know his Covenant. As if he had ſaid, It is not wit nor learning, that can ſee into the ſecrets of God, or the myſteries of his Kingdome, but to ſuch as truly feare him, it is given to know them, and to have ſolid comfort therein, according to that, Matth. 13. 12. To you it is given to know the ſecrets of the Kingdome of Heaven. That we may feare God indeed, and in our hearts, and not in ſhew only: For Hypocrites ſhall Heare and not underſtand, ſee and not perceive the truth, but run into divers errours to their damnation: By the Covenant the ſame is meant that by the feare, and in calling it a ſecert, he ſheweth the excellency thereof, as Calvin noteth,

1 Cor. 1. it being ſo tranſcendent, that all humane knowledge is but fooliſhneſſe in compariſon of it.

Verſ. 16. I am alone and poor. See the like before, Pſal. 22. 20. I truſt not in any other help, nor have any other but God alone.

Verſ. 21. Perfection and rectitude ſhall keep me. Some, ſaith Calvin, Underſtand this, as if he had prayed to be kept from uſing wicked meanes to be revenged upon his enemies, as they did againſt him to do him miſcheiſe; but that he might ſtil walk by the perfect and right rule: This he rejects, and ſaith, That he alledgeth his integrity and right walking all this time, howſoever he had been provoked by his malicious enemies to paſſe theſe bounds, yet not truſting hereunto, but to Gods mercy; for which he addeth, Becauſe I truſt in thee. And this is the true ſenſe, and who ſo will upon good ground truſt in God to be ſaved in time of danger, when he calleth upon him, muſt likewiſe lay his foundation in ſincerity, which is here and elſwhere commonly called Perfection.

Verſ. 22. Deliver Iſrael, O God, from all ſtreights. Or Redeem. Intimating the oppreſſion of the Church, either preſent or to come; and in his example we are taught, that the miſeries of the Church, ſhould as much affect us as our own, and when ever we pray for our ſelves, we ſhould pray for the whole Iſraell of God alſo. Touching this Pſalme, there is one thing noted by Ainſworth, wherein it is ſingular, Viz. That the verſes begin according to the Hebrew Alphabet א ב ג &c. Denoting it to be of ſingular uſe for all men, as alſo, Pſal. 119. 34. 37. 111. 112. 145. For the ſame cauſe.

PSAL. XXVI.

Verſ. 1. Judge me O Lord, becauſe I have walked in uprightneſſe, and have truſted in the Lord, I ſhall not ſlide or decline out of this way. The firſt words are a ſentence in themſelves, Judge me O Lord. And then the next are a reaſon, why he thus boldly appealeth to the Lord, he walked uprightly and truſted in him, and by this meanes was kept from going out of the right way, which made him confidently to ſet himſelfe before Gods judgment Seat: But he ſpeaks not thus, as meaning, that he was ſo exactly righteous in all things, as that his righteouſneſſe would hold, if he were brought to a ſtrict account before Gods judgment Seat, for in this ſenſe he confeſſeth, that no man living ſhal be juſtified, and therefore pleadeth, Enter not into judgment with thy Servant. But his appealing to God to be by him judged, judged, was in reſpect of his enemies, and his doings towards them, becauſe they detracted from him, and laid ſinnes to his charge, and by their malicious interpriſes, provoked him to render them evil for evil, ſee the like before, Pſal 17. 2. 18. 20. 21. But by all which they did wickedly againſt him, he was not moved to do the like unto them.

Examine my reines and my heart. That is, My moſt inward parts, that man cannot look into, but God can, and thus can no hypocrite ſay therefore, whoſe righteouſneſſe is no more then that which is open to every mans eye, but within he is ful of filthineſſe; and herein David ought to be a pattern to us to imitate, as we deſire to have boldneſſe and confidence before the Throne of Grace. Verſ. 2. Note.

I have not ſitten with vain perſons, &c. This is another point of uprightneſſe, not to conſort with wicked and vain or deceitful perſons, becauſe if a man conſorteth with ſuch, he ſhall hardly avoid defilement by their evil qualities, but learn to be vain of the vain, ſwearing of the ſwearer, lying and deceit of fraudulent perſons, &c. Verſ. 4. Note.

I will waſh my hands in innocency. Here he alludeth to the cuſtome of waſhing hands before ſacrificing, which all men commonly did, to ſignifie indeed how clean they endeavoured to keep themſelves from all impure actions, and if they had been through infirmity overtaken with ſin, that by the teares of repentance they did labour to waſh it away: For thus the Elders of any City, next unto a man found ſlain in the feild, were to waſh; and Pilate would ſhew his innocency by waſhing, in reſpect of Chriſts blood: Now all men waſhed therefore at ſuch times, but moſt only by an external waſhing, their hands being ful of blood, as is complained, Iſa. 1. 15. That is, They daily acting foule ſinnes herewith, of which they repented not to turn therefrom. This did not drive David away from Gods Altar, but he for his part waſhing in innocency, by keeping himſelfe clean from the ſinnes wherein they wallowed, as Swine in the mire, came confidently to ſerve him there: And therefore they are more ſcrupulous then David, who will have no communicating at the Lords Table nowadaies, becauſe the wicked intrude as well as the innocent and unblamable. Verſ. 6. Deut. 21. 6 Note.

I love the habitation of thy houſe. Having ſpoken of his compaſſing Gods Altar, and there praiſing him, now he ſheweth, what his affection was to his houſe, which was the Tabernacle, he dearely loved it, and to come thither to his worſhip and ſervice, and he calleth it the place of the dwelling of his glory, becauſe the glory of the Lord often appeared in the Tabernacle, and afterwards in the Temple built by Solomon: And who ſo is of Davids ſpirit loveth the Church likewiſe, or the place appointed for publick worſhip, for the Ordinances ſake that are there, the word and Sacraments, to work and confirme faith and all grace, becauſe our weakneſs doth and will alwaies need outward meanes of ſupport and ſtrengthening as long as we live, for no man is perfect in this life, but ſtrives after it, Phillippians 3. 9. Verſ. 8.

Gather not my Soule with ſinners, nor my life, &c. Sith I do thus ſincerely ſet my ſelfe to ſerve thee, and am ſeperated from the wicked and hypocrites in the courſe of my life, let my life alwaies be precious in thy ſight, and not left expoſed to deadly danger, as the lives of wicked and bloody men, who are threatned, that they ſhal not live out halfe their daies: And this indeed is the comfort of Gods Saints, that their blood is precious in his ſight. Verſ. 9.

My foot hath ſtood in the right, therefore will I bleſſe the. Some, ſaith Calvin, Expound this of Davids perſevering in the way of righteouſneſſe, which he approveth not; ſome of the ſafety wherein he was kept from his enemies, which he approves, but to me the firſt ſeems to be beſt, becauſe in ſpeaking, Verſe 1. of his not declining out of the way, he meaneth the way of juſt and righteous dealing, and Verſe 12. he ſaith, He walked in uprightneſſe. Verſ. 12.

uprightneſs. Wherefore moſt probably in ſaying, My foot hath ſtood in righteouſneſſe. He meaneth the ſame, and in acknowledgment that God gave him the grace ſo to do, when he had ſo many provocations by his enemies to the contrary, he praiſeth God therefore:

PSAL. XXVII.

Verſ. 1. THe Lord is my light and my ſalvation, of whom ſhall I be afraid, &c. David having prayed earneſtly to the Lord in the Pſalme before going, now triumpheth, as it were, over all his enemies, as being moſt confident by the experience of his favour ſhewed in former deliverances, that he ſhould ſtil ſtand by him and protect him, from all their malicious attempts againſt him, wherefore he cals him his light, to intimate his keeping him alive and ſafe from the darkneſſe of death, and his ſalvation, whereby he meaneth the ſame, as the next words, The ſtrength of my life, declare. And for his experience, whereupon he was thus confident, he ſpeaketh Verſe 2. And hereupon how void of all feare of his enemies he grew, Verſe 3. ſee the like, Pſal. 3.

Verſ. 4. David being in this ſafe condition, what doth he now think upon or look at, as his main ſcope, not as Pirrhus King of the Epirots, to ſit ſtil and to be merry, when he had overcome the Romans, and all his enemies, as he ſometime ſaid to Cyneas the Philoſopher, but to improve his reſt to perpetual piety, in going from day to day to Gods houſe, as Hannah is ſaid afterwards to have done, Luk. 2. And this firſt, For the ſolace of his Soule, in ſeeing the beauty of his Sanctuary. Secondly that he might ſtil be directed aright and be ſafe. Thirdly, That he might yet be more highly exalted in kingly Glory. Fourthly, For all this, as he ſhould have abundant cauſe, ſacrificing and ſinging Pſalmes to God without ceaſing Verſe, 5. 6.

Verſ. 8. My heart hath ſaid unto me, ſeek yee my face. He prayeth, Verſe 7. to be heard, and here he concludeth, My heart hath ſpoken to thee. That is, Thus I have prayed and that not without ground, for thou bidſt thy faithful Servants, Seek yee my face. Therefore I will ſeek it, and beleive that in ſeeking, thy face or favour ſhall be towards me, in approving and anſwering me as I deſire: And in this confidence we ſhould all ſeek Gods face, to have it turned towards us, as it is to all that cal upon him faithfully, and not away from us as from them, with whom he is angry, as Verſe 9. is further expreſſed: Ainſworth paraphraſeth thus upon the words; Thou haſt bidden us ſeek thy face, this my heart meditated upon, and upon this ground I will ſeek, ſeek it in my tentations: Calvin, My heart hath ſaid of thee, that this is thy invitation to thy Servants in diſtreſs. Seek yee my face, &c. The Reader may follow whether he pleaſeth, but I reſt in the firſt; and if it be demanded where God hath ſaid, Seek yee my face. He ſaid ſo in effect to Abraham, when he directed him to Mount Moriah, Gen. 22. To ſacrifice his Son, for then he ſhewed his face ſo to him, as that he departed ful of unſpeakable comfort, giving the place for the memory of it this name, Jehovah fireh, the Lord will be ſeen. And what was ſaid to Abraham by way of inviting him, is ſaid to all the faithful, who are his Children. And this muſt be the ground of our confidence in ſeeking to the Lord, Viz. his gracious inviting of us ſo to do, and this ſhould cauſe a readineſs in us to pray in all times of our trouble, yea and alwaies according to that precept, Pray continually.

Note.

Ainſworth.
Calvin.

Note.

Verſ. 10. Though, when, or for my Father and Mother forſake me, the Lord gathereth me. For the word כי may admit of either of theſe ſignifications: The meaning is not, that Davids Parents did in his troubles forſake him, for we may rather gather the contrary from the Hyſtory; but as Calvin wel wel expounds it, he meaneth, If it ſhould be ſo, hereby extolling Gods love and care above that of Parents, to whom their Children are moſt deare, as Iſa. 49.15. By gathering he meaneth, taking him to him, to ſave and cheriſh him.

Lead me in the path of right, becauſe of my enemies. That is, Both keeping me from all unrighteouſneſſe and ſin, whereby they may have advantage againſt me, and from any overſight in managing my affaires indiſcreetly: For both theſe waies enemies get advantage, but ſpecially by the firſt; as cunning Balaam knew wel enough when he counſelled Balaack to tempt the Hebrews to ſin, by the faire women of Midian, that he might fal before the Moabites. Verſ. 11.

Give me not to the Soule of my oppreſſours. Commonly rendred, To the deſire or will. As indeed the meaning is, for the wicked have ſo earneſt a deſire to oppreſſe the righteous, that they are carryed on, as it were, with all their Soule againſt them. Verſ. 12.

Except I had beleived to ſee the goodneſſe of the Lord in the Land of the living. This as all conſent, is an Eccliptical ſpeech, it being underſtood, I had periſhed by the hands of mine enemies, whereas Calvin ſpeaks of ſome that take it for an oath, there is no colour of reaſon for it, but that it is an expreſſion, by what meanes he was preſerved, and that his enemies had not their wil of him, there is good reaſon, becauſe having thus prayed, Verſe 12. It moſt aptly followeth, that he ſhould deciare by what meanes it came to paſs that they had it not, for he truſted to ſee Gods goodneſs in the Land of the living, that is, By being ſtil preſerved here to gloriſy him, which he ſhould not have been, unleſs he had confidently truſted in God; whereby we may ſee, what the benefit of faith is, that we alſo may beleive and be preſerved, although as Calvin noteth, every ones caſe is not like Davids, who had particular promiſes concerning this life, beyond many other faithful perſons, yet becauſe according to our faith, it ſhall be unto us, let us likewiſe truſt in God in our diſtreſſes, as every one is hereupon exhorted, Verſe 14. Verſ. 13. Note.

PSAL. XXVIII.

THIS Pſalme, as the former, is alſo a moſt earneſt prayer made by David unto God, that he would heare and anſwer him, as who did ſo depend upon this, as that without it, he accounted himſelfe to differ nothing from a dead man, Verſe 2. He mentioneth the lifting up of his hands, as a ſign of his ſeeking help only from above, and Pſal. 134. He bids us lift up our hands, and Moſes his hands were lifted up, and Iſrael prevailed, which reproveth the remiſneſſe of moſt men in praying, who lift up no hands, nor make any outward expreſſion, ſurely it meweth a dead heart, and yet if this be done in hypocriſie it availeth not neither, for with the hands the heart muſt be lifted up, that we may prevail, To thy holy Oracle, or the Oracle of thy ſanctuary. The moſt holy place being thus called, דביר from דבר to ſpeak, becauſe there the Lord gave anſwer. Verſ. 2. Note.

Draw me not with the wicked. See a like ſpeech before, and the expoſition, Pſal. 26.9. Verſ. 3.

Give to them according to their works. Having prayed that he might not be drawn with the wicked, as it were, to the ſame common execution, Verſe 3. Here he prayeth, that they might be dealt with according to their doings towards others, which we muſt not conceive yet came from troubled affections, or a deſire of private revenge, for then it had been evil, but from zeale for Gods glory, and a prophetical ſpirit, by thus praying, ſhewing Verſ. 4.

ing that it ſhould be ſo, aiming yet alwaies at this, that the wicked enemies being judged in this World, might at the laſt be made ſo aſhamed of their evil doings, that they might be brought to repentance and ſaved,

Note. as he elſewhere expreſſeth: Any imprecations which are not thus moderated, or made againſt any without abundance of ſin, by them firſt committed and long perſiſted in, come from the fleſh and are ſinful; for he ſaith not only, Their works, But the evil of their doings, and the works of their hands, To ſhew that they were very many, and committed time after time without end.

Verſ. 5. For they underſtand not the works of the Lord. Here he ſheweth the ground of mens ſo audaciouſly going on in doing evil, they ſet not their mindes awork to ſee into and conſider Gods works of judgment againſt ſinners, to be hereby deterred from ſin, as the deſtruction of the old World and of Sodom, &c. Or his works of making the Sun to ſhine, and the rain to fal upon the bad as wel the good, as a meanes to win them to repentance, and for want of this conſideration, they go on in ſin without ceaſing: Neither do they conſider it as his work, when the godly ſuffer by the wicked, or otherwiſe for their chaſtiſement or tryal of their faith, which makes them think, that it is all one to feare God or not to feare him, but we contrariwiſe muſt ſee the work of God both in the proſperity of the wicked, and the adverſity of the godly, and conſider the end of his thus dealing with either, with the wicked to aggravate their condemnation, with the godly for their future greater reward in his Kingdome, and we muſt have his works of judgment in minde, to be confirmed more in his feare.

He will deſtroy them and not build them. Some render it, Will deſtroy, or ſhall deſtroy. As if it were ſpoken of this their inconſiderate going on in ſin, but moſt render, He will. That is, The Lord, both may wel agree, for when men are deſtroyed for ſin, it may be ſaid to do it, as elſewhere, The ſin whioh the wicked doth ſlayeth him. Or God for ſin, and it is added, And not build them up. To ſhew their everlaſting deſtruction, without ever recovering again.

Verſ. 6. Bleſſed be the Lord for he hath heard. As he prayed ſo he beleived, and Verſ. 7. in aſſured expectation of victory over his enemies, he exulteth in God, Verſ. 8. as his ſheild and ſtrength, Verſe 7. For the next words, Verſe 8. The Lord is ſtrength to them. Heb. it is לָמוֹ To him, or with him. Hereby ſome underſtand praiſe aſcribed to God, as being the ſtrength of the people, helping David in his wars, ſome ſtrength ſimply aſcribed to God, as if it had been ſaid, He hath ſtrength. Which I prefer, but ſo the ſenſe is the ſame. it was not by his own, but by the ſtrength and power of God that he prevailed. And the ſtrength of the ſalvations of his Anointed. Hebrew, He the Anointed, or Chriſt the ſtrength of ſalvations. Whereby all power is aſcribed unto Chriſt Jeſus, to ſave at all times all ſuch as beleive in him, to Note. their aſſured comfort: And of David learn we to beleive likewiſe when we pray, and when we have victory over our enemies, to aſcribe the power whereby to him alone, and not unto our ſelves, looking upon Chriſt alſo, though deſpiſed by the Jews as weak and unable to ſave himſelf, as being of all power to ſave, both temporally when he pleaſeth and eternally.

Verſ. 9. According to this profeſſion of the power of the Lord, and of Chriſt to ſave, Verſe 9. He concludeth, Save thy people, &c. By heritage added meaning the ſame, for Gods people are his Heritage, and he prayeth that they may be lifted Up for ever, being advanced above all other peoples

Note. upon earth, by ſpiritual bleſſings, and afterwards in Heaven, and ſo it is promiſed, Deut. 32. 13. And hereby we are taught not to pray for our ſelves alone, but for the whole Church of God as we commonly do, and are expreſly bidden, Pray for the peace of Jeruſalem.

PSAL.

PSAL. XXIX.

Aſcribe to the Lord yee Sons of the mighty: David ſeeing, that of all others the greateſt in this world to be readieſt to rob God of his honour by their pride and lofty carriage of themſelves above the common ſort, as if they were divine Gods, calls upon them in this Pſalme to aſcribe all Glory to God by an humble Deportment, of how great dignity ſoever they were in this world. For which purpoſe he puts them in mind, as not likely otherwiſe to be wrought upon, of a ſenſible ſign of Gods almighty power, making the proudeſt and ſtouteſt heart to tremble, Viz. the Thunder; For this made even Caius Caligula, that proud Romane Emperour, (who would have divine Honour done unto him, and that he might be counted a God, had Devices to thunder and lighten) to tremble and to haſten into ſome Cave of the Earth for fear, when it thundred indeed: And for this cauſe David is ſo copious in ſetting forth the powerfull Effects of this voice of God, the Thunder, Verſe 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. He calls not upon the mighty to give Glory to God, as if all others were not Bound to do the like, but becauſe it was hardeſt to bring them to do it. And therefore (yee Potentates, learn hereby to conſider your ſin of pride, and affectation of all honour and worldly pomp, and flee it, as thinking your ſelves unworthy, and God only worthy, who hath advanced you to this height of greatneſs, the more high thou art, be the more lowly minded, and bend all thy forces to the Glorifying of God, whoſe very voice will terrify thee if thou doeſt not, be then as magnanimous as thou canſt: The Hebrew word here uſed ſignifieth alſo Ramms, and therefore the Sept. render it, Give to the Lord yee ſons of Rams: But the Hebrewes do all agree in the Sons of the mighty, but as Calvin ſayth, ſome by them underſtand Angells, ſome the Starrs, ſome the holy Patriarcks, which is altogether from the purpoſe: For mighty men and proud are ſpoken to, as hath been ſayd, who ſhall be all brought down and abaſed, if they repent not, and do as is here exhorted, ſee Iſa. 2. 12. Verſ. 1. Note.

Worſhip him in the Beauty of the Sanctury: This is ſpoken according to the manner then preſcribed, when all that would worſhip the true God rightly were required to do it at the Tabernacle, and at the Temple, when it was built, this being ſet up as a ſign of his preſence during the time that he would have his People worſhip him by outward things: And whoſoever eyther worſhipped Images or other things, or the Lord, but not in his Sanctuary was not accepted of as a Worſhipper of the true God. Now the true worſhippers worſhip God in ſpirit and in truth, and if any go to Jeruſalem to do it, or by an Image, or in any holy place, thinking that the place makes his Prayers the more available, he erreth in the way of Superſtition inſtead of Devotion, yet for orders ſake to joyn together in Prayer we muſt come to Cods Sanctuaries, and being there, no man is to think, that he erreth, who prayeth by himſelf whilſt the publick prayers are not yet begun, becauſe we are bidden, Pray continually, and in every place, therefore certainly not debarred, when we are in the houſe of Prayer, as not only the Temple, but every Synagogue is called, Pſal. 74. 8. Verſ. 2. Joh. 4.

The voice of the Lord is above the Waters: Here by voice he meaneth Thunder, as is by and by expreſſed, and it is ſayd to be above the waters, becauſe it is heard above the watery Clouds, and he addeth, Above many waters, meaning in the loud ſound thereof: For although abundance of Water gathered togethet roare and make a horrible noiſe, yet the Thunder makes a noiſe more terrible: And he ſingles out this amongſt the powerfull works of God, becauſe, that even naturall men are moſt affected with it, and cannot when they hear it thunder greatly, but quake and fear, Verſ. 3.

as I inſtanced before in C. Caligula, and Calvin, in Horace, who confeſſed that whilſt he did little worſhip God and wandred after mad Wiſdome, he was compelled to turn ſail, and to iterate the courſe left, and that by the bright fire dividing the clouds, when he drives through his thundring horſes and Chariot.

Hor. Igne coruſco nubila dividens plerumque per purum tonantes egit equos, volucrem que currum.

Verſ. 5. The voice of the Lord breaking the Cedars, &c. By the effects of the thunder and lightning upon the talleſt and greateſt Trees upon Wilderneſſes and Mountains and wild beaſts, he ſheweth how dreadfull Gods voice is in his thundring, that if dumb and dead things be moved hereby, living men might much more be moved to fear God, who is thus terribble when he utters his voice, Philoſophers ſtrain their wits much to find out the cauſe of Thunder and lightning, and have found it out ſo far forth as concerns the immediate or ſecondary cauſe, but what is this, when they reſt here, and ſearch no further, who giveth fire to that matter within the Cloud making it ſo terribly to roar, and lightnings and thunder-bolts to break through, deſtroying both houſes and men and beaſts, in ſuch an irreſiſtable and unſpeakable manner: What is it, ſayth Calvin, but to look only upon the fingers ends of him whom we ſhould know and fear, and never aſcend higher to ſee his glorious face. For then only do men ſearch rightly into the canſe of the Thunder, when they look up to God whoſe terrifying voice it is, for his power and terribleneſs to ſinners, to ſtand in awe of him, aud not to dare to go on in ſin.

Verſ. 6. Lebanon and Shirion like a young Unicorn: Lebanon was a forreſt full of Cedars, which the voice of the LORD is ſayd before to have broken, Shirion is otherwiſe called mount Hermon, Deut. 3. 9. It lay on the other ſide of Jordan, where Ogge raigned, Joſh. 12. 1. 5. He ſayth, they leaped by an Hyperbole.

Verſ. 8. Maketh the Wilderneſs of Kadeſh to tremble: By the Wilderneſs meaning the ſavage Beaſts therein, the Wilderneſs of Kadeſh had the name from the City Kadeſh, by which it lay, Num. 20. 1. 16. It was very large & ful of moſt fierce wild beaſts, being otherwiſe called the Wilderneſs of Para and Zin, through which the Iſraelites paſſed, Numb. 13. 27. and he ſpeaks of theſe places in particular, becauſe beſt known to the Jews, but hereby meaning all places, and Creatures inhabiting therein, for this voice of the Lord peirceth into them all.

Verſ. 9. The voice of the Lord makes the Hinds to bring forth: Amongſt all other beaſts he inſtanceth particularly in the Hinds, as which bring forth their young with greateſt difficulty, which the Lord alſo ſpeaks of, Job 39. 3. Shee boweth her ſelf, brings forth her young, and caſts out her ſorrows, And ſpeaking of it as one of his wonderfull works, he asketh, Who can tell how ſhee bringeth forth? Yet God by this his voice peirceth into the hidden places of the thickeſt Forreſts, where ſhee keeps at ſuch times, and by ſtriking fear and trembling into her, cauſeth her inſtantly to bring forth, and yet her young miſcarry not, but live and are well liking, Job. 39. 4. And makes bare the Forreſts: That is, whereas they are covered with Trees and buſhes ſo thick, that the wild beaſts are hidden in them from the ſight of men, yet they lye open to his Thunder, nothing can hide or cover them therefrom. Some expound this making bare, of ſtorms beating off the leaves and fruits of Trees, but this is more genuine, as agreeing beſt with the Premiſes about Hinds hidden in thickets there, And in his houſe or Palace, (For ſo the word ſignifieth, all his ſay) Glory, That is, All the faithfull give him Glory and praiſe continually, and they are deſcribed by their being in his houſe, to intimate, that ſuch only are his faithfull people, as be of his Church, and repaire diligently to his Sanctuary, to worſhip him together there from time to time. And this may eyther be underſtood thus, the voice of God worketh upon the dumb and dead Creatures to make them fear, and without this tertifyiug means, his faithfull people ſerve him with the ttembling and feare in his houſe, giving him glory, therefore be moved alſo yee mighty ones to do likewiſe; of the Creatures he ſpake before, of his faithfull people here; or thus, ſuch be the effects of his voice in all parts of the World, but amongſt none is glory aſcribed unto him, but amongſt his own people, who repair to his houſe, and imbrace the truth there taught, never departing from it, or from the right way of worſhipping and ſerving him, others heare and ſee ſuch prodigies, and are for the preſent affected with them, but by reaſon of the blindneſſe of their eyes, ſee not ſo much of God as to be moved to feare and ſerve him, whoſe voice is ſo powerful, and who ſheweth hereby with what power he will one day come to be avenged upon all men, that know and feare him not; which is the uſe that indeed they ſhould make of this his terrible declaring of himſelf: And this paſſage is to be noted; In his houſe every one of his ſhall ſay, Glory. And I wiſh it may be conſidered, whether it be not a ground of that cuſtome in the Church, of ſaying often, Glory be to the Father, &c.

Note.

and

The Lords ſits upon the flood. Some ſaith Calvin, refer this to the Deluge in Noah his time, which they ſay is remembred here, as another terrible act of Gods power, that the conſideration hereof might make the greateſt to feare God, but he rather takes it, as ſpoken of Gods ſending great floods of water at ſundry times, making men afraid, that all would be drowned again, but ſitting as King, as he expreſſeth in the next words, he ruleth this raging Element ſo, that his promiſe may be kept, of never drawning the World again, and therefore timely ſtaying it from making ſuch a deſtruction any more: And this is beſt and moſt agreeable to the word here uſed, Not ſat, but ſitteth. Denoting a continued act of his providence. Verſ. 10. Calvin.

The Lord will give ſtrength to his people. That is, As he ſheweth his power to the preſervation of all men generally throughout the World, ſo much more in peculiar manner, he wil extend it to the ſtrengthening of his againſt their enemies, and to eſtabliſh the bleſſing of peace and proſperity amongſt them, as the next words do ſhew; for godlineſſe hath the promiſe, not of the life to come only, but of this life alſo. Verſ. 11.

PSAL. XXX.

A Pſalme ſung at the dedication of the houſe of David, Deut. 20. 5. It is commanded that when a man built him a new houſe, he ſhould dedicate it to the Lord, in acknowledgment that the whole land of Canaan was his in a peculiar manner, and that they who built houſes there did it, as Tenants under him the great Land-Lord of them all, and this dedicating, as may hence be gathered, was by ſolemnly ſinging praiſes to God, the Author of all their welfare, whereunto moſt probably feaſting was added: And although we be not bound by the ceremonial Laws given to the Jews, yet we may hence learn, to account our houſes Gods houſes, and therein as in his houſe ſet a part to worſhip him in, to praiſe him, and to do other duties of piety daily, as repeating his commandements, and charging each houſholder his Children and Servants to feare God, and keep them from day to day. Deut. 6. 7. And this Pſalme moſt probably was made, when David had built his houſe, ſpoken of 2 Sam. 5. 11. Some expound it of his houſe, to which he returned again, after that he had fled from it for feare of Abſalom, who poluted it by inceſtuous going in to his Concubines, being hereunto moved, becauſe it is ſaid, That he had been ſo ſtrongly ſetled, that he thought he ſhould never be moved, but the Lord hid his face and he was ſmitten, Verſe 7, 8. But becauſe no ſuch dedication uſed to be made but of an houſe new built, this expoſition falleth:

Some as the Cald. paraphraſt, expound it of the houſe of the Lord, becauſe David built him a Tabernacle; ſome, of the houſe of God re-edifyed, after the Jews return from Babylon, but without any colour of reaſon; the firſt therefore only ſtands firme, but whereas the contents ſeeme to make againſt it, we ſhall conſider that, as we come unto them. Auguſtine who draweth all things to Chriſt in every Pſalme, by Davids houſe here underſtands Heaven, where the Saints dwel for ever in peace and tranquility.

Verſ. 2. I cryed unto thee and thou healedſt me. From hence ſome gather, that David had been dangerouſly ſick, about the time that he was building, but recovered his health again, this is mentioned by Calvin, but he rather thinketh ſome other danger meant, wherein David was, becauſe it is not unuſual to ſpeak of deliverances from deadly dangers by this word Healing: But what other danger, unleſſe by ſickneſſe, can we imagine David to have been in about this time, which he confeſſeth juſtly befel him, for his foregoing ſecurity upon the eſtabliſhing of his Kingdome, which he calleth his Mountain made ſo ſtrong: For we read not of any danger by enemies before this dedication, but altogether of his proſperity, after his anointing King in Hebron, by the men of Judah; Sauls houſe continually waxing weaker, and his ſtronger, it muſt needs be therefore ſome dangerous ſickneſſe out of which he lately recovered, that he toucheth upon, and praiſeth God for it: And this is further confirmed, Verſe 3. Where he ſaith, Thou haſt delivered my Soule from the grave, &c. Becauſe in deadly ſickneſſe a man is neere to the grave, and going down to the pit, but health being reſtored again, he is delivered.

Calvin.

Verſ. 3.

Verſ. 4. Praiſe the Lord his holy or mercifull ones, for the elect of God have alwaies this property, that they are merciful, as hath been before noted upon Pſal. 4. 3. For a remembrance of his holineſſe. That is, That his holineſſe whereby all goodneſs and graciouſneſs is meant, may alwaies be had in remembrance, as it ought by all his people: For we muſt not only pray in time of danger by ſickneſs or otherwiſe, but being delivered, praiſe God from time to time, thus putting that which he doth for us upon record, as it were, to the end, that others may alſo be drawn to feare and ſerve God, who is ſo good and gracious to them that call upon him.

Note.

Verſ. 5. A moment in his wrath, but in his being well pleaſed Life, or Lives, as the word properly ſignifieth: Thus David and others like David account of their Afflictions, although they be oft times long and greivous, both becauſe all the time of our ſufferings is but as a moment, being compared with the joyes of the life to come, as 2 Cor. 4. 1. And becauſe the inward comfort by the ſpirit in the faithfull, doth ſo overpoiſe them, that even in their Sufferings their joy is greater then their Sorrow for the pardon of their ſins, and peace with God, Rom. 5. 1. See the like promiſe to this, Iſa. 54. 7.

Note. Contrariwiſe worldlings think any thing that they ſuffer greivous to be born, and if it continueth, that none are puniſhed like unto them, and therefore they murmure and complain always, and have their hearts ſtirred up againſt God as their Enemy, or they look only at ſecondary cauſes, being full of ſpleen againſt them. But in ſuch is not the ſpirit of God, but the ſpirit of the world, which is the ſpirit of Bondage, contrary to the faithfull who have not this, but the ſpirit of Adoption. Whereas he varyeth the word, ſaying, Weeping ſhall lodge in the evening or night, but joy in the Morning: The ſame is meant, that before, and not according to the Letter, that all and every faithfull perſon ſhall find it thus from day to day, but though in this life as in the night of ſorrows, they ſuffer greivous things, yet as after the darkneſs of the night, the morning light comes on, ſo the morning of the Reſurrection ſhall put a full End to all their miſeries for ever, neither ſhall they lye always in miſery in this life, but ſhall have ſome mornings of joy and comfort by deliverances.

Rom. 8. 16.

I ſaya

I ſayd in my proſperity, I ſhall never be moved: Here David confeſſeth his ſin, for which the Lord layd that dangerous viſitation upon him, before ſpoken of, which was carnall ſecurity, by reaſon of his continuall good ſucceſs: For this was no little but a great ſin, to truſt in worldly things, which are alwayes flitting and uncertain, as if there were ſtability in them. For what is this, but for a man fondly to think himſelf exempted from the common condition of all others, ſith every mans eſtate here is uncertain and vain, when it is at the beſt, and what can follow hereupon but pride, and diſdain of others, a licentious life in pleaſure and negligence in the Worſhip and ſervice of God, and a diminution of our confidence in him. That we may all take heed of this ſin, and in proſperity think we are not ſure to continue long herein, and therefore not truſt in it, but in God only. Verſ. 6. Note.

Thou hadſt made my hill ſo ſtrong, This he ſpeaks in alluding to mount Zion, where he dwelt, which was a moſt ſtrong place, held before by the Jebuſites, even till his time, but they were by him ſubdued, and he having gotten poſſeſſion, dwelt there and fortified it more, 2 Sam. 5. 7. 9. But this was his ſin, that having done ſo, he now truſted to the ſtrength of the place, and not in God alone, who made it ſo ſtrong to him: It is a good confidence in reſpect of Gods Grace in Chriſt to beleive, that we ſhall never be herefrom moved by Satan, or any thing that his accurſed inſtruments can do againſt us, as Rom. 8. 35. Becauſe we are built upon a Rock, but not herein to be without fear and ſolicitude that may keep us from ſin, according to Rom. 11. Phil. 2. 12. Thou hiddeſt thy face, and I was troubled, here he ſheweth how he ſmarted for this carnall ſecurity, although we read not now that he lived after the manner of carnall men in proſperity, in laying the Reines looſe to his inordinate affections, to follow any ſinfull pleaſure, yet this very thing, that he truſted to his own ſtrength in this world, was before God counted ſuch a ſin in him, that he turned from his wonted kindnes towards him, which is meant by his hiding of his face, and afflicted him ſore. And well is it with thoſe, who are thus met withall in their proſperity, if their hearts begin to be likewiſe infatuated: For otherwiſe it hath been ſhewed by many Experiments, they are in a way of utter ruine, as he of whom Ambroſe writes, to whom he came to lodge, but hearing that he never had any adverſity, he immediatly departed, as from one to whom he feared ſome deadly danger to be neer, and he being gone, the Houſe ſuddenly fell down and ſlew him; and Creſſus, who was in like proſperous condition, had a fall by Cyrus, into whoſe hands he and all his wealth came, and he was adjudged to be burnt to death, although the King when Execution was ready to be done, ſpared him, in conſideration of his own uncertain condition. And if David meerly for his carnall confidence, was ſore ſmitten, what ſhall become of them, that by reaſon of their worldly proſperity think all things to be lawfull for them, that they liſt to do, and live accordingly in all ſenſuality. Verſ. 7. Note. Quicquid libet licet.

What profit is there in my blood, ſhall the duſt praiſe thee? To inforce his prayer of Verſ. 8. the more he takes an Argument from hence, that it would not conduce ſo much to Gods praiſe now to take away his life, he being but newly come to the Kingdome promiſed him, becauſe God had choſen him not only to be King, but alſo to ſettle the Kingdome upon him and his poſterity for ever: But if he were ſo ſoon taken out of this life, where were the truth of this promiſe, when neither he had reigned long, neither had he Iſſue that ſhould ſucceed him yet born. Wherefore in ſaying, What profit or advantage in my bloud, he meaneth that it would not make for Gods Glory, becauſe it would not redound to his praiſe, yet to turn him to the duſt from which he was taken, but make againſt it, he that ſhould for his promiſe accompliſhed, celebrate his praiſes, and publiſh his truth being cut of by an immature death, it is not meant, that the Saints departing out of this life, do not any longer praiſe God, for they are as the Angels, who Verſ. 10.

who ceaſe not crying, Holy, holy, holy, &c. Iſa. 6. And ſinging Halalujah in Heaven, Revel. But that they do it not in the hearing of men upon Earth, in way of exciting one another, as Calvin wel noteth: See ſomething like unto this before, Pſal. 6.

Verſ. 11. Thou haſt looſened my ſack, &c. That which he prayed before being nothing elſe, but a declaration, how he had pleaded in the time of this danger, he here ſheweth, how the Lord heard him and healed him, giving to him therefore condigne praiſe: But whereas Calvin conceiveth his mentioning of ſackcloath, to be an overthrowing of our foregoing Expoſition, that it was ſome dangerous ſickneſs out of which he was delivered, becauſe in time of ſickneſs they did not put on ſackcloath, though they did in mourning upon other occaſions, this is eaſily anſwered, the putting of ſackcloath is not properly to be underſtood here, but metaphorically in this place, it being meant, that he had delivered him out of that ſorrowful caſe, and brought him into a joyful, for his health reſtored.

Verſ. 12. That glory may ſing Pſalmes to thee. The Sept. for further expreſſion inſert (my) and indeed his tongue or Soule is meant here by glory, as alſo, Pſal. 16. 9. And ſuch a tongue is truly a mans glory, but an evil tongue his foule ſhame.

PSAL. XXXI

ONE, ſaith Calvin, thinks this Pſalme to have been compoſed by David, when he eſcaped ſo narrowly out of the Wilderneſs of Maon from Saul, 1 Sam 23.25. And if it be ſo underſtood, the argument of the Pſalme agreeth very well; for herein he firſt profeſſeth his great confidence in God, and accordingly commends himſelfe to his protection, Verſe 1. &c. to the 7. 2. He praiſeth God for delivering him, Verſe 8. 3 He declareth in what a dangerous condition he was, and how deſolate and forſaken, Verſe 9. 10. &c. to Verſe 14. 4. He profeſſeth his confidence again, and praies, Verſe 14. to Verſe 19. 5. He praiſeth Gods goodneſſe and mercy both towards him and all that feare him, Verſe 19. 20. and to Verſe 23.6. An exhortation is by him made to all the faithful, to put their truſt alwaies in him, promiſing that ſo doing they ſhall be ſafe, Verſe 23. 24. And thoſe words, Verſe 7. 8. make ſpecially for this conjecture, that it was compiled after his deliverance from Saul in Maon, becauſe he ſaith, Thou haſt not ſhut me up in the hands of my enemie. Forſomuch as he was then very neer falling into his hands, he being with his men on the one ſide of the mountain, and David on the other, and Saul now ready to come upon him, but by the good providence of God, at that inſtant, news came to Saul, that the Philiſtims invaded the Land, whereby he was immediatly called off from his purſuit of him: And this is alſo favoured by the words of Verſe 13. They conſult together againſt me, and think to take away my life. For both the men of Keilah a little before joined with Saul againſt him, and he was never neerer looſing his life then at this time, and Verſe 15. Deliver me from the hands of them that perſecute me. Intimating that he was then purſued, as he was indeed at that time very hard; yet it is not unlikely, but that he had reſpect to other deliverances alſo, wherein God had likewiſe ſhewed his providence over him, to ſave him from the like danger: Here is nothing difficult but what hath been often ſaid before in the 1. 2. and 3. Verſes.

Verſ. 4. Bring me out of the net, which they have ſpread for me, by theſe words he intimateth, that his Enemies did not only by open force come againſt him, but by cunning and policy attempted to circumvent him, as when they put him on, as Saul inſtructed them, to be the Kings Son in law, and to this this end ſet him on to get two hundred foreskins of the Philiſtims for a dowry, under a Pretence of good wil ſeeking his ruine, and when wait was layd for him to kill him in his houſe, &c. But truſted in God and prayed to be delivered, if there ſhould be any the like Enterpriſe againſt him hereafter.

Into thy hands I commend my ſpirit: David having prayed in his danger, unto God, now reſolveth to commit the care of his life to him, nothing doubting, but that he was able to preſerve it in the midſt of a thouſand dangers, and accordingly our LORD JESVS being ready to dye, ſayth, Into thy hands, O Father, I commend my ſpirit: and Steven after his Example, Lord Jeſus receive my ſpirit: And likewiſe every faithfull perſon by his laſt Will and Teſtament, wherefore we are without doubting to beleive, that God is the keeper of every faithfull perſons life in this world, to be courageous and fear nothing in doing our Dutyes, although we ſee apparently deadly danger hanging over our heads therefore, and when we ſee this life ready to depart, ſtill to do the ſame and fear not, but that he will preſerve our Souls to Eternity. For want of this, men are full of Feares, making them uncomfortable in ſickneſs and Puſillanimous in danger of men looking terribly upon them, forgetting that of our Saviour, Fear not man that can kill the body, &c. And by this means we are diven from God, and do things which we ought not, to the indangering of our Soules through his diſpleaſure, whereas if this were ſetled in our mindes, that he is the Keeper of our lives, we would confidently caſt our care upon him, come life or death, and be comfortable in ſuffering and even in dying, as is ſayd, Rom. 5. 1. But now where is there a man that is chearly in troubles or ſickneſs, although in proſperity moſt frolick and merry? The next words, Thou haſt redeemed me: Are the Ground of his commending his Spirit to God, becauſe he had formerly delivered him, and he calleth him, God of truth, as who having promiſed and ſtood hitherto by him, would never fayl to ſave him. Verſ. 5. Act. 7. 59.

I hate thoſe that obſerve vanities of deceit, or lying vanities: Hereby he meaneth the vanities of Idolaters, againſt whom he had proteſted before, Pſa. 16. for it is uſuall in Scripture by this word Vanity, to ſet forth their practiſes and Images, wherein they truſted, Deut. 32. 21. 1 Kings 16. 26. 2 King. 17. 15. Jer. 2. 5. 8. 19. And in this ſenſe it is ſayd, Jonah 2. 8. They that obſerve lying vanities forſake their own mercy: Calvin by vanities underſtands any thing of this world, that may draw a mans mind from God, and worldly profits and pleaſures indeed are lying vanities alſo, for all are called vanity of vanity, Eccl. 1. And they are lying, becauſe there is in them a ſhew of good and happineſs, drawing the mind after them ſo, that God and his Lawes are caſt behind the back, as hated; but this ſhew of good will appear one day to be deceitfull and lying, when gain ſhall be turned into loſs, and pleaſure into pain intollerable for ever. And therefore we may underſtand the words of theſe vanities alſo, but more properly of the Superſtitions of Idolaters, becauſe it is ſayd, that keep or hold, as the word ſignifieth, intimating a ſtiff ſtanding for them in an opinion of piety, the true God and his ſervice being for them neglected, as if eternal happineſs ſhould thus be attained, whereas they that are drawn by other vanities look at none other end but benefit, or pleaſure here, and what they aime at they have for a time, but the Superſtitious nothing for their coſt and paines, ſo that theſe of all others are the moſt meer vanities, yet the next words, But I have truſted in thee Lord: Oppoſed to the former do ſhew that any vanities at large are meant, whereunto men truſt, either in reſpect of this Life or the Life to come whether Idols, gain, or pleaſure. Verſ. 6. Calvin.

Mine eye is conſumed with Wrath, Hereby he ſheweth, that his Afflictions were not light or of ſhort continuance, but great and tedious, cauſing ſome impatience in him: As Calvin noteth, and ſo it happeneth through the infirmity of the fleſh ſometimes to the beſt of Gods Servants, but not to make them go from God who ſmiteth them, as the murmuring Iſraelites, but Verſ. 4. Calvin.

but to turn and pray the more earneſtly to him, as David here doth, and Hoſ. 8. 1. And he ſets forth his low condition, to which he was brought by the conſuming of his eyes: Ainſworth renders it, My eye is gnawn upon with wrath. Calvin, Computruit. New Tran. Conſumed with greife. And if by wrath we underſtand Gods wrath, whereby he now ſuffered, it is not improbable, becauſe, Verſe 10. He imputes theſe his ſufferings to his ſinnes or iniquities, it may well be rendred Greife, the effect being put for the cauſe: He names his eye, which by long ſufferings is ill affected and ſinketh, and his ſoule and belly, meaning the whole man pined away and infeebled.

Verſ. 10. My life is ſpent, my ſtrength decayed through mine iniquity, &c. Which words tend further to expreſſe his greivous miſery, and the cauſe thereof, his iniquity whereupon he commonly layeth it, and ſo ſhould every faithful man, and not look only at ſecondary cauſes, becauſe no man liveth and ſinneth not, yet by iniquity here he meaneth, not only ſin, but miſery cauſed hereby, as is common in other places.

Verſ. 11. For all mine enemies I was a reproach, even to my very neighbours, &c. That is, I had ſo many and great enemies, that all men counted it a reproach unto them to ſhew me any countenance, although formerly my neer neighbours and friends, I was a terrour to them, by reaſon of Saul, that raged ſo againſt Abimeleck, and other Prieſts of God for my ſake, they feared to be ſeen comming neer me, or having any thing to do with me.

Verſ. 12. As a dead man out of minde. Hebrew, Out of heart. So ſpoken, becauſe no man thought upon him in his heart, but they were towards him, as to one long dead, who is remembred no more but forgotten, for ſo the dead are ſet forth, Eccle. 9. 5. Pſal. [illegible] 13. And as a broken veſſel, then which nothing is more neglected, as being of no uſe.

Verſ. 13. Calvin. For I have heard the reproach of many, or as Calvin hath it, Of great ones. Juſtifying that reading the rather, becauſe it is not ſo greivous to be ſpoken ill of amongſt many of the vulgar ſort, that are light and vain, but have no power, but when Princes or other great ones ſhall ſpeak reproachfully of a man, he may wel feare then, that there is evil towards him: And this he further confirmeth from the next words, Feare on every ſide, they take counſel againſt me. For this did not the common ſort, but the Nobles about Saul, as being of his counſel.

Verſ. 15. My times are in thy hands. That is, The times ſet for me to ſuffer and to be delivered, ſo that I ſhall not be under affliction any longer then the times ſet by thee; in this reſpect my moſt potent enemies have no power, do thou therefore, who alone canſt do it, put an end to the time of my perſecutions, and grant me a time of peace and comfort.

Verſ. 19. How great is thy goodneſſe, which thou haſt hidden for them that feare thee. From himſelf in particular, he proceeds to ſhew generally, that the Lord is good and beneficent to all that feare him, and he ſaith, Which thou haſt hidden. To intimate, that he ſeemeth ſometimes not to regard them, when they are under divers ſufferings and long, but there is goodneſs towards them comming, although it yet appeareth not, whereupon they muſt reſt, goodneſs here and goodneſs hereafter, here to break out in time, Before the Sons of men. So that even worldly men ſhall ſee in this life, and do often ſee the righteous riſing out of miſery to proſperity; as Job, Joſeph, David, the Jews returning out of captivity, the Chriſtian Church out of perſecution to honour, in the time of Conſtantine the great: And Col. 3. 3. hereafter there is a life, which is hid with Chriſt in God, And hidden Manna. Of which it ſhall be given to him that overcometh, to eate, Revelations 2. 17.

Verſ. 20. Thou ſhalt hide them in the ſecret of thy face, from the pride of man. Hebrew, רכסי Known prides. Whereby their harſh dealings with the righteous teous in pride and contempt is meant, and they are ſaid to be hidden in the ſecret of his face, becauſe it is by his face and favour towards them, which the World knoweth not of, that they are thus preſerved, and From the ſtrife of tongues as in a Cottage. Whereby is implyed, that the virulent tongues of malicious men againſt the righteous, are like to a ſtorm, ſharp, and weather-beating thoſe that are in it, but ſuch as they may well contemne, becauſe they are through the teſtimony of a good conſcience, as it were, in an houſe ſufficient to ſhelter them all the time, for which it is ſaid, Bona conſcientia murus aheneus eſto, A good conſcience a brazen wall.

He hath ſhewed marvellous mercy to me in a ſtrong City. That is, as if he had been in a ſtrong City, ſafe from the aſſaults of all enemies, for ſometime God is compared to a Rock, ſometime to a Tower, and here to a City ſtrongly fenced with Wals, Gates, and Bars. Verſ. 21.

I ſaid in my haſtening away. Calvin, In my trepidation, conceiving, that his bodily fleeing is not meant, but an aſtoniſhment of mind through ſome ſudden great danger: But others expound it of his fleeing either from Saul or Abſalom, which I rather prefer, becauſe, according to the proper ſignification of the word, he did tremblingly flee, and this he is not aſhamed here to confeſs, to ſhew the weakneſs of his faith, for which he was unworthy of ſuch mercy; but this notwithſtanding the Lord heard him, as he addeth to more, to magnifie his grace for our comfort, when in diſtreſſes we pray, but feel not that life of faith, but weakneſs of doubting in our praying, God will not yet reject any that feare him. Verſ. 22. Note.

Love the Lord, Becauſe he is ſo gracious to you, cleave to him by the love of all your hearts, as he requireth, He will abundantly repay proud doers. As his grace abounds to ſuch as feare him, ſo to deſpiſers of him and his Laws, ſhall be abundance of wrath; the word rendred abundantly, is עליתר Upon the remainder, whereby their poſterity may be underſtood, as if it had been ſaid, he will repay the proud doer to the Generations coming after him, or remaining when he is gone, for ſo they are often threatned to the third and fourth Generation, and as the righteous are commonly ſet forth by humility and meekneſs, ſo the wicked by pride and loftineſſe, becauſe the wicked generally have pride in them, as the original of all their vile and harſh carriage towards the righteous. Verſ. 23.

Be of good courage, and he ſhall ſtrengthen your heart. Having laid a foundation in loving God, feare nothing, and if yee ſuſpect your own weakneſs, flee to God by prayer, and yee ſhall with his ſpirit be ſupplyed with ſtrength to beare you up in all time of danger. Verſ. 24.

PSAL. XXXII.

Of David Maſchil, that is, Inſtructing.

Bleſſed is the man, whoſe wickedneſſe is forgiven. David having ſundry times profeſſed his innocency and godly care to walk in the waies of Gods commandements, now to ſhew that his confidence was not in this, and to teach the ſame to others, for which he intituled this Pſalme Maſchil, he ſaith in effect, that he was not bleſſed by reaſon of his own righteouſneſs, no nor any other man, how juſt and innocent ſoever, or what good works ſoever he doth, but in this, that his ſinnes were pardoned and not imputed unto him; ſo that neither doth he hereby ſpeak comfort to any that live wickedly ſtil, nor aſcribe juſtification in any part to a mans own righteouſneſs, or the good works which he doth: Againſt theſe that live and go on in ſin, but yet count themſelves bleſſed, and juſtified by faith in Chriſt, becauſe to beleivers ſin is not imputed, and againſt them Verſ. 1.

that aſcribe juſtification in part to their own righteouſneſs, holding that we are juſtified by beleiving, and the juſtified thus makes themſelves more juſt, by living righteouſly and doing good works; and that deny ſuch a ful juſtification from ſin by Chriſt, as ſets the beleiver cleare both from guilt and puniſhment, holding that a man muſt ſatisfie in part, for the puniſhments by his ſinnes deſerved, here by acts of penance, and hereafter by ſuffering the fire of Purgatory; for if all our ſinnes be forgiven, we are at the ſame inſtant acquitted, both from all guilt and all puniſhment, it being ſuch a forgiving of debts, as never was heard of, to keep the debter ſometime in priſon and miſery, notwithſtanding after forgiving: And the Juſtice or righteouſneſs, whereby a ſinner is juſtified, is the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, of God, as is ſaid, 2 Cor. 5. 20. That we might be made the righteouſneſs of God through him. And how can this be imperfect, and ſuch as needs increaſe, ſith the righteouſneſs of God is perfect, but that a ſinner by beleiving is made ſo righteous, that he is without ſin, or can attain to ſuch perfect righteouſneſs in this life, by his moſt godly care, as to be altogether without ſin, I deny, becauſe his righteouſneſſe whereby he is juſtified, is not his own, but Chriſts altogether, and made his by imputation, as our ſinnes were made Chriſts, 2 Cor. 5. 20. For thus Saint Peter ſaith of himſelfe, That I may be found, not having mine own righteouſneſſe, but Chriſts by faith. And Rom. 4. he teacheth at large, that juſtification is by imputation, there being hereof only theſe two parts, Remiſſion of ſinnes, and imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſs: And that he only is thus juſtified, that beleiveth and ſheweth his faith by his works, turning by true repentance from all ſin, and doing good from time to time, according to his ability; appeareth by the next words, In whoſe ſpirit there is no deceit. Becauſe he doth neither in his heart ſecretly love any ſin, nor yet beare himſelfe, now that he is juſtified, as juſt by his own inherent righteouſneſs, but ingenuouſly confeſſeth, that in him ſtil, there is corruption, the fleſh fighting againſt the ſpirit, ſo that he cannot do the good that he would, as Gal. 5. 17. Rom. 7. And as David alſo ſaith, I confeſſed my ſinns unto thee, O Lord, and thou forgaveſt me, Verſe 4. So that the new upſtart Sect of the Antinomians, who deny ſin in the juſtified, or confeſſing ſo any more, may feare that they are out of the way of forgiveneſs, and that is but a vain imagination, that they are juſtified perſons, for they are hereby proved indeed to be far from it: And for doing good, this is James his doctrine, that we are Not juſtified by faith only, but alſo by works. Meaning, as he after expreſſeth himſelfe, that we are then juſtified by faith, when we ſhew our faith by our works: So that the wicked liver, that beleiveth, but faith works not upon his heart to purifie it, nor by love to put him on to do good, is yet far from this bleſſedneſs, his ſinnes are not forgiven, but he is ſtil in them: But forbearing the puniſhment of a mans own ſinnes in part, ſo far as he is able without periſhing for ever, it may ſeem to make, that judgment begins at Gods houſe, and yee are judged, that yee might not periſh with the World, and I beat down my body, ſaith Paul, leaſt I ſhould prove a reprobate, and the fire ſhall try every mans work; that is, The fire of judgments in this World: To this I ſay, That no man is ſo forgiven his ſinnes, as to be acquitted from all ſufferings in this life, thereby deſerved, or ſo, as that he needs not put himſelfe to penance therefore by faſting and ſorrowing, but whatſoever judgments the juſtified ſuffer, are only in this life, and that not as puniſhments for their ſinnes, whereby Gods wrath due therefore, is in any part ſatisfied, but as chaſtiſements to uſher on godly ſorrow for ſin paſt, and carefulneſs to live better for time to come, as fathers chaſtiſe their Sons, Heb 12. 7. 2 Cor. 9. 10. And accordingly David ſaith, It is good that I have been afflicted, for I am hereby taught to keek thy commandements.

Phil. 3. 8.

Note.

Jam. 2.

Note. Act. 15. 9.

1 Pet. 4. 1 Cor. 11.

1 Cor. 9. 1 Cor. 3.

To conclude, that which is here ſaid of the bleſſedneſs of him, whoſe ſinnes ſins are forgiven, is alſo often ſayd of the Charitable, as Pſal. 112. Bleſſed is he that conſidereth the poor, Bleſſed is the man that feareth the Lord, &c. Matth. 5. Bleſſed are the pure in heart; bleſſed are the Peace-makers, and Meek, &c. But in theſe and the like, it is ſtill always to be underſtood, not that we are bleſſed for theſe things, but that ſuch are bleſſed in this, that their ſins, from which yet they cannot be free, when they do all that is required according to their power, are mercifully forgiven them. For even in ſuch if God ſhould mark ſtrictly what is done amiſs, none were able to abide it; every one muſt confeſs ſtill he is an unprofitable ſervant, and all our Righteouſneſs is as filthy Rags, Iſa. 64. 6.

When I was ſilent, my bones wore away with age: The Prophet David having with joy declared the Bleſſedneſs of him, whoſe ſins are pardoned, Verſe 1. Now ſheweth, how he attained to this great bleſſing for his own particular, Viz. By confeſſing them, for When or Becauſe (for the word כי ſignifieth either;) He was ſilent, as Baſil hath it, not ſeeking medicine for his wound or ſickneſs of ſin by confeſſion, he was like unto a man in a deep languiſhing diſeaſe, decaying and waxing feeble, and by roaring this feebleneſs was more increaſed, that is, Whilſt he cryed out for pain under his ſufferings, and yet confeſſed not nor prayed; in ſtead of comfort his Terrour grew greater: But then he confeſſed his ſins and had the comfort of forgiveneſs before pronounced ſo great a Bleſſing. That we all might learn of him in our miſery cauſed by ſin likwiſe to confeſs, being aſſured that in ſo doing we ſhall have comfort, otherwiſe if in ſtead of going to God by confeſſing, we fret and cry out only through Extremity of pain and ſtreights, wherein we find our ſelves to be, we ſhall have our miſery aggravated to the macerating of us, and the weakning of our vitall ſtrength, ſet forth by bones, till we dy and periſh under ſuch paſſions. And that this is the Application that we all ſhould make of Gods Grace and favour ſhewed to him upon confeſſion, appeareth further, V. 5. — Verſ. 2. — Note.

Therefore ſhall every meek one pray to thee in a time that thou mayſt be found: A like paſſage to this, ſee 1 Tim. 1. 15. And for the words added about the time, ſee the like Iſa. 55. Seek the LORD whilſt he may be found, call upon him whilſt he is neer; whereby is not intimated, that God will not be found of the truly penitent at any time, but that they who let upon Repenting and ſeeking him afterwards, and take not the preſent time of Grace offered, are in danger of ſeeking to him in vain, as is alſo taught, Luk. 13. 29. And in the Example of Eſau, whereas it is further ſayd, The floods of water ſhall not come nigh him, He meaneth when he is now in danger of drowning, and being ſwallowed up with miſery, as a flood; not ſeeing any way to eſcape, he ſhall be delivered as Noah in the Ark. — Verſ. 5.

Thou ſhalt compaſſe me with Songs of deliverance: Here the Prophet applyeth that again to himſelf which he had ſpoken touching every meek or mercifull man, by being ſaved out of deadly danger, as he had cauſe given him, he ſayth, That he ſhould ſing hereof, and praiſe God abundantly therefore, and ſo muſt every one of us make conſcience to do in like caſe; ſome render it, Thou haſt compaſſed me, but the word is a future, and it is beſt ſo to render it, as ſhewing the conſtant practiſe of the faithfull for deliverances from time to time. And thou art compaſſed about, as is here ſayd, when our words and hearts, and good works of Chairty and Righteouſneſs make a melodious Conſort, ſinging altogether Glory to the higheſt. — Verſ. 6. — Note.

I will counſell thee, mine Eye ſhall be upon thee: Calvin, I will counſell upon thee with mine Eye: The firſt is moſt agreeable to the Hebrew, and moſt ſenſible. The meaning being, I will not only teach and counſell thee what to do, but I ſhall be continually looking, to ſee whether thou doſt ſo or no, not reſting in this, that I have once taught thee, but providing with my beſt care that thou mayſt do ſo continually, rebuking and punishing thee, if thou doeſt otherwiſe, but incouraging and countenancing thee, if thou doeſt — Verſ. 7.

Note. ſo. And this ought to be the care of every King and Ruler over his People, or elſe he diſchargeth not his duty: See this performed by David, Pſalm. 101. See the like Phraſe, Jer. 40. 4. Ezr. 5. 5. Dent. 11. 12.

Verſ. 9. Be not yee as the horſe and mule: To make men capable of his Inſtruction, he firſt ſeeks to remove the two Impediments, that commonly hinder from taking it, and profiting thereby, ſtupidity and dulneſs, for where this is, no goodneſs, although taught never ſo plainly, will enter, for what is teaching to a bruit beaſt.

2. Obſtinacy and ſtoutneſs, againſt which they muſt be intelligent that will learn, and tractable, when the truth is taught them in any thing. And becauſe the firſt in many is a defect in nature, they muſt pray to the Father of Lights to inlighten them by teaching, and ſuch as have underſtanding for the world; that it may be turned into ſpirituall underſtanding of things pertaining to Salvation; and againſt Obſtinacy conſider, that forced obedience is nothing worth, if for fear of puniſhment only a man be withheld from doing Evill, as many are in well governed Kingdoms, for then the Heart refreineth not, which is all in all, and without it Externall Obedience is nothing elſe, but as that of an Horſe by bit and bridle.

Verſ. 10. Many be the miſeries of the Wicked: Here he ſeeketh further to move mens hearts willingly to obey, and not by compulſion by propounding the miſeries that ſhall be to ſuch, and on the other ſide the mercies, that ſhal compaſs obedient beleivers round about.

Verſ. 11. Rejoyce (O yee Righteous) That is, Yee that have your ſins forgiven you, not others, for rejoycing in the LORD is peculiar to ſuch, and who are theſe, but the upright hearted, as in the laſt words, that from the Heart obey the word, for thus do all the truly faithfull, neither is there true faith in him that doth not, Act. 15. 9.

PSAL. XXXIII.

Verſ. 1. Shout joyfully (yee Righteous) in the Lord, praiſe is comely for the Righteous. As he ended Pſal. 32. So he beginneth this, uſing more arguments to move hereunto. And the ſame is meant by the word here uſed, ſignifying Shout joyfully, and by the word there uſed ſignifying Rejoyce, wherefore our New Tranſlat. renders it alſo Rejoyce, and Calvin Exult, the words following, are a reaſon, why the juſt and not others are ſtirred up to this, Praiſe is comely for the Upright: GOD is not honored by the Wickeds praiſing of him, but only when the upright hearted do it: yea, ſayth Auguſt. A Righteous life is a prayſing of God, contrariwiſe a Wicked: Whereby yee may ſee (O yee wicked) how abominable yee are to the Lord, even ſo abominable that he loveth not, but is averſe from your very praiſing of him: See alſo, Iſa. 1. Chap. 66.

Note.

Prov. 15. 8.

Verſ. 2. Praiſe the Lord upon the Harp: The upright muſt not only praiſe God by ſinging, but alſo uſe all other ſuch means as are apt to make their ſinging the more delightfull unto him, as ſweet and pleaſant Muſick, and ſometime loud ſounding Muſick, as Pſal. 150. Calvin commends this only under the Law, when God was praiſed by ſacrificing and Muſick added thereunto, by ſounding with Trumpets, ſinging, playing upon the Harp, the Organ and the Pipe, &c. And therefore ſayth, as other Ceremonies of the Law, this praiſing by muſicall inſtruments hath no place in the Church of God at this day. For the voice of man ſpeaking that which the ſpirit dictates, is beyond all muſick with ſinging and Inſtruments in his Ears, and yet if it be not underſtood, is forbidden, 1 Cor. 14. Therefore ſingnig and muſick, it not being underſtood, which is ſung or playd to, is not only inconſiderate zeal amongſt the Papiſts that uſe it, but alſo impious perverſneſs; Thus Calvin.

Calvin.

vin. Auguſtine ſpeaks nothing of it, but by Allegory, by the Harp underſtanding praiſe for proſperity and Adverſity: becauſe the wood of the Harp whereupon the ſtrings are, making a pleaſant ſound, when they are ſtricken, is downward below, but the Pſaltery, the other Inſtrument here named is ſo framed, that the hollow part yeilding the ſound is upward. Now we are not to ſeek theſe Inſtruments ellewhere, for we have them in our ſelves, the Harp, when we praiſe God for ſuch good things as befall us concerning this life, yea and for ſufferings here alſo, as Job, when he had loſt all: The Lord giveth and taketh away, bleſſed be the Name of the LORD: And the Pſaltery, when we praiſe GOD for higher Bleſſings, wherewith he bleſſeth us in Chriſt: And whereas the Pſaltery is ſayd to have ten ſtrings, we have it compleate, when we praiſe God in our lives lead according to Gods ten Commandements, havng but one only true God, honouring his name, keeping his Sabboth, not as the Jews by bodily reſt, giving themſelves to feaſting and pleaſure all day, for they that do ſo had better dig all day then reſt, &c. And herein I think Auguſt. was right, we are required to praiſe God with theſe muſicall inſtruments being underſtood ſpiritually; the People of God under the Law of Ceremonies according to the Letter, we under the Goſpel, as hath been ſayd, and ſo we have ſtill our ſpirituall ſacrificing and Incenſe, when we honour God by our ready Obedience, looking for acceptation of our ſervice in and through the ſweet perfume made by the Incenſe of his merits alone. And thus I conceive our praiſing of God without muſicall Inſtruments at this day is beſt approved, and the Papiſts muſick condemned, becauſe they underſtand this literally, which now is to be done ſpiritually, and ſo far forth only with ſinging as may be with underſtanding, the ſounding with muſiccall inſtruments at the Inſtant, which makes the new ſervice of God and the old all one, being layd down. For by as good reaſon may they offer the fat of Rams and Incenſe, as keep up muſick in Churches ſtill, and Altars as they do: For the Argument brought againſt them before by Calvin, I cannot ſee ſuch force in it, becauſe as under the New T. ſo under the Old all things were to be done to Edification, and therefore that Argum. is as good againſt their practiſe then as now, if in muſick and ſong going together, there were no Edification by reaſon that it is not underſtood by all the Congregation. It is true there is no Edification in teaching, unleſſe it be in a Tongue underſtood, but in making Melody to God by ſong and muſick there may, though not underſtood, Viz. The heart being hereby made to rejoyce in God, in thinking upon the Harmony made to him continually in Heaven, to beare a part, wherein we ſhall one day come, and this is one Grace, wherein we ſhould be Edified, for ſuch is joy in the Spirit.

Auguſt.

Gal. 5. 22.

Sing to the Lord a new ſong, ſing skilfully in praiſing: Calvin, Sing luſtily: Ainſw. Do well, playing on the inſtrument with triumphant noiſe, which is neareſt to the Hebrew הטיבו but to render it word for word, it is, Do good, ſtrike up with Exultation, that is, Make good, or excellent muſick upon the Harp and Pſaltery before ſpoken of, as men uſe to do, when they would with their beſt skill expreſs greateſt joy. And a new Song we are bidden to ſing, as alſo Pſal. 40. 4. 96. 1. 98. 1. 144. 9. Iſa. 42. 2. Revel. 14. 3. In reference to the time of the Goſpel, wherein all things are new, and yet the ſame that were before, but ſet forth in a new manner, the Melody that is made, not being ſo much in the voice and muſicall inſtrument, as in the heart; according to which it is ſayd, Singing and making Melody to the Lord in your hearts. So the ſame Commandement is called both The old Commandement, and the new, 1 Joh. 2. 7.

Verſ. 3.

2 Cor. 5. 17.

Epheſ. 5. 19.

For the word of the Lord is right: That is, Whereby he commandeth all things to be done, every thing being done rightly, and juſtly in the adminiſtration of the world, as is particularly ſhewed. Verſ. 6. &c.

Verſ. 4.

The Lord loveth Juſtice and Judgment: Some, ſayth Calvin, underſtand this this, as if he had ſaid, In men he loveth juſtice, but this, although it be a truth, is not to the purpoſe here, for he proceeds to prove what he had ſaid, Verſe 4. Of his doing all things righteouſly, and this he doth by ſhewing, it is his nature ſo to do, for the love that he beareth to juſtice; if any man ſhal ſay, Is this ſuch a matter of a new ſong? Do not, and have not all almoſt ever acknowledged this, that God is juſt: Ainſworth, It is true in general, but coming to be tryed by ſufferings, ſcarce the hundreth part of men acknowledge it, but murmure and complain, as if they were unjuſtly dealt withal; and therefore it may wel be called a new ſong, to acknowledge this even in all things, and to give him thanks, as is commanded, 1 Theſ. 5. 17. And as Job did, when he had loſt all. The Earth is full of his goodneſs. So Iſa. 6. 3. The whole Earth is full of his glory. As in reſpect of temporal bleſſings, ſo and cheifly in reſpect of his Son, ſent into the World to redeem and ſave us: And even in our ſufferings we muſt look up to God, as doing it in goodneſs for our benefit, as Hebrews, 12. 9. and Pſalme 119.

Verſ. 5.

Note.

Note.

Verſ. 6. By the word of the Lord the Heavens were made, and by the breath of his mouth, all their hoaſts. Having Verſe 4. ſaid, The word of the Lord is right. Now he beginneth to prove it, by an induction of particulars; and firſt, Of his making the Heavens and all the Stars by his word and ſpirit, where by Word Chriſt is underſtood, who is ſaid to be his Word, and that Word whereby all things were made: And for the breath or ſpirit of his mouth, hereof is expreſly ſaid, Gen. 1. 2. The ſpirit of God moved upon the waters. Or ſat upon them as an Hen, to hatch and forme them into that glorious and excellent expanſion which we behold, for what are the Heavens, Hebrew, but שמים There are Waters. And the Heavens and their Hoaſts are firſt mentioned, becauſe the moſt glorious of all Gods works, as Pſal. 19. 1. And this word and ſpirit are commonly by the Ancients taken for Chriſt the Son of God, and the holy Ghoſt; although Calvin thinks, that they were deceived, whereas they hence brought an argument to prove the divinity of the holy Ghoſt, againſt Sabellius: For if the Word be God, what can the Spirit be, whereby the Word is brought forth but God alſo?

Ioh 1. 1.2.3.

Verſ. 7. He hath gathered as an heap the waters of the Sea. Of which ſee alſo, Gen. 1. And it argueth an infinite power to do this, when theſe waters are fluid by nature, and not otherwiſe to be kept within their bounds, yet that they lying higher then the earth, ſhould be kept from overflowing it ever ſince the beginning of the World.

Verſ. 10. The Lord ſcatters the counſels of Nations. From his works of Creation and providence in containing the Seas, the Prophet paſſeth on to other acts of his providence towards men; whole Nations, and many plot and deviſe daily againſt the Nation which he hath peculiarly choſen, his Church, the people of Iſraell; but their devices and counſels take none effect, but are from time to time fruſtrated, as thoſe of the Egyptians firſt, then of the Amalekites, Medianites, Moabites, Philiſtims, and Syrians; As is ſhewed in Exodus, Judges, Kings. Therefore, Verſe 12. The Nation choſen by him is pronounced bleſſed, becauſe both their enemies counſels vaniſh, and his ſtand alwaies firm and ſtable, Verſe 11.

Verſ. 12.

Verſ. 13. The Lord looketh down from Heaven upon the Sons of Adam. Having ſhewed the happineſſe of the Nation by him choſen, now he proceeds to the reaſon, and that is, The Lord knoweth the hearts and waies of all men, as he muſt needs do, becauſe he made all their hearts, and he ſeeth, that neither any King nor mighty man, is of power to ſave himſelfe, neither are Horſes of any avail, Verſe 14, 15, 16, 17. but the Lords choſen people, that feare him, are ſaved from death, and famine.

Verſ. 18.19.

Verſ. 20. Our Soule hath looked to the Lord. It being ſo as is before ſaid, that there is no power in Creatures, but only in the Lord, to ſave and deliver in time of of danger, or to aſſault and prevail, we that are his Church and people, ought to make this uſe of it, to have our eyes towards him, not towards any humane or created ſtrength, and then as Verſe 21. We ſhall be ſure of a joyful event, and that it may be ſo, we muſt ſtil alwaies be praying, as Verſe 22. Let thy mercy be upon us (O Lord) as we truſt in thee.

PSAL. XXXIV.

OF David, when he changed his countenance before Abimelech, and he expelled him. Of this ſee, 1 Sam. 28. How for feare being in the Court of Achiſh King of Gath, leaſt he ſhould ſlay him, being now in his power, as an infeſt enemy of the Philiſtims, he changed his behaviour, letting ſpittle fal down upon his beard, and ſcrabbling upon the wals as a mad man, by which meanes he eſcaped this danger, and here he praiſeth God for it, and ſtirs up all the faithful to put their truſt in him, in ful aſſurance, that they ſhall likewiſe be kept ſafe, in what dangers ſoever they be: Touching his fact in thus diſſembling, whether it were juſtifiable or not, ſee my Expoſition upon that place: Touching the King before called Achiſh, here Abimelech, it is to be underſtood, that this was the general name of the Kings of the Philiſtims, as we may ſee, Gen. 20. and Chapter 26. As Pharaoh was the name of the Kings of Egypt, and Ceſar of the Roman Emperours, his proper name being Achiſh: For the word Countenance, as Calvin renders it, the Sept. Face, Some, Behaviour. It is טַעַם properly ſignifieth Taſte, but becauſe, as by the taſte meat is known, ſo by the countenance or behaviour the man is judged of, it is uſed to ſet this forth both here and elſewhere.

I will bleſſe the Lord at all times Although David by his policy eſcaped the danger of Achiſh, yet he thankfully aſcribeth it unto God, who wrought with it for his deliverance, and probably by inſtinct taught it him for his own preſervation; as Joſhuah to feine a fleeing before the men of Ai, for his greater advantage: And hence we ſhould learn by what policy or meanes ſoever we eſcape dangers, not to aſcribe it to our ſelves, but to God alone, and therefore to praiſe him unceſſantly. Verſ. 1. Note

I ſought the Lord and he anſwered me, &c. He truſted not to any device of his own, but acknowledging all good ſucceſs to come from God, he prayed to him in his ſtreights, and ſo was delivered. Verſ. 4.

The Angell of the Lord pitcheth his tents about them that feare him. See the like, Matth. 18. 11. Where I have handled the queſtion, whether every one of the Elect hath his Angel-Guardian, or each one more, as Pſal. 91. 11. But is it not comfort enough, that God by his providence is alwaies neer unto us to ſave us from dangers, and if ſo, what need of the guard of Angels? Ainſworth, The Lord herein condeſcends to our weakneſs, that we might be the more confident, when we know that he provides for our ſafety in all places, and at all times by his ſo glorious and mighty Miniſters, who are ſaid to be ſent out for the good of all that are choſen to life: And doubtleſs it was a ſingular comfort to Jacob, when being in danger by Eſau, he ſaw the Angels of God pitching their tents about him, for which cauſe he called the place where, Mahanaim, Gen. 32. 1. Verſ. 7. Heb. 1. 1.

Taſte and ſee, that the Lord is good. Here the Prophet David layeth the fault of not having that comfort, which we might in Gods goodneſs towards us upon our ſelves, as he that hath pleaſant and nouriſhing meate, but will not taſte of it, is without the comfort thereof, wherefore he exhorteth us to amend this fault, which is by committing our ſelves to his protection at all times, and then obſerving how graciouſly he dealeth with us, hence ariſing to more confidence. Verſ. 8.

He

Verſ. 20. He keepeth all his bones. Here he ſheweth that the providence of GOD is extended, not only to every one that feareth him, but even to every ſmal part of the body of ſuch, his bones which be very many; and elſewhere the LORD ſaith to the ſame effect, the very haires of our head are numbred.

Verſ. 21. Evill ſhall ſlay the wicked. Some, ſaith Calvin, hereby underſtand miſery, Calvin. as if nothing were meant, but that they ſhal periſh miſerably, but by evil is rather meant, the evil which they do, as is expreſſed in the ſinging Pſalme, ſo that the righteous to their comfort, may look upon them in their ma- Note. licious practiſes againſt them, as working their own ruine, which ſhould deter all men from perſecuting the righteous at all times, for though they be able to do nothing againſt, theſe Malignants ſhall come to the deſtruc- Verſ. 22. on in the end, which they machinate againſt them: But the Servants of GOD ſhal be redeemed, which implyeth, although even now in danger of death, ſhall be delivered, as Verſe 22.

PSAL. XXXV.

THIS Pſalme is framed, ſo that each Verſe beginneth in the firſt letter as the Hebrew Alphabet, the firſt with א the ſecond with ב the third with ג the fourth with ד &c. Which is an elegancy amongſt the Hebrews uſed in ſong, and is moſt notable in Pſalme 119.

Verſ. 1. Strive (O Lord) with them that ſtrive againſt me. When David compiled this Pſalme is uncertain, but Calvin thinks, whilſt yet Saul lived and perſecuted him, for by ſaying, Strive O Lord with them that ſtrive with me. He intimateth, that he had many enemies who ſtrove againſt him with their tongues, by ſlandering and ſpeaking evil of him, to make him odious to all men, againſt theſe he prayeth, that the Lord would clear his innocency, ſtopping their foule mouths: And by ſaying, Fight againſt them that fight againſt me. That many were up in armes againſt him to Note. deſtroy him, but in either caſe he makes the Lord his refuge by prayer, as we muſt alſo do upon the like occaſions, and in him be comforted againſt all the calumnies and violent attempts of men againſt us: And thus Auguſtine underſtands it, as made for the comfort of all the poor members of Chriſt, againſt their cruel Perſecutors.

Verſ. 2. Lay hold upon the ſheild and buckler. This is ſpoken after the manner of men, that come to help others againſt their enemies, and not that God hath need of, or doth uſe any ſuch kind of weapons, the breath of his mouth alone being ſufficient to confound all, even moſt Potent enemies.

Verſ. 4. Let them be aſhamed and confounded that ſeek my Soul. In this and Verſe 5, 6, 7. &c. David teacheth the diſtreſſed Servants of GOD in his own example, what to pray, not doubting, but that they ſhal be heard and ſa- Verſ. 9. 10. ved; as followeth, Verſe 9. 10. Where he ſpeaketh of rejoycing herein, yea and the rejoycing of his very bones, hereby meaning, that all his parts, and whatſoever ſtrength and vigor was in him, ſhould be ſpent in celebrating his praiſes, which ſpeaks againſt them that are remiſs and negligent about this duty.

Verſ. 11. Cruell witneſſes roſe up againſt me. Here is laid down the cauſe of his calling upon God for help, before going, he prayed, Verſe 1. That God would Strive with them, that ſtrove againſt him. That is, By calumnies and ſtrife of the tongue, now he ſheweth, how they ſo ſtrived againſt him, Viz. By falſe accuſations of things, which he knew not of, whereby they ſought to bring him in danger of his life, and this may have reference in particular to his ambitious ſeeking of the Kingdome, and the deſtruction of Saul, for that ſome accuſed him of this, appeareth, 1 Sam. 24. 10. Where he he ſaith, Why doſt thou hearken to mens words, that ſay, David ſeeketh evill againſt thee.

They rendred me evill for good, the bereaving of my Soule, or life. For by their falſe accuſations, they ſtirred up Saul to take away his life, and for that end, he came out to ſeek him with three thouſand men, : But what good had David done them? Very much in killing Goliah, the terrour of them all, and ſlaying the Philiſtms, the ſpoylers of their Country : And Verſe 11. Expreſſeth further what good he meant, Viz. His faſting, and mourning, and praying for them in their miſery. Verſ. 12.

Yet I in their ſickneſſe put on ſackcloath. By ſickneſs any affliction is here to be underſtood, as Verſe 15. Halting. When he cometh to ſpeak of himſelf, ſets forth any weakneſs or miſery likewiſe, whereby he was diſabled and brought low : His putting on ſackcloath and faſting, as if his Friend or Brother, or Mother had been afflicted, Verſe 14. Is ſpoken of to ſhew, how far he was from all hatred againſt them, yea, how great his love was towards his deadly enemies, as we are all commanded to be likewiſe affected, Matth. 5. 45. And to pray for them, as is intimated alſo that he did, in ſaying, My prayer turned into my boſome. That is, ſaith Ainſworth, Either I prayed for them oft times in ſecret, or let it turn into my boſome, if I prayed for any evil to come upon them : Geneva notes, with inward affection or bowing down my head : But Baſil beſt, I received the fruit of my prayers for them, upon my booſome, for ſo חֵיק ſignifieth, and this he did through inward comfort to God-ward, upon the diſcharge of this his duty, although extreamly provoked to the contrary by their malice : And thus it ſhall be to every one, that ſincerely prayeth for his enemies, becauſe he is now aſſured in his conſcience, that he is the Child of his heavenly Father, Matth. 5. 45. 46, That ye may be the Children of your Father which is in Heaven. Or may it not be meant, my prayers for them took no effect in them, to abate their malice towards me, but cruelty was by them repayed me, and curſing from their mouths. For the expoſition preceding, the word turning, makes againſt the firſt, as arguing not a direct going on, and here is nothing ſpoken of evil, whereby it might be underſtood, as an imprecation againſt himſelf according to the other. Verſ. 13. Note. Ainſworth. Geneva. Baſil. magnus.

But in my halting they rejoyced they gathered together, the abjects gathered together, they teared me, and were not ſilent. Having ſhewed, how he behaved himſelfe, when his enemies were in miſery, which alſo may be referred to the words before going, Verſe 12. Evil for good. Which though no particular be ſpoken of before, was abundantly done by him after the overthrow of Saul and Iſrael with him by the Philiſtims, when he mourned and ſhewed his love towards Saul as much as he could, by thanking the men of Jabeſh-Gilead, and praiſing them for fetching his Corps from the Philiſtims, and giving it a more honourable burial, 2 Sam. 1. 11. 12. Having I ſay, ſhewed this, he now cometh to move the Lord the more, by the heinouſneſſe of the thing done on their part, to ſhew, how ſpiteful their doings were towards him ; at his miſeries they rejoyced, and that not only a few of the great ones about Saul, but even the ſcum of the people, and a multitude of the baſer ſort, whoſe mouths were alſo opened againſt him without end, although they knew no cauſe ; but in them the Proverb was verified, like Prince like People ; Saul being inſeſt againſt him, the people were generally ful of rage alſo: The wore נכים Nachim, rendred Abjects, Signifieth men of a ſmitten or broken condition, men of no worth, for it comes of נכה ſignifying to ſmite ; yet ſome render it actively, Smiters, expounding it ſmiters with the tongue : but the former is to be preferred, becauſe he addeth, Men that he knew not, Or took no notice of, they were ſo baſe ; ſee the like, Job 30. 8. And for their tearing of him, it was with the tongue by ſpiteful words ; the word ſignifieth alſo divided, for which ſome render it ſo, but this is more genuine. Note.

Verſ. 16. With Hypocriticall mockers in feaſts, they gnaſhed upon me with their teeth: Calvin, With perfidious perſons, mockers for a Cake of Bread: But Ainſworth, Hypocrites, Scoffers for a Cake of Bread: It ſeemeth to be a further Deſcription of the Abjects ſpoken of, Verſe 15. as if he had ſayd, baſely turning themſelves into any colour, to help on my miſery by bitter Scofs, being drawn to this to humour Saul by his feeding them. For to this Effect it is ſayd, Prov. 28. 21. That ſome will tranſgreſſe for a morſell of bread. Ainſworth. Others take it either thus, or as ſpoken of making him their Table talk, when they fed themſelves delicioufly, choaking him with ſuch intolerable Scoffs, alledging, Hoſ. 7. 8. Where the Enemies of Ephraim are ſet forth as banquetters, Ephraim as the bread, that they fed upon. Calvin. But Calvin holdeth that the great ones about Saul feaſting with him are particularly here meant, as the vulgar and baſer ſort before.

Verſ. 17. 18. 19. 20. &c. My darling, Hebr. only one from the Lion. Of this ſee before, Pſalm. 22. 21. and from hence to the end of the Pſalm, He prayeth for deliverance from his Enemies, and that they might be confounded, and his freinds made joyfull.

PSAL. XXXVI.

To him that excelleth of the Servant of the Lord, David. Of this Addition ſingularly here, The Servant of the Lord: See before Pſalme. 18. It doth denote ſomething in either ſet forth, declaring a difference betwixt him and his wicked Enemies, there his wonderfull mercy in delivering him out of their hands, for which his Eyes were towards him, as a Servants to his Maſter; here their profligate wickedneſs, wholly addicting themſelves to do Evill, from which he abhorred, as it becomes Gods Servant to do.

Verſ. 1. The tranſgreſſion of the Wicked ſayth, in the midſt of my heart, there is no fear of God before his Eyes: Hebr. Tranſgreſſion ſayth to the Wicked: That is, His obſtinate, and ſhameleſs giving himſelf to live in all manner of Wickedneſs, telleth him as by a lively voice, what ſhew ſoever he makes to the contrary, that he hath no fear of God in him, and this I ſay, becauſe I know it in my heart to be ſo, as if I heard his wickedneſs ſpeaking ſo much, and I know in the midſt of my Heart, through the inward greif and ſorrow that I have therefore. Note And this is true touching all, that do, Dare operam peccato, live and go on in groſs ſins from time to time, being touched with no Repentance therefore, their ſinning outwardly proclaims what they are inwardly, although they ſet a good face upon it, and ſay that they have a good heart.

Verſ. 2. For he flattereth himſelf in his own eys til his iniquity be found out to hatred. Here he ſheweth that the wicked harden themſelves to the doing of Evill through a better conceit, which they have of themſelves; when as others, that fear God hate and abhor their doings, and look upon their caſe as abominable to God and dangerous. Note. And this layeth open the Originall and Nurſe of ſo great wickedneſs, as abounds in the world, that men againſt their own Conſcience, that accuſeth them to be without all true fear of God and againſt the judgment of good men, who hate their doings, ſooth up themſelves, asif they were accepted before God as well as the beſt, N. Tran. Till his iniquity be found to be hatefull.

Verſ. 3. The words of his mouth are wickedneſs and deceit: That is, Saith Calvin, he hath ſomething to ſay to excuſe and juſtify himſelf to the deceiving of his own Soul, and the hardning of him in ſin. Calvin. He ceaſeth to underſtand to do good, That is, He is averſe from all good Inſtruction and Reaſon, whereby he might be perſwaded better.

Verſ. 4. He meditates Iniquity upon his bed: That is, In his retiredneſs through the the corruption of his heart he beginneth to enter into this evill way by himſelf alone not being drawn on to it by others. He perſiſts in a way not good: not only beginning and going on far in a wicked courſe, but without Repentance always going on. He abominates not evill, being carryed by a contempt of God on in his wickedneſs; and then he ſumms up the differences betwixt the Wicked, and ſuch as fear God thus.

1. He flatters himſelf in his wickedneſs; this man judgeth and condemneth himſelf. Note.

2. He deviſeth reaſons to harden his heart in ſin; this man reaſons againſt ſinning in any thing, in ſtead of extenuating, aggravating his leaſt ſins.

3. He ſtopps or turns away his Eares from hearing Reaſon againſt his Evill ways, this man is willing and deſirous of good inſtruction, that he may be more ſtirred up to good, and againſt evill.

4. His meditations in private are, how he might practiſe this or that wickedneſs; this mans meditations are, how he may yet grow better, and what abundance of ſin he is already guilty of, to be accordingly humbled therefore.

5. He goes on in Evill, waxing dayly worſe and worſe; this man perſeveres in good, and cannot by any means be beaten, or allured out of the Way hereof.

6. He being ſo Evill, as hath been ſayd, abominates not himſelf therefore, but in contempt of God pleaſeth himſelf ſtill therein; this man through the fear of God, trembles and abhors himſelf, even for his Infirmities: yet it is not to be conceived, that every wicked man is ſuch in all degrees, but that there are ſuch, When there is no dram of Grace to reſtrain them, others not being ſuffered to be ſo exorbitant for the common Good of thoſe politick Bodies, whereof they are members, and not that they are any whit the more in the way of Salvation.

(O Lord) thy mercy is in Heaven, thy truth unto the Clouds. Calvin, to the Heavens, New Tranſlat. Thy faithfullneſs to the Clouds: Reſpecting rather the ſenſe then the ſignification of the word. Having ſet forth the abomination of wicked Enemies, to God and his people, now he proceedeth on the contrary ſide to ſet forth Gods mercy and Goodneſs for the comfort of all them that fear him, both to make the wicked aſhamed and to fear, and to comfort all ſuch as fear God, againſt their wicked practiſes, and himſelf in particular. In this and V. 6. are four Excellencies in God ſpoken of. Firſt, Mercy or Goodneſs. Secondly, His truth or faithfullneſs. Thirdly, His Righteouſneſs. Fourthly. His Judgments. His mercy, In the Heavens Pſalm. 57. 11. Unto the Heavens, Pſal. 108. 5. Above the Heavens: And the ſame is meant here alſo; it is ſo great that it filleth the World below and Heaven above alſo. His truth unto the clouds, For he dealeth truly and faithfully with all creatures, keeping touch with all in every thing, that he hath promiſed: And the Heavens and Clouds, haply are mentioned in reference to the Rain bow, which he ſayth he would place in the Clouds, for a ſigne that the Earth ſhould never be drowned again. His Righteouſneſs like the mountaines, To adminiſter all things by his providence moſt juſtly in puniſhing thoſe that are ſo intollerably addicted to all manner of Wickedneſs, and doing Good to thoſe that fear him, and delivering them out of their Hands: His judgments like a great deep: Or Abyſſe, the bottom whereof cannot be ſounded, whereby is meant, that although the Wicked for a time may live in proſperity, the Righteous in miſery, they in honour, theſe in diſgrace, yet the juſt judge will one day put a contrary difference between them, making theſe happy and honorable, them infamous and miſerable for ever: but yet this judgment lyeth hid, as the bottom of an Abyſſe, no ſuch thing appearing to men a long time. Thou ſaveſt both man and beaſt: So good is the Lord, that his Goodneſs in governing the World is extended to all his Creatures, yea even Verſ. 5. Gen. 9.

even the very beaſts, therefore much more to men, and ſpecially to ſuch as fear him, and truſt in him. ſo that they ſhall be ſaved from the hands of their Enemies here, and from Death and damnation hereafter, and partake of this Heavenly Kingdom for ever and ever. And in this ſenſe the Apoſtle ſayth, God is the Saviour of all men, eſpecially of them that beleeve.

Verſ. 7. How precious is thy mercy, and the Sons of men ſhall truſt under the ſhadow of thy wings: That is, Not all promiſcuouſly, but the faithfull that live in his fear: Of the Wicked it is ſpoken contrariwiſe before, ſo that if they truſt, they ſhall be deceived, the like Phraſe is alſo uſed of the Faithfull, Pſalm. 91.

Verſ. 8. They ſhall be ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe: That is, They ſhall have joy in thee, as they that are feaſted in the houſe of a King, where all Delicacies, both of meat and drink abound, for a good Conſcience is a continuall feaſt, and this is in the Senſe of Gods Grace and favour in Chriſt, juſtifying from our ſins, there being no worldly thing that can ſatisfy, yet becauſe Godlineſs hath the promiſes of this life, and of that to come, I hold with Calvin that the one is ſo promiſed here, that the other is not excluded. For all ſuch as fear God and truſt in him ſhal be fed corporeally, Pſ. 37. 1. and Spiritually with the light of Gods countenance, Pſal. 4. 7. and Eternally with hidden Manna, Revel. 2. 17.

Verſ. 10. 11 12. After promiſes of favour to them that fear God, here he addeth prayers, both for them and for himſelf, concluding with Threatning to the Wicked that they ſhall fall and never riſe up again.

PSAL XXXVII.

Verſ. 1. FRET not thy ſelf at the Wicked neither be envious at evill doers: Having before ſhewed the Ruin of the Wicked, Pſal. 36. 12. Now he admoniſheth all ſuch as fear God, not to be vexed to ſee them or any of them for a time in proſperity, to be diſcouraged in the ways of godlineſſe, or to ſin by invying hereat. For their proſperity is but like the green Graſs, which is ſoon cut down and withereth.

Verſ. 3. Truſt in the Lord and do good, dwell in the Land and thou ſhalt be fed aſſuredly: Having in the former Verſes made Application of that ſpoken of the Ruin of the Wicked, Pſal. 36. 12. Now exhorteth and comforteth the Righteous, by promiſing, that it ſhall be unto them as he prayed, Pſal. 36. 11. But he begins with truſting in the Lord, as the Foundation of doing Good and of all Bleſſings: For Philoſophers excelled in morrall Virtues, Temperance, Patience, and Contempt of the world, but doing theſe things not out of faith, they were not accepted. By dwelling in the Land he meaneth, that the faithfull ſhall have a ſetled Habitation, and that God will take care for them to feed them with Food ſufficient, ſo that they need not be diſtracted with worldly Cares, but caſt all their Care upon God. And that feeding with food ſufficient is meant, is further confirmed, Verſe. 19. Where he ſayth, That in time of famine they ſhall have enough, So that other Expoſitions referring this feeding, to feeding upon faith, or feeding others with Truth, &c. are worthily by Calvin rejected.

1 Pet. 5. 7. Matth. 6.

Calvin.

Ainſworth. Ainſworth renders the words, Feed on faith, and he takes the words before going, Dwell in the Land: Either for a promiſe or a command to keep in the Land of Canaan, as Iſaack did in time of Famine. But here is no word ſignifying Faith, but Truth, or Verily, therefore render it word for word, and it is, Feed thee verily, For thou ſhalt have wherewithall to do it, and likewiſe Truſt in the Lord, do good and dwell in the Land, Can have none other ſenſe, but as of a promiſe that thou ſhalt do ſo, poſſeſſing it as an Inheritance, thou and thy Seed after thee for ever, as is expreſſed, Verſe 29.

Yet

Yet Ainſworth hath one thing here remarkeable, that this Pſalm is begun with the firſt Letter of the Hebrew Alphabet, and every two Verſes go on in order with the reſt, to the laſt letter of that Alphabet.

Delight thy ſelf in the Lord, and he will give thee thy hearts deſire: That is, Let this be thy joy, that the LORD is thy portion, and not that thou haſt worldly things which will deceive thee, and then thou ſhalt never want, but have thy hearts deſire, becauſe in him is a confluence of all comforts and bleſſings. See the like, Iſa. 58. 14. Verſ. 4.

He will bring forth thy Righteouſneſs as the Light. If any Godly man being in miſery for a time, ſhall ſay, I cannot find any ſuch comfort in the Lord as thou promiſeſt, here is ſomewhat ſpoken that may ſatisfy him. The darkneſſe of miſery ſhall be turned into the Light of felicity unto thee, only wait Gods leiſure, till it ſhall ſeem good to him to do it. Verſ. 6.

Be ſilent or ſtill to the Lord, wait for him. Till he ſhall be pleaſed to do for thee, as is before promiſed, be not impatient or murmure, but wait. The word חול here uſed as Calvin noteth, ſignifieth either mourn or wait, and if we take it for mourn, it is meant of mourning ſilently, but he followeth the firſt, wait. Then he repeateth again in more words that which he had ſayd, Verſe 1. concluding Verſe 8. That this were to do Evill to vex at the Wickeds proſperity. Verſ. 7. Calvin.

They that wait for the Lord ſhall inherit the Earth: Here is a reaſon why we ſhould not vex at the proſperity of the Wicked, for although now they flouriſh, yet they ſhall be cut off, and the Righteous ſhall have the better of it, even in this world, for however they be tumbled and toſſed about, yet their comfort is great in all places, through the Lord, for whom they waite or ſtay a time, firſt in miſery, or the Righteous are promiſed the inheritance of the Land, becauſe if the people of Iſrael had been ſuch, they ſhould alwaies have injoyed the Land of Canaan, and it ſhould never have come into the poſſeſſion of their Enemies. For it was for ſin that they were caſt out, and that they were conſumed with Wars, and therefore to the Righteous is promiſed alſo, Abundance of Peace. For the fruit of Righteouſneſs is peace, Iſa. 32. 17. Verſ. 9.

Better to the Righteous is a little, then the Riches of many Wicked: the word מהו here rendred Riches ſignifieth alſo a multitude, or abundance, which ſome refer to people, as if it were meant, a few Righteous are better then many or multitudes of Wicked, and ſome joyn it, and the word רבים many together, as if it had been ſaid, Then great riches of the wicked: but either of theſe is more forced, and it agreeth better to the Argument in hand to render it as before; For whereas the Righteous inheriting the Earth, is ſpoken of, Verſe 15. If it ſhould be objected, they have but little in compariſon of many wicked, here it is reſolved, this little is better to him, then their abundance to many of them, if they be put altogether. And a reaſon is rendred V. 17. Their bones, That is, Their ſtrength ſhall ſoon be broken, but the Lord will eſtabliſh the Righteous: That is, Be as a continuall fountain of good unto them, ſo that they ſhall never want, but the Riches of the wicked are vaniſhing by Gods Judgments, ſo that their abundance is turned in a ſhort time into want. Thus Calvin, And the little of the Righteous is better alſo, becauſe his Goods are truly Goods coming from Gods bleſſing and uſed to his Glory, but the Goods of the wicked are Evills, according to the ſaying, Bona hius mundi, ſunt bonis bona, malis mala, Becauſe they are ill gotten, and if not, turned to be a means of more licenciouſly doing Evill, by Rioting, Pride, Oppreſſion, and coveteouſneſs, from Hamon here uſed to ſet forth Riches, Ainſworth noteth the Word Mammon cometh. Verſ. 16. Calvin. Note. Ainſworth.

The Wicked ſhall periſh, and the haters of the Lord as the fat of Lambes, Here that which was ſayd, Verſe 18. is further amplified, as the fat of lambs melteth away with the heat of the fire, ſo their Riches ſhall fade, and he calleth them haters of God, hereby denoting how much they deceive themſelves Verſ. 20. Note.

ſelves when they ſay, that they love God: So Commandement the ſecond.

Verſ. 21. Calvin. The wicked borroweth and payeth not again. This ſaith Calvin, is expounded of the unjuſt dealing of the wicked, whereunto he granteth, that it may be applyed, but it is properly meant, that he is through the curſe of God made ſo poor, that he hath need to borrow, but when he hath done ſo, his Eſtate waſting more and more, he hath not wherewith to repay what he borrowed; and this is further confirmed, Verſe 22. They that are curſed of him ſhall be rooted out, Their Eſtates being conſumed and brought to nothing; I take the former words both waies, he borroweth and Payeth not. Either becauſe he is brought low, and ſo unable, or unconſcionable, and ſo wil not, thus alſo Ainſworth.

Verſ. 23. The ſtepps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and he will love his way. Hebrew, The ſtepps of a man. Yet it is not meant of every man, but of thoſe that feare him, for it is ſpoken of one, whoſe way is loved by the Lord, ſuch are directed by him in the courſe of their life, to do that which is pleaſing unto him, and ſo he through the favour, which he beares towards them, makes all their waies proſperous. as Pſal. 35. 27.

Verſ. 24. Though he fals, he ſhall not be utterly caſt down. Hebrew, He ſhall not be caſt off. It being meant, Though he be afflicted and that often, as Prov. 24. 16. yet he ſhall riſe again, he ſhall not ſink under the burden of his afflictions, God wil never caſt away his fatherly care over him: Some, ſaith Calvin, underſtand it of falling into ſin, and riſing again by repentance, and ſome, of his courage in adverſity, and his not fainting under ſufferings; but he rejects both, the firſt, becauſe outward proſperity is the argument in hand, and the ſecond, becauſe it doth not ſufficiently expreſſe the meaning, that although he be greivouſly afflicted, yet the Lord wil deliver him; and he renders the word, Non collidetur, He ſhal not be daſht in pieces. Ainſworth is for both falling into ſin and miſery in this World: Baſil is for falling into ſin, becauſe Verſe 23. The Lords directing of his ſteps is ſpoken of, without whoſe direction the beſt man living falleth into ſin; but herein lyeth his comfort, that when being for a time left to himſelfe, as Hezekiah was, and David alſo, and by this meanes he falleth; the Lord is at hand to lift him up again, and to ſet him right, which the next words ſhew, The Lord ſuſteineth him with his hand, For ſo he renders them; let the Reader follow whether he pleaſeth, or rather both with Ainſworth, for falling is ſpoken of both waies, Gal. 6. 1. as of falling into ſin, Michah 7. 9. into affliction.

Calvin. Ainſworth. Baſil.

Verſ. 25. Luk. 16. I never ſaw the righteous forſaken, nor his ſeed begging. This may ſeem ſtrange, becauſe Lazarus begged, and ſometime other righteous perſons are in ſo great want, that they cannot live without begging,; yet David had this from Moſes, Deut. 15. 4. Where to the people of Iſrael, being obedient, ſuch a bleſſing is promiſed, that there ſhal be no poor amongſt them. Calvin reſolveth it, that even the beſt have their ſinnes, which God correcteth them for, ſometime one way, ſometime another, as he ſeeth moſt meet for each one of them for their greater good: And thus a good man may be puniſhed with want, even to beggery: So Paul was often in want, but he had learned to want and to abound, and in all things to be content; yet he concludeth, that in his greateſt poverty, he liveth wel of that little which he hath: Baſil applyeth it only to Iſrael, the ſeed of the righteous Progenitors, whom God never left: Ainſworth, That he is not brought to poverty, nor his ſeed, by liberality to the poor, contrary to the opinion of worldings, who wil not give for feare leaſt their Children ſhould want it another day: And this I take to be beſt, for the words next following, Verſe 26. All the day he is gratious and lending, his ſeed is bleſſed. He and his Children have never the leſſe but the more for his liberality to the poor, according to that Prov. 11. 24. there is That ſcattered, but is more increaſed. It is then thus ſaid, not that it

Calvin,

Phil. 4. 11.

Verſ. 26.

falleth

falleth out thus to all the righteous, no one being ever excepted; but thus generally God dealeth with them, and hereby we ſhould be encouraged to deeds of charity to the poor, not fearing want in ſo doing: And on the other ſide, although every one that beggeth his bread is not hence to be taxed, as none of the righteous ſeed: (For we may be made ſo poor by perſecution, as the poor of Lions in France) yet we ſhould rather take any paines to get each one his bread, then to beg; and for the moſt part, they that go about begging, are a curſed Generation, in whom that curſe takes effect, Let their Children be Vagabondes and begg their bread. Note.

The reſidue of the Pſalme is ſpent in exhorting, as Verſe 2. To depart from evill, And to do good. Uſing reaſon to perſwade hereunto, Verſe. 28 29. Then deſcribing him to be one that talketh of wiſdome, and hath the Law of God in his heart, Verſe 30. 31. After this he noteth the attempts of the wicked againſt him, and Gods fruſtrating them, Verſe 32. 33. then he exhorteth again to truſt in God, Verſe 34. And addeth a reaſon taken from the ſtability of ſuch, and inſtability of the wicked, Verſe 35. 36. But for this he biddeth us mark the end of the juſt and of the wicked, Verſe 37, 38, 39, 40. For otherwiſe we might judge amiſſe, if wee look at the preſent evil condition of the righteous, or the proſperous of the wicked. Verſ. 27. 28 30. 32.

PSAL. XXXVIII.

A Pſalme of David for a remembrance. The Sept. addeth, For a remembrance of the Sabboth. Which Auguſtine following, ſaith, that it was to put us in minde of reſting or ceaſing from ſin, which bringeth even upon the beſt ſo great miſeries: But to leave that, as not being in the Hebrew, it was compiled by David, that hereby he might helpe himſelfe, to remember his ſufferings, to be thankful to God ever after being delivered, and careful of his waies, leaſt he ſhould again fal into the like or greater miſeries; and not only for himſelfe, but as he was a publick perſon in compiling it, he had reſpect to the publick good of the Church, hereby teaching us all, to remember our chaſtiſements, of which we are ready to be forgetful, ſo ſoon as we have any eaſe, that they may not only work upon us to humble us for our ſinnes, and to make us repent for the preſent, but alwaies after; otherwiſe he that hath ſmitten us, holds his puniſhing hand ſtil over us, and wil judge us again and again: See the like Title, Pſal. 70. And for the grievances here complained of, Baſil takes them to be the death of his Son Ammon, Abſaloms conſpiracy, Achitophels joyning with him, and Shimei his curſing him: For the firſt Verſe ſee the ſame, Pſal. 6. 1. Auguſt. Baſil.

Thy arrows ſtick faſt in me. David being afflicted looks not ſo much at men, the inſtruments, as at God, by them puniſhing him, as when Shimei rayled upon him; He curſeth, becauſe God bad him curſe, ſaid he. See the like, Pſal. 18. 15. Pſal. 91. 5. Job 6. 4. Yet as by arrows peircing words of wicked enemies, ſo God ſmiting or peircing the body with paines and ſickneſſes may be underſtood: But the comfort of Gods Servants is, that although they be grievous, they are but the hand of God, their loving Father, who if he woundeth will heale them again, as Hoſ. 6. 1. Verſ. 2. 2 Sam. 16 10. Note.

There is no reſt in my bones by reaſon of my ſinnes. Here is ſhewed the original of all our troubles and ſorrows, Viz. Our ſinnes, that in all our ſufferings, we may not look onely at Gods hand, but at our ſinnes provoking him, becauſe otherwiſe we ſhall be ready to murmure againſt God, as over ſevere and cruel againſt us. Verſ. 3.

My

Verſ. 5. My wounds matter and corrupt. Hereby he ſheweth the long continuance of his afflictions, by alluding to mattery ſoares: but this he ſaith, came to him through his fooliſhneſſe, in which word he acknowledgeth, that there is no wiſdome or reaſon in ſorrowing, but a man is herein carried by his luſts as a bruit Beaſt, contrary to right reaſon, as he alſo expreſly ſaith, Pſal. 73. 22. So fooliſh was I and ignorant, even as a Beaſt. From hence to Verſe 11. With more variety of expreſſions, he ſetteth forth his miſery, but there he ſheweth it to be the greater, both in reſpect of his friends aud enemies, theſe ſtood looking upon it a far of, not daring to come neer him, they laid ſnares for him; that is, Sought by ſubtle meanes to enſnare him, plotting inwardly in their hearts, and outwardly conſulting in their talke againſt him to his deſtruction; but he in the meane ſeaſon by his ſilence, and not ſo much as opening his mouth againſt his Calumniators, ſhewed admirable patience, here he fleeth to God therefore by prayer, adding, Verſe 16. I ſaid heare me, leaſt they rejoice over me. Hebrew, I ſaid leaſt they rejoice, &c. Meaning as Verſe 15. I ſaid thou art my hope, anſwer (O Lord God) That is, Save me from mine enemies, leaſt if they prevail, they ſhould triumph over piety, and the power of it ſhould be weakened in mens hearts, when they behold me thy faithful Servant falling before them; and to ſhew what they would do, if they ſhould by Gods forbearing to help him, prevail, he ſaith further, When my foot ſlipped, they magnified themſelves againſt me. That is, When I was but a little put to the worſe, whereby it appeares, how much they would inſult, if they ſhould have their wils of me to deſtroy me: A horrible motive to move the Lord to help his Servants in time of danger by their enemies, and a ſign of their overthrow at hand, when they combine together, to bring the true religion into diſgrace, for in ſo doing, they combine againſt and ſtrike at God himſelfe and his glory, and ſo they ſhal be found but to have kicked againſt the pricks: It is juſt with God, to bring to the like miſery or greater, ſuch as rejoice at the miſeries of others, as the Edomites that cryed of Jeruſalem, inſultingly raze it, raze it even to the ground, but they had this curſe laid upon them, that their Babylon ſhould be brought down, and their Childrens braines daſht againſt the ſtones: And Paulinus in vita Saint Ambroſe, tels of one Theodulus, that when he ſaw another fal, he laughed at him, Ambroſe turned to him and ſaid, Thou that ſtandeſt, take heed that thou falleſt not; And ſoon after he had a great fal indeed.

Note.

Pſal. 137.

Verſ. 17. And I am ready to halt. Of this phraſe, ſee before, Pſal. 35. 15. He meaneth here, that he was ſo preſſed with miſery, that he could not go uprightly, by ſtil bearing it patiently, but was through the weakneſs of the fleſh, ready to be impatient and murmure, becauſe as in the next words, his ſorrows were ever before him, and he had no mitigation thereof. For extreamity of ſufferings, made even patient Job to break out into bitterneſs, neither is any man free from ſuch paſſion at ſometimes, but we muſt pray and ſtrive againſt them, as David did, and look upon them as haltings to this end, neer to which is falling, and therefore a caveat is by the Apoſtle given here againſt, Make ſtreight ſtepps unto your feet, Leaſt that which is halting be turned out of the way.

Note.

Heb. 12. 13.

Verſ. 19. My enemies live and are mighty, in the former Verſe, he tels of his confeſſing his ſinnes, and ſhewing his grievous ſufferings therefore, now whilſt he was thus in the midſt of ſorrows, he ſaith, That his enemies lived; that is, The more merrily, and drew by their good ſucceſs more unto them whereas he remained deſolate and forſaken of all, wherein it may be thought, that he pointed at Abſaloms conſpiracy, after whom all men went, yea many that had been his friends formerly, from remaininig with him, as the Hiſtory ſheweth. Of their rewarding him with hatred for his good wil, Verſe 20. See before Pſal. 35. 12. But againſt all this he concludeth, with prayer to God to haſten to him and ſave him.

Verſ. 20.

Verſ. 21.22.

PSAL.

PSAL. XXXIX.

TO him that excelleth, to Jeduthun, a Pſalme of David. Of Jeduthun ſee, 1 Chron. 25. 3. He and his Sons were appointed to be ſingers in Gods houſe, wherefore it is meant, that this Pſalme ſhould be committed to him, and them, to be ſung from time to time: ſee the like Title Pſal. 77. 1. For the time of compiling it, Baſil ſaith, That it was, when Shimei curſed him; Auguſtine on the word Jeduthun, Tranſiliens ſaith, That the ſignification of the word is rather to be lookt at, then the name; it is a Pſalme for him that paſſeth beyond them, that is, Worldly things to Heavenly.

I ſaid I will keep my way from ſinning with my tongue. David had ſaid before, Pſal. 38. 14 That in the midſt of his miſeries he was as dumb, now he amplifieth the ſame, by declaring his reſolution, againſt breaking out into impatient ſpeeches, and he ſaith, He kept a bridle to his mouth, to this end; whereby is intimated, how hard a thing it is for a man being provoked, to refrain from evil and curſed ſpeaking, ſee for this, James 3. Whilſt the wicked are before me; That is, Leſt they ſhould upon my letting any ſuch words come from my mouth, take occaſion to rejoice, as having taken me by this meanes in a great ſin: Thus Expoſitors generally, but Calvin wil not only have this meant, but alſo the wickeds continuing in proſperity about him, as if he had ſaid, I reſolved, though they proſper and increaſe never ſo much, and ſo my oppreſſions be the greater, yet to beare it patiently and in ſilence: But Baſil by the wicked before him, underſtands Shimei, when he moſt admirably refrained himſelfe, being by that baſe rayler ſo greatly provoked, yet he did not only refrain from evil ſpeeches, but reſtrained Joab from taking revenge upon him, ſaying nothing but this, He curſeth, becauſe God had him curſe. And of David we learn the like patience in time of provocation, and becauſe we cannot otherwiſe, we muſt put a bridle, as it were, in our mouths, by ſtriving to be thus patient, that the ill language of others againſt us, may not draw the like from us. Verſ. 1. Calvin. Baſil. Note.

I was dumb through ſilence, and I held my peace from good. He did not only reſolve againſt ſpeaking to offend, but he did indeed refrain ſometime, yea, from ſpeaking good, that is, What he might juſtly have ſpoken in his own defence, ſo Calvin; but he ſaith, ſome expound it of his ſilence in reſpect of praiſing God, by reaſon of his great troubles. Verſ 3. Calvin.

The fire waxed hot in the midſt of me, &c. Here David confeſſeth his own weakneſs, he was not able alwaies to contain, but brake out at length into ſpeeches of impatience; thus Satan is ready, when the Servants of God reſolve, and ſtrive moſt againſt ſin, to ſtir and blow up the fire of wrath: Baſil, when I reſolved upon patience, thoughts of my hainous ſinnes came into my minde, in the matter of Uriah, and then I was tormented with griefe, as if I had had a fire within me: And although I ſpake not to Shimei curſing me, yet I ſpake to the Lord, having death before mine eyes, of which I was worthy, and from which, for the frailty of mans life in generall, I ſaw that I could not be long free, eſpecially beginning already for them to pine away; Auguſtine, when I refrained ſo from ſpeaking, for feare of ſpeaking evil, that I ſpake no good, I was troubled at this my ſilence, leſt my ſin ſhould be counted greater for this ſilence: Calvin, then my virtue in refraining from ſpeaking evil. Verſ. 4. Baſil.

Make me to know, O Lord, my end, and the number of my daies. This is by Calvin expounded, as ſpoken out of impatience, as if he had challenged the Lord for laying upon him ſuch loads of miſery, when as his life was ſo ſhort, and he ſhould not have time after theſe his grievous ſufferings, by joyful daies to be made amends therefore: But the words inforce Verſ. 5. Calvin.

Auguſt. not to this Expoſition; and Auguſt. ſayth, that the End, to which he here ſpeaketh of, is the bleſſed life to come, which is without End, which he deſired to know to belong to him, for his greater comfort in the midſt of his

Phil. 3. miſeries in this life, and which he ſighed after, as Paul, I forget that which is behind, and preſs on to that before. And this I take to be the beſt, and being ſo underſtood, we ſhall not without Ground tax this Righteous Servant of God, but have cauſe to look upon him as a pattern, and follow him in the Extreamity of our miſeries here, being comforted by looking to our bleſſed

Note. F. M. in Pſalme. End; if we fear God, as he did, our miſeries ſhall not laſt long, for the days of this Life are few, and then cometh an End moſt deſirable. Another there is, that ſayth, that David ſpake thus to God not without ſin; becauſe he deſired to know the number of his days, which God hath reſerved in ſecret to himſelf: But this is confuted by Moſes, Pſalm 90. 12. Speaking to God in the ſame manner. He ſayth not thus, as deſirous to know the certain number of the days of his life, to be the more licentious till the Approach of his end, but to be ſo perſwaded of the brevity of his life, that he might make none account hereof, but altogether of the life to come, to be alwaies directing his courſe ſo, that at the End of this, he might attain life everla-

Verſ. 6. ſting.

My age is nothing before thee: The word rendred Age here, is חלד ſignifying the World, but Verſe 5. The ſame is ſet forth by חדל as Calvin thinketh, by the tranſpoſition of one Letter, and therefore he renders both alike, Verſe 5. What mine Age is, here my age is nothing: New Tranſlat. Verſe 5. How fraile I am, Ainſworth hath it, my Worldly life.

Verſ. 9. Make me not the reproach of the fooliſh: That is, Of wicked Shimei, and ſuch as he was, for by this name, Fool, the wicked man is commonly ſet forth. And David, being now in a deſolat Eſtate by Abſaloms Uſurpation, and all mens forſaking him, ſaw by this Fools railing upon him, that in this condition, he was ſubject to be dealt with likewiſe by others of Shimei his quality; wherefore he prayeth for Deliverance out of this dejected condition, that none Occaſion might be given any longer hereby to ſuch malicious Fools, to ſpit out the poiſon of their reproachfull ſpeeches againſt him. Calvin takes it either thus, or as a prayer not to be expoſed to ſuch Reproaches, as Fools and men of no Reputation are; but I ſee no Reaſon, why the Reader ſhould have it thus left to his Liberty, the Caſe being ſo plain.

Verſ. 10. I will hold my peace, and not open my mouth, for I knew it was thy work. Here David ſheweth the Ground of his ſilence before ſpoken of, Verſe 3. reſolving to go on herein in reſpect either of rendring Evil words for Evil, or murmuring againſt GOD for any ſufferings, viz. He knew it was Gods doing, Shimei curſed, becauſe God bade him curſe: And Abſaloms ſo unnaturall riſing up againſt him, was of God for his ſins, for which cauſe, there was good reaſon to be ſtill, and not to break out by Evill ſpeeches. And that we may in time of Provocation any way, do likewiſe, We muſt conſider,

Note. that we have to do with God in all that we ſuffer, and alſo that his judgments are juſt, the want of which conſideration maketh men ſo ſinfully to break out into curſing, railing, and murmuring upon any provocation by other mens evil tongues, or by other Sufferings, becauſe they look not up to God, but to fortune, or chance, or to the inſtrument only.

Verſ. 14. Leave off or ſtay, that I may recover ſtrength: That is, Ceaſe a while to afflict me before I dy, if it be thy will now to take me out of this world, that I may be ſtrengthned in Grace, patiently to bear the very ſtroak of Death, whenſoever it cometh. Being urged with pains continually, and afflictions is an

Note. hindrance of preparing to dy; and therefore they are ill adviſed, that put off all preparation for death, till ſickneſs, which by diſtempering rather hinders, then furthers the gathering of Spiritual ſtrength to go to meet God, coming by his Harbenger, Death.

PSAL.

PSAL. XL.

I Waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me: This ſeems not to be ſpoken without reference to that which was ſayd Pſalm 39. Where he ſpeaks of himſelf, as being in the danger of Death, by reaſon of his Son and Subjects rebelling againſt him. Here being delivered as he was, by his mens getting the victory over Abſalom and his men, he ſets himſelf to praiſe the LORD. Hebr. It is, Waiting I waited, that is, Long not ceaſing in the time of my trouble to pray again and again, joyning to my praying patience, and who ſo doth thus, ſhall ſurely ſee the like Event. Verſ. 1. Note.

Baſil makes this cohere with Pſalm 39. Becauſe there he ſayd, Hear my prayer, in this, He hath heard my crying. Baſil.

He brought me up out of the horrible pit and miery clay: Calvin, The ſounding pit: That is, I being plunged deep into miſery and danger, which it is uſuall in Scripture to ſet forth thus, as Pſalm 69. 3. He ſaved me out of it. Ainſworth will have this Pſalm to be propheticall of Chriſts Afflictions, and deliverance, and his putting an End to Legall Sacrifices, &c. Jerom expounds the firſt words, of the Gentiles, being delivered out of the miſerable caſe wherein they were, by faith in Chriſt, and thoſe Verſe 6. 7. &c. Of Chriſt, I waited for the Lord, and he heard me: I was, ſayth the Church of the Gentiles, long in an Evill caſe, without God, a ſtranger from the common-wealth of Iſrael, but at length he heard me, yea, even before I called, Iſa. 65. 24. Before they called I anſwered, For of them he ſaith, Iſa. 65. 1. I was found of them that ſought me not: Then he brought me out of the pit of darkneſs and ignorance, out of the miery clay of Superſtition, wherein I ſtuck faſt, and ſet me upon a Rock: That is, Chriſt by beleiving, for he is the rock, upon which whoſoever is ſet, hath a ſure ſtanding, and the Gates of Hell ſhall not overthrow him. And he directed my goings, that is, Being turned to the Lord from Superſtition and worldly vanities, wherein my feet ſtuck faſt before, as in clay and mire, for ſuch are worldly Riches, he kept me from turning to them again, or looking back. He hath put into my mouth a new ſong, A ſong of praiſe for the new man, ſent into the world for my Salvation, whereas before I ſung theatricall and vain ſongs to falſe Gods. Many ſhall ſee and fear, and put their truſt in the Lord, that is, See him, whom the Lord hath ſo mercifully ſent, and the Miracles wrought by him, and a fear to Repentance, for their ſins ſhall come upon them, and they ſhall beleive in him, and ſo receive pardon. Then he is pronounced bleſſed that doth thus, And reſpects not vanities. For Faith, and Chriſt, and reforming from ſin before lived in, muſt go together. Many marvelous things haſt thou done (O Lord) in thy thoughts who is like unto thee? Thou didſt promiſe to ſend thy Son in the fleſh, and that when he came, he ſhould give ſight to the blind, heal the ſick, &c. But the Jews beleived not, they were not in their thoughts like unto thee. Thus Jerom hitherto, and here he ends that part of the Pſalm concerning the Church, in the next words underſtanding Chriſt ſpeaking to the Father. And indeed I ſee not why this Expoſition, to which all things touching the Church of the Gentiles agree ſo fitly, ſhould be rejected, but imbraced by us all. David I grant doth here ſpeak of his own caſe, but as in many other paſſages of the Old Teſtament, the letter is not only to be lookt at, but the myſticall ſenſe alſo, ſo here. Wherefore take we theſe words as literally concerning David, and becauſe he was a Prophet, and doth often, when he ſpeaks in his own perſon, ſpeaks prophetically, not reſt here, but look up to a Senſe more ſublime for our further Edification. Touching David a member of the Church, and being in ſo great miſery as he was delivered, ſo ſhall all Verſ. 2. Ainſworth. Hieron.

that be the Elect of God, although in an Evill plight before, by Chriſt. And by him the Lord did marvelouſly, ſo that he could not make a ſufficient Enumeration of his Benefits, and likewiſe the faithfull may all ſay. He was alſo ſet upon a Rock, That is, Reſtored to ſafety, whereas before he ſtuck faſt in the midſt of deadly dangers; ſo the faithfull, that before tenaciouſly adhered to Superſtition, whereby they were indangered in reſpect of everlaſting deſtruction.

Verſ. 6. Sacrifice and oblation thou delighteſt not in, mine eares haſt thou opened, or as the Hebr. ſignifieth, Thou haſt digged or boared: Here by Sacrifice, that of beaſts is meant by the Latin; Heb. מנחה Minchah a meat offering of flower & Oyl, by burnt offerings, which follow next, ſuch Sacrifices, as wherein the whole beaſt was offered and burnt by fire, whereas in other Sacrifices part only viz. The fat was offered: Laſtly, he addeth, Alſo ſin offering, Hebr. Sin, for ſo ſin-offerings are ſometime called, Exod. 29. 14. Levit. 4. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 21. He made him ſin for us: That is, a ſin offering. Theſe were all the ſorts of Sacrifices preſcribed, and by mentioning them all, he ſheweth of what little force thoſe Sacrifices were to purge from ſin, or to make an attonement therefore. For to prove this, and that the only Sacrifice available for this purpoſe is the death of Chriſt, the Apoſtle alledgeth theſe words, Heb. 10. 5. 6. &c. Only whereas it is here ſayd, Mine Eares haſt thou opened, he hath it, A body thou haſt prepared me: Following herein the Sept. Tranſlat. The meaning being rather reſpected then the words. For in ſaying, mine Eares haſt thou opened, or bored, he hath reference to that, Exod. 21. 6. where the maſter by boring the Eare of his voluntary Servant, makes him his Servant for ever, though Calvin thinks this too curious. But becauſe the word is, Digged or Bored, I doubt not of the Alluſion, the meaning being, thou haſt of me a voluntary Servant, for the ever of my living in this body, for by offering it, as thou haſt before determined, for all, they ſhall be ſanctified, Heb. 10 10.

Hieron. Thus alſo Jerom expounds it, and the next words, In the beginning of thy Book, it is written of me: Of the firſt words of Geneſis which are, In the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth: That is, ſayth he, In and by his Son, which John knowing, ſayth, Joh. 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, but this hath been already by me rejected, upon Gen. 1. neither is there any Ground here for it, conſidering, that Hebr. it is not, In the beginning, but in the volume, and ſo it is alledged, Heb. 10. 7. the word ſignifieth a Role, for ſo they uſed of old to write in parchment, and to role it up, as it is ſayd of Jeremy, that he did, Jer. 36. Ezek. 2. 9. In the volume or role of thy book then, is meant nothing elſe, but in thy book, and herein it was plainly written in ſundry places, that Chriſt ſhould do the will of God, by offering his body in Sacrifice for our ſins, as Iſa. 53. The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, for our tranſgreſſions he was ſmitten, and with his ſtripes we are healed, Eſa. 63. 3. Pſalm, 22. And Moſes the firſt pen-man of Gods book, ſaith, he wrot of me, Joh. 5. 46 Matth: 26: 24: Luk: 24: 44: Act: 13: 29: And this was, when Moſes wrot of the paſchal Lamb, Exod 12. Of the two Goates upon the Expiation day, the red heifer, and the brazen Serpent, &c: All which were but types, finally fulfilled in Chriſt.

Calvin, Yet Calvin applyeth all to David, although not without reference to Chriſt: For David was as an obedient Servant, and it is written of him, and others choſen of God, that they ſhould do Gods will, for he was after Gods own heart, and his Law is written in the Hearts of all ſuch. Thus alſo Baſil ſaying, that it was cheifly ſpoken of Chriſt, the head of them all; from whom virtue cometh to inable the faithful to do likewiſe; & all the faithful, I grant, ought to apply this to themſelves, not placing confidence in ſacrifices carnal, when their time was, as David did not, Pſa. 50. and Pſalm 51: Nor in other Duties externall, as praying with the lips and not with the heart, Eſa: 29: 13: Nor in thoſe dayes in barely beleiving, or being Baptiſed only with water water, Iames 2. John 3. 5. But obeying and carefully doing Gods wil, and keeping his commandements: But to make this the main ſcope of this place, is to go contrary to the truth, and to obſcure a light here ſet up, ſhewing the aboliſhing of Sacrifices carnal, and teaching one only Sacrifice of Chriſt, to be by all the faithful to be relyed upon, to be reconciled to GOD and ſanctified, and that contrary to the Apoſtle, who ſo plainly leadeth us the way to this interpretation; if it be ſaid, Is GOD ſo divers, wil he have ſacrificing, and yet wil not? I anſwer with Auguſtine, in divers times, he wil and wil not, and yet is not contrary to himſelfe, he would have carnal Sacrifices offered, that hereby, as by rudiments, his people might be taught that ſacrifice, which was to come, wherein ful and perfect propitiation lay; but when this was once offered, he would not have ſuch offered any more, becauſe the uſe of a figure is at an end, when the thing figured is come, John 1. 14. Auguſt.

Baſil.

Note.

I have declared thy righteouſneſſe in the great Congregation. This ſaith Jerom, is ſpoken of Chriſt, becauſe he publiſhed the glad tidings of Salvation by his Apoſtles, to all the parts of the World; a very great Congregation. Verſ. 9. Hieron.

Withhold not thy tender mercies from me. Here is ſhewed how Chriſt ſhould in the time of his danger, as man, pray to the Father, as he did, Matth. 26. 39. Verſ. 11.

Mine iniquityes have taken hold upon me. The word rendred iniquities, ſometimes is put for the puniſhment of ſin, as Pſal. 31. 11. And ſo this may be applyed to Chriſt, who was without ſin, for his ſufferings were innumerable, but for our ſinnes, or as Jerom, he is brought in ſpeaking of mankinde, whereunto he was joyned by his incarnation, their ſinnes, the burden whereof he took upon him, were innumerable, for he bare our trangreſſions, Iſa. 53. And was made ſin for us, 2 Cor 5. 21. Verſ. 12. Hieron.

Let them be aſhamed and confounded together, that ſeek my Soule. Thus he prayeth ſaith Jerom, meaning, That they ſhould be made aſhamed and to feare, that they might be turned back from their evil waies: Otherwiſe we may take it as a propheſie of ruine to come to the wicked Jews, that perſecuted our Lord Jeſus, and made a mock of him, when he hanged upon the Croſs. Verſ. 14. Hieron.

Let them be glad. Having ſpoken before of his wicked enemies, now he prayeth for them that love him, which he meaneth by ſaying, That love thy ſalvation: That is, Thy Jeſus. Then he concludeth, But I am poor and needy, yet the Lord thinketh upon me. So Jeſus came and lived poor in this World, but he was remembred, being in the loweſt ebb of miſery, ſoon raiſed up to the greateſt height of Glory. Verſ. 16. Verſ. 17. Phil. 26.

PSAL. XLI

BLESSED is he that conſidereth the poor. This ſaith Calvin, is commonly taken as ſpoken of the charitable, but the word משכיל Underſtanding, here uſed implyeth, an intelligent or prudent weighing of his caſe that is oppreſſed, to ſtand for him, if it be by men, if by God, not to cenſure him wicked, for his hand ſoare upon him, becauſe Job ſuffered thus, only for tryal of his patience, wherein he comes neerer the true ſenſe, then they that are for offices of charity to the poor in general: And if we look back to Pſal. 40. 17. Where he ſaith, I am afflicted and poor, it wil appeare, that he ſpeaks here of the ſame, and if by poor, there Chriſt be meant, then he is meant here alſo; and then the meaning is, That hath the wiſdome to look upon Chriſt ſo attenuated, as the word דל ſignifieth, not as one ſmitten of God for his ſinnes, as Iſa. 53. But ſubmitting Verſ. 1.

Joh. 3. 16. ſubmitting himſelfe to poverty, to make us rich, being the Son of God, humbling himſelfe ſo, that whoſoever beleiveth on him ſhould not periſh, but have life everlaſting: Thus alſo Jerom, ſuch a man is bleſſed both in health and ſickneſs, as followeth, Verſe 2: 3. Thou wilt make all his bed in his ſickneſſe. Hebrew, Thou haſt turned: Becauſe he that makes a bed ſoft, turneth it, and it is meant, that the Lord giveth him eaſe; whereas Jerom by bed underſtands, his body exerciſed with many afflictions, to make him better; it is far fetcht, and therefore leaving it, cleave to the plain literall ſenſe; and if it pleaſeth not, underſtand eaſe in ſickneſſe: Calvin tels thee, that reſtoring to health is meant, which I take to be all one.

Verſ. 4. Hieron. I ſaid, Lord have mercy upon me, I have ſinned. This alſo is by Jerom applyed to Chriſt, as meant of the ſinnes of men, for whom he ſuffered, or to the Church, as ſpoken in her perſon; and the next unto the Jews, ſpeaking deceitfully to intrap Chriſt, which he calleth vanity, as when they ſaid, he regarded no mans perſon, and therefore asked him, whether they ſhould pay tribute or not, for they spake one thing, and intended another in their hearts, and thought long for his death, and going abroad uttered it; that is, Plainly calling upon Pilate to crucifie him.

Verſ. 7. Together againſt me they whiſper, that hate me. Here alſo he ſaith, The Jews conſulting and tampering with Judas, about the betraying of Chriſt, Verſ. 9. is meant, beleiving, that if he were once dead, he ſhould riſe no more,

Verſ. 10. as in the next words: Then he deſcribeth Judas the Traytor, who did eat bread with him, when he gave him bread dipt in the ſallet, for he immediatly went out and moſt treacherouſly delivered him into their hands: But thou Lord be gracious to me, and raiſe me up, Which was done indeed,

Verſ. 11. and then his enemy the Devil, by his riſing from death, was held from triumphing over him, becauſe he was thus deſtroyed. And me thou haſt ſuſtained, and ſet me before thy face for ever. Which was fulfilled when he aſcended into Heaven, ſitting there at the right hand of GOD in all joy and glory: And here, ſaith he, ends the firſt book of the Pſalmes: The ſecond, Pſalme 73. The third, Pſalme 87. The fourth, Pſalme 104. The

Baſil. fifth, at the end of all the Pſalmes, Hitherto Jerom: Baſil alſo proveth this Pſalme to be prophetical touching Chriſt, becauſe it is ſo by him applyed, when ſpeaking of Judas, he ſaith concerning his treachery, this was done, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, He that hath eaten bread at my Table, hath lifted up his heele againſt me. Wherefore it is a point

Auguſt. of audacioufneſs and temerity to expound it of any other, as ſome do, either of David, or Hezekiah being ſick. Auguſtine alſo in many more words, Chriſt here ſpeaketh ſometime in his own perſon, as man, ſometime in the perſon of the Church, and ſometime ſo of himſelfe, as that he is to be underſtood, as ſpeaking of his Church alſo; of himſelfe, when he ſaith, Bleſſed is he that underſtands the poor, or attenuated man, Beleiving the fulneſs of the God-head to dwel in him bodily, ful of the treaſures of wiſdome and grace to beleive in him: In the perſon of the Church, Have mercy upon me, I have ſinned. For as it is true of man and wife, they twain are one fleſh, ſo of Chriſt and his Church: In his own, and the Churches perſon, They ſay, when ſhall he dye and his name periſh? &c. For thus did both the Jews ſay againſt him, and both they and other perſecutors againſt his Church; but he was raiſed again, and his name became more famous, and his faithful Servants dying, others riſe up in their ſtead, and they ſtand before the LORD for ever in glory, in Soule, then in Body, being raiſed up again at the laſt day. And in this I reſt, and whereas this Pſalme is now turned even by ours another way, to David and other

Note. diſtreſſed Servants of GOD, we may by way of anagoge ſo apply the paſſages hereof: They are bleſſed, that judge favourably of the afflicted, the wicked do ſo hate the Servants of God, that they meditate all miſcheiſe againſt them even to death, ſometime openly, ſometime ſecretly in a cunning manner; the Servants of God in all their diſtreſſes, flee to him confeſſing feſſing their ſinnes, and ſo are ſure to be raiſed up, partly being delivered here, or if not, by a ſucceſſion of the faithful, continuing their name upon Earth, and partly by being taken and raiſed up to everlaſting glory.

PSAL. XLII.

TO him that excelleth, Maſchil, for the Sons of Corah: Of the Title, Maſchil, ſee before, Pſal. 32. Although Davids name be not prefixed here, yet Calvin judgeth it to be a Pſalme compiled by David, becauſe his caſe is herein ſet forth, and committed only to the Sons of Corah, who were Levites, to be ſung as other Pſalmes to others, that were profeſſed Choriſters in the Temple; becauſe David was a Prophet above others of his time, and it is improbable, that he would have any other to compile a Pſalme for him, being by the ſpirit, wherewith he was indued, better able to do it, then any of them: And he compiled it when he lived in exile for feare of Saul, not of Abſalom, as ſome think, for that was too ſhort to agree to the words, Verſe 2, 3. Calvin.

Baſil ſaith, That it was compiled by a prophetical ſpirit, ſpeaking of things to come long after, Viz. In the time of the Babyloniſh Captivity, expreſſing the longing deſire of the faithful then, and comforting and exhorting them to truſt in God: And to make this good he rendreth the word למנצח In finem, to the end, which ſignifieth more properly, To him that excelleth: Becauſe it is intended, ſaith he, for a long time after the penning, Viz. To the end of the Captivity. Baſil.

Jerom, who hath it likewiſe, To the end, expounds The end of Chriſt; Maſchil, Of ſpiritual underſtanding; The Sons of Corah, Of the faithful, as if it had been ſaid, a Pſalme to inſtruct the faithful, to thirſt after, and to come to Chriſt, to be healed and comforted againſt their ſinnes, for which they are inwardly afflicted, as an Hart with thirſt: Hieron.

Ainſworth, who followeth Jerom in dividing the Pſalmes into five Books, noteth, that the three former end each one of them, with Amen, Amen, The fourth with, Amen Halalujah, The fifth with, Halalujah, being yet called as if they were all one Book, The Book of the Pſalmes; as the ſmal Prophets, though twelve, are called the Book of the ſmal Prophets. Corah was the cheife of them, that conſpired againſt Moſes and Aaron, Numb. 16. For which he was deſtroyed: but his Sons, it ſeems, took warning to come from his Tent, and ſo were preſerved, and were ſingers, 1 Chron 6. 33. And ſome amongſt them were moſt famous, as Samuel, and Heman, God not only ſparing the Children of the wicked, that follow not their Parents, but extraordinarily ſometimes, gracing them with gifts beyond others. Ainſworth. Numb. 16. 11

Auguſtine ſaith, that Corah ſignifieth Calvaria, and that hereby are meant the Sons of him, that ſuffered upon Mount Calvary, CHRIST JESVS, the ſcope being to teach him, to be the Fountain of living water, after whom we muſt thirſt, as the Hart after the Rivers of water, and therefore after his Baptiſme. Auguſt.

Amongſt all theſe Expoſitions, I ſee no cauſe to reject any, wherefore I imbrace the firſt as literal, and the other of Jerom and Auguſtine, as myſtical, it being not unuſual with the Pſalmiſt, in ſpeaking of himſelfe and of his own perſon, to propheſie of things to come in the time of the Goſpel: Touching that of Baſil, it is ſo common with the Prophet Iſaiah, to wreath propheſies of the Babyloniſh Captivity, and deliverance herefrom, with deliverance by Chriſt, eſpecially from Chapter 40. to the end, that I am eaſily drawn to think, that David might do in this Pſalme, and ſome others likewiſe.

As the Hart panteth after the Rivers of water. Hebrew, Cryeth. Jerom tels Verſ. 1.

Hieron. tells us, that the Hart having ſnuffed up a Serpent in his noſtrills groweth very thirſty, and therefore haſtens to the waters. So it is meant, that the Chriſtian finding himſelf in an evil caſe, by reaſon of the venom of his Spirit, Fornication, deſires Chriſt and his water of Baptiſme for Remiſſion of his ſins; which is true, not only in ſuch, as have been Idolaters, but otherwiſe ſinfull, by the common contagion from one Adam overſpreading all men. If it be applyed to the faithfull in Babylon, it is hereby ſhewed, how they ſhould long after Gods coming to deliver them, that thus they might be refreſhed from that ſo greivous a ſuffering by the hands of their barbarous Enemies. Basil. Apply it to David and then the meaning wil be, that he neglecting Kingly honours and riches in compariſon of the comforts of Gods houſe, did moſt earneſtly deſire, that an end might be put to that his Exile, whereby he was debarred from coming to the publick Dutyes of Gods ſervice. Calvin.

Verſ. 2. Pſal. 112. 9. My tears were meat unto me day and night, whilſt they ſayd, Where is now thy God? Beſides his Exiled condition, debarring him from Gods Houſe, there was another thing, that vexed him no leſs but rather more, Viz. their upbraiding him with this, that God, upon whoſe favour ſpecially chooſing him, he bare himſelf ſo much, had rejected him. In ſaying, his tears were his meat, for this he meant, that forſaking his food for ſorrow, when others refreſhed themſelves with meat, he afflicted himſelf with faſting and weeping, and that moſt largely, for which he ſayth, Day and Night. And this ought to afflict us moſt of all other things to be debarred from publick excerciſes in Gods worſhip, and his holy name to heare blaſphemed: If it be applyed to the Captives in Babylon, it agreeth notably with Pſalm 137. Where their greif is ſhewed to have been extream, for the diſhonour done to God through them, as if he were too weak to deliver them; If it be applyed to the time of the Goſpel, it is to be underſtood of the ſorrow of Chriſtians, for the Blaſphemies of Jews and Pagans againſt their LORD and Saviour CHRIST, whom they vilified, and called not God but in deriſion, and that when they perſecuted them, and no viſible help appeared from Heaven, during the whole time of the ten moſt bloudy perſecutions, which he calleth here All the day long, during this whole time, The food of the Church was Tears, whereupon they lived, as it were, in hope thus to attain Remiſſion of ſins. So Jerom. Note. Basil. Hieron.

Verſ. 4. Theſe things I remember and pour out my Soul in me; for I went with the multitude leading them to the houſe of GOD: Here David by comparing how it had been with him formerly in his proſperity, and now in his Exile, ſheweth how he increaſed his Sorrow hereby. So pouring out my Soul upon me is uſed, Job. 30. 16. Lam. 2. 12. Then he went one of the foremoſt to the houſe of God, leading the way to them, being at feſtivall times gathered together in great multitudes, and went Rejoycing, Dancing, Playing, and ſinging, But now he was altogether debarred herefrom. Apply it to the Captives in Babylon, and then it is a ſetting forth of their ſorrows increaſe, in recounting their former happineſs, in the Liberty of going to Jeruſalem, and to the Temple at their feſtivalls, and comparing herewith the horrible Idolatry, which thy were compelled to ſee, and the places, where they now lived, the ſink of all abominations. Apply it to the time of the Goſpel, and read it, as Jerom and Auguſt. I will go to the admirable Tabernacle: for דּ Ach ſignifieth Tabernacle, and the meaning is, to find God, touching whom they ſaid in upbraiding me, Where is now thy God? There being outwardly in the Church, calamity and miſery, I will go to his Temple, the Congregation of the faithfull, and there I find that which is truly admirable ſhewing God in them, ſo ſanctifying them, and making them admirable for holineſs of life, and power to work miraculouſly for the confirming of the Goſpel. Calvin. Basil.

Verſ. 5. Why art thou caſt down (O my Soul) and diſquieted within me? truſt in God, for I will ſtill confeſs him, the Salvations of his face: So Hebr. the meaning ning being, although my wicked Enemies upbraid me by my confidence in him, now that he appeareth not to my help, yet my hope is nevertheleſs in him, and I will not ceaſe to confeſs him, or to ſpeak of the Salvation, which his countenance lifted up, bringeth to thoſe that truſt in him, by ſaving them out of all their troubles. And this may eaſily be applyed all the three ways before ſpoken of.

(O God) my Soul is caſt down in me, therefore will I remember thee from the Land of Jordan, from Hermons, and the hill Mitzar: David checks his Soul, Verſe 5. for being dejected for want of confidence in God, yet now he confeſſeth it to be caſt down, but againſt this oppoſeth the Remembrance of God, as preſent with thoſe that truſt in him in any place, and not at his Sanctuary only that was at Jeruſalem, and becauſe the places wherein he wandred up and down, were the parts beyond Jordan, where mount Hermon was, and other leſſer hills, he maketh particular mention of theſe, calling Hermon, Hermons, becauſe that Hill extended far, and had many heads, and becauſe we read of no hill properly called Mitzar, hereby other little hills in generall lying out that way be underſtood, according to the ſignification of the word Mitzar, Little: Calvin rendring it, whilſt I remember, ſayth, that David hereby was more caſt down, Viz. By thinking upon God worſhipped at Jeruſalem, and his living an exile from thence. But the word עַל־כֵּן doth more properly ſignify, Therefore, approving rather the former ſenſe, & if it be taken for whilſt, it wil be but a Repetition of that which was ſayd before. Jerom expounding it by, Therefore, ſayth, That it is the voice of every penitent Soul dejected for ſin, but comforting it ſelf through Baptiſme received, figured out by Jordan, and Chriſts being made a curſe for us, as Hermon ſignifieth, and ſeeming little in himſelf through humility, but for this more highly accepted in the ſight of God.

Ver. 6.

Calvin.

Hieron.

Baſil going on to apply this to the Jews, in captivity, ſaith, That theſe words are an anſwer to the former, Why art thou caſt down? There is good reaſon, for I remember how it was with me in the Land of promiſe, ſet forth by Jordan and Hermon, and find my ſelf greatly abaſed in compariſon of that I was then, for which alſo ſee, Pſalm. 137.

Baſil.

Deep calleth to deep, at the noiſe of thy water pipes, all thy waves and billows are gone over me: He calleth, ſayth Calvin, his Calamities Deeps or Abyſſes without bottom, becauſe they ſeemed endleſs unto him, when he was ſo long perſecuted by Saul, for one came upon him in the neck of another, and ſo called on, as it were, one another to drown him, and then more flouds of water ſtill overwhelmed, that his caſe ſeemed even deſperate. Jerom applying this to the Goſpel, ſayth, The New Teſtament calleth to the Old Teſtament, ſhewing nothing now to have been done, but what was there foretold, & either is an abyſs for the profound myſteries therein ſet forth. And the water pipes are the Prophets ſo called, becauſe as water in the pipe, ſo the ſenſe of their propheſies lyes hid, till it be opened. For Waves and Billows he hath, High things and waves whereby are meant judgments threatned before Execution and judgments executed.

Ver. 7.
Calvin.

Hieron.

Baſil by the Abyſſe calling upon the Abyſſe, underſtands the Babylonian Armies, and by the waves, &c. their multitudes overflowing, as a floud the whole land of Judea. It is an aggravation of Davids miſery by a metaphor taken from deep waters, ſuch as thoſe of the ſea, whereinto he was, as it were, caſt, as Jonah ſometime was, the waves going over him, or it is ſpoken in alluding to the ſtate of the world, when all things living upon the dry Land were under the deep waters; For as then the Cataracts or Windows of Heaven were opened, ſo here the word rendred water pipes is by Jerom. rendred Cataractæ. And it may be applyed to the Evangelicall Church being under the deep water of miſeries all the time of her bloudy perſecutions, and to the Church of the Jews brought under the Babylonian forces. But moſt excellently Auguſt. hereupon, what is this Abyſſe but Gods judgments according to Pſalm. 36. 6. Thy judgments are a great deep, Wherefore the Abyſſe calls the Abyſſe, when he judgeth in this world, even thoſe by whom we know nothing provoking hereunto, & proceeds to judge alſo in the world to come by everlaſting condemnation. At the voice of thy Cataracts: that is, as thou threatneſt by thy miniſtry, lifting up their voice to denounce theſe judgments. All thy ſuſpenſions and waves are gone over me. That is, the Waves of thy Judgments here, and thoſe to come in the threatnings thereof for ſin, in acting which I have been ſo notorious. A moſt pious meditation for us all, eſpecially under judgments here, that they may work upon us to repentance, and ſo we may eſcape hereafter.

Baſil.

Auguſt.

Note.

Verſ. 8. In the day the Lord will command mercy, and in the night, &c. Having been troubled in his thoughts about Gods judgments, whereby he ſuffered, and was worthy to ſuffer more for his ſins, V. 7. Here he declares the iſſue of theſe troubles to all Gods faithfull ſervants, that are upon theſe meditations moved to flee ſin, he commands mercy immediatly to comfort them, by aſſuring them of forgiveneſs and deliverance, whereupon they ſhall have joy, and for joy ſing both day and night to his praiſe, as he had before ſpoken of his tears and ſorrow day and night, V. 3. By ſpeaking of a ſong and prayer he meaneth Expreſſions of joy both ways, by ſinging, and in prayer further giving thanks to God for this his mercy.

Verſ. 9. I will ſay unto God my rock, why am I dejected: It being ſo as I have ſayd before, Verſe 8. Why am I ſo ſad for my ſufferings in preſent, and the deriſions of my wicked Enemies; ſurely I ſee no cauſe. Why then art thou dejected (O my Soul) as V. 5. only with this difference, there he ends with, Salvations his face, here with Salvations my face and my God: That is, Who art a Salvation to me, not once but always, and my God, that I may not be aſhamed, nor any ſuch thing may appeare in my Face, for their Deriſion.

Verſ. 11.

PSAL. XLIII.

Baſil. THis Pſalm, ſayth Baſil, is without a Title, becauſe it is of the ſame Argument with the former. The Church in Babylon calling upon the Lord again here to the ſame Effect againſt that King, meant by the deceitfull and unjuſt man, and that people meant by the ungodly Nation.

Calvin. Calvin taking it to be ſpoken by David in his own caſe, by that man underſtands Saul, by the Nation ſuch as conſented with him in perſecuting David, and in praying God to judge him, he meaneth, by taking in with him to ſave and deliver him out of their hands.

Hieron. Jerom by that man underſtands the Devill, and by that nation his curſed inſtruments, ſeeking the deſtruction of the Chriſtian Church. For in the parable of the Tares ſown amongſt the Wheat, it is ſayd, when the Devill had done it, The envious man hath done this.

Verſ. 3. Send out thy light and truth, let them lead me to thy holy hill and to thy Tabernacle. Apply this with Calvin to David, and it is meant, Let me by thy favour towards me in delivering me, which is as a moſt comfortable light, See the truth of thy promiſes. For though by faith we know all Gods promiſes to be true, yet when by experience we ſee them fulfilled, this is more confirmed unto us. And then he meaneth his truth ſhould appear, when putting an end to this his Exile, he ſhould bring him to mount Zion, and to his Tabernacle, That is, to the publick Exerciſes of his worſhip to be reſtrained wherefrom greived him more, then to want the comfort of his Houſe, Wives, and Children, &c. But if this were in Sauls time, ſayth he, how could Zion come to be ſpoken of as the place of the Tabernacle, when it was not ſet there till long after in Davids time, and anſwers that he ſpake thus by the ſpirit of propheſie, whereby he knew that the Tabernacle ſhould be be placed there, but underſtand this as ſpoken againſt Abſaloms Conſpiracy, and then there will be no need of ſuch a ſhift. Moreover in Sauls time, Davids Wives and Children were with him, ſo that he had no cauſe to be greived for being driven from them, as he ſayth, but in the time of Abſaloms Conſpiracy, his wives were left to keep the houſe, and were ſhamefully abuſed.

If it be applyed to the Church in Babylon, Gods ſending out his Light and truth to lead her to Zion, muſt be underſtood of cauſing the captivity to return, as he had promiſed. If to the Evangelicall Church, Chriſt ſaith of himſelf, I am the Light, and I am the way, the truth and the life: And he leads to mount Zion when to heavenly happineſſe, where is the Tabernacle of the moſt high, of which, Pſal. 15.

Then will I go to thy Altar. David and the Church in Babylon, according to the letter, expreſſing their thankfulneſs by ſacrifice, and their joy by ſinging and playing, the Evangelical Church by Chriſt figured by the Altar, offering praiſe, and afterwards ſtanding upon Zion with Harps, making expreſſions of all joy, as Revel. 14. 1. Verſ. 4.

PSAL. XLIV.

TO him that excelleth, to the Sons of Choreh, Maſchil. The ſame Title with that Pſalme 42. Neither is Davids name put to it here or there; whereupon Calvin thinks it not to have been compiled by David, but by ſome other man, that lived afterwards in the time of the Maccabees, when Antiochus Epiphanes raged ſo much againſt the Church and People of God, compelling them to do things contrary to the Law, but the faithful ſtood manfully to it to the death: And I do think with him and others, that this Pſalme concerneth thoſe times in part, and the times of perſecution under the Goſpel in part, becauſe it is thus in one paſſage applyed, Rom. 8. 36. We are killed as Sheep, Verſe 11. We are killed all the day long, we are counted as Sheep to the ſlaughter, Verſe 22. But I ſee no cauſe, why it ſhould for this be aſcribed to any other man, rather then to David; for it is put amongſt Davids Pſalmes, the end whereof is noted, Pſal. 72. Ult. And he being a Prophet, and ſo it being uſual with him to ſpeake often of things to come, as preſent; I ſee no reaſon, why this Pſalme ſhould be excepted againſt, as none of his: And hitherto I add, that after the Captivity beſides Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, and Daniell; Who lived in the time of Cyrus, Darius, and the lateſt of Artaxerxes, who allowed Nehemiah to go and build Jeruſalem; the Church of God had no Prophet, til the time of John the Baptiſt, which might be conceived to be a Pen-man of any part of the holy Scriptures, wherefore I conclude, that David, and not any other was the Author of this Pſalme, in which long before it came to paſſe, he both ſetteth forth the ſufferings of the Jews, eſpecially under Antiochus Epiphanes, according to 1 Maccabees 1. And the perſecutions of the Church under the Goſpel, teaching the people of God, in either time and at all times like thoſe, how to addreſſe themſelves to God in their prayer: And this agreeth to Baſil, who ſaith, That David, as other Prophets did run over all times in his propheſies, both paſt, preſent, and to come; and here over the times of the Maccabees, of whom ſee their hiſtory. Calvin. Baſil.

WE have heard with our eares. To put the more courage into them, that ſuffered in thoſe daies, he firſt recounts the doings of God towards his people of old, when the Heathen were without ſtrength to withſtand him, although very potent: For hence it muſt needs follow, that Gods people never ſuffer through any adverſe power at their will, but that Verſ. 1.

God moderateth and appointeth all their ſufferings, who is their gracious God and Father, and therefore wil turn all to their beſt good. Our Fathers have tould us. Here this ſaith Baſil, Yee Fathers that neglect to teach your Children ſuch things, as may work his feare and love in them, and faith to rely upon and ſeek to him in all times of danger: They made their Mouthes, as it were, Books, wherein the geſtes of the Lord might be read to his praiſe, and to the drawing of their Childrens hearts unto him.

Baſil.

Note.

Verſ. 2. Thou with thy hand hath expelled the Heathen and planted them. That is, the Canaanites, for although the Iſraelites armed, God gave the Victory, as when the Wals of Jericho fel, and when he threw down hail-ſtones and herewith ſlew the Canaanites, &c.

Ioſh. 6. Ioſhua. 10.

Verſ. 5. Ioſhu. 10. 24. In thy name we have troden underfoot thoſe that roſe up againſt us. That is, By the power of God, when their Kings being hidden in a Cave, were brought out, and Joſhuah made them ſet their feet upon their necks.

Verſ. 9. But thou haſt caſt us off, &c. After the commemoration of things done in former times, for Gods people, and what truſt his people had in him therefore, and how they joyfully praiſed him, now he proceedeth to a lamentable complaint of their preſent miſeries, in ſaying, Thou goeſt not forth with our Armies. He intimateth, that whilſt God was propitious to his people, he was the ſtrength of their forces, and no adverſe power could prevail againſt them, but when he is offended, they may arme and go to war, but they cannot prevail; yea contrariwiſe their enemies ſhall eaſily ſubdue them, and make them baſe abjects; which is further expreſſed, Verſe 10. They ſpoile for themſelves: Or as Calvin, They have troden us under foot, at their own will, As anſwering to that, Verſe 5. We have troden under foot thoſe that roſe up againſt us. And this is further amplified

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 11. 12. Verſe 11. 12. We are killed as Sheep, and thou ſelleſt us, and increaſeſt not by our price. For ſo vile things and naught worth, are let go to every one that wil take them for nothing, the greateſt debaſement that may be; In ſaying, Verſe 11. Thou haſt ſcattered us amongſt the Heathen. He hath plainly reference to the time of their Captivity in Media and Babylon, in ſaying, We are killed as Sheep, to the tyrannical time of Antiochus Epiphanes, and to the time of perſecution under the Goſpel; and in ſaying, Thou ſelleſt, &c. To the time of Jeruſalems deſtruction by the Romans, when the Jews were ſo vilifyed by Gods juſt judgment, that as Chriſt was amongſt them ſould for thirty pence, ſo thirty of them were ſould for a penny, as Joſephus ſaith.

Verſ. 17. All this hath come upon us, and we have not forgotten thee, nor dealt treacherouſly in thy Covenant. This ſaith Calvin, is not pleaded in behalfe of the Jews, in reſpect of things done before the Heathens, ſo cruelly tyrannizing over them, but after; nor in the behalfe of them all, for many revolted to heatheniſme, 1 Mach. 1. But in the behalfe of the faithful, a little remnant that ſtood to the Laws of God, even to the death: Neither is it ſpoken in way of accuſing the Lord of mutability or cruelty to his Servants, but an argument is drawn from their preſent conſtancy, notwithſtanding their grievous ſufferings, to move the LORD to compaſſion towards them, in this their extremity.

Calvin.

Hieron. Apply this with Jerom to Chriſtians, and then it is the voice of Martyrs.

Verſ. 19. Though thou haſt broken us in the place of Dragons, and covereſt us with the ſhadow of death. Hieron. Becauſe thou haſt humbled us in the place of affliction: And he ſaith wel, The ſhadow of death; Becauſe the death of the Martyrs, was but a ſhadow in compariſon of death everlaſting: But the word תנים here uſed properly, ſignifieth Dragons, which Calvin thinks, ſhould rather be rendred by, Balenæ, Sea Calves or Whales, underſtanding by the place where, the Sea, becauſe they were in the bottome of the Sea of miſeries, and to this covering with the Shadow of death, better agreeth; but there is no need to go from the proper ſignification, ſith the place of Dragons is ſome horrible deſert, where there is continual danger of death, which is called, The ſhadow of death, Becauſe void of all comfort of life, that is as light: According to this it is ſaid in a ſpiritual ſenſe; The people that ſate in darkneſſe, in the Valley and ſhadow of death, have ſeen a great light. So that to be covered with the ſhadow of death, is nothing elſe, but to ſee death before a mans eyes daily, which way ſoever he turneth him, and no meanes to eſcape. Iſa. 9. Baſil.

Calvin.

of

For thee we are killed all the day. It may ſeem ſtrange, ſaith Calvin, that the Faithful ſhould thus complain; ſith to ſuffer for his names ſake is a joy; yea Socrates having great croſſes by his Wives, ſaid, Melius eſt inſontem perire, quam ſua culpa: But yet it is a good plea, to move the Lord to pitty, that we ſuffer for his ſake, becauſe when we do ſo, it is not againſt us, that the Enemy rageth ſo much, as againſt GOD and his truth: For ſo did Antiochus Epiphanes, who ſet himſelfe to beat down the Religion which GOD had ſet up amongſt the Jews, which he called ſuperſtition: And likewiſe Jewiſh and Heathen perſecutors in the time of the Goſpel. Yet it is alſo to be underſtood, that no man is without ſin, and therefore he muſt acknowledge any kind of ſufferings to come juſtly upon him in reſpect of God; whatſoever they be, at whoſe hands he ſuffereth, for ſo much as it is not at their will, but by his ſecret pre-determination, that they are thus permitted to tyrannize, as 2 Sam. 16. Verſ. 22. Matth. 5. Note.

Ariſe, why ſleepeſt thou (O Lord) awake, &c. This is not ſpoken, as if the Lord ſlept at any time, but to move him to, ſhew, that he was awake and watchfull over his poor flock, beſet with ravening wolves. For he that keepeth Iſrael neither ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth, only to us he ſeemeth then only to be awake when he executeth Judgments upon our malicious Enemies in our defence. He calleth for conceſſion or permiſſion here, ſayth Baſil, ſleeping, Retribution, Waking, or ariſing, and his help, Verſe 24. His facs. Jerom applying it to the time of the Goſpel, giveth a far fetcht ſenſe, thus, Thou that haſt dyed and riſen again, awake and riſe in their hearts, that beleeve thee to be dead but not riſen again, that they may beleeve thee to be riſen, and eſcape everlaſting death: Auguſt. alſo in ſaying, Awake why ſleepeſt thou to them that beleeve not, for to ſuch he ſleepeth ſtill by death and awaketh not, nor riſeth, till in their Hearts, when he converteth them to beleeve in his name. Verſ. 23. Pſal. 121. 4. Baſil. Hieron.

PSAL. XLV.

TO him that excelleth on Shoſhannim, to the Sons of Corah, a ſong of Loves: For Shoſhannim ſome have it Delight, as the word alſo ſignifieth, ſome, De commutandis, but why the Sept. ſhould render it ſo I know not, for the word cometh of ש ש ſignifying ſix, from whence an inſtrument of ſix ſtrings may be called Shoſhannim, See the like Pſalm. 69. Pſalm. 80. And an inſtrument of three ſtrings is called Sholiſha, 1 Sam. 18. 6. And becauſe a Lilly hath ſix Leaves, it is called Shoſhan, Cant. 2. 6. in the plural number, Shoſhannim, It is then a Song of praiſe to be ſung upon a musicall inſtrument with ſix ſtrings by the Sons of Corah, Levites of whom before; and Maſchil here alſo in the Title. Pſalm. 42. For a ſong of Loves: Ainſworth hath it, A ſong of welbeloved virgins, But here is no word ſignifying Virgins but Loves, and therefore it may better be rendred; A Love ſong: For it ſetteth forth the Love betwixt Chriſt and his Church, having reſpect to the Spiritual marriage betwixt them, as at marriages it hath been uſuall to ſing, Epithalamia, or marriage Songs, to congratulate the conjunction of man and Ainſworth.

Calvin. and wife according to Gods holy ordinance, Calvin will have it compiled by ſome man, indued with a propheticall ſpirit in Solomons time, touching the marriage betwixt him and Pharaohs Daughter, confeſſing yet that it belongs cheifly to the marriage betwixt CHRIST and his CHURCH, becauſe betwixt no couple elſe joyned together in Marriage is Love ſo pure, but mixed with ſome inordinate Luſts, and therefore not worthy this high commendation. But that it is made of the marriage of CHRIST and his CHURCH appears, becauſe, Heb. 1. 8. A paſſage of it is thus applyed, Viz. Verſe 6. Thy Throne O God indureth for ever, &c. And Auguſtine, Jerom, Baſil, and all other Ancients, apply it to this myſticall Marriage only. Some paſſages indeed are brought, in which it is alluded to Solomon, for theſe to conclude, that his marriage with Pharaohs Daughter is meant, I take to be without Ground, although there was therein and in other matters of his glory and royalty, ſome figure of CHRIST and his CHURCH; For how can he be called God, whoſe Throne indures for ever, and the Queen be bidden to worſhip him, and this applyed to him, In ſtead of Fathers thou ſhalt have Children, whom thou mayſt make Princes in all Lands, When as he had no more male Children by his many wives that we read of but Rehoboam? It is therefore as Solomons Songs only of Chriſt, to whom alſo a new Song is ſung, Revel. 14. And becauſe no man can be judged more fit then David to compile ſuch a Song, and it comes within the number of his, I think it better to aſcribe it to him for holy Songs, compiling ſo famous, then to any other uncertain Author: For thongh Solomon marryed not Pharoahs Daughter, till after Davids death, for which it may ſeem; that he could not allude to that marriage here, yet forſomuch as he was lead by the ſpirit, to whom even things to come touching men are preſent long before, I ſee no abſurdity in it, to hold that David ſpake in alluding to that marriage before it was, by the Spirit of Propheſie. And if it had been compiled touching Solomon and his wife, certainly it ſhould not have been committed to any to ſing it, the Houſe of God, as it is: One reaſons wel in that this Pſalm was Davids, becauſe Pſalm 2. and Pſalm, 66. which have not his name put to them as this hath not, are yet alledged in N. T. as Davids Pſalmes, Act. 4. 25.

Verſ. 1. My heart is inditing a good matter: Hebr. Boileth a good Matter: This beginning ſheweth ſomething here ſet forth, not belonging to any meer man how excellent ſoever, but unto the King of Kings, Chriſt Jeſus.

Hieron. Jerom. By the good word here ſpoken of (for ſo he renders it, and Hebr it is, שב דבר a good word) underſtands Chriſt, whom God the Father is ſaid, Eructaſſe ex corde ſuo, but this ſeems to be forced, for it is the Saying of the Prophet, ſpeaking here of Chriſt, and of his heart intent to ſet forth his praiſes, who can never be ſufficiently extolled, that all mens hearts may be drawn unto him. And therefore Baſil. Baſil applyeth it to the Prophet, who uſeth the word, Eructavit, and compares his Tongue to the pen of a ready writer, to intimate, that it was not his own, which he now uttereth, but came from the Spirit of God, as a fire in him, making it to break forth, becauſe he would otherwiſe have ſayd, My heart hath ſpoken, having firſt meditated upon it. For that which cometh from man is ſlowly brought forth, as requiring ſtudy, but when he ſpeaks by the Spirit moſt readily, there being nothing to hinder. I paſſe over therefore that of Jerom, touching the pen of a ready writer, applyed to Chriſt alſo, as if he were thereunto compared, as he is at other times to other things, when he is called a Lion, a Door, and Ainſworth. Way. Ainſworth ſayth, that theſe words, My heart hath boiled, are ſpoken in alluding to the meat offering prepared In the frying pan, being boiled in oyl, Levit. 7. 9. For the ſame word is uſed here and there, & in ſaying thus, he meaneth, that the propheſie, which he here ſetteth forth, was as an offering by the Spirit likened to Oyl, and ſo well pleaſing to the Lord: Of this Mincha or offering, read alſo, Pſal. 141. 2.

Thou

Thou art much fairer then the Children of men, Here by beauty the beauty of Wiſedome is meant wherein Chriſt excelled all men, of the beauty of wiſdome, ſee, Ezek. 28. 7. And wiſdome makes the face to ſhine, Prov: The Cald: Thy beauty (O King Chriſt) exceeds the faireneſſe of men, full of grace are thy lips. For this in Chriſt, ſee Cant. 5. 13. Luk 4. 22. and for his beauty, Cant. 5. 10. 16. Therefore God hath bleſſed thee for ever: That is, To the end thou ſhouldſt be thus faire, and excellently ſpoken to make men admire, and to draw them unto thee, thou art bleſſed ſo of God beyond all others: For to to this end he ſaith, Iſa. 61. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anointed me to preach good tidings, &c. Calvin applying it to Solomon noteth, That Kings ſhould learn according to this pattern, to ſpeak wiſely and graciouſly to their people, to draw them to obedience, and not proudly compelling them by tyranny, which is a good applycation of it, being underſtood of Chriſt: Jerom applyeth this to Chriſt in his humane nature, as done, when at his Baptiſme, a voice came from Heaven ſaying, This is my beloved Son, &c. But he is rather bleſſed for ever, in his being taken up into Heaven, after the work of his miniſtry finiſhed, and ſet at the right hand of God, and in his Church, which is his body, increaſing by his divine teaching and imparting of his ſpirit unto her, and eſtabliſhed upon a Rock, againſt all aſſaults of ſpirituall or corporeal enemies. Verſe. 2. Calvin. Note. Hieron.

Gird thy ſword upon thy thigh (O mighty one) There being two things neceſſary in a King, to keep his Kingdome in a good and flouriſhing condition, Armes, and courage to defend it againſt forrain enemies, and meekneſſe and juſtice, putting a Decorum upon the King amongſt his Subjects, and ſo making them for love to his perſon, to live in obedience to him; both theſe are here aſcribed to Chriſt, his Sword is his word, Ephe. 6. 17. And therefore it is ſaid to come out of his mouth, Revel. 1. 16. And the breath of his mouth is ſaid, as a Sword to ſlay the wicked, Iſa. 11. 4. And ſee alſo, Revel. 6. 2. Chapter 19. 11. &c. O thou mighty one. This is one of the Titles of Chriſt, Iſa. 9. 6. Jerom hath it, Gird thy ſword unto thy thigh, moſt Mighty: Not weakly to fight againſt the ſpiritual enemies, but mightily; that is, againſt the Devil: But Hebrew it is, O mighty One: And the ſenſe is the ſame, it is a propheſie of infirnal power, ſubdued by the Goſpel of Chriſt, going out into all Lands, by the fall of idolatry which immediately followed. For his meekneſſe, truth, and righteouſneſſe; upon which he ſaith, Ride and proſper in thy comlineſſe: Riding upon theſe is aſcribed to Chriſt, becauſe hereby he is carried in the adminiſtration of his Kingdome, and not by injuſtice, impatience, and tyranny, after the manner of worldly and wicked Kings: And becauſe herein lyeth the glory and amiable comlineſſe of a King, making his Raign proſperous, and his expeditions againſt his enemies ſucceſſeful, it is ſaid, Proſper in thy comlineſſe, and O thou mighty in thy glory and comlineſſe, Verſe 3. And hereby is ſhewed, that Chriſt ſhould be ſuch, and indeed he was, for he ſaith, Learn of me that I am meek, and I am the way the truth and life. And for righteouſneſſe he ſaith, Which of you can accuſe me of ſin? See alſo Iſa. 11. 1. 2. Calvin applyeth all this to Solomon, who ſaith, By juſtice and judgment, the Throne is eſtabliſhed: Making this the ſenſe of the next words; Thy right hand ſhall teach thee terrible things. Thy valour thus accompanied with juſtice, meekneſſe, and truth, ſhal make thee terrible to thine enemies, who ſhal thus be all ſubdued unto thee, by the power of thy right hand. Apply this to Chriſt and have the true meaning: Vulgar Latine and Sept. Dextera tua deducet te mirabiliter Expounded by Jerom, by thy divine power thou ſhalt be brought to admirable glory in Heaven: But Hebrew it is, as before hath been ſaid, and the ſenſe is, thy power ſhall bring terrible things to paſſe, teaching thee as it were, to do them, by inabling thee, for the expert and valiant Captain, that inableth his Souldiers, by Verſ. 3. Hieron. Verſ: 4: Matth. 21. 5 He rod upon an Aſſe, as a meek and humble King. Calvin. Prov. 20. 28. Hieron:

by teaching and inſtructing them in military affaires, going alſo before them in the fight, to the overthrow of the Enemy, may well be ſayd to teach them to do terrible things, ſo the divine power of Chriſt ſet forth by his Right hand inabling to overcome ſin, Death, and the Devill, is ſayd to teach him to do theſe terrible things: And that this is the meaning, the next words declare, Thy arrowes are ſharp in the heart of the Kings enemies, the people ſhall fall under thee: As when an Arrow peirceth the Heart, a man falleth, ſo that he who ſhot it may take him and uſe him at his pleaſure. For thus even Devills were not only ſubdued by Chriſt, but to the 70. ſent out in his name: And all men that will not be moved by his truth and meekneſſe, but rebel, ſhall feel his arrowes to their deſtruction if they have but rebellious hearts, for which it is ſayd, they are ſharp in their hearts.

Ver. 5.

Ver. 6. Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever: When they that expound this Pſalme of Solomon, come to this Verſe, although they make ſome Application thereof unto him, yet they confeſſe that no meer man is any where called, אלוהים though of more together it be ſayd of the higher powers, Ye are Gods, wherefore here Chriſt is acknowledged by all, but the Jews, that will have it ſpoken of God. But it is manifeſtly, of his Son that was to come in the fleſh. For Solomon, he was neither God, neither did his Throne endure for ever, for it was ſhaken in the very next King after him, and ſhattered, and quite fell in Zedekiah, but in Chriſt, who was of the Linage of David, the Kingdom was again ſet up, not worldly but ſpirituall to indure for ever. The Scepter of thy Kingdome is righteous: As there be two things according to Plato, whereby the Common-Wealth muſt be governed, Reward and puniſhment, ſo Chriſt governs his Kingdom by ſhewing love to the Righteous and hatred to the Wicked impenitent. For it is true, ſaying, It is worſe to live under a Prince under whom we may do any thing, then under whom we may do nothing: That is, One too remiſſe, then one too ſevere. Chriſts Scepter or Government is in Righteouſneſſe, He loveth Righteouſneſs and hates iniquity: Let this be noted by them that think him all Love and mercy, ſo that it ſhall go well withall, for as he hath Love to the penitent here called Righteous, ſo he hath hatred to the Wicked hardned to go on in ſin. Therefore God hath anointed thee with the Oyl of Gladneſs above thy fellowes: By Oyl of Gladneſs he meaneth the Spirit the fruit whereof is joy, herewith was Chriſt anointed, when the Holy Ghoſt in his Baptiſme came viſibly down upon him like a Dove. And he was thus anointed above his fellows by whom the faithfull are meant, becauſe of his fullneſſe we all receive, and that we who beleive are his fellows or freinds appeareth, becauſe he ſayth, I have not called you ſervants but freinds, Jerom by his conſorts underſtands not only beleivers, who have this unction together with Chriſt, but alſo Kings of the Earth, becauſe his anointing is incorruptible, theirs corruptible and ſoon vaniſhing.

Plato. Et pœna et præmio coercetur reſpublica.
Deterius eſt ſub principe vivere ſub quo licet omnia quam ſub principe, ſub quo nihil licet.
Note.
Gal. 5 22
Baſil.
Ioh. 1. 14.
Ioh. 14.
1 Ioh. 2. 20.

Ver. 8. All thy garments ſmell of Myrh, Aloes, and Caſſia, Jerom for Aloes hath Gulta, hereby nuderſtanding a thing good againſt poiſon, by Myrh, that wherewith dead bodies uſe to be imbalmed, by Caſſia a Tree ſo called, giving this for the ſenſe, from thy Garments, that is, Thy humane nature dead and buryed, flowed the ſmell of myrh, the poiſon of the Serpent being ſuppreſſed, he extinguiſhed the Tartarean burnings, and then diſtilled Gulta, and Caſſia, when in the man Jeſus he aſcended up into Heaven, as Caſſia is an erect Tree, and to a tree is man often compared. But Hebr. it is Aloes, and it is not ſayd, thy Garments ſmell of theſe, or from thy Garments theſe, But all thy garments Myrh, Aloes, and Caſſia: That is, Thy hmmane nature covering over thy divine, is as Myrh, &c. That is moſt ſweet, Myrh being a gum of a Tree ſweet in ſmell, but in taſte bitter, and ſo ſweet, that it was uſed in making the ſweet Ointment for the high preiſt and perfuming Spices, Exod. 30. 21. Aloes a ſweet Wood, uſed likewiſe, Numb. 21. 7. Caſſia is no where elſe mentioned in Scripture, but Plin. lib. 12. 20. Sayth it is a ſhrub a ſhrub, the Bark whereof is moſt ſweet; Out of thy Ivory Palaces whereby they make thee glad: Ainſworth, more then they or theirs that delight in thee: That is, more ſweet then their Garments, of whom it was ſayd before, Above thy fellowes: For in the Saints he ſayd is all my delight, Pſalm. 16. 3. Cantic. 7. 6. And the Garments of the Church are alſo compared to ſweet Spices, Cantic. 3. 6. 4. 10. 11: The word rendred, Whereby, Out of which, or more then, is מִן properly ſignifying from me, but becauſe as Calvin ſayth, Thus it would have no tolerable ſence, Expoſitors do much vary about it: For my part I think it may beſt be read thus, as diſtinct from the words before going, From thy Ivory palaces, from me they have made thee glad: That is, the foreſayd ſweet ſpices from thy Temples. The Faithfull, who are to thee as fair Palaces full of ſweet perfumes by the Graces in them, and from me the Writer of this Song, who am one of them, do much delight thee or make thee glad. And ſo the Graces in the faithfull compared before to Spices, and the Lords delight in his Saints may here be well applyed. Ainſworth.

Hieron.

Kings Daughters amongſt thy honorable Women, the Queen ſtands at thy right hand in Gold of Ophir. By Kings Daughters here the Cald. underſtandeth divers countrys converted to the faith, and it is ordinary to ſet forth countryes in the Scripture by the name of Daughters, as the Daughter of Jeruſalem, the Daughter of Tyre, Babilon, &c. Hebr. Amongſt, or in thy preciouſneſſes, ſo ſpoken becauſe the true faithfull are moſt precious before God, all others vile and baſe. For Queen Heb. is thy Wife, that is thy Church, for this ſhall be the place of the flock of ſheepe bidden to enter into the Kingdome of Heaven, Matth. 25. And ſhee is ſayd to ſtand in Gold, becauſe in glory, to ſet forth which this World affords nothing comparable to fine Gold Of Ophir, which was a country in India, having the name from Ophir, the Son of Jektan, Who was the Son of Shem: Gen. 10. 29. Of the pureneſs of the Gold, whereof ſee, 1 King. 9. 28. Ver. 9. Cald. Paraph.

Hear (O Daugther) and conſider: He calls the ſame a Daughter and a Wife, a Daughter becauſe begotten of God by water and the Spirit, a Wife becauſe coupled unto CHRIST, Forget alſo thy Fathers houſe, Here is inſtruction neceſſary for all the Faithfull, that would have the comfort of being wife to CHRIST, they muſt go from the evill manners of their Fathers, who lived in Idolatry and Superſtition, and whoſoever ſhall do ſo is blemiſhed, but then becomes beautifull, when abhorring herefrom he ſerves the true God only In ſpirit and in truth, for ſuch the Father ſeeketh to worſhip him: Wherfore it followeth, V. 11. So ſhall the King have pleaſure in thy beauty, and he is thy Lord and worſhip thou him. Jerom. Forſake thine Idolatries, and the Devill thy Father by turning to Chriſt through faith and Repentance, aud then being Baptiſed, though black before thou ſhalt come up fair, and the King CHRIST ſhall deilght in thy beauty: For he gave himſelf for it, that he might ſanctify and cleanſe it with water by the word: That he might preſent it glorious to himſelf, and without blemiſh. And whereas Hebr. the next words are, He is thy Lord, Jerom hath it for more Expreſſion, He is thy Lord God, Calvin having made ſome Application of it to Pharoahs Daughter, ſayth, when he comes to apply it to CHRISTS CHURCH, that by forſaking her Kindred, &c. Is meant all corrupt and evill manners, which are in the unconverted, which being done, Chriſt delights in her as being now fair and beautifull, otherwiſe foul and blemiſhed, notwithſtanding her outward profeſſion of his faith. And thus it is with every particular Church, and perſon therein, Chriſt delights not in any one, that is black through ſin, ſtill lived in, but hath ſuch in abomination, and the more becauſe being his Spouſe, they are moved with no more Reverence towards him, for the feare of his Diſpleaſure, to forſake ſo curſed a kindred. And therefore it is finally added, He is thy Lord, and worſhip thou him: That is, In thine heart being affected with love & fear towards him to make thee to depart from all iniquity. Something like unto this was ſayd to Abraham, Gen. 12. and by CHRIST, unleſſe a Ver. 10. Cald. paraph. Ioh. 4. 23. Hieron. Epheſ. 5. 26. 27. Calvin. Note.

man forſakes Father and Mother, Brethren and Siſters, he cannot be my Diſciple. But that this is not eaſily done is implyed in the many words uſed, Hearken and conſider, and incline thine Ear: They muſt ſeriouſly think upon that which is here ſpoken, who will be moved to do ſo hard things as are required. But who ſo doth conſider, and ſeriouſly apply his mind unto them, cannot but do ſo; becauſe he to whom he is now coupled, is both an Husband and a Father, yea all in all unto him, ſuperabundantly ſupplying all the comforts of all kinsfolk and Fathers for ever.

Ver. 12. And the Daughter of Tyre ſhall come with a gift: Hebr. מנחה An Offering for thus a meat Offering is called. By the Daughter of Tyre the City is meant, and this City or ſtate was the Richeſt in the world, as we may ſee by the Deſcription thereof, Iſa. 23. 8. Ezek. 27. Zach. 9. 3. And therefore this one is put for all Rich Countrys and Nations, which ſhould come to Chriſt as an offering well pleaſing, as we are bidden to offer our ſelves, Rom. 12. 1. And as Rich Tyre is here ſpoken of, ſo other Nations, Iſa. 49. Chapt. 60. &c. And according to this propheſie, many about Tyrus and Zidon flocked to Chriſt, Mark 3. 8: And by their readineſs, he upbraided the backwarneſs of ſome Cityes of the Jews, Matth: 11: 20: and Act: 21: 1: Mention is made of a zealous Church in Tyrus, and ſhe is again for this ſpoken of, Pſal. 87: 4: It is a propheſie not only of Tyre and other Rich Countrys which ſhould be converted to the faith, one being put for all, but alſo how the Rich in every Country, ſhould with their Wealth, liberally maintain the Miniſters of Chriſt after their Converſion, and even inrich them with their bountifull Donations. And it was notably fulfilled when Conſtantine firſt indued the Church with ample Revenues, and other Princes and great men after his Example, did the like to the inabling of Church-men to keep hoſpitality, as they are required to do, 1 Tim. 3. For then the Rich Tyrians with their offerings made ſupplication, as is here ſayd; But as man through his corruption, is ready to abuſe abundance by turning it into an occaſion of Pride and Ambition, whereof great trouble enſueth amongſt the People of God, ſo did Church-men turn this Rich Liberality, for which they are now in England deprived of it again; but God forbid, that theſe Lands and houſes dedicated in ſo great devotion at the firſt to the honour of Chriſt, and the maintenance of his true Religion, ſhould by his Servants be alienated for ever from ſuch an uſe; but only the abuſe taken away, turned to the holy uſes, for which they were intended by the Donatiſts, Viz. The more liberal maintaining of his learned & godly miniſters that they may have the more incouragement in their Studies, and be the better inabled to the hoſpitality requried at their hands.

Verſ. 13. The Kings Daughter is all glorious within: Becauſe he had ſayd, that his Wife ſhould ſtand at his Right hand in Gold moſt glorious and glittering, being moſt highly honouerd by him, now leaſt this ſhould be underſtood of outward and worldly Glory, it is added for Explication, Shee is all glorious within: The beauty and glory of CHRISTS CHURCH ſtands not in worldly Riches and outward Pompe, after the manner of Queens upon Eatrh: For ſo ſome ſtates being very rich, and full of Gold and Silver are ſet forh as glorious Queens, as Tyre and Zidon, of whom before; But the glory of the Church is inward, ſhe is glorious by Faith, more precious then fine Gold, 1 Pet: 1. 7: And adorned with Graces more excellent through the Splendour and variety of them, then moſt curious Garments wrought with the needle in divers colours, and ſet with moſt precious ſtones: She is not then an Hypocrite fair without like a whited Sepulcher, and within full of Rottenneſſe, but not affecting to be ſeen of men in her Practice of Piety to have praiſe of them, ſhee is hereby glorious in ſecret, within as it were in the Kings Chamber, who ſeeth and is affected with this her

Verſ. 14. Glory: And therefore it followeth, Shee ſhall be brought in to the King: Wherein it is alluded to the manner of ſome Queens, who come not to the King

King, but when they are called for, as the Wife of King Ahaſhuerus, and then they came with a train of Virgins following, ſo here, The Virgins her companions that follow her, ſhall be brought in unto thee. Where by Virgins following her, underſtand other Churches, planted after the Church in Judea, by the Apoſtles going out into all Nations, preaching and baptizing, as the Church of Antioch, of Rome, Corinth, &c.

The conceit of Baſil here, that thoſe who lead a ſingle life for pieties ſake, are meant by theſe Virgins, being ſaid therefore to follow her, becauſe the Church at the firſt had no ſuch, as profeſſed to live in perpetuall Virginity; is forced and agreeth not, becauſe if ſo, and the profeſſion of ſuch a life adds a greater luſtre to Chriſtians, as they hold it doth, the Primitive Church muſt needs be yeilded not to be ſo glorious in the daies of the Apoſtles, as afterwards, and marriage which is pronounced honourable amongſt all men, to detract ſomewhat from the glory of a Chriſtian, which is to lay a foundation of the doctrine of Devils, and prefer times, when ſome corruption began to enter into the Church, before the pureſt, guided by men infallibly teaching by the ſpirit. And laſtly it agreeth not with the Text, which ſaith, the Virgins, her companions that follow her; becauſe they that follow and accompany a Queene, that her going to the King may be in greater ſtate, are not more excellent, but rather ſomewhat inferiour to her: By theſe Virgins then underſtand, as was ſaid before, Countries and Nations converted to the faith, after the Church of Judea; for of ſuch the Apoſtle ſaith, I have eſpouſed you unto one Husband, that I might preſent you as a chaſt Virgin to Chriſt.

Baſil. Heb. 13. 4. 1 Tim. 4. 2 Cor. 1 12.

With gladneſs and rejoycing they ſhall be brought. The Nations ſhall not only be preſented as pure Virgins to the King Chriſt, but they ſhall have great joy of their converſion, through the holy Ghoſt ſhed abroad in their hearts, they ſhall come into his Church, as a ſtately Palace, being taken with the glory thereof and rejoycing in it, as herein counting themſelves moſt bleſſed and happy. Verſ. 15.

In ſtead of Fathers thou ſhalt have Children. He had ſpoken before of forgetting her Fathers houſe and kindred; now to ſtir up hereunto, he propheſieth of a numerous increaſe of Children in all Lands, which is a thing, that a woman barren before moſt delights in: And her Children, he ſaith, Should be Princes all over the Earth; which, without explication, ſaith Baſil, is manifeſtly ſpoken of the Apoſtles, who being dead, have dominion in the hearts and mindes of men, all over the Chriſtian World: Jerom and Auguſtine by Fathers, underſtand the Apoſtles, who begate the Church, but could not alwaies continue here to govern her: But againſt the griefe conceived, at thinking upon the loſſe of them, ſhe is comforted by this, that in their ſtead ſhe ſhal have Children, to govern all over the Earth, Viz. Biſhops, whom ſhe ſetteth up every where. Verſ. 16. Hieron. Auguſt.

Ainſworth by Children underſtands, either the Apoſtles or all Chriſtians, who are intituled Kings, Revel. 1. 6. And by Fathers, the Patriarks, but if ſo, whom ſhal they rule over? Therefore they muſt be ſome men moſt eminent in the Church, to whom the government thereof is committed, one ruling in one particular Church, and another in another; yet not in each Congregation, which we call a Pariſh, but in a Dioceſſe, being yet in their Port and outward Pomp, not as Princes, but Servants, as Chriſt hath commanded: I ſubſcribe therefore herein to Auguſtine: Some of the Children of the Church, moſt eminent for Learning, Wiſdome, Piety, and Gravity; ſhal be by her ſet up, to govern in all parts, although Children of the Church, being herein now to others as Fathers, for their Fatherly care of the good of them all: Yet here is no ground for Arch-Biſhops, or proud Lord-Biſhops, bearing themſelves like ſecular Princes, having their Chancellours, Deans, and Arch-Deacons under them, to domineer Ainſworth.

over, and oppreſſe Gods Flock by many exactions, they in the mean ſeaſon giving themſelves to live in idleneſſe and pleaſure, or to covetous raking together, of worldly goods, for the inriching of their Children after them.

If ſuch Fathers, as are before ſpoken of, had been in all Dioceſes of this Kingdome, as they might have been, if they had come in by a free election as they ſhould, and did moſt anciently; I doubt not, but they had continued to this day undeſturbed, and all the controverſie that now is, about Church government, had been avoided; but without looking back again to ſuch a Government, likely to continue without end, to the keeping of all in confuſion, to the high diſhonour of almighty GOD, and the provoking of him to wrath and diſpleaſure againſt us.

And from this of Auguſtine, and Jerom, Baſil differs little: For he wil have the Apoſtles the Princes here meant, ruling even after their death, which muſt be by a ſucceſſion of men choſen, as hath been ſaid, and going on in governing, according to their example and directions in all things, and not otherwiſe, for ſo they ſhould in ſtead of Apoſtles, be found lyars, Revel. 2. 2. And his expounding this, as anſwering to Verſe 10. Forget alſo thy kindred and Fathers houſe. Agreeth excellently, as if he had ſaid, Let this be no hinderance to thee of coming to the King, by turning Chriſtian, for if by ſo doing, thou goeſt from thy fore-Fathers, thou ſhalt not looſe, but be a great gainer by it; for in ſtead of Fathers that were of mean condition, thou ſhalt have many Children, ruling as Princes all over the Earth, for ſuch are they that preach the Goſpel, Heb. 13. 7. That is, Either ſome of them, thought by the Church moſt fit for government, and therefore ſingularly made ἐπίσκοποι, the Biſhops, or all in their ſeveral places, becauſe there is no lawful Preacher, but he is alſo ἐπίσκοπος, a Biſhopp, to overſee and rule the Flock committed to him: But indeed there ſhould allwayes bee both ſorts in the Church, the one to teach and rule in his Congregation in ſpiritual things, and the other having more authority beſides teachiug, to ordain Presbyters, to order things in the Church, that there may be no diſcrepancy, but uniformity in particular Congregations in Gods publike worſhip, and to heare accuſations againſt Presbyters, and to proceed accordingly, Titus 1. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 3. Chapter 5. 19.

Verſ. 17. I will remember thy name from Generation to Generation. This and that, Verſe 16. Calvin acknowledgeth to agree only to Chriſt, and not at all to Solomon, and his Son Rehoboam; for Solomon although he had exceeding many Wives and Concubines, yet he had but one Son that we read of, and he was proud and fooliſh, and in ſtead of raigning over all the Land, and leaving this dignity to his poſterity, he loſt the far greater part to him and to them: And Solomons name in ſtead of being made memorable to all Generations, was made by his foule falling to Idolatry abominable; ſo that it is therefore worthy to be buried in perpetual forgetfulneſſe: But the name of Chriſt and his Church, is memorable and honourable indeed, and ſhall be ſo, notwithſtanding the Jews or other malicious Perſecutors attempts to the contrary, to the Worlds end: For he hath a name above all names, at which every knee ſhall bow, of things in Heaven, in Earth, and under the earth.

Phil. 2. 6.

PSAL. XLVI.

TO the cheife Muſician for the Sons of Corah, upon Alamoth a Song. Of the Sons of Corah enough hath been ſaid before, Pſal. 42. But what is meant by Alamoth, the Sept. and Vulgar Latine, render it De arcanis, arcanis, of ſecrets, which Jerom expoundeth of the rejection of the Iews and the vocation of the Gentiles, when they ſhould moſt tumultuate and rage againſt Chriſt, teaching them to put their truſt in God, and not to feare them, or any other enemies: The Cald. following the ſame reading, applyeth to the Sons of Corah, when their Father was ſwallowed up of the earth, and ſo hidden from them for his ſinne, but they were delivered, taking it to have been compiled by them: Some take Alamoth for the Virginals, becauſe Alam ſignifieth a Virgin, and for this maketh, 1 Chron. 15. 20 Where praſing of God with Pſalteries on Alamoth is ſpoken of: And therefore I prefer this, and the rather, becauſe other Pſalmes before-going, were alſo commended to be ſung upon particular Inſtruments of muſick, as Pſal. 4. and 5. &c. For the occaſion, Calvin thinks it to have been the deliverance of Hezekiah and Ieruſalem, from the Aſſyrians, when the Angel of God went out and ſlew in one night 185000 of Sanecheribs Hoaſt, and the matter of it doth not diſagree; only becauſe this comes within the Pſalmes of David, and that was long after, and therefore if it be applyed to that time, muſt be yeilded to have been compiled by ſome other man, it ſeemeth rather to have been made at ſome time, when David and his People had ſome great deliverance, as when the Philiſtims came againſt him, but were confounded; yet it is not to be thought, but herein is a further reach, even to the times of the Goſpel, according to the interpretation of Jerom upon Alamoth, ſecrets: Becauſe he ſpeaks of peace, and being known amongſt the Nations, Verſe 9, 10. Like to that, Iſa. 2. 4. I reſolve therefore, that it is a propheſie of hidden or myſticall things under the Goſpel, kept ſecret in former times, but now revealed and made manifeſt, becauſe the light is come to the Nations, that were before in darkneſſe, and after much trouble in the Primitive times by perſecution, peace followed in Conſtantines daies; and we hope, the Turk and Pope being overthrown, a long laſting peace in all Nations, which cannot, til then be quiet again. Hieron. Calvin.

God is my refuge and ſtrength, a preſent help in trouble. Hebrew, God is verily found a protection and ſtrength to us, an help in ſtreights or adverſities: Thus alſo Calvin, the Vulgar, God is our refuge and virtue, an helper in tribulations, which have very much found us. The ſenſe being almoſt in all the ſame, but let us hold to the Original: And the ſcope of the Pſalme being already ſhewed, the ſenſe hereof is eaſie, he ſpeaks of God come in the fleſh to ſave us, as if he had then been come, becauſe ſeen by the eye of faith, as Abraham is ſaid by Chriſt, to have ſeen his day and rejoyced: For we being in great ſtreights by reaſon of our ſinnes, he is found borne in Bethlehem, and by the Angels declared to be our Saviour, and this to be tydings of great joy to all people: For which it is not here ſaid, God is my, but our protection and ſtrength, As ſpoken not of one, but of all Nations in the World. Verſ. 1. Joh. 8.

Therefore we will not feare at the moving of the earth, at the caſting down of the Mountaines into the midſt of the Sea. What ſtirs and troubles ſoever be in the World, if there ſhould be commotions amongſt the enemies of the Goſpel, like to an Earth-quake, the moſt terrible that ever came, to the caſting down of very Mountaines, as indeed there were, when it was heard that Chriſt was born, Herod as an high and great Mountain, was troubled and all Ieruſalem with him, and ſo were Devils, that were in the eſteem of the Heathen, high as Gods, for then their Oracles ceaſed, and they durſt not give anſwers any more, and I ſaw, ſaith Chriſt, Satan falling from Heaven like lightning: Yet the Faithful feare not, when being moved with indignation, hot perſecutions are ſtirred up againſt them, as we may ſee in the Apoſtles, Act. 4. Verſ. 2.

The waters thereof ſhall roare and be troubled. He proceedeth in the Allegory begun, ſetting forth the rage of the wicked enemies of the Goſpel, under Verſ. 3.

under the name of the waters of the Sea, and theſe waters ſwelling up on high, ſo that they daſh againſt the Mountains, and therefore were able to make carnall men, of what worldly might ſo ever, to ſhake; yet they cannot move the people of GOD, but they go on courageouſly in propagating and cleaving to the Goſpel.

Verſ: 4: Hieron. Baſil. M. The River of his ſtouds rejoyce the City of God: Hereby, ſayth Jerom, is underſtood the Water of Baptiſme, Baſil, the manifold goodneſs of GOD abounding towards his people, not only in the Bleſſings of this life, but cheifly in thoſe that be ſpirituall, for which the Faithfull do moſt rejoyce through joy of the Holy Ghoſt, But forſomuch as we read of Rivers of water flowing out of his Belly to Eternall life, that drinks of the Water, Ioh. 4. 6. that Chriſt ſhall give him, that is, himſelf, the Fountain of living Water and his Spirit, we need not look any further for the meaning, but underſtand it of the Spirit of Chriſt the Comforter, whom he promiſed to ſend, and then although the City of his people ſhould be heavy for a time at his Death, they ſhould again have exceeding great joy. In comparing them to a City and Sanctuary, he hath reference to Zion, where the ARK was a figure of the Church of CHRIST, and therefore oft ſet forth by that name.

Ver. 5. God is in the midſt of her, ſhee ſhall not be moved: He had before ſayd, that the Earth ſhould be moved, but now he ſayth the Church ſhall not, Matth. 16. ſhe is as a City built upon a Rock, againſt which the Gates of Hell prevail not. And thus firmly built is every good Hearer of the word of God that doth it, Matth. 7.

Verſ. 6. The Gentiles made a noiſe, the Kingdoms moved: Having ſpoken of the ſtability of the Church through God in the midſt of it, Verſe 5. Now he furthier illuſtrats the ſame by bringing in the Enemys thereof tumultuating and raging againſt her in every place, but the Lord uttering his voice in way of Rebuke, they preſently diſſolve and have no ſtrength left them againſt her, that when the Faithfull under the Goſpel ſhould ſee themſelves through perſcution ſtirred up in all places in an Evill caſe, they might herein be comforted: Whereas Jerom hath it, They gave their voice: Expounding it as ſpoken of the Gentiles, he goeth plainly from the word, which is נתן a ſingular, ſpoken therefore of one, that is, God ſayd, V. 5. to be in the midſt of his Church. And it is, He gave with his voice, That is, Such a Rebuke, that all their ſtrength was broken, and ſo it was when Conſtantine turning Chriſtian, overcame his Competitour, Licinus, an Heathen, and gave peace to the CHURCH every where. See the like before, Pſalme 2.

Verſe. 7. The Lord of hoaſts is with us: Here Jerom rightly, this is a Propheſy of Chriſt, who is Emanuel, God with us, Iſa. 7. 14. And hereby it appeares, that was very God, to whom the Title of the Lord of Hoſts is given, not agreeing to any meer man, although the moſt mighty amongſt thoſe that are the Sons of God by adoption, or any outward dignity above other men put upon them.

Ver. 8. Come and conſider the works of the Lord, what deſolations he hath made: Jerom, What prodigies or wonders he hath wrought: And the word שמם ſignifieth either deſolations, or ſtupendious admirable things, but becauſe he coming, Verſ. 9. Verſe 9. To explain what he meaneth hereby, He maketh wars to ceaſe to the uttermoſt ends of the Earth, and the ceſſation of War rather Replemiſheth the Earth, then makes it deſolate, it muſt needs be rather underſtood of Prodigies, for what more admirable then upon Earth every where imbrued with bloud, and reſounding with Ecchoes of Alarums to war, to cauſe all war to ceaſe, and Armes every where to be huſht and ſtill. For thus it is in hiſtory obſerved to have been in the Dayes of Auguſtus Ceſar, when CHRIST was born, Peace was all over the Earth: For Pompey and Anthony Competitours of the Romane Empire, were deſtroyed ſtroyed, and ſo there were none left to diſturb it: Then he injoying all Kingdomes in quiet, ſent out a decree, that all the World ſhould be taxed, Luk. 2. And then the Temple of Janus for a ſign of univerſal peace, was ſhut up, as it had not been above once or twice before, in ſeven hundred years, ſince Rome was built: For who ſo ſhall read the ſtory of the Romans, ſhall finde, that they were never without wars, but as hath been ſaid, but as ſoon as one was ended, another burſt out, and therefore ſuch a ceſſation of war, as is here ſpoken of, was a wonder of wonders.

He breakes the bow, &c. Here he ſpeaks of Chriſt, as a Conquerour, like Joſhuah, who in times paſt haughed the enemies horſes when he had ſubdued them, and burnt their Charriots with fire, for he was a figure of Chriſt Jeſus; and hereby it is meant, as Iſaiah ſaith, that they ſhould no where have Armes, to make war any more, and therefore not learn it: But the time of this bleſſed peace is yet to come, as I have ſometime ſaid before. Verſ. 10.

PSAL. XLVII.

FOR the Title, ſee, Pſal. 42. The Pſalme is an exhortation to praile GOD for the propagating of the Goſpel, into all Countries and Nations, whereby they were ſubdued to Chriſts Kingdome, whereunto to be ſubdued, is from bondage to ſin and Satan, wherein they were before, to be made free, to the rejoycing of their Soules; for which they are exhorted, to praiſe and extol the infinite mercy of God towards them, and therefore the Pſalme is prophetical: Some think it to have been compiled, when the Ark be was brought up to Zion, to be placed in the Tabernacle, by David ſet up there, and it is not improbable, becauſe then there was ſinging and dancing for joy, yea, David himſelf danced before the Ark, but God had further inlightned him to ſee him that was to come, even Chriſt Jeſus, who was prefigured by the Ark, whoſe coming ſhould make all Nations to rejoice, as then the coming of the Ark to Zion, made the Jews to ſhout for joy: For that it was not compiled meerly for that appeareth, becauſe the ſubjection of the Nations is ſpoken of, and of all the Earth, Verſe 7. And their rejoycing therefore, whereas David ſubdued the Nations about, it could not be meant of that, becauſe they were but ſome few, and they had no joy, but ſorrow of their ſubduing, they being by this meanes of free, made tributary.

He ſhall ſubdue the people under us, and the Nations under our feet. Having exhorted all people, or as Jerom hath it, all Nations to expreſſe their joy for Chriſt, Verſe 1. He ſets him forth as terrible, and the great King of all the Earth, according to Pſal. 2. Where it is ſaid, I have given thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance. And then addeth, Thou ſhalt rule them with a rod of Iron, &c. That is, By being terrible, in deſtroying his enemies, as he did the Jews by the Romans, Verſe 2. And now he ſheweth to the greater joy of ſuch Jews, as were the happy inſtruments of carrying the name of Chriſt amongſt the Gentiles, that they ſhould by their teaching be ſubdued unto Chriſt, whereby contrary to the manner of others, ſubdued by earthly Kings, they ſhould alſo be filled with the like joy, becauſe the beleiving Gentiles ſhould by this meanes, be one with them in Chriſt, in whom, There is neither Jew nor Gentile, but all are one. Whereas therefore he ſaith, That they are ſubdued to them, and under their feet, he meaneth, Not that the beleiving Gentiles generally ſhould be of leſſe dignity before God, then beleiving Jews; but that the Jews ſhould be the converters of the World, that is, The holy Apoſtles, ſent out for this end into all Nations, for which cauſe they ſhould all moſt willingly ſubmit Verſ. 3. Hieron. Gal. 3. 28.

mit unto their Government: but after them each Congregation to their own Paſtors and Teachers, Heb. 13. 17.

Ver. 4. He hath choſen our inheritance for us, the Excellency of Jacob: By inheritance meaning firſt and cheifly CHRIST and his Grace, and Heavenly Kingdom, and ſecondly all Kiugdoms and Nations, which are the inheritance of the faithfull, becauſe they are, and ſhall be poſſeſſed by them under their head CHRIST JESUS, to whom this was before promiſed, Pſalm 2. Pſal. 16. 4. For touching Chriſt, it is ſayd, The Lord is the portion of mine Inheritance: And touching the Kingdom of Heaven, Matth. 25. 34. Gal. 4. And for inheriting the Earth alſo, Matth. 5. 5. And he ſayth, He hath choſen, to intimate, that all Good floweth from the Grace of Election, and not from any merit of man, and he addeth, The Excellency of Jacob, to intimate, that not all that come of Jacob are choſen to this Inheritance, but the Excellent for Grace and Virtue, whom God peculiarly loveth, as ſuch be ſtiled, Pſalm 16. And appeareth, further Rom. 9. 6. 11. 5. 7. For his loving Jacob, and hating Eſau, Mal. 1. Rom. 9. And that theſe choſen ones are not only of Iſrael, according to the fleſh; but of all true Beleivers of the Gentiles, Rom. 11. The inheritance therefore here ſpoken, is called ours, not for any Right that we have unto it of our ſelves, but only by the Grace of Election, through Chriſt Jeſus.

Ver. 5. God is gone up with a ſhout, the Lord with the ſound of the Trumpet: This is ſpoken of Chriſts Aſcenſion into Heaven, 40. days after his Reſurrection, which was not without great Rejoycing, a ſign whereof is ſounding with Trumpets and ſhouting; the Angells that ſang at his Birth, now ſounding with a Trumpet, as we may gather from that which is ſayd, He ſhall ſo come again, as yee have ſeen him go up into Heaven: Compared with this, He ſhall come with a ſound, with the ſound of a Trumpet, and the voice of an Arch-Angell, and the dead ſhall riſe: See alſo, Pſalm. 68. is, He hath aſcended up on high, &c. And there was ſomething done in a figure of this, in the carrying up of the Ark from Kireathjearim, 1 Sam. 6. to Zion. Act. 1. 11. 1 Theſ. 4. 16.

Ver. 9. The Princes of the People are gathered together: Not only the common ſort come together to ſerve the Lord, having his Ordinances in high Eſteem, but even Princes and Nobles, in whom the ſupream power upon Earth is, to whom therefore Sheilds are aſcribed in the next words, and ſayd to be the Lords, Princes by a metaphor, being ſo called; becauſe they ſhelter their people from violence and wrong as a ſheild. Calvin hath this alſo, but ſeemeth rather to prefer another Expoſition by ſheilds, being the Lords, underſtanding that his favour is over them all, that gather to him, as a ſheild, continually to protect them, and becauſe they are many, and in many places, and their dangers many, he ſets it forth in the plurall Number, not as a ſheild, but ſheilds. This I grant ſutes well with, Pſalm. 5. 12. But becauſe he calleth them, The ſheilds of the Earth, that belong to GOD, and before ſpake of Princes gathering to him, and concludeth, that he is greatly exalted hereby: I rather hold, as is moſt commonly, that the Princes here ſpoken of, and Sheilds are the ſame, by whoſe acceſſion to the Church of God he is highly exalted amongſt men on Earth, as he is debaſed, when ſuch ſtand aloof, and refuſe to come in with others by obedience to his heavenly will, yea contrariwiſe perſecute and deſtroy and deſpiſe his Church and People. But the greateſt that do ſo, ſhall be debaſed; as he is true that hath ſayd, Such as honour me, I will honour, but thoſe that deſpiſe me, ſhall be deſpiſed. Moreover, note here, the humility of the greateſt, that belong to God, they diſdain not now to gather together to the Lord, to the dutys of his Service with the meaneſt, as knowing that in Chriſt, the free and the bond are all one, but in times of freedom, they that imbrace the Faith, gather not together in corners, but in places of publck meeting about the worſhip of God.

Calvin.

Note.

1 Sam. 2. 30.

Note.

PSAL.

PSAL. XLVIII.

Calvin. Ainsworth. T. W.

CAlvin and Ainsworth, and some other of our new Writers, conceive, that this Psalm was not penned by David, because the coming of Kings against Jerusalem, and their defeat are here spoken of, but no Kings came against it, till long after Davids time, in the days of Ahaz, and Hezekiah, and Jehoshaphat. But Junius better, that it was compiled by David, when the Kings or Lords of the Philistims, coming against him in Zion, after the taking of that Fort, were again chased away by him to their great dismaying. 2 Sam. 5. 7. 9. 17. Augustine and Jerom, interpret all of Christ, and of the Kings gathering to him, being taken with his Fear, as Psalm. 47: But the Words, Verse 5. 6. 7. They were carryed headlong in pain as a woman in travel, thou shalt break as with an East winde the ships of the Sea; evince, that the coming of Kings against Zion, and the terrible judgments, that befell them when they did so, are set forth, and not their coming together as one to the Church of Christ, being moved by a salutiferous fear to conversion so to do.

Junius.

August. Hieron.

The Title is, A Song, a Psalme, to the Sons, Or for the Sons of Chorah: The Vulgar Latine addeth, Secum da Sabbati, That is, sayth August. the next day after the Sabboth, which is the Lords day, Jerom expounds it by the Light and the firmament made the two first days of the Creation: But both are speculations without Ground, sith that Hebrew there be no more words in the title then those before going. And it is called, a Song, a Psalme, to intimate, that it was to be sung by voice, as well as played upon an Instrument of Musick.

Vers. 2.

The joy of the whole Earth, beautifull in scituation is mount Zion on the sides of the North: For scituation, Heb. is, יְרֵכְתֵי Noph, signifying Elevation or Region, the meaning is, That mount Zion was a fair hill for the great height thereof, although seated North from Jerusalem, as also it is sayd to be, Isa. 14. 14. And this is sayd to be the Joy of the whole Earth, because chosen by God for the building of his House there, although not yet done, but foreseen by the spirit, where all their Festivalls were kept, with exceeding great joy by the Israelites coming from all parts of the Land, or of others from other parts of the World in after times, especially by Zion the Church being understood, as Isa. 2. The Mountain of the Lord shall be exalted above all Mountains: And this is called a City set upon an Hill, as here, The City of the great King.

Matth. 5.

Ver. 3.

God is known in her Palaces for a refuge, for loe, the Kings, &c. This is spoken, because there were in Zion, many strong and fair buildings, which might be thought as Bulwarks against the Enemy: But the strength of Zion lay not in this, but in God, who is a Refuge to his Church in all times of danger, that we trust not to such things, but put all our confidence in God alone, fleeing to him, by fervent and humble prayer: For the coming of the Kings and passing by it, hath been spoken in the Contents, beforegoing, the Kings or Lords of the Philistims came to Zion, to seek David, when he had won it from the Jebusites, but they only came and saw to their cost, that God was a Refuge, and so passed away with fear and losse, as is shewed in the next words.

Psal. 46. 5

Note:

Vers. 4.

They saw it and marvelled, they were troubled, and hasted away: Ainsworth, They were frighted away, Calvin; They mere carryed headlong away Hebr. נֶחְפְּזוּ they fled with an hasty or headlong flight, for so the History intimateth, for they hastned so away, when David came against them to Rephaim, that they left their Idols behinde them. And this shamefull fleeing, to which they were inforced, was a great corrasive to them, and therefore in

2 Sam. 15. 18. 19.

Vers. 5.

mit unto their Government: but after them each Congregation to their own Paſtors and Teachers, Heb. 13. 17.

Ver. 4. He hath choſen our inheritance for us, the Excellency of Jacob: By inheritance meaning firſt and cheifly CHRIST and his Grace, and Heavenly Kingdom, and ſecondly all Kiugdoms and Nations, which are the inheritance of the faithfull, becauſe they are, and ſhall be poſſeſſed by them under their head CHRIST JESUS, to whom this was before promiſed, Pſalm 2.

Pſal. 16. 4. For touching Chriſt, it is ſayd, The Lord is the portion of mine Inheritance: And touching the Kingdom of Heaven, Matth. 25. 34. Gal. 4. And for inheriting the Earth alſo, Matth. 5. 5. And he ſayth, He hath choſen, to intimate, that all Good floweth from the Grace of Election, and not from any merit of man, and he addeth, The Excellency of Jacob, to intimate, that not all that come of Jacob are choſen to this Inheritance, but the Excellent for Grace and Virtue, whom God peculiarly loveth, as ſuch be ſtiled, Pſalm 16. And appeareth, further Rom. 9. 6. 11. 5. 7. For his loving Jacob, and hating Eſau, Mal. 1. Rom. 9. And that theſe choſen ones are not only of Iſrael, according to the fleſh; but of all true Beleivers of the Gentiles, Rom. 11. The inheritance therefore here ſpoken, is called ours, not for any Right, that we have unto it of our ſelves, but only by the Grace of Election, through Chriſt Jeſus.

Ver. 5. God is gone up with a ſhout, the Lord with the ſound of the Trumpet: This is ſpoken of Chriſts Aſcenſion into Heaven, 40. days after his Reſurrection, which was not without great Rejoycing, a ſign whereof is ſounding with Trumpets and ſhouting; the Angells that ſang at his Birth, now ſounding with a Trumpet, as we may gather from that which is ſayd, He ſhall ſo come again, as yee have ſeen him go up into Heaven: Compared with this, He ſhall come with a ſound, with the ſound of a Trumpet, and the voice of an Arch-Angell, and the dead ſhall riſe. See alſo, Pſalm. 68. is, He hath aſcended up on high, &c. And there was ſomething done in a figure of this, in the carrying up of the Ark from Kireathjearim, 1 Sam. 6. to Zion.

Act. 1. 11. 1 Theſ. 4. 16.

Ver. 9. The Princes of the People are gathered together: Not only the common ſort come together to ſerve the Lord, having his Ordinances in high Eſteem, but even Princes and Nobles, in whom the ſupream power upon Earth is, to whom therefore Sheilds are aſcribed in the next words, and ſayd to be the Lords, Princes by a metaphor, being ſo called; becauſe they ſhelter their people from violence and wrong as a ſheild. Calvin hath this alſo, but ſeemeth rather to prefer another Expoſition by ſheilds, being the Lords, underſtanding that his favour is over them all, that gather to him, as a ſheild, continually to protect them, and becauſe they are many, and in many places, and their dangers many, he ſets it forth in the plurall Number, not as a ſheild, but ſheilds. This I grant ſutes well with, Pſalm. 5. 12. But becauſe he calleth them, The ſheilds of the Earth, that belong to GOD, and before ſpake of Princes gathering to him, and concludeth, that he is greatly exalted hereby: I rather hold, as is moſt commonly, that the Princes here ſpoken of, and Sheilds are the ſame, by whoſe acceſſion to the Church of God he is highly exalted amongſt men on Earth, as he is debaſed, when ſuch ſtand aloof, and refuſe to come in with others by obedience to his heavenly will, yea contrariwiſe perſecute and deſtroy and deſpiſe his Church and People. But the greateſt that do ſo, ſhall be debaſed; as he is true that hath ſayd, Such as honour me, I wilt honour, but thoſe that deſpiſe me, ſhall be deſpiſed. Moreover, note here, the humility of the greateſt, that belong to God, they diſdain not now to gather together to the Lord, to the dutys of his Service with the meaneſt, as knowing that in Chriſt, the free and the bond are all one, but in times of freedom, they that imbrace the Faith, gather not together in corners, but in places of publck meeting about the worſhip of God.

Calvin.

Note.

1 Sam. 2. 30. Note.

PSAL.

PSAL. XLVIII.

Calvin. Ainſworth. T. W.

CAlvin and Ainſworth, and ſome other of our new Writers, conceive, that this Pſalm was not penned by David, becauſe the coming of Kings againſt Jeruſalem, and their defeat are here ſpoken of, but no Kings came againſt it, till long after Davids time, in the days of Ahaz, and Hezekiah, and Jehoſaphat. But Junius better, that it was compiled by David, when the Kings or Lords of the Philiſtims, coming againſt him in Zion, after the taking of that Fort, were again chaſed away by him to their great diſmaying. 2 Sam. 5. 7. 9. 17. Auguſtine and Jerom, interpret all of Chriſt, and of the Kings gathering to him, being taken with his Fear, as Pſalm. 47: But the Words, Verſe 5. 6. 7. They were carryed headlong in pain as a woman in travel, thou ſhalt break as with an Eaſt winde the ſhips of the Sea; evince, that the coming of Kings againſt Zion, and the terrible judgments, that befell them when they did ſo, are ſet forth, and not their coming together as one to the Church of Chriſt, being moved by a ſalutiferous fear to converſion ſo to do.

Junius. Auguſt. Hieron.

The Title is, A Song, a Pſalme, to the Sons, Or for the Sons of Chorah: The Vulgar Latine addeth, Secunda Sabbati, That is, ſayth Auguſt. the next day after the Sabboth, which is the Lords day, Jerom expounds it by the Light and the firmament made the two firſt days of the Creation: But both are ſpeculations without Ground, ſith that Hebrew there be no more words in the title then thoſe before going. And it is called, a Song, a Pſalme, to intimate, that it was to be ſung by voice, as well as played upon an Inſtrument of Muſick.

Verſ. 2.

The joy of the whole Earth, beautifull in ſcituation is mount Zion on the ſides of the North: For ſcituation, Heb. is, יְרֵכְתֵי Noph, ſignifying Elevation or Region, the meaning is, That mount Zion was a fair hill for the great height thereof, although ſeated North from Jeruſalem, as alſo it is ſayd to be, Iſa. 14. 14. And this is ſayd to be the Joy of the whole Earth, becauſe choſen by God for the building of his Houſe there, although not yet done, but foreſeen by the ſpirit, where all their Feſtivalls were kept, with exceeding great joy by the Iſraelites coming from all parts of the Land, or of others from other parts of the World in after times, eſpecially by Zion the Church being underſtood, as Iſa. 2. The Mountain of the Lord ſhall be exalted above all Mountains: And this is called a City ſet upon an Hill, as here, The City of the great King.

Matth. 5.

Ver. 3.

God is known in her Palaces for a refuge, for loe, the Kings, &c. This is ſpoken, becauſe there were in Zion, many ſtrong and fair buildings, which might be thought as Bulwarks againſt the Enemy: But the ſtrength of Zion lay not in this, but in God, who is a Refuge to his Church in all times of danger, that we truſt not to ſuch things, but put all our confidence in God alone, fleeing to him, by fervent and humble prayer: For the coming of the Kings and paſſing by it, hath been ſpoken in the Contents, beforegoing, the Kings or Lords of the Philiſtims came to Zion, to ſeek David, when he had won it from the Jebuſites, but they only came and ſaw to their coſt, that God was a Refuge, and ſo paſſed away with fear and loſſe, as is ſhewed in the next words.

Pſal. 46. 5

Note:

Verſ. 4.

They ſaw it and marvelled, they were troubled, and haſted away: Ainſworth, They were frighted away, Calvin; They were carryed headlong away Hebr. נֶחְפָּזוּ they fled with an haſty or headlong flight, for ſo the Hiſtory intimateth, for they haſtned ſo away, when David came againſt them to Rephaim, that they left their Idols behinde them. And this ſhamefull fleeing, to which they were inforced, was a great corraſive to them, and therefore in the next words, their Pangs are likned to the pangs of a Woman in Travell.

2 Sam. 15. 18. 19.

Verſ. 5.

Ver. 6. Thou ſhalt break with the eaſt winde the Ships of Tarſhiſh: Here by a ſimilitude, he further ſetteth forth the Enemys Deſtruction, by Gods Almighty power, even as by a Whirlwind from the Eaſt, he ſometime wrecketh the ſhips upon the Sea, one Sea in particular being mentioned, Viz. The Mediterranean, belonging to Tarſus in Cilicia, as beſt known to the Jews, for their often travelling that way, and all others hereby underſtood. Therefore in ſaying thus he only meaneth the facility of their overthrow without any power of Reſiſtance.

Baſil. Calvin.

Verſ. 8. As we have heard with our Ears, we have ſeen in the City of our God: Here Gods protection over his Church is confirmed by Experience, as if they had ſayd, we have heard formerly; that God did mighty things for his People; But now we have ſeen him do mightily for them in this great Overthrow given to the Philiſtims by David, time after time, 2 Sam. 5. 19. 20. &c. Whereby we are confirmed in our faith, that they are eſtabliſhed for ever. The ſecond, Nicene Councell, ſayth Calvin, gather from hence, that it is good to uſe Images, becauſe they repreſent to the Eye what we hear with the Ear, but moſt abſurdly. That which may be truly gathered is, That it maketh much for the confirming of our Faith, to ſee by Experience that performed to us, which God promiſeth to his People; and the like to that, which he hath formerly done for them, according to the Relations that have come to our Ears. And that which is ſayd here of the City of God, and of his Eſtabliſhing it for ever: Touching which, the Faithfull are confident, by Reaſon of Experiments of his extraordinary Goodneſs towards it, is not ſo much meant of Jeruſalem, or Zion, where David dwelt, but of the Church with which he is always preſent, to break in peices, as ſhips upon the Sea, in his good time all adverſe powers, and to terrify and fugate Kings that come againſt her, of how great power ſoever they be, as was before ſayd of Zion, Verſ. 5. 6. 7.

Calvin.

Note.

Ver. 9. We have thought of thy loving kindnes (O God) in the midſt of thy temple, Heb. We have ſilently or quietly expected. And ſo Calvin renders it, wherby is meant that wee have been patient in ſufferings, and have not murmured, becauſe we truſted in thee for deliverance, when we prayed in thy Houſe, there being a promiſe made to all or any one, that ſhould do thus in Danger, that thou wilt hear and be merciſull unto them; Whereas the Temple was not now built; by Temple in this place the Tabernacle, and Ark therein, may be underſtood as well as the Temple built by Solomon, becauſe the word ſignifieth properly Habitation, and even before that promiſe was made to Solomon, of hearing prayers in the Houſe built by him; the ſervants of God had a confidence, that going to the Houſe, that then was, they ſhould be heard and have their ſins pardoned, and that not without Ground, becauſe they were bidden to bring all their Offerings to one place, which the Lord ſhould chooſe, and in Davids time in ſpeciall, he choſe the Threſhing floor of Arannah, the Jebuſite, and always before the place where the Tabernacle was pitcht, after that there was a Tabernacle, was the place of his Habitation, and by ſacrificing here, a Reconciliation was from time to time made for their ſins according to the Lords own promiſe. Now we have no ſuch Houſe to go unto to pray in particular, which is to be preferred for this above all other places, for all Oratories are alike, and by reaſon of the places (though they be the houſes of God ſo called peculiarly in reſpect of the Congregations meeting there about all divine duties, to which they are wholly dedicated) no man is the more accepted of for praying there, then elſewhere, but for the joyning of all the forces of the Congregation together in ſeeking to God, which hath a ſpeciall promiſe of Gods concurrence with them to grant what they ask in faith. The Temple, in the midſt of which we praying, now are heard in all places, is Chriſt, and then we pray

1 King. c. 8.

Deut. 17.

2 Sam. 24.

Levit. 5. & 6. & 16.

Note.

Matth. 18 19.

pray in him, when in his name, and meditation, and in his meditation alone; which doing we may as certainly expect with patience a gracious anſwer in any ſtreights, as they of old, that waited for it in the Temple. Ioh. 14.

As thy name is (O God) ſo is thy praiſe, thy right hand is ful of righteouſneſſe. That is, ſaith Calvin, other Gods have a name in the World, but what they do for the help of thoſe that ſerve them, cannot by any be ſhewed, for they can do nothing, but God hath the name אל Strong, or mighty: And they that ſerve him and truſt in him, finde matter of praiſing him, for helping them in their dangers, moſt manifeſtly from time to time, as one for whoſe power nothing is too hard: And he ſaith, Thy right hand is ful of righteouſneſſe. That is, Full of Noble Geſtes, which thou haſt done according to thy promiſe, for thy people ſeeking to thee in their greateſt dangers: Unto the ends of the Earth. In which words, it is propheſied of the propagation of the Goſpel far and wide, and of the name IESVS, to be honoured above all names. Verſ. 10. Calvin. Phil. 1.

Walke about Zion, tell the Towers thereof. He doth not hereby certainly mean, that they ſhould look at theſe things, as a defence ſufficient againſt all enemies, to truſt therein, but that in looking at them, they ſhould by faith behold God in them, to uphold his People, inhabiting this faire and well defenced City, to confide alwaies in his help, to what ſtreights ſoever they ſhould at any time be brought, as was ſaid before, Pſal. 46. 6. It is then a compariſon taken from ſuch as inhabite a City, againſt which enemies are coming, who when they heare of it, go about it to view the Wals and of what ſtrength they be in every place, and to number the Towers, from which they might fight againſt them, that if there be not enough they may add more, if not ſtrong enough, they may make them ſtronger, if they be to reſt confident againſt all comers: Now the Jews are bidden to do thus, it being meant that they ſhould conſider, the experience which they had of Gods being here to fortifie their Wals, and to make them impregnable, and to tel their Children hereof, that they might alſo truſt in God and ſerve him, being aſſured, that in ſo doing, they ſhould be through God ſo ſtrengthened from Generation to Generation, that they ſhould alwaies ſtand, and never be thrown down by any adverſe power; whereby is intimated, that it is want of this conſideration, that many times makes even the people of God to fall before Ethnickes and Heretickes: And this Expoſition is yet made more plain, by the words following, Verſe 13. For this God is our God. That is, this God, who dwelleth here, Is our God: That is, Strength for ever, for which our fortifications muſt needs be invincible, not only now or ſome ſhort time, but for ever. And he will be our guide unto death. That is, Serving him conſtantly, he will be with us till we dye, bringing us ſo to death, as that we may be afterwards moſt bleſſed and happy, World without end, and ſuch a death was not then unknown to be deſirable, as appeareth by Balaams vote, Let me dye the death of the righteous, and let my end be like his. Ver. 12. Not. Verſ. 13. Numb. 23.

PSAL. XLIX.

IN this Pſalme the Prophet ſpeaketh of mans mortality, and againſt thoſe that do, as if they were not mortal, but could live ever, ſhewing their miſerable end: But contrariwiſe the comfortable departure of ſuch as acknowledging this life to be vain and tranſitory, look up to God and truſt in him to be redeemed from everlaſting death, and upon their departure hence to be received into everlaſting life, Verſe 15. And becauſe this is a matter of great moment, he firſt prepareth all men to give due attention to it, Verſe 1, 2, 3, 4. For theſe words, Verſe. 2. Both low and high. Hebr. Verſ. 2.

Verſ. 3, 4: it is, אוש בני ארם ובני Sons of Adam, and Sons of man, the firſt word denoting the meaner ſort, the other the greater; who are all ſpoken to as death, which is the thing ſpoken of, concerneth all, Verſe 3,4. he calleth that of which he is about to ſpeak, wiſdome and underſtanding and a riddle, or dark ſaying to be opened, which may ſeem not to be ſo: For who knoweth not, that every man muſt dye, yea even he that is moſt honourable in this World? but herein lyeth the wiſdome, to know this to live and do accordingly, ſeriouſly to think upon this, and therefore not to be faſcinated to worldly pleaſures, profits, or honours, but to apply our mindes with all earneſtneſſe to live and beleive ſo in our Redeemer, that when this frail life ſhall end, we may be received to life everlaſting, through the merits of his death.

Verſ. 5. Why ſhould I feare in the daies of evill, when the iniquity of my heels compaſſe me about? Here by evil daies, he meaneth daies of trouble and danger, in which he was continually, for which men naturally are much afraid, but why ſhould I, ſaith he, that live not by ſenſe, but by faith, be afraid, which is more then an affirmation, as if he had, Abſit, God forbid: Sith faith and feare are not in the ſame ſubject, but feare and unbeleife, as Revel. 21. 8. The feareful and unbeleiving are joyned together: But what is the iniquity of my heels? Either ſin through deceit tripping me up, as it were, and making me to fal, or ſorrow and ſufferings, to which I am brought by my enemies, labouring by deceit to take me in their ſnares, and deſtroy me, for the word עקב here uſed, ſignifieth, as an heel, ſo a ſupplanting or circumventing by craft, as Eſau uſed it in ſpeaking of Jacob, he may well be ſo called, for he hath now ſupplanted me theſe two times: And of Concupiſcence which is the Mother of ſin, it is ſaid, Every one is tempted by his own Concupiſcenſe, and is inticed. Jam. 1. 14. δελεαζόμενος, drawn by a baite, deceitful to ſwallow the hook as the Fiſh doth: Therefore it is, as if he had ſaid, I wil by no meanes be made to fear, by the feare of unbeleif, how craftily ſoever my wicked enemies endeavoured my deſtruction, becauſe it is not a bodily death, that can make me unhappy, forſomuch as I am aſſured, that the Lord wil then receive me, as Verſe 15. Neither will I feare with ſuch a feare, which is the feare of deſperation for the ſinnes, which I unwillingly by the deceitfulneſs of the fleſh commit, as long as in my minde I ſerve the Law of God, and it is my delight to live accordingly, and the griefe of my Soule, when by the violence of temptation, I am carryed unto any ſin: Or taking the heeles for feet Synecdochically, and feet for affections, which be the feet of the minde, the inordinacy of his affections ſometimes miſcarrying him, was the iniquity of his heels.

Verſ. 6,7. Verſe 6, 7. &c. to the 14. After a deſcription of the faithful in his own example, and what a ſafe condition they are in, ſo that they need not to feare: Here followeth a deſcription of the Worldling, he glorieth in his riches although they be vain, to help againſt death, and doth, as if he ſhould continue here ever, but at length he dyeth miſerably: And this is the caſe of worldlings, Generation after Generation.

Verſ. 14. The righteous ſhall have dominion over him in the morning. That is, Whereas the rich worldling is a man of power and authority in this life, and the poor righteous man is in ſubjection, this caſe ſhall ſoon be altered by the coming of death to them both, which may be by the next morning, or to be ſure, at the morning of the reſurrection, and day of the laſt judgment, when the Saints together with Chriſt ſhall be Judges over the wicked of the World, which ſhould beat down the pride of rich worldlings, and be a great comfort to the godly poor, becauſe though he that is great in this World, tramples upon the other with diſdain, as not worthy to be his foot-ſtoole, yet how long ſhall it be thus? Verily but till the morning, then they ſhall be put down under the feet of the other for ever; as the 1 Cor. 6. Note.

Servant

Servant of a Player, that hath acted the part of a King in the Night, muſt come under as a poor ſlave in the morning, when the Play is ended.

But God will redeem my Soul from the power of the Grave, This is ſpoken not only in his own perſon, but in the perſon of all the faithfull: and is a pregnant Teſtimony together with the 14. Verſe, of the faith of the Saints of God, that lived under the Old Teſtament, touching the Eſtate of the Righteous, and of the Wicked worldling after death, that it was the ſame with ours, as alſo that of Job, ſo well known, Chapter 19. 25. 26. Ver. 15.

He ſhall go to the generation of his Fathers, and never ſee light. This is not ſpoken of all the Rich and increaſed in Wealth, but of worldly rich men before deſcribed: For Abraham was rich, and Jacob increaſed greatly, and David himſelf moſt of all others. They be ſuch men of wealth and honour only, that ſet not their hearts upon any thing elſe, That are like the Beaſts that periſh. Ver. 19.

PSAL. L.

A Pſalme of Aſaph, or for Aſaph, to be ſung by him and his Sons, for he is ſayd to be a Singer, 1 Chron. 25. 2. And he is called a Prophet alſo, 2 Chron. 29. 30. Where it is ſayd, that they ſhould ſing the Pſalmes of David, and of Aſaph the Seer. I take it rather as moſt do, to have been compiled by David, for Aſaph to ſing, becauſe we are not yet come to an end of Davids Pſalmes. And it hath ſome ſimilitude, as Baſil noteth, unto that going before, for there he calleth upon all people to hear, and in this likewiſe, Verſe 7. Heare (O my people) &c. But there he ſpeaks in his own perſon, here he bringeth in God ſpeaking. The Pſalme is generally held to be propheticall, concerning the time of the Goſpel, and for this make ſome Remarkeable paſſages of it, as Verſe 2. Where it is ſayd, that God ſhall appear out of Zion in perfect beauty, which was when the Goſpel went out thence into al Lands, and Verſe 3. Chriſts coming to judgment in moſt dreadfull manner after this is plainly pointed at. And likewiſe, Verſe 6. Laſtly, the Aboliſhing of carnall ſacrifices, praiſing of God, out of an upright Heart, and a good life, being to us all recommended, and ſinfull living ſtill in whomſoever condemned, Verſe 8. 9. 10. &c. Calvin therefore miſapplyeth it to the Jews only, as if God ſummoned Heaven and Earth, and all men to come in as Witneſſes againſt them in regard of the Abominations which they did, but in all juſtified themſelves, and thought to be born out by their frequent Sacrificing: But he, notwithſtanding theſe, ſpeaketh all Terrour unto them, by devouring fire and mighty Tempeſts ſetting forth his moſt heavy judgments that ſhould come upon them, and incloſe them on every ſide, no place of Eſcaping being left unto them.

Baſil.

Hieron. Auguſt.

Calvin,

The mighty God Jehovah hath ſpoken, the Vulgar, the God of Gods: Hebr. אלוה ſignifying either, He hath called the Earth from the riſing of the Sun to the going down thereof. That is, cauſing the Goſpel to ſound in all Countrys and Nations, by being preached every where to the Inhabitants of the Earth, ſet forth here by the Earth. Some think a double calling here denoted by the works of Creation, declaring to all men of what country ſoever the Wiſdome and power of God, V. 1. and then Gods calling of the Jews by his word, V. 2. But the former is beſt, and V. 3. ſheweth the place, from whence the Goſpel went out for the calling of all Viz. Zion, where the Temple ſtood in which Chriſt preached, & by his preſence made it the more excellent, and glorious of all other places, for which it is called, the perfection of beauty, and he is ſayd to have ſhewed thence, both for the Light of Ver. 1. Rom. 1. 19. Verſ. 2.

of his Doctrine and the Miracles, whereby the divine Majeſty ſhined moſt conſpicuouſly in his humanity.

Our God ſhall come and ſhall not keepe ſilence: For ſo much as the wicked world was not moved by all this to repent and beleive, another coming of his ſhall be full of terrour to judgment, which none of the Wicked ſhall be able to indure. For our God here ſpoken of is CHRIST, of whom it is 2 Theſ. 1. 8. ſayd, That he ſhall come in flaming fire, and in ſaying, He ſhall not keep ſi-
2 Pet. 3. lence, he intimateth, that before that dreadfull day, whilſt worldly men hear not the terrible ſentence of condemnation denounced, they fear it not, but rather deride ſuch as ſpeak thereof: but the Lord will break out from this ſilence, and ſay, Go yee curſed into hell fire, &c.

Verſ. 4. He ſhall call to the Heavens and to the Earth: That is, to be Witneſſes againſt, even thoſe, that he hath peculiarly taken to be his Church and People; ſo Moſes, Deut. 32. 1. and Iſa. 1. Bid the Heavens and Earth hear the charge brought in againſt the wicked Iſraelits. For their condemnation, that have rebelled againſt God, ſhall be ſo juſt, that the whole creation ſhall aſſent unto the Righteous proceedings of this great Judge againſt them; for which it is added, Verſe 6. The Heavens ſhall declare his Righteouſneſs, For although Heaven and Earth are without ſenſe to hear or ſpeak yet to God their Creator, as he willeth them, they can do both for the confuſion of all the Wicked, who think, becauſe no man ſeeth their abominati-
Note. ons done in ſecret, that theſe dead Creatures, can hear, ſee, or ſpeak nothing againſt them.

Verſ. 5. Gather my Saints together unto me, that have made a covenant with me by Calvin. Sacrifice: Some by Saints here underſtand not holy perſons indeed, but
T. W. only by Externall calling and profeſſion, as the Jews of whom it is ſayd, Baſil. Jews by nature, and not ſinners of the Gentiles, for who are Saints, but they Gal. 2. 15. that are not ſinners? yet he ſaith not ſimply ſo, but not ſinners of the Gentiles, that is, unſanctified, by being without the covenant, as the Gentiles are, That have made covenant with me by ſacrifice, of which ſee Exod. 24. And it ſeems to be added for further Explication of what he meant by theſe Saints, Viz. Such as whoſe ſanctity conſiſteth only in Covenant making, but not keeping. Baſil ſayth, that ſuch are called Saints to aggravate their ſins, as a man that hath an honorable Title, but hath done wickedly, for which he is to be condemned, is by the Judge upbraided hereby, ſaying, Thou art a Gentleman, a Knight, or a Lord, in honourable place about the King above others, how is it then that thou haſt been ſo notorious a Rebell? Jerom and Hieron. Auguſt. contrariwiſe by Saints here underſtand the Elect, and therefore Jerom Auguſt. makes that ſaying parallell to this, He ſhall ſend out his Angells to Matth. 24. gather his Elect from the four quarters of the Earth, or the four windes, from one end of Heaven to the other: And for theſe words, Which make a cove- nant with me by Sacrifice, he hath, above ſacrifice, As indeed the Heb. עלי עבח
Ier. 31. 31. ſignify, implying the new Covenant made by CHRIST, which is everlaſting, and ſo above or more excellent, then that made by carnall Sacrifices. But על ſignifieth as well By, or Upon, as Above, and ſo he meaneth, upon ſacrificing this Covenant was made, as we may ſee Exod. 24. Sacrifice being offered, the Laws of God were read, and then the people promiſed or covenanted to do ſo: And the Context is plain for the former Expoſition, becauſe they only, that ſhall be judged in Terrour, are ſpoken to, and not any true Saints to whom nothing is ſayd in way of Comfort, till Verſe 23. And it were ſtrange, if one Sentence coming in amongſt all the reſt, ſhould belong to perſons of another quality, Viz. True Saints, and be hemmed in alſo before and behind with ſuch ſayings, as ſhew Hypocrits, and not true Saints to be ſpoken to. For before he ſaith, That he may judge his people: That is, His ungracious people, as all muſt needs confeſs, becauſe Saints ſhall not be judged; but rather judge others, 1 Cor. 6. Chapt. 1. 31. And his Elect Epheſ. 1. people are Saints, that are peculiarly Elected to life, Before the beginning of the world: And after, Verſe 6. The heavens ſhall declare his Righteouſneſs: That is, Atteſt unto his judgment, that it is right in coming thus in fire and tempeſt againſt them. Then Verſe 7. makes it yet more Evident. Hear (O Iſrael) I well not reprove thee, &c. As if he had ſayd, Ye my People and Saints, by ſeperation from the Reſt of the World to be mine peculiarly, complain not, that yee are unjuſtly dealt withall, when I proceed thus terribly againſt you: for although I command you to offer Sacrifices unto me, yet it was not for any complacency that I had meerly therein, but in a life lead ſo in my fear, that I might have praiſe thereby, ſeeing the bloud of Beaſts needfull dayly to be ſhed for the Expiation of your ſins, how is it, that ye looked not into the End of this, which was to ſhew you, what was for ſin due unto you, to affect your hearts with fear and trembling, making you to go away and do no more ſo: And another End was to repreſent the ſhedding of the bloud of my dear Son for your ſins, that hereby ye might be affected ſo, as not to plunge your ſelves ſtill dayly into ſin, to pluck you out from whence neither men nor Angells were able, but he alone, and not he neither, but by giving his bloud to be ſhed for you; and moreover for this great favour, have your hearts lifted up to all thankfullneſs, and hereof to make all Expreſſions all the Days of your lives. Therefore ye having neglected thus to honour me with Fear, Obedience, Faith, and Praiſe, coming herefrom, have your mouthes ſtopped, when ye are thus ſentenced, and go away as confounded for ever. The Poet then, who to ſet forth the ſenſe of the former words in Meeter, hath it thus, My Saints aſſemble, my Lawes they keep; their gifts do not diſſemble: goeth far both from the Originall, yea any Tranſlation in proſe, and the ſenſe of the words. Having expoſtulated with them about their confidence in Externall worſhip hitherto, now he teacheth them, what to do, to prevent the danger at his coming before propheſied of. Offer unto God praiſe, pay thy vowes, in keeping Covenant, and then call upon me, &c. But if ye ſtill perſiſt in wickedneſs, and will not thus do, but contrariwiſe, Steal, Whore, Slander, ſeek not to ſhroud thy ſelf under my protection by covenanting, for thou hateſt inſtruction, and caſteſt my word behind thy back, and therefore I will according to thy demerits proceed againſt thee. I have indeed been long Silent, ſo Verſe 3. bearing with the wicked, Generation after Generation, but I ſee none other fruit to come hereof, but more audacious and undanted ſinning. Wherefore I will, when the time comes, that I have ſpoken of, be ſilent no more; but break out as the Lion into roaring, when he is about to tear his prey in peices: And if ye be wiſe, then conſider this and repent. Begin yet to offer me praiſe by reforming your lives, and ſo in ſtead of being damned at that day, ye ſhall, notwithſtanding all your former ſins, and my terrible threatnings, be ſaved for ever.

the

Ver. 7.

Ver. 14. 15.

Ver. 16. 17. 18.

Ver. 21.

Ver. 22.

Thus I have by way of Paraphraſe run over the Pſalme from Verſe 7. to the End, there being nothing herein more ſaid but what is ſummarily ſet forth in divers other places, as Jer. 7. 22. Micah 6. 7. Hoſ. 6, 6. Iſa. 1. 12. 58. 1. 66. 3. Only here, as I take it, a time is pointed at, when there ſhould be no more Offering of carnall Sacrifices, but only of ſpirituall worſhip, as Ioh. 4. 22.

PSAL. LI.

FOR this Pſalm it being nothing elſe but a Prayer, and confeſſion of ſins, if we look into the cauſe, why David compiled it, and what he had done, 2 Sam. 12. There will need little to be ſayd by way of Expoſition, it being generally plain and eaſy to be underſtood. It is one of his ſeven penitentiall Pſalmes, upon which I ſpake, Pſalme 6. and 38. Whereby, as by others others, we may learn how to addreſſe our ſelves unto GOD for mercy and pardon, in caſe, that we have fouly offended him.

Verſ. 4. Againſt thee only have I ſinned: Hereby he meaneth not, that he had not ſinned againſt Vrijah by adultery and murther, but becauſe GOD is the great Law-Giver and Judge, and therefore whatſoever is done againſt any man, is not for this ſo hainous, that man is ſinned againſt or wronged, but becauſe the Law of God (which we are all bound above all things moſt Religiouſly to keep, by reaſon of the moſt ſtrong Obligations, whereby we are bound unto him, for his great and continuall favours) is impiouſly broken, and he is in ſtead of Duty repayed with Rebellion, to the provoking of his heavy wrath and diſpleaſure againſt us both here and hereafter: Again, God only knew his ſin, and diſcovered it, and threatned him therefore, when as Vrijah and others were altogether ignorant of it, ſo that he ſinned not againſt him that he knew of. That thou mayſt be juſtified when thou ſpeakeſt & clear when thou judgeſt: that is, In thus confeſſing my ſinning againſt thee, I acknowledge thy charging of me with theſe moſt hainous ſins by thy Prophet Nathan, and denouncing judgments againſt me and my houſe therefore, to be moſt juſt and righteous. Calvin in many more words explaineth theſe, as ſpoken in caſe that any ſhould object, that now David to whom the promiſes were made, had ſinned ſo fowly, there could be no expectation, that it ſhould be done to his poſterity accordingly, but that this word of God muſt fall to the Ground. For this is here taken away by ſaying, Againſt thee, thee have I ſinned; That the truth of thy promiſe might appear unannulable, ſeeing thou wilt notwithſtanding do by me and mine finally, as thou haſt ſayd, although I go through much miſery, as I am well worthy for my ſins, all the Days of my life to come. And thus he ſayth, becauſe he had been by Nathan comforted; telling him that the Lord had done away his ſin. And from this the Apoſtle draweth this generall Doctrine, that the Wickedneſſe of Iſraells poſterity, to whom the promiſes were made, cannot fruſtrate the promiſes to that whole Nation. Rom. 3. 2. 4. Of the agreement betwixt which and this, both for the matter and Scope, for which Saint Paul bringeth it, ſee my Expoſitions there.

Note.

Verſ. 5. I was ſhaped in iniquity, and in ſin did my Mother conceive me: Hebr. Warme me, that is, Give me the heat of Life. Here David taketh occaſion for his greater humiliation to look up higher, even to his Birth and Conception; finding and acknowledging, that he was not only now, but always a ſinner ſince he had any being, for his greater humiliation, as one that thought his ſins the more aggravated hereby, and not after the manner of moſt, ſeeking hence to extenuate them. For they commonly ſay, it is my nature, hereby I was in my very Birth a ſinner, and how then can I do otherwiſe? David did not thus ſpeak of his being a ſinner from the womb, but to ſtir up himſelf to the Greater ſorrow, for that he began not now only to ſin, but was a ſinner againſt God ever ſince he had a being. And hereby he teacheth againſt Pelagianiſme, that we are not only guilty of Adams ſin, by imitation, but by propagation, ſo likewiſe it is taught, Rom. 5. 12. For the queſtion, is the Soul then, Ex traduce, as the Body, being begotten of Parents? and if not, how can the whole man, conſiſting as well of Soul as of Body, be guilty of that ſin? I anſwer, That in the Generation of man, the ſpirit is not to be diſtinguiſhed from the fleſh, as though the one came from the Parents, and the other immediatly from God: But the whole man conſiſting of Soul and Body, commeth from the Parents mediatly, but in the framing of him, the power of God interveneth, without which the Father begetteth not, neither can the Mother conceive either. For even the making of the body and of all the lineaments, are aſcribed unto God, Pſal. 139: And why not of the Soul alſo, Mediantibus hominibus, and to this Effect the Philoſopher ſayth, Sol & homo generant hominem: If it be objected, Eccl. 12: 1. Duſt returnes to duſt, and the ſpirit to God that gave it, therefore the Soul comes immediimmediatly from God, and the Body being formed by him only, Expræjacente materia, Viz. Duſt out of which it was taken, that is, From parents who are called Duſt, as Adam was, Gen. 3. I anſwer, God frames the Body, and giveth the Soul at the ſame inſtant together with it, through the Parents, although in Death, they be ſeperated; the one being layd in the Earth, and the other being immortall, going another way, as God in his Mercy or Juſtice thinks good.

Thou loveſt truth in the inmoſt part, and in ſecret makeſt me underſtand Wiſdome. Here David further aggravateth his ſins, both for that he had ſo notoriouſly diſſembled in the buſineſs of Uriah, pretending love and good Will to him, when he plyed him, coming from the Camp, ſo with Wine, and would have him go and lye at his houſe with his Wife, and wrote a Letter by him to Joab, as if he were a man whom he greatly reſpected, when as in truth, he ſought nothing elſe but to conceal his own Wickedneſſe, and by making him away, to provide for his full injoyment of her, whom he was carryed after by moſt inordinate luſt: And alſo for that he, whom God had extraordinarily taught, and by his Spirit indued with more wiſdome then other men, had been ſo vile, yet as to commit ſo great an abomination. For touching the firſt, he ſayth, Thou requireſt truth in the inward parts, Meaning, but I have not regarded this, but groſly diſſembled. Touching the ſecond, Thou haſt made me to underſtand wiſdome in ſecret, that is, By inlightning my heart within, which is unknown to any mortall man, and therefore called ſecret, that knowing in my heart more then others, thy Law I might be carefull to keep, but I like a wicked wretch, have not by this ſingular endowment, been the more ſanctified to keep my ſelf pure from the polution of ſin, but againſt my Knowledge, ſo exceeding, and Conſcience have committed this groſs ſin. Wherefore, Verſe 7. He earneſtly prayeth God to purge and waſh him, that of foul and black by ſin, he may be made purely white again, which is done when God pardoneth ſin, by Faith ſprinkling the ſinner with the bloud of his Son. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 7.

Take not thy holy ſpirit from me: This may ſeem not to agree with Verſe 10. Where he prayeth, that he might have a new heart created in him, and a right ſpirit renewed: For if he needed this, how ſaith he here, as if he ſtill had the Spirit of God in him: Take not thy holy Spirit away from me: Ainſworth. Although David now had his Heart greatly defiled, yet the Spirit abode ſtill in him, whereby he performed laudably the outward dutys of Gods worſhip, and of his Kingly Office, ſo that none could diſcern any want of the Spirit in him, whereby he did theſe things, but the Spirit was in him, as fire covered over with aſhes, that giveth no heat or Light, for ſo he was without the Light of Spirituall Joy, being contrariwiſe full of Fear and Horrour: And therefore in this Reſpect he needed not only the Renovation but the Creation of a new Heart, that upon Aſſurance of Remiſſion it mgiht be put into a Frame of Joy and Gladneſſe; which now he wanted and could not otherwiſe have: And hereby is intimated, how hard a thing it is for an Heart corrupted by foul ſin to be cleanſed again, and to have the Law of God written therein again, it is even a very work of creation, and not of renewing an old thing only, that we may all take heed, how by ſinning, we at any time corrupt our Hearts and Conſciences, and if once we have ſinned, and by Repentance been re-created, let us fear the like ſinning another time, becauſe that to ſuch there is no renewing by Repentance, as the Tables, wherein the Law was written being broken, were once renewed, but not the ſecond time. Verſ. 11. Note.

Then will I teach Tranſgreſſours thy Wayes, and ſinners ſhall be converted: That is, By my own Experience I will ſhew them; that thy mercy is ſo great towards the vileſt Sinners Repenting, that they ſhall not diſpair, but in hope of attaining the like favour, turn to thee by Holineſs and Righteouſneſs. Ver. 13.

Ver. 16. Thou deſireſt not ſacrifice. In what ſenſe this is ſpoken, ſee before, Pſal. 50. And it may be gathered from the next words. The ſacrifices of God are a broken ſpirit: Neither Burnt-Offerings nor Peace-Offerings are accepted of, in compariſon of ſuch an heart.

Ver. 18. Do good in thy good pleaſure unto Zion. Having prayed for pardon, and the joy of Salvation to be reſtored unto him, now he ſheweth his ſolicitude for the Church of God, ſet forth by Zion, that neither for his ſinnes, nor the ſinnes of his people, who were all likewiſe ſubject to ſinning, he would at an time withdraw his favour from her, but

Ver. 19. Build Jeruſalems wals: That is, Strengthen her againſt the aſſaults of all enemies, promiſing for ſo great a bleſſing, Sacrifices of righteouſneſſe, that is, Brought and offered, not out of an opinion therefore, to be juſtified in evil doing, but the offerers hearts being ſincerely addicted to the keeping of Gods moſt holy Laws: For Bullocks or Calves offering, which followeth next, ſee, Hoſ. 14. 2. Heb. 13. 15. They be the Calves of our lips, when we confeſſe before him to his glory.

PSAL. LII.

AUGUSTINE ſpeakes much upon the Title of this Pſalme, going upon the Perſons therein mentioned, as ſignificative; Saul ſignifying Death, David Life, Doeg Motion, Edomite, Earthly; Abimelech, for ſo he reads it according to one Coppy, although it be Ahimelech; Abimelech ſignifieth, My Father the King: Of all which put together, he maketh this myſticall conſtruction; Maſchil of David, the wiſdome of ſuch as are appointed to life, when terrene and earthly motions ſtir up thoſe that are appointed to death, or that ſhall dye and periſh everlaſtingly, againſt thoſe that ſhall live for ever, when they are intent to go to the houſe of their Father, the King of Heaven and Earth, or as the moſt approved reading is of the name, Achimelech, my Brother the King: That is, GHRIST, who is our elder Brother: The Hiſtory is, 1 Sam. 22. 9. According to which let us go, and as any thing may be myſtically or morrally gathered from hence, improve it ſo for further inſtruction, Doeg it ſeemeth, inſinuated himſelfe into the favour of a King, Saul by the ſlanderous accuſation, that he made againſt Ahimelech, that as the Prieſts of GOD periſhed by this meanes, ſo he attained a great reward, for which he calleth him, A mighty man, and ſpeaks of him, Verſe 7. as

Verſ. 1. Abounding in riches, but his might was moſt to do miſcheife; for when none elſe would do it, he being bidden by Saul falleth upon the Prieſts and killeth them, being eighty perſons, neither reverencing their order, for which it was dangerous for any to do violence to them, nor their innocency, yet he did, and gloryed in it, as taking himſelfe for this, a man of valour, and therefore worthy of high eſtimation: But David being by this meanes brought into greater ſtreights, through the terrour hereby ſtricken into others, making, that none durſt thenceforth to be any way helpful to him, yet ſeeing how momentany this his greatneſs and Wealth ſhould be, and what a curſed end he ſhould come to; as appeareth,

Note. Verſe 5. He now inſulteth over him, ſaying, Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelfe? Which ſhould be a terrour to all, that machinate miſcheife againſt the righteous, but eſpecially againſt thoſe that be in holy orders, touching

Pſal. 105. 15. whom it is ſaid, Touch not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets no harme. And a ſingular comfort to them in their greateſt ſufferings by the hands of cruel Perſecutors: For as Perſecutors ſhall periſh, So the goodneſſe of God to the perſecuted indureth continually, as in the next words, and from hence he brings an Argument to confound the wicked in their malicious malicious practiſes againſt his Servants, for when they have done what they can againſt them, yet they cannot effect, that God ſhould not be good unto them, to uphold theſe kinde of men here to the Worlds end, againſt the rage of the Devil and all his inſtruments, and to reward ſuch (as they ſeem to prevail againſt by killing them) with his Heavenly Kingdome.

Thou loveſt all devouring words, O thou deceitfull tongue. In the former Verſe Doeg is charged with lying, and here with a deceitful and devouring tongue, or a tongue loving Devouring words, Calvin, Verba abſconſionis: But the word בלע ſignifieth devouring, as we have it, it being meant, That by his words of accuſation, the Prieſts of God were deſtroyed, they thus proving as a devouring ſword: And he chargeth him with lying, becauſe although it were truth, that he ſpake, yet he diſſembled, or by diſſimulation paſſed over that, which might have made for Abimelech, Viz. That he releived not David, as knowing that the King was againſt him, but in the ſimplicity of his heart, thinking him to be moſt gracious with Saul: Whence note, That it is not only a lye, which is falſe, but when out of malice or flattery the truth is told ſo in ſomething, that it is concealed in another, which is moſt conſiderable, to tell of a thing done well and juſtifiably, as evil and arguing an evil minde in the doer, which is far from him. Verſ. 4. Note.

The righteous ſhall ſee and feare and laugh at him. That is, Seeing the dreadfulneſs of Gods judgments againſt the notoriouſly wicked, and againſt Doeg in particular, they ſhall be taken with an holy feare and reverence of God, making them yet to look more carefully to their waies, and it ſhall make them rejoice, to ſee how God taketh their part, they being ſleighted and contemned by them, who are now made by God rediculous to all the World, for their being taken down from their height of pride, and laid ſo low in the duſt: A warning to all men in preferment, to take heed of pride, for God will ſoon bring them down low enough, and expoſe them to deriſion; as Nebuchadnezzar derided by ſaying, How art thou falen from Heaven, O Lucifer Son of the morning, and caſt down, &c. Verſ. 6. Note. Iſa. 14. 13.

But I am like a green Olive Tree in the houſe of God. Here the ſtrength of Davids faith ſhewed it ſelfe, in that being now in exile, from the houſe of God,; that is, the Congregation of his People, yet he beleived, when his wicked enemies fell, that he ſhould be reſtored and live and injoy proſperity, ſet forth by the greenneſſe of the Olive Tree, the leaves whereof ſeare not, but are alwaies green, and the Tree fructifying: And becauſe he had this firm faith, he ſaith, He would alwaies be praſing of God, and rejoycing even in ſufferings: For this is good before thy Saints. That is, All that be Saints do likewiſe, and therefore cannot but approve it in him doing ſo, what the practiſe of the Saints is according to that which is here ſaid, ſee, Rom. 5. 1. Jam. 1. 5. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 6.

PSAL. LIII.

THIS is the ſame with Pſalme 14. Only the Title differeth in this, that here is ſaid, Upon Mahaleth, Super tripudium, ſaith Theodotion, Per chorum, ſaith Symmachus, that is, To be ſung with dancing Ainſworth, Mahaleth is the ſame winde Inſtrument, meant by Nebiloth, Pſal. 5. 1. Jerom upon Abimelech, expounding Abimelech, by Parturiens, one pained in bringing forth, as Saint Paul ſaith of himſelf, to Galatians, My little Children of whom I travall again in birth, till Chriſt be formed in you. The word בחלה ſignifieth, A wound or ſickneſſe. The meaning then moſt probably is, upon the wound, wherewith Davids Heart was pained for the abominations here ſpoken of, out of which he breaketh into theſe ſad complaints. This is one difference, another, not to ſpeak of the change of every word, is Verſe 5.

Ver. 5. There were they taken with fear, where no fear was: That is, In their Hearts, in which they had ſayd, There is no God: and ſo had no fear of him; but the time cometh, when they are filled with Fear and Terrour, When God ſcatters the bones of him, that incampeth againſt thee, thou haſt put them to ſhame, becauſe God hath deſpiſed them: Vulgar Latine, Scattered the bones of them that pleaſe men: But Hebr. It is, The Bones of thy Incamper, according to the Tranſlation before going. The meaning is, When God overthroweth the Strength, ſet forth by Bones, of him that cometh and ſetteth himſelf to fight againſt thee, as an Army pitching Tents before a City, which it beſeigeth. So that he who doth thus, is the Atheiſt, ſayd, Verſe 4. To Eat up Gods People as Bread, whilſt he is ſuffered, and the beſeiged is this People, whom God ſo greatly tendreth, of whom he ſpeaks in the ſingular number as of one, for the near union betwixt them, being many members indeed, but all one body, and touching the ſame people it is, that he ſayth in the next words, Thou haſt put them to ſhame, becauſe thou whom they deſpiſed, ſhalt be honoured of God, and they deſpiſed at the laſt, thou honored by being ſet upon a Throne, and taken for a conſort in judging them, they ſtanding as abject perſons, full of Fear to be adjudged to the bottomleſs pit together with the Devill and his Angells for ever, which ſhall be the End of all Atheiſts, although they ſay but in Heart, that there is no God.

Note.

PSAL. LIV.

UPON Niginoth, This hath been before ſpoken of, and it was an Inſtrument of Muſick with ſtrings to beat upon, as the word, נגן to Beat, ſheweth.

When the Ziphims came, &c. Of whom ſee, 1 Sam. 23. 19. 26. 4. In great ſtraights was David now, yet he was not from his confidence in God, but prayeth, Save me (O God) by thy name, & judge me by thy ſtrength: the words of which prayer are divers, but the Sence the ſame, for what is the name of God but, אל Strength, and what is, Judge me, but juſtify and ſave me, as the word hath been often before uſed.

Verſ. 1.

Strangers riſe up againſt me: Of the Wicked ſayd to be Eſtranged from God: See, Pſalme. 58. 3. And to the ſame Effect, Iſa. 1. 4. They have forſaken me: And in this Sence, they are called Strangers. Some think, that theſe Ziphims were not of the Seed of Abraham, and therefore are called Strangers, But Calvin rather thinketh them to be ſo called, becauſe they were of a ſtrange wicked Condition, as indeed they were, that to ſuch a man as David, whom they knew to be unjuſtly perſcuted by Saul, when he came to ſeek a ſhrowding place amongſt them, they trecherouſly to betray him, contrary to the common humanity, that is, Even in Heathens toward ſuch as flee to them for Sanctuary. Oppreſſors, Calvin, terrible ones, and ſo the word ſignifieth, their barbarous manners being hereby denoted: Note from this Verſe, That Wickedneſſe and barbarous manners make even the Children of the Church, Alieni genas, A Generation coming of another: That is, the Devill, as is Expreſſed by Our Lord againſt wicked Jewes, Joh. 8. 44: Ziph, ſayth Ierom, was a Village ſo called, from whence theſe men had the name of Ziphim, ſignifying, Florentes, Flouriſhing riſhing, and ſo fitly typifying the Wicked of this world, who flouriſh often in this world for a time, and the Righteous ſeem like withered things, but it ſhall be contrary afterwards.

Calvin.

Hieron.

PSAL. LV.

THE Title of this Pſalme is the ſame with the former: It is moſt generally thought to have been made by David, when his Son Abſalom rebelled againſt him, with whom Achitophel took part, whoſe Councell was Eſteemed of, as the Oracle of God: But Calvin, when he was perſecuted by Saul; Some, before he was anointed King, becauſe he ſayth, Verſe, 13. It was thou mine Equal, Jerom, Auguſt: and other ancients underſtand it, as propheticall, ſetting forth the Treachery of Judas, and the malicious Jews againſt CHRIST: It ſeemeth to me to concern the time of Abſaloms Rebellion, and Achitophells ſiding with him, which was to David ſo dangerous, myſtically ſetting forth alſo Judas his Treachery, and the Jews malice againſt CHRIST, as will further appear, when we come to ſpeak of the particular paſſages of the Pſalm. Calvin. T. W. Hieron. Auguſt.

They caſt iniquity upon me, and in wrath they hate me: Calvin, In ira adverſantur mihi, In wrath they are againſt me: And this the Hebrew will bear, and it is more ſenſible: Four cauſes of his greivous complaint, ſayth one, are here touched together. Firſt, and Second, Wicked Speeches, and injurious Dealings in the former words of this Verſe, For the voice of the Enemy, and the vexation of the Wicked. Thirdly and Fourthly, Their filling them up to a full meaſure, and their deadly hatred in theſe words. But I rather think the third to be falſe and unjuſt aſperſions caſt upon him; cauſing more trouble: For David did not only ſuffer intollerable wrongs done unto him, but alſo was traduced in word, and had things layd to his Charge, which he never did; to make him odious to all men, as he ſometimes expreſly complaineth: And ſo had our Lord Jeſus, that he was a Drunkard, and had a Devill, &c. And hereby ſuch hatred was ſtirred up againſt him; that the People cryed againſt him. Crucifie, crucifie him: Other Expoſitors are divided; ſome holding ſlandring to be here meant, and ſome injuries and greateſt violence offered to him: But forſomuch as the word און ſignifieth Iniquity or ſin, and not Sorrow or ſuffering, it is manifeſt, that foul aſperſions are meant to make him odious to all men, and by this means many were ſtirred up the more againſt him. Ver. 3.

(O that I had wings like a Dove, then would I flee away: Hereby David ſheweth both his inability to defend himſelf as the trembling dove cannot defend it ſelf from the Hauk that purſueth it, ſo many of ſo great power, even all Iſrael conſpiring with Abſalom, were now his Adverſaries, and his innocency, ſo that his deſtruction was unjuſtly ſought, as the Dove is ſpoken of, to ſet it forth, Math. 10. 16. And cometh down upon CHRIST, Matth. 3. 16. And laſtly, that he had none other means to ſave his Life, but by fleeing, as he did from Jeruſalem when Abſalom was about to come into the City with all his power, ſo the CHURCH is ſometime ſayd, under the name of a Woman to have had wings given her to flee into the Wilderneſſe, Revel. 12. 14. Some other birds there are, that can flee faſter then a Dove, and therefore in ſaying thus, he had reſpect to the Condition in which he then was, and Eagles wings, are aſcribed to the CHURCH for her Soaring aſoft by divine meditation, as the Eagle fleeth higheſt, of all other birds. And of fleeing into the Wilderneſſe he ſpeaketh, becauſe that in times paſt he did uſe there to avoid the danger of Sauls purſuing him, and ſutably the CHURCH fleeth into the Wilderneſſe by lurking long in deſert places to avoid the Rage of perſecuting Tyrants. And CHRIST went into the Wilderneſſe where he Ver. 6. Matth. 4.

he was tempted by the DEVILL, and afterwards being in danger, to hide himſelf till the time of his Suffering came, and then ſayth Jerom, he was carryed, as by Doves wings, with all celerity to the Nations, being as a Wilderneſs, becauſe inculr, till then, by Spirituall Husbandry.

Hieron.

Verſ. 9. Deſtroy (O Lord) and divide their Tongues, for I have ſeen violence and ſtrife in the City: By ſeeing he meaneth knowing, or foreſeeing, that it would be ſo; becauſe Achitophel was there to counſell one way, and Chuſhai another, as 1 Sam. 17. 1. 5. 14. The word rendred, Deſtroy their tongues, is בלע ſignifying Diglutere, To ſwallow up, That is, to bring their wicked practiſes and conſultations againſt him to nothing, as Corah, Dathan, and Abiram: that were ſwallowed up, and in ſaying, Divide, he alludeth to that which was done to the Builders of Babel, whereby their work was broken off. Such as will have this underſtood of that which was done in Sauls time againſt David, will by no means have Jeruſalem, but Keilah underſtood by the City; but Calvin, no one City, but publick places in generall; ſo wicked were the times of Saul, that not only in ſecret, but even openly, where the greateſt frequency of People was, there was Robbing, and Wrong doing.

Numb. 16.

Gen. 11.

T. W.

Calvin.

Baſil. Baſil underſtands Jeruſalem, but he ſayth, that theſe words agree not to the time, when David wrote this, for he had not then this City, and therefore could not ſee, what was done there. Therefore applyeth them wholly to Chriſts time, when all manner of ſin abounded in Jeruſalem, ſo likewiſe Jerom, ſaying, that he ſaw iniquity there when they beleived not, and Contradiction, when they oppoſed and ſpake againſt CHRIST, ſaying, He is Joſephs ſon, but although David were not there, he might ſee what was done there, as hath been before ſayd. And as amongſt Abſaloms Councellours, there was diviſion; ſoto ſuch as would not conſent to this conſpiracy, violence and wrong was doubtleſs done, or all were compelled, that were unwilling to bear Arms againſt their King, and becauſe changes are dangerous, the Conſpirators ſet Watch and Ward upon the walls of the City, as followeth, V 10. And in ſuch tumultuous times, much Miſchief was certainly done, & deceit & guile was not wanting both in the new King, and his cheif Councellour Achitophel, V. 11. touching CHRIST, it was moſt notably fulfilled in his time, for never was more Wrong done then in crucifying him, and never did mens tongues ſpeak more contrary one to another, the Father againſt the Son, &c. Some ſaying that he was a good man, ſome contrary, Watchmen being alſo ſet to keep his Sepulcher, and the fouleſt deceit that Ever was, in ſaying, That whilſt they ſlept, his Diſciples came and ſtole him away, In that he ſayth, Deſtroy and divide their tongues: Note that a People, whoſe Tongues are divided, ſome ſpeaking this about the King, and points of ſtate of greateſt concerment, and ſome the contrary, and ſo holding, Violence and Wrong being added, are in the very way of being ſwallowed up by Gods Judgments, ſith a kingdome divided againſt it ſelf cannot ſtand.

Hieron.

Note.

Ver. 13. But it was thou, a man, mine equall, &c. The Cald. Thou Achitophel, a man like to me, my Peer, my Equall; of as much regard as my ſelf, my Guid, Captain in Councell or Maſter: For ſuch had he been to David. And ſo the word, אלפי ſignifieth, My Captain or Leader: And herein do I reſt, as alſo Ainſworth, and it is ſtrange that any, when all the words agree o aptly to Achitophel, known to be ſuch, ſhould apply them rather to ſome other man, they know not whom. For the conceit of one before mentioned, that it muſt be underſtood, as ſpoken before, that David was King, becauſe he calleth him his Equal, and none could be equal to the King, it is to be underſtood, that even Calvin himſelf confeſſeth, that this Reading doth not ſo well agree with the Hebrew, ערכי for it ſignifieth, My Order, One of my Order: ranked with my ſelf in Councell, and for Councell as highly Eſteemed of as I for a King, Touching the time of Chriſt, Judas is myſtically here ſet forth; who was one of his Captains, choſen to lead his Armys of Chriſtians of his Order, a Preacher, a familiar freind; for I have ſayth he, not called called you Servants, but Freinds, and he with the other Apoſtles, went up with him many times to the Temple, and he was of his Councell, both for having communicated unto him in private, what he ſhould teach and how he ſhould underſtand his Teaching, and alſo buſineſſes of laying out mony for the Family, and for the Releif of the Poor, for he bore the bag.

Ainſworth.

Let Death ceaſe upon them, and let them go down quick into Hell: Here the ſudden change of the Perſon is to be noted, he ſpake before of one, here, of them, as more, implying not only Achitophel, but myſtically Judas, who according to this Imprecation or imprecatory Propheſy, hanged themſelves, and ſo went as it were alive, that is, hail and well, and not infeebled by ſickneſs firſt, into Hell in moſt fearfull manner; and he alludeth in thus ſaying to Verſe 9. where he ſayd, Let Death ſwallow them, as Corah. Baſil will have Judas, and the Jews deſtroyed by the Romans, here put together, Auguſt. Hereticks, that break the unity of the Church, and becauſe that contrary to their Knowledge out of Pride, the principall amongſt them do it, they are ſayd to go down alive; becauſe ſeeing, as men alive, and not their Eys ſhut, as the dead mans, by ignorance, they yet chooſe to go in this dangerous way which leadeth to Death. Ver. 15. Baſil. Auguſt.

Morning and Evening and at Noon I will pray: For the Jews uſed to prayat theſe three times dayly, as we may ſee in Daniel, and Peter alſo went up to pray at the ſixt houre which was noon, according to the old Diviſion of their day into three parts, although ſince it was divided into twelve houres, ſo Ainſworth. And the morning and Evening Sacrifice, ſerved to put them in mind to pray privatly thoſe two times, and other Sacrifices offered between thoſe times, at noon, and theſe times, we had need, ſayth Calvin always tye our ſelves to, becauſe, if we keep no ſet times, we ſhall be ready to forget this our bounden Duty. And for morning and Evening indeed, it ſeemeth neceſſary any day, becauſe the dayly Sacrifice was then appointed to be offered, but becauſe there was none other Sacrificing, but upon Extraordinary occaſion, the Jews could not well make it a Ground for praying at noon alſo every day conſtantly, but when there is more urgent neceſſity, as David now had, and Daniel in Captivity, and Peter, the Church being in perſecution. Yet we muſt pray not only at noon alſo, but continually, taking all occaſions to pray unto God in any thing, that we go about, and to praiſe him. Ver. 17. Act 10. Ainſworth. Calvin. Exod. 29. 39. 1 Theſ. 5. 17

He hath redeemed my ſoul from the battell againſt me, for there were many with me, Hebr. For in many they were with me: But ſome not ſeeing how otherwiſe good Sence ſhould be made, have paſſed over the word ב In, as ſuperfluous, and ſo rendred it; many have been with me, as if it were meant of Gods Angels, as 2 K. 6. It is ſayd, more are with us then againſt us, Jerom applying it to Chriſt, ſayth, amongſt many beleivers there wer alſo unbeleivers with me, but God heard the Beleivers Bleſſing, & not the Unbeleivers Curſing, and he applyeth it alſo to the Chriſtian, in many they were with me, that is, Faith, Hope, and Charity, not in few Baptiſme, and fained Faith. Auguſt. underſtands it as ſpoken of Enemys to Chriſt, and the word Many, of many things; as if it were ſpoken of falſe Chriſtians, and Hereticks, ſaying, In theſe many things they were with me, in Baptiſme, keeping the Pasch. and the Feaſts of Martyrs, but in Schiſme and Hereſie they were not with me, they were with me as Chaff with Wheat, not as wheat with Wheat, they were with me in Knowledge, ſpeaking with Tongues, and caſting out Devills, but not in Love, which alone is more then all those without it, and faith alſo. Baſil alſo with Symmachus, underſtand theſe many to be Enemys, and if we ſo take it, the Sence will be good thus, he hath redeemed me from the danger of Death, by the War raised by Abſalom againſt me; for I could not, but be in great danger, seeing that he and his Captains came with exceeding many, and were with me dangerouſly fighting in the Wood, till that Ver. 18. Hieron. Auguſt. 1 Cor. 13. Baſil.

that GOD gave me the Victory, although I went not into Battell in perſon, but by the few men that cleaved unto me. And being thus taken, we may read it, For with many they were, with or neer me, to have deſtroyed me: And then this clauſe is added to magnify Gods mercy in delivering him, he being ſo few, & his enemys ſo many; for according to Cuſhai his Councel, Abſalom gathered all Iſrael together to this Expedition: for CHRIST, although he ſuffered Death, yet he was delivered, as it is ſayd, Heb. 5. 7: For he was heard in that he feared, Death being made no way dis-advantageous to his Kingdom, but advantageous, becauſe he that had the power
Heb. 2.15. of Death, the Devill was thus deſtroyed, and yet whole Legions of Devills were at hand to put on Judas to betray him, and to procure an whole band of men to go with him to apprehend Chriſt, and for this End a Reconciliation was made betwixt Herod and Pontius Pilate. And David doth in this ſame Pſalm, both pray and complain and praiſe God through the ſtrength of his faith, and by the Spirit foreſeeing how it ſhould be with him: As al-
Verſ. 19. ſo the next words intimated, God ſhall hear and afflict them: Where he ſpeaks of it, as yet to come; when he compiled this. Becauſe they have no changes, they fear not God: That is, Becauſe they are always in proſperity, and Wealthy, and ſuffer not by having their Wealth turned into poverty, their ſtrength into weakneſs, and proſperity into miſery, their Hearts are hardned in ſin, thus cauſeleſly to ſeek my Ruin againſt their Duty and Conſcience, if they had any in them.

Verſ. 20. He hath broken his Covenant: Here moſt probably he returneth to Achitophel again, who doubtleſſe had taken the Oath of Allegeance to his King David, but now perfidiouſly brake it, by taking part with Abſalom in his Rebellion, and it is to be thought, that being ſo intimate with David, he had particularly ſworn fidelity to him, as his cheif privy Councellor, for which he thus inveigheth againſt him, and then he goeth on further to ſhew, the Depth of Diſſimulation, that was in him, V. 21.

Verſ. 22. Calvin. Caſt thy burthen upon the Lord, and he ſhall ſuſtain thee: Hebrew for burthen is, יהב ſignifying to give, and it ſeemeth to be put for that, which thou needeſt and deſireſt to have given thee, and as Calvin ſayth, is no where put for a Burthen, and therefore he renders it, Dare tuum, 1. Quod petis eum tibi dare, which I cannot but greatly approve of, the Vulgar Latine and Cald. have it, Thy care, and according to this, 1 Pet. 5. 7. It is ſayd, Caſt all your care upon God: But there is no need here to go from the proper ſignification, only in more words we may read it thus, What thou deſireſt God to give thee, caſt upon him, ſo thou ſhalt be ſure not to periſh for want either of Food, Raiment, or help in danger. And it is a Doctrinal Precept given here by David, to every faithfull perſon, grounded upon his own Experience of Gods Goodneſs.

Verſ. 23 But thou ſhalt bring them down: That is, Such as band together againſt the Righteous, or rebell againſt their King: The wicked and blond thirſty man ſhall not live out halfe his days; Whereby he meaneth not the Days appointed by God for each man to live, but ſuch a number of days or years as he made account, that he ſhould live, or in the courſe of Nature he might have done. Ob: Some Tyrants live long Sol:. Commonly the Bloudy do not, and if any doth, his life is filled with ſuch fears within, that it is rather a Death then a life, as Cains life was:

PSAL. LVI.

TO the cheif Muſician upon Jonath, Elem-Rechochim, Michtam of David, when the Philiſtims took him in Gath. Jonath ſignifieth a Dove, Elem, Elem, dumb, Rechochim, a far off, Michtam, Golden, or pretious. Whereby is meant, that he was a Dove mourning in ſilence in a Country far remote from Jeruſalem, where the Temple ſtood, even in Gath, of the Philiſtims, in great danger, becauſe that fleeing thither to ſave himſelf from Saul, the Citizens of that place accuſed him to Achiſh the King, as their greateſt Enemy, and one in higheſt Eſteem in Iſrael, for ſlaying Goliah of Gath, ſo that to ſave himſelf, he feined madneſſe; and ſcrabled upon the Walls, and let the Spittle fall down upon his Beard. Touching this, ſee before Pſal. 34. And this alſo is by Jerom and Auguſt. applyed to CHRIST, as being ſet forth by the Dove for his innocency, and the Spirits diſcending upon him in the likeneſs of a Dove, he was alſo dumb as a ſheep before the Shearer, and A far off from Heaven, whence he came, being ſent of the Father, and was made of a Woman upon Earth. The word Elem, as Ainſworth noteth, ſignifieth alſo a Congregation, Pſalm. 58. 2. And then the CHURCH, as a Dove fleeing far off, for fear of devouring Kites, or amongſt them, that through infidelity and Wickedneſſe are far off from the Saints, ſuch as the Philiſtims were, although neer in Habitation, for which the Cald. hath it expreſly, Far off from the ſaints.

1 Sam. 21.

Iſa. 53. Gal. 4.

Be mercifull unto me (O God) for man would me devour, he fighting dayly, oppreſſeth me: By man here he underſtandeth not only one in particular; but all men, whereſoever he came, if he abode in the Land of Iſrael, Saul and his men ſought his Deſtruction, when fleeing thence he came to Gath of the Philiſtims, then he found himſelf in as great danger, by Reaſon of their conſpiring againſt him. The next word לחם rendred Fighting, ſignifieth alſo Bread, it being meant, that he ſought to devoure him like bread, all the day long; for ſo the Hebr. ſignifieth, that is, from day to day.

Verſ. 1.

In God I will praiſe his word: That is, for the Confidence, which I have in GOD for his good word and promiſe towards me: I will exult and praiſe him, although I be in the midſt of deadly dangers, and yet have nothing but his bare word to rely upon, to which Effect Calvin. A notable preſident for us to follow, if we can find, that his promiſes belong to us, to whatſoever dangers we are for the preſent Expoſed, and have long been, neither do we yet ſee, how we ſhould get out of them. For Heaven and Earth ſhall fail; but God will never fail to be true of his word, in any part thereof: I will not fear what fleſh can do unto me: See the ſame repeated, Verſe 10. 11. Where he is a little fuller, and for fleſh, hath man, who is here meant, being ſo called for his deſpicable weakneſſe, how great ſoever he be in this world.

Ver. 4.

Calvin. Note.

Jer. 31. 35.

They dayly wreſt my words againſt me: Calvin, my words greive or trouble me: That is, My Doings, Thoughts, and Speeches, irregularly breaking out, and further to my trouble. But forſomuch as David is here altogether in complaining of his Enemies, and their malice againſt him, and this hath been one thing complained of before, their wreſting of his words, and Pſalme 39. He profeſſeth to be moſt carefull, not to offend with his Tongue, and putteth Elem, Dumb, into the Title of this, implying as much, I cannot herein aſſent unto him, but rather following the New Tranſlation, and the Vulgar little differing, Verba mea execrabantur, I underſtand it as ſpoken of his wicked Enemies, ſeeking from his words, or words ſpoken of him, to put him to Trouble. For ſo it is ſayd, that the men of Achiſh ſayd, Is not this David of whom they ſang, ſaying, David hath ſlain his ten thouſand; For hereby he was made odious to the King and his People: And then their Hiding of themſelves, and marking his ſteps; Which follow here, may eaſily be conceived to have been done, to watch him, when he diſſembled madneſs, that they might find out, whether he were mad indeed or counterfeited. If any yet had rather follow Calvin, if he ſhall by words underſtand his behaviour, and phrantick ſpeeches, that then alſo moſt probably

Ver. 5.

Ver. 6.

bably came from him, for which he was grieved; I will not contend about it, but leave it to be indifferently underſtood either way.

Ver. 8. Thou telleſt my wandring. That is, Knoweſt as one that obſerveth it from time to time, and puts things upon Record; how that I am forced to flee from one place to another, and cannot have reſt or be in ſafety any where: Put my teares in thy Bottle, are they not in thy Regiſter? This is ſpoken after the manner of men, who put precious water that they eſteem of, in Bottels, carefully keeping it for their uſe, when need requires, and ſuffer it not no be ſpilt upon the ground, as a thing which they regard not: And his meaning is, That the Lord would have his Teares in remembrance, and ſo priſe them, as thereby to be moved in compaſſion without further delay, to deliver him from his grievous Sufferings, which were the cauſe thereof: And to the Metaphor of putting them into a Bottle, he addeth another of regiſtring them in a Book, implying a time to come when they ſhall be laid open, and he ſhould finde the greater favour; and this ought to be the comfort of every Faithfull perſon in the midſt of his miſeries, that although men regard not his great grief, yet God doth, and will not forget for Teares, to give joy, for diſquiet here, peace and reſt for ever hereafter.

Note.

Ver. 12. Thy vows are upon me (O God) I will render praiſes to thee. Here David by Faith looks upon his deliverance, as already come, and therefore addreſſeth himſelf to the paying of his Vows, and what were they but praiſes, as is here expreſſed; for Sacrifices he had ſhewed before, to be unacceptable in compariſon of theſe, Pſal. 50. and 51. And therefore here is no ground for Vows of ſuch things, if a thankful heart, which is the principall, be away; but vow and perform this above all, then other Vows which may lawfully be made, ſhall not be unacceptable.

Ver. 13. Note. For thou haſt delivered my Soule from death, for I will walk before God in the light of the living. Here he ſheweth the end of Gods delivering us, that we might in way of thankfulneſſe, live henceforth as in his preſence, as Children of the light and not of darkneſſe, as living by grace and not dead in ſin.

PSAL. LVII.

To him that excelleth Al-Taſhchith. That is, Deſtroy not; when David fled from Saul in the Cave. Of which 1 Sam 24. But then he uſed not theſe words, but in a like caſe, Saul being in his power, when he lay aſleep, and Abiſhai offered to kill him, 2 Sam. 26. 9. For then he ſpake theſe very words אל־תשחתו Slay him not: Yet Calvin will not have this the reaſon of incerting theſe words here, but either becauſe they were the beginning of ſome old Song, or David now fearing deſtruction, prayed thus unto God, Deſtroy me not: But his reaſon, Viz. Becauſe this Pſalme was compiled before Davids going into the Cave, his bidding not to deſtroy him when he was there, Saul coming in alſo unawares, is weak: For it is not ſaid before his fleeing, but when he fled thither; that is, When by Sauls coming ſo neer him, he was in danger, but God wrought ſo for him, that he had Saul now in his power; wherefore although theſe words be not now uſed, but in a like caſe. 1 Sam. 26. 9. It is moſt probable, that in giving this Title to the Pſalme, he had reference to that which he then ſaid, as being indeed a moſt memorable thing, that being ſo greatly provoked, he yet contained himſelf and others from taking revenge upon Saul, leaving vengance to God, to whom it belongeth, and ſeeking ſtill by prayer to be ſheltered from ſuch unjuſt and malicious attemps of his enemies: And that this might be made the more memorable rable, he prefixeth the ſame words before, Pſalme. 58. and Pſalme 59. alſo.

In this Pſalme, Firſt is a prayer, and the Faith of him that prayeth expreſſed, Verſe 1, 2, 3.

Secondly, A complaint, that his Enemies were like Lions, having teeth like Spears, and Arrows, and Tongues like ſharp Swords, ſo Pſalme 55. 22. Pſalme 59. 8. Prov. 30. 14. But how terrible ſoever they were, he ſheweth that GOD is above them, and the whole World, not only Earth, but Heaven that is ſo high. Verſ. 4.

Be exalted (O God) above the Heavens, and thy glory above all the Earth. With which ſame words he alſo concludeth, Verſe 11. After the manner of a Song, and herein he alſo ſtirreth God to provide, by timely curbing the wicked for his glory, which would otherwiſe be obſcured, if they be ſuffered to go on in their malicious practiſes againſt his Servants. Verſ. 5.

Thirdly, He amplyfieth his complaint, in that his Enemies did not only by open force come againſt him, but alſo laid Snares, and digged Pits to take him in, which was by ſetting them awork to diſcover him, neer unto whom he came at any time, in ſeeking to hide himſelf from Saul; but they fell into the ſame Pits themſelves, whereby he meaneth, Sauls coming within his power, when he thus ſought after him. Verſ. 6.

Fourthly, He ſtirreth up himſelf, now that he was ſo wonderfully preſerved, by voice and muſicall Inſtruments to praiſe God, ſetting forth his Tongue, wherewith, by this word, Glory: And ſhewing the Fountain of all this praiſe to be, his heart ſincerely affected to God for his great goodneſſe. And indeed it is vain and unacceptable, with the moſt curious melody to praiſe God, if it cometh not from the heart; wherefore it is commanded, Be fulfilled with the ſpirit, ſinging to your ſelves in Hyms, &c. Singing and making melody in your hearts. Ver. 7. 8. Epeſ. 5. 19.

Laſtly, he ſaith, That he will praiſe God not only amongſt the Jews, but alſo amongſt the Gentiles, whereby their vocation to the Faith of Chriſt is intimated, as it is applyed, Rom: 15. 9. The words there alledged, being indeed moſt properly thoſe of Pſal. 18. 49. But theſe are to the ſame effect: And herein David repreſented Chriſt, by whom this was fulfilled, for it is not, as Calvin noteth, to be conceived, that he would praiſe God amongſt the Nations, they not regarding it, as a man may do it amongſt Stocks and Stones, but in ſaying ſo, that when by Chriſt, order ſhould be taken to make his excellency known amongſt the Gentiles, they ſhould come in and praiſe him alſo. Ver. 9. Calvin.

PSAL. LVIII.

THE Title of this Pſalme, is the ſame with the former, and it ſeemeth to have been made upon the ſame occaſion, it being now manifeſt by Davids ſparing of Saul, when he had him in his power, that there was no juſt cauſe in him, why he ſhould in that hoſtile manner purſue him, as a Competitor of the Kingdome, and one who if he were ſuffered, would prove dangerous to Saul, by ſeeking to take away his life, that he might come to Raign in his ſtead. It was therefore made, either when he had ſuffered Saul to depart ſafely out of the Cave, or having him at another advantage, 1 Sam. 26: 9. He ſpared his life again, for he had now made it to appeare manifeſtly, that he did not beare any treacherous minde againſt him, and therefore he taxeth Sauls Councellors as unrighteous, who ſtill judged him a dangerous man, and put Saul on againſt him, ſaying, Do yee ſpeak righteouſly, O Congregation, do yee judge uprightly, yee Sons of men? For by Congregation here, he meaneth the Aſſembly of Ver. 1.

his Councellors, whom he alſo calleth, Sons of men. That is, Too baſe for their perverſe judging, to be in ſo honourable a place, for by theſe words בני אדם are commonly ſet forth the baſer ſort, as by בני-איש, the more notable; unleſſe it ſhall be thought as Calvin hath it, that in the firſt words, he ſpeaketh to his Councellors, in the next to the common people, who were all likewiſe through the Suggeſtions of the Court alienated in their Affections from him, and cruely bent againſt him, as appears by the Speech of Nabal, Chapt. 25. And of the Ziphims, and the men of Keilah, who were all againſt him.

Calvin.

Ver. 2. Yea, yee work wickedneſs, in heart yee weigh the violence of your hands in the Earth: or more according to the Hebrew, In heart yee work wickedneſs in the Earth, yee weigh violence with your hands. Vulgar Latine, Manus veſtræ concinnant iniquitatem: But the word properly ſignifieth to weigh as in ſcales, and he meaneth, That when in conſulting againſt him, they in their perverſe Judgments had waighed him, as in a ballance, but in Juſtice and Malice waighed down his innocency, then they fell to practiſing againſt him accordingly, ſeconding with their Hands ready armed againſt him, what in their Judgments they reſolved upon, although moſt injurious.

Ver. 3. The Wicked are eſtranged from the Womb: Here he extends his cenſure againſt his wicked Enemys further, ſhewing, that they were not now firſt Eſtranged from Righteouſneſs to go in ſinfull ways, but that they were lyers and Enemys to the Truth, not regarding to walk according to the Rule thereof, never ſince they were born, which greatly aggravates a mans ſins, and ſheweth him to be incorrigible, and therefore uncapable of Mercy: For ſuch a kind of living makes even Iſraelites ſtrangers, and no Heirs, as Heathens called ſo, Epheſ. 2. 12. We are all indeed by Nature ſinfull, and inclined to Evill from the Womb, but God ſanctifieth ſome betimes by his Grace, and ſome by the Light of nature ſhew the Law written in their hearts by doing the things of the Law, yet others there are, that not regarding the Light of Nature or Conſcience of right or wrong, truth or falſhood, apply their minds in youth to all manner of Wickedneſs, and ſo go on when they are come to mans Eſtate, and then wax worſe and worſe, and ſuch were the Wicked here complained of.

Note: Rom. 2. 15.

Ver. 4. 5. Their poiſon is like the poiſon of a Serpent; they are like the deaf Addar: Here their Wickedneſs is further aggravated by their malicious Speeches againſt David, which are compared to poiſon, and the poiſon of Serpents which is moſt deadly, and by this their Serpentine Nature, is ſhewed yet to be worſe, becauſe no inſtruction or Admonition would prevail with them to make them ceaſe from ſpitting out their poiſon againſt the Innocent; as no incantation will work upon the Adder, although it doth upon other Serpents, by reaſon of this that he heareth it not. For as Jerom, Auguſt. and Caſſidor, write, the Addar, or Aſpe layeth againſt incantation, one Ear cloſe to the Ground, and covereth the other by turning his Tail upon it, and ſo heareth it not, to be drawn out of his Dark hole into the Light. Even ſo the Wicked turn their Ears away from hearing Inſtruction, and ſo continue incorrigible againſt all teaching in their malice. But againſt them that do ſo, ſee what curſes follow, Verſe 6. 7. 8. 9. Of the poiſon of theſe Serpents, Pliny writeth, that it is ſo deadly, that there is no healing of the part ſtung, but by cutting it off; and to poiſon are the practiſes of the Wicked compared, Deut. 32. 33. Touching incantations or Charms; ſome think, that there be none of any force, but it is manifeſt from hence, that there are, and becauſe the Law of God is againſt them, and Pharaoh had his Inchanters, and Joſephus writeth of ſuch, as by Charms did ſtrange things; But all Chriſtians ought to abhor from them, as inventions of the Devill, and therefore bringing ſuch as uſe them under his power as his Diſciples.

Junius.

Pliny l. 8.

Break

Break their teeth (O God) the great teeth of the young Lions, Pſalme 57. 4. Lions and Teeth, as Spears are complained of; therefore the Prophet alluding to what he had ſayd there, now prayeth, that ſuch Teeth might be broken out, whereby it appears, that this Pſalme was alſo made upon the ſame Occaſion. And he ſpeaketh moſt aptly of Teeth next unto poiſon, becauſe their poiſonous Tongues were meant, unto which the Teeth are moſt neer: for of the poiſon of Aſpes under their Tongues, we read. Rom. 3. 13. But the tongues of ſuch ſhall be cut out, Pſalm. 15. 3. And their teeth, wherewith they bite, as it were, when by the ſpitefull words which come out of their mouthes, they tear the good name of the Righteous; according to which Metaphor of Biting, and Gnawing upon the good name, Auguſt. had a notable Diſtick written upon his Table. Ver. 6.

Who ſo doth love the Abſents fame to gnaw,
That to him this bourd forbidden is ſhall know.

Auguſt. Quiſquis amat dictis abſentum rodere famam hanc menſam vetitam noverit eſſe ſibi.

When he bendeth his Bow, let them be as cut in peices: Calvin, Let them extend their Bow, as if they ſhould break themſelves: Here he goeth again upon another ſimilitude uſed, Pſalm. 57. 5. Of Arrows ſhot out of a Bow, but he layeth his Curſe upon them for their malicious words like Arrows, that they ſhall turn to the peircing of themſelves, when it ſhall come to them accordingly. Here other ſimilitudes are further added, Of a Snail, and an abortive Birth, meaning, that even ſo they ſhall vaniſh in their miſcheivous imaginations againſt him, as elſewhere, They conceive vanity, and bring forth the Wind. Ver. 7. Ver. 8.

Before your Pots can feel the thorns, he ſhall take them away as with a Whirlwind, both living and in his wrath: Calvin, he ſhall diſperce him as a whirlwind, as a raw thing: Hebr. as living, as one againſt whom his wrath is ſtirred, he ſhall fill him with horrour: It implyeth ſudden Deſtruction, for a fire of thorns flameth moſt ſpeedily of any other, and therefore in ſaying, before pots feel the thorns, he meaneth the moſt ſpeedy comming of vengeance that may be; As living: that is, having life in him moſt vigorous, and no declining hereof being by ſickneſs, as by a Judgment compacted of wrath and greateſt fury, the Lord ſhall horribly deſtroy and take him away, that is, Each one of my malicious perſecutors, Whereas the word סירות ſignifieth Thorns or Pricks, as well as Pots, and therefore is ſo rendred by the Sept. before your pricks grow into a greater Bramble: that is, their ſtrength grow greater: And the word חי ſignifieth Raw, as well as living, 1 Sam. 2. 15. For which Calvin renders it ſo, let every one chooſe whether Tranſlation he pleaſeth, but for my part I reſt in the Sence already given. Ver. 9.

The Righteous ſhall rejoyce when he ſeeth the vengeance, he ſhall waſh his feet in the bloud, &c. See the like Phraſe, Pſalm 68. 14. He meaneth, That the Wicked ſhall be ſlain in ſo great abundance, that their bloud ſhall make a great Pond or River, wherein men may waſh themſelves. See alſo, Iſa 63. 3. Revel. 14. 20. So that the Wicked in combining together againſt the Righteous, are but as bunches of Grapes gathered together into a winepreſs, there to be trodden till that all their Bloud run out, which makes the Treaders ſhout for Joy; but the Wicked that are thus trodden, are finally moſt miſerable, that all the Faithfull may comfort themſelves herein, againſt the forces of Wicked Perſecutors, and thay may be terrified, as herein foreſeeing their moſt miſerable End. Ver. 10. Note.

PSAL. LIX.

HERE is alſo the ſame Title with Pſalme 57. But it was compiled upon another occaſion, Viz. Saul his ſending to watch the Houſe to kill David: 1 Sam. 19.

David: But theſe words Al-taſhchith, Deſtroy not, Agree well to this occaſion alſo, if we apply them, as ſpoken to God, as praying him to preſerve him from Deſtruction, of which he was then in ſo great Danger.

Verſ. 3. Not for my ſin: This he ſayth, not as if he were without ſin, but to *Saul*ward, as God, to whom he Appealed, well knew it to be ſo:

Verſ. 4. Awake to help me, and behold: This is ſpoken according to man, and not that God ſleepeth at any time, but only he ſeemeth to ſleep in the ſtraights, to which his faithfull Servants are put, and to awake them when he delivereth them. Theſe words to help me, are לקראתי Generally rendred, To meet me with ſpeed, In occurſum, but the word קרא ſignifieth to call, and therefore it may be rendred, At my calling, which I rather preſer, becauſe he was praying, and hereby ſought to ſtir up God to ſee and conſider his dangerous caſe:

Verſ. 5. Awake to viſit all the Heathen: That is, my Enemies, who although they be Iſraelites, yet they are in their malicious practiſes againſt me as Heathens, void of all Fear of God, and cruelly bent to deſtroy me, as they the Church and People of God: Calvin coming at the Laſt to this, yet at the firſt expounds it as propheticall touching the Judgments to be Executed upon the Heathen, and therefore his own People being in their doings like the Heathen, muſt much more Expect moſt ſevere judgments: But I reſt in the former; Baſil and other ancients, taking this Pſalme not only to concern Davids preſent caſe, but his Son CHRIST JESUS, as being a Propheſy of him, apply that, V. 3. Not for my ſin, to CHRIST who was without ſin, and by viſiting the Heathen, underſtand viſiting them in mercy by calling them to the Faith; but the next words, Be not mercifull to all them that tranſgreſſe wickedly, To the malicious Jews, who he foreſaw, ſhould ſpitefully murther the LORD, Vulgar Latine, To the workers of iniquity: Hebrew, Tranſgreſſors of iniquity: as if he ſhould ſay: Compacted of Wickedneſſe, their Thoughts, Speeches, and Deeds, being wicked in the higheſt Degree, who have Evill Hearts, and ſell themſelves to do Evill, as it is ſayd of Ahaz that he did. But the Enemies of David, that were ſet awork by Saul, for hire to watch to kill him, were moſt palpable Workers of Iniquity, for it was for wages that they went about it, as a Workman about his Work. And this argued them or any others, that do likewiſe, to be Reprobats, to whom no mercy ſhal be ſhewed at the laſt day, as Matth: 7. 21. and Luk. 13. 27. And ſuch David knew by the Spirit theſe to be, for which he thus curſeth them, and not being Tranſported by Wrath or Envy, as men commonly are in their Imprecations. If it be applyed to them that wrought CHRISTS death, then they, whom the Devill, and their own malicious Hearts ſet a work (as Judas and the Jews) to miſcheif the Innocent, are the workers of iniquity, that ſhall have no mercy. For the word Viſit, that it may be underſtood in Mercy as well as in judgment, Command. 2. See Pſalm. 8. 3. and Luk. 1. 68.

Verſ. 6. They return in the evening, and make a noiſe like a Dog. That is, ſayth Baſil, Thoſe wicked Jews who crucified CHRIST, being long as ſtarved Dogs through want of the Word, return in the Evening of the world by Repentance; or rather thoſe Jews are here meant, that were ſet to watch CHRISTS Sepulcher, and being terrified by a viſion of Angells, came haſtily away for fear, going about the City to tell with Lamentation what they had ſeen; which to ſet forth, he takes a ſimilitude from Dogs, who being hungry run about in the night whining and howling: So theſe by means of that terrible Viſion, ſcared away from doing that which they were ſet unto, and ſo looſing their Prey, made a greivous noiſe and murmured for want of the Satisfaction which they expected, which is more expreſſe, Verſe 15. And grudge if they be not ſatisfied: Thus in applying it to CHRISTS Enemies, now for Davids, they that were ſet to watch and take him, when they had waited all night, but ſaw in the End, that they were were deluded by an Image layd in the Bed in ſtead of David; they doubtleſs uttered their diſcontent againſt Michal, his Wife, that did it; and that not without a noiſe going about the City, and to Saul, and telling, how they were ſerved. And they are rightly called Dogs and no men, becauſe they are qualityed like Dogs, that worry Gods ſheep, That is, His Good and Harmleſs Servants, not ſuffering them to reſt in quiet in any place; but perſecuting and ſeeking their deſtruction. Note.

After their making a noiſe like a Dog by barking, he now ſayth, that they belch out with their mouthes, otherwiſe ſetting forth the ſame. For their lips being as Swords: See, Pſalm. 57. 5. Ver. 7.

Thou ſhalt laugh at all the Gentiles: That is, ſeeing how weak they are, that indeavour my Deſtruction, and unable to effect any thing, thou ſhalt not need to put out thy ſtrength againſt them, but thy very deriding of them, will be enough to confound them all, if there were whole Nations of them. Of the Gentiles ſpoken of in this Sence, See before, Verſe 5. And if we apply it to Heathens properly ſo called, as Jerom applyeth it, then thoſe of them are meant, that continued in unbeleif, when others imbraced the Faith of CHRIST: Of deriding ſuch; ſee alſo, Pſalme 2. 4. Ver. 8. Hieron.

Becauſe of his ſtrength, I will wait upon thee: Vulg. I will keep my ſtrength to thee, Hebr. His ſtrength to thee, or in thee I will keep: Calvin, I will keep his ſtrength to thee: Yet in the Expoſition whereupon he reſteth, he followes the Hebrew, reſolving it thus, His ſtrength, that is, Sauls, is all in thee, otherwiſe he could do nothing againſt me; therefore I will allways keep me to thee, ſo ſhall he not be able to do me any hurt: Or rather I would underſtand the laſtword thus, I will keep this fixt in my mind, and ſo not fear him, or his Emiſſaries, For thou art my Defence; the obſcurity of the place hath bread divers other Expoſitions, but I will not trouble the Reader with reciting them, for this alone ſatisfieth. Ver. 9. Calvin.

The God of my mercy ſhall prevent me: That is, God of whoſe mercy I have had many Experiments, will, I beleive, afford me timely help in ſaving me from mine Enemies now alſo, Hebrew it is, His Mercy: And the Vulgar Latine, hath it, My God, his mercy ſhall prevent me: Hereby Gods ſpeedy helping of his, even before they call, being denoted, as Baſil hath it, and the word is, אלהי My God, Whereas Calvin to juſtifie this Reading, Of my Mercy. ſayth, that ו with a Prick above it, ſignifieth, My, the contrary is manifeſt, for it always ſignifieth His or Him, and it is a prick beneath, which hath the force of י or My, and if we read it, His mercy, the Sence will be good, being taken as ſpoken to all that hear it for their incouragement to beleive in him, Verſe 18. The ſame thing is ſayd again, The God of my Mercy, but their it is, חסדה for ו before. Ver. 10. Baſil.

Slay them not, leaſt my people forget, bring them down: Here a great fault is intimated even in the better ſort, Viz. To forget deliverances wrought for them by the Deſtruction of their Enemies, wherefore he deſires rather their diſſipation, and raſting by degrees, till at length they come to nothing, for ſo the word נועמ ſignifieth, ſhake them too and fro, as meal in a Seive, by ſcattering them hither and thither, as it is threatned againſt the Enemies of Gods people, that they ſhall come out againſt them one way, and flee 7. ways before them, and the word rendred Them is Him, it being meant, Each one of them, none Eſcaping. It is the ſame in Effect with, Pſalme 58. 7. 8. and Verſe 13. Here following, Conſume them in Wrath. The ſame is again repeated, which was ſayd before, Verſe 6. But in more words; but there Indicatively, here Optatively, as an Amplification of the curſe layd upon them. Ver. 11. Note. Deut. 28. Ver. 14. 15.

The God of my mercy, That is, my mercifull God, and not as ſome would have it; a God gracious to me, for the mercy in me. Ver. 18.

PSAL.

PSAL. LX.

UPon Shuſhan-Eduth, Michtam of David, when he ſtrove with Aram Naharaim, and with Aram Zobah, when Joab returned, and ſmote of Edom in the valey of Salt twelve thouſand men: For the word Shuſhan, it cometh of the ſame, Radix, with Shoſhannim, Pſalme 45. ſignifying Lillyes or ſix, as is there ſhewed, it was moſt probably an inſtrument of ſix ſtrings, and Eduth, further added here, ſignifieth Teſtimony, becauſe haply as Ainſworth, conjectureth, it was to be played before the Ark of the Teſtimony: Of Davids ſtriving with Aram Naharaim, and Aram Zobah, we read not any where, but only of Davids ſmiting Hadadezer, King of Zobah, at the River Euphrates, 2 Sam. 8. 3. And of the Syrians of Damaſcus, who came to ſuccor him, 22000. men, and Verſe 13. He ſmote of the Syrians in the valley of Salt eighteen thouſand men: And 1 Chron. 18. 12. Abiſhai, a Captain of Davids, ſlew of the Edomites in the valley of Salt, eighteen thouſand men, But for the places it is to be underſtood, that Syria is a very large Country, containing not only Syria of Damaſcus, the Metropolis whereof was Damaſcus, which was neer to Judea, but alſo Aram, or Syria Naharaim, ſignifying Rivers, one of which Euphrates is mentioned, unto which the Borders thereof lay, for which Zobah ſtrove, and the other was Tigris, the Country lying between which was otherwiſe called Meſopotamia, and becauſe of Zobah the King then Reigning, Aram Zobah. The whole Country had the name from Aram, the Son of Shem. Gen, 10. 22. And of Meſopotamia in Syria, ſee Gen. 24. 10.

Calvin. Junius. Ainſworth. T. W.

Touching the Difference in the number ſlain, there 18000. here, 12000 Both Calvin, Junius, and Ainſworth, conſent, that here 12000. only are ſpoken of as ſlain by Joab, one of Davids Captains, and his Generall, becauſe the other ſix thouſand were ſlain by Abiſhai. But 1 Chron. 18. 13. Abiſhai is ſayd to have ſlain 18000 of Edom. And neither there, nor 2 Sam. 8. is Joab ſpoken of at all, but David, who ſlew of the Syrians, 22000. and of the Edomites, 18000. For they conceive thoſe 18000. to be the ſame ſpoken of, 1 Chron. 18. 12. But indeed they are alſo ſayd to be Syrians, and not the ſame, whom Abiſhai ſlew, being as they conceive, ſayd to be ſlain by David, becauſe by his men. But although other Expoſitors are content to accept of this as a Reſolution of the differences here and there, and to follow one another, yet I muſt needs confeſs, that I am not herein ſatisfied: For this ſeemeth rather to me to be a commemoration of what was done in the Expeditions of David againſt both the Arams, that of Abiſhai againſt Edom, being omitted, and another not before mentioned of Joab againſt Edom recorded, in which there were 12000. ſlain of Edom, in the ſame place, where Abiſhai had ſlain 18000. before, which moſt probably was after thoſe victories mentioned, 2 Sam. 8. When Joab went out againſt Ammon, and the Syrians who holpe the Ammonites, and a greater ſlaughter of them was made then before, 2 Sam 10. For then it likely, that the Edomites, who had been before ſmitten as well as the Syrians, joyned again with them againſt David, and ſo 40000. more of the Syrians being deſtroyed, and the Edomites Eſcaping home by flight were by Joab ſmitten unto 12000. in his Return, that they might continue more ſubject, and not be ſo bold as to rebell any more: For their joyning before with the Syrians in battel againſt David, is paſſed over in ſilence, & only implyed in that ſo many of them were then ſmitten alſo, & the like may wel be conceived to have been done by them again, and then a new ſlaughter of them to have been made, though nothing were before ſaid of it, til that David in way of thankfullneſs, having commemorated the other great ſlaughters in Generall, and not ſetting down the ſums of the Enemies ſlain in particular, as being a thing ſufficiently done before, comes in this Title to ſet it down. For as Abiſhai his ſlaying of 18000. Edomites, 1

Chron.

Chron. 18. was not the ſame with Davids ſlaying of eighteen thouſand, 2 Sam. 8 is apparent, becauſe thoſe were Syrians, theſe Edomites, and the Bookes of Chronicles were written to ſupply things wanting in Samuel and Kings, and not only to relate the ſame over again. And therefore the ſum here mentioned, relates not to that in Sam. nor in Chron. for another reaſon before given, Viz. The aſcribing of that number wholly to Abiſhai, and not to Joab, who is not there once ſpoken of, and how inconſiſtent with truth is it, when the ſacred ſtory ſayth, Abiſhai ſlew eighteen thouſand, to deduct the greateſt number, twelve thouſand, and to ſay, that indeed, Joab ſlew twelve thouſand of them, and Abiſhai only, ſix thouſand.

In praiſing God for theſe great victories, Firſt, To extol them the more, he ſheweth, how ill it had been with the people of Iſrael in times paſt, Verſe 1, 2, 3. Then he falls to ſpeaking of their preſent glorious condition, Verſe 4. 5. Thirdly, Of Gods inlarging his dominion, that if any in Iſrael yet reſted not ſatisfied in having him for their King, they might hereby be moved to have higher thoughts of him, and acknowledge the great bleſſing of God upon them, in ſetting him over them, by whom they and their ſtate was thus highly advanced.

Thou haſt caſt us off and ſcattered us: That is, In times paſt under Judges, and in the time of Saul, when the Philiſtims and other nations about, prevailed over them. For then the whole Land trembled, and great breaches were made therein; that is, the people of the Land. Then GOD ſhewed his people hard things, and made them drink the wine of aſtoniſhment: By Greivous oppreſſions, under which they lay, ſometime by Moabites, Ammonites, Midianites, Philiſtims, &c. Verſ. 1. Verſ. 2. Verſ. 3.

By the diſplaying of banners, he meaneth, In token of victory, as it is uſuall, when a City is wone, for the Victorers to erect their banners upon the walls thereof. Verſ. 4.

God hath ſpoken in his holineſſe: That is, by Samuell he hath promiſed, as he is an holy God, and true of his word, that I ſhould be King of all Iſrael, and now he hath performed it, 2 Sam. 5. yet Calvin ſpeakes of it, as not yet performed; but the courſe of the hiſtory makes it plain, that David was now King over the parts, of which he here ſpeaketh. I will divide Schechem as ſubject to me. As Joſhua having the Land under him, divided it amongſt his people, ſo David being King over all the parts of the Land, divides to his followers ſuch portions in all places, as belonged unto them by inheritance, from which happily ſome of them had been expelled in the time of Iſhboſheth his raign; or ſome families in the time of thoſe Wars might be utterly waſted away, and ſo the King having free power to diſpoſe of their Lands, might give them amongſt his men, and take part to himſelfe. For Schechem, it lay in the tribe of Ephraim near Samaria, Succoth on the other ſide of Jordan, Joh. 13. 27. Of Giliad, and Manaſſeth lying beyond Jordan, ſee 2 Sam. 2. 8. 9. how they took part with Iſhboſheth againſt David, for which he ſpecially mentioneth them, and then Ephraim as the mightieſt Tribe, called therefore, now that it was ſubject to him, The ſtrength of his head, or his head and cheife ſtrength, Deut. 33. 17. and he calleth Judah his Law giver, in reference to that of Jacob, A Law-Giver ſhall not depart from Judah. Verſ. 6. Gen. 49. 10.

Moab is my Waſhpot: That is, So ſubjected by me, that they ſhall be put to moſt baſe ſervices, and the like he meaneth by caſting his ſhoo over Edom, the treading of the Edomites under foot: Of the ſubduing of both which people, ſee 2 Sam. 8. by Waſhpot he meaneth, a pot or Veſſel to waſh his feet in, Paleſtina, ſhout thou over me: an ironicall deriſion of the Philiſtims, who thought to prevail and get the victory over him: coming upon him with ſhouting two or three times, but they were deſtroyed before him, 2 Sam. 5. 17. for to this he ſeemeth here to allude. Verſ. 8.

Who will lead me into the ſtrong City: Into Edom, the word rendred Verſ. 9.

Strong City, is any ſtrong place, whereby the ſtrong places of his Enemies are meant, and ſpecially of Edom, moſt ſtrong becauſe Mountanous, but he ſpeaks here, ſhewing how before the ſubduing of them he prayed, as being very difficult, but he reſolves that God alone did it, Verſe 10, 11. and therefore prayeth to him.

Verſ. 10. 11. 12.

PSAL. LXI.

UPon Neginnoth; that is, a ſtringed Inſtrument, as hath been ſhewed, Pſal. 4.

Verſ. 2. Calvin. From the end of the Earth I will call upon thee. It is moſt probable by the Contents of this Pſalme, that it was made by David, when he fled for feare of Abſalom, and was by this meanes kept from coming to the Tabernacle; therefore he ſaith, that he called from the end of the Earth or Land. That, is, From a far off: Baſil. Baſill, who underſtands Pſalme 60. as prophetical, touching the miſeries of the people of Iſraell in their Babyloniſh captivity although now after ſo great Victories by him attained, they had an happy time, makes the beginning of this to cohere with the latter end of that, as a continued prayer of thoſe Exiles; in intimating which it is ſaid, From the end of the Earth, becauſe Babylon was ſo far off from Jeruſalem: Hieron. Jerom will have it to be the voice of the Church, crying to Chriſt by prayer from all parts of the Earth, when as the Goſpell being propagated every where, Beleivers prayed, which is indeed the language of Faith; as is noted out unto us, where the Apoſtle ſaith, We have received the ſpirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father. Rom. 8. 15. Lead me to the Rock that is higher then I. That is, To thy ſelfe (O CHRIST) Of whom it is ſaid, The Rock was Chriſt: 1 Cor. 10. And upon this Rock I will build my Church. Matth. 16. 16. And this way of Expoſition is very pious, if we firſt underſtand it literally, of David praying in his exile, as one overwhelmed in his heart with cares and perplexities, and making God his Rock to flee unto; where a man being ſet, is higher and ſafer then the greateſt Monarch, which he meaneth by ſaying, Higher then I: For when God takes one to his protection, he is upon a Rock as it were, ſo high that no danger can reach unto him: Then myſtically let it be taken as the voice of the faithfull Soule, deſiring to make Chriſt her Rock, by being firmly founded upon him by faith: and then we are hereby taught, wherein all our ſafety lyeth againſt the Devil and our ſinnes, and not to Note. 1 Cor. 3. 11. build upon any other Foundation, but to place all our confidence for ſalvation upon him alone.

Verſ. 5. For thou (O God) haſt heard my Vowes, and given me the heritage of them that feare thy name. Having declared his confidence to be reſtored again to the Tabernacle, as he deſired, to continue and dwell there, Verſe 4. and not to be driven from thence any more; in this Verſe he ſheweth his ground, Thou O God haſt heard my Vowes: That is, My prayers wherein I have bound my ſelfe, if they be heard to be ſo devoted to Gods worſhip, that I will alwayes be a diligent Reſorter to thy Tabernacle, and I ſhall account it my chiefe heritage ſo to do, as do all that feare thee; for he that makes account of the liberty of coming at all times in duties of Piety before God, as of a goodly heritage, hath God and his future reward in Heaven, for his Inheritance for ever: wherefore he addeth, Thou wilt prolong the Kings life, and he ſhall abide before thee for ever: Thou ſhalt add dayes upon dayes of the King, Generation and Generation. Verſ: 6 Verſ: 7. Hebrew, Calvin ſaith, That this is not meant of the perſon of David, but of his Kingdome, continuing in his royall Iſſue, becauſe he lived not many Generations, but one, but his Kingdome ſtood long, and being again renewed in Chriſt for ever: But underſtanding it of any that feare God, and the Heritage before ſpoken of, called their heritage, it agreeth very well, if it be taken as meant of everlaſting life, peculiarly here applyed to the King, but generally belonging to all ſuch as he was, although of the meaneſt rank, ſee Iam. 2. 5.

ſpoken

Let mercy and truth preſerve him, ſo will I praiſe thee, and daily pay my vowes. Verſ. 8.

Here he concludeth praying for himſelfe againe, and promiſing to pay the vowes, which he ſaid, Verſ. 5. God had heard, and hereby the Expoſition made thereupon is juſtified.

PSAL. LXII.

To him that excelleth, to Ieduthun. Heb. Over Iedvthun; that is, as Ainſworth hath it, Over his family of Singers, ſee Pſal. 39.

Truly my ſoule waiteth upon God. Vulg. Is not my ſoule ſubject unto God. Hebr. Truly, only, or but unto God my ſoule is ſilent: of all which it is beſt to read it truly; although my ſufferings be great, yet I murmure not againſt God, as the Iſraelites often did of old, but ſilently beare them, expecting till God will be pleaſed to deliver me. See the like, Iſa. 30. 9. Zeph. 1. 7. It ſeemeth that David compiled this upon the ſame occaſion that he did the former, to ſhew how patiently he bore through faith, the intollerable rebellion of his ſonne, and people joyning with him againſt him. Verſ. 1.

How long will ye imagine miſchiefe againſt a man, ye ſhall all of you be ſlain. Here David ſeeks to terrifie thoſe Rebels, by laying before their eys the dangerous caſe in which they were, being like unto a decaying wall ready to fall, yea weaker then ſuch a wall; like a rotten hedg, which is the weakeſt Fence of all others, if a man do but tread upon it, it is preſently broken, and by the leaſt ſhaking the wall that is bowing, falleth down. And ſo indeed they proved; for they with Abſolom, being great multitudes, fell upon the ſudden, by the aſſault of Davids few men, and the arch Rebel found them but as a broken hedg about him, altogether unable to fence Joab from ſlaying him. Verſ. 3.

Note, that upon ſuch as meditate miſchiefe againſt others, the evill which they machinate, ſhall by Gods juſt judgement come upon themſelves, and they ſhall be deſtroyed. Note.

They only conſult to caſt him downe from his excellency. Calv. But of his Elenation they conſult to inforce. Hebr. Only from his excellency they conſult to force, or by force to remove. Meaning, that theſe Rebels took counſell, and banded together againſt David to put him downe from his Kingly dignity, and to ſet Abſolom up: and to make way hereunto, They bleſſed with their mouths; that is, ſpake all men faire, to draw them to their ſide, for this was Abſoloms cunning: But they curſed in their hearts, having contrary thoughts therein of rebellion againſt the King. Verſ. 4. Pſal. 4. 3. Heb. inward parts.

David ſtirs up himſelfe to goe on in waiting upon God, ſhewing to this end that he was a Rocke, Salvation, Strength, and Refuge. And then he exhorteth all men to pray unto him, and ſo to truſt in him alſo, ſhewing, that men whether high or low, are not to be truſted in, as being but vanity. Neither are riches to be truſted in, which are by wicked worldlings gotten by robbery and oppreſſion. Verſ. 5,6,7. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9. Verſ. 10.

God hath ſpoken once, twice have I heard it, that power belongs unto God. This is added for further confirmation, that although men and riches be vanity to ſave in time of danger, yet God is a ſure defence, as hath been ſaid; For all power is in him, and mercy to ſet his power awork for the preſervation of his faithfull people. Whereas he ſaith once, and then twice, ſome ſay it is meant in the Law and Prophets; but the plaine meaning is, ſo often hath this beene teſtified, that it were groſſe infidelity to doubt thereof. Verſ. 11. Job 33. 14.

And hereby we learn, that any truth of God is in his word atteſted more then once, as amongſt men it is ſaid, By the teſtimony of two or three Note.

Witneſſes every word ſhall ſtand, that we be not deceived by ſuch as would from ſome one ſingle place, draw us to receive for truth their own invention.

Matth, 18.16.

Baſil. Baſil expounds this Pſalm of the Jewes under grievous ſufferings in the dayes of Antiochus Epiphanes: But it may not only be applyed unto them, but to Gods people at all times, being perſecuted, as a common place of exceeding comfort.

PSAL. LXIII.

A Pſalme of David when he was in the Wilderneſſe of Iudah: Of which ſee 1 Sam. 22. 5. where hee is ſaid to have been warned by the Prophet Gad, to goe into the land of Iudah, and hereupon he went from the cave of Adullam, and came to the Forreſt of Hareth. And this was when Saul perſecuted him, and was ſo full of wrath againſt him, that hearing of ſome reliefe given him by Ahimelech the high Prieſt, he raged both againſt him and Verſ. 1. many more, moſt cruelly ſlaying them. Therefore he prayeth, ſaying, O God, thou art my God, early will I ſeek thee, &c. My ſoule thirſteth for thee, my fleſh longeth. Whereby hee meaneth, that hee was in great want, even of things neceſſary for this life in that dry and barren wilderneſſe, wherefore he prayeth, that God would be a ſupply unto him; and as hee had warned him to flee thither, provide for him, that hee might not together with his men periſh there.

Verſ. 7. Becauſe thou haſt been my helper, in the ſhadow of thy wings I will rejoyce. In the midſt of dangers, he ſpeaketh, as if he then found God an helpe; ſo ſtrong was his faith in him, that he doubted not thereof, and therefore rejoyceth, as being even then in ſafety.

Verſ. 9. But they that ſeeke my ſoule to deſtroy it, ſhall goe into the lower parts of the Earth. A paraphraze of deſtruction; by the lower parts of the earth, graves being meant, into which he ſheweth hereby, that his Enemies ſhould ſhortly come.

Verſ. 10. They ſhall fall by the ſword, they ſhall be a portion for Foxes. Calv. Diffluent enim, vel dejicient, they ſhall caſt him downe: but the word וגירהו is diffluere facient, they ſhall make him fall like water by the hand of the ſword: That is, Sauls Enemies, the Philiſtims, fighting againſt him, ſhall put his forces to flight; whereupon he to avoid coming into their hands, ſhall fall upon his owne ſword, as the hiſtory ſheweth that he did, and ſo this paſſage is Propheticall, and the men of Saul that were ſlain upon thoſe mountaines, lay unburyed to be devoured by wild Beaſts, one kind, Foxes being put for all, 1 Sam. 31.

Verſ. 11. But the King ſhall rejoyce in God, every one that ſweareth by him ſhall glory, but the mouth that ſpeaketh lies ſhall be ſtopped. This ſhewed a ſtrong faith in David, that notwithſtanding the ſtraits wherein he was, he yet believed that he ſhould be King, as God had promiſed. They that ſwear by God are ſuch

Deut. 10. 20. as feare and worſhip him, according to that, Thou ſhalt feare the Lord, and ſweare by his Name. And againſt Lyers he ſpeaketh, becauſe Sauls Courtiers were much tainted with this ſinne, as by his complaining in other Pſalms we may gather, where he ſheweth, how they wreſted his ſayings, and by ſlanders ſought to incenſe Saul more and more againſt him.

PSAL. LXIV.

THis Pſalme differs little from the former, being likewiſe a prayer in time of danger, and a declaration of the enemies attempts, and a propheſie of diligent ſearch, both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep: the Vulg. They have ſearched out iniquity, they have failed in their diligent ſearch, man ſhall come, and a profound heart, and God ſhall be exalted. Expounded by Baſil thus, They have moved every thought againſt me, they have deviſed all manner of fraud, they have omitted no kind of treachery, openly ruſhing upon mee, ſecretly laying waite for me, compaſſing about Wilderneſſes, and ſearching rocky places. And for the next words hee ſaith, Theodotian renders them beſt thus, But God ſhall ſhoot at the mind of man, and their depth with his arrowes, although they ſeeke to hide it a thouſand wayes; for to God all things are manifeſt, who ſheweth his height, and will call all Potentates to judgement. Hebr. They have perfected the ſearch ſearched, and the inward part of a man, and the deep heart. The meaning being, they have ſought out, or deviſed divers wicked wayes to deſtroy me, and in their thoughts have even accompliſhed what they deviſed, for this is their perfecting of their ſearch ſearched out, in that they made account to bring their devices to paſſe accordingly, as verily as if they had already done it, even the device of each man lying hid in his heart, which is like a deep that none can ſound; but when it was but there, they thought it as good as accompliſhed in act. Baſil.

Verſ. 6. their terrible deſtruction. Verſ. 6. They ſearch out iniquities, they accompliſh a dili-

But God ſhall ſhoot an Arrow at them, ſuddenly ſhall they be wounded: Heb. Their ſtroakes or wounds are ſudden: Even as an Arrow that is ſhot cometh ſuddenly upon a man, he not ſeeing nor thinking of it, till he be ſtricken therewith, and then he falls preſently down dead, pleaſing himſelfe happily even then with his thoughts of prevailing, and living many yeares after in proſperity; ſo the judgements of God ſhall ſuddenly cut off the wicked enemies of his innocent people, to the ſtriking of terrour into thoſe that behold it, as is expreſſed, Verſe 8. Verſ. 7.

So they ſhall make their owne tongue to fall upon themſelves, all that ſee them ſhall flee away. Verſ. 9. And all men ſhall feare, &c. Where by their making their tongues to fall upon themſelves, he maneth, that which they have maliciouſly ſpoken againſt him touching his deſtruction, ſhall come upon themſelves; and in thus ſaying he had reſpect to Verſe 3. where their evill tongues are ſpoken againſt, and he ſaith, they ſhall make them, becauſe through their ſpitefull words they bring this upon themſelves: In like manner, Verſe 7. where Gods ſhooting at them is ſpoken of, anſwereth to Verſe 4. where their ſhooting at the perfect ſuddenly is ſpoken of: The wicked then ſhall ſuffer in their owne kinde, Lex talionis ſhall certainly be kept againſt them, what miſcheiſe in word or deed they doe againſt the innocent ſhall be repayed to them aſſuredly by God the revenger of all wrongs. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9. Note.

PSAL. LXV.

FOR the title, Baſil, beſides the words, A Pſalme of David, hath theſe, A Song of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, and of the people in captivity, when they were now about to goe: But he ſaith, that neither the Hebrews nor Septuagint have it, nor other Interpreters, but it was added by ſome, that neither marked the ſenſe of the Pſalme, nor knew the Hiſtory; yet he underſtands it as concerning the Jewes in the Babyloniſh Captivity, who are brought in here lamenting their preſent eſtate, that they could not praiſe God, this being a thing to be done in Zion onely, and not in a ſtrange Land, as is ſhewed, Pſal. 137. and in ſaying, To thee ſhall all fleſh come, he propheſieth of the Vocation of the Gentiles. Jerom applyeth it, to the Church under the Goſpell; God is praiſed in Zion, that is, in his Church, and unto thee vowes are performed, praiſe, becauſe thou art God, vowes, becauſe our Redeemer, and in Zion, not in Idols Temples. Baſil. Hieron.

Iniqui-

Verſ. 3. Iniquities have prevailed againſt me, Vulg. Wicked words, ſo likewiſe Heb. that is, The words of Philoſophers, whereby we were formerly carryed after dumbe Idols and ſuperſtitions, but now we are purged from all our ſins by Chriſts blood, being by faith and repentance turned to him. The word rendred Waiteth, is דמיה is Silent, that is, for the preſent, if it be underſtood either of the wayes before going, but ſhall break out. when thy people ſhall be delivered out of Captivity, but moſt of all when by the coming of the Goſpell amongſt them, the Gentiles ſhall fall to praiſing thee. Symmachus for Wicked words have prevailed againſt me, hath it, I am compelled to ſerve Wicked and ungodly men for my ſins, taking it, as the voice of the Church in Captivity, where the wicked Babylonians having dominion over them, their words or commands were a Law unto them, whatſoever puniſhments they commanded to be inflicted upon them; but my comfort is, that thou wilt take away my ſin, the cauſe, and then my puniſhment ſhall ceaſe.

Symmach.

Verſ. 5. By terrible things in righteouſneſſe thou wilt anſwer us: Heb. Thou wilt anſwer us terrible things: So Calvin alſo, expounding it of the terrible judgements executed upon the Jewes enemies, when God delivered them out of Ægipt; but rather it is to be underſtood upon Babylon, when it was deſtroyed, and ſo way was made for their deliverance; or not onely ſo, but upon the infidell Jewes deſtroyed by the Romans, for Chriſts blood and his Saints ſhed by them, Steven, and Iames, and others: And then God was the hope of all the ends of the earth, as here followeth, the Nations moſt remote being converted to Chriſt, and of the Sea, that is, the Iſlands in the Sea.

Calvin.

Verſ. 6. Eſtabliſhing the mountaines, being girt about with power: Curbing the noiſe of the waters, the noiſe of their waves, and the raging of the Gentiles. Having ſpoken of Gods terrible Judgements, ſhewing his Almighty power for the comfort of his people, now he giveth other inſtances of this his power in eſtabliſhing the Mountains, not to be removed, and ruling the tumultuous Seas, keeping them within their bounds: and when other Nations, their Enemies rage moſt againſt them, breaking their ſtrength ſo, that they can hurt them no more. Ierom expoundeth all of Chriſt, begirt with divine power, whereby he ruleth over Devils, as mountains high and ſtrong, and all people, as waters that rage againſt his Church, but I prefer the literall ſenſe here.

Hieron.

Verſ. 8. Thou wilt make the out-goings of the morning and evening to rejoyce: That is, men to rejoyce for the comfort that is in the riſing of the Sun in the morning, and of the Moon in the Evening: And becauſe the propagation of the Goſpel to the ends of the Earth was before ſpoken of, Verſ. 5. the joy alſo that cometh hereby to people inhabiting further Eaſt and Weſt is ſet forth.

Calvin.

Verſ. 9. Thou viſiteſt the earth, and watereſt it with the River of God. Here the Prophet David proceedeth further in ſhewing the mighty works of God for the good and comfort of man. Hee keeps the Seas from overflowing the Earth, and Nation from deſtroying Nation, when they are ſet upon fighting and rooting out one another, and orders the riſing of the Sun and Moon, as hath been already ſaid.

Now his goodneſſe and power is further ſet forth in ſending Rain, whereby the fruits of the Earth are encreaſed, which Calvin reſtreineth to Judea, as if that ſpecially were meant. But I ſee no reaſon, why having hitherto ſpoken generally of all Nations, this ſhould be reſtreined to Judea. And becauſe Propheticall things touching the Goſpel are interlaced, together with literal, concerning this World, I hold with Baſil and other Ancients, that by the water here ſo abundantly watering the Earth, called the River of God; The Preaching of the Word is meant, which diſtilleth as the Raine, and the ſpirit ſet forth alſo before, as a River, Pſ. 46.4. And then comes Corne, or Bread here alſo ſpoken of, even the bread, of which who ſo eateth, ſhall not dye,

Calvin.

Baſil.
Hieron.
Auguſt.
Deut. 32. 2.

Verſ. 10.

dye, but live eternally. And this raine falleth upon the Wilderneſſe; that is, the moſt barren in goodneſſe, as the Heathen, who before their converſion were like a Wilderneſſe, and therefore hereby often ſet forth by the Prophet Eſay. And for the yeare crowning with goodneſſe, ſpoken of, Verſ. 11. it is meant of the time of the Goſpel, called The acceptable yeare of the Lord, which was decored as by a Crown, when it had ſo great ſucceſs in converting ſoules. But for the next words: Verſ. 12. Verſ. 11.

The Paſtures ſhall be cloathed with ſheep. The Vulg. The Rams of the ſheepe ſhall be cloathed, and the word ברנם rendered Paſtures, ſignifyeth alſo Rams, and the ſenſe will be good being thus rendered, they ſhall beare wool in abundance: ſo that not only food, but cloathing too is here promiſed: And myſtically by Rams, which are the leaders of the Flock, great men being ſet forth, in ſaying that they ſhall be cloathed, he meaneth that they ſhould turne Chriſtians, and ſo beare large fleeces, wherewith to cloath the naked by their charity towards them: And then by Valleys bearing Corn, the poor are meant, who be as low as the valleys, but fruitful in the fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, peace, meekneſſe, temperance. Verſ. 13. Gal. 5. 22.

PSAL. LXVI.

A Pſalme or Song, vulg. Lat. of the Reſurrection.

Make a joyfull noiſe unto God all yee Lands. It is agreed by all Expoſiters, that this Pſalme is Propheticall of the converſion of the Gentiles unto Chriſt, and of the great joy that ſhould follow thereupon. Verſ. 1.

Through thy power ſhall thine enemies ſubmit unto thee: That is, they that were enemies before, living in idolatry and all manner of ſin, ſhall at the preaching of the Goſpel be brought to live in all obedience unto God and to his lawes. Verſ. 3.

Come, and let us ſee the works of God. To make that which hee propheſyeth of, the more credible, he recals us to look back to that which he did for his Church in dividing the Red Sea, that they might goe through upon dry land, that it might not ſeem impoſſible for him to do that which is here promiſed, by converting the Nations, to fill them with joy and gladneſſe. And not only the Red Sea was by him divided, but Jordan alſo, which hee here cals the Flood, for the over-flowing of the banks, or River, as others render it. Verſ. 5.

Let not the rebellious exalt themſelves. Heb. The rebellious or back-ſliders ſhall not exalt themſelves againſt him. Hereby he threatneth the wicked under the Goſpel, that fall away with caſting down; for not to be exalted is to be caſt down and deſtroyed, ſo that none ſuch can have any true comfort of the grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt, but they that perſevere as they once began. Verſ. 7. Note.

He hath held our ſoule in life. This is expounded by Baſil, as ſpoken by the Jewes in their captivity in Babylon, amongſt whom were Daniel and Exekiel, and other holy men, by whom God upheld the life of grace and Religion even there in them. For he underſtands this Pſalme ſo of the vocation of the Gentiles, that it includeth things concerning the Jewes in their exile alſo, who are encouraged by faith to expect deliverance out of Babylon by the example of their fore-fathers, who were brought out of Ægypt through the Red Sea, not only here, but by other Prophets many times. And he ſaith, not only Thou haſt held our ſoule in life, but kept our feet from being moved, to goe after falſe gods, although living amongſt Idolaters. And to this the next words do well agree, Verſ. 10, 11, 12. Thou haſt tryed us as ſilver is tryed: Wee have gone through fire and water: That is, have been in apparent dangers of utterly periſhing, as by burning or drowning: But thou brought-teſt Verſ. 9. Baſil. Verſ. 10, 11, 12.

us

us out into a wealthy place: Heb. A moiſt place, which is commonly rich in fertility: Of which he ſpeaketh meaning their bringing out of Babylon into the land of Canaan again, by faith ſpeaking of it as already done, as the next words ſhew, of bringing ſacrifices, and offering them in way of thankfulneſs, as was done abundantly by them that returned, there being Beaſts miniſtred to them for that purpoſe by Cyrus the King, who gave them liberty to return. And for their paſſing through fire and water, it was true according to the letter, the three Children, who were ſome of them, were put into the fiery Furnace: And for water, hee might have reſpect unto their going through the Red Sea before ſpoken of, putting them here together, though ſo farre diſtant one from another in time, that he might ſumme up their ſufferings at once. For the net, into which he ſaith he was brought, it may be underſtood of Daniel, when he was taken as in a Net ſubtly ſet, and caſt into the Lyons den: Afflictions laid upon their backs, was the ſervitude in which they were to the Caldees, and mens riding over them is added, to ſhew that they were laid as low as the ground, being troden under foot as the duſt by the feet of Horſes. But apply we this with Jerome to Chriſtians, as the words, verſ. 9.

Verſ. 13.

Hieron.

Verſ. 8. Bleſſe our God O ye people: May well move us to do, then it is the voyce of Nations converted, Thou haſt kept our ſoule in life, by Chriſts death, and kept our feet from being moved, ſtrengthening us in the faith by Preaching. Then ſay the holy Martyrs, Thou haſt proved us, &c. And divers things whereby are ſpoken of, to ſhew their many ways of ſuffering, ſome being burned, and ſome drowned, ſome inſnared and taken to priſon, and ſome rid upon, as it were, by ſcoffs and mocks intollerable; but the end is moſt comfortable, and therefore by him rendered Refrigerium, Thou haſt brought us to refreſhing; that is, by eternall reſt, which is the end of all torments ſuffered for the truth. For bleſſed are the dead that dye in the Lord, they reſt from their labours. For this is ſpoken to comfort and confirme againſt ſuffering by the Beaſt, for not receiving his marke in the hand or fore-head.

Revel. 14.

Verſ. 13. Laſtly the offerings following for the great mercy of bringing through all dangers to eternall reſt, are of praiſe through Chriſt, Who alone is as all Sacrifices of Bullocks, Rams, Lambs, and Goats. And he ſaith, I will offer theſe, as I have vowed in my trouble. How this ſhould be applyed to the perſons before ſpoken of, if with Jerom we underſtand Martyrs, I ſee not, becauſe they are now in Heaven, and paſt performing of vowes, and therefore it muſt be underſtood either with Baſil of the Jews returning out of Babylon, or of David with Calvin, as added for a concluſion of this his Pſalme, whoſe joy was ſo great for thoſe things foreſeen by the Spirit, that he vowed to offer ſacrifice upon ſacrifice in way of thankfulneſs therefore.

Verſ. 15.
Verſ. 13, 14.

Calvin.

Ver. 16, 17. Here the reaſon of this his exulting is ſhewed, God had done ſuch things for his ſoule, as that he was therefore worthy of all honour; for hee ſaw by the Spirit the price of his redemption paid by Chriſt, for which hee prayed, and for which he gave thanks, and that in ſincerity, whereby he proveth, that God regarded him, and that he was in grace with him, verſ. 18, 19.

Note. Note from hence, that the holy ſervants of God of old prayed for Chriſts coming; and ſeeing by faith his coming in the fleſh, and dying for our ſinnes then, they gave God thanks therefore, as if he had been already come, and their prayers made, for this had been already heard and granted, ſo that their faith and ours was all one; neither did they ever hold any other way of ſalvation, but by Chriſt alone: He Was the ſame yeſterday and to day, for ever.

Heb. 13. 8.

PSAL.

PSAL. LXVII.

THIS Pſalme is alſo generally held to be Propheticall of the converſion of all Nations, beginning firſt with the Iewes, who ſay, God be mercifull unto us and bleſſe us, and lift up the light of his countenance upon us: That is, inlighten us by Chriſt, who is the true light; and not only us, but all Nations of the Earth; for from Zion the light went forth into all parts, as the Sun-riſing in the Eaſt, as was ſhewed before, Pſal. 19. in a ſimilitude taken therefrom. Hereupon he rejoycingly breaks out, and ſaith, Verſ. 1. John 1.

Let the people praiſe thee (O God) Let all the people praiſe thee: That is, both Iewes and Gentiles for this glorious Light, and for judging them righteouſly, and governing the nations of the earth: Whereby he meaneth, not his generall governing by his Providence, as Calvin ſaith well, but his Spiritual governing of his Church, and juſtifying her by his grace; for this he meaneth, when he ſaith, God ſhall judge his folke righteouſly, acquitting them for his owne righteouſneſſe, made theirs by faith. Then he iterates the ſame words againe, to ſtirre up all men the more. Verſ. 4. Calvin.

Let the people praiſe thee (O God) adding; Then ſhall the earth bring forth her encreaſe: That is, ſaith Ierome, the Virgin Mary, her fruit Ieſus, that ſaveth us: For what was Mary but earth? and Jeſus ſaith of himſelfe, Unleſs a graine of Corne fall upon the ground, it fructifyeth not: Implying himſelfe to be the encreaſe of the earth, wherein we all that believe are bleſſed, as followeth here: Verſ. 6. Hieron.

And God, even our God ſhall bleſſe us: God ſhall bleſſe us, and all the ends of the earth ſhall feare him: That is, God the Father, God the Son, and God the holy Ghoſt, and for this bleſſing all Nations ſhall feare him, as for a mercy unſpeakable, as elſe-where it is ſaid, That there is mercy with thee, that thou maiſt be feared. By feare, love, humility, and obedience to his will in all things being meant, becauſe it is the product of this infinite mercy; and it is uſuall in Scripture by the feare of God, to ſet forth all vertue, as where it is ſaid; Heare the end of all, feare God, and keepe his commandements, for this is the whole duty of man. And the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wiſdome. Wherefore Ierome ſaith not ſo rightly upon theſe words, Feare is of little ones, Love of perfect ones; and in proſecuting this Argument, he confutes himſelfe, by ſaying, All things ſhall worke together for good to thoſe that love God: And inſtanceth in Iob, touching whom we know, that it is ſaid, He feared God, and eſchewed evill: Therefore he that feareth God, according to that which is here ſaid, loveth him alſo, and is not of a ſort of men inferiour to ſuch as love him, and this very place evinceth the ſame. For upon whom is this unparalleld bleſſing of God, but upon ſuch as feare him; for what elſe is here ſaid, But God ſhall bleſſe us, and all the ends of the earth ſhall feare him: So that they who feare him are bleſſed with the beſt of all bleſſings, Chriſt Jeſus; and their being bleſſed in him, makes them to feare, love, and honour him alwayes, and in all things. Neither is the feare of God here and elſewhere commended; that which he ſaith, love that is perfect, caſteth out, miſalledging that Text of Iohn, Perfect love caſteth out feare, but the very compend. of all graces. Yet that which hee ſaith of Jeſus, the fruit yeelded by the earth here ſpoken of, is not to be miſliked, becauſe all the Pſalm is of him, and comfort by him to all Nations before, ſet forth by light, now by encreaſe or fruit of the earth: And the extolling ſo highly of this bleſſing, naming it three times over, argueth it not to be temporany and corporeal, but ſpiritual and eternall, making men truly bleſſed indeed, ſuch as is Chriſt Jeſus alone, of whom the ſame Ierome ſaith well, he was firſt a Flower, as in the Canticles it is ſaid, I am the flower of the field, and the Verſ. 7. Verſ. 21. Eccleſ. 12. Prov. 1. 7. Rom. 8. 1 John 4. 18.

Lilly of the Vallies; and then he grew to be fruit to be eaten, to the obtaining of eternall life, according to that, He which eates my fleſh and drinks my blood, hath evrlaſting life. So that as the Earth once yeilded fruit, by eating whereof Death came, ſo now by eating this fruit, life for evermore: Thus alſo Auguſtine, but Baſil and Calvin expound it only, as meant of temporall bleſſings, wherewith they ſhall be bleſſed that feare God, as it is ſaid, Godlineſſe is profitable to all things, having the promiſe of this life and of the life to come.

Joh. 6.

1 Tim. 4. 8.

PSAL LXVIII.

Verſ. 1. Calvin. LET God ariſe and his Enemies be ſcattered. Calvin God ſhall ariſe. Expounding it of that which was often done, and whereof David had great experience: The words are taken from Numb. 10. 35. Where Moſes is ſaid to have uſed them at the taking up and removing of the Arke, the only difference being, that there it is ſaid, Ariſe O God, here, God ſhall ariſe. For ſo the word יקום ſignifieth, and not, Let God ariſe: The Fa-

Ainſworth. thers generally expound this of Chriſt, and ſo doth Ainſworth, his riſing again being here propheſied of; for he is the God who by his reſurrection, ſcattered and brought to nothing the Forces of our ſpirituall Enemies, the Devils of Hell, ſo that they vaniſhed as a ſmoake, and melted as wax before the fire; their ſtrength failing as Wax, which cleaveth faſt before, but being melted, hath no ſtrength any longer to hold things together that are cleaved hereby, and as Smoake looking black, and darkning the Aire, being vaniſhed, the Aire is cleared again immediatly: And to this I ſubſcribe, holding the Pſalme to be propheticall, which Calvin alſo in fine doth not deny: The Devils they remain ſtill, but not having any power in time of death, to hurt the Elect or to abide in any perſon, when any of the Servants of Chriſt by his name, ſeek to expell them through prayer; for this power the Preachers of the Goſpell, had not only before Chriſts Paſſion and Reſurrection, but after, as appears in Paul, Act. 16. 18.

Verſ. 3. But let the Righteous be glad and rejoice before God. Here he propheſieth of the joy, that ſhould be to the Nations after this, when by his Death and Reſurrection preached unto them, they ſhould be turned from Idols to the true God, and ſo delivered out of the power of the Devill, who as a ſtrong man armed poſſeſſed the Houſe before: And this began firſt to be fulfilled in Samaria, Act. 8. and then in other Countries, as the Goſpell came amongſt them, and ſo for darkneſſe a marvelous light.

Verſ. 4. Exalt him that rideth upon the Clouds, in Jah his name. Having laid a Foundation of the rejoicing of the Righteous for Chriſts reſurrection, and ſtirred them up hereunto, now he both proceedeth in ſtirring them up more, and layeth down generall Arguments of praiſe, from the conſideration of his excellency; He rideth above the Clouds. That is, Being far above them, and ordering them in their motions, to the watering of all the parts of the Earth; and his name is Jah, the infinite eſſence from which all things have their being, and not like Idoll Gods, which are not, but at Verſ. 5. 6. the will of men that make them. 2. Of his goodneſs to Orphans and Widowes, and others in great diſtreſs, by being a Father to the one, and ſtanding in Judgment for the other, to do them right, when by men they are wronged: And he is ſaid to be God in his holy Habitation, that is, Heaven. 3. Of his miraculous doings towards the Children of Iſraell in the Verſ. 7. Wilderneſs, where they were held forty yeares, being fed with Manna from Heaven, where the fiery Pillar marched before them, in the way to direct them.

Verſ. 8. The Earth then moved, the Heavens dropped, and Sinai was ſhaken. The Hieron. Heavens dropped Manna, ſaith Ierom, the Earth and Sinai moved; when when God deſcending to give the Law there was an Earth-quake, making all about to ſhake: Then God ſent a plentifull raine to refreſh his Inheritance, which is ſpiritually to be underſtood of the raine of Doctrine by Moſes, as it is compared, Dent. 33. For when he inſtructed, and exhorted, and comforted the people there, as in Deuteronomy he did at large, God rained as it were upon his Heritage Iſraell, and the faithfull amongſt them were as much refreſhed thereby, as a dry ground by raine falling abundantly upon it: And this is a fourth thing whereby he ſtirreth up to thankfulneſs, and becauſe there doth apparantly follow, a propheſie of Chriſts Aſcention, Verſe 18. And the Tenſe is here changed, for it is the Future, Hebrew, this rain may beſt be underſtood of teaching under the Goſpell: Then of both the Manna and this ſpirituall repaſt, afforded in the Wilderneſs, he ſaith, That Gods Inheritance dwelt there, for as Dwellers they ſtayed long in the Wilderneſs thus ſuſtained; to which effect he further addeth, Thou of thy goodneſſe (O God) haſt prepared for the Poor: That is, Thy People in this barren place, poor and deſtitute of all meanes of Suſtentation: In ſaying all which, he alſo includeth that proviſion of water, miraculouſly flowing out of a Rock: And prophetically alſo here he ſheweth, That the Church which is Gods Heritage, ſhall dwell and continue alwayes, increaſing by his grace through this teaching being, though poor, herein moſt richly provided for to their unſpeakable comfort.

Verſ. 9.

Ver. 10.

God gave the word, great was the company of thoſe that publiſhed it. Hebr. the word rendred by publiſhing, is of the temenine Gender, and therefore by Calvin expounded of Women, who uſed to publiſh by ſong, and to praiſe God for great Victories and deliverances, as Miriam, and the Women following her, when the Egyptians were drowned in the red Sea. But Ainſworth nothing moved by the Gender, will have men Preachers hereby meant. 1. Becauſe the Preacher Solomon ſetteth forth himſelfe, by the word Chohaleth a Feminine, meaning a preaching Soule. 2. The Sept. render it by the Maſculine, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι. 3. The Cald for further explication, the Preachers, Moſes and Aaron, to a great Hoaſt of the Iſraelites, and ſome he ſaith, refer it to the Preachers of the Goſpell, according to the Greek word, who are ſo many, that they are as a great Army, and according to this went the old Engliſh Tranſlation, Great was the company of Preachers. And Iſa. 40. 9. according to the word here uſed, it is ſaid, Zion that bringeſt good tydings, Jeruſalem that bringeſt good tydings. In the feminine Gender, and yet there the men of Zion and Jeruſalem are meant, but the word מבשרת is a Feminine, becauſe it is commonly ſaid, The Daughter Zion, and the Daugther Jeruſalem; ſo here the Publiſhers for the like reaſon are put in the feminine Gender, although not women but men are meant: And if we render it word for word according to the Hebrew, it muſt go thus, God gave, or rather, The Lord ſhall give the word the Publiſhers, or Tyding-bringers a great Hoaſt. That is, Are a great company, called an Hoaſt; becauſe ſouldiers of Chriſt, as P. calleth Timothy: And we are ſaid to fight not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt Principalities, and therefore bidden to take the Armour of God unto us: The full meaning then is, the time ſhall come, when God ſhall ſend out his good word of grace and reconciliation through Jeſus Chriſt, and then Preachers in ſuch numbers, as that they ſhall be as a great Army, conquering and ſubduing unto his Son, all Kingdomes and Nations, as is propheſied, Pſal. 2.

Verſ. 11.

Exod. 15.

Ainſworth.

Eph, 6. 12.

Kings of Armies did flee apace, and ſhe that tarryed at home divided the ſpoyle: Hebrew, Kings with their Armies ſhall flee, ſhall flee. He ſtill goeth on in his Propheſie, ſpeaking in the future Tenſe, ſo that this alſo belongs to the time of the Goſpell, by Kings then fleeing in all haſt, Devils being meant, who are called Principalities, and by the Heathen Melcom their King, for it was wonderfull to ſee, how ſpeedily Idolatry vaniſhed in many places, and Devils formerly uſing to give anſweres at ſhrines departed thence, and ſo there was after the Birth of Chriſt, Altum ſilentium, no anſwers by the Oracle of Apollo, being given any more. And by their armies both Jews and Gentiles in great numbers with all violence ſeeking to ſtop the proceedings of the Goſpel: For the Jewes were quelled by the Romans, when they deſtroyed Jeruſalem, and the Gentiles withſtanding the Goſpel, and ſeeking to uphold Idolatry, by Conſtantine the Great, when Licinius with all his forces was made to flee before him. For theſe may wel be called the armies of theſe infernall Kings, becauſe by the Devill gathered together againſt Chriſt and his truth, as Revel. 9. 11. The Locuſts which were great armies, are ſayd to have a King over them, called Abaddon. Shee that dwelleth in the houſe divideth the ſpoiles: That is, As when armies are fled, their tents being left, great ſpoiles therein come into the hands of them, againſt whom they fought, which with great joy they divide amongſt them, even the weaker ſex of women, coming forth and having part, as it was when the Syrians fled from Samaria; ſo the Church or Congregation of the faithfull, Devills being chaſed away, and the feare, in which they were, ceaſing, rejoyced, as they that divide the ſpoiles, as is propheſied, Eſa. 9. And the Church is deſcribed by her that dwelleth in the houſe, becauſe they dwell in the houſe of God by perſeverance in the true faith, which is his Church, and it is not by force of armes, that they come to theſe ſpoiles, but God gets the victory for them, their being quietly in his houſe about the duties of his worſhip, as Jehoſaphat ſometime, when a great company of Enemies came againſt him, was bidden to ſtand ſtill and ſee the ſalvation of God, who then fell to praiſing of God, and without ſtriking ſtroake prevailed, and took ſo great ſpoiles, that they were three dayes in gathering and carrying it away. Calvin, and ſome others expound all this of the Kings of the Amorites and others fighting againſt Iſrael, and particularly of Siſera ſlaine by Jael. But firſt the argument in hand permits not this Expoſition, becauſe it is of Chriſts time. Secondly, It is ſpoken in the future tence, and therefore although things paſt, may be here alluded to, yet it is to be held rather, that ſomthing to come of greater moment, was here propheſied of, as hath been ſayd. Thus alſo the fathers generally, although they follow a Tranſlation greatly differing from the originall, Viz. the Vulg. Lat. and being ſuch, that I can ſcarce tell how to make Good ſenſe of it.

Verſ. 12.

Eph; 6. 12.

2 Kin. 7.

2 Chron. 20.

Calvin.
T. W.

Hieron.
Auguſt.
Baſil.

Verſ. 13. Although yee have lyen among the pots, yet ye ſhall be as the wings of a Dove covered with ſilver, Hebr. If yee lye, or have lyen between pots, that is, Which are black & ſooty, which one cannot do, but he muſt needs ſoil his cloathes: and here, by lying amongſt pots, a poor and vaſt Eſtate is meant, as of a Scullion in a Kitchin, who lyeth down ſometimes all night like a beaſt in a chimney corner, being made hereby filthy and naſty, wherefore the miſery, in which the Church ſhould ſometime be, is here foretold, and of what poor people it ſhould conſiſt; but the outward face thereof, he ſheweth, ſhall in time be changed, and be reſplendent even in worldly Glory, as it was when Emperours and Kings deckt in Gold and Silver, imbraced the Faith.

Verſ. 14. When the Almighty ſcattered Kings in her, thou wert white as ſnow in Salmon, Hebr. In the almighties ſcattering Kings, or making Kings, flee in or by her, thou ſhalt make her white as ſnow in Salmon: Here the means are ſhewed, how ſo great a change ſhould come in the Chriſtian Church, Viz. By putting ſuch Kings to flight, as oppoſed the Goſpel, as was ſayd upon Verſe 12. and they were made to flee by her, when through the prayers of the Church the army was routed before Conſtantine: Then God made her, that lay among pots before, white as ſnow, as before it was ſayd, as ſilver; no blackneſſe of worldly miſery and baſeneſſe now appearing any more, and Salmon was an hill white with ſnow, that lay continually upon it, being otherwiſe obſcure, according to the ſignification of the word צלמון of which it cometh, ſignifieth Shaddow, which is dark and black. Calvin applyeth all this of lying among the pots, and ſmiting of Kings, after which whiteneſs, as of the ſnow followeth, to David and Saul, in whoſe Raign David, and the better ſort lay in miſery; but he and his ſons periſhing, David roſe to great Glory.

as

Gods hill is as the hill of Baſhan: Here the Chriſtian Church is further commended under the name of an hill, as Matth. 5. it is compared to a City ſet upon an hill, and Iſa. 2. now becauſe the hill of Baſhan was very fruitfull, this compariſon is made, to ſhew, that from this Hill or mountain of God, his Church, cometh plenty of excellent fruit, more then from any other, or Baſhan it ſelfe. Therefore he taketh down the pride thereof, by preferring Mount Zion above all hills, in the next words. Why leape yee ſo yee hills, by a Proſopopeia putting perſons upon them that are inſolent for any priviledge, or excellency. For Zions priviledge was far greater, becauſe that God delighted to dwell here, even God the moſt magnificent, whoſe Chariots are twenty thou and of Angells not becauſe he hath no more, but certain number is put for an uncertain, and he calls them Chariots, becauſe they carry the Elect and march about them, that no harm may come unto them, as Pſal. 91. Gen. 31. 2. King. 6.

Verſ. 15. Verſ. 16. Verſ. 17.

Thou haſt aſcended up on high, &c. Touching this place I have ſayd enough upon Epheſ. 4. 10. Where it is alleadged and applyed to Chriſts aſcention as here propheſied of. I will therefore only add here, that Calvin underſtands this firſt, and properly of David, and then of Chriſt figured out in David. For he was low in Sauls time, but he being dead, lifted up on high to his Kingly dignity. But becauſe he is here ſpeaking of God and his Glory, and David wrot this, it is not probable, that he would preſently fly from God to ſpeak of himſelfe, and that in the ſecond perſon; for this makes it plain that as he ſpake before of God, ſo now he ſpeakes to his ſon, propheſying of his glorious aſſention, after his abaſement by Death and Contempt, and his ſending of the Holy Ghoſts after this with his rare Gifts.

Verſ. 18. Calvin.

Here for ſo great Gifts we are taught to bleſſe God, as being even loaden with benefits.

Verſ. 19.

And he is ſayd to be our ſalvation, and that in him are the iſſues or commings forth from death, becauſe of his powerfull riſing again out of the Sepulcher, and our future reſurrection to Life and Glory; Death having no further Power over us.

Verſ. 20.

Thus for the faithfull, but for the Wicked, God ſhall Wound their hairy pates, whereby he meaneth, the cheifeſt and moſt formidable of them, according to ſome ſet forth by their hayr, becauſe that hereby they looked terribly when they went to battell; but I rather think that the greateſt and mightieſt are hereby ſet forth, becauſe ſlaves and captives were ſhaven, and of old amongſt the Romans none but the Patricij and their ſons might wear long hair, and amongſt the French, none but they which were of the bloud royall. But how great ſoever they be that preſume to go on in ſin, they ſhal not eſcape Gods judgments, but be deſtroyed hereby, for God will ſtrike their heads, and to be ſtricken here, is more mortall, then in any other part of the Body.

Verſ. 21. Note.

The Lord ſaid, I will bring again from Baſhan. Here two Examples are ſet forth, of deliverances wrought by God for his people, further to illuſtrate the favours before ſpoken of, which come by Chriſt; one, of their deliverance from that mighty Giant Og the King of Baſhan, another from the Egyptians; being drowned in the Red ſea, for ſo he meaneth, that God would deliver his from the Devill and all the powers of Hell, bringing them through the red ſea of Chriſts bloud, as it were, for herein the Children of Iſraell are ſayd to have been baptized as in the Cloud, 1 Cor. 10.

Verſ. 22.

That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine Enemies: This is added in way of amplifying the foreſaid Deliverance, which was with ſo great a deſtruction, as that the bloud of the enemies lay in ſuch abundance upon the Ground, that men could not go without dipping their feet therein, and

Verſ. 13.

Dogs

Dogs licked it up, as ſometimes Ahabs, and before that Naboths. Verſe 24.

Verſ. 24. They have ſeen thy goings, &c. the ſingers go before: That is, after thoſe victo-Exod. 15. 20. ries obtained, eſpecially againſt the Egyptians, for then Miriam & other wo-Verſ. 1. men after her went out with Timbrells and Dances praiſing God, whereunto ſinging was added, yea it went before, for Moſes and all the children of Iſ-raell ſung, and then Miriam and the Women did, as hath been already ſayd: And as they did then, ſo likewiſe they did afterwards, when the 2 Cron. 13. 8. ſanctuary was ſet up. And Gods going in the ſanctuary is ſpoken of in alluding to the carriyng of the ark, wherein god is ſayd to have been, to the tabernacle wch David had made. For the arks going upon mens ſhoulders was Gods go-
Numb. 10 35. ing, as the riſing up therof was his riſing according to the words uſed by Moſes when it was taken up, Let God ariſe, and let his Enemies be ſcattered. For then Dav. & all Iſr. danced and played before the Lord, expreſſing all joy, and to apply it to the goſpel; the meaning is, that for the Lord Chriſt coming into his ſanctuary, the ſanctified fleſh which he took of the V. Mar. there was exceeding great joy for the Angels coming down from heaven to the Shepheards, ſung for joy: Mary his Mother brake out for joy into her Magnificat, My ſoule doth magnifie the Lord, and my ſpirit hath rejoyced, &c. And ſo did Eliza-
Act. 8. beth, Zechary, and Simeon, and when the newes hereof came to Samaria, there was great joy.

Verſ. 26. Bleſſe the Lord from the fountaine of Iſrael: That is, according to ſome, from the heart, which is the fountaine of all praiſing of God, or elſe it is no
Calvin. accepted of; but Calvin better, yee that are diſcended from Iſrael, as from a fountaine, ſpringing up out of his loynes, becauſe the whole congregation of Iſrael is here ſtirred up to praiſe God: And this appeareth more to be the meaning by the next words.

Verſ. 27. There is little Benjamin their Ruler. He beginneth with Benjamin, as being the Tribe neareſt to the Sanctuary, and of which Saul the firſt choſen King was, and then mentioneth Judah, of which Tribe was David the preſent King, and in whoſe City Zion the Tabernacle was placed: Then paſſing over the reſt of the Tribes, Zabulon and Nephtali, being moſt remote North-ward, as contenting himſelfe to ſpeake of the neereſt and the furtheſt off, leaving the reſt to be underſtood; for at that time ſo much to 2 Cron. 13. be noted of removing the Arke, all Iſraell was aſſembled together, that it might be carryed up with the greater Pomp and State. Calvin reſteth not in this, although moſt generally received; becauſe it had been out of ſeaſon now to mention that King, whoſe glory was buryed in Davids Raign, and in whoſe time all things were out of order; and therefore he thinketh, that either the body of that Tribe, is celebrated for ſome valiant Act done in time of War not commemorated, or that there was then ſome famous Captain thereof, who is meant by their Ruler: And likewiſe that Zabulon and Nephtali are ſpoken of for famous Captaines of thoſe Tribes, or elſe we muſt be content to be ignorant, what his meaning is in naming thoſe two Tribes here, the reſt being omitted: But I reſt in the former as the literall meaning; becauſe that although Saul were a wicked King and now dead, yet
2 Sam. 1. 17. David had him alwayes in venerable account, becauſe he was his King, and his Father in Law, and a valiant man, not only in his life time, but after his Death; as appeareth by his lamentation made for him and his Sonnes: And he calleth Benjamin little, becauſe the youngeſt of Jacobs Sonnes, Judg. 20. and becauſe brought ſince their ſlaughter at Gibeah to be but a ſmall Tribe: Little Benjamin the Ruler then is ſo called, becauſe their Ruler over all the reſt in King Saul, being celebrated by this name ſtill, though Saul were now dead and gone: And as for Zabulon and Nephtali, there is indeed ſome colour of reaſon, why they ſhould be ſpecially named, becauſe they with Barack did once ſo valiantly, Judg. 4. So that I will not contend about it, but that reſpect was alſo had in this enumeration thereunto, although Iephtah and Gideon and their men, were for the moſt part of other Tribes, Tribes, that did as valiantly, if not more, and yet they are left unnamed: But in the myſticall ſenſe all this is ſpoken moſt aptly, as Ainſworth following the Fathers noteth. There was little Benjamin their Ruler. That is, Paul of that Tribe, a Ruler in the Churches of Chriſt, and worthy to be firſt named, for his great labours wherein he exceeded all the reſt of the Apoſtles, although the leaſt of them, becauſe called to this Office after them, and before a Perſecutor: And Revel. 21. 19. The firſt precious Stone in the foundation of the new Jeruſalem is a Jaſper, which in Aarons breſt-plate was the laſt, Exod. 28. 20. On which Benjamins name was graven, intimating, the laſt now to be firſt and chiefe in chriſtian Churches, as he is here put. Next Judah is named, ſetting forth Iames and Iohn, the Bretheren of our Lord, who were of that Tribe. Laſtly, Zabulon and Nephtali, where Chriſt walked, inlightning thoſe parts, and calling other Apoſtles, Peter, Andrew, Philip, &c.

Ainſworth.

1 Tim. 1 15.

Thy God hath commanded thy ſtrength. Here David teacheth Iſrael to aſcribe all their good ſucceſſe and victories over their enemies to God, that he only might have praiſe, and conſequently any ſtrength that we have againſt our ſpirituall Enemies, as Calvin noteth, is to be aſcribed unto God, without whom we can do nothing.

Verſ. 28.

Calvin.

Becauſe of thy Temple at Jeruſalem, ſhall Kings bring preſents unto thee. Heb. From thy Temple over Jeruſalem: So alſo Calvin expounding it, as cohering with verſ. 28. And further ſhewing, whence their ſtrength came, whereby they did ſo valiantly againſt their Enemies, by ſubduing and making them tributaries, whereby they were compelled to bring in gifts, yea even their Kings, as the Kings of Moab, and Ammon, and Edom. And this ſtrength he ſaith, came from Gods houſe, becauſe that from thence he ſhewed his power: And if it be ſaid, the Temple was not yet built, the anſwer is eaſſe, by Houſe his Sanctuary may as well be underſtood, as his Temple, for there was now his dwelling myſtically from th graces powred out upon the Church, it is that the faithfull have ſo great ſtrength to effect the worke which they take in hand, in fighting againſt their ſpirituall enemies, and delivering ſoules out of their power, not only of the people, but of Kings, by converting them; which being done, the ſaid Kings bring Preſents to God, that is, cauſe all under their Dominion to turne alſo, and out of their worldly eſtates give to the maintenance of Gods publique worſhip liberall revenues, as hath been done in ancient times.

Verſ. 29

Rebuke the company of Spear men, the multitude of Buls, and the Calves of the people, till every one ſubmit themſelves with pieces of ſilver. Heb. Deſtroy the beaſt of Reed, as the Vulg. hath it, or the company, and this is beſt: And by Reed, underſtanding Spears, we come to the meaning, the great company of enemies armed with ſpears againſt us, and they are ſet forth by the word Reed, becauſe in ſome Countreys Reeds are very great, and ſtrong enough to make Spears of. This is then a Prayer againſt the incorrigible Enemies of the Church under the Goſpel, who ſtirred up perſecution againſt her, being alſo called a congregation of Bulls and Calves; for their madneſſe and violence, Buls, and for their indocibility, Calves. The next word מתרפס ſignifieth, He hath humbled himſelfe to conculcation, with pieces of ſilver: The meaning being, ſome ſeeing others judged, as hath been prayed, humble themſelves, offering for gifts to Gods houſe pieces of ſilver, as ſome did in the Apoſtles times, the whole price of their lands ſold, bringing it, and laying it down at the Apoſtles feet. Calvin referring it to the company of Spearmen before ſpoken of, rendreth it, Trampling upon pieces of ſilver, expounding it of wearing ſilver about their feet in notorious pride, as many in the Eaſt parts did: But the word being in Hithpael, admitteth not this Expoſition, as hath been ſaid. Others, that are for that before-going, yet underſtand it of the ſame men before prayed againſt: And whereas it is objected, None will pray that they may be deſtroyed, that ſubmitt to be

Verſ. 30.

Calvin.

Pſal. 22. 13.

Acts 2. and Chap. 4.

Calvin.

be tributaries; They anſwer yes, becauſe that although they do thus outwardly, being inforced to it, yet they have malicious hearts ſtill againſt Gods people, and wait but for an opportunity to ſhew it; but being underſtood as before, ſuch a ſhift will be needleſſe. And the next words make alſo againſt that Expoſition, as Calvin noteth, becauſe it followeth, Scatter them that delight in warre. For it is not likely that he would pray for the ſcattering of them that ſubmit, as of thoſe that delight in warre. Junius renders it, Feining to ſubmit himſelfe, but not in ſincerity: And by the company of reed, hee underſtands Archers, becauſe Arrowes were ſometime made of Reeds.

Junius.

Verſ. 31. Having ſpoken of Kings bringing Preſents in generall, verſ. 29. and of others, verſ. 30. Now he fore-telleth of Princes of Ægypt and Ethiopia, the next neighbour Country in particular. And it is moſt probable that the Eunuch of Ethiopia, the Steward of Candaces the Queen, being taught Chriſt, and baptized by Philip, went immediately and preached Chriſt there.

Acts 8.

Verſ. 33. He ſendeth out his voyce, a mighty voyce. Drawing towards an end of the Pſalm, he concludeth with preſſing to praiſe God from the conſideration of his excellency and power, as he began, for that he rideth upon the heavens, and addeth, that he ſendeth out his voyce, that is, his thunder ſo called, Pſ. 29. And as Ainſworth noteth, ſome of the Apoſtles were called, ſons of thunder, the voyce of God ſpeaking, in whom is here pointed at, and his terrible voyce raiſing the dead at the laſt day, Ioh. 5. 29.

Ainſw. Mar. 3. 17.

Verſ. 34. His ſtrength is in the clouds. Theſe words further ſhew, that he meant the thunder by his voyce, verſ. 33. for that breaketh out of the Clouds, and ſo his power is ſhewed there. Wherefore he exhorteth in the conſideration of this to aſcribe ſtrength to God: And ſtrength in his ſanctuaries, as Ver. 35 which Calvin expounds of his Temple conſiſting of three parts, and the rather, becauſe he addeth, He giveth ſtrength to his people, who had theſe his Sanctuaries amongſt them, and ſo it anſwereth aptly to Verſ. 29. But becauſe the power of God is ſaid immediately before to be in the clouds, and he rideth upon the Heavens: I rather hold with Ainſworth here, that all are meant, the Heavens, Clouds, and Temple in Zion.

Verſ. 35. Calvin.

PSAL. LXIX.

FOR the Title, it is the ſame with Pſalme 45. upon Shoſhannim, an Inſtrument with ſix ſtrings; the Vulgar, Pro iis qui commutantur, as it rendreth the ſame words, Pſal 45. De commutandis.

The Fathers generally take this Pſalme to be propheticall touching the paſſions of Chriſt, and his praying then to the Father; and by ſome paſſages it is cleare, that it a propheſie thereof, as from Verſe 9. and Verſe 21, 22, 23, 24. But Baſil firſt applyeth it to the Jewes in their Babyloniſh Captivity, then to Chriſt: Calvin to David being in great ſtraits, yet not diſpairing, but through Faith looking up to God for deliverance he prayeth: But Junius conſenting with the Fathers, ſaith, That David ſpeaks here as a Type of Chriſt, ſetting forth his Paſſions, as they are in the Evangelicall Hiſtory related, and by the Apoſtles in their Writings applyed: And to this do I ſubſcribe, as before upon Pſal. 22. being alſo a Pſalme propheticall not much unlike this.

Baſil. Calvin. Junius.

Verſ. 1. The waters are come into my Soule. By an Allegory taken from one ready to be drowned; the caſe of our Saviour is here ſet forth, when he was about to ſuffer Death for our ſinnes, as if he had in his Perſon ſaid, I am ready to dye by the hands of a multitude of wicked Jewes, as waters flowing about me, (O ſave me) being the ſame in effect with Chriſts prayer, Father if it be poſſible let this Cup paſſe from me. Uttered three times, for the phraſe phraſe, The waters are even come into my Soule. When a man is under the water, he may for a while by holding his breath, keep the water out from entring to his vital parts, but if he be under a little longer, he hath no further power, but they come in and then he is drowned: Therefore to ſhew how neer Chriſt was to death when he prayed, this is thus ſpoken.

I ſtick faſt in the Mire. This is added, to ſhew how deſperate a caſe he was in, if he were not preſently delivered, even as a man under water and ſticking faſt in the dirt, that he cannot ſtir to get out of the danger. Verſ. 2.

They that hate me without a cauſe, are more then the haires of my head. David gave no cauſe to his Enemies to perſecute him, although he alwayes confeſſed his ſinning againſt God, and againſt him alone. Pſal: 51. But apply we this to Chriſt, and it will be found moſt true; the wicked hated him to the Death, being without all fault, although they layed ſome things to his charge, for they did it falſly; for which the word rendred, Wrongfully. Hebrew is, Lying, by Calvin rendred, Lying Enemies, more then the haires of myne head: He ſetteth them forth thus to ſhew their numberleſſe number, both Men and Devils. Verſ. 4.

O God thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſſe, and my ſinnes are not hid from thee. That is, Whether I be fooliſh, that is, wicked as they account me, and ſuch things as they lay to my charge, as ſinnes; thou knoweſt whether they be ſinnes or no, my caſting out of Devils, my healing upon Sabboth dayes, and my forgiving of ſinnes, and teaching my ſelfe to be the Son of God, and an heavenly King, and able to deſtroy this Temple, and to raiſe it up again in three dayes: Auguſtine by his ſinnes underſtandeth our ſinnes, which were imputed to him, for he was made ſin for us, 2 Cor. 5. 20. and he bare all our Tranſgreſſions, Iſa. 53. and the ſinnes of his members being one with him: But becauſe he calleth upon God to clear his innocency againſt his malicious Enemies, I prefer the firſt, yet not excluding the ſecond, thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs, as the World may count it, to leave my heavenly glory, and come as a Servant into the World to ſave others; but thou knoweſt that it was not out of fooliſhneſs, but love, and by this meanes the ſinnes that I have undertaken to ſatisfie for, whereby only I am ſin, but not inherently. Verſ. 5. Auguſt.

Let not them that wait on thee be aſhamed for my ſake. This is ſpoken as intimating, that Chriſt ſhould be ſo abaſed, as that there would be danger therefore, even of the faithfulls revolting from him; as was verified in Peter denying him, when he ſaw that he was now in danger to ſuffer, and all the reſt of the Apoſtles fled from him: And it was an argument, whereby the Heathen ſought to make men aſhamed of beleiving in Chriſt, that he was a crucified God, as Arnobius ſheweth, and the cuſtome of Chriſtians hereupon taken up, of ſigning themſelves with the ſign of the Croſs, to ſhew that they were ſo far from being aſhamed thereof, that they gloryed in it: And much like unto this is the prayer of our Lord, John. 17. For all the Faithfull, and ſpecially for Peter, to whom he ſaith, I have prayed that thy faith may not faile. And this may be conceived to be the main thing, wherewith he was affected, in ſorrowing ſo much towards his Death, becauſe he feared that through the ſcandall of the Croſs, many would be diſcouraged from conſtant following of him. Verſ. 6.

For thy ſake I have borne reproach. That is, In being obedient to thy will, whereby I was appointed thus to ſuffer, as thou didſt foreſhew in the brazen Serpent, ſet up upon a Pole in the Wilderneſs, John 3. 12. Verſ. 7.

I am become a ſtranger to my bretheren. This is ſpoken becauſe the Jewes, his Bretheren and Kinſman in the fleſh conſpired againſt him as a ſtranger, all brotherly affection being laid aſide, as in the Bretheren of Joſeph towards him, who conſpired together to kill him, when he came in love as his Father willed him, to viſit them for their comfort: So Chriſt came amongſt his Verſ. 8. Joh. 1. 11 owne, but they received him not: And Jerom ſaith, that the Jewes were his Bretheren, becauſe coming of the ſame Mother the Synagogue; but the Faithfull chiefly were his Bretheren, of whom he ſaith, I will declare thy Name amongſt my Bretheren: And to prove that they counted him a ſtranger, he alleadgeth the ſaying of Cleophas to him, Art thou only a ſtranger in Iſraell that knoweſt not theſe things? But to leave this as more witty then ſolid, the Jewes his perſecutors were the Bretheren undoubtedly, of whom he ſpeaketh, as alſo the next Verſe confirmeth, The zeale of thy houſe hath even eaten me. Which is applyed unto him, when he whipt the buyers and ſellers out of the Temple, and then it is ſaid, that the Phariſees were much diſpleaſed, and moſt probably eſtranged themſelves from him as an Alyen, thinking to bring it againſt him afterwards, to ſtir up Authority againſt him, as they did, when Witneſſes came in and teſtified what he had then ſaid, Viz. Deſtroy this Temple, and in three dayes I will raiſe it up again. Of the meaning of the words, ſee my Expoſition Matth. 21. Ioh. 2. 17.

When I wept and chaſtened my ſoule with faſting. According to this, Chriſt is ſaid to have wept over Jeruſalem, and Matth. 4. he faſted a miraculous faſt of forty dayes, yet all this nothing prevailed to move them to repent and beleive, but notwithſtanding they reproached him as a Deceiver. Of his putting on of Sackcloath according to the letter we read not, but there was the extream ſorrow in him, of which this was a ſign, when he grieved for the hardneſs of their hearts: But Jerom applyeth his faſtings being turned into a reproach, to the Devils ſeeking to put him to reproach, when after his faſting he bad him fall down and worſhip him; and his putting on of Sackcloath, and weeping, to that which he did for Lazarus being dead, which the Jewes ſeeing, upbraided him, thereby ſaying, Could not he that made the blinde to ſee, have cauſed that this man ſhould not have dyed? All which I cannot but well approve, but whereas he brings in the ſaying of Diſciples, that had been in Sychar and bought meat for him, Maſter eate, as a reproach alſo, to which his faſting was turned: I ſee no colour of reaſon for that, becauſe inſtead of reproaching they admired his ſaying, I have meat to eate which yee know not of.

They that ſate in the Gate ſpake againſt me. That is, the Rulers, for in the gates of Cityes of old, were the judgment Seates, and how much they were againſt Chriſt appeares, becauſe it is ſaid, Joh. 7. Do any of the Rulers beleive in him? It being meant that they did not, but contrariwiſe perſeeute him, both by word and deed; for they were the men that ſaid, he was worthy to dye, and that he was a Deceiver, and adjudged him to Death. The Drunkards made ſongs of me, But not drunken with Wine or ſtrong Drink, but by the ſpirit of a deep ſleep, as the Prophet ſpeakes.

Let not the Pit ſhut her mouth upon me. The ſcope both of this and Verſe 13. 14. is that although he ſuffered Death, yet he prayed that he might not be held of Death from riſing, for this is to ſtick in the Mire, and to be ſhut up in the Pit; but to riſe again, to be taken out, and not to ſuffer the Pit to ſhut her mouth upon him.

I looked for ſome to take pity, but there was none, and for comforters. Here the caſe of our Lord is ſet forth, when he was now ready to dye, hanging upon the Croſs, the meaning being nothing elſe, but that of the great multitudes which were about him, there was not one that was moved with compaſſion towards him, but contrariwiſe they mocked at him, ſaying, He ſaved others, Let him ſave himſelfe now, Let him come down from the Croſs and we will beleive in him. For in his Agony, the Angels of God came and miniſtred unto him and comforted him, and his Mother ſtood by weeping for him, and certain women of Jeruſalem followed him to the Croſs weeping; but amongſt all the rabble of his malicious Enemies, there was none that was moved to relent at that cruelty exerciſed againſt him: And in all this his pitifull complaining, we muſt not think that he was ſo puſillanimous,

as

Hieron.

Luc. 24.

Verſ. 9. Joh. 2. 12. Matth. 21. 15.

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 11.

Hieron. Matth. 4. John 11.

Joh. 4.

Verſ. 12.

Hieron. Eſa. 29. 9. 10.

Verſ. 15.

Verſ. 20.

as to feare a bodily Death ſo greatly as he made ſhew of, but it was in other reſpects, that he was ſo peirced with ſorrow: For I, ſaith he, Lay down my life for my Sheep, no man takes it from me. And indeed how could he, being innocent and ſuffering wrongfully at the Jewes hands, be ſo greatly grieved for this; whenas Socrates a Philoſopher, being condemned unjuſtly to dye, and his Wife weeping therefore, and ſaying, It grieveth me moſt that thou ſhouldſt be put to Death without cauſe; anſwered her chearfully, if it were for a juſt cauſe thou mightſt be ſoare grieved indeed, for ſo it is ſhamefull for one to dye, but not to ſuffer without cauſe? Joh. 10. 18.

Our Lord Jeſus was moved to utter ſuch words of griefe, in his praying then for the miſeries which he ſaw, that his Kinſmen in the fleſh, were by putting him to Death about the bringing upon themſelves; and for the ſcandall that would come by his Croſs, to keep that Nation from beleiving in him, to the prejudice of their eternall Salvation, and for the danger that would be, even to many that followed him, being by this meanes made to fall away.

They gave me Gall to eate, and Vinegar. How this was fulfilled, ſee Matth. 27. 48. Verſ. 21.

Let their Table become a Snare. Having ſhewed the things belonging to Chriſts Paſſion, now he propheſieth of the Judgments, both ſpirituall and temporall, that ſhould befall the Jewes, for the malice ſhewed againſt him, in thus perſecuting him to the Death; of ſpirituall here, Let their Table become a ſnare. That is, The Doctrine of the Prophets, which are as a Table well furniſhed, to feed and refreſh mens Soules, ſhall be to them an occaſion of ſtumbling, and being taken in a Snare or Trape, that they cannot come to the Faith to be ſaved. And this was when againſt themſelves they alledged out of the Prophets, that when the Meſſiah ſhould come, no man ſhould know whence he was; for it is ſaid, Iſa. 53. Who ſhall declare his Generation? And again, Out of Bethlehem ſhall he come, that ſhall be Ruler. And he is ſpoken of as a King, ſitting upon the Throne of David for ever, whereas Chriſts Parents were known, and he was of Galilee; beſides this they ſtumbled at his poverty, and ſundry things more: See more of this, where it is alledged, Rom. 11. 9. and by me expounded. Verſ. 22.

Let their eyes be darkened that they ſee not. That is, They ſhall not ſee God vailed in the fleſh to beleive in him. Then follow their temporall Judgments, Gods indignation againſt them, and the bowing down of their backs in ſubjection to the Romans, and deſolation after their City by them deſtroyed: Thus, for down their backs, the Sept. hath it and Saint Paul, Rom. 11. 9. But Hebrew, Make their loines to ſhake alwayes. Nothing differing in ſenſe, but in words only; for they that are in ſubjection to their Enemies have no ſtrength to help themſelves, which is meant by Loines, wherein the ſtrength lyeth, trembling and ſhaking, and ſo it is with them, whoſe backs are bowed down alwayes. Verſ. 23. Verſ. .24.25

Becauſe they perſecute him whom thou haſt ſmitten, and talke of the griefe of thy wounded ones. Hebrew, They number the griefe. That is, Whereas thy Son Jeſus Chriſt ſuffered according to thy predeterminate counſell, for he is ſaid to be ſmitten of God, at the leaſt, as men thought; for which it is ſaid, We counted him as ſmitten of God. The Jewes perſecuted him even after his Death, with Calumnies, and not only him, but his faithfull People, called Gods wounded ones. Becauſe alſo by him appointed through many afflictions, as their Maſter Chriſt did, to enter into glory; and he ſaith, They number their ſorrowes, to intimate many kindes of ſufferings and torments to which the Perſecutors for three hundred yeares put them; ſtudying, as it were, for new wayes of torturing them, ſo that he that would ſpeak of them all, muſt keepe a remembrance of their number. Verſ. 26. Acts 2. 23. Eſa. 53. 4.

Add iniquity to their iniquity, and let them not come into thy righteouſneſs: That is, ſaith Jerom, To their ſin of unbeleife ſet upon their ſcore, their ſin Verſ. 27. Hieron.

of perſecuting me and my Church alſo; and let them never come into thy Kingdome, which is the Crowne of righteouſneſſe beſtowed by the righteous Judge upon thoſe that love him: Baſil, Add ſorrow or ſufferings to their ſin, and let them not ſtand up in Judgment, as Pſal. 1. and the word מ here uſed, ſignifieth both ſin and ſorrow coming therefore: Auguſt. Add to their iniquity of murthering a man, a greater of murthering the Son of God, for when they crucified Chriſt, they thought him to be a meere man; but he was God alſo, and ſo their ſin was double. Calvin, for this their ſin give them over to a reprobate ſence, that they may never have Grace to turne righteous: Whether of theſe to prefer I know not, for the words may be underſtood any of theſe wayes; but I prefer that of Baſil, Let them for their moſt horrible ſin of crucifying Chriſt, ſuffer both here, and at the Day of Judgment, when the righteous ſhall ſtand and abide in a moſt bleſſed Eſtate for ever, being driven away as the chaff by the winde into unquenchable fire, and this is further confirmed by the next words, Let them be blotted out of the booke of the living, &c. Which is not to be underſtood, as Auguſt ſaith, as implying, that any one written in that Booke, can ever be blotted out again, but only that they were written there in their owne opinion, of this ſee more in my Expoſition upon Exod. 32. 32.

2 Tim. 4. 8. Baſil. Auguſt. Calvin. Verſ. 28.

But I am poor, let thy ſalvation ſet me up on high. Having propheſied hitherto of his malicious enemies in Chriſts perſon; now he propheſieth of his Reſurrection from the dead, and exaltation by aſcending into Heaven, which was touched upon before, Pſalm 68. 18. in the ſecond perſon, Thou haſt aſcended up on high: For Chriſt was firſt poor, Phil. 2. 6. and heavy to the death, but being dead, he roſe again the third day.

Verſ. 29. Hieron. Matth. 26.

Baſil applyeth it to the Jewes in Captivity, when they were poor, but being delivered and graced by the King of Perſia, they were lifted up: Calvin, to David exalted to royall Dignity after poverty and much ſorrow, which he firſt had.

Baſil. Calvin.

I will praiſe God, &c. 31. This ſhall pleaſe him better then a Bullock that hath hornes and hoofes. Here is ſhewed, what great joy ſhould be to the Faithfull for Chriſt ſo exalted, as he ſheweth, that they ſhould have, even as a woman that had beene pained and full of ſorrow in Child-birth, but then filled with Joy when her child is borne: and out of their great joy, they ſhould ſing and give God praiſe, and this, it is ſayd, ſhould pleaſe God better then a Bullock, &c. as Pſal. 50. to praiſe God, is preferred before all ſacrifices, hornes and hoofes being named, to ſhew a perfect and moſt choice Bullock brought for ſacrifice: Auguſt and Ierom more curiouſly, by Hornes underſtand ſtrength, to puſh at Hereticks, and to raiſe the duſt, that is, earthly minded men from being earthly to heavenlineſſe of mind; but how this may be applyed here I ſee not.

Verſ. 30. Joh. 16. 21.

The poor ſhall ſee this and be glad: As gathering from hence, That they alſo ſhall be delivered, though for a time they ſuffer, as Chriſt did. For if we ſuffer with him, we ſhall be glorified with him, and then their ſoules live. For the priſoners, which he ſayd not to deſpiſe, Verſe 33. they are ſuch as Satan held captive, and in priſon before by ſin, but now they are delivered, their ranſome being payd. Therefore Chriſt preached, delivering them out of priſon that were bound Verſ. 32. Rom. 8. 16.

For God will ſave Zion and build the Cityes of Judah, &c. That is, His Church, ſo that whole Cities ſhall be turned, and of them it ſhall conſiſt, the Inhabitants abiding therein by perſeverance in the true faith for ever.

Verſ. 35.

PSAL.

PSAL. LXX. The title, ſee Pſalme. 38.

BEcauſe he had ſaid Pſalme 69. I am poor and ſorrowful, Verſe 29. he here prayeth to God to ſave him, and to confound his foes, Verſe 1, 2, 3. Upon the ſame Ground Verſe 5: and as he had ſaid Verſe 32: They that ſeeke thee ſhall live, ſo here, Let all thoſe that ſeek thee rejoice, &c.

This Pſalme then is nothing elſe, but an appendix of Pſalme 69: as the 43: is of Pſalme 42: ſome things towards the end thereof being again repeated, and a petition there wanting added:

PSAL. LXXI.

THis Pſalme is generally held to have beene compiled by David, when Abſalom rebelled againſt him, and it ſeemes not improbable by the contents, becauſe he ſpeaketh of his old age and gray haires. The words of the four former Verſes are almoſt the ſame with thoſe Pſal. 31. Jerom and Auguſt. expound this Pſal. of Chriſt, in whoſe perſon David ſaith, Let me never be put to confuſion: That is, By being ſuffered to lye in the Grave unraiſed up againe, Cauſe me to eſcape, and to come out of the Sepulcher. Hieron. Auguſt. Verſ. 1. Verſ. 2.

Thou haſt given command to ſave me, here he ſheweth, how he prevailed to ſave me from death by riſing again. Verſ. 3.

Baſil hath for the title, A Pſalme of David, of the ſons of Jonadab, the firſt Captaines, which he confeſſeth, yet not to be in the Hebrew, but yet he expoundeth it as a prayer to be uſed by the Rechabites, whoſe Father was Jonadab, of whom Jeremiah, writeth, Chap 35. Who, he ſaith, Were according to the title firſt captived: But leaving this, as being without any Ground, but that which is not in the originall, take we it as a prayer of David, in his Elder dayes, being in great diſtreſſe by Abſalom, and typically of Chriſt dying and layd into a Sepulcher for our ſinnes, and riſing again, and exalted to the higheſt Glory of Heaven; and ſo all things will well agree alſo, as is by theſe learned Fathers ſhewed. Baſil.

I am a wonder to many: Thus was David for his many and ſtrange ſufferings, and thus was Chriſt, being ſet up as it were, as a ſpectacle upon a Theater for men to behold and wonder at, as when he was detided, and in ſcorn clad with purple, and a Crown of Thornes, and brought forth with this ſaying, Behold the man, and being crucified openly, and a title ſet above his Head, Jeſus of Nazereth, King of the Jewes, Hebr. Gr. & Latine. Verſ. 7.

Caſt me not off in the time of my old age, forſake me not when my ſtrength faileth me: How this agreed to David, I ſhall not need to ſay, and touching Chriſt, it is moſt aptly ſpoken: For he hanging upon the Croſſe, cryed out, My God my God, Why haſt thou forſaken me? when this ſtrength began to fail him through the effuſion of his bloud, by the nailes peircing his hands and feet, and this he calleth his old age, becauſe that in age the ſtrength decayeth, and the ſtrongeſt man waxeth feeble. Verſ. 9.

God hath forſaken him, there is none to deliver him: See the like, Pſal. 22. 8. and as parallel to Verſe 5. 6. Pſal. 22. 8, 9 which is undoubtedly ſpoken prophetically of CHRIST. Verſ. 11.

I will go in thy ſtrength, and make mention of thy righteouſneſſe only: This ſaith Jerom, was done, when Chriſt glorified the Father, and ſpake not his owne words, but what the Father bade him ſpeake. For then he mentioned his righteouſneſs only. Verſ. 16. Hieron.

Thou

Verſ. 20. Thou ſhalt quicken me againe, and bring me up again from the Depths of the Earth: Here Jerom triumpheth over the Jewes, challenging them when this was ever verified in David, for he was never dead and quickned againe; and therefore this muſt needs be expounded of him, as that Pſal. 16. Thou wilt not leave my ſoule in grave: and to the depths of the Earth here, anſwer thoſe words, Eph. 4. 11. That he aſcended, what is it, but that he deſcended firſt into the lower parts of the Earth? Yet this may alſo be applyed to David, being figuratively underſtood, as a like ſpeech of Hanna, 1 Sam. 2.

Verſ. 21. Thou haſt increaſed my greatneſſe: That is, By inlarging my Kingdome through many Beleevers coming in after my reſurrection, although Jerom referreth it to the Soules brought with him out of Limbus Patrum, when he coming from Hell aſcended up to Heaven. And for David, he grew Verſ. 22. great againe after Abſalom deſtroyed by the coming of Judah and Iſraell unto him. For which he promiſeth to praiſe God upon the Harpe and Pſaltery, which David ſpeaketh of himſelfe, and what elſe followeth, Verſe 23. and 24.

PSAL. LXXII.

A Pſalme for Solomon.

THis Pſalme is ſayd to be the end of Davids Pſalmes in the Concluſion thereof, whereby it ſeemeth to have beene the laſt which was made by him, when he was now ready to dye, and herein his great piety to the end appeared; becauſe that to the laſt he expreſſeth his earneſt deſire of the welfare of Gods People in all Generations to come.

Numb. 27. 15. 16. 17. As Moſes, when the time came that he muſt dye, ſhewed an holy kind of ſolicitude about a ſucceſſour, that might rule according to Gods will: The People that want ſuch a Ruler, being as ſheepe without a ſheapheard, as is

Note. there expreſſed: and againe, 1. King. 22, 17. Whence note by the way, That one Ruler in a Kingdom, is a great Bleſſing to the whole body politick, if he be one that judgeth Righteouſly, that we may all pray for this Bleſſing, and therefore for Monarchy, and not for Ariſtocracy or Democracy: For it is ſpoken of as a judgment for the ſinnes of the people, that their Rulers are many. Therefore this is to be prayed againſt, and in this reſpect we ſhould be moved by repentance to turne from our ſinnes, eſpecially from that ſin of ſeeking to beate downe Monarchy by God ſet up; yea, though the King be a Tyrant, for in this caſe we muſt know, that God hath given him in wrath for a ſcourge to the People, and what are we to reluct againſt God by force; yea, rather we ſhould patiently ſubmit to this his rod, and flee to him in all humility by prayer, and amendment of our lives, and then in his good time, he will either give the King his judgments, or when we have been ſufficiently chaſtiſed, deliver us by taking him away, as he did Saul, that a David may ſucceed. And if we be not blind, we cannot but ſee, that they who live under a Monarch; but labour, Vi & armis, to ſhake him off, worke themſelves from an evill to a far worſe caſe, as we by woful experience have found it in this kingdom. Some doubt whether David made this Pſalme or not; but the concluſion puts it out of doubt, and he made it ſo for Solomon, as that he meant not him only, but the line of Kings

Calvin. that ſhould ſucceed him, untill the coming of the Meſſiah, his Son ſingularly promiſed, whoſe Kingdome ſhould be everlaſting, and univerſall over all Kingdomes and Nations, as here is propheſied, and Eſa. 9. 6. So that they which will have the King Chriſt meant here only, go without ground, as

Rom. 5. 1. Auguſt. who expounds the word Solomon, Pacifick, underſtanding hereby, that Prince of peace, by whom we have peace with God, being juſtified by Faith in him.

Give

Give thy Judgments (O God) unto the King, and thy righteouſneſſe to the Kings Son: The ſecond word ſerving to explaine the firſt, give him thy Judgments which are allwayes righteous, that as thy Vicegerent he may ever judge righteouſly and never otherwiſe. And by the Kings Son, he meaneth his ſucceſſours; but ſpecially Chriſt, who is ſingularly ſet forth by this, that he was the ſon of David. Verſ. 1.

He ſhall judge thy people in righteouſneſſe, and thy poor: The poor are ſpecially here ſpoken of, becauſe they are moſt ſubject to be wronged, and a good King hath a care of doing them juſtice eſpecially, for which Eſa. 1. 16 they are bidden to judge the Fatherleſſe and Widdowes, and reprooved, Verſe 23. becauſe they did not. Verſ. 2.

The mountaines ſhall bring peace to the people, and the hills in righteouſneſſe. The word שלום ſignifieth both peace and proſperity, and plenty, and in ſaying, the mountaines and hills ſhall bring plenty or proſperity, he meaneth, that the times, when ſuch a King is, ſhall be plentifull every where, not only in vallyes, which commonly are moſt fruitfull, but alſo in mountaines and hills which are more barren. And this is ſayd to be In Righteouſneſſe; That is, Then is the Kingdome ſo proſperous and flouriſhing, when all things are done in righteouſneſſe, Juſtice being done to poor and rich alike, as is further expreſſed, Verſe 4. Verſ. 3.

They ſhall feare thee as long as the Sun and Moon indure: Hebr. They ſhall feare thee with the ſun, before the Moon: The ſence being the ſame, as the Sun and Moon yeild all due obedience to God as their Lord and Maker from Generation to Generation, ſo the Subjects of a Kingdome thus ruled over, ſhall obey God alſo by living in his feare. For this is a ſpeciall effect of a righteous Government, the people live in the feare of God; but where it is wanting, they breake out into all diſſoluteneſſe and licenciouſneſſe both in act and opinion, to the bringing of all into Confuſion. And this ſerves alſo to admoniſh Rulers, that they ſhould aime cheifely at this, in ſwaying the Scepter, that the people may be inſtructed and directed in the right way about Gods Worſhip, as godly Jehoſhaphat did in his time; and preſſe to do and live accordingly. For it is held to be a greater evill in a Kingdome to have a King that leaves every one to his owne will to doe what he pleaſeth, then a Tyrant, that in ſome things ſuffereth not the righteous, but perſecuteth and puniſheth them. Becauſe that in leaving men to their owne Wills, there is danger of an univerſall corruption, as when there was no King in Iſrael: but in perſecuting the Righteous, courage for the truth and conſtancy is more increaſed, in ſeeing which others in great abundance are won alſo, as was proved by Experience in the primitive Church, when it grew to a Proverb, Sanguis martyrum ſemen Eccleſiæ. Verſ. 5. Note.

He ſhall come downe as raine upon the mowen Graſſe: That is, A righteous King is a meanes of ſo great Good unto his people, as that God through him makes them to flouriſh, even as the Graſſe, that is mowen; by raine, which otherwiſe is in danger by the heate of the Sun to wither away, as being by mowing layd naked to the heat thereof, but this is ſpecially verified in Chriſt, by whoſe coming the world, that imbraceth the faith is refreſhed, and a ſpring of Grace is made to come therein, as a new ſpring of Graſſe upon the Earth being mowen by the raine, of the benefit of the raine to the fattening of the Earth, both hills and vallyes and the making of it fruitfull, ſee Pſal. 65. And that flouriſhing in Grace is hereby meant, ſee V. 7. Verſ. 6

In his time the righteous ſhall flouriſh: And then he ſaith, That he ſhall raign from Sea to ſea, and to the ends of the earth; which is manifeſtly ſpoken of Chriſt, for although Solomons Dominion were far extended, yet it reached not ſo largely as to the ends of the Earth, but to certaine Countries about Judea, but the Goſpell whereby Chriſt raigneth, went through all the World, Rom. 10. 18. Verſ. 7. Verſ. 8.

The

Verſ. 9. The Iſles ſhall bow before him, and his enemies lick the duſt. A Phraſe to ſet forth the loweſt proſtration of the body, the very face being bowed to the Ground, according to the manner of the Eaſtern parts; but if not ſo lowly, yet by kneeling at the leaſt, which is the reverence of the Weſtern parts done to Kings, all good Chriſtians adore and worſhip him, as is taught, Phil. 2 6. and Saint Paul did Epheſ. 3. 14. and therefore it is a point of prophaneneſs not thus to bow, as is the manner of ſome, that unreverently ſit at prayer.

Note.

Verſ. 10. Here he nameth ſome Kings in particular that ſhould come with gifts, Viz. The Kings of Tarſhiſh or Mediterranean ſea of Carthage, ſaith Baſil, and of all Iſlands, and of Sheba and Seba. Of the Queen of Sheba coming with royall Gifts to Solomon, we read, 1 King. 10. 1. and of others from all parts, Verſe 24. 25. bringing Preſents from yeare to yeare, Verſ. 11. according to which it is here added, Kings ſhall worſhip him, all Nations ſhall ſerve him: Yet not ſo much Solomon the firſt Son of David, that raigned after him, as Chriſt, to whom all Nations are given.

Pſal. 2.

Verſ. 12. For he ſhall deliver the poore crying to him, &c. That is, The poor in ſpirit, as even Kings are, that have their eyes opened, for they ſee that they have none other helpe, neither can they be ſaved, but by him alone, and for his care to ſave ſuch as turn to him, he ſaith, Their blood

Verſ. 14. ſhall be precious in his ſight: That is, Becauſe to redeem them from death he ſhall not ſpare his own bloud from being ſhed.

Verſ. 15. He ſhall live, and to him ſhall be given of the gold of Arabia: ſo Vulg. Latine, but Hebrew, of the Gold of Sheba, which was alſo before ſpoken of; but Calvin, who followeth the Hebrew, expounds it of Arabia, And here the Gold with myrrh and frankincenſe brought and preſented unto Chriſt by the wiſe men coming out of the Eaſt, ſeemeth to be propheſied of, only Sheba, from whence this cometh, lay South from Ieruſalem, and they came from the Eaſt, but theſe two parts are ſo neere one another, that one may be eaſily put for the other; Prayer ſhall be made for him, and dayly ſhall he be praiſed: Junius, As long as he ſhall live, ſhall he give him of the

Junius. Gold of Sheba, &c. Expounding it of Solomon and every righteous King ſucceeding him, for this ſtill was the Bleſſing upon every one of them, that they held other nations about under tribute, and ſo their Gold came into them yearly, and ſo greatly did the people joy in ſuch a King, that they prayed God to ſave him, and ſpake honorably in his praiſe from day to day: All which is true, but only the firſt words, As long as, are added, it being Hebrew, Only he ſhall live: being meant principally of Chriſt, who liveth for ever, and liveth in the Faithfull, Gal. 2. 20. and to him is Matth. 12. 42. Gold given from Sheba, when from the uttermoſt parts of the Earth (by which Paraphraſis our Lord deſcribeth the Queen of Sheba) riches are given to the erecting of Oratories, and Hoſpitalls for his ſervice, and the maintenance of his poor members, and other houſes are built and endowed with revenues for the maintenance of his Miniſters, out of the bounty of Kings and Nobles in their territories, lying from one End of the Earth to the other. For the next, And prayer ſhall be made for him: The word uſed is בעדו which may beſt be rendred ſtil in him, becauſe עד ſignifieth ſtill, and ב is more uſed for in, then For, and ſo the meaning is, in Chriſts name, and for his peoples dayly praiſing him, I ſhall not need to ſpeak.

Verſ. 16. There ſhall be an handfull of Corne upon the Earth: Vulg. A Firmament in the Earth: But Hebr. It is a little part or portion of Corne, ſo much as a man can hold in his hand of pure Corne; upon the top of the Mountaines: He had ſayd before, That the Mountaines and hills ſhall bring plenty, Verſe 3. Here the ſame is repeated again with this added for the magnifying of the mercy the more, that not only Corne ſhall grow upon the Mountaines, but a little ſhall increaſe into a great deale, even upon on the barrenneſt ground growing ſo luſty and ſtrong, that the Eares being ſhaken with the winde ſhall rattle and make a noiſe by beating one againſt another, as the trees that be ſo tall in Lebanon, And they of the City ſhall flouriſh as the graſſe: meaning, That they ſhould be full of Children. It is a deſcription of plenty and proſperity, that ſhould be in Solomons time, and in the time of his Succeſſours, that were godly: And being expounded of Chriſts Kingdome, by the little corne upon the top of a Mountaine we may underſtand the word, which at the firſt was but as a little Wheat ſowne in the Montanous parts of Judea, but increaſed wonderfully; filling all Countryes, and flouriſhing and growing to an extraordinary height, as Muſtard ſeed whereunto our Lord compareth it: And in the City of the Church, then ſhall the faithfull be multiplied to a very great number, for the Church is as a city ſet upon an Hill. Matth. 5. 14

And his name ſhall be for ever, &c. This agreeth not to Solomon, but to Chriſt only, in whome all the Nations of the Earth are bleſſed. Therefore to God, who ſent us ſuch a King, is all Honour and Glory given for ever: and he prayeth, that The whole Earth may be filled with his Glory: See the like, Eſa 6.4 And this was fullfilled, when Chriſt became glorious, and was moſt highly honoured all over the World, all creatures bowing their knees to him, as to God the Father. Verſ. 17. Gen. 22.

And here the prayers of David are ſayd to be ended, whereby is intimated, that this was his laſt; but of the Pſalmes following, he made ſome alſo, as Pſalme 86. 101. 103. &c. ſo that it appeareth, that his Pſalmes are not placed in order. Calvin thinkes, that the matter of this Pſalme only was dictated by David, but made metricall by Solomon: but what ground of this conjecture I know not. Verſ. 18, Verſ. 19.

PSAL. LXXIII.

A Pſalme of Aſaph.

OF this title ſee Pſal. 50. and here are placed together ten Pſalmes bearing the ſame title, concerning Complaints and Meditations, Prayers and divers other things: And the words may be as well rendred for, as of Aſaph: and therefore it is moſt probable that David made ſome of theſe alſo, as Pſalm. 75. eſpecially, which agreeth not to any man but a King. Yea Calvin doubteth not, but that this was made by David alſo, wherein he ſheweth with what temptations he was ſhaken in his faith about Gods providence by reaſon of the proſperity of the wicked; but how that by conſulting with the Lord he was ſupported, being aſſured that all things are moderated by God, ſo that deſtruction ſhall be to the wicked in the end, and ſalvation to Iſrael, and deliverance from all evill, although the wicked flouriſh for a time, and the righteous ſuffer and be in miſery. Atheiſticall and worldly men contrariwiſe upon ſuch grounds deny Providence, and magnifie Fortune; as Brutus, that couragious and valiant man of Rome, when he was overcome by Anthony, ſaid, Now I ſee that vertue is nothing, but all things are moderated by Fortune, whom he charged his children therefore to worſhip, as a godddeſſe of greateſt power. Calvin.

Truly God is good to Iſrael. Calv. Yet, or, but God is good: Expounding it as a ſpeech, into which David brake, after that having wreſtled with the temptation here following, the truth was cleared up unto him touching Gods providence over his. Verſ. 1.

They ſpeake loftily, they ſet their mouth to ſpeake againſt heaven. Hee deſcribeth the pride of wicked men in proſperity, they are in their owne imagination ſo high, that they look upon, and ſpeak to poor men as unworthy Verſ. 8. 9 to come into their ſight ; yea they break out in their ſpeeches againſt God himſelfe, as did Pharaoh and Sennacherib.

Verſ. 10. Therefore his people return hither , and waters of a full cup are wrung out unto them. Hebr. Shall return hither , and full waters ſhall be wrung out to him : That is, the proſperity of the wicked being ſeen by Gods own people, will prove dangerous to make them turne to ſpeak wickedly alſo , ſaying , Is there any knowledg in God ? can hee tell how things goe here upon earth, that the wicked who blaſpheme his name , enjoy ſo great proſperity ? if he doth, why is it ſuffered to be ſo ? as followeth , Verſ. 11. which words are not to be taken as ſome would have them , as ſpoken by the wicked before complained of, but by Gods people moved by ſo great a temptation, to call in queſtion Gods providence ruling over all things : For even the faithfull are ſometimes greatly ſtounded , and ready to ſtagger in their faith through temptation , but in fine they recover themſelves, as David did, verſ. 17 18. Yet for this, ful waters ſhal be wrung out to this people. Theſe their thoughts and ſpeeches ſavouring of infidelity ſhall coſt them abundance of teares , as Peters falling to the denying of Chriſt coſt him. Calvin by theſe waters underſtandeth the teares ſhed by them, when they ſaw the things ſpoken of before, and no providence putting it ſelfe forth to be revenged.

Calvin.

Ainſw. Ainſworth following the Caldee , by teares underſtandeth afflictions , as Cald par. Pſal. 80. 5. And one makes this Expoſition upon it , this is the cauſe why T. W. they turn hither ; that is, to ſpeak againſt heaven , as the wicked are ſaid to do, verſ. 9. they have ſo many teares wrung from them by continuall afflictions.

Baſil. Baſil underſtanding this Pſalm of the Babylonians , and Gods people in captivity there, ſaith, by theſe words, His people ſhall return hither, is meant, out of captivity into Judea : and for the next words he hath it, Their Hieron. dayes ſhall be full ; that is , they ſhall live long there : And Ierome not much unlike unto him, ſaith , that Gods people ſhall , ſeeing theſe things, turn to him , and be found full of thoſe dayes that be everlaſting. But the word is מ׳ם not מ׳ם waters, not dayes , and therefore this Expoſition falleth, and the firſt ſtandeth beſt, becauſe it is a future , ſhall be wrung out to them , not the preſent-tenſe followed by others.

Verſ. 15. If I ſay I will ſpeake thus, I ſhould offend againſt the generation of thy children. Heb. Behold the generation of thy children; I have tranſgreſſed. Theſe words relate to verſ. 13, 14. where David ſpeaketh, as if he thought his labour in the way of piety to have been ſpent in vaine , ſeeing the moſt impious enjoyed ſo great proſperity. But now, although he were hereby tempted to ſay ſo, he ſoon retracteth upon the conſideration of the righteous generation upheld ſtill by Gods providence moſt miraculouſly , being but few and poor amongſt ſo many proud and contemptuous perſecuters. The meaning then is, I am tempted indeed to ſay thus , and through my weakneſſe have thus murmured ; but beholding Gods providence over his little poore Flock , to uphold it amidſt ſo many wicked, I confeſſe I have tranſgreſſed, Calvin. in ſaying ſo already; thus alſo Calvin. The Expoſition of ſome others reading it, as hath been ſhewed , taking it as a ſuppoſition, if thus, I ſhould ſinne by diſcouraging the children of God from perſeverance, is good, but becauſe it agreeth not with the words, the firſt is to be preferred.

Verſ. 17. Untill I goe into the ſanctuaries of God. Here,and verſ. 16. before going, he confeſſeth that he could not, neither can any man be reſolved about Gods juſt governing of the world by humane reaſon , ſo that he may toyle himſelfe in ſearching into the cauſe of the proſpering of wicked men in this world, and not of himſelfe be ever able to find it out. But in the Sanctuary he ſaith, he found it, that is, ſaith Calvin, Gods ſchoole, who teacheth by his Spirit thoſe that ſeeke to him, what the vanity of worldly things is , and that true felicity is to be had onely in heaven. And if ſo, the wicked that ſhall never come there, are in the midſt of all their worldly proſperity moſt miſerable.

So

So (O Lord) when thou awakeſt thou ſhalt deſpiſe their image. Heb. (O Lord) thou ſhalt make their image contemptible in the City, and therefore the Vulg. is beſt here, Thou ſhalt bring their image to nothing in the City. Verſ. 20.

He compareth a proud rich wicked mans eſtate unto the eſtate of one in a dream, in which he ſeemeth to himſelfe to be a demi-god, but awaking, he is a poor miſerable man indeed: So are the wicked, great, and rich men here, they ſeem to themſelves and others to be of a ſublime condition, and not as other men; but the time ſhall come when they ſhall awake at the laſt day, or before that time, if ever they be inlightned, and then they ſhall ſee that all their pomp and pride was nothing, but as a dream. See the like compariſon, Iſa. 29. 7, 8. And if any beholding the glory of rich men here, think highly of them for this, when they are wicked, they are but in a dream. Yea, David himſelfe intimateth here, that he was ſometime ſo taken with theſe things in them, that he, as one in a dreame, thought their condition moſt bleſſed. But now being taught of God, to whom he went, and thus finding that all this their glory was but momentany, and that they were ſuch as ſhould after death be excluded from true bleſſedneſſe for ever, he concludeth, that God ſhould make all this their glory contemptible in the City of his Saints, the new Jeruſalem, from whence they ſhould be looked upon as moſt vile and bafe, as they had been by eyes dazelled for a time with their outward ſplendour, with feare and reverence. Note.

He confeſſeth, ſith it ſhall be thus, that he was moſt fooliſh, even as a Beaſt in his former thoughts, of which he had ſpoken, verſ. 13, 14. Verſ. 21.

Nevertheleſſe thou art continually with mee, thou holdeſt me by my right hand. Here the fatherly indulgence of God towards him, when he was ſo fooliſh, is celebrated, in that he left him not to himſelfe to be carryed away with ſo groſſe miſpriſions touching his providence, but held him by the right hand, by making him to know, and to be confirmed in the truth. Verſ. 23.

And hereupon he gathereth, that God will ſtill guide him, and finally bring him to glory: as he looked to none elſe in heaven or in earth to be thus guided, but to God alone; and therefore he was no Papiſt, that deſires help from the Saints departed, and from the Angels of God. Verſ. 24. Verſ. 25.

My fleſh and my heart faileth: That is, I am of my ſelfe very weak to ſtand againſt temptations both in body and ſoul; but God ſtrengtheneth me, who by my ſeeking to him is made my portion and inheritance for ever, both to guide me aright, and to fill me with comfort beyond all worldly things. Verſ. 26.

PSAL. LXXIV.

Maſchill, or Inſtruction of Aſaph.

WHo made this Pſalm we know not; ſome, becauſe it concerneth not thoſe times, when David or Aſaph lived, conjecture it to have been made long after, either at the time of the Babyloniſh captivity, or of the miſeries endured by the Jewes under Antiochus Epiphanes: But this is no reaſon, for Prophets commonly write of things to come, as already done: and although there were ſome Prophets that might write in the time of the captivity, yet in Antiochus his time there were none. Therefore not to enquire further after an Author in thoſe times, we may moſt probably conjecture it to have been made about the time that the other Pſalms were made, either by David or Aſaph. For the things complained of, they ſhew that this Propheſie was either of the deſtruction of the Temple and City by the Caldeans, or of the prophanation thereof by Antiochus, or of the laſt overthrow of all by the Romans: For amongſt Expoſitors, ſome are for one, and ſome

Calvin. Hieron. for another: Calvin for both, that by the Chaldees and Antiochus: Jerome for that by the Romans. But I ſee no reaſon why it ſhould not be thought to extend to them all. By the Chaldees the Temple was burnt, and that with roaring and a great noiſe of crying by the Edomites, Downe with it, downe with it, &c. By Antiochus, or in his times, Prophets and Signes ceaſed; and a little before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Pilate, as Baſil ſaith, ſet up a Swines head for a ſigne upon the ſtones of the Gate, and the Roman Armes were ſet up upon the porch of the Temple, cauſing great trouble to the Jewes: of all which ſomething is ſpoken, Verſ. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

Pſal. 137. Baſil.

Verſ. 3. Lift up thy feet to the perpetuall deſolations. The word פְּעָמֶיךָ rendred feet, ſignifieth ſteps, or ſtroakes, and it cometh all to one, whether way it be rendered; the meaning is, haſten to come and take revenge upon our cruell Enemies. The next words, Againſt every evill enemie in the Sanctuary, are rather a complaint; for being rendred according to the Hebrew, it is not againſt, but, every, every evill enemy the Sanctuary: that is, is in the Sanctuary: Then he ſheweth what they do there.

Verſ. 4: Thine adverſaries roare, they ſet up their ſignes in the midſt of thy congregation. Of which before in the preface to the Pſalm.

Verſ. 5. A man was famous: Hebr. He was known as lifted up on high. He aggravates the barbarous doings of the Enemies, by recounting with what coſt and labour the Temple had been built in ſo ſtately a manner; the work-men that cut downe, and fitted the Timber for this building, got them a name for their curious workmanſhip about it; but now the Enemies without, being moved at ſuch work-manſhip, with indignation deſtroyed all.

Verſ. 9. Neither is there any amongſt us that knoweth how long. This ſheweth that the Babyloniſh captivity only is not here meant, becauſe the time of determining that was ſet, viz. 70. yeares, and of the perſecution by Antiochus 1335. dayes, therefore the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans is alſo included: Of the deſolation following after which there is no certain time ſet that man knoweth, for which it is here thus ſpoken.

Verſ. 13. Thou brakeſt the heads of the dragons in the waters: That is, of the Ægyptians drowned in the red Sea, Pharaoh's Nobles; For by Dragons ſuch are ſet forth: and by Leviathan next mentioned, a great Tyrant, Ezek. 29. 3. Iſa. 27. 3. So that hereby in this place, Pharaoh and his Hoaſt are meant, who adventuring to purſue Iſrael through the Red Sea, periſhed all there. And this is here recounted to move the Lord to ſhew the like power again in doing for his people, and taking revenge upon their Enemies.

Exod. 14.

Verſ. 14. Thou gaveſt him to be meate to the people, inhabiting the wilderneſſe: That is, Pharaoh with his Ægyptians, who being drowned, were caſt up upon the ſhoare, and ſo their dead bodies became a prey to the Beaſts of the Wilderneſſe, whom he ſetteth forth by the name of people, as Solomon calleth the Conies, Piſmires, and Locuſts, Prov. 30. 25, 26. Joel 1. 6. Of dwellers in the Wilderneſſe, ſee alſo Pſal. 72. 9. And if men dwelling in the Wilderneſs be meant, the Ægyptians were made meate to them, when their ſpoils came into the Iſraelites hands, who were then in the Wilderneſs; for thus it it ſaid of the Canaanites, Numb. 14. 9. They are but bread for us: wee may take it both wayes.

Ainſworth.

Verſ. 19. Deliver not the ſoule of thy turtle Dove to the wicked: That is, of thy Church for her innocency, chaſtity, and weakneſſe, being not able to defend it ſelfe thus compared, Iſa. 38. 14. 59. 11. Ezek. 7. 16. Hoſ. 11. 11. Cantic. 4. 1. 6. 8. Matth. 16.

Verſ. 20. The darke places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty. Here ſome by dark places underſtand Caves or Dennes, where the innocent hide themſelves for feare, but in vaine, for the cruell find them out even there. Others, obſcure and baſe perſons, ſome ſuch places as God appeares not in to take revenge upon the wicked, for there they are bold to do any foule evill, and then think to lurk in ſecret places, that they may not be found out: But

T. W. Ainſworth. Calvin. Baſil.

Baſil

Baſil beſt, the places where they are in the darkneſſe of ignorance, not knowing God, are full of cruelty; and ſuch were the Chaldeans, Gracians, and Romans then.

Plead thine own cauſe. The cauſe of his People is here called Gods own cauſe, for that they being domineered over by the Heathen, the ſaid Heathen without all feare of him, as an Impotent God, were bold to blaſpheme his name. Verſ. 22.

PSAL LXXV.

At Taſhchith, of this Title ſee Pſal. 57.

AND hereby it ſeemeth to have been Davids, yet he ſpeaketh here, as a Type of Chriſt. For David being hitherto kept from the Kingdome, promiſeth when he ſhould come to it, to give thanks together with the Congregation, again, and again, and to judge righteouſly; which as Jerome hath it, is ſpoken in Chriſts perſon, who ſhall come to judge the World at the laſt day,, when all people from all parts ſhall be gathered before him: Meant here by the Congregation, by him then to be received and judged according to their works; ſome being invited into his Kingdome, and others ſent into Hell fire: So that we ought patiently to beare Injuſtice and wrong in the mean, for then each one ſhall have right. Verſ. 1 Verſ. 2. Hieron.

The Earth and all the Inhabitants of it are diſſolved, I beare up the Pillars thereof. This ſaith Calvin, is commonly applyed to Chriſt thus, When I come down to the Earth, I finde all men in a weake and fraile caſe, but I by my grace and ſpirit, put them into a firm and ſtable condition, to live to Eternity. But he thinketh this overcurious, and preferreth another, that although the Earth be in a diſſolving condition, by reaſon of the waters whereupon it is founded, yet God makes it firm and ſtable, as a Building ſupported by moſt ſtrong Pillars. But another better, the Land of Iſrael is all over in an ill caſe, ready to be diſſolved and weakned, to the great indangering thereof, by reaſon of the Warrs betwixt Sauls houſe and Davids; but Davids indeavour was, as ſoon as might be to ſettle it and the people in a more ſtable condition. Thus ſo far as the words concern David rightly, but as they concern Chriſt, we may underſtand them as hath been ſaid, out of Calvin firſt, but by him cenſured as too curious. Verſ. 3. Calvin. T. W.

The next words, Verſe 4. 5. ſhew how men may be eſtabliſhed. I ſaid to the fools, deale not ſo fooliſhly, and to the wicked, lift not up the Horn &c. Hebrew, To the mad deale not madly. For mad men do as fooliſhly, as naturall fools: There are two Vices which make the Earth out of courſe, Wickedneſſe and Pride, againſt both theſe he giveth warning here, calling wickedneſſe, folly or madneſſe, and pride, lifting up the horn on high, and ſpeaking with a ſtiff neck; that is, Not regarding either God or man, to blaſpheme both; and he addeth Selah, that it might be well marked by all that would ſtand firm, and not have a fading and melting Eſtate. And he yeildeth a good reaſon hereof, Promotion cometh neither from the Eaſt, &c. Wouldſt not thou then be pulled down, but ſet and kept up, deale not fooliſhly, neither be proud. Verſ. 4. 5. Verſ. 6. 7,

For in the hand of the Lord there is a Cup, and the Wine is red. Hereby the red fiery anger of God againſt the wicked is ſet forth, for this is commonly meant by his Cup, Pſal. 11. 6. Jer. 25. 28 Ezek. 23. 31. 32. Hab. 2. 16. And it is ſaid to be mixed, meaning, that it is ready prepared, as Prov. 9. 2. Revel. 14. 10. He powreth it out, or of it he powreth out, by afflictions coming even to his Children, Jer. 25. 17, 18. 28, 29. but to them for their greater Verſ. 8.

good

good, The wicked ſhall drink the dreggs. Ezek. 23. 34. Iſa. 51. 17. For as the dreggs be at the bottome of a Veſſell, and come out laſt, ſo the wicked having long lived in proſperity, ſhall finally ſuffer, and ſuffer more grievouſly, then any of the righteous ever have done; Aches and Pangs in all parts of the Body, Impriſonment in dark Dungeons, tormenting fire, loſſe of all their Goods, and horrour of conſcience for a time; but in every one of them, there ſhall be a Conflux of all theſe, and that for ever and ever, World without end.

Note,

Verſ. 10. All the hornes of the wicked will I cut off: That is, Their Strength, Power, and Dominion, ſo that they ſhall have none any more; but the Power, and Dominion of the righteous ſhall be greate: This is ſpoken in the perſon of Chriſt, who at the laſt day ſhall thus abaſe all the Wicked, and exalt the Righteous to the glory of his Heavenly Kingdome, to the ſitting upon Thrones, and ruling over Nations.

Revel. 2. 26. 3. 21.

PSAL. LXXVI.

On Neginoth. Pſal. 5.

THIS Pſalme ſeemeth to have beene compiled, not as ſome thinke, when Jehoſaphat had ſo famous a victory over the Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites, 2 Chron. 20. but when Senacharibs hoaſt was confounded before Hezekiah. So Calvin, Junius, and Baſil ſayth, that in Hexaplo it is added in the title, De Aſſyrijs, and the argument of it is ſuch, that it very well agreeth to that overthrowe. Becauſe the Place, from whence it came, is ſaid to be the Tabernacle, the dwelling of God in Zion, or Salem, that is, Jeruſalem, for Hezekiah did but come up hither, to ſpreade the proude Tyrants Letters before the Lord, and to pray: and the Night following was that greate ſlaughter in his army, when Sheild, and Sword, and Bowe, were broken, they that came with them being ſlaine, to 185000.

Calvin. Junius. Baſil.

Verſ. 1. Verſ. 2. Verſ. 4. Glorious, excellent art thou above the Mountaines of prey: That is, Above all Heathen Kings, who carry all by ſtrength, being like ſavage Beaſts, inhabiting Mountaines, where there is a covert of Trees and Buſhes, from whence they come forth from time to time to get their prey: ſo the Tyrants of the World, and Sennacherib in particular, by his great ſtrength, made a prey of other Nations, ſtriking Terrour into them where he came, but now one more terrible had confounded all his power, ſeene only for further declaration, how the Sword and Bow were broken, Viz. the men that handled them being ſmitten, ſlept their laſt ſleepe, and ſo there were none to uſe them.

Verſ. 5, 6.

Verſ. 8. Thou didſt cauſe Judgment to be heard from Heaven, That is, Thy deſtroying of ſo many thouſands upon ſuch a ſudden was ſounded abroade in all parts, and becauſe this Judgment came ſo apparantly from the God of Iſraell, it could not be thought to come by caſualty, but from him that ſitteth in Heaven, even the almighty God. And through hearing thereof the Earth, that is, men of the Earth, enemies to Iſraell, feared and were quiet, not moving War any more againſt Iſraell, all the dayes of Hezekiah.

Verſ. 10. The Wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee: That is, What preparations of Warr ſoever be made by wicked Heathen againſt thy people, by confounding them, when they are moſt outragiouſly bent to deſtroy them, thou ſhalt have praiſe, as being for this acknowledged moſt potent. And whereas Enemies ſtill remaine no leſſe fierce, thou ſhalt hold and curb them in ſo, that they ſhall not be able to hurt thine.

Verſ. 11. Vow and pay, Becauſe al your helpe depends upon God: vow in time of danger Gifts and Sacrifices, if God ſhall deliver you, and pay them, Numb. 30.

Verſ. 12. He ſhall cut off the ſpirit of Princes: That is, by taking away their courage rage, and infatuating their counſells, ſo many as are enemies to his Church, being terrible to ſuch Kings: and of this ſort moſt are, for which he ſpeaketh thus in generall of them.

PSAL. LXXVII.

On Jeduthun of Aſaph.

TOuching Jeduthun, ſee before, Pſal. 39. Jerome ſaith that theſe words of Aſaph are not in the old Copies.

Baſil will have this Pſalm to be concerning the Jewes in captivity; and this is not improbable, becauſe verſ. 7. he ſaith; Will the Lord caſt off for ever? but he correcteth himſelfe, verſ. 10. ſaying, This is mine infirmity, I will remember the yeares of the right hand of the moſt high. For the Church of God was then ſo long in miſery, that it made the Prophet, who wrote this, foreſeeing it by the Spirit, to ſpeak ſo, as it were through ſome deſpair: But conſidering that there was a time ſet, viz. 70. yeares; he correcteth himſelf, confeſſing it to have been his weakneſſe, becauſe the number of years when Gods people ſhould be delivered was ſet, and that number they ſhould not paſſe, but come at the end thereof into the favour of God againe to be delivered. Baſil.

I cried unto God with my voice, and he gave eare unto me: Before that he complaineth, he beginneth with an acknowledgement, that God had in times paſt heard his prayers; that recounting this, he might now be the more confident, and not diſpaire. And it is neceſſary for every one of us to keepe a remembrance likewiſe, of that which God hath done for us, for the further confirmation of our faith, when we are in greateſt ſtraights, and are long ſuffered thus to lye therein. For whoſoever was the Writer of this Pſalme, he propoundeth himſelfe as a leader to the Church of God, and every one of the faithfull being in diſtreſſe. And as Jerom noteth, he did well at ſuch times to cry unto the Lord, whether he had loſt his Goods, or his Country, or his Liberty, for he that crieth to the Lord, and hath him, hath all things. Verſ. 1. Note. Hieron. Note.

My ſoare ran down in the night and ceaſed not, my ſoule refuſed to be comforted, Hebr. For my ſoare, is, יָדִי My hand, and therefore by Calvin rendred, My hand was poured out, or ſtreched out, expounding it, I lifted up my hands unto God in prayer, not only in the day, but in the night alſo continually, although I found no comfort, a notable example for us to perſevere in prayer, even when we cannot prevaile for a gracious anſwer, but are ſtill under Sufferings, for at length we ſhall, as the Widdow with the unjuſt Judge. Verſ. 2. Calvin. Note. Luke 18.

I conſidered the dayes of old, I call to remembrance my ſong in the night: That is, both the gracious dealing of the Lord with his people in delivering them out of Egypt, and what matter of praiſe hath in times paſt been miniſtred unto me, making me to break out into ſinging even in the night: And hereupon I have made a diligent ſearch, why I ſhould now caſt away hope of obtaining mercy any more, verſ. 7. and finde that it is nothing but my owne weakneſſe whereby it cometh to paſs, that I thus feare a rejection for ever, verſ. 10. ſeeing God will never be unlike to himſelf, full of grace and mercy to his people, as he hath alwayes heretofore been, verſ. 11, 12, 13, &c. to the end of the Pſalm. Verſ. 5. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 7. Verſ. 10.

Thy way O God is in the Sanctuary. Some ſaith Calvin, not ſeeing how any good conſtruction can be made of theſe words, if it be rendred Sanctuary, read it, in ſanctity, or holineſſe; but this is far from the mind of the Prophet: And if by Sanctuary wee underſtand Heaven, the ſenſe will be good thus; Thy way is on high, farre exceeding the reach of man, and therefore he muſt Verſ. 13. Calvin.

muſt be inſtructed from above, that would ſee into the reaſon of Gods doings; or though he cannot, he muſt acknowledg the righteouſneſſe thereof; howſoever, reſolving that this is the cauſe, for that they are ſo ſublime. Or by the Sanctuary, underſtand the Sanctum Sanctorum, which was ſome reſemblance of Heaven, as the word is uſed before, Pſal. 73. 17. 68. 24. For as the things in heaven are hidden from our eyes, only wee ſee them by faith: So the things in the moſt holy place, none might goe in or ſee them upon paine of death, but the high Prieſt only, and that but once in a year.

Who is ſo great a God as our God? This is not ſpoken, as granting that there be more Gods, but to convince them of extream folly that worſhip any other god, or that ſubmit not unto God, acknowledging the juſtice of his wayes, although they cannot ſee into the reaſon, ſith he is ſo great and high, and ſo are his wayes, that man cannot comprehend them.

Verſ. 15. Thou haſt redeemed thy people with thine arme, the ſonnes of Jaacob and Joſeph: That is, out of Aegypt with a ſtretched-out arme, ſmiting the Aegyptians. And this People he diſtinguiſheth into two, Jaacob and Joſeph, Judah and Iſrael, whoſe head was Ephraim, that came of Joſeph, and was moſt populous.

Verſ. 16. The waters ſaw thee, the waters ſaw thee and feared. Here he inſtanceth in ſome particular moſt mighty acts done by God for his people, when he redeemed them out of bondage in Egypt: he firſt divided the red Sea, then the river Jordan: and the waters are ſaid to have ſeen & feared by a Proſopopeia, becauſe they did, as if they had ſeen God coming to paſſe through them with his people, and therefore gave way by dividing themſelves out of feare and reverence: which is ſpoken for the reproof of thoſe men that will not ſee to feare ſo mighty a God, but by hardning themſelves, incur his heavy wrath and diſpleaſure.

Note.

Verſ. 17. The clouds powred out water, the skies ſent out a ſound, thine arrowes alſo went abroad. Heb. for Skyes is שחקים properly ſignifying thin things, metaphorically the Clouds: and ſo it is beſt to render it, becauſe that from Clouds, and not from the Skyes, the Thunder cometh. It is moſt probable, as Calvin hath it, that the hideous tempeſt ſent upon Egypt, when Thunder and Lightning, Haile and Raine with Fire, fell to the deſtruction of Corne and Cattel, and all things in the fields, is meant.

Calvin.

Verſ. 18. The voyce of thy thunder was in the heaven, &c. The earth trembled and ſhooke. This is further added, to ſhew the greatneſſe and dreadfulneſſe of God the more, the thunder and lightning upon mount Sinai being meant, Exod. 20. 18. and the quaking of the mount, Ch. 19. 18.

Verſ. 19. Thy way is in the Sea, thy foot-ſteps are not ſeen. That is, the way whereby thou leadeſt thy people through the red Sea; which returning to the courſe again, the print of the foot-ſteps there made remained unſeen ever after.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

OF the title Maskil of Aſaph, it hath been often ſpoken, only here ſaith Jerome ſome copies have the Prophet Eſay for Aſaph, by the errour of the Scribe that copyed it out. For the Pſalm:

Give eare O my people to my law. Here the Lord is brought in ſpeaking, to make all men to attend the more; and by Matthews applying it to Chriſt, Chap. 13. 35. it appeares, that he is the Lord meant in that place: So likewiſe Jerome, the Lord Chriſt ſpeaketh, verſ. 1, 2. Then ver. 3. the Apoſtles. But Calvin denyeth the Lord to be here brought in ſpeaking, affirming that the Prophet who wrote the Pſalme ſaith thus, as was common with Prophets to doe, to ſpeak as if the Lord ſpake, becauſe of his Spirit ſpeaking by them. This indeed is true, but that it holdeth not here, appears by Matthews application, plication, which is above all conjectures of men. And how could any Prophet ſay, My People and my Law, as it is here ſpoken? It is Chriſt then, who is brought in ſpeaking in this place, and his Law of faith, to which he biddeth us give eare. And he calleth that, which he was about to ſay Parables, ſayings hard to be underſtood, and ſayings which were dark, and not ſo well underſtood in former Ages; this task being reſerved for Chriſt, to open the myſteries of the Kingdome of Heaven, viz. Of his Incarnation, Paſſion, Reſurrection, Aſcention, coming again to Judgment, and forgiveneſs of ſinnes, and deliverance from Hell and Death by his Death. Verſ. 2.

Mat. 13. 35.

Which we have heard and known, and our Fathers have told us. Theſe are the words of the Apoſtles, who converſing dayly with Chriſt, and hearing him, and reading the Prophets, that tell in their Writings the things following, eſpecially Moſes, ſhewed them to others, their Diſciples, and they to another Generation. For the ſetting forth of the Prophets by the name of Fathers, ſee Act. 13. 25. Verſ. 3.

For he eſtabliſhed a Law in Jaacob. Here to ſhew the difference betwixt the new Covenant and the old, it is firſt ſhewed, as Jer. 31. 31. that their Fathers in thoſe times, even almoſt whole Generations, brake Gods Lawes, being ſtubborn and rebellious; but their Children, the true Iſraelites under the Goſpell, ſhould not do ſo. And the rebellion of Iſrael is amplyfied further, under the name of Ephraim, of which Tribe Jeroboam was, Verſe 9. The Children of Ephraim being armed and carrying Bowes, turned backward in the day of Battell. Which is ſpoken, in alluding to the revolt of the ten Tribes from Davids houſe in Rehoboams time; and figuratively of Hereticks, who being of the Church of Chriſt, which is one Kingdome, Apoſtatize, and ſo make a diviſion, dividing themſelves from the truth, and ſo from his Kingdome: that without recanting, they ſhall never be made partakers thereof. It is thought alſo by ſome, becauſe they are ſaid, when they carryed Bowes, to have turned their backs; that this is ſpoken according to the Hiſtory, 1 Chron. 7. 21. 22. or 2 King. 17. Whereof mention is made again, Hoſea. 10. 6, 7, 8. &c. Which indeed was the Judgment upon them pointed at for their foule Idolatry, in which regard they are ſaid to have broken Gods Covenant, Verſe 10. And not to have remembred what he had done for them. Verſ. 5. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9. Verſ. 10.

Having touched upon the wondrous things that God had done for them; here he falleth to an Enumeration of them, beginning with thoſe in Ægypt, which he firſt ſpeaketh of only in generall; then having inſerted the wonders done after theſe upon the Sea, and the Rock flowing with water, the Cloud and Pillar of fire, his feeding them with Manna, and Quailes, and their often ſinning, and his puniſhing them; he returneth again to the wonders done in Ægypt, from Verſe 43. to Verſe 52. In the next place he recounts what he had done for them in the Land of Canaan; planting them in, and caſting the Cananites out, Verſe 54, 55. But they being ſo graciouſly dealt with, committed Idolatry, as is ſhewed many times in the Book of Judges, and were plagued therfore by being given into the hands of their Enemies, but calling upon God they were delivered, and their Enemies, eſpecially the Philiſtims, were deſtroyed in Samuels time: and getting ſtrength again in Sauls time, God raiſed up David, and by him confounded them, and provided well for the welfare of his people; placing them as Sheep with ſuch a Shepheard, who is commended for his exceeding great care in guiding and feeding them. Verſ. 11. Verſ. 12. Verſ. 13, 14, 15, 16, &c. to Verſ. 43. Verſ. 52. Verſ. 54, 55. Verſ. 56, 57. Verſ. 66. Verſ. 70, 71, 72.

All which being hiſtoricall, and I have written upon all the Hiſtories allready, upon the Pentateuch, and the reſt of the hiſtoricall Books, I ſpare therefore to writ again more upon the ſame things; only the Reader ſhall underſtand, that becauſe we are in this Pſalme prepared to heare Parables and darke things, Jerome ſetteth forth things concerning the Goſpell, darkly figured out in theſe Hiſtories, and Auguſtine likewiſe.

The myſtery.

By Ægypt, this World being underſtood, the ſtate of corruption, out of which to deliver us, great wonders were wrought by Chriſt, he, the Son of God did many miracles, and finally gave his life as a ranſome for our ſoules, and aroſe again, and aſcended up into Heaven.

Verſ. 12.

Verſ. 13. He cauſed them to paſſe through the Sea. When through Baptiſme into the State of ſalvation, 1 Cor. 10. 1. Which was alſo ſet forth by the Cloud, Verſ. 14. Verſe 14. For it is ſaid, They were all baptized in the Sea and in the Cloud. He led them in the night by a Pillar of fire. That is, His ſpirit, oft compared to fire, and hereby ſet forth, Act. 2. and promiſed to lead into all truth,

Joh. 16. 13. Matth. 4. and that by meanes of the word preached, which is a Light, Verſe 15. He

Joh. 6. 27. Ioh. 4. 10. clave the Rock and gave them waters. This Rock was Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. 1. 2. Who ſtood and cryed, if any man thirſt, let him come and drink, and the water that I ſhall give, ſhall be Rivers of water, &c.

Verſ. 18. They tempted God by asking meat for their luſt. The Phariſees tempted Chriſt and asked a ſigne, after wonderfull ſignes of his power ſhewed; but Matth. 12. 39. he anſwered, no ſigne ſhall be given, but that of Jonah, as he was three dayes and three nights in the Whales belly, &c.

Verſ. 23. Though he had commanded the Clouds above, and opened the doors of

Ioh. 6. Heaven, and rained down Manna. This was done, when he taught himſelfe to be the bread which came down from Heaven: For when Manna was rained down, for all that would gather it; but they remained ſtill

Verſ. 26. 27. incredulous, therefore he gave them the ſigne of his riſing from the Dead: ſo he ſent an Eaſt winde, and rained fowles, and they ate their fill; but whilſt the meat was in their mouthes, his wrath brake out againſt them. Whilſt they were talking of his riſing again, ſeeking how to blindfold mens eyes that they might not know it, moſt heavy Judgments ſeazed upon them from time to time; as may be ſeen in my Continuation of the ſacred Hiſtory, till Jeruſalems deſtruction.

Verſ. 32. For all this they ſinned ſtill. Having ſuffered by the Plague at Kibrath Hattaannah, Num. 11. 33. So the Jewes after Chriſts Reſurrection continued ſtill to ſin by infidelity, and perſecuting Chriſt, and were diverſly conſumed, and ſpent their dayes in vanity, looking in vain for another Meſſiah:

Verſ. 34. which was when they were ſcattered, deſpiſed, and deſtroyed in other Countries. Verſe 34. When he ſlew them they ſought him, but with a diſſembling heart. Which according to the hiſtory was verified in the time of Judges, then they were ſpared, and not wholy deſtroyed, according to the myſtery: when they, lamenting after the Meſſiah to come, weep and pray to Verſ. 42. God, being yet nothing reformed from their inveterate infidelity, finde this pity yet, that they are not all deſtroyed; but the Nation ſtill continueth in many parts of the World, in great numbers. Verſe 42. They remembred not his hand in the day that he delivered them, but forgat how he had wrought his ſignes in Ægypt. Then he reckoneth up the ſignes, 1. Turning their wa-

Verſ. 44. ters into blood, ſetting forth the teachings of Philoſophers, diſcovered to be corrupt, that men cannot now drink thereof; but the Fiſhes that do, that is, They who ſtill are addicted to them againſt the preaching of the Faith, do all dye. 2. Flies, ſetting forth the Sect of the Cynicks, a ſort of Phi-

Verſ. 45. loſophers teaching, that men might live as Dogs, or other Beaſts, doing what naturally they incline unto; but hereby they are devoured who are drawn by them. 3. Frogs, that is, Poets, by croaking with their Verſes, ſetting forth things tending to the teaching of many Gods, and ſome moſt vicious, to the corrupting of the Readers. 4. Catterpillers, ſetting forth Fornication, which eateth up the Fruit, although no ſuch danger ſeemeth by the ſtill coming on thereof to be feared. 5. Locuſts, ſetting forth diſſentions, becauſe the Locuſts are without a King. 6. Haile, ſetting forth Gods Judgments to terrifie ſinners. 7. Evill Angels, that is, Devils poſſeſſing and tormenting many, and being caſt out, entring into their Swine. 8. He ſlew their firſt born, that is, Principalities and Powers before ruling over

over them. Thus Jerome, but nothing ſatisfying: Auguſtine judgeth Rivers to be turned into blood, when the cauſes of things are carnally thought of, the Frogs moſt loquacious vanity, ærugo or mildew, put for Caterpillers, that which ſecretly hurteth; the Locuſts, malice hurting by falſe witneſſe, Haile, rapine, and robbery, &c. And he noteth that three Plagues of Ægypt are here omitted, Lice, Soares, and Darkneſſe, and other three not mentioned there, are inſerted, Mildew, Hoare Froſt, and Fire. And from hence he gathereth ſomething myſticall to have been meant: But neither is this of Auguſtine ſatisfactory, becauſe the evils which he ſpeaketh of, come not from God, but mans own corruption, and indeed he leaveth every one to his own liberty, what to underſtand hereby; only preſſing this, that other things are hereby darkly ſet forth. Ainſworth, who is alſo for Chriſt brought in ſpeaking, Verſe 1. and for things under the Goſpell meant, though darkly ſet forth, will have the Rivers turned into blood, the third Viall powered out upon the Throne of the Beaſt, called ſpirituall Ægypt meant; for then alſo the Rivers are ſaid to be turned into blood: By the Frogs, thoſe unclean Frogs, which go out to gather the Kings of the Earth to Battell: By the Locuſts, the Locuſts ſpoken of, Revel. 9. 3. 4. By the Haile, the Haile of a Talent weight, Revel. 16. 21. And the evill Angels he expoundeth, Angels of evill; That is, Moſes and Aaron, who brought evill tidings to Ægypt of Plagues, which alſo followed. But this laſt of his I ſubſcribe not to, for the words are evill Angels; intimating, that although it be not expreſſed in the Hiſtory, yet by the miniſtry of evil Angels or Devils, God brought thoſe Judgments. For the Devill brought down fire upon Jobs Cattell, and a feirce winde upon his Sons houſe, and a Bile upon his Body. Calvin contends, that good Angels may be meant as well as evill; becauſe ſometimes they have in executing Judgments been imployed, as in killing the firſt born in Ægypt, and 185000. in Sanneheribs Hoaſt; ſaying, That they might be called evill Angels, for the evils in Ægypt done by them: But what need is there of fleeing to this ſhift? when the words are plain, evils Angels, and not Angels of evill; yet for the myſtery of theſe Plagues, neither Calvin nor Baſil, nor others ſay any thing; and for thoſe that have hitherto ſaid, neither Jerome nor Auguſtine do herein ſpeake probably, becauſe under wonders, other wonders wrought by a divine power muſt be meant, which Chriſt wrought for the confounding of ſpirituall Enemies to Chriſtians, who are true Iſraelites, and for their redemption from ſpirituall ſervitude, whereunto the myſteries found out by them do nothing appertain; and the things figured out by them, muſt be things done before in order to redemption, not after, as Ainſworth underſtands it. I conceive therefore, that the things darkly ſet forth hereby, were the wonders done by Chriſt, to confound the wicked Jewes, and to work faith in the Elect amongſt them, that they might be ſaved from ſin and infidelity, in which the Phariſees ſought to hold them. For as Moſes came with miracles to deliver out of Ægypt and Bondage, ſo Chriſt from ſpirituall bondage; and as Moſes was oppoſed by Magitians, ſo Chriſt by Scribes and Phariſees: therefore he wrought miracles alſo for conviction: Only herein was the difference, Moſes wrought wonders deſtructive, Chriſt wonders preſervative: he turned water into blood, Chriſt water into wine, he brought Flies and Frogs, and Locuſts, and Catterpillers, deſtroying the fruits of the Earth, and annoying it: Chriſt increaſed a little of theſe Fruits, five Loaves and a few Fiſhes by bleſſing them, ſo that he herewith fed five thouſand men: He ſmot both men and Cattell with Haile, and thunder and lightning, that they dyed, Chriſt made ſome alive that were dead, and ſaved from Death the diſeaſed and ſick; he was an inſtrument to bring all manner of wrath and evill Angels amongſt them: Chriſt caſt out Devils, and did all manner of good, giving ſight to the blinde, hearing to the deafe, ſpeech to the dumb, limbs to the lame, and cleanſing to th leaper, and when the Sea was tempeſtuous, appeaſing it: He Auguſt.

Ainſw.

Revel. 16. 4. 6.

Revel. 11. 8.

Revel. 16. 13.

ſlew their firſt born, thus cauſing an horribble cry in all the land of Ægypt. Chriſt ſaveth all the firſt borne, or by ſaving makes them ſo: for thus they are called, Heb. 12. 23. & to the ſame Effect it is ſpoken, Revel. 1. 6. ſeeing the firſt born were Gods Preiſts in every family, and ſo their ioy is unſpeakeable, making them to ſing even at midnight. Whereas ſome judgments, as of the Lice, and Darkneſſe, and Biles, are omitted here, it was becauſe Light was before ſpoken of, which is oppoſite to Darkneſſe, and Lice and Biles, and Murraine amongſt Cattell are oppoſite to good done to the Body; of which ſort of Evills enough are ſet down, though theſe be omitted.

Act. 8. Act. 16.

Verſ. 52. He made his own people to go forth like ſheepe: Here it is alluded to Chriſtians going out from Jeruſalem, a little before the Deſtruction thereof, to Pella, and from thence into all parts to preach the Goſpel, to the ſubduing of Countries and Nations. After which, yet even they that imbraced the faith, as the Jews being poſſeſſed of the Land of Canaan, fowly ſinned by Idolatry, as their Fathers, other Heathen had done: only the Gods whom theſe Fathers had ſerved, were imaginary famous men and women in divers Countryes; the Divi, or Gods of Chriſtians, men famous for Faith, as Peter, and Paul, and John, &c. whom they began to call upon, after the ſecond Spurious Nicene Councell about Anno 600.

Verſ. 58.

Verſ. 59. Then God was wroth with Iſrael, and ſmot them with the Sword: That is, Chriſtians by the Turke, who after this, ſubdued many of their Countryes.

Verſ. 65. Then the Lord awaked as one out of ſleepe, and ſmot his Enemies: This is a Judgment yet to come, according to the Myſtery, when Magog, that is, the Turke, ſhall be deſtroyed.

Verſ. 67. He refuſed the Tabernacle of Joſeph, and choſe not Ephraim: This was verified according to the Letter, when the Philiſtims were utterly ſubdued by David, and he raigned over all, Ephraim not yet having a King by it ſelf: and myſtically it ſhall be fullfilled, when all Nations ſhall be brought in under the obedience of the Goſpell of Chriſt, Ephraim, that is, Idolatry, of which Ieroboam of Ephraim was the Author, being quite put down in all places for ever.

PSAL. LXXIX.

Calvin. THis prayer is thought by Calvin to have been made, either when the Temple was deſtroyed, and the Jewes by the Caldees, or in the time when Antiochus afterwards perſecuted the Church. And it ſeemeth to relate to the ſame times with Pſal. 74. only I take it not to belong to the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar at all, but only by the prophaning thereof by the foreſaid Antiochus Epiphanes. So Baſil, for he complaineth only of the Heathens coming into, and defiling the Temple, and caſting the dead to the foules and beaſts.

Verſ. 1. 2.

For theſe words, They have layd Jeruſalem on heapes, The vulgar hath, they have made it, Cuſtodiam pomorum: but the word ſignifieth nothing but heapes: for although the City were not then ruinated, yet ſo many were ſlain for refuſing to obey the Heathen Kings commands, that there might be heapes of their dead bodies caſt out in the ſtreetes, and in theſe, Jeruſalem is ſayd to be layd to heapes, the continent being Synechdochically put for the content.

This Pſalme is altogether ſpent in complaining and praying, being eaſie to be underſtood, till Verſ. 11. where he ſaith, Let the ſighing of the priſoner come before thee, preſerve thoſe that are appointed to dye: Which although Calvin applyeth to the captived in Babylon, yet it may bettet be expounded ded of them that were taken in the jayes of Antiochus, and impriſoned, and then brought forth to be executed, as the Mother and her ſeven Sons, for refuſing to break Gods Lawes, by eating of ſwines flesh; and many more, for not ſacrifiſcing to Idolls. 2 Mach. 7. 1 Mach. 1.

Verſ. 11.

The Church is taught to pray for Revenge in abundance meant by ſeven fold, to be taken upon them that ſpake reproachfully of God, to ſhew that we muſt not for private wrongs imprecate any, but for manifeſt blaſphemy againſt God; for ſuch ſhall ſurely beare their ſin. Verſ. 12.

PSAL. LXXX.

Of the Title of this Pſalme, Shuſhannim, and Eduth, ſee before Pſalme. 45 and Pſalme 60.

THIS Pſalme is by ſome thought to be made in way of praying for favour to all Iſraell, mention being made of Ioſeph firſt, as of one unkindly ſold by his Brethren into Ægypt, of whom yet God as his Sheapheard had a care, and in him of an whole flock to come of him. From his ſeat On Cherubims, he is prayed to ſhine before Ephraim, Manaſſeh, and Benjamin. Theſe, ſaith Baſil, being named, and all the other Tribes underſtood, becauſe of Ioſeph came Ephraim and Manaſſeh, and Benjamin came of the ſame Mother with Joſeph. Ainſworth thinketh them to be thus named, and theſe three in particular, next the Cherubims in the moſt holy place mentioned, becauſe theſe Tribes pitched about the Tabernacle weſtward, and were appointed to remove firſt after the Tabernacle when it went forward: but Calvin better, it is a prayer for the ten Tribes carried into captivity, 2 King 17 for their comfort and ſupport of their Faith in that time of Miſery: there being no reaſon elſe, that Iudah ſhould not be ſpoken of, which was the cheif Tribe, but becauſe the Kingdome of Iudah ſtood ſtill many years after. And if it ſhall ſeem unworthy for the groſſe Idolatry therein committed, to be thus ſpecially commended to God, he ſaith, there were in Eliah his time ſeven thouſand that bowed not their knees to Baal, and that they were ſometime juſtified above Iudah: and Hoſea 6. they are blamed for not being ſorry for the affliction of Ioſeph: But he ſaith nothing all this while of that which might be objected, touching Benjamin; he went not into captivity with the ten Tribes, for he was of the Kingdom of Iudah, but he might be named together with Ephraim, and Manaſſeh, with relation to Numb. 2, 17, 18. becauſe they three pitched towards one quarter of old, and therefore now the Prophet puts them together, although the Argument in hand concerned the Kingdome of Iſraell only. Verſe 1. Baſil. Verſ. 2. Ainſworth. Num 2. 17. 18. 19. 20. Calvin.

The Saving, which he ſpeaketh of, Verſe, 3. was by delivering them from captivity, and it is ſayd by the faithfull, How long wilt thou be angry with our Prayers? Meaning, How long wilt thou continue in anger againſt us? and therefore not be moved to ſhew us mercy, when we pray unto thee? Verſ. 3. 4.

Thou haſt made us a ſtrife to our neighbours, That is, The Aſſyrians, who ſometime raile upon us, and ſometime deride us, as Maſters and Conquerers, as their Captives and Slaves, for which ſuch abundance of teares were wrung from them, that they ſay, they were given them for drink. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 5.

Shee ſent out her boughs to the Sea, and her branches to the River,: He compareth Iſraell to a vine, as alſo Eſa. 5. 1. to move the Lord the more to compaſſion, ſith it ſtood not with his good pleaſure to ſee the vine ſo carefully brought and planted in Canaan by him, and preſerved to ſuch a growth, to be now deſtroyed by wilde Beaſts; like unto whom the Aſſyrians were. Verſ. 11.

And

And they ſpeak of the Sea and the River, that is, Euphrates, often ſayd to be the bounds of Iſraells Inheritance.

Verſ. 15. And the branch which thou madeſt ſo ſtrong for thy ſelf, Hebr. The Son: whereby Iſrael is in want, ſometime called a Vine, and ſometime called a Son, as Exod. 4. 22. The Cald. for Son hath the King Meſſiah, but why it ſhould either be rendred a Branch, or paraphraſed upon, The King Meſſiah, I know not; the ſence being good, if we read it a Son, as hath been ſhewed. For Iſrael was by God made too ſtrong for the Ægyptians to hold, when God would have him come forth to ſacrifice to him in the wilderneſſe. And the ſame, that is here called a Son, is called The man of thy right hand: Verſ. 17. As Benjamin by Jacob, Gen. 35. 18. but this man, by whom a Body politick conſiſting of many men, is underſtood, is alſo ſet forth in the plurall Number.

Verſ. 17.

Verſ. 16. They periſh at the rebuke of thy countenance: If Gods Countenance were not in the light thereof lifted upon them, as it is here prayed, Make thy face to ſhine upon us, V. 19. They were undone for ever, and muſt periſh from being a Nation in the Country where they were captives.

PSAL. LXXXI.

Of Gittith, here mentioned, ſee before, Pſalm. 8.

THis Pſalme was made to be ſung upon feſtivall dayes, wherein they ſtir up one another to the praiſing of God. For the Inſtruments whereupon they prayſed God, ſee Pſal. 33. 2. whereas he ſaith, Verſ. 4. This was a ſtatute for Iſrael. V. 4. See this ordinance for it, Exod. 23. 14. Numb. Verſ. 5. 28. 29. whereas it is added, Verſe 5. This he ordained in Joſeph, when he went out through the land of Ægypt, Heb. he put it for a teſtimony in Joſeph, in his going about the land of Ægypt: So ſpoken, becauſe Egypt lay low, and therefore, he that went from thence, went upon Ground above that land to go into Canaan. Ainſworth ſaith, that the word ſometime ſignifieth from, 2 Chron. 33. 8. or againſt, Exod. 11. 4. 5. for their going out 2 Chron. 33. 8. was againſt Ægypt, as being to the deſtruction thereof. But why is Joſeph named, who was but one of the Sons of Iſrael? Ainſworth, becauſe the Exod. 11. 4. 5. Tribes that came of him were the cheife, till that Iudah was choſen for the Kingdome, in reſpect of his excellency above them all by Gods ſingular providence in Ægypt, wherein he was ſo highly advanced, and be a Saviour to the reſt in time of Famin. I heard a language that I underſtood not: This is ſpoken in the perſon of Joſeph, who at his firſt coming into Ægypt underſtood not their language, and by the going abovt the land of Ægypt before ſpoken of, the Cald. uuderſtands Joſephs going to gather up the Corne in the ſeven plentifull years to lay it up.

Verſ. 6. His hands were delivered from the Pots. That is, From making Pots: for though their making of Bricks only be ſpoken of in the Hiſtory, yet the making of Pots being a like worke, and more art with the hands being ſhewed herein, it is not improbable, but that they made Pots alſo. Ainſw. Ainſworth renders it Baskets, ſaying, That Baskets, or ſuch Veſſels were meant, as wherein they carryed the maſſe of Clay, which they wrought.

Verſ. 7. I anſwered thee in the ſecret place of thunder. Here is a Commemoration of Exod. 14. that which is ſaid to have been done, Exod. 14. When the people of Iſrael Verſ. 24. being purſued by Pharaoh, cryed to the Lord, and he went in the black Cloud, and ſet himſelfe between the Iſraelites and Ægyptians, and when Pharaoh followed into the Sea, God is ſaid to have taken off the Charriot wheels, and to have troubled his Hoaſt, which was doubtleſſe by thunder, and it is ſaid, From the ſecret place: Becauſe God was as it were, in a ſecret place hidden in that Cloud. Of a black Cloud, wherewith God covereth himſelfe, ſee Lament. 3. 44.

place

Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it, That is, Aske good things abundantly of me in faith and obedience, and I will ſatisfie thee in all thy deſires: It is the ſame in effect, with Matth. 7. 7. Aske and yee ſhall have, and whatſoever yee aske in faith ſhall be done for you. So that the cauſe, why we want good things, or have them in ſo ſmall a meaſure, and ſcantily, is, becauſe we want faith to ſet us awork to open our mouthes and hearts in prayer ſo wide as we ſhould, and are bidden to do. Verſ. 10. Note.

So I gave them up to their own hearts luſts. For ſin God leaveth men to ſin, till they come to deſerved deſtruction. Thus the Gentiles were for their groſſe Idolatry given over to a reprobate ſence; and Iſrael had their hearts made fat, that ſeeing they might not perceive, to keep them in their ſinnes, and from healing: And this is the heavieſt of all Judgments, as being a certain forerunner of utter Perdition. And they ſhall walk in their own counſells; this is ſpoken in the Future, as relating to the times of the Goſpell, eſpecially Matth. 13. 12. Rom. 11. 8. 9. Verſ. 12. Rom. 1. Iſa. 6. 9. Note.

The haters of the Lord ſhould have ſubmitted themſelves unto him. Hebrew, Should have lyed unto him. that is, If Iſrael had been obedient, the Heathen who hated him ſo deadly, for the true Gods ſake and their Religion, and came vantingly againſt them, ſaying, That in ſuch a time they would ſubdue all the power of Iſrael, and make ſlaves of them, ſhould have been proved lyers, becauſe they ſhould not have prevailed, any more, then Sanneherib, full of ſo great brags, did againſt Hezekiah; or Iezabell, that threatned Elijah, curſing her ſelfe, if ſhe took not his life away by ſuch a time; did againſt him: Whereas ſome expound it by friendly ſubmitting to God, it agreeth not ſo well; for even the Enemies that were brought under Iſraell ſometime, ſubmitted not to the true God, either friendly or truly, but by compulſion only became Tributaries, adhering to their own ſurperſtitions ſtill. Such as did, as the Gibeonites, turned to him unfriendly, being thoſe Saints, that were after called Nethinims. But their time ſhould have indured for ever. That is, Iſraels in Canaan, injoying it as an Inheritance alwayes, and never driven from thence. Verſ. 15.

I would have ſatisfied thee with the fineſt wheat. Hebrew, With the fat of wheat, and honey out of the Rock. That is, Thy Land, in which thou ſhouldſt alwayes have lived, ſhould have brought forth fruits of the beſt ſort plentifully; and as it was ſaid to be a Land flowing with Milk and Honey, ſo ſhould the honey, to be found even in the holes of the Rocks, never have failed, but been ſupplyed abundantly. Verſ. 17.

Note that obedience procureth all worldly bleſſings, and ſin, ſcarcity and famin, that as we pray againſt the one, and for the other, we may indeavour to lay a foundation accordingly, all our dayes. Note.

PSAL. LXXXII.

GOD ſtandeth in the Congregation of the mighty, he judgeth amongſt the Gods. In this Pſalme the pride and corruption of Judges is taxed and threatned; they are called Gods, becauſe inveſted with the power of God, the power of life and death, as Pilate ſaid to Chriſt: knoweſt thou not, that I have power to put thee to Death, or to looſe thee? as being the men ſpoken of, Matth. 10. 28. But they have power only as under Judges, how great ſoever they be, yea even Kings themſelves: for there is a Judge amongſt them, that ſhall be their Judge, ſo that they can be in no place, but he is preſent to note their Proceedings, and if they be unjuſt, to judge them another day with the greateſt ſeverity. Of this the Heathen themſelves were Verſ. 1.

were not ignorant. Witneſſe the ſaying of one of them, Jupiter hath Empire over Kings themſelves, who is famous for the Gigantean triumph, moving all things with his eye-brow.

In reges ipſos imperium eſt Jovis, clari gigantео triumpho, cuncta ſupercilio moventis.

Verſ. 2. How long will yee judge unjuſtly, and accept the perſon of the wicked? Seeing God is ready to judge and condemne even you, how great and proud ſoever, thinking that yee may do what yee luſt; how is it, that yee think not upon this, to repent of unrighteous Judgment giving, whereunto yee have been drawn, through reſpect to the perſons of the wicked? for in judging yee ought to have no reſpect of perſons, Levit. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. 16. 19. And he mentioneth the wicked ſaith Calvin, becauſe the righteous ſeek not either by bribes or favour to their perſons, to have Juſtice perverted, but this is the practiſe of the wicked only, and ſuch is the corruption of nature, as that although there be no meanes uſed, yet corrupt men are moſt inclinable to favour them.

Calvin.

Verſ. 5. They walk on in darkneſſe, all the foundations of the earth are out of courſe. A complaint againſt corrupt Judges: they may be taught, and told indeed what they ſhould do; but nothing wil enter into them, to make them amend, but they will ſtil go on in this groſſe ſin of judging unjuſtly, & ſo in darkneſs; for what is it to walke in darkneſſe, but in ſin? John 3. 19. 1 John 1. Rom. 13. 12. Yea they are ſo ſet upon this, that they will thus go on, though all the foundations of the Earth be moved, as the Hebrew word ſignifieth: For as Juſtice and Judgment in Kings and Judges, are a meanes to eſtabliſh the Common-Wealth, ſo Injuſtice overturneth it, and makes it ruinous.

Verſ. 6. I have ſaid yee are Gods, but yee ſhall dye like men, and fall as one of the Princes. That is, Verſe 1. I have ſo called you, but this your great glory hath ſo dazled your eyes, that yee walke in darkneſſe, and therefore ſhall come into utter darkneſſe; dying not only as all other men ſhall do, being mortall, ever ſince ſin firſt entred into the World by Adam, but as heathen Princes, everlaſtingly; for whom the greateſt ſufferings by that Death await, as they haue had the greateſt glory in this World.

Rom. 5. 12.

Verſ. 8. Ariſe O Lord, judge the Earth, for thou ſhall inherite all Nations. Seeing men that are Judges be ſo corrupt, and there is no hope, but that they will alwayes be thus; come thou (O Chriſt) the righteous Judge of all: for all the Nations of the Earth ſhall be one day thy Kingdome by right of Inheritance, when there ſhall be no ſuch Judges any more, but every one ſhall be juſtly judged according to his works.

Pſal. 2. 8.

PSAL. LXXXIII.

Calvin. Baſil. THis Pſalme is by Calvin referred to the time of Iehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. 20. When Amon, and Moab, and Edom came againſt him. But Baſil to the time of Zerubbabel, or Nehemiah, when the Heathens conſpired together againſt the Jewes, being returned out of Captivity from Babylon. I hold rather with Calvin and others, that it concerned Iehoſhaphats time; becauſe that although ſuch as dwelt neer Jeruſalem conſpired againſt the Jewes after their return, yet it was not vi et armis, as the caſe here intimated was, but by ſubtlety and flattery. Neither are Ammonites, Moabites, &c. mentioned, but 2 Chron. 20. they are with others, by which others not only Edomites, but Gebal and Amalek, &c. might be meant alſo.

Ezr. 4.

Verſ. 1. Keep not ſilence O God. Hebrew, Be not ſilent to thee. Which laſt word, though ſome think redundant, yet others better, In thine own cauſe. For the Enemies here ſpoken of in coming againſt the People of God, came againſt him, as is noted by the Prophet, then ſtirred up to comfort them, 2 Chron. 20. 15. The batell is not yours, but the Lords: And therefore they are

are not bidden not to fight, but to ſtand ſtill, and to ſee how God would fight againſt whom they came, and ſubdue them: And Verſe 5. It is expreſly ſaid, they have taken counſell againſt thee. The faithfull are taught then here, how to pray both then, and in the like caſe, and that with confidence, that it ſhall be done ſo to their Enemies, as is here threatned. The Vulgar before theſe words prefix, O God who ſhall be like unto thee? And this the Ancients follow, although not extant in the Hebrew Text.

They have conſulted againſt thy hidden ones. Aquila and Theodation, Againſt thy hidden one, by Baſil and Jerome expounded of Chriſt, who was yet hidden, as the bunch of Grapes ſpoken of by Eſay, that had a bleſſing in it; but he was hidden till his Incarnation, in the Poſterity of David. But it is a plurall word, and therefore to be referred to the Jewes, that were truly faithfull, who are ſometimes hidden from the eyes of men, as the ſeven thouſand in the time of Eliah, whom he knew not of, and are Iewes within, Rom. 2. 29. and hidden in his Tabernacle, Pſal. 27. 5. and under his wings, Pſal. 91. Of Gebal, ſee Ezek. 27. 9.. The men of Gebal were of the wiſe men of Tyre, arguing, that they were a people pertaining to Tyre, which is alſo here ſaid to have combined amongſt the Enemies. The Ammonites and Moabites came of Lot, for which they are expreſly called, The Children of Lot, Verſe 8. and their ſin was the more hainous, becauſe for Kindreds ſake they had been favoured by Iſrael in their paſſage, Deut. 2. But now they were the principall Enemies of Iſrael. Touching the Aſſyrians ſaid to help them, hereby it appeareth, that he ſpeaketh not here of the Enemies combining after their return out of Captivity; becauſe the name of the Aſſyrians, and their power was long before that at an end: wherefore it is moſt probable, that ſome of them came at that time alſo amongſt the Moabites that hired them, or elſe an Hiſtory of things done alſo in Hezekiah his time is here annexed. Baſil to make good his Expoſition, ſaith, The Aſſyrians were thoſe that dwelt in Samaria. For the Imprecations following, Verſe 9, 10, 11. The hiſtories of the Midianites deſtruction, and of Oreb and Zeeb their Princes, and of Zeba and Salmuna, are ſo well known, Judg. 7. &c. that they need not to be further ſpoken of.

Verſ. 4. Baſil.

Verſ. 7.

Verſ. 8.

Verſ. 9. 10.

Let us take to our ſelves the houſes of God in poſſeſſion. Here ſaith Baſil, it is cleer, that the Enemies hindring the building of the Temple, after the Captivity are meant, becauſe this was the thing about which they laboured, either to fruſtrate the work of building, or to have an hand in building together with the Jewes, that they might have an Intereſt therein. But as Calvin well noteth, the Temple is not ſo much meant here, as the houſes of his people, wherein he had an Intereſt, and therefore they might be called his houſes, both becauſe the whole Land was his, and when any man build a new houſe, he was required to dedicate it to God, that by ſo doing he might acknowledge it: Therefore when they came in Iehoſhaphats time, to get the City of Jeruſalem, it might well be ſaid thus againſt them; they ſay, Let us take the houſes of God, &c. Or elſe hereby underſtand the Synagogues in all parts of the Land; which if they could have prevailed, they made account ſhould have been theirs. For not only Heathens, but any that dare to take any of Gods houſes into their private poſſeſſion, to turn them into others, Barns, Hey-houſes, or Working-houſes, are likewiſe accurſed to periſh by the moſt horrible perdition, that may be; becauſe nothing devoted to God may be redeemed.

Verſ. 12. Calvin.

Levit. 27.28.

Make them as a wheele, and as the ſtubble before the Winde. That of Jerome here, Make them as a wheele, Convertible, is but a conceit. That of Auguſtine is better: Who ſaith, That a wheele in the fore part goeth down, though in the back part it goeth up; ſo he prayeth, that the Enemies although they riſe up behinde; that is, afar off, being elevated with a proud conceit of bearing down all before them, yet as they come on to do any Verſ. 13. Hieron. Auguſt.

Calvin. thing againſt thy people, let them go down; or with Calvin, we may underſtand it, let them be unſtable and turning about; being kept ſo, that they may never be ſeriedly bent one way; but by often turning made unable to do us hurt: or if not ſo, make them as the ſtubble before the wind, unable to ſtand before thee.

Verſ. 14. Or as the fire b urneth the wood, or the flame the mountaines: So let thy Tempeſt, &c. That is, Thunder and lightening burne them like trees, that be high, but barren; for theſe are moſt expoſed to this danger: And as a flame kindled in mountaines by thy almighty power, as in mount Etna, in Sicily, which burneth continually, and caſteth out flakes of fire with great horrour; ſo make theſe mountaines of pride to burne in the flames of Hell fire for ever. All which is rather to be underſtood, as propheticall, then imprecatory, becauſe thus it ſhall certainly be to all the enemies of God and his people.

Note.

Verſ. 16. Auguſt. Fill their faces with ſhame, that they may ſeek thy name: That is, ſaith Auguſt. That ſuch amongſt them as are appointed to life, may be turned to God, by means of their heavy puniſhments: for even in the worſt countries God hath ſome Elect.

Verſ. 17. And then for thoſe that turn not, he prayeth, or rather propheſieth of their deſtruction for ever: for it cannot by any means be underſtood of the ſame, that are brought to ſeek Gods face.

Verſ. 18. That men may know, &c. For when the faithfull being in danger, are ſaved, and the wicked in the view of all the world notoriouſly deſtroyed, and ſome, that were before enemies, made aſhamed and converted; what greater matters can be done to approve the Lord Ruler over all the Nations of the Earth?

Calvin. Calvin, whom the Geneva note followeth, and E. W. will not have the ſeeking of Gods face, Verſ 16. after filling with ſhame, underſtood of true repentance; but of a forced ſeeking to God, as was that of Pharaoh: or by the word They, he will have the faithfull underſtood, whoſe part God thus taketh, to be more confirmed in Faith, to ſeeke to God, becauſe he prayeth, Verſe 17. That God would deſtroy theſe Enemies for ever. But this is no reaſon, as appeareth by the premiſes; they were not the ſame individualls, touching whom ſeeking Gods Face is ſpoken, and deſtruction for ever; but divers of the ſame Nations, ſome ſtricken and converted, ſome ſtricken and periſhing everlaſtingly, and the converted ones come thus to know the ſoveraigne power of God, all over the World, as is concluded, Verſe 18.

The myſtery. In the names before going, beſides the litterall meaning, Auguſt. findes a myſticall, by Aſſur helping the Children of Lot, underſtanding the Devill, who helpeth all that decline, or fall from God, as the word Lot ſignifieth: But in coming to interpret Madian, declining of Judgment, Siſera, the failing of joy, Jabin, underſtanding, Oreb Drynes, Zeeb, a Woolfe, Zeba, a Sacrifice, Salmona, a ſhadow of commotion, I ſee ſo little ſolidity, that I paſſe them over as conceits.

PSAL. LXXXIV.

Of Gittith, in the Title ſee before, Pſalm. 8. and for the Sons of Corah, Pſalme, 42.

Calvin. Calvin thinketh it to have beene made by David in the time of his Exile, when he fled from Saul, and it is not improbable, becauſe Verſe 2. he ſpeaketh of his longing to come to Gods houſe, as he had done, Pſalm. 42. Yet Verſe 7. he ſayth, They ſhall appeare before God in Zion, where the Tabernacle nacle was not in Sauls time; how then can this be juſtified to have been made in his abſence in theſe dayes? He anſwereth, Although it concerned thoſe dayes, yet it was penned long after David came to the Kingdome, and had ſet up a Tabernacle there; and for this he ſpeaketh of ſeeing God in Zion, according to the time of penning it. But this, I confeſſe, doth not ſatisfie me, becauſe when he made it, certainly he penned it; and therefore by Zion I underſtand Heaven, with Baſil, Jerom and other ancients, holding this Pſalme to have been made to ſet forth the happineſſe of the Saints in Heaven, called Gods Tabernacle. Alſo Pſalm. 15. and to teach us to long after it, and patiently to bear any miſeries by the way; the Reward there being more then ſufficient abundantly to recompence us for all our ſorrowes in this world. Yet I do not ſo underſtand it of Heaven, as to exclude the Tabernacle of God upon Earth; where his people aſſembled together to the duties of his Service; for the word is a Noune plurall, and therefore may well be meant hereby.

Baſil. Jerom. Auguſt.

And then here is commended unto us,

Firſt, A love and earneſt deſire to the houſes of God upon Earth, where the true Religion is ſet forth: And his name is the Congregation called upon. Verſ. 1.

And Secondly, to his Heavenly Tabernacle, to come into which is perfect Bleſſedneſſe for evermore. Therefore he ſaith well, ſome deſire Riches, ſome poſſeſſions here, ſome the building of Churches, that they may have ſome glory amongſt men; but I deſire nothing but a place in thy Tabernacle (O God) and this Saint Paul preferred as beſt of all, Phillip. 1. 23. 2. Cor. 5.

My heart and my fleſh long after the living God.

Firſt, He ſaith, his Soul, ſetting forth the whole man; now the parts, Heart, and Fleſh, inward and outward, both which much deſired to be in the place where he was publickly worſhipped; and he ſpeaketh of his Courts, becauſe none might go into the Tabernacle, but the Preiſts only; he would be imployed in his Service where God had appointed, and thought it an happineſſe even to be there, although but in the Court without the doore: for which he ſaith, I had rather be a door-keeper in the houſe of God, Verſe 10, knowing that by the Court was and an Entrance into the houſe. Verſ. 2.

For the ſparrow hath found an houſe, and the ſwallow a neſt, &c. even thine Altars, O Lord. Auguſt. by the ſparrow and Turtle, as the Vulgar renders it inſtead of a ſwallow, underſtands the heart and the fleſh, before ſpoken of: the one findeth an houſe in Heaven by meditation, the other a neaſt to lay her young, which is the Treaſure of good works layd up in heaven, which the Righteous do. The Sept. likewiſe, and Cald. for ſwallow have Turtle, but the word דרור ſignifying free, is more properly put for a ſwallow, which hath the greateſt liberty of any Bird, and תור is a Turtle, Pſal 74 19. the word צפור rendred ſparrow, ſignifieth any bird in generall; but when it is mentioned together with other birds, as here, it is a Sparrow; as Ainſworth noteth. Verſ. 3. Auguſt. Pſal. 11.

The litterall meaning is, theſe birds when they have flowen abroad and are weary, have a reſting place even in the Temple, for they build in houſes, and lay there; but this was Davids greife, that he having been long in this his flight, could not be ſo happy yet, as to have liberty to come hither again: therefore he ſaith, They are happy that dwell in thy houſe. Verſ. 4. Verſ. 5. Verſ. 6.

Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſtrength is in thee, and thy wayes in their heart: That is, they ſet their hearts upon the wayes that lead to thy Tabernacles, the Temple here, and Heaven hereafter, to be come to by this meanes. Of the wayes of the faithfull, ſee, Iſa. 15, 16. 35. 8. 40. 3.

As they go through the vaile of teares. Hebrew, The vaile of the Mulberry; for ſo בכא ſignifieth, although בכה a word neer to it, is weeping: but we need not turn it ſo, and thus be forced in way of juſtifying this Tranſla-tion to ſay, that א is ſometime put for ה, when as they are ſo little alike. And being rendred the vale of the Mulberry, the ſenſe is good. As they go through dry and ſandy ground, they uſe it for a well, or ſpring: That is, in going to the houſe of God through ſuch dry places, which is a great want to travellers in an hot Country, they are as comfortable as if they had plenty of waters all the way. If it be rendred by Teares, as by Jerome, and Baſil, and other Ancients it is, they give this ſenſe: when they are in ſorrowes and ſufferings, they rejoice for the hope of Heaven, to which they are travelling, as if they had no cauſe of being dejected by griefe, but lifted up with joy.

Calvin.

Hieron. Baſil. Rom. 5.

The raine alſo filleth the Pools or Ciſterns: Although they be deſtitute of ſprings, that want is ſupplyed by raine from above, filling Pits or Ciſterns as they go; that is, by Heavenly conſolation of doctrine, ſet forth by raine. See, Deut. Iſa. 45. 8. Deut. 32. 2. Zech. 14, 17. The Sept. for raine, hath Teachers, and ſo מורה ſignifieth alſo, Job 36. 22. The New Tranſlation being uncertain how to render it, turneth it Baca, but the right rendring of the word hath been ſhewed.

Verſ. 7. They ſhall go from ſtrength to ſtrength, the God of Gods ſhall be ſeen in Zion. That is, In this comfort they ſhall ſtrongly go on, not fainting or being weakned in their reſolutions, to the end of their dayes; and then God, in ſeeing whom is perfect bleſſedneſſe, ſhall be ſeen by them, 1 John 3. 4. 1 Cor. 13. We ſhall ſee as we ſhall be ſeen. We ſee now by the Eye of faith, but then with our bodily eyes, being made ſpirituall, when naturall ſhall be turned into ſpirituall; as is ſaid, 1 Cor 15.

Verſ. 9. Behold the face of thine Annointed. Here by Annointed, David meaneth himſelfe; and becauſe he was a Type of Chriſt, him alſo; in whom he deſireth, that God would look upon him.

Verſ. 11. I had rather be a Door-Keeper. Hebrew, ſtand upon the threſhold of the houſe. That is, Be in the meaneſt place of the houſe, Heaven: becauſe whoſoever is there, if but in the Door, is greater then the greateſt upon Earth: As Chriſt ſaid touching John Baptiſt, He that is the leaſt of the Kingdome of Heaven, is greater then he: And one day there is by him preferred before a thouſand in the Tents of wickedneſſe: further to ſet forth the happineſſe of them that have a place there. But how ſaith he, One day; when as none that come into Heaven, ſet forth by the Courts of God, are ever turned out again? Sol. Eternity is but one day there, becauſe there is no night, but day alwayes, and therefore to be there a day is everlaſtingly; ſo Jerome. but this compariſon is made to magnifie the comfort of Gods houſe the more, the ſpeech being only ſuppoſititious. The Tents of wickedneſſe are Habitations in this World, ſo full of ſin, that they may well be ſo called: good reaſon then, that we ſhould groane, deſiring to put off this earthly Tabernacle, that we might enter the heavenly.

Hieron.

Note.

Verſ. 11. For the Lord is a Sun and Shield: a Sun to his, to direct, inlighten, and cheriſh them, and a Shield to defend them: Of the Sun, ſee, Mal. 4, 2. and of God defending the righteous, as with a ſhield, Pſal. 5. 12. The compariſons ſerve to ſhew, what men are, that be out of Gods favour, as the earth without the Sun, languiſhing, as one in the midſt of great dangers by the Sword, but having no ſhield over his head.

PSAL. LXXXV.

Verſ. 1. O Lord thou haſt been favourable to thy Land, and haſt brought back the Captivity of Jacob. This Pſalme is generally underſtood by the Fathers as propheticall, touching deliverance from the captivity of ſin by Chriſt. And this Auguſtine gathereth from Verſe 4. Where he prayeth, Turn us

O God

O God of our Salvation. For how is it ſaid, after an acknowledgment of ſinnes forgiven, Verſe 2: Cauſe thine anger towards us to ceaſe; but that in the firſt words he propheſied of deliverance by Chriſt to come, and here directeth to pray for the benefit hereof, before it comes, and alwayes. Calvin and Junius, are for the dayes of perſecution by Antiochus Epiphanes; it being firſt with thankfulneſſe comemorated, what deliverances God had formerly wrought for his people out of Ægypt and Babylon: now they pray for the like favour again, humbly, yet boldly by faith demanding, Verſe 5. Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? Of theſe Expoſitions I reject neither; but hold that the Hiſtory of things done are firſt lookt at, as a ground of confidence in praying and pleading with God for time to come; and then the myſtery, our deliverance by Chriſt, in which yet but few of Iſrael having part, for the hardneſſe of their hearts and unbeliefe, that demand Verſe 5. is made; and it it immediately reſolved, Verſe 8. He will ſpeake peace unto his people and to his Saints. Intimating a converſion of Iſrael to come; as 2 Cor. 3. and Rom. 11. After which they ſhall no more turn to folly, but perſevere in the faith continually to the Worlds end. But he ſaith, I will heare what the Lord God will ſpeake: Firſt, meaning wait in ſilence, whatſoever I ſuffer, till God will be pleaſed to ſpeak comfort, and ſo I aſſure my ſelfe, that he will ſpeak peace. And herein he preſcribeth to each one, what he ſhould do in the time of ſuffering, viz. Not murmure, but quietly beare all things, and then the iſſue will undoubtedly be comfortable. For theſe words, But let them not return again to folly; Hebrew it is, And they ſhall not turn again. This ſhall be the benefit which they ſhall reape, by Gods ſpeaking peace unto them; they ſhall flee ſin for time to come: or as Calvin hath it, both of ſufferings, and peace reſtored after them, this ſhall follow, : for to flee ſin is rather the effect of chaſtiſement then of deliverance; whereupon David ſaith, Pſal. 119. It is good that I have been afflicted, for I am hereby taught to keep thy Commandements.

Auguſt. Verſ. 4.

Calvin. Junius.

Verſ. 5.

Verſ. 8.

Certainly his ſalvation is neer unto them that feare him, that glory may dwell in our Land. Having ſpoken of peace or proſperity, Verſe 8. now he addeth ſomething for more comfort to thoſe that wait upon God; ſaying, His ſalvation is neer, and not far off: and when it cometh, as ignominy and contempt hath been amongſt us in time of ſuffering, all men deriding and deſpiſing us, ſo we ſhall have glory and honour, and be highly accounted of, as Gods moſt beloved people, when the caſe ſhall be altered, for war and vaſſalage, to which we have been brought, liberty, and proſperity, and victory over our Enemies, coming in place. The Fathers, by ſalvation and glory dwelling in our Land, underſtand Chriſt, as the greateſt glory of that Land, becauſe he was there, taught and walked about, and wrought his miracles there.

Verſ. 9.

Mercy and truth are met together, Righteouſneſſe and peace have kiſſed each other. That is, ſaith Auguſtine, truth towards the Jewes, to whom the promiſes were made, and mercy towards the Gentiles, being ſtrangers from grace formerly. Righteouſneſſe and peace: Theſe are alſo ſpoken off, as kiſſing each other; becauſe he that doth righteouſneſſe ſhall have peace, but if not, peace will be far from him. Hereupon Auguſtine excellently: Do Juſtice, and thou ſhalt have peace; theſe two love one another, they kiſſe, they are two friends. Thou wouldſt have peace; for aske all men, and they will anſwer with one voice, we would have peace; this we prefer, we wiſh for, we deſire: but where are they that love Juſtice? Theſe are two loving friends, be averſe from the one, and the other will not come to thee; why then doſt thou ſtrive againſt Juſtice, which ſaith, Steale not, lye not, do not to another, what thou wouldeſt not have done to thy ſelfe? but thou hearkneſt not to her: why then ſaith peace, ſeekeſt thou me? I am the friend of Juſtice, and therefore whereſoever I finde an Enemy of hirs, I will not come to him.

Verſ. 10.

Amica ſum juſtitiæ, quem cum invenero inimicum amicæmeæ, ad eum non accedam.

Truth

Verſ. 11. Truth ſhall ſpring from the Earth, and righteouſneſſe ſhall look down from Heaven. Truth ſprung from the Earth when Chriſt came from the Virgin Mary, who was Earth; for of himſelfe he ſaith, I am the way, the truth and the life. And righteouſneſſe looked down from Heaven, when by grace through him, coming down from Heaven, Juſtification cometh to us ſinners, through faith in his Death: for he is the Lord our righteouſneſſe. Or truth ſpringeth from the Earth, when a ſinner, as the Publican, cryeth for mercy, and with the Prodigall confeſſeth, and when hereupon he goeth away

Calvin. juſtified. Righteouſneſſe looketh down from Heaven. Calvin. although he applaudeth the Allegory of Auguſtine, calling it Pulcherrimam allegoriam, and acknowledgeth it to be a truth, that all our righteouſneſſe cometh from Heaven, and that no perfect righteouſneſſe is to be found in any man upon Earth; yet paſſing it over as too acute, he ſets down this as the plain meaning: That in the Kingdome of Chriſt, theſe foure excellent virtues ſhall be both in Earth and Heaven, and that all places ſhall be full of them, Juſtice and Peace, Truth and Righteouſneſſe: Juſtice, in living and doing all things, as it requireth; Peace with God and with one another, Truth imbraced, and Errour vaniſhing, and Righteouſneſſe by faith, whereby to ſtand perfectly, holy, and without blemiſh, before God, both here and at the day of

Note. Judgment. Of the three firſt of which whoſoever is deſtitute, he ſhal never inherit the Kingdome of Heaven; for the grace of God in Chriſt to juſtification and ſalvation is fruſtrated to him; Sith the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the 1 Cor. 5. 11. 1 Cor. 13. 2 Theſ. 2. 11. Kingdome of Heaven: without peace and love all knowledge and faith is nothing, and ſuch as beleive lyes, turning their eares away from the truth, ſhall be damned.

Verſ. 13. Righteouſneſſe ſhall go before him, and he ſhall ſet us in the wayes of his ſteps. Hebrew, He ſhall ſet his ſteps in the way. So alſo the Vulgar Latine, by Auguſt. Auguſtine thus expounded: As when John Baptiſt came to prepare the way of the Lord, he did it by preaching, confeſſing of ſinnes, and turning therefrom by true repentance; ſo when we do the ſame, righteouſneſſe is ſaid to go before, our only righteouſneſſe being to confeſſe our unrighteouſneſſe, as Jerome ſaith; and then the Lord directeth his ſteps in the way unto us, to fill us with all good, as Verſe 12. So that harden thy heart in ſin againſt repentance, and dam up the way, whereby God ſhould thus with his bleſſings come unto thee; but penitently confeſſe them, and then the way is o-

Calvin. pen, and prepared, and God will come to fill thee with all good here, and hereafter. Calvin, by Righteouſneſſe here, underſtands that of Juſtification, as the Summum bonum of the faithfull, who reſt not in outward bleſſings ſpoken of, Verſe 12. but make this the end of their deſires, and the only thing that can beatifie them, betwixt which and the former there is little difference. I reſt in that.

PSAL. LXXXVI.

THE Contents of this Pſalme ſhew, that David was perſecuted by his Enemies, when he made it; but whether by Saul, or Abſolom, is uncertain: Calvin thinketh by Saul.

Verſ. 2 Preſerve my ſoule, for I am holy. This may ſeem to be ſome pleading for

Calvin. favour, in reſpect of merit in himſelfe, but the word rendred holy, is, חסיד merciſull, or kinde, or one that is in the ſtate of grace, an Object of mercy, and in reſpect of his kinde dealing with all men, for which he was not worthy to be perſecuted by any, he ſpeaketh thus; to incline the Lord the more to ſtand for him, who is the Patron of all thoſe that ſuffer wrong, and againſt all ſuch as requite evill for good. Baſil applyeth this both to David and Hezekiah, invaded by the Aſſyrians, and expoundeth theſe words, I am

Baſil. holy. I have given them no cauſe, and in compariſon of them, a Saint: for I know and and feare God, they do not, they perſecute, and I ſuffer. Auguſtine referreth it to Chriſt, who only can ſay of himſelfe, I am holy. But this reaſon is too weak, as we may ſee by the ſenſe given hereof before: and therefore I take it for a prayer of David, as the Title ſheweth, concerning his perſon in danger by Enemies, and teaching us how to pray in the like caſe. Yet Verſe 9. is a propheſie of the converſion of the Gentiles under the Goſpell; being moved by Gods wonderfull works; that is, The Miracles done by his Apoſtles, and Miniſters ſent out to preach, and by his miraculous Death and Reſurrection. And their converſion is ſet forth by coming and worſhipping before God; as Iſa. 45. 23. by bowing the knee, and ſwearing by his name.

Auguſt.

Verſ. 9.

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 11.

Teach me thy way O Lord. How this ſhould be applyed to Chriſt, who is the wiſdome of the Father, and one with him, I cannot ſee; and therefore it muſt be underſtood of David.

Thou haſt delivered my Soule from the nethermoſt Hell. That is, out of deadly danger, wherein I often have been: A Pattern to be followed by every faithfull perſon, after deliverances to celebrate Gods praiſes; and if for corporeall, much more for deliverance from Hell and Damnation for ever. For the words, Nethermoſt Hell, Hebrew it is, Hell, or the Grave below. And therefore no ground is here, as Jerome noteth, for two places: whereby the inſulſity of the Papiſt appeareth, that will have Purgatory here intimated, as under which Hell the place of the damned for ever is.

Note.

Shew me ſome token of good. Hebrew, Make with me a token, or ſigne for good. Whereby he implyeth, that there was now no ſigne of favour ſhewed him, whereby he might be confirmed, in reſpect of Gods grace and favour towards him; and therefore admirable was his faith, to beleive notwithſtanding, that he ſhould come out of theſe troubles, and be ſet upon the Throne promiſed; for this faith is intimated by his praying. Others have prayed for ſignes, as Gideon, and they have been granted; but bleſſed is he that beleiveth, and ſeeth no ſigne; as Chriſt ſaid to Thomas: for ſignes are for unbeleivers, and when the faithfull aske them, although none be ſhewed, they are not ſhaken in their faith hereby.

Verſ. 17.

1 Cor 14.

PSAL. LXXXVII.

His foundation is upon the mountaines of holineſſe, So it Hebrew: is This Pſalme as Calvin conjectureth, was penned after the return of the Jewes, out of the Babylonian Captivity, for the comfort of the faithfull, againſt the diſcouragement, which they had by their fewnes and ſervile condition, in which they were under heathen Kings, although permitted to return to their own Country again; and alſo in reſpect of the Temple, ſo long in rebuilding, and then neither was it built ſo magnificently, as at the firſt by Salomon; For againſt all theſe it is here oppoſed, the foundations of the Church, after called Zion, in the time of the Goſpell laid by God, are ſurely laid; for they be upon holy Mountaines, ſanctified and ſeparated from the ſhaking of any violence of men or Devils, and therefore afterwards the Church is alſo called a City ſet upon an Hill; and we read of the Mountain of the Lords houſe, ſtanding higher then all Mountaines, Iſa. 2. And ſometimes a Rock is ſaid to be the foundation, upon which the Church being built, ſtands ſo ſtrong, that the Gates of Hell ſhall never prevaile againſt it; whereunto add the greateſt love of God ſaid to be towards Zion, Verſe 2. and the glorious things ſpoken of her by the Prophets, as Iſa. 54. &c. although not yet appearing; and that ſhe is the City of God. And what can be wanting then to make her perfectly happy, which is enough to put away all griefe, conceived at the beholding of his preſent condition, being ſo obſcure.

Verſ. 1. Calvin.

Matth. 5.

Matth. 16. 16.

Verſ. 2.

Verſ. 3.

obſcure. As for the queſtion amongſt ſome Expoſitors, how being about to ſpeake of the Church, he ſaith, not Him, but his foundations, it is eaſily reſolved out of that which hath been already ſaid. The foundations of the Church are called his, becauſe laid by God her builder; and they are ſaid to 1 Cor. 3. 11. be foundations, not a foundation, becauſe Chriſt is the foundation to all the faithfull, who are built upon him, and the Prophets and Apoſtles together are a foundation, becauſe they beleive their Writings, and words as infallibly dictated by the ſpirit of God unto them; for whatſoever we beleive unto ſalvation, that is a foundation upon which God buildeth us.

God loveth the Gates of Zion, more then all the dwellings of Jaacob. Here the greateſt love of God to his Church is ſet forth; gates being put for his dwellings, ſuch as the faithfull are often called, 1 Tim 3. 15. Ephe. 4. 13. &c. The dwellings of Jaacob, or Iſrael; that is, their Land and Cities therein, and Inhabitants, were all ſpecially favoured for their Fathers ſake, Abraham, Iſaack, and Jaacob; but no ſuch favour did God beare to Iſrael, according to the fleſh, as to his true Iſrael, his City, as the Congregation of the truly faithfull are called, Verſe 3. ſaying, Glorious things are ſpoken of thee, O City of God.

Verſ. 4. I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon to them that know thee. Hebrew, That know me, or my knowers; that is, to ſuch as have underſtanding of divine things, of which I ſpeak; for it would be vain to mention theſe things to others: but to the intelligent, that know the meaning of that which I ſay, it is moſt comfortable; and theſe he calleth my Knowers, which know what Hieron. I ſay or write here. By Rahab, Jerome underſtands Rahab the Harlot of Je- Calvin. richo; but Calvin better, Ægypt, which is alſo ſometime thus called; as Cald. par. Pſal. 89. 1. Iſa. 51. 9. and the Cald. Paraph. likewiſe. Here are five Countries mentioned; Rahab, Babylon, Philiſtia, Tyre, Æthiopia: All moſt inſeſt Enemies of the people of God, for ſo they are often ſpoken of; Ægypt firſt oppreſſed them, Babylon after, the Philiſtims for many yeares fought againſt them, and Tyre is complained of, Pſal. 83. 7 And Firhacha King of Æthiopia, came out once againſt them with 1000000 men in Aſa his time. And theſe were all groſſe Idolaters alſo; yet a wonderfull thing, concerning the faith he had to mention touching them, viz. That he was born there. Vulgar, Theſe were there. Expounded the Kingdomes before mentioned, they being ſpoken of as one man, becauſe by faith in Chriſt made all one; and they are ſaid to be borne now in Zion: that is, the Church, by the new birth, through the preaching of the word, which is there to regenerate, Jam. 1. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 23. But if it be taken thus, there is no reaſon to alter the reading, He was born there: But in expounding it to ſay, Theſe were born there. But I think, that the word He, hath reference to Verſe 1. His foundation is upon the mountaines. For ſpeaking of the City of God, whoſe foundations were the foundations there ſpoken of; ſaying, Verſe 3. Glorious things are ſpoken of thee, (O City of God) by a Parentheſis, as it were having ſaid, I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon, &c. as of peoples, whom this ſhould concern: He returneth to the foreſaid City of God, or Zion; and ſaith, This was born there. That is, this founder, of whom I ſaid before, His foundation is upon the mountaines; that is, God the Son was born in the Land belonging to Zion, which was the greateſt glory to her that could be. Of the increaſe of Children to the Church from the Nations, ſee Iſa. 54. 1. 44. 5. and therefore theſe Nations are mentioned, as from which Zion ſhould have many Children, other Nations being left to be underſtood. Then after Chriſt Verſ. 5. ſpoken of to be born there, it followeth, and of Zion it ſhall be ſaid, a man and a man: that is, many were born in her, that is, many of the Nations before mentioned, by the ſecond birth, as was ſaid before. And he the moſt high ſhall eſtabliſh her. That is, he of whoſe birth before, Verſe 4. to make it plain, that he was meant, that was firſt ſpoken of, Verſe 1. ſeeing to lay her foundations, and to eſtabliſh her, is all one; and he that doth this, is the moſt moſt high; great myſteries, ſaith Jerome: he that is born in Zion eſtabliſheth her, and a man born there, the moſt high; and therefore againſt the Arrian, very God.

The Lord ſhall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there. Hebrew, This. The ſame word being uſed, that was Verſe 4. ſhewing the ſame founder to be meant, the Son of God, the moſt high; The meaning is, That the people before ſpoken of ſhall upon their converſion be regiſtred for Citizens of Heaven, which they ſhall eſteem the greateſt priviledge in the World; as being an admiſſion into a Communion with Chriſt, the Son of God: forſomuch as all that are born there by the ſecond birth, are his Sonnes alſo, and Co-heires with him of heavenly glory. Other Expoſitors I confeſſe, for the moſt part, by this born there, in both places underſtand the body of Chriſtians, ſet forth as one; but who ſo ſhall conſider, that theſe are called Man and man, and in ſpeaking of their birth, theſe words, It ſhall be ſaid, that they were born in her, are uſed, cannot but acknowledge it moſt probable, that in all three places not the ſame, but divers perſons are ſpoken of, Verſe 4. and he that is above all, both God and man; and Verſe 5. ſuch as turned Chriſtians, in hearing them that came out of ſeeing their miracles. Verſ. 6. Rom. 8. 16.

As well the Singers, as Players on Inſtruments ſhall be there; all my ſprings are in thee. Hebrew, And the Singers as the Muſitians; all my ſprings in thee. Having ſhewed the glory of Zion, for Chriſt and Chriſtians from all parts, coming in unto her; now he addeth further, the expreſſions of joy, that ſhould continually be made there, by ſpeaking of the Singers and Muſicians; meaning, that they ſhould be there alſo, with voice and muſick, to ſound forth Gods praiſes, for ſo great happineſſe, as whereof the Church ſhould then partake. And herein he ſpeaks according to the manner of thoſe times, wherein they did not only by ſinging, but alſo by Inſtruments of muſick praiſe his holy name: 1 Chron 9. 33. 25. 1, 2. according to which the Lamb is ſaid to have Harpers with him upon Zion, Revel. 14. 1. And ſinging is commended to us under the New Teſtament, Ephe. 5. 19. Jam. 5. 13. and muſick withall is not forbidden, but rather commended alſo in the foreſaid Revel. 4. But what is it, that he ſaith further, All my ſprings in thee. Springs of water were very comfortable in thoſe hot Countries, and therefore by ſprings Spirituall comforts are meant; as the Comforter the ſpirit is ſet forth by a Well or Spring of living water, John 6. 37. and Revel. 22. 1. A River of water as cleer as Chriſtall is ſaid to proceed from the Throne of God: In ſaying then, All my ſprings in thee, he meaneth nothing elſe, but as in Zion, the Church, are all expreſſions of joy, by voice and muſick, for Gods ſingular bleſſings conferred upon her, ſo all his comforts, whereby he comforted himſelfe in God, were in her; teaching us, if we would not periſh through thirſt and want of theſe waters, to come into, and keep in Zion, never departing therefrom by Apoſtacy, or imbracing errours to our lives end: for here be all the ſprings of comfort, and no where elſe are there any, but want of water as in Deſerts, where whoſoever abideth, cannot but periſh miſerably for ever. Calvin by עין underſtandeth Eyes; as if it were meant; my eyes are wholy fixed upon thee: but although עין ſignifieth an Eye, yet עין is properly a fountain, or ſpring of water. Some he ſaith, underſtand thoughts or affections, ſome rejoycings, and Ainſworth graces; but the firſt is beſt. Verſ. 7. Note. Calvin. Ainſw.

PSAL. LXXXVIII.

Note.

Hieron.
Baſil.

Verſ. 1.

Verſ. 5.

Eccle. 12. 1.
Luk. 16.

Verſ. 8.
Note.

Verſ. 10.

Upon Machalah Leamoth maſchil of Heman the Ezrahite. The word Machalath, ſignifieth infirmity, and Leanoth, to anſwer, or in affliction, or ſorrow; wherefore by ſome it is thought to have a Title anſwerable to the Contents, but ſome will have Machalath, a winde Inſtrument, to which it was played; and Leathom, to be added to ſhew, that in ſinging, one anſwered another. Touching Heman the Author, he is commended for his great wiſdome, 1 King. 4. 31. He and Ethan, were the Sonnes of Zerach, the Son of Judah, 1 Chron. 2. 4. 6. and they are mentioned together, 1 King. 4. 31. where Solomons wiſdome is extolled above theirs, or the wiſdome of any other, who were wiſeſt. Maſchil, ſignifieth Inſtructive, or wiſe making: For hereby we may learn it to be our wiſdome in affliction, to flee to God by prayer, and to continue ſo to do; never deſpairing, although never ſo low brought, as this holy man was, who was ſo wiſe and of ſuch excellent parts, wherein we come ſhort of him, and therefore muſt not think much to learn of him, both patiently to ſuffer, and in the like caſe by ſinnes, how to pray, as Calvin noteth well; ſaying, that in this the ſpirit of God teacheth us by his Inſtrument, a form of prayer: and Ainſworth noteth it to be the moſt mournfull prayer of any, in all the book of Pſalmes. The firſt part of this Pſalme is a grievous complaint, Verſe 1, 2. &c. to 9. The ſecond containeth arguments to move the Lord to deliver him, Verſe 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. The third more complaints, Verſe 15, 16, 17, 18. Ierome expounds it of Chriſt, ſpeaking by prayer to the Father, in the midſt of his Paſſions. Baſil of the Jewes in Captivity, and generally of mankinde, being moſt miſerable here by reaſon of their ſinnes. Let the Reader take it which way he pleaſeth; it ſeemeth to me peculiarly to concern the caſe of this Heman, ſet forth for an example to any other faithfull perſon in greateſt diſtreſſe, and ſhewing him, what he may ſuffer, and yet no cauſe to deſpaire, but to make his moane to God, referring the event to him, and with patience waiting for help.

In calling God, the God of his ſalvation. He ſheweth, that whatſoever he ſaith here after in challenging the Lord, Verſe 10. &c. yet he did it not out of diſtruſt, but faith, being aſſured, that his Saviour would not let him ſink in his miſeries, as he tendred his own glory; which is to provide that his Servants being upheld in life, might joyfully praiſe him, and ſo glorify him; as Pſal. 50. 23.

Free amongſt the dead. A deſcription of the dead, Iob 3, 18. when Servants are free from their Maſters, and Debtors from Creditors, and Labourers from toyle, and the ſick from pain; but withall, let go without any hand of providence held more over them, as in the next words, Whom thou remembreſt no more, and they are cut off from thy hand. Not that God takes no further care of his Servants being dead, for we know, that he doth; Abraham, Iſaack, and Iacob, being dead, he yet ſtileth himſelfe their God, and the ſpirit returns to God that gave it; and Lazarus being dead, was carryed by the Angels into Abrahams boſome. But this is ſpoken according to the apprehenſion of naturall men, or if in grace, ſtupified for the preſent by extremity of Paſſions, from which yet they by the grace of God recover again, and have the like expectation, when Death hath done its worſt.

Thou haſt put away mine acquaintance far from me. Hereby we are taught, that when we are in miſery and friends forſake us, and come not at us; or if they do, loath us, as Iobs friends did him; it is a Judgment by God laid upon us, to humble us yet the more before him: for when he will, Enemies ſhall become our friends, but when he is angry, friends ſhall be eſtranged from us.

Shall the dead ariſe and praiſe thee? His ſcope is to move the Lord to come come ſpeedily with help unto him, becauſe he was ſo nigh to death, that if he were not preſently delivered, the time would be paſt. He doth not move this queſtion as doubting of the Reſurrection of the Dead at the laſt day; but according to the courſe by the Lord commonly taken with men, not to bring them back from the dead to live again in this world to glorifie God; but being once gone from hence, to let them lye in darkneſs, & in oblivion as it were, til this world comes to an end. It is then as much as if he had ſaid, helſp, and ſave me Lord, nd that ſpeedily, who am now otherwiſe ready to be taken away by Death, and ſo from further celebrating thy praiſes here, which I ſo earneſtly deſire to do, and not yet to come into the Condition of the dead, who without a great miracle, cannot come forth to do this duty any more.

They came about me dayly like water, ready to drown me: Whereby the abundance of Gods Judgments upon him are intimated: they were like a floud, and before he ſpake of waves, Verſ. 7. unto which it is uſuall to compare afflictions, in other places alſo, as Pſal. 42. 7. &c. Verſ. 17.

He concludeth with the ſame complaint that he had made before touching his Freinds, Verſ. 8. and his acquaintance, but only he varyeth here, and ſaith, My acquaintance into darkneſſe, or as it is Hebrew, My acquaintance darkneſſe, that is ſo far from being a comfort to me, that they are my greateſt diſcomfort through their abominating of me, as was ſayd before. And this is a ſtrange kinde of ending a prayer, with deſparing complaints, as if he went away from Gods preſence in anger. But it is to be underſtood, that although he ended thus, yet he ſecretly ſayd in his heart, as he begun, heare me therefore, O Lord God of my Salvation. Verſ. 18.

PSAL. LXXXIX.

Of Ethan the Ezrachite, it hath been ſpoken before in ſpeaking of Heman, they had their name from Zarach their Father. 1 Chron. 2. 4.

THis Pſalm is propheticall touching Chriſt the ſon of David, and ſeemeth to be grounded upon 2. Sam. 7. for the promiſes there made are here recounted, and God is therefore praiſed, V. 8:

He taketh occaſion from magnifying God for his mercy in Chriſt, to proceed to his mighty works, in ruling the raging Sea, and ſubduing Ægypt, ſet forth under the name of Rahab, as Pſalme 87. and making Heaven, and Earth, and day, and night. Verſ. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12.

The North and South thou haſt created: Hebrew, The North and right hand, as the South is called, becauſe men turning their faces to the Eaſt, uſed to pray, and then the South was on their right hand; Thabor, a great mountain in Galilee weſtward, Joſh. 19. 22. Hermon, another beyond Jordan, Eaſtward, Pſal. 42. 7. ſo that here by the other two quarters of Heaven are meant, Weſt and Eaſt, and becauſe when they prayed, they turned their faces to the Eaſt; it was called, קדם before, and the weſt Achor behind. Ainſw. Job. 23. 8. Eſa. 9 12.

Laſtly, He is praiſed for executing Juſtice and Judgment, which are ſaid to be his habitation, And mercy and truth to go before him, Mercy, in Chriſt promiſing, Truth, in performing this his promiſe, before that he taketh men and condemneth them, as by ſin they deſerve. Verſ. 14.

Bleſſed are the people, that know the joyfull ſound: This is by ſome expounded of the ſounding with Trumpets, uſed to call Aſſemblies to the Tabernacle, over ſacrifices, and in time of war to be remembred by God: But Jerom better holds it to be an alluſion to the ſounding and ſhouting, at which Jericho fell down, prefiguring the falling down of Idolatry Verſ. 15. Ainſworth. Num 11. Hieron.

latry, and ſin, before the joyfull ſound of the Goſpell; and the people amongſt whom this was wrought are bleſſed: As knowing this by experience in themſelves to their comfort, They ſhall walk in the light of thy countenance; That is, Have joy in God, as they that are in the moſt comfortable light of the Sun, after much dark and peircing cold weather. And from hence he proſecuteth this argument of comfort.

Verſ. 16, 17, 18. They ſhall rejoice dayly in thy name, and in thy righteouſneſs ſhall be exalted. Where, by thy Name, he meaneth the name Chriſt, by which we Chriſtians are called, and by thy Righteouſneſs, Chriſts righteouſneſſe, whereby we are Juſtified.

For the Lord is our defence, and the holy one of Iſraell is our King. That is, the ſame, that is our Righteouſneſſe, is our King.

Then coming to ſhew this from the beginning, he ſaith, Then ſpakeſt
Verſ. 19. thou in viſion to thy holy one, meaning to Samuel, an holy Prophet, when this holy one was firſt appointed, in his Type David, to be King, 1 Sam. 16. 12. I have layd help upon one that is mighty, I have exalted one choſen out of the people: This was not meerly David, for he was but little of ſtature; but Chriſt: although it agreeth in ſome ſort to David alſo, for although he were little, yet he had ſtrength to do great things, to kill the Lion, and the Beare, and the great Giant Goliah, and ſo was a mighty help to Iſrael, before terrified by Goliah exceedingly; and he was but as one of the common ſort before, till that God had exalted him to the Kingdome. But moſt fully doth this agree to Chriſt, whoſe might is ſuch, that even Devills are ſubdued unto him, and upon him is help layd to ſave eternally all ſuch as come unto him. And his exaltation was yet more notable, from a Servant to be Lord, not over one, or a few Kingdomes, but over all the world; as Pſal. 2. Matth. 28. 18. Epheſ. 1. 21. 22.

Verſ. 23. I will beat down his foes before him, and plague them that hate him: This, and Verſe 22. were not verified to David, and all the Kings coming of him: For many of them through their own default were beaten down before their Enemies, and had Tribute exacted from them, and finally that Kingdome vaniſhed. But to David it was fulfilled in perſon, and in his Son Chriſt, all whole Enemies, and the enemies of his Church, have been and ſhall be beaten down, ſo that finally Chriſtians ſhall not be ſubject to exactions of Infidells any more, but rule and raigne, as Revel. 20. and 1 Cor. 15. All enemies ſhall be put under his feet.

Verſ. 27. I will make him my firſt born, the moſt high above the Kings of the Earth.

Here the amplitude of Chriſts dominion is propheſied of, neither can it be applyed to David or Solomon, becauſe that although their Dominion was extended far and wide, yet it never reached ſo far, as is here ſaid that Chriſts ſhould do.

Verſ. 30. If his Children ſhall forſake my Law: Here a caſe is put of Davids poſterity proving wicked; as indeed they did: Yet in this caſe he promiſeth not to caſt them off ſo; but that his Throne ſhould ſtill continue, although they ſhould for this be ſharply corrected. Whereby he meant, that however the Crown ſhall lye troaden under foot many years, as it did, after the Babylonian Captivity, yet his Kingdome ſhould not be extinct for ever, but flouriſh again under his ſeed Chriſt, that was to come, and to raigne everlaſtingly, Eſa. 9. 6. 7. Of his Kingdome there ſhall be no end: And ſo here is promiſed the everlaſting continuance of the Goſpell, and Chriſtians, that are called, as his Brethren, ſo his Children, and he their everlaſting Father; Eſa. 9. 6. 53. 10. They ſin indeed often times, and for their ſins ſuffer by perſecuters, but ſhall never be rooted out, but after a while reflouriſh again. Of the Judgments to come upon Davids poſterity for ſin, and upon Chriſtians, he next propheſieth at large, Verſe 38, 39. &c. to Verſe 45.

which

which is to be underſtood, as forſeen by the ſpirit, and therefore ſpoken of, as if already done, although it were not fulfilled, till many yeares after. And in this afflicted eſtate he ſheweth, how the Church ſhould call upon God, and bleſſe him, in aſſured expectation of deliverance, Verſ 46, 47, 48. &c. to the end of the Pſalme. Verſ. 46, 47, &c.

PSAL. XC.

A prayer of Moſes the man of God.

JEROME moveth a Queſtion; why, if this were made by Moſes, it was not inſerted amongſt his writings as well as his Song, Exod. 15. and another compiled by him, Deut. 32. But to this he anſwereth no more, but it pleaſed the ſpirit of God, that he who wrot of the Creation of the World and of man, and his ſinning, whereby he became mortall, ſhould write of his ſhort continuance, and the ſhort continuance of this World alſo, and Gods Eternity. And he noteth, that foure Pſalmes are ſingularly intituled prayers, this, and Pſal. 86. 15. 100. But the two laſt of theſe are intituled Pſalmes of David, not prayers, as he ſaith. Baſil ſaith, that ſome think it to have been made by David, but becauſe fitted to the arguments handled by Moſes, intituled, The prayer of Moſes. I ſee no reaſon, why we ſhould take it to have been made by any other, but by Moſes; and being compiled, but not written, a little before his Death, he left it to the Children of Iſrael to be uſed for their comfort, it being delivered from the Father to the Son, by word of mouth, till that David cauſed it to be penned, and amongſt the Pſalmes inſerted. Yet Auguſtine ſaith, that it is not probable that Moſes made it, but to procure the more attention, it is intituled by his name, who was ſo great with God; his reaſon is that rendred by Jerome, that it is not in all his Writings, although his Songs be. But I cannot herein aſſent unto him, becauſe it were ſome diſparagement to holy Writ, to ſay for any end, that this, or that was ſuch a mans, when indeed it was not, but made by another: Therefore the Cald. par. to put it out of doubt, ſaith of Moſes, When Iſrael ſinned in the Wilderneſſe, Numb. 14. Hieron. Auguſt.

In expounding it, inſtead of theſe words, Thou haſt been our dwelling place in all generations, he rendreth it, Generation, and Generation. That is, in the time of the Law, and of the Goſpell. And leaſt it ſhould be thought, that God was not, till he was a dwelling place for man; he addeth, Before the mountains were brought forth, &c. From everlaſting to everlaſting thou art God. By the mountaines underſtanding the Angels, and by the Earth, men, and other Creatures here. But although Hebrew it be, Generation and Generation; yet it is an Hebraiſme, ſetting forth all Generations before the flood and after, and under the Goſpell. God is alwayes a refuge for the faithfull, that ſeek unto him, and this God is everlaſting; both a parte ante, and a parte poſt. Before mountaines: for he made the Earth and all the World, doing this in time, but he himſelfe being before all time. Thus it is with God; but let us conſider man, and he ſaith, Thou turneſt man to deſtruction, and again thou ſaiſt, return yee Children of men. Hebrew, Thou ſhalt turn and ſhalt ſay: that is, according to Calvin, thou giveſt him a little liberty of life, whereby he fetcheth a little compaſſe, as it were, and then, if thou doſt but ſpeak the word to call him out of this, he ſoon returneth to the earth from whence he was taken. But others, he ſaith, expound turning again, of returning to life at the Reſurrection from death; cenſuring it as too argute; and ſo it is indeed: for here is nothing about the Reſurrection ſaid, but about our mortality only; neither is the word again, in the Hebrew, but, and thou ſhalt ſay: meaning, whereas I have ſaid, Thou ſhalt turn man to Verſ. 1. Calvin.

deſtruction

deſtruction, there belongs no more to the doing of this, but that thou ſpeak the word by calling the children of men from hence by death, and ſo they ſhall dye Generation after Generation. Ainſworth, and ſome others, will have a double turning here ſet forth.

Note. 1. Of the body to duſt, Gen. 3. 12. of the Soule to God, Eccle. 12. 1. But the plain ſenſe hath been already ſhewed, teaching God only to be everlaſting, and all men ſo eaſily by him called hence, as a Father calleth his Son going out from him, upon this or that occaſion, unto him again; that we may not make account of our time in this World, but alwayes watch, till our Lord come to call us.

Verſ. 4. For a thouſand yeares in thy ſight are but as yeſterday, when it is paſt, yea as a watch in the night. Here the Eternity of God is further ſet forth, by ſhewing, how little a large compaſſe of time is, being compared to his ſaid Eternity, a thouſand yeares are but as a day, yea but as a watch in the night, which conſiſteth of foure watches, three houres going to a watch.

Verſ. 5. Thou carryeſt them away as with a floud, they are as in a ſleep. Hebrew, Overfloweſt them, they ſhall be a mutation, or changeable thing. For the word is שנה ſignifying to change, from whence a yeare is called שנה: and if we render it by change, the ſimilitude of the graſſe put next, that groweth in the morning and is green, but it ſoon is cut down and withereth, followeth moſt aptly. The Vulgar, Quæ pro nihilo habentur eorum anni erunt, holding to the word yeare and to the ſenſe, though not to the firſt word here.

Verſ. 10. The dayes of our yeares, are ſeventy yeares in them. That is, in them that live to old age: And if by fortitude 80 yeares, even their latitude is labour and ſorrow; New Tranſlation, their ſtrength, Calvin, their pride; but the proper ſignification of רחב is latitude; that is, this inlarging of the time bringeth nothing but labour and miſery, becauſe now the body is diſeaſed, and ſo decaying, that a man hath no pleaſure in his life, but even to live is a pain unto him. For ſeventy yeares here ſpoken of, although Moſes and Aaron lived a hundred and twenty yeares, and Caleb at eighty were as ſtrong as at forty; theſe were ſingular examples, and it is of the generality of the people, that Moſes here ſpeaketh, eſpecially when as by their murmuring they had provoked God ſo, that he ſlew them in the Wilderneſſe, ſo that of 600000. only two eſcaped, all the reſt being cut off in forty yeares, as is ſhewed, Numb. 26. 64. 65. And this it is which he ſpeaketh of here, V. 8. 9. All our dayes are paſſed away in thy wrath, &c. Eccle. 12.

Verſ. 11. According to thy feare is thy wrath. That is, men are ſenſible of thy wrath, according to the feare of thee that is in them; for in the firſt words of the Verſe, he ſaith, Who knoweth the ſtrength of thy anger. For prophane and Atheiſticall men, whoſe hearts are hardned, have no ſenſe of Gods anger againſt them, to be moved hereby to turn to him, but ſuch as feare him have. The one ſort are ſmitten and murmure and fret, and this is all; the other by being ſmitten is ſo affected with the apprehenſion of Gods wrath, that he feares God, and eſcheweth evill yet more. To this effect Calvin; but he bringeth another Expoſition of ſome; as men feare thee, ſo for their ſinnes they are more ſeverely puniſhed by thee; for Judgment beginneth at Gods houſe; but it is very improper by ſuch as feare God here, to underſtand ſuch Rebels, as Moſes ſpeaketh of: who though they had the true religion amongſt them, yet they had no power of it in them, but were made examples for their murmuring againſt God, to all Generations to come after, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, 1 Cor. 10. 7. The Cald. paraphraſt, Who knoweth the ſtrength of thy anger to appeaſe it, but the juſt by turning to thee. Ainſworth, either by feare underſtandeth the Law, teaching how terrible God is to ſinners, as Pſal. 19. the Law is alſo called the feare of God, or the Judgments of God ſtriking feare into men; and then the meaning is, Feare and wrath are proportionable, and no man knoweth the power of Gods wrath, till that by his Judgments he is made to feare God. Or laſtly, we may take

Calvin.

Cald. par. Ainſw.

it

it thus, As thy feare is, ſo is thy wrath more or leſſe: This being the end of Gods Judgments, to drive men to feare him; and if they do, it ſhall ſoon ceaſe, if not, he will rage ſtill againſt them, till they be deſtroyed for ever.

Teach us ſo to number our dayes, that we may apply our hearts unto wiſedome. For teach us. Hebrew, Make us know, and we will make our heart come to wiſdome. It may ſeem ſtrange, that Moſes having computed the number of our dayes, to be but ſeventy or eighty yeares, which even Children can number, ſhould make ſuch a Petition as this to God; but he meaneth not ſo much, that we may barely know our life here, to be of ſo few yeares; but that we may know it, to make this good uſe of this knowledge, ſith our time is ſo ſhort, to let none of this paſſe, without labouring to get that wiſdome, which is to ſalvation, as it is ſaid, that the word of God is able, to make us wiſe to ſalvation. Wherefore they only are taught of God to number their dayes, whoſe hearts are ſet upon his holy word, to exerciſe themſelves therein day and night; learning hereby the knowledge of God and of his will, to live and do accordingly. All others how expert ſoever in numerations, if they can tell how many miles to the Stars, or how many betwixt Star and Star, if their hearts be not brought to this wiſedome, to provide for their eternall ſalvation, after this ſhort life ended; are the moſt ignorant and untaught of all others: for they have not yet learned, to number to ſeventy or eighty yeares of their own lives, or to afar ſmaller number, which ſome of them may live. Verſ. 12.

Return O Lord, how long? Let it repent thee concerning thy Servants. This is ſpoken, with relation to the divers Judgments which were upon the people of Iſrael, whilſt they wandred in the Wilderneſſe, and were kept forty yeares together, from the promiſed Land; for they were now ſometime conſumed by fire, ſent from God: ſometime by plague, ſometime by fiery Serpents, and ſometime by the Canaanites, who came out againſt them, and conſumed them to Horma. At theſe things Moſes was grieved, and complained, as thinking long to have an end put to this their miſery; whereas he prayeth, that the Lord would repent, he meaneth nothing elſe, but his turning from ſeverity to lenity again; ſetting the ſame forth firſt, by the word, Return, then by the word, Repent: Becauſe as a King in his wrath, puniſhing his rebellious Subjects, yet when the heat thereof is over, he repenteth, and ſpeaketh peaceably again unto them; ſo God turning, to ſhew favour to his people, whom he hath ſmitten, is ſaid in condeſcending to our weakneſſe, to repent; although to ſpeak properly, he is not like man, that he ſhould repent, as is ſaid, 1 Sam. 15. Calvin for let it repent thee, hath it, Be pacified; and the word ſignifieth either repent, or be comforted. But I reſt in the firſt, as giving the ſenſe beſt. Verſ. 13. Calvin.

Let thy work appeare to thy Servants, and thy glory to their Children. Hebrew, Let thy work be ſeen, and thy glory upon their Children. By work, he meaneth the great work of bringing them out of Ægypt, and putting them in poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan, which was yet imperfect, the firſt part only being done, but a great delay made for their ſinnes, in doing the other. In praying therefore, that Gods work might appeare, he meaneth in both theſe parts; and not keeping them ſtill to be conſumed in the Wilderneſſe, now that he began to do for them, in bringing them out of Ægypt. And this work he calleth his glory; becauſe whilſt it continued in ſuſpence, ſome diſhonour redounded to God, amongſt the Heathen; whoſe mouths were ready to be opened, and to ſay, That he brought his people out of Ægypt, to keep them to dye in the Wilderneſſe, as not being able to bring them into the Land, which he had promiſed, the Inhabitants whereof were too mighty for him to ſubdue. But the work being perfected, great glory would hence redound unto him; all Nations that ſhould heare thereof, being made to reverence him, as Almighty. Upon their Children. This is added, according Verſ. 16.

according to the promiſe made, Numb. 14. 31. that although the men fell in the Wilderneſſe, yet their little Ones ſhould inherit Canaan; for then Gods glory appeared upon their Children, when this was fulfilled.

Verſ. 17. Eſtabliſh thou the work of our hands. He prayed before, that Gods work might be ſeen now, becauſe he knew, that God would effect the great work of expelling the Canaanites by them, and yet they going about it by their own ſtrength, were nothing; he prayeth, that when they ſhould go about it, God would by his almighty power aſſiſt them, and ſo he doubted not, but that they ſhould prevaile: and he doubleth his prayer, to ſhew with what fervency he prayed, as we alſo muſt do, that our prayers may be effectuall; and in any work undertaken by man, eſpecially going to War, it is his duty to look up to God for help, as being able to do nothing of himſelfe, but through God, ſtrengthening him in the work.

Note. Iam. 5. 17.

PSAL. XCI.

Verſ. 2. I Will ſay of the Lord, he is my Refuge. Sept. and Vulg. He ſhall ſay. But Hebrew it is, I will ſay. Only becauſe all things here are ſpoken indefinitely, he or any man, that dwelleth in the ſecret of the moſt High. Verſ 1. and Verſe 3. He will deliver thee: That is, any one that is ſuch. They have put this in the third perſon alſo, reſpecting rather the ſenſe, then the word. For although the Author of the Pſalme ſaith, I will ſay: He meaneth, in the perſon of the man before deſcribed, that he is in this moſt ſafe condition, againſt all evils, which he may feare in moſt dangerous times. For in the ſecret of the moſt high, The Vulgar hath, in adiutorio altiſſimi; and who doth ſo, ſaith Auguſtine, but he that beleiveth and truſteth in him for help, and not in himſelfe, or any other thing? he ſhall be ſhadowed and ſheltered, ſo as that no evill ſhall hurt him. And Auguſtine, and Jerome both, will have this Pſalme, firſt to concern Chriſt, being in the Wilderneſſe, and tempted of the Devill, and then his Members: for he ſingularly dwelt in the ſecret, or help of the Almighty; to whom he was Hypoſtatically, and admirably united; and for truſting in him, the wicked Jewes could ſay, he truſted in him, let him ſave him, if he will have him. And the Devill, called here the Hunter, laid a ſnare moſt craftily for him, when he tempted him by Scripture, and giving him a view of all the glory of the World at once. And every one of his Members ſhall likewiſe be delivered from this wicked Feind. For that he is the Hunter that layeth a ſnare, appeareth 2 Tim. 2. 26. Where it is ſaid, That they may come out of the ſnare of the Devill. And he hath, ſaith Jerome, many ſnares, as covetouſneſs, wrath, &c. And from the noyſome Peſtilence; Vulgar, rough words; This difference being, becauſe דבר the word here uſed ſignifieth either a word, or with different pricks, the Peſtilence. Auguſtine following the Vulgar, giveth this ſenſe; from words, whereby ſome being terrified, forbeare to ſpeak what God would have them, thus incurring his diſpleaſure, to their own deſtruction; as Jer. 1. 17. it is threatned in this caſe: and הוות rendred noyſome, or rough, ſignifieth, Contritions, tearings in peices. And if by the former we underſtand the Devill, hunting after mens Soules, by his temptations; it followeth moſt aptly, which is here added, as another dangerous evill, to underſtand it of terrifying words; whereby ſo many are indangered through neglect of their duty, to ſpeak againſt ſin in whomſoever. If the other reading be followed, then both are to be underſtood of corporeall dangers by Hunters; ſuch Hunters as Nymrod, that is, Tyrants and perſecuters; & by the Peſtilence, that which ſuddenly deſtroyeth thouſands. But I rather prefer that of Auguſtine.

Auguſt.

Hieron.

Matth. 4.

Verſ. 5. Thou ſhalt not feare for the terrour of the night, nor for the arrow which flieth fleeth by day. What is the terrour by night, but feare of ſuffering for Chriſt, that maketh them that are in the darkneſſe of ignorance to fall away; and the arrow flying by day, but hotter perſecution, whereby the Children of the light are aſſaulted with greateſt violence, and whereby many full of light and knowledge are peirced and fall. Theſe are two kindes of temptations; one lighter, and the other grievous, whereby though many Chriſtians fall, yet ſome there are that do not, viz. They that dwell in the ſecret of the moſt High, truſting in him and not in their owne ſtrength; others although men of great knowledge, are feared from Chriſt, becauſe they thought too highly of themſelves, that they were able to ſtand, although all others ſhould flinch, as was ſometime the caſe of Peter. Thus Auguſtine, who proveth the Arrow flying at noon-day, for ſo he renders it, to be hot perſecution, from that paſſage of the Parable of the Sower; where it is ſaid, the Seed that fell upon ſtony ground, was the hearer, that receiveth the word with joy; but hot perſecution ariſeth, and then it withereth away; becauſe at noon-day the Sun is hotteſt. But what if we ſhall ſay, that by the terrour of the night, and the arrow that fleeth by day, (for ſo the word בלילה Beiom, ſignifieth) are meant practiſes of the Enemy of the truth, whether ſecret or open, whereby the truly faithfull, that are rooted and grounded, are nothing moved? For being thus underſtood, nothing can be excepted againſt; but underſtand it as before, and there wil be no good agreement; ſith no Chriſtian that ſtandeth in time of danger, is of the night, but of the day; being before darkneſſe, but now light.

Auguſt.

Matth. 13.

Nor of the Peſtilence that walketh by night, nor of the deſtruction that waſteth at noon-day. Here the ſame is again ſet forth, in other words: only that which before was called terrour, now is called דבר in the New Tranſlat. rendred Peſtilence: by the Vulgar, Verbum, V. 3. but here negotium: and that which was called Arrow, is called Deſtruction; and for day here is noon-day: Vulg. Lat. Dæmon meridianus, the ſenſe being the ſame, that hath been ſhewed before, viz. Of ſecret plottings, or open violence, in the midſt of the day.

Verſ. 6.

A thouſand ſhall fall at thy ſide, and ten thouſand at thy right hand, but it ſhall not come neer thee. Here, ſaith Jerome, are great myſteries; for he ſaith not at thy right hand, and at thy left: but at thy ſide and thy right hand. Becauſe the Righteous hath no left hand, but is right handed on both ſides; as Ehud, that killed Eglon. Auguſtine will have this ſpoken of Chriſt, at whoſe right hand the ſheep ſhall be placed. But how either of them maketh out the ſenſe good, I ſee not. Baſil and others, at thy ſide and thy right hand; That is, thy left ſide and right very many, that come about thee to deſtroy thee, ſhall themſelves be deſtroyed: but the deſtruction by them intended againſt thee ſhall not come neer thee; for thou ſhalt be ſafe under the covert of the wings of the Almighty. For wings, covering his people, are aſcribed unto him, for his tender care over them; and therefore he is ſometime likened to an Eagle, carrying her young upon her wings; and ſometime to an Hen, gathering her Chickens under her wings. Thus the Army of Sanneberib, being about 200000, coming to deſtroy Hezekiah, and the Ammonites and Moabites in very great numbers coming againſt Hezekiah and the Midianites againſt Iſrael in Gedeons time, were deſtroyed; and ſo have al other wicked enemies been from time to time, & ſhal be, if they riſe up againſt the faithfull, but they ſhall be preſerved. And one well noteth, that it is ſaid, at thy ſide, as ſpeaking of one; becauſe all the faithfull are one in Chriſt; this is the ſecure condition of the whole body of the Church, and of every Member thereof. In all which I aſſent; but ſurely there is ſomething more meant, in ſpeaking of a thouſand at thy ſide, and ten thouſand at thy right hand: and ſaying, it ſhall not come neer thee. For how can deſtruction be at thy ſide, and yet not neer thee? And although many faithfull perſons are preſerved in times of ſuch danger, yet many fall by the ſword, and other kindes of death, by the hands of Perſecuters. Therefore I cannot

Verſ. 7. Hieron.

Auguſt. Baſil.

Matth. 13.

T. W.

Note. but imbrace that of Auguſtine, It ſhall not come neere thee: That is, Thou ſhalt ſleight and contemne it, being for Chriſt and his Truth that thou ſuffereſt, it ſhall not come near thy heart, to make thee heavy or ſad; but thou ſhalt rejoice in ſufferings, for ſo the Apoſtles did Act. 4. And for the Side and right hand, we may underſtand the thouſand falling at the one, of Neighbours and Friends profeſſing the ſame Religion outwardly, and the ten thouſand falling at the other of thoſe in the Church, that pretend Zeale, but their hearts are not upright, and therefore when Deſtruction cometh, they all fall, the upright hearted only being ſaved. Or thouſands of ſuch ſhall fall away in time of perſecution or temptation by the ſubtilty of Sophiſters, ſuch as The Anti-Chriſt, who ſhall deceive the very Elect if it were poſſible; but they ſhall never fall, but ſtand and be crowned with an incorruptible Crown of Glory.

Verſ. 8. Only with thine eyes, thou ſhalt behold and ſee the Reward of the wicked: No nearer ſhall Deſtruction in any kind come unto thee, then to ſee that of the wicked, as Abraham ſaw the rich miſerable Glutton in Hell torments, when he looking up to him, craved for one drop of water to cool his tongue: So that all, who are not ſincere Chriſtians, or make any other then God their refuge, when dangers come, are wicked; and this ſhall be their reward, to periſh by the Judgments of God without remedy.

Verſ. 11. Matth. 4. He ſhall give his Angells charge over thee to keepe thee in all thy wayes: This was by the Devill alledged to tempt Chriſt to caſt himſelf down from the Pinacle of the Temple, but he anſwered, It is written, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God, Hereby ſhewing, that it is not meant, if a man will caſt himſelf headlong into needleſs danger, that he ſhall be kept by Gods Angells from harm, but being in the waies that God ſets him into, that is, Of Obedience, Faith, and conſtancy in the Truth. For what danger ſoever may ſeem to be in the Rage of the Devill and his Inſtruments in this caſe unto him, he ſhal not ſuſtain the leaſt hurt, no not ſo much as to daſh his foot againſt a ſtone, much leſs ſhall they be able to ſtone him, death to hurt him, as Steven, who even then had more Joy then paine, more Glory then ſhame; even Angelicall Glory, for his face ſhon like the face of an Angell.

Verſ. 13. Upon the Lion and the Dragon thou ſhalt walk, thou ſhalt tread under foot the young Lion, and the Adder. By ſtone before ſpoken of, at which it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt not daſh thy foot, Calvin underſtands, any ſtumbling block, that lyeth in our way, to cauſe us to fall from God, and by Lion and young Lion, open force, whereby we are aſſaulted, by the Aſpe or Adder, and Serpent, ſubtile and ſecret devices, to inſnare us. For amongſt ſuch we live, as labour every way to bring us to Ruine, and ſo timerous are we naturally, that we ſeem to our ſelves to be amongſt Lions, and moſt formidable Creatures, when any trouble is by wicked men ſtirred up againſt us; and therefore it is not without cauſe, that we are thus comforted, that even the moſt ſavage, venemous, and ſubtile, ſhall not hurt us, if we ſteadfaſtly truſt in God, thus getting under his ſhadow: for by the virtue thereof, we ſhall trample them under our feet, as poor and mightleſſe wormes, as it is ſayd, Rom. 16. God ſhall tread Satan under your feet. Baſil will have power to hurt, and Malice, meant by theſe Savages, and according to the Letter, David ſlew a Lion, and Paul ſhook a Viper off his hand and had no hurt, and our Lord promiſeth to them that beleive, theſe ſignes ſhall follow, they ſhall tread upon the Lion and Adder, or Baſil ske, &c. Auguſt. By the Lion and Baſiliske, underſtands the Devill, who is ſometime as a roaring Lion ſeeking whom he may devour, and ſometime as a ſubtill ſerpent, cunningly corrupting by Hereticks his Miniſters from the ſincerity of the Truth: but which way ſoever he cometh, the Church treads him down, neither fearing his Rage in perſecuters, nor being corrupted by his Subtilty in Hereticks. And this I ſo receive, as not excluding the other of Baſil; for touching ſome of the faithfull it is ſayd according to the Letter, That they ſtopped the mouthes of Lions, Rom. 16. 20. Baſil.

Matth. 16. 17. 1 Pet. 5. 8. 2 Cor. 11. 3.

Heb. 11. 33.

Lions, as Daniel: not to repeat that was ſayd before of David and Paul, and other Beleivers under the Goſpel, who were wonderfull for ſuch things, and the power of Faith, being hereby perceived; and by caſting out Devills whole Kingdomes and nations were converted thereunto.

Becauſe he hath ſet his love upon me I will deliver him; Calvin, He hath acquieſced in me: and who doth thus, the next words ſhew, Becauſe he hath known my name. Here God is brought in ſpeaking for the greater comfort, and aſſurance of the Faithfull, that is who love him, and reſt upon his protection, founding this their confidence upon the Knowledge of him, becauſe none but they that know him, and his Power, Mercy, providence and Goodneſs towards his, can do thus: and ſuch call upon God, as Verſe 14. and are heard, and bleſſed with a long and happy Life here, and then with Honour and Salvation everlaſting. Verſ. 14. Verſ. 14. Verſ. 15.

PSAL. XCII.

A Pſalme for the Sabboth, that is, the ſeventh day from the creation, wherein God is ſayd to have reſted from all his works, and to have ſanctified it: The Cald. Paraph. ſpeaketh of this Pſalme, as if it had been made by Adam, ſaying, An Hymn or Song, which the firſt man Adam ſaid for the Sabboth day: but that is not probable, but rather that David made it, who increaſed the ſolemnity of this day, by adding two hymnes of praiſe to be ſung, muſicall inſtruments to be alſo played upon, as may be ſeene, 2 Chron. 29. 25. of which alſo mention is here made. Gen. 2.

It is a good thing to give thanks to the Lord, and to ſing praiſes; Hieron: For to give thanks, hath it, To confeſſe to the Lord, Noting, that a man muſt firſt confeſſe his ſins and repent thereof, and then he is fit to ſing praiſes to God, but not before. And it is to be noted, that he ſaith, we muſt confeſſe our ſins to God, not unto man, againſt the popiſh practiſe of auricular confeſſion to the preiſt. Verſ. 1. Hieron. Note.

Thus alſo Calvin renders it, and the word הדה in Hithpael, ſignifieth to Confeſſe.

To ſhew thy Goodneſſe in the Morning, and thy Truth in the Night: Not as Calvin noteth, that one of theſe is to be praiſed in the day, and not the other; but that in celebrating Gods praiſe we ſhould perſevere day and night, lauding him continually, both for his Goodneſſe and his Truth. Jerom ſaith, his Truth is to be praiſed in the night, as being darkly ſet forth in figures, and his Goodneſſe, in pardoning their ſins that confeſſe, which cauſeth a chearfull light as of the morning to ariſe in the heart. Darkneſſe indeed, as of the night, goeth before the morning light, whilſt we are in ſorrow for our ſinnes; but having done, the Light of Gods Truth ſhineth, who hath ſaid, If we confeſſe our ſinnes, he is faithfull to forgive them: But Auguſt. better, I will praiſe thy mercy in the morning of proſperity, thy Truth in the night of adverſity. Verſ. 2. Calvin. Hieron. 1 Ioh. 1. 9.

Touching the muſicall inſtruments here named, and muſick in Gods worſhip, ſee before Pſal. 33. 2. For theſe words, Upon the harp with a ſolemn ſound, are theſe, Upon Higgaion with the Harp, That is, In meditation upon the Harp. Verſ. 3.

My horne ſhall be exalted as the Unicorne, I am anointed with freſh Oile: Ainſworth, My old age with freſh oile: ſo likewiſe the Vulgar Latine: but the Hebrew is ברהי I am anointed or mixed. The meaning is, I am by thee made ſtrong, for it is, Thou ſhalt exalt my horn, and by horn is ſtrength commonly ſet forth: wherefore ſtrength is meant to beat down his Enemies, as as the Unicorn, a fierce beaſt in the wilderneſſe doth by his one horne, Verſ. 10.

wherein his cheife ſtrength lyeth, puſh and kill both beaſts and men. And this annointing with freſh or new oile, ſetteth forth the ſpirit of Fortitude, whereof anointing with oile was a figure: Therefore when David was annointed by Samuel for King, his valour became ſo great, that he ſlew a Lion and a Beare, then Goliah, and many Philiſtims more, none could ſtand againſt him. It was alſo a figure of Joy and Gladneſſe, for which it is ſayd, Pſalm. 45. God hath annointed thee with the oile of Gladneſſe above thy fellowes.

This then cheifely agreeth to Chriſt, the annointed above all others, and then to David his Type who wrot this, and laſtly, to every one of the Faithfull, who are alſo ſaid to have an annointing, 1 Joh. 2. 20.

Verſ. 12. The Righteous ſhall flouriſh like a Palme tree, and ſhall grow like a Cedar.

Having ſhewed the joyfull condition of the Righteous, by reaſon of his power and dignity of annointing, and the falling of his Enemies before him, now he further ſheweth their increaſe in Grace and Knowledge, being herein wonderfully thriving, as the Palm tree and Cedar of Lebanon, which groweth to a very great height: and as the Palm Tree, he ſhall be moſt

Verſ. 13. fruitfull in doing Good, which ſhall put a great Decorum upon him, as a Beaſt that is fat, is moſt well favoured, contrary to the leane Kine in Pharaohs Dreame, that were moſt ill favoured. And thus he ſhall continue in old age, as naturally men do not; but then wither and fade away. And he is ſaid to flouriſh in the Courts of Gods houſe in alluding to the manner of thoſe times, which was not for any, but the Preiſts to go into the Temple; but to abide in one of the Courts about the door of the Tabernacle, whilſt that ſtood, afterwards of the Temple: and this good Eſtate of the Righteous begun and continued here, till old age ſhal be made more perfect, and ſo continue for ever in the life to come; but this comfort belongeth only to ſuch, as the longer they live, are the more excellent, not to ſuch as Auguſt. are more coveteous, more froward or prophane, as it is with many, whereupon one ſaith well, Omnia alia cum vitia ſeneſcunt, ſola avaritia juveneſcit.

PSAL. XCIII.

This Pſalme hath no Title, Hebrew; but in Vulgar Latine, The praiſe of a Song of David, the Day before the Sabbath when the Earth was founded.

IT is generally held by the Fathers, to be concerning Chriſt, a Propheſie of his raigning in Majeſty and Glory in Heaven, after his death and Reſurrection, aſcending into Heaven even to the right hand of God the Father; that is, To unſpeakeable Power, and Glory, and Honour for evermore.

Verſ. 1. The Lord raigneth, he is cloathed with Majeſty, ſee the like Pſalm. 96. 10. 97. 1. Pſalm. 99. 1. although the Son of God abaſed himſelf to become man, and to ſuffer a vile death, yet now he is in the height of Glory, He hath girded himſelf with ſtrength, the world alſo is eſtabliſht that it cannot be moved. That is, By his Apoſtles, ſent out to preach againſt Idolatry, and to publiſh ſalvation by Faith, the world fluctuating before in the midſt of many Groſſe Superſtitions, is eſtabliſhed in the Truth, never to be carryed away any more to thoſe Errours.

Verſ. 2. Thy Throne is eſtabliſhed of old, thou art from everlaſting: That is, In Gods decree; Chriſts Kingdome over the whole world was appointed from Eternity, and to continue throughout all Generations.

The

The flouds have lifted up their voice, the flouds have lifted up their waves. Verſ. 3.
The Lord on high, is mightier then many Waves: That is, The Apoſtles ſent out as Rivers of water, by their doctrine to water the Nations, have preached with all earneſtneſs, and againſt them, as when the freſh water and the Salt meet, ſtrong oppoſition hath been made by many; but yet his power being greateſt, ſoon prevailed, and theſe flouds ran all over the world with Succeſſe, the Pride of thoſe Waves being abated.

Thy teſtimonies are very ſure: That is, Both old and new Teſtament, one ſerving to confirm the other. Holineſſe becomes thy houſe for ever. That is, Thy Church, as ſhe is called, 1. Tim. 3. 15. out of Baſil. Jerom. and Auguſt. But Calvin and ſome others underſtand all of God, being Lord and King in a ſpeciall manner over his Church, in the protection whereof, and doing miraculouſly for her, his Glory and Majeſty ſhineth moſt brightly. And the eſtabliſhing of the world is ſpoken of, as one of the greateſt wonders, the Earth being held in the midſt of the aire by his immediate power, and the Seas kept within their bounds, as with Gates and Bars. And his Throne is ſayd to be eſtabliſhed, becauſe ſo many Nations bearing deadly enmity againſt his people, yet they were hitherto preſerved, as a moſt flouriſhing Kingdome, ſhewing, that no humane force could ſhake it for ever, eſpecially that ſpiritual David being come, & having built it upon a Rock, to ſtand, not only againſt humane, but all Deviliſh power, for ever and ever. Verſ. 5. Baſil. Auguſt. Jerom. Calvin. Matth. 16, 16.

Here the power of God is further ſet forth, by a compariſon taken from the flouds and waves of the Sea, which both are violent aud roar terribly, yet the Lord exceeds all theſe far in powet, for he ruleth them at his will. Some by flouds and waves underſtand Armies of men coming with ſeeming irreſiſtible power, againſt Gods people; but God eaſily quelleth them, and thus flouds and waves are often taken: and the rather it is ſo to be underſtood here, becauſe that in the next words V. 5. It is ſaid, The Teſtimonies of the Lord are ſure: That is, his promiſes to ſave and defend his Church, how populous or mighty ſoever they be that combine together to come againſt her. Holineſſe becometh thy houſe for ever, Hebrew: In thy houſe the glory of holineſſe to the length of dayes: That is, The holy and true God is glorious for the things before ſpoken of; not for a time, his Kingdome over his Church then ceaſing; but ſo long as cannot be counted, even to all Eternity. Verſ. 3 Verſ. 5.

PSAL. XCIV.

This Pſalme is alſo without a Title, but the Vulgar Latine prefixeth this, A Pſalme of David.

Quarta Sabbati: whereupon Jerom ſaith, that it ſerveth to ſhew the concurrence of the Law and the Goſpel in one, as the fourth day of the weeke is the middle, having three dayes before it, and three after; but to paſſe this as a vain Phantaſie, let us come to the Pſalm, as without any Title, by whomſoever that was prefixed: For Baſil ſaith, That they who firſt expounded the Pſalmes, have it not. Yet Auguſt. dwelleth very largely upon it, as a Title worthy of our conſideration for the myſtery therein. And to finde this out, he looketh to that which was made upon the fourth day, the Lights of Heaven; to whom he compareth the Faithfull for their Heavenly converſation, and the light of their good life; wherein they goe conſtantly on, and cannot be interrupted by any oppoſition upon Earth. For if they be injuriouſly or cruelly dealt withall, they looke up to God to whom Hieron. Baſil.

whom vengeance belongeth, and herein they reſt; neither ſeeking to revenge themſelves, nor making defection from the faith, when they ſee perſecuters and wicked men to have ſo great power, and to live in ſuch proſperity. And this indeed is a truth, and a truth hinted in this Pſalme, for the comfort of all that ſuffer wrong, although we take it without a Title, as indeed it is. For the greateſt part of the Pſalme is ſpent in praying to God, to ſhew himſelfe juſt, in taking vengeance upon wrong-doers, how great and mighty ſoever they are; and deſcribing their evill conditions, and threatning them therefore, Verſe 20. 21. 23. But by the way, the bleſſedneſſe of ſuch as ſuffer by them, is ſet forth; and what favour God sheweth them in their very ſufferings, Verſe 12, 13, 14, &c. and Verſe 22.

Verſ. 1. O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongeth, O God to whom vengeance belongeth, ſhew thy ſelfe. Hebrew, O God of vengeance, or recompences, O Lord God of vengeance ſhine forth. That is, make it to appeare to thy glory, and the comfort and confirmation of thy faithfull people, that thou art a righteous Judge, by not ſuffering ſtill their Enemies to go unpuniſhed on in perſecuting and doing them wrong. For although the faithfull beleive, that God will reuenge all their wrongs, yet then only his Juſtice ſo to do publickly appeareth to his glory, and his Juſtice ſhineth, when he revengeth.

Verſ. 3. He doth moſt pathetically cry out of the long triumphing of the wicked, becauſe they were ſuffered in their tyrany and oppreſſion of the Godly; and the Lord ſeemed to delay the Judging of them: which he ſaith, not out of impatience, or diffidence; but to expreſſe his zeale for Gods glory.

Verſ. 5,6,7. Their doings againſt the faithfull are complained of, and their fooliſhneſſe, thinking that God ſeeth not: which he correcteth and reaſoneth againſt, Verſe 8, 9, 10, 11.

Verſ. 12. Then for the comfort of Gods people, he pronounceth them bleſſed, even when they ſeemed moſt miſerable, for their being troaden underfoot, and deſpiſed in the World: but withall, he ſheweth how their ſufferings are turned into a bleſſing to them; viz. By Gods inſtructing them in his Law; they learning by his written word, and teaching out of it, to be patient and comfortable in all their ſufferings; according to Rom. 15. 4. Moreover he promiſeth deliverance, and that the wicked, who oppreſſed them, ſhall fall into the pit of deſtruction, Judgment being thus turned into righteouſneſſe; and then all the upright in heart ſhall follow it. Hebrew, After it, or him. So likewiſe Theodot. Aquila, and Calvin, turne it; which Baſil expoundeth of Chriſt, according to the manner of his calling Diſciples; Follow after me. But Calvin better; Judgment is turned into righteouſneſſe, when the faithfull, who ſuffered before, are delivered, and the wicked, who unjuſtly perſecuted them, periſh: the courſe of Gods Judgments againſt his own houſe, at ſuch times doubted of by many, whether they were juſt or no, ſhall plainly appeare to be all moſt righteous, and the upright hearted without any wavering or doubting, ſhall conſtantly follow him in holineſſe, all their dayes.

Baſil. Calvin.

Verſ. 16,17. Who will ſtand to me with the wicked? That is, when I have to do with wicked and malicious Enemies, who ſeek my deſtruction. And he anſwers himſelfe, that the Lord, and not men ſtood for him; which he ſpeaketh further, to confirme in his own example, what he had taught, Verſe 13, 14. for the comfort of all other upright hearted perſons, in expectation of the like to be done for them, in Gods good time.

Verſ. 18, When I ſaid, my foot ſliped, thy goodneſſe ſuſtained me. Here he further amplyfieth Gods mercy towards him, in that when in his own ſenſe and apprehenſion he was even ſlipping down by Death, no meanes of preſerving his life appearing, yet God brought him out of that danger: and in ſuch dangers was David many times; but eſpecially when Saul purſued him about the ſame Mountain, and had almoſt overtaken him, but God in his providence called Saul away, by the Philiſtims invading his Country. Moving ving one queſtion more, Whether the Throne of wickedneſſe ſhall have any fellowſhip with God. He anſwereth negatively, and concludeth with their deſtruction. And hereby he intimateth, that there are not only private perſons, but Kings, ſitting upon Thrones, who are wicked, injurious to Gods Servants; but be they never ſo great and mighty, they ſhall be cut off in their own wickedneſſe, the worſt of it redounding to themſelves in the end. Note. Verſ. 23.

1 Sam. 23. 25.

PSAL. XCV.

THis Pſalme is alſo without a Title, Hebr. but in Vulgar Latine it hath this: Laus cantici ipſi David. And Heb. 4. 7 it is ſaid to be ſpoken by David, which is here ſaid; and Baſil ſaith, that David made it, foreſeeing by the ſpirit, what ſhould be done in the time of Ioſiah, in deſtroying Idolatry, and reſtoring the worſhip and ſervice of God, ſo greatly decayed in the time of Manaſſeh; and he bringeth him in and the Prieſts, ſaying, O come let us worſhip and fall down, and kneele before the Lord our maker, and harden not your hearts, to thoſe that would hardly be reduced from Idolatry, to the worſhip of the true God only. Here are three motives to ſtir us up to rejoice in God, and to worſhip him in all humility. Baſil.

1. He is a great God, as his works do declare. Verſ. 3,4,5.

2. He is our God, we are his people. That is, we that are his Church, of whom he taketh a more ſpeciall care. Verſ. 7.

3. Harden not your hearts, as in the day of temptation. Such as will not worſhip and humble themſelves to God, by falling low before him, are hard-hearted, like the Iſraelites that thus tempted him, and periſhed in the Wilderneſſe, being held there forty yeares, and never entring into Canaan; where they ſhould otherwiſe have had reſt and comfort, being poſſeſſed of a moſt fruitfull Country, for themſelves and Poſterity for ever; which maketh againſt them that either worſhip him not, or worſhip falſe Gods, or are unreverent in their bodily geſture, or that do not acquieſce in his word, but out of unbeleife meditate upon other means, to do better for themſelves, as his people then did. Verſ. 8,9: Note

PSAL. XCVI.

THis Pſalme is alſo without a Title, Hebr. but in Vulgar Latine it is The praiſe of the Song of David, when his houſe was built after the Captivity. Which, ſaith Baſil, figured out deliverance by Chriſt, and ſo it is propheticall, both of the firſt and ſecond coming of Chriſt Jeſus. And accordingly Auguſtine underſtands. Baſil.

Sing unto the Lord a new ſong, ſing unto the Lord all the Earth. Saying, what is it to ſing a new ſong, but to love, as the new commandement injoyneth? He that loveth then, ſingeth a new ſong, although he be ſilent; and he buildeth Davids, that is, Chriſts houſe; contrariwiſe, he that is covetous, although he ſingeth with his voice, ſingeth not, as is here exhorted: neither doth he build, but demoliſh, and makes an harſh noiſe in Gods eares. The Temple built by Solomon, was ſituated in one certain place of the Earth, and ſo was that built after the Captivity, but this all over the Earth. Thus that elegant Father proſecuting the building, according to the Title, in many more words, which is not ſo pertinent here; becauſe it is a Title prefixed, not by the Spirit, but by ſome man of his own head. And Ainſworth better noteth, that it was the Pſalme ſung, when the Arke being brought Verſ. 1. Auguſt. 1 Ioh. 2. 7. Ainſw.

brought from the houſe of Obed Edom, was ſet in the Tabernacle which David made for it; 1 Chron. 16. 23. to Verſ 34 where ſomething more is added, which is here wanting, Verſe 34, 35, 36. and ſomthing is altered, Verſe 33. but the ſenſe the ſame. That it is propheticall touching the Goſpell all agree, as they muſt needs; becauſe at the breaking out of the light of the Goſpell, all the Earth praiſed God for Chriſt, whith they could not do before.

Rom. 10. For how ſhall they call upon him, in whom they have not beleived. And till then there was but one place, to which to bring Gifts; which we are exhorted to do,

Verſ. 8. Verſe 8. To bring gifts into his Courts, which be not now at

Ioh. 4. 2. Jeruſalem, but every where. Hebrew, מנחה a meat-offering, one kinde of offering being put for all; the whole worſhip and ſervice of God, being hereby ſet forth. And this is not now a carnall Sacrifice, but a ſpirituall; as is taught, Heb. 10. of thankſgiving; and he cometh not empty now before God, that cometh before him with praiſe, out of a pure heart. So that here

Calvin. is no ground for the Papiſts Maſſe, as Calvin well noteth; who will have that the Sacrifice here meant; when as indeed it is only a figure of it, and the thankfulneſs of the heart therefore is the Sacrifice; for which of old it had the name of Euchariſtia: and it is by faith made a Sacrifice, for us to feed upon, unto everlaſting life. John 6. 53. Whereas Verſe 6. he ſaith, Strength

Verſ. 6. and glory are in his Sanctuary. It is ſpoken in alluding to the Arke, which was then the ſigne of his preſence, where he often ſhewed his glory; but now his Sanctuary is his Church, propagated throughout all Nations, or to be ſo propagated before the end of the World.

Verſ. 11. Let the Heavens rejoice, let the Sea roare. Here, ſaith Baſil, the more to

Baſil. ſet forth the joy that ſhould be for the Goſpell in all parts of the World, the Heavens and the Earth, the Sea, the Feilds, and the Trees are mentioned by a Proſopopeia: ſhewing, that they ſhall all rejoice; by the Heavens, the Angels being meant; who rejoyced when Chriſt was born, and rejoice dayly at the converſion of ſinners: By the Earth, the Nations, Kindreds, and Peoples, inhabiting the Earth; By the Seas, Iſlanders: By the Matth. 13. Feild alſo, the World; as is ſhewed in the Parable of the Tares; and by the Trees of the Forreſt, the Inhabitants of thoſe parts, where amongſt Trees and in Groves Idols Temples formerly ſtood, but now were demoliſhed. Calvin will not have the Angels meant by the Heavens,, but hyper-

Calvin. bolically the Heavens themſelves, and the Earth, &c. which ſhall be brought

Rom. 8. into the glorious liberty of the Sonnes of God, when the Children of God ſhall at the laſt day be glorified through Chriſt. But it is not only ſaid, the Heavens and the Earth, but the Trees alſo, which ſhall be burnt up. Again, the joy here ſpoken of is not at the renovation of all things then, but at the going out of the Gospell. Laſtly, it may juſtly be queſtioned, whether theſe viſible Heavens and Earth, be meant by οὐρανὸς καὶ γῆ, as I have ſhewed upon that place: wherefore, as the Fathers alſo generally agree with Baſil, ſo do I, as with one that ſpeaks moſt reaſon.

Verſ. 13. For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the Earth. Well, ſaith Baſil, doth he

Baſil. ſpeak of his coming twice; for he ſhall come once to give knowledge to the World, how to be ſaved, and he ſhall come again to Judgment, when he ſhall ſeparate, according to righteouſneſſe and truth, as he hath promiſed, the Sheep from the Goates, receiving them to Heaven, and ſending theſe to

Calvin. Hell. Thus alſo Auguſtine and Jerome, although Calvin will have the word cometh twice repeated, only to ſhew the certainty of Chriſts coming, when the World ſhall be better governed. But the firſt word, Cometh, is beſt referred to his coming by the Goſpell, when he dyed for us, and was judged, but judged not: the ſecond, to his laſt coming: as if he had ſaid, The things before ſpoken of ſhall be ſo, as hath been ſaid; the Son of God ſhall come and inlighten, and rejoice all places: yea and after this, he ſhall come again to judge thoſe that have deſpiſed or ſleighted him, not beleiving or doing as he hath taught, ſending them into everlaſting fire; neither ſhall he in ſo doing doing, deale unrighteouſly with them, or untruly, but righteouſly, for their enmity againſt his people; and truly, for their averſneſſe from the truth offered unto them, in ſuch unparalleld love; that is, Chriſt, who is the way, the truth, and the life: and from the truth preached, from which they have turned their eares away, giving heed unto Fables, as ſome are charged, 2 Tim. 4. 4.

PSAL. XCVII.

THis Pſalme is alſo without a Title, Hebr. but the Vulgar Latine hath, A Pſalme of David, when the Land was reſtored to him: Yet confeſſed, as Baſil ſaith, by the Author himſelfe, to be prefixed of his own head; but he judgeth him to have erred in it; forſomuch as not the Land over which David raigned, but all the World is here ſpoken of, as in the former Pſalme; it being likewiſe a propheſie of Chriſts double coming: And this the Text confirmeth, Verſe 1. The Lord raigneth, let the Earth and the Iſles rejoice; here being made more plain, what was before ſpoken obſcurely, Pſal. 96. 11. Let the Sea roare, and the fulneſſe of it: the Sea being put for the many Iſlands in the Sea, and roaring, for making a joyfull ſound, which cannot be underſtood, but of Chriſts firſt coming in the Goſpell; wherein the tidings of that which he hath done for us, was carryed into all parts of the World; where before they were in a ſad condition, under dumb Idols, as they were blindly led: And Verſe 3. A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his Enemies. And Verſe 4. 5. here being more plainly and largly ſet forth his judging the World at his ſecond coming, ſpoken of, Pſalme 96. 13. Baſil. Verſ. 1.

Clouds and darkneſſe are round about him. This is ſpoken for the myſticalneſſe of his Incarnation, as it is ſaid, Great is the myſtery of Godlineſſe, God manifeſted in the fleſh, &c. 1 Tim. 3. 16. And in ſetting this great myſtery forth, he alludeth to the manner of Gods appearing, when he gave the Law upon Mount Sinai. Auguſtine more Elegantly and largly, both upon theſe words, and the next, Judgment and Juſtice are the Habitation of his Throne; Clouds and darkneſſe are round about him, to wicked unbeleivers; for although he were the true light, inlightning every one that cometh into the World, yet to them there was darkneſſe round about him, ſo that they had eyes to ſee, but not to underſtand, ſeeing eyes, but were made blinde: but Judgment and Juſtice are ſeen by beleivers, to be the Habitation of his Seat; yea he inhabits in them, for he dwelleth in our hearts by faith, and juſtifieth and ſanctifieth us; ſo that through his grace, we are an holy and righteous houſe, for him to reſt and abide in. And for the next words, Verſe 3. he differeth from Baſil, ſaying, I cannot think the fire here ſpoken of to be that, which ſhall deſtroy the wicked at the day of Judgment, and wherein they ſhall burn for ever; becauſe that goeth not before, but after him; this before him. This fire then is the fire of wrath, wherewith the wicked burn againſt the faithfull, when they are inraged againſt them, for withſtanding their wils: For look upon one inraged, and doth he not ſeem to be on a fire, ſmoake coming out of his noſtrils, his eyes ſparkling, and his inward parts burning with a deſire of revenge; the other in the mean ſeaſon ſtanding quietly, to beare whatſoever he ſhall do unto him. Thus for the fire to burn Enemies; but he alſo ſtraineth this fire further to the faithfull; ſaying, that they burn, by a profitable burning by the Spirit, which is as a fire in them: for which he ſaith, I came to ſend a fire and a ſword, a fire to inflame with zeale, as Act. 2. the holy Ghoſt came down in the likeneſſ of fire, and ſat upon each of them; and the ſword of the word, as it is called, Heb. 4. 12. divideth them from Father and Mother, and all Verſ. 2. Baſil. Exod. 19. Auguſt. Joh. 1. Matth. 13. Ioh. 9. Eph. 3. 17. Verſ. 3.

Verſ. 4. moſt neare to follow Chriſt. Then the lightnings inlightning the World, are alſo by him expounded of the Apoſtles, going into all Countries as lights, whereupon mens hearts melt in ſorrowing for their ſinnes, and ſo they are converted; yea Mountaines, that is, great and proud perſons before; for now as the Jaylor, they fall down trembling before Paul and Silas; ſaying, What ſhall we do to be ſaved? Thus Auguſtine in many more words; and Jerome agreeth with him: Calvin and ſome others, make all theſe foure Verſes to agree to one and the ſame thing, viz. The glory of Chriſts Kingdome, extended into all Countries, to the rejoycing of the hearts of the faithfull, but the terrour of wicked Enemies. T. W. takes all that is ſaid, as ſpoken of God; to make all men afraid, and aſhamed of worſhipping Idols, againſt which he inveyeth, Verſe 7. ſaying, he is deſcribed by ſuch things, as accompanied his preſence, in giving the Law, when his coming down was ſo full of terrour. That of Auguſtine, upon Clouds and darkneſſe I take to be moſt genuine: but Baſil is rather to be followed in his, upon the fire going before him to burn his Enemies. For it is alſo ſaid, Pſal. 50. Where he ſpeaketh of the fire at the day of Judgment, A fire ſhall go before him; and Joel 2. 3. A fire ſhall go before them: Speaking of deſtroying Enemies, that ſhould come againſt Iſrael, to burn up their Cities; whereas this was not done, till they had overcome them, and the word here, is לפניו, In his face, or preſence. The meaning being nothing elſe, but as is ſaid, 2 Theſ. 1. 7, 8. When the Lord ſhall be revealed from Heaven in flaming fire. And he ſpeaketh only of Enemies to be burnt by this fire, and not of the faithfull; ſo that here is no place to infer the Spirit, as fire in them: and if this were the fire, wherewith the wicked ſhall be burnt, by being inraged, there were no great matter in this to terrify them.

Act. 16. Calvin. Iunius. Ainſw. T. W.

Laſtly, for his lightnings, it is well known, that lightnings oft times ſet Buildings and Trees on fire, and ſtrike men ſo, that they are wonderfully burnt within, and terribly deſtroyed: and therefore in ſetting forth the terribleneſſe of the laſt day, they are moſt aptly ſpoken of; when lightnings as fire-bals being caſt into the World, all things ſhall be ſet on fire; and then the Hils, which none other fire can work ſuch an effect upon, ſhall melt like Wax, and the very viſible Heavens ſhall be diſſolved with the heat thereof: 2 Pet. 3. 10. See the like, Revel. 4. 5. where it is ſaid, That from the Throne proceeded thunders and ligtnings, and Chap 8. 5. There were thunders and lightnings and an Earthquake; Immediately after which, the Angels ſounded with their Trumpets, and great deſtruction followed.

Verſ. 6. Ainſw. The Heavens ſhall declare his righteouſneſſe. That is, Fire and Lightnings coming down from Heaven, to burn the wicked Enemies of his Church, as he alwayes threatned; for when this ſhall be done, it ſhall appeare to the faithfull all the World over, that his threatnings were not vain, but reall. By Heavens alſo, the Angels of Heaven may be underſtood; who ſhall then be imployed to gather his Wheat into his Garner, and to binde up the Tares in bundles, for the fire: for in doing, as he long before propheſied, they declare him to be true and righteous; ſee the ſame alſo, Pſal. 50. 6. And all people ſhall ſee his glory, That is, the Glory in which he ſhall come to Judgment, who had been formerly ſo greatly abaſed, according to Matthew 25. 31.

Verſ. 7. Calvin. Confounded be all they that worſhip graven Images, worſhip him (all yee Gods) Here he propheſieth of the fall of Iodatry, when Chriſt as King ſhall raigne, as indeed it came to paſſe: For worſhip him all yee Gods, as it goeth in the Hebrew. the Vulgar hath, All yee Angels: And ſo it is rendred and applyed to Chriſt, Heb. 1. 6. and was fulfilled, Luke 2. 13. Revel. 5. 11, 12. And well may the Angels for their extraordinary power and glory be termed Gods; when as Princes and Judges in this World are ſo called, Pſal. 82. Calvin will not have Angels, but falſe Gods hereby meant, all which ſhall be ſubjected to Chriſt, that he alone may be glorifyed: but it is one thing to worſhip Chriſt, and another to be ſubject to him perforce.

is

Zion heard and was glad, the Daughter of Judah rejoiced: By Zion and Judah, underſtand the Church, to whom the tidings of Redemption by Chriſt were moſt joyfull; and to hear, that although ſhe ſuffereth greivous things by perſecuters, her Enemies, yet they ſhall be judged at the laſt. Verſ. 8.

Calvin by Zion and Judah underſtands the Elect amongſt the Jewes, and the thing which they heard, was Chriſts raigning amongſt the Gentiles, ſpoken of, Verſe 1. and he ſaith not, They ſaw, but They heard, for two Reaſons. Calvin.

Firſt, Becauſe they heard it to their comfort and confirmation propheſied of long before.

Secondly, many of the Nations were ſo remote, that they could not ſee it, but hear of it only.

Light is ſowen for the Righteous: That is, like ſeed: comfort lyeth hid for a time, but at length it ſhall riſe up and appeare; ſo our life is ſayd to be hid with Chriſt, Coloſ. 3. 3. and 1 Joh. 3. 4: It doth not yet appear what we ſhall be; but this ſeed is ſowen, when by the Prophets of God it is taught, that thus it ſhall be; for this meeting with a beleiving and good heart, ſhall at the laſt appear. Verſ. 11. Matth. 13.

PSAL. XCVIII.

THis Pſalme differeth little from Pſalme 96. and therefore I need not to ſay much upon it: but Verſe 1. it is added, His right hand and his holy arme hath gotten him the Victory: That is, He hath extraordinarily and miraculouſly by Chriſts death vanquished the Devill, as Heb. 2. 15. Col. 2. 14. ſee the like, Eſa. 59. 16. Verſ. 1.

And whereas, Pſal. 96. 3. it is, Declare his Glory amongſt the Heathen, here Verſe 2. His righteouſneſſe hath he ſhewed in the ſight of the Heathen: This ſerving to expound that. Then Verſe 3. 4. 5. 6. his mercy and Truth to Iſrael are mentioned in ſending Chriſt, becauſe that to Iſrael he was promiſed by all the Prophets; but yet Iſrael was herein ſo regarded, that this performance extended to all the Nations even to the ends of the earth, for which all are exhorted with voice and muſicall Inſtrument to praiſe him. Verſ. 2. Verſ. 3,4,5. 6.

After this, Verſe 7. 9. are in effect the ſame with Pſalme 96. 11. 12. and Verſe 9. of his ſecond coming to Judgment with Verſe. 13.

PSAL. XCIX.

THis Pſalme, ſaith Baſil, propheſieth of the Indignation, that ſome heathens had at the returning from the Babylonian Captivity, and that the Phariſees had at Chriſt, when he published himſelfe to be the Son of God: and therefore he followeth the Vulgar Latine, wherein it thus beginneth, The Lord raigneth, let the peop'e be angry, New Tranſlation, Let the people tremble: the word ſignifieth indifferently either to tremble, or to be angry, and to me it ſeemeth good which Baſil hath touching the wrath of the Jewes againſt Chriſt, and ſo it agreeth well with Pſalme 2. 1. 2. and how it was fullfilled the holy Goſpels declare. Jerom asketh here what people they be that are angry, or have indignation; and anſwereth, Unbeleivers, whether of the Jewes or Gentiles: but coming to the next words, Sitting between the Cherubims: Let the Earth be moved. He underſtands this Moving, of that Baſil. Hieron.

which is by feare and trembling, in hearing of his word, as if it were meant, Chriſt is moſt glorious as God, that uſed to give anſwers from between the Golden Cherubims, and from the mercy Seat of Gold, in the moſt holy place, which did likewiſe all ſhine with Gold: therefore at the ſound of his word, men of all parts of the Earth ſhall tremble, and ſo receive it into penitent and beleiving hearts, that they may be ſaved: for to them that do thus, the moſt high and glorious God is neer, Iſa. 66. 2. I think, that by the people are meant the Jewes, and by the Earth, all other Inhabitants of the Earth, in other Nations. Touching the ſtirs that ſhould be amongſt whom at Chriſts coming by his Goſpell it is here propheſied, yet nothing ſhould hinder the proceeding thereof, or Chriſt the Author of it from raigning far and wide, as it came to paſſe when the Church was ſo many yeares under hot perſecutions, and yet 'gat ground dayly; and finally in Conſtantines time, even in the heart and Court of the Emperour. Thus Ainſworth expoundeth both the firſt word, by ſtirred, as indeed it ſignifyeth to be ſtirred or moved, either with wrath or feare; alledging to juſtify the Sept. and Vulg. rendring it angry, Revel. 11. 17, 18. and to draw the other the ſame way, Act. 17. 13. where the Jewes are ſaid to have ſtirred up the people at Berea againſt the Apoſtle Paul: although the ſecond word properly ſignifyeth, nutare, nutet Terra, Let the Earth nod the head, or mock at it, as it is ſaid, when Chriſt hung upon the Croſſe, ſome nodded the head at him in deriſion and indignation: which is alſo intimated, where it is ſaid, We preach Chriſt a Stumbling Block to the Jew, and fooliſhneſſe to the Gentiles, as at which they mocked. Whereas Calvin expounds it by trembling, and referreth it to them that were before bidden to rejoice; ſaying, that this is ſpoken, in regard of the troubles which ſhould be to the Church under the Goſpell, indangering it, and make it even ready to ſinke, it doth no way agree; becauſe by the Lords raigning, is intimated his overcoming, and then was no time to tremble, or droop; or if his raigning be taken only ſpiritually, there is no reaſon for outward troubles, at which his people ſhould tremble, but rejoice, as is exhorted, Phil. 4. 4.

Ainſworth.

Matth. 27. 39.

Calvin.

Verſ. 4. The Kings ſtrength loveth Judgment. Having ſet forth the excellency of the Lord, Verſe 1, 2. and exhorted to confeſſe his name to be holy and fearfull, Verſe 3. here a reaſon is yeilded, he loveth Judgment; therefore all the wicked muſt expect ſeverity from him, which cannot but ſtrike terrour into them, at the hearing of him, hoc nomine; for they are for unrighteouſneſs and iniquity, he againſt it; and what is their ſtrength to withſtand his? Moſes and Aaron amongſt his Prieſts, and Samuel amongſt them that called upon his name, theſe called upon the Lord, and he anſwered them.

Verſ. 4.

Verſ. 5.

Verſ. 6. Baſil. Num. 16. 1 Sam. 12. Moſes and Aaron amongſt his Prieſts, ſaith Baſil, calling for Judgments upon Corah Dathan and Abiram, for their rebellion; and Samuel for thunder and raigne againſt the Jewes, caſting him off, and deſiring a King, were all heard; yea and for deſiring a King ſo, they were puniſhed with a Tyrant, under whom they ſuffered much miſery. Theſe examples he bringeth, that all might feare the Judgments of the Lord, which his ſtrength is ſet to bring upon the wicked, according to Verſe, 4. and to ſhew, that for the Jews to reluct againſt the Prieſt-hood and Kingdome ſet up by God, was no new thing; for they did ſo in the dayes of Moſes, and of Samuel; and therefore not to be marvelled at, that they ſhould do the like againſt Chriſt, who was both Prieſt and King. But as they eſcaped not without Judgments, no more did the Jewes in the time of the Goſpell; whereas not only Aaron, but Moſes alſo, are called Prieſts. Calvin ſaith well, that the word כוהנים here uſed, ſignifyeth both Prieſts and Princes; and before Aaron was choſen, Moſes doubtleſſe executed the Prieſts Office. But of this laſt I ſee no reaſon, but to doubt, and therefore reſt in the former; Godly Princes and Prieſts had all one name, although there be another for Princes.

Calvin.

Ainſworth

Ainſworth noteth, that cheif Officers were thus called, as well as Preiſts; 2 Sam. 8. 18. The Kings Sons were Cohanim, the reaſon whereof is rendred 1 Chron. 18. 17. But he expounds Moſes his calling upon God, of that Exod. 14. Exod. 32. and ſo I grant the next words agree well.

In a piller of a Cloud he ſpake unto them, for they kept his Teſtimonies, and again, thou anſwereſt them, a God forgiving thou wert unto them, and taking vengeance on their practiſes, or works: where by the piller of a cloud, underſtand that which went before them in the Wilderneſſe, which ſhewed Gods complacency in theſe his holy Servants, who kept his Teſtimonies, although the people amongſt whom they were, generally were wicked for murmuring and Idolatry. Yet they found ſo much Grace and favour with God, that they prevailed, at the leaſt one of them, for the pardoning of the peoples ſinnes: and yet ſome revenge was taken upon them by conſuming them diverſly in the Wilderneſſe, even all but two after, Numb. 14, who were twenty yeares old and upward. For I do not thinke, that unbeleif of Moſes and Aaron, at the Waters of Meribah, for which they were not permitted to live to go into Canaan, is here meant, but the peoples Idolatry and murmuring, Exod, 32. and Numb. 14. becauſe God is ſayd to have anſwered, that is, granted their prayers; which he did not, touching their going into Canaan, although much importuned by Moſes therefore: and Moſes and Aaron are commended for keeping his Lawes: therefore that ſin doubtleſſe is not here meant, when he ſaith, Forgiving them, but the Groſſe ſinns of the People, whom they lead: which were forgiven ſo, that they were not ſuddenly all deſtroyed, but yet they were temporally puniſhed with death, their Children notwithſtanding being preſerved to inherit Canaan.

Verſ. 6.
Verſ. 8.

Junius divideth the Pſalme into three parts, or Arguments of praiſe. Junius.

1. In Verſe 1, 2, 3. from his univerſall Kingdome.

2. In Verſe 4, 5. from his grace in Chriſt.

3. In Verſe 6, 7. &c. From that which he did at the praying of Moſes, Aaron, and Samuel: as if he had ſaid, The Lord did wonderfully for his people, when theſe being but Servants fought unto him; therefore much more through the mediation of his Son the faithfull ſhall be forgiven, and everlaſtingly ſaved, although they go through many ſufferings for their ſinnes in this World.

But it may better be divided into two parts.

1. An Exhortation to praiſe God for Chriſt, raigning as King againſt all oppoſition, both of Iewes and Gentiles, Verſe 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

2. For the mercies of God ſhewed of old to their Fathers, in the times of Moſes, Aaron and Samuel, Verſe 6, 7. &c. And then Gods anſwering Moſes and Aaron, may be referred to that, Exod 14. 1, 2. Numb. 17. and Samuel, 1 Sam. 7. and Chap. 12. And whereas Verſe 5. he had ſaid, bow down at his foot-ſtoole, Verſe 9. he in ſtirring up to praiſe God, ſaith, At the mountain of his holineſſe: in both places meaning his Sanctuary; which when Solomon built, was called Gods foot-ſtool, 1 Chron. 28. 2. and for the ſituation upon mount Zion, his holy mountain, towards which they prayed.

Verſ. 9.

PSAL.

PSAL. C.

THis Pſalme tends alſo to ſtir up to praiſe God, prophetically touching upon the calling of all Nations under the Goſpell. Therefore Verſe 3. where it is ſaid, He hath made us, and not we our ſelves, we are his people and ſheep of his Paſture : He meaneth not our making in the Womb, as Pſal. 139. but our ſpirituall making, of which, Eph. 2. 10. We are his Workmanſhip, created unto good workes. Although it be true, that he made us alſo, as we be men and women, conſiſting of Soules and Bodyes: But here a more peculiar making is meant, after Gods Image; which is in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, Eph. 4. 24. whereby we become Chriſts Sheep; and he is our Shepheard, to feed us with his grace here, and to bring us to glory hereafter: as Pſalme 23. Iohn 10. For in this our remaking we have no hand, but God of his own will begat us by his word. Let not us then arrogate to our ſelves any thing in our regeneration, but aſcribe it wholly to the Grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt.

Verſ. 3

Iam. 1. 18.

Note.

PSAL. CI.

A Pſalme of David.

I Will ſing of mercy and Judgment. Jerom. Auguſt. Baſil, Cald. by Mercy and Judgment here underſtand Gods Mercy towards penitent ſinners, and Judgments againſt the obſtinate wicked; or as Auguſt. hath it, mercy and judgments towards himſelf and other faithfull, for both which he was thankfull, and ſo muſt we be; as Job, and Paul, and Silas, being harſhly uſed and impriſoned, ſung Pſalmes. Calvin expounds it of the mercy and judgments wherewith David meant to rule, if God would bring him to the promiſed kingdome; but this were very improper, it being expreſly ſaid, To thee will I ſing, That is, To thy praiſe, of thy mercy and Judgment. If he had meant theſe reſolved upon in himſelf, he would rather have ſayd, I will rule in mercy and judgment, and then ſing Pſalmes to thy praiſe, by whoſe ſpeciall favour I am thus advanced, and have the Grace ſo to govern: But Baſil will have it prophetically ſpoken of Joſiah, who rooted out Idolaters, and incouraged the true Servants of God in his worſhip. I ſee no cauſe why it may not rather be taken of David himſelf, becauſe he ſaith, Verſe 2. When wilt thou come to me? That is, By ſetting me up, as thou haſt promiſed: becauſe he was long anointed King, before that he came to the Kingdome, and after the Kingdome over Judah attained, he was kept ſeven years from Raigning over Iſrael; but Joſiah being but a Childe ſate upon the Throne, ſo that this agreeth not to him.

Verſ. 1. Auguſt. Hieron.

Act. 16. Calvin.

Verſ. 2.

I will do wiſely in the perfect way, when wilt thou come unto me? Ainſworth, When wilt thou come by Grace to aſſiſt me ſo to do? and for his doing wiſely, he alledgeth, 1 Sam. 14, 18.

Ainſw.

Who ſo privily ſlandreth his neighbour him will I cut off: The word Slandring, cometh from לשון a Tongue, that is by the Cald. rendred, He that ſpeaketh with a three-fold tongue againſt his neighbour, a ſlandrous tongue according to the Hebrew Doctors being ſo called, becauſe he hurteth three.

Verſ. 5. Cald. par.

First, The Slanderer.

Secondly, The Slandered,

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Him to whom the tale is brought, who is thus made to have an evill opinion of his Neighbour undeſervedly. And he ſaith, I will cut off; Intimating, that till he was King, he might not exerciſe this Authority; for this were a ſin in a private perſon: but having the Sword once by God put into his hand, he would do thus; and not only to ſlanderers, but alſo the proud hearted: Hebrew, The large hearted: The proud being ſo called; becauſe in their hearts they aime at great matters, and ſuch as be of too far an extent for them: To curb and ſuppreſſe ſuch, as diſturbers of the peace of a Kingdome, it is the duty of Kings to ſet themſelves: And therefore David voweth to do ſo. Although I ſee not how in the caſe of Mephiboſheth, and Ziba a Detractor, he afterwads performed it.

Regum eſt parcere ſubiectis & debellare ſuperbos. 2 Sam. 16. 3. Chap. 19. 27.

I will betimes deſtroy all the wicked of the Land. Here David ſheweth in his own example, what is the duty of Judges, without delaying to do juſtice upon the wicked, for evils muſt be reſiſted in the beginning, and herein, one muſt not be ſpared more then another, but Juſtice muſt paſſe upon all.

Verſ. 8. Obſta principiis.

PSAL. CII.

A prayer of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed.

THis Pſalme is moſt probably thought to have been made in the time, when the Temple of Ieruſalem lay in the ruines, the time ſet for the rebuilding thereof, viz. ſeventy yeares, being even now almoſt expired; for according to this it is ſaid, Verſe 13. The ſet time is come, to have mercy upon his; that is, the City Ieruſalem: and Verſe 14. For thy Servants favour her ſtones, and the duſt thereof; whereby is intimated, that yet the City and Temple lay ruined, the time of their Captivity continuing ſtill. Iunius thinks it to have been made by Daniel; Baſil will have it ſo a prayer, in behalfe of the Iewes, their City and Temple, as that it fitteth any particular perſon in great diſtreſſe. Ierome ſaith no more of it, but according to the Title, a Prayer to be uſed by any faithfull perſon, in great diſtreſſe. Auguſtine will have Chriſt to be the poor afflicted man, that prayed thus. I reſt in the firſt: it was a Prayer uſed ſpecially neer the time of the Iewes return, and the greateſt part of it fitted for one in diſtreſſe at any time, teaching him how to make his complaint, to move the Lord to pity. The parts are two.

Baſil. Calvin. Iunius.

Matth. 13. Auguſt.

Firſt, A Prayer and complaint, aggravating the miſery of him that prayeth, concluded with the brevity of his life, and Gods Eternity, Verſe 1, 2. &c. to Verſe 11. 12.

Secondly, The faithfuls confident reſolving to his, and the comfort of all Iſrael in affliction, that the deſolation of the City and Temple ſhould ſoon have an end, Verſe 13, 14 &c. to Verſe 23. concluding as before with our weakneſſe, and the ſhortneſſe of our lives, yea and the mutability of the Earth and the Heavens, Verſe 23, 24, 25, 26, 27. 28.

Like a Pelican. Of which alſo Iſa. 34. 11. Zeph. 2. 14. it hath the name, ſaith Ainſworth, from vomiting; being thought by ſome, to be a Bird, that ſwalloweth ſhell-Fiſh, and after vomiteth them up again, and eateth them; which ſitteth alone, and maketh a dolefull noiſe? Some call it a Bitturn. The deſolate condition of Ieruſalem, in time of the Iewes Captivity, is hereby ſet forth, as of one perſon in extream miſery, thus lamenting, and as in the verſes before and after, Verſe 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

Verſ. 6. Ainſw.

Thou haſt lifted me up, and caſt me down. This is ſpoken to ſet forth the greatneſſe of his fall; as if he had ſaid, Thou haſt done by me, as a mighty man by one weaker, wreſtling with him, he lifts him firſt up on high, and then caſts him to the ground, giving him the greater fall: which he ſpeaketh ſpeaketh, not as accuſing God of cruelty; but to aggravate his own miſery, that he might be moved the more to take compaſſion upon him, and deliver him.

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 13. For the appointed time ſpoken of, Verſe. 13. ſee Jer. 29. 10. Dan. 9.

Verſ. 14. For thy Servants delight in her ſtones, and favour the duſt thereof. Hebr. Pity the duſt thereof; that is, ſuch is their love to thy houſe, that not only when it ſtood in greateſt magnificence, but even now that it lyeth on ruinous heapes, they delight in it, and grieve to ſee theſe ruines, thinking long for the time of rebuilding it again. So likewiſe for the ſpirituall Temple, which is the Church of Chriſt, although it hath no outward ſplendor, and Chriſtians who be the Stones of this Building, lye ſcattered where they may, in time of perſecution; yet the faithfull delight in theſe Stones, as moſt pretious, and are moved with compaſſion towards them in miſery, and lying, as it were, in the duſt; however Unbeleivers and Hereticks, becauſe they are in more pompe and outward glory, deſpiſe them, as forſaken and judged of God,

Note.

Verſ. 15. So the Heathen ſhall feare thy name, and all the Kings of the Earth thy glory. Here he paſſeth from the deliverance out of Babylon, as is uſuall amongſt the Prophets, to our deliverance by Chriſt; the benefit whereof he Verſ. 16. ſheweth here again ſhall be to all Nations. For when the Lord ſhall build up Zion, he ſhall appeare in his glory. That is, not only at the peoples return out of Captivity, but when he ſhall build his Church by his Apoſtles and Paſtours, ſet forth by Zion; his almighty power againſt all contrary powers ſhall appeare to his exceeding great glory: by ſuch weake meanes, all Countries being ſubdued, and Emperours taken by Fiſhers, as Preachers are called.

Verſ. 18. This ſhall be written for the Generations to come, and the people which ſhall be created, ſhall praiſe the Lord. In that he ſaith, They ſhall be written for the Generations to come: It appeareth, that they concern our times under the Goſpell, and that Zion ſhould now be built more then ever.

And for the people which ſhall be created, they are the ſame ſpoken of, Pſal. 100. 3. and Eph. 2. 10. the word Created is uſed in ſpeaking of the converted to the faith of Chriſt, and to good works; whereas before they did all evill.

Verſ. 20. To heare the groaning of the Priſoners, and to deliver thoſe that were appointed to dye. Hebrew, The Sons of Death. For this the Lord looked down from Heaven, Verſe 19. when he looſed and ſet at liberty his people, impriſoned in Babylon, groaning and longing after a return into their own Country; and again, when by converting Countries and Nations to the faith, he delivered them from their ſpirituall Enemies, Sin and Satan; as in the Song of Zachary: That being delivered from the hands of our Enemies, we might ſerve him without feare. And for Death, we were ſubject hereunto, till that

Heb. 2. 15. Chriſt dying for us, deſtroyed him that had the power of Death, that is the Devill, &c.

Verſ. 23. Hebr. He hath afflicted my ſtrength. He hath weakened my ſtrength in the way, he hath ſhortned my dayes. This is the voice of the Iewes, as of one perſon, being yet in Captivity; where by many oppreſſions their ſtrength was waſted, and their lives by this means made the ſhorter. Verſe 24. Take me not away in the midſt of my dayes, thy yeares are throughout all Generations. It is not hereby intimated, that any are cut off, before they have fulfilled the time by God appointed unto them: but the faithfull then looked unto the time of the Meſſiah his coming, and to have their lives worne out, before that they counted a cutting

Calvin. off in the mids of their dayes, as Calvin noteth; becauſe they attained not to the fulneſſe of the time, ſet for that deliverance: but becauſe he is ſpeaking of their miſeries in Babylon, and the time ſet for their deliverance from thence; it is to be underſtood, firſt of that: Let me not be waſted and decay, by the Enemies oppreſſions, before that time cometh, in the dayes of this

my

my Captivity, any time within that time being meant by the midſt; as Chriſt is ſaid to have been in the heart, or midſt of the Earth, when he was put only into a Sepulcher, neerer the ſuperficies.

Secondly and myſtically of the deliverance, by the coming of the Meſſiah: Some underſtand it only in generall, of man in miſery pleading with God, as much weakened and brought neer to Death hereby. For his Plea, not to be cut off, becauſe Gods yeares are throughout all Generations, the meaning is not, therefore make me likewiſe to continue throughout all Generations: for he acknowledgeth his dayes to have a midſt, a beginning, and end; But forſomuch as thou my God and Father art everlaſting without change, take pity upon me, that have but a ſhort time in this World, and make my life more comfortable, by delivering me from miſery, and exempting me from the danger, wherein I now dayly am, of being cut off ſooner then ordinary; becauſe thy promiſe to thine is to ſatisfie them with long life, and then to ſhew him thy Salvation. And in this Pſalme, Verſe 28. The Children of thy Servants ſhall continue, and their ſeed be eſtabliſhed befor thee. Which though Baſil applyeth to the Seed, Chriſt, yet it is plainly meant of the Children of Iſrael, who the Prophet doubted not ſhould return from Captivity, and injoy the Land of Canaan again; and their Seed, all true Iſraelites, afterwards at the coming of the Meſſiah, eſtabliſhment in grace here, and in glory for ever hereafter: In which ſenſe, if we underſtand him ſpeaking in this place, in his Plea, that God is everlaſting; a deſire is intimated in the perſon of the Church, to be made everlaſting alſo, in grace and glory, although the bodily life be but ſhort and momentany.

T. W.

Pſal. 91. 16.

Of old thou haſt laid the foundation of the Earth, &c. To prove God everlaſting, he here commemorateth firſt the Eternity, a parte ante, before the World was: for he that made Heaven and Earth, muſt needs be before them, and therefore Eternall. Secondly, He ſaith, that Heaven and Earth ſhall wax old, and decay and periſh, as a Garment, but the yeares of God ſhall have no end; and for change, there ſhall never be any in him, Jam. 1. 17. Thus comparatively ſetting forth his Eternity, a parte poſt. For God is יהוה eſſence, and he ſaith to Moſes, I am that I am: Intimating unchangeableneſſe, being the ſame, and not younger or older for ever. And by the Apoſtles applying this to Chriſt, Heb. 2. 10. it appeareth, that this is ſpoken to him the Son of God, by whom all things are alſo ſaid to have been made, John 1, 2. And for the Heaven and Earth waxing old, and being changed as a Garment that is old, which is not from worſe to better, but from better to worſe; this ſheweth plainly, that when the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. ſpeaks of the Creature to be brought into the glorious liberty of the Sonnes of God, he meaneth not the Heavens and the Earth, but Creatures capable of Salvation; as there I have ſhewed.

Verſ. 25.

26, 27.

PSAL. CIII.

THis Pſalme, ſaith Baſil, ſeemeth moſt aptly to have been compiled after the other; becauſe therein the Church complaineth of her miſery in Captivity, and prayeth for deliverance; here deliverance being attained, ſhe bleſſeth God therefore; and both for deliverance out of Captivity, and by Chriſt through the forgiveneſſe of ſinne: Whence we ſhould learn, as to pray in time of miſery, ſo to ſtir up our ſelves to praiſe God, when we are delivered.

Baſil.

Note.

That reneweth thy life as the Eagle. Hereby he intimateth, to the Kingdome of Heaven, as the Eagle is the King of Birds, Iſa. 40. 31. the like is ſaid, and the Cald. applyeth it to that which ſhall be in the World to come; Job 33. 25. there is a compariſon to the ſame effect, taken from the fleſh of a Childe. Touching the Eagle, ſhe caſts her feathers every yeare, and then

Verſ. 5.

Cald. paraph.

Ainſw. Calvin. new grow, and ſhe flyeth high, and liveth long. Calvin derides it which the Rabbins tell, that the Eagle once in ten yeares flyeth on high, even to the Element of fire, and there her wings burning, falleth down into the Sea, whereby her feathers grow again. But the truth is, the Eagle liveth to a very old age, and then his Bill growing ſo crooked that he cannot feed, he dyeth by pining away through famine, and not for any defect of Auguſt. naturall ſtrength. Thus Calvin, but Auguſtine more probably: the Eagle being hindred in age, by the overgrowing of his Bill, from feeding, rubbeth it againſt a Rock, till it is broken off in the over-grown part, and thus coming to the feeding again, he is luſty and ſtrong to fly as before, the decaying feathers being renewed again: And therefore the ſenſe is thus given in Engliſh Meter: As the Eagle caſts her Bill, whereby her age reneweth. And allegorically by the Rock, Auguſtine underſtands Chriſt, by whom we are renewed in the inner man, Eph. 4. 24.

Verſ. 7. He made known his wayes to Moſes, and his acts to the Children of Iſrael. Having ſpoken of the Lords executing Judgment and Righteouſneſſe, Verſe 6. now he beginneth with a famous example ſhewed hereof, by the miniſtry of Moſes, in plaguing the Egyptians, bringing Iſrael out from amongſt them, and through the red Sea, drowning the Egyptians, Exod, 14. Some Ainſw: refer this to Exod. 33. and 34. where Moſes deſired to ſee his face, but was ſhewed only his back-parts. But his wayes are rather his Commandements, which he ſhewed him in Mount Sinai, and his Judgments thoſe before ſpoken Verſ. 8. of; for which he ſaith, that he was very pitifull towards them before oppreſſed, and cruelly uſed by Pharaoh, and his people: And having delivered his Verſ. 9. people from thoſe oppreſſions, although they proved ungratefull, and he were provoked to anger, yet continued he not in anger, to judge them fully according to their ſinnes. Then in further expreſſing his mercy, in removing Verſ. 10. their ſinnes, he uſeth two compariſons, to ſhew how far; one as far as the Verſ. 11, 12. Heaven is from the Earth: the other, the Eaſt from the Weſt; becauſe no Verſ. 13. things are more diſtant one from another then theſe. Then he compares his Verſ. 14, 15, 16. pity to the pity of Parents to their Children, and men to Graſſe and Flowers, ſo tender and eaſily made to wither. After which he reſumeth that Verſ. 17, 18. again of Gods Eternity, Pſal. 102: 25, 26. applying it to their comfort; for every attribute of God is God: and conſequently his mercy here ſaid to be everlaſting to them that feare him, and keep his Covenant, and his Verſ. 19. Precepts. Laſtly, his Kingdome is magnified, as over all; as was ſhewed, not Verſ. 20, 21, 22. only by his power in Egypt, but alſo in Babylon: whereupon not only men, to whom the benefit of Gods almighty power redoundeth, but alſo the Hoaſts of Angels are exhorted to praiſe God, and all his works in all parts of the World.

PSAL. CIV.

THis Pſalme is without a Title, Heb. but in the Vulgar Latine is prefixed, David de Generatione Mundi: And Baſil doubteth not, but that it was made by David, and with him agreeth Junius. It is altogether Laudatory, from the conſideration of Gods workes of Creation and Providence.

Verſ. 1, 2. Thou art cloathed with Glory and Majeſty: Thou deckeſt thy ſelfe with Light as with a Garment. That is, by thy glorious works, which here follow, for theſe ſhew the glory of God, Pſal. 19. 1. and God is ſaid to dwell in light inacceſſible, 1 Tim. 6. 16. for the glory and light of the Sun is exceeding great, therefore his that made the Sun, is far greater, and more ſhining.

Verſ. 3. Who layeth the Beames of his Chambers in the waters. Hebrew, Of his upper Roomes. Ainſworth, His Lofts: Whereby he meaneth, the waters above the Firmament, Firmament, Gen. 1.7. For above theſe is the higheſt Heaven, the Seat of Gods glory, ſupported by nothing, but by waters there condenſated, as it were, into a ſolid ſubſtance, to make a foundation for this Maſter-Builder to build his Habitation upon: Pſal. 18. 11. and this ſpoken of, as a thing moſt miraculous; ſith the foundation of a Building muſt be hard and rocky, or elſe the building cannot ſtand, and waters of all things are moſt unfit for this purpoſe, and therefore not to be made a foundation, but by an Almighty power.

Who maketh his Angels Spirits, and his Miniſters a flaming fire. In the Hiſtory of the Creation, the making of Angels is not ſpoken of; therefore that is here ſupplyed: man was made of the Earth, but they were not made Bodies, but Spirits, fit to be about the Father of Spirits, and to miniſter to him, and with ſpeed to move ſuddenly into moſt remote parts, being inviſible to bodily eyes. Calvin for Spirits, renders it Windes; but becauſe Heb. 1.7. it is rendred Spirits, he ſaith that all Expoſitors, both Greek and Latine, commonly take it ſo as hath been ſaid, although the word ſignifieth both Windes and Spirits: And his Miniſters a flaming fire, for their burning zeale for Gods glory; for which cauſe we read of Seraphim, ſignifying burning, *Eſa.*6. that miniſter to God continually about his Throne, in praiſing him. And they are ſet forth alſo by this name, for their irreſiſtable power, as there is no withſtanding of fire or water, for they deſtroy all things: ſo one Angell, an whole Hoaſt of Sanneherib, held to be by burning them within, although it appeared not outwardly; as I have ſhewed upon Iſa. 10. 16. 17. Verſ. 4. Calvin.

He hath laid the foundations of the Earth, that it ſhould not be moved. Pſal. 24. 2. He hath founded it upon the Seas, and ſtabliſhed it upon the floods. See the Expoſition there; The foundations of the higheſt Heavens, Verſe 3. and of the Earth below, are the ſame; viz. Fluid waters: and therefore it is an Almighty power, which continually upholdeth them. He that made the Sea beare his body walking upon it, made it beare the huge maſſe of the whole Earth. Then he telleth, how it was at the beginning, the waters ſtood above the Mountaines, Gen. 1. for till the diviſion of the waters, all was covered with water. Verſ. 5. Matth. 14. 25. Verſ. 6.

At thy rebuke they fled, at the voice of thy thunder they haſted away. Hereby he ſetteth forth the ſeparating of the waters at the beginning; part being elevated above the Firmament, and part being made to fall into the lower parts, to make the Seas; thoſe going up by the Mountaines, theſe running by the Vallies to the place by God appointed for them, Verſe 8. and they are there bounded in, Verſe 9. Verſ. 7. Verſ. 8 Verſ. 9.

He watereth the Hills from his Chambers, or Lofts before ſpoken of, Verſe 3. That is, from that part of the Aire, where the waters are placed, from whence raine cometh; and when it came in ſo great abundance, that the whole Earth was drowned, God is ſaid to have opened the Windowes of Heaven. For as there is a ſtarry Heaven, and the higheſt Heaven; ſo there is an Aerean Heaven, conſiſting of three Regions; in the midſt of which are the waters which fall, and water places of the Earth, both high and low as God pleaſeth. Verſ. 13.

The Trees of the Lord are full of ſap, the Cedars of Lebanon which he hath planted. The Cedars, ſaith Baſil, are called the Trees of the Lord; becauſe they are not ſet by man, but God maketh them to grow, and ſpecially in Lebanon, being moſt famous for abundance of them, and for the tall ſtature, and incorruptible matter, of which they conſiſt; whereas other Timber corrupteth, the timber of Cedars doth not: and Cedars as the principall of Trees are named, all others being alſo meant, which by watering are preſerved from withering, and made to grow and flouriſh. For theſe words, are full of ſap, Hebrew is, Shall be ſatisfied. Meaning with moiſture, ſucked by their roots out of the Earth, plentifully watered, whereby they are nouriſhed Verſ. 16. Baſil.

riſhed and grow ſo mightily.

Verſ. 17. The Birds and Storks in ſpeciall, the Goats and the Conies are ſpoken, as
18. having by God an apt habitation given them.

Verſ. 19. From Earthly things he paſſeth to heavenly, the Sun, and the Moon, the 20. one going and the other coming, and then it is dark.

Verſ. 20,21. And then Lions, and other wild beaſts go out to ſeek their prey.

Verſ. 25.26. Verſ. 25.26. He procedeth to ſpeak of the Sea, and the Creatures therein, eſpecially of Leviathan, or the Whale, of which ſee more, Iob. 41.

Verſ. 30. Thou ſendeſt out thy Spirit and they are created, and thou renewеſt the face of the earth.

Here, and Verſe 29. he ſheweth the perpetuall viciſſitude of death, and life amongſt Earthly Creatures, of whom ſome dye, and then others come forth in their ſtead, and repleniſh the Earth again; and that he ſaith, is either by hiding his Face; or ſending forth his Spirit to renew all Species of living things from Generation to Generation. The Manichees, ſaith Calvin, and Servetus, gathered from hence, that a part of God is not only in man, but in every living creature, which when it dyeth, returneth to God again: But it is to be underſtood, that this is ſpoken of the ſpirit of Life in every creature, which is but an Effect wrought and made by him, and called his Spirit, becauſe it cometh from him, being indeed after that it is wrought in the Creature, the Spirit of that Creature, and periſheth again with it, being nothing elſe but the ſenſitive life, which hath the beginning with the Body, and likewiſe Endeth with it; and God is only ſayd Verſe 29. to gather it, when he taketh it from the Creature, reſolving it into the Aire,, and ſo the Beaſt, Fowl, or Fiſh dyeth. And herein this ſpirit differeth from a mans, in that his Spirit is immortall, having a diſtinct being after his Death unto Eternity, and that in woe or Weale.

Calvin.

Verſ. 31.32. From the Premiſes he here concludeth, that God hath Glory from all his Verſ. 33.34. Works, And Verſe 33. he ſtirreth up himſelf, and conſequently us, upon theſe Conſiderations to praiſe God.

PSAL. CV.

THe Vulgar Latine prefixeth before this Pſalm Halelujah, which ſignifieth Praiſe God, but the Hebr. not only the firſt Words are the ſame in effect, Give thanks to the Lord. And not only Halalujah is prefixed here, but before Pſ. 106. 107. ſo that theſe 3. Pſ. together were by the Hebrewes called the great Hallalujah, and were ſung at ſolemn times in their aſſemblies. Of Pſalm. 105. and Pſalm. 106. I ſhall need to ſay nothing by way of expoſition; for in them is nothing but an hiſtoricall ſhewing, what God had done in ſingular mercy for Abraham, and his ſeed in promiſing the inheritance of Canaan, and before their going thither placing them in Ægypt, by means of Ioſeph, and when they were there oppreſſed; delivering them and plaguing the Ægyptians, Pſalm. 105. And Pſalm. 106. ſhewing the miraculous things done for them, and their ingratitude, both whilſt they were in the wilderneſſe, and after their coming into Cannaan, eſpecially falling to moſt Groſſe Idolatry, for which they were given over into the hands of their Enemies, and when they cryed unto the Lord, again delivered from them. And from all this he ſtirreth up to praiſe God, bringing the Hiſtory of Geneſis, touching Abraham and Ioſeph, &c. and of Exodus and Numbers, and Judges, into a compend in theſe two Pſalmes: only Pſalm 105. 14. it is ſaid, he rebuked Kings for their ſakes; and hereby is meant the Check that Abimileck had for Abraham, Gen. 2. and the King of Ægypt, where he is alſo called led a Prophet; but here anointed alſo, for his Sanctification to the Kingdome of Heaven.

PSAL. CVII.

IN this Pſalm ſaith Baſil, the deliverance of the Jewes out of Babylon is propheſied of, and under it our deliverance by Chriſt, to praiſe God for which we are here exhorted; and indeed it doth more concern us under the Goſpel then them. Before it in the Vulgar Latine is prefixed Halelujah, Halelujah, whereupon Auguſtine noteth, that it is a moſt remarkeable Pſalm, and therefore ſung anciently in the Church at moſt ſolemn times. But ſome refer the former Halelujah here to Pſalm. 106. thus making it to have a double Halelujah, one in the beginning, another in the end; but it is to be noted, that what is prefixed before any Pſalm belongeth to it, and not to the Pſalm before going: thus Auguſt. who expoundeth the Pſalm, as pertaining to Chriſtians gathered out of all Countries under the Goſpell. Thus alſo Ierom: Calvin expounds it of ſeverall occurrences of this life, in all which, the providence of God is to be acknowledged both by land & by Sea, that he may have praiſe, and nothing may be aſcribed to blind fortune, as amongſt Heathens. which I grant may be received in reſpect of the literal ſenſe, and good uſe made of it, but I take it, that ſomething elſe is here myſtically aimed at, according to Ierom and Auguſt. as will further appear in the following Expoſition.

Baſil.

Auguſt.

Calvin.

Whom he hath redeemed from the Eaſt, and weſt, from the North and the ſea: Herby ſaith Ierom, it appeareth, that the Jews are not ment, who wer brought out of Ægypt, for they came only from 1 part of the world, which was ſouth, nor their bringing from Babylon, which is alwayes ſpoken of as North: but the people of all Nations redeemed by Chriſt. But whereas Eaſt, Weſt, North, and the Sea are named, which was alſo Weſt, and ſo the Weſt is named twice, and the South not at all, he thinketh that there lyeth a Myſtery, that the Jews being rejected, the Gentiles ſhould be the people now redeemed. For it is ſayd Habac. 3. 3. That the Lord cometh from Teman, or the South: That is, From Bethelhem, which lay South from Jeruſalem, where Chriſt was born: And upon this he inſiſteth much, becauſe when the Sea is named in any place of ſacred Hiſtory, the great Sea is meant, which lay Weſt; but forſomuch as the red Sea lay South, and it may be meant as well of that, as of the main Ocean, the Ground of this conceit is weak, and is far fetcht to make Iudea South, becauſe one part of the Land where Chriſt was born lay South in reſpect of the other. Wherefore the four parts of the world, from whence the redeemed by Chriſt are gathered, be here undoubtedly meant, and the Rejection of the Jews at this time is ſufficiently ſet forth in other places, yet not for ever, as appeareth Rom. 11. And thus other Expoſitors generally: Calvin, acknowledging no Redemption by Chriſt here ſpoken of, refereth it to all mankind in all the parts of the world, wherein who ſo are ſcattered, and driven from houſe and home into Wilderneſſes, in the midſt of many dangers, but yet are brought home again, they are to acknowledg this benefit to come from Gods providence, and praiſe him for it: ſo likewiſe for their preſervation in ſuch ſolitary and barren places, where they have been hungry and thirſty, wanting all ſuſtenance, as Verſe 4. 5. But of this the ſpirituall ſence is by the ancients given thus, That in the Wilderneſſe of Darkneſs and Ignorance they wandered before, as they were blindly lead, a ſhew being made by their Philoſophers to bring them to the City of Bleſſedneſſe, but yet no ſuch City being found, by which means they were held in an hunger-ſterved condition, not in reſpect of the want of Bread and Water, but of hearing the word of God.

Verſ. 3. Hieron.

Calvin.

Verſ. 4. 5. Hieron. Auguſt. Baſil. Amos. 8.

Then

Verſ. 6. 7. Then they cryed to the Lord in their Trouble; That is, This their miſerable condition, although they were not ſenſible of it, was a voice of crying in the Eares of the Lord, being out of his pity moved to provide better for them, and by the preaching of the Goſpel, to bring them by Faith and Repentance to his City the Church, as it is compared, Matth. 5. 14. 15. there to inhabit ſetledly to their exceeding great Joy and Comfort.

Verſ. 9. Such as ſit in darkneſſe and in the ſhadow of death, being bound. He repeateth again Verſe 8. his ſatisfying of the Hungry in the ſenſe before given, and now proceedeth by other Allegories to ſet forth the miſerable caſe of ſinners.

Firſt, They ſit in darkneſſe, Matth &c. 4. 15. So they that were in the darkneſſe of Ignorance, and dayly periſhed therein, are ſaid to do.

Secondly, Being bound, That is, with ſin, and ſtreights into which they were brought thereby, to which Effect, Eſa. 61. 1. is alleadged by our Lord, Luk. 4. 16. for ſinners, till their converſion, are in Bonds of Iron as it were, that is, The ſtrongeſt Bonds that be, as Priſoners taken captive and ſlaves, are ſhut up and bound. Theſe bands are alſo called Bands of Braſſe, and this Verſ. 11. priſon bolted with barrs of Iron, Verſe 16. and Verſe 12. he ſheweth the cauſe; their Rebelling againſt the words of God, and deſpiſing his Councell. For thus all Nations did before their converſion, diſobedience, wherein they lived, being counted rebellion, and deſpiſing of God, as he that ſerveth Mammon as his Maſter, is ſayd to deſpiſe his cheif Maſter God, Matth. 6. 24.

Thirdly, He brought down their heart With Labour, and they fell down, Aerſ. 12. &c. where by Labour, is meant ſuch labour as is ſpoken of, Matth. 11. 28, Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, For by living in ſin, the Heart is brought down and fainteth, as the Body by extream labour and toil, the ſame is ſet forth in other words. V. 17.

Verſ. 17. Fooliſh men are afflicted for their ſinnes: The heart or inward man being hereby brought into an wofull caſe, although they feel it not, being ready to periſh for want of food, as men moſt hungry and thirſty, and Yet their Soul abhorred all manner of meat, When they were thus even at deaths door, that is, there was no deſire in them of ſpirituall food, for they knew it not to be ſuch; but counted the preaching of the Goſpel fooliſhneſs.

Verſ. 18. 1 Cor. 1. 20. Verſ. 20. Then he ſent out his Word and healed them: That is, Of this ſoules-ſickneſs, when by his Miniſters ſent out to preach they were converted, they were healed of this ſtomack-ſickneſſe, upon which Deſtructions ſhould otherwiſe have followed for ever without remedy. And whoſo hath any benefit by the

Note. word of God for Salvation, is healed of this diſtemper, if he hath ſleighted the word, and the preaching of it, now he doth ſo no more, but eſteemeth it with Job, above his appointed food, and therefore ill is the caſe of all prophane perſons, who make more account of a cruſt of bread, as Eſau of a

Iob. 23. 12. meſſe of pottage, then of this Heavenly Manna.

Verſ. 23. They that go down to the Sea in ſhips: That is, The Apoſtles, who ſayled into divers countries to preach the Goſpell, occupying, Or doing buſineſſe, like men in their occupation in great waters, that is, amongſt many peoples, as they are ſometime ſet forth in the Revelation: The Waters are People V. 24.

Verſ. 24. They ſee the works of the Lord, &c. Here by the troubles of men at Sea,

Verſ. 26. he ſheweth the troubles of the mind, being in the hearing of the word ſometime lifted up with hope, and ſometime carryed down moſt low by deſpaire, their hearts melting within them for trouble and perplexity. For in this caſe

Verſ. 28. 29. 30. Preachers ſometimes ſee one, and ſometime another, that come to them to be comforted and directed, and finally God being called upon, the ſtorm ceaſeth, and they come to the deſired Haven, peace of Conſcience, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, and then to the Haven of Heaven.

Auguſt. To this Effect Auguſtine ſpeaking myſtically upon the whole Pſalm, as relating lating to our Redemption by Chriſt, and the manner of Gods working in the heart by his word in ſuch as are turned from their former vanities to the true Faith, which ſeemeth to me moſt probable.

He turneth the ſprings into a Wilderneſſe; &c. A fruitfull Land into barrenneſſe, for the wickedneſſe of them that dwell therein. Verſ. 33.

He turneth the Wilderneſſe into ſtanding water, &c. That this is to be underſtood of the time of the Goſpel is apparant, Eſa. 41. 18. where by the like ſpeech it is generally acknowledged, that the Gentiles were as a barren and dry deſart, full of the waters of life by the preaching of the Apoſtles amongſt them; but the Jews, who rejected this preaching, as a Wilderneſſe, being before as a fruitfull Land, for now they are barren of all that is Good, being without Faith, and all ſprings of teaching, as they were threatned, that the Kingdom of God ſhould be taken from them, and given to a Nation bringing forth the fruits therof. So that here indeed is the rejection of the Jew and the vocation of the Gentiles propheſied of, according to Ierom. although Verſe 3. be but ſtreined by him to this, as hath been ſayd. Rivers did run amongſt the Jews, ſaith Auguſtine, that is, Prophets and Preiſts, and many Sacrifices, but now ye may ſeek a Prophet and find none, a Preiſt and a Sacrifice and find none, no not a Preiſt after the Order of Aaron: behold a fruitfull land turned into barrenneſſe, but contrariwiſe the Gentiles, amongſt whom no ſuch Rivers ran, but were as the dry and barren wilderneſs, have now prophets running, and Preiſts; and a Preiſt, although not after the order of Aaron, yet after the order of Melchiſedeck, who hath offered himſelf in ſacrifice, which is of more value then all Sacrifices of old offered by the high Preiſt of Aarons order: And the very Country of the Jews, as Travellers report, which flowed before with Milk and Hony, is now for fifteene miles about Ieruſalem, like a Deſart, Without Graſſe, Tree, or Shrub. Verſ. 34. Verſ. 35. Matth. 21. 43. Auguſt.

There he maketh the hungry to dwell, that they might prepare a City and ſow the fields, &c. Verſ. 36.

They multiply greatly, and their cattell decreaſe not: Hereby the hungry again he meaneth as before, the Deſtitute of Spirituall food, as the Gentiles were: But now here is a ſowing, and a bleſſing upon it, to ſet forth which our Lord ſaith, A ſower went out to ſow; and Planting, for one planteth, ſaith St Paul, And another watereth, And I am the vine ſaith Chriſt, My Father the Husbandman, and Chriſtians are increaſed by this means greatly, and their Cattell not diminiſhed, that is, acording to Baſil, the people fed by them; according to Auguſt. ſuch as have Faith, but no excellency of Knowledge: but forſomuch, as ſowing feilds was before ſpoken of, and great beaſts, as Oxen are uſed for this, and the word בהמות is commonly rendred Jumenta, a juvando, from helping, becauſe they help the Husbandman in his labour of tilling the Ground, it ſeemeih rather to me, that other preachers helping in the Spirituall husbandry are meant, who at the firſt going out of the Goſpel, increaſe to more and more, as more Churches were planted: for they Ordained them Elders in every Church: and to Oxen Preachers are compared, where it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the Oxe that treadeth out the Corn. But as they were increaſed, ſo by Perſecution they were within a while brought low again and diminiſhed. But contempt is even now caſt upon Princes, their edicts againſt Chriſtians being contemned ſo far, that the Faithfull were nothing terrified thereby to yeild to renounce Chriſt, or to commit Idolatry in the leaſt degree; yea when Tyrants raged moſt againſt them, they did rejoice and ſing and by ſleighting the torments, to which they put them, they made them ſtand amazed; the more they ſought to root them out, being the more increaſed; ſo that it became a Proverb, Sanguis Martyrum ſeæmen Eccleſia. And therefore it followeth Verſe 41. He makes him families like a flock, or like ſheep. Verſ. 37. Verſ. 38. Baſil. Matth. 13. 1 Cor. 3. Joh. 15. Act. 14. 33. 1 Cor. 9. 1 Tim. 5. 18. Verſ. 39. Verſ. 40. Auguſt.

Auguſt. by Princes undetſtandeth arch Hereticks, of whom he ſaith, before fore it is meant, when he ſaith, They are diminiſhed, Verſe 39. That is, By going out from us, becauſe they were not of us, according to 1 Joh. 2. 20. but the diminution there ſpoken of was by oppreſſion, and not by erring out of the way of truth. Ierom therefore better, as Chriſt was by Princes contemned, ſo it was juſt with God to caſt contempt upon them, as hath been before ſaid, and to make them wander in the Wilderneſſe, where there is no way, that is, In Superſtition and Idolatry, being therein like unto men in a Wilderneſſe, where through want of ſuſtenance, or by wild beaſts, whilſt they can find no way out, they periſh: Baſil by Princes underſtands the Apoſtles, who were as Princes among Chriſtians, but contemned by Perſecuters, as moſt baſe and vile. But the like ſaying is Iob 12. 21. where it is manifeſtly of cheif men in Common-wealths, for Honour and Wiſdome. Moreover it is ſaid, He: That is, God powreth contempt upon Princes, and cauſeth them to wander, &c. Which can no way agree to leaders in the way of truth, nor to God, to make them contemptible.

Hieron.

Baſil.

Verſ. 43. Auguſt. Who ſo is wiſe will obſerve theſe things, and he ſhall underſtand the loving kindneſſe of the Lord. That is, ſaith Auguſtine, how that men are redeemed and ſaved from their ſinnes, from ſtomack-ſickneſſe of the Soule, from trouble of conſcience, as from ſhip-wrack, to come to the Haven of happineſſe, and from ſpirit-famine and deſtruction; not out of their own merits, but Gods mercies and loving kindneſſes, in Chriſt alone; and he is not wiſe, that doth not thus underſtand, but attributeth ought to himſelfe in theſe things? wherefore the Papiſts, that aſcribe part to grace and part to works, have this learned and Othodox Doctor of the Church manifeſtly againſt them.

Note

Take theſe according to the literall ſenſe only, and there needeth no great wiſdome hereupon, to infer the generall love of God to all men; for both they are plain and obvious to every one of mean capacity; and to underſtand ſuch a loving kindneſſe only, is not a matter of ſuch happineſſe, as may ſtir up to ſeek the wiſdome to attain it: but his loving kindneſſe in Chriſt, wherein everlaſting happineſſe conſiſteth, is; and it is a theam worthy an holy Prophet, to ſtir up to the conſideration and underſtanding of this, as being their chiefe task to ſpeak of it, ever ſince the World began; as is ſaid, Luke 1. 7.

PSAL. CVIII.

THis Pſalme is compoſed out of Pſalme 57. 7, 8, 9, 10: the firſt part and Pſalme 60. 6, 7, 8, &c. the ſecond part, and therefore the Expoſition may be ſeen there.

PSAL. CIX.

To him that excelleth, a Pſalme of David.

Hieron. Auguſt. Baſil. Calvin. Iunius.

THis Pſalme is generally taken by the Ancients as propheticall, touching Judas, in his treachery againſt Chriſt, and of the Iewes his moſt malicious Enemies. Calvin underſtands it of perſecutors of the faithfull under the Goſpell, but firſt of Davids Enemies. Junius altogether of David, towards the end of Sauls Raigne, when his caſe ſeemed to be moſt deſperate; he being daily detracted from by Sycophants that were about Saul, and therefore he curſeth them and their Poſterity, in this bitter manner. But Act. 1. 20. where Verſe 8. is applyed to Judas, ſheweth, that he was in this Pſalme thus propheſied of, and accurſed: and therefore I doubt not, but that he is meant; the ſpeech running altogether againſt one notorious wicked wicked perſon, from Verſe 6. to Verſe 14. And becauſe he did not this wickedneſſe alone, but the Iewes had alſo a hand in it, who waged him to it; they alſo are complained of, Verſe 2, 3, 4, 5. and curſed, Verſe 15, 16, &c. to 21.

They are joyned together, for he ſaith, The mouth of the wicked and of the deceitfull are opened againſt me; that is of the malicious Iewes, and deceitfull Iudas, who came and pretending love, ſaluted Chriſt with a kiſſe, and ſo betrayed him: And he complaineth alſo of their lying tongue, wherewith they ſpake againſt him, for the falſe Witneſſes, that are ſaid to have come againſt Chriſt, when he ſtood to be judged. Verſ. 2.

They compaſſed me about with words of hatred, when they cryed out, crucifie him, crucifie him. And in all this they requited him with hatred for his love; in that he came ſo lovingly into the World, to ſave all ſuch as ſhould beleive in him; but they inſtead of beleiving in him, maligned and perſecuted him unto the Death. Verſ. 3. Verſ. 4, 5.

Let Satan ſtand at his right hand: that is, having power to tempt him to lay violent hands upon himſelfe, as he entred into him to conſpire with others the Death of his maſter. Verſe 8. Let another take his Office. Which was fulfilled in Mathias being joyned in Apoſtle-ſhip to the eleven, when Iudas was falne; and then his dayes were but few, for he ſoon went and hanged himſelfe. Ierome applyeth that of Satan ſtanding at his right hand, to the Iew, over whom he was ſet, being looſed as Barabas, that before was bound in priſon; but Chriſt being judged to crucifying, he was let go, and ever ſince hath behaved himſelfe, as one ſet over the Iewes. For what was Barabas, but in ſignification, the Son of his Father, the Devill; and indeed one that made inſurrection, and a murtherer; an apt Type of the wicked, the Devill here ſaid to be ſet over him: For what tumults followed amongſt the Iewes after this, and how many thouſands of them were in a ſhort time murthered? When he is judged, let him be condemned, and his prayer turned into ſin: For ſo was the prayer of Iudas, when he ſorrowed and ſaid, I have ſinned, in betraying the innocent blood: He fell preſently into the ſin of deſperation, and ſelfe-murther. Verſ. 6. Verſ. 8. Act. 1. Hieron.

Let his Children be Fatherleſſe. Here by his Children, he meaneth the Iewes, who were wicked like Iudas the Traytor; he taught them how to kill Chriſt, appointing the place and time, and leading them unto him, and denoting him by a kiſſe: and therefore as Iubal, who taught others to make muſicall Inſtruments, is ſaid to be Father of all ſuch; ſo Iudas of thoſe Iewes: and he being dead, they were Fatherleſſe, and his wife the Jewiſh Synagogue, a Widow, being divorced from God for her wickedneſſe; for I cannot finde, ſaith Ierome, that Iudas had a Wife or Children, to ſpeak properly; therefore it muſt thus be underſtood. Verſ. 9.

Let his Children be Vagabonds continually, and beg their bread. What a wandring life the Iewes have lived ever ſince the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, I ſhall not need to ſpeake; nor how this propheſie is herein fulfilled: for they were diſperſed into all Countries, untill that in ſome again for their notorious malice againſt Chriſtians they have been expelled, as here in England many yeares agone, and ſpoyled of their Goods ſo, that they have been brought to Beggars ſtate. For thus they fell into the hands of Extortioners, when upon a light occaſion a quarrell hath been pickt againſt them, and their Treaſurers being thouſands taken away. Verſ. 10. Verſ. 11.

For that which is ſaid againſt any helping their Fatherleſſe Children, and the blotting out of their name in another Generation, herein Ierome obſerveth a great difference, betwixt their ſin of crucifying Chriſt, and their Idolatry, for which they were carryed Captive, and held ſo ſeventy yeares; but in that time they had ſome to comfort them, Ezekiel and Daniel, &c. And in that ſhort time, their Poſterity found favour at the hands of Cyrus, and other Perſian Kings likewiſe, when they committed Idolatry in the Verſ. 12, 13. Hieron.

Wilderneſs, and murmured, they were held there under many miſeries forty years; but then they had a Joſhuah to lead them into the promiſed land: but now they have no Prophets more, none to ſhew them any favour in almoſt ſixteen hundred years, but they ſtill remain Exiles and Vagabonds, and deſpiſed of all men to this day.

And in one Generation, as he reads it, their name was put out, Viz. their City being deſtroyed, and their Country two and forty years after their crucifying of Chriſt; which was within one Generation following that which was living in the time of their doing that bloudy Execution. And indeed it might well be called a putting out of their name, becauſe they were never ſince of any fame, as they had formerly been, but moſt infamous in all Countries.

Verſ. 14. Whereas Verſe 14. he ſpeaks of the ſins of their Fathers remembring againſt them, and of their Mother, hereby ſaith Jerom, he meaneth thoſe ſinnes of their Fathers, committed in the Wilderneſs, and ſince of Jeruſalem, commonly ſet forth by the name of a Mother. And this as Auguſtine ſaith, is not againſt that Ezek. 18. where it is ſayd, that the Children ſhall not beare the ſinnes of their fathers; becauſe that is meant of Children turned from their Fathers evill wayes, and not perſiſting in them, as theſe doe; for in this caſe, all the bloud ſhed from Abel to Zechariah, cometh juſtly upon this Generation, as is threatned, Matth. 23. 23.

Auguſt.

Verſ. 16. He perſecuted the poor and needy man, that he might even ſlay the broken in heart: Such was Chriſt, perſecuted by the Jews; for being rich he made himſelf poor, and when the Foxes had holes, and the Birds neaſts, he had not whereupon to lay his head, and broken he was in heart, for he ſaid, My Soul is heavy to the death; and he was in an agony, till he ſweat great drops of bloud.

Phil. 2. 6.

Verſ. 17. From Verſe 17. to Verſe 21. He ſheweth the Ground of the Jews cruel dealings againſt him, they loved curſing and not bleſſing, and therefore he prayeth, that it might come to them accordingly, or rather Propheſieth ſo. Now they loved Curſing, becauſe they curſed Chriſt, and called the people curſed that were drawn by him; and by crucifying him, made him a curſe, for curſed is every one that hangeth upon a Tree: and what a man doth, he is ſaid to love, as Joh. 3. 19. and therefore as he doth, it ſhall come unto him; and that moſt juſtly: although wicked curſers oft-times eſcape long, and therefore fear it not: but let him that would be bleſſed, bleſſe, and not curſe, as is commanded.

Ioh. 7. 49.

Note

Verſ. 25. I was a Reproach unto them, they ſaw me and ſhaked the head: From Verſe 20. hitherto, and in this Verſe, he ſpeaketh in the perſon of Chriſt, as he was before called Poor and needy, Verſe 16, and of him it is expreſly ſaid, that when he hanged upon the Croſſe, they ſhaked their heads at him, ſaying He ſaved others, let him ſave himſelf, &c. Matth. 27. 39. 4.

Verſ. 27. That they might know that this is thy hand O Lord, and that thou haſt done it: That is, That they had no power to crucifie me; but through thy will and mine it was thus done unto me, that none might therefore be hindered from beleeving in mee. For hee tolde Pilate, that hee had noe power, but what was given him of his Father, and ſayd, I lay down my life for my ſheep, and Act. 2. 23. Hee was delivered by the predeterminate counſell of God.

Joh. 10.

Verſ. 28. Let them curſe, but bleſſe thou. Having before ſpoken of curſing, coming upon the malicious Jewes for curſing; Now he further propheſieth of bleſſing, wherewith the faithfull ſhould contrary-wiſe bleſſe Chriſt, and that confuſion ſhould be to his Enemies. And for this he concludeth with praiſe, Verſe 30. 31.

PSAL.

PSAL. CX.

A Pſalme of David.

FOR the firſt words, The Lord ſaid to my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand, enough is ſaid by our Lord himſelf, to ſhew, that it is ſpoken prophetically of him, Matth. 22. 44. where the explanation may be ſeen. Verſ. 1.

The Lord ſhall ſend the rod of thy ſtrength out of Zion. That is, thy Goſpel, which ſhall be of power, as a Kings Scepter, the Enſigne of Soveraign Authority; and ſo thy Kingdom, beginning to be preached in Zion, ſhall be ſet up in all other Nations. Be thou Ruler amongſt thine enemies, which is, when they that were ſinners, and ſo enemies before, are converted and reconciled and ſubjected to Chriſt. Verſ. 2. Rom. 5. 3.

Thirdly, Thy People ſhall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holineſſe: Before he ſpake of the rod of Chriſts power going out, now he ſaith, That in the day in which he goeth out, Thy people ſhall be willing, that is, they, in whoſe hearts this power taketh place to convert them, ſhall ſhew all willingneſs and chearfullneſs in ſubmitting to the Goſpel, as indeed they did, being full of joy, where the Faith of Chriſt was imbraced, as it is ſayd of them in Samaria, Act. 18. and of the Eunuch baptized, that he went away rejoicing; and the Jailour Act. 16. ſo Act. 1. 46. 47. So that they, who live not in obedience to the Goſpell out of good will, but for fear coming to duties in publick, and by compulſion giving, and being reſtreined from groſs ſins, have not yet felt the power of Chriſt in their hearts to alter and change them, and although they beleive, they are none of his regenerated ones, neither ſhall they enter into the Kingdome of Heaven: for true Chriſtians are Voluntiers In the beauties of holineſſe, this is to ſhew, what manner of people theſe Voluntiers ſhould be, beautifull or ſhining through holineſs, as it is ſaid, Wiſdome makes the face to ſhine, ſin deformeth and makes black, that God cannot love; but holineſſe beautifieth and maketh amiable. To be willing to do Chriſt an duties, but not to be of an holy life, is not to be ſo willing as they in the day of Chriſts power; but as in the night of Satans power ſtill. Of the womb of the Morning thou haſt the dew of thy birth; This is by Expoſitors moſt commonly underſtood of the Faithfull, who are born of the Spirit of Chriſt, for which birth, or they, which are born of him are ſpoken of, and they are compared to the dew, which falleth in the calm and ſilent night, and in great abundance, to ſhew the great number that ſhould be borne unto Chriſt, as it is ſayd, When he ſhall make his ſoule an offering for ſin, he ſhall ſee his ſeed, Eſa. 53. 10. and in another place the ſame Prophet ſpeaks of them as an admirable great company; ſo that the Church is brought in way of admiration, ſaying, who hath born me all theſe? And in the morning, as the word ſignifieth, to denote, that this ſhould be betimes, even ſo ſoon as the light of the Goſpel began to dawn; and it is called, Hebr. The dew of his youth, becauſe they of whom he ſpeaketh, are new born by Regeneration, and ſo very young, Joh. 3. 3. ſee alſo Micah 5. 7 where the Faithfull are again compared to the dew, and for the dew or rain coming out of the womb of the morning, Job 38. 28. 29. and a multitude likened to the dew, 2 Sam. 17. 12. And being thus taken, it is as if he had ſayd, Thou O Chriſt, betimes at the going out of the Goſpel haſt abundance of people born unto thee, not being brought in by tumult, but quietly; even ſo many as the Dew covering the Ground Hyperbolically. Some refer it to Chriſt, in reſpect of his divinity thus, Early, even from Eternity, thou haſt thy Eſſence by being begotten of the Father, alleadging for this, Prov. 8. 22. 23. and this is favoured by the Septuag. Of the womb before the morning Note. Note.

Star begat I thee. Others in reſpect of his humanity, giving this for the ſenſe; Thou art born in ſuch obſcurity, that a thing can hardly be ſeen ſo ſoon in the Morning, when it is yet between darkneſſe and light; ſo is thy Birth ſuch, that it may well be called a great myſtery, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Of all theſe, the firſt as it is moſt followed, is beſt; for why Chriſts divinity ſhould be compared to the deaw, I ſee not, or why called the deaw of his youth; it is neither young, nor old, but alwayes the ſame: and if it had been ſaid, the Star of the Morning, his humanity might well have been underſtood; but not, being ſaid the deaw.

Verſ. 4. Thou art a Prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedek. Of which ſee, Heb. 5. 6.

Verſ. 5. 1 Cor 15. The Lord at thy right hand ſhall ſtrike through Kings in the day of his wrath. Chriſt is ſaid to be at the right hand of God, Act. 7. Rom. 8. and therefore God the Father is here ſpoken to, touching his Son and our Lord; and hereby is ſhewed, that he hath power enough, even to deſtroy the proudeſt Kings in the World, that will not ſubmit, but rebell againſt him, and perſecute him in his Members, as did Herod Act. 12, and was therefore ſtricken and eaten up with wormes: ſee a like paſſage before, Pſalme 2. Jerome inquiring how the Lord, bidding him ſit on his right hand, is now ſaid to be on his right hand, anſwereth, that this is ſpoken, to ſhew the Verſ. 6. equality of the Father and the Son: And to the ſame effect is Verſe 6. He ſhall judge amongſt the Heathen, &c. as Kings, ſo common people, that reject his Goſpell, ſhall ſuffer by his Judgments in multitudes; ſo that with their Corpſes, pits ſhall be filled, and that not only of the taile, but of the heads of Countries alſo.

Verſ. 7. Calvin. * He ſhall drinke of the Brooke in the way, therefore he ſhall lift up his head. Some underſtand this, ſaith Calvin, of his afflictions, of which he was ſaid to drink; Can yee drinke of the Cup that I ſhall drinke of. Some, of a Brook running with blood, of which he is ſaid to drink; when ſo many are by his Calvin, Judgments ſlain, for their rebelling againſt him, as to fill large places. But rejecting both theſe, he ſaith, it is alluded to thoſe valiant men of Gedeon, who did not lye down to drink, when they were brought to the waters, as others; but taking up a little in their hands lapped it, as a Dog haſty of his way ſeeketh not for water to drink going out of his way therefore; but lappeth it here and there as he findeth it in his paſſage, putting down his head a little, but immediately lifting it up again.

Hieron. For the firſt Expoſition is Jerome, alledging further to prove it, his going over the Brook Kedron, when he was neer the time of his ſuffering, ſpoken of Auguſt. John 18. 1. unto which he ſaith it is here alluded. Auguſtine ſaith, that by his drinking of the Brook in the way, is meant his humbling himſelfe to be born of a Woman, and to ſuffer Death: For the courſe of a mans life, that is ſoon ſwallowed up of Death again, is like unto a Brook of water, which is alwayes running, till it cometh into the Sea: ſo mans life, ſo ſoon as he hath received it, is alwayes running, til that it be ſwallowed up of the Grave; and becauſe Chriſt humbled himſelfe to drink of the ſame Brook, he exalted his

Baſil. head moſt high, as Phil. 2. 6. Baſil will have the poor life that he lead here, meant; being content with the meaneſt drink, even water in the way as he travelled. Of all theſe Expoſitions, that of Jerome ſeemeth to me the beſt; becauſe the drinking here ſpoken of is rewarded with exaltation, which followed not, but went before his Judgments, ſhewed upon the rebellious; for which it cannot be underſtood of his drinking any River of blood, thus made to run, or of his courageous and ſpeedy purſuing of his Enemies, ſo that he would not tarry to ſatisfie his thirſt better, then with water running in the way: unleſſe that by his lifting up his head we underſtand the glory and fame, which he purchaſed unto himſelfe ſince his aſcention, by the debellation of his obſtinate Enemies; as the Iewes at the deſtruction of their City, and heathen Emperours ſince, of whom it is noted, that in three hundred dred yeares after the going out of the Goſpell, during which time they raiſed perſecution againſt Chriſts Church, many of them came to violent ends, and the raigne of others of them was but ſhort, till Conſtantine, the firſt Chriſtian Emperour, who raigned forty yeares in great glory: And then his drinking of the Brook in the way, may be, according to Calvin, ſpoken of his valiant and expedite going on without ſtay, as Ioſhuah, to purſue his Enemies with his Judgments, till that he brings all under his feet, as he ſhall do before the end of the World.

PSAL. CXI.

THis Pſalme, as alſo Pſalme 112. and 113. is a Pſalme of praiſe, and therefore they are all begun with Halalujah, which is therefore by ſome made the Title, as alſo Pſalme 105. and 106. which begin likewiſe; where ſee, what hath been noted upon it. And more ſingularly this, and Pſal 112. are compoſed more curiouſly, according to the Hebrew Alphabet every ſentence beginning with one of thoſe Letters: as the firſt with א, the ſecond with ב, the third with Gimel, &c. to the end of the Pſalme; ſo was Pſal. 25. and the 119. beginning each part with a Letter, in order alſo; intimating theſe Pſalmes above others, to be metricall according to Hebrew meter. God is here praiſed, firſt for his works, ſecondly for his word, Verſe 7. For his works, they are firſt celebrated in generall, Verſe 2, 3, 4. as they were more largly, Pſal. 103. Secondly in particular, his works of mercy. The Lord is gracious and full of compaſſion. And this is demonſtrated, firſt by his giving meat to his people; that is, Manna, and quailes in the Wilderneſſe: although Baſil would have ſpirituall meat here meant. Secondly, by remembring his Covenant at all times; ſo that when he was moſt provoked, as Exod. 32. yet for his Covenants ſake with Abraham, Iſaack, and Iaacob, he deſtroyed them not. Thirdly, by ſhewing his people the power of his works, when he brought them with a ſtrong hand out of Ægypt. Fourthly, by giving them the heritage of the Heathen, when he brought them into the Land of Canaan. Of all which ſee more at large before, Pſal. 105. and 106. 2. For his word, all his Commandements are ſure, they ſtand faſt for ever. Of which ſee more at large, Pſal 19. 7, 8, 9. Again, another part of Gods word is, his Covenant; according to which he redeemed his people: He ſent redemption to his people, He commanded his Covenant for ever, holy and reverend is his name. Which redemption was not only of Iſrael out of Egypt, but of the faithfull of all Countries and Nations by Chriſt. Laſtly, his word is praiſed for this, that hereby his feare is wrought in us, which is the beginning of wiſdome; whereby we come to have praiſe for ever, not of man, but of God, Rom. 2. 29. that which we have done out of his feare being commemorated and commended at the laſt day.

Verſ. 2, 3.
Verſ. 4.
Verſ. 5.
Baſil.
Verſ. 6.
Verſ. 7.
Verſ. 9.
Matth. 25.

PSAL. CXII.

THis Pſalme moſt aptly followeth next after the 111. for there he concludeth with this, The feare of the Lord is the beginning of wiſdome, &c. And here he proceeds further, to ſpeak of the bleſſedneſſe of him that feareth God: He delighteth greatly in his Commandements, as Paul, Rom. 7. ſaith, I delight in the Law of God, as concerning the inner man. And his bleſſedneſſe here ſet forth is, firſt, in his ſeed made mighty upon Earth. Some indeed that feare God, have no ſeed, eſpecially now under the Goſpell; although under the Law none; ſuch were finally barren, it being a time, wherin God allured his people by temporall bleſſings, when the Heavenly and everlaſting were not ſo fully revealed. Then he that feared God, as Abra-

Verſ. 1.
Verſ. 2.

ham

ham, had his Seed in time multiplyed, till they became a mighty people: and one good Judge is ſaid to have had thirty Sonnes, that rod upon thirty Aſſe Colts: But now it is ſaid, He that marryeth doth well, but he that marryeth not, doth better. And ſome make themſelves chaſt for the Kingdome of Heaven; and it is not propounded, as matter of bleſſedneſſe and joy to have Children, to continue thy name upon Earth, but to have a name written in Heaven, a new name, better then that of Sonnes and Daughters. The Generation of the juſt ſhall be bleſſed: He that feareth God, ſhall be bleſſed not only in his own perſon, but in his Children alſo; according to Commandement 2. And ſhew mercy to thouſands in them that love me, and keep my Commandements. But whereas mightineſſe upon Earth is ſpoken of, and riches, Verſe 3. this is alſo to be underſtood, according to the time wherein theſe promiſes were made; for now it is written, Bleſſed are yee poor, Matth. 5. Iam. 1. 9. and let the Brother of high degree rejoice, in that he is made low. And yet out of perſecuting times, the promiſes of this life hold, touching temporall bleſſings, to them that feare God: For Godlineſſe hath the promiſe of this life, 1 Tim. 4. 8. and of that which is to come. And the cauſe why we injoy not theſe bleſſings ſo plentifully, is, for that we do not feare God as we ſhould.

Verſ. 4. To the righteous ariſeth light in darkneſſe; that is, joy and comfort when he is afflicted, and by meanes of afflictions full of ſorrow: Iſa. 58. 10. Exod. 10. 23. Gracious, mercifull, and righteous: This is referred by Ainſworth either to God, or to the godly man, or to the light: but it is plainly meant of the righteous, to whom it was ſaid before, To the righteous ariſeth light in darkneſſe. Now that we might know what he meant by the righteous, he addeth theſe words; Gracious, and mercifull, and juſt: That there might be no miſtaking, when he ſaith, Righteous; by thinking him to be ſuch, and to be bleſſed, that is juſt, and doth no wrong, although void of other goodneſſe, for the truly righteous is alſo gracious. But Calvin ſaith, Calvin. that God is meant here, by gracious, mercifull, and righteous: Which ſeemeth to me to be altogether diſagreeing; becauſe the ſame, that is here called righteous, is alſo called gracious and mercifull, and the word righteous in the firſt part of the verſe hath certainly reference to the man ſpoken of, Verſe 1. and to ſhew, that the ſame is alſo called mercifull, and gracious, it followeth Verſe 5. He dealeth graciouſly and lendeth, he will guide his affaires with diſcretion; Hebrew, He moderateth his words in judgment; Lending being an act of mercy, and diſcreet words uttering an act of grace: according to that, Eph. 4. 29. Let your ſpeeches be poudred with ſalt, that they may miniſter grace to the hearers.

Verſ. 8. Till he ſee his deſire upon his adverſaryes. Hebrew, Till he ſee upon his adverſaries, or diſtreſſes, as Ainſworth renders it. For the word צָרָיו ſignifieth either; and then the meaning is, either Judgments executed upon his Adverſaries, of whom he heard, that they were machinating againſt him; or Verſ. 9. ſomething tending to comfort, in his diſtreſſes, or ſtraights. Laſtly, that mercy may not be thought to ſtand only in lending, but alſo in giving, it is added, He hath ſcattered abroad and given to the poor: Intimating, in thus ſaying, that giving Almes is a ſowing of the ground, to reap afterwards a plentifull increaſe: becauſe the Sower ſeemeth to do nothing, but ſcatter his ſeed when he ſoweth; but of this ſcattering cometh an increaſe, beyond all other increaſes; an increaſe induring for ever; becauſe it is the Heavenly reward ſpoken of, Matth. 25. for which he ſaith, His righteouſneſſe indureth for ever. Which is to be underſtood of the fruit of his righteouſneſſe, or mercy; but called his righteouſneſſe, according to the Title given him, Verſe 4. for that which is done by the righteous is righteouſneſſe; whether it be in giving every one his due, or in giving to the poor, as a righteous Steward, giving every one his Portion in due ſeaſon: and to the poor that which God's, his Maſters will is, he ſhould give to them, of the Goods committed to his truſt. But Calvin is rather for righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, ſelfe, then the fruit of it: as if it were meant, that he is conſtantly and alwayes thus righteous in liberall, and not ſparing giving according to his ability, intimated in the word ſcattering, as is ſhewed, 2 Cor. 8. For even prodigall perſons will give largly for oſtentation, but the righteous is ever giving; this his righteouſneſſe induring for ever.

PSAL. CXIII.

THis Pſalme beginneth alſo with Halalujah, and ſo it endeth: But here they that are bidden praiſe him, are Children; for it is written, Out of the mouthes of Babes and Sucklings thou haſt perfected praiſe. Which is noted to have been done, when Chriſt riding upon an Aſſe to Ieruſalem, Children cryed Hoſanna, Matth. 21. 16. Thus Ierome accordingly rendring it, praiſe the Lord yee Children: and our engliſh Meter, yee Children which do ſerve the Lord: but Hebrew it is, Yee Servants; and ſo this note fall to the ground, although it be true which hath been ſaid. Pſal. 8. Hieron.

From the riſing of the Sun to the going down therof: That is, in all parts of the world; ſo that here is an intimation of the propagation of the Goſpel to all, as Pſal. 117 and Pſal. 100. Ierome hath an Expoſition here by himſelfe, from the riſing of the Sun, &c. from the beginning to the end of your dayes. But for the firſt, ſee Mal 1. 11. Verſ. 3.

Who raiſeth the poor out of the duſt. This is by Ierome underſtood of Chriſt, who when he was rich made himſelfe poor; but then he was raiſed to moſt high dignity, not only like to that of Princes, or Angels, but to be above them all. Calvin underſtands it only in generall, that Gods providence and not fortune, is to be looked at, in the raiſing of obſcure perſons, ſometimes to higheſt dignity in this World; as Maximianus, that was a Cowheard, and Numa Pompilius a Potter, to be Emperours; we may take it both wayes. And likewiſe that which followeth, He maketh the barren Woman to keep houſe, and to be a joyfull Mother of Children. For this may alſo be underſtood of the Church; which is both the Mother and the Houſe, or the Mother dwelling in the houſe through unity. And of the barren bearing Children: in this ſenſe the Prophet ſpeaketh, ſaying, Rejoice thou barren that beareſt not, for thou haſt many more Children, then ſhe that hath an Husband. Verſ. 7. Calvin. Verſ. 9. Iſa. 54. 1.

PSAL. CXIV.

IN this Pſalme the moſt remarkable things, in bringing the Children of Iſrael out of Ægypt, are briefly pointed at, to ſtir up men in all parts of the Earth, to feare and tremble before God. When Iſrael came out of Ægypt, &c. Iudah was his Sanctuary, Iſrael his Dominion. That is, Iudah was ſpecially choſen and ſanctified, that the Temple might be built there; and a King there raiſed up, ſucceſſively to raigne over Iſrael for ever. Verſ. 1, 2.

The Sea ſaw and fled, and Iordan was driven backe. That is, Gods almighty power in bringing Iſrael out of Ægypt, the red Sea ſeeing was divided, that they might paſſe through; and afterwards when they were to paſſe into the Land of Canaan, Iordan was divided likewiſe, by a Proſopopeia; ſight being aſcribed to them both; when as indeed it was by the ſtretching of Moſes his rod to the red Sea, that it divided, and Iordan by the Arke carrying into the waters thereof. Verſ. 3.

The Mountaines leaped like Rams, &c. That is, at the giving of the Law upon Mount Sinai, by the power of the moſt high deſcending in great Majeſty, the whole Mountain and the Hills about quaked: ſee the like before, Pſal 68. 8. and of leaping like a Calfe, Pſal. 29. 6. Verſ. 4.

What

Verſ. 5. What ailed thee (O Sea) that thou fleddeſt, &c. which is as much, as if he had ſaid, there was great cauſe, the will and power of the Almighty cauſing it to be ſo, which no Creature can reſiſt; and he would have it ſo, to ſtrike terrour into all things, eſpecially in men in all parts, that they might feare to break his Commandements; the giving whereof had ſo ſtupendious effects: for what then will the breaking of them have? for which he

Verſ. 7. concludeth, Verſe 7. Tremble at the preſence of the Lord, all the whole Earth,

Verſ. 8. who turneth the Rock into a ſtanding water, and the flint into a Fountain. Here unto the wonders before ſpoken of he addeth another, of bringing water out of a Rock or flint ſtone, which is moſt dry and hard. It is indeed no wonder for water to come out of Rocks, for that is a thing daily ſeen in many places; but out of a dry Rock, which is moſt hard, and faſt bound, to do it was a very great wonder, Exod. 17. 6. But in bringing water out of

Ioh. 6. 37. that Rock, there was more then according to the Letter; For the Rock was Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. and he drinks of this Rock, that beleiveth in him, and of ſuch a fountain of water, as becometh a ſpring in him, flowing out unto eternall life. And becauſe the Rock was ſignificative, ſpoken of according to the

The Myſtery. Letter, and the figure alſo; in like manner it is to be held, that the red Sea and Iordan are ſpoken of alſo, as ſetting forth Baptiſme, through which they muſt paſſe, that will be ſaved. And the Mountaines and Hills ſet forth men, both high and low, who are moved at the preaching of the Goſpell:

Act. 16. firſt trembling as the Jaylor, then rejoycing as the Evnuch; and when

Act. 8. Chriſt came to Ieruſalem, all the City was moved: and laſtly Iſrael coming out of Ægypt ſetteth forth the coming of the Gentiles out of the Matth. 21. bondage of ſin, by being converted to the faith; which being done, Judah, that is, the Congregation of Chriſtians, where he is praiſed, is his Sanctuary; and the true Iſraell, that is, the Church of the faithfull, his Dominion; over which he ruleth and raigneth ſingularly, by his word and ſpirit, and by his power protecting her from Perſecuters: to which effect Jerome and Auguſtine.

PSAL. CXV.

THis Pſalme is by the Vulgar Latine joyned to the former, thus making of both one Pſalme; viz. according to the account followed by them

Verſ. 1. that imbrace that Tranſlation, Pſal. 113. and then the firſt words, Not unto us Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give the praiſe; are referred to the wonders before ſpoken of, wrought for the Iſraelites, at their coming out of Ægypt, and for Chriſtians at their turning from ſuperſtition and ſin, to Chriſt; and ſo indeed it is to be taken, although diſtinguiſhed from the former, as in the Hebrew it followeth moſt aptly, as the acknowledgment of the faithfull, that all theſe things were done, not for any merit in them, but that God might have praiſe and glory. And therefore, why ſhould the Verſ. 2. Heathen ſay, where is now there God: That is, the God of Iſrael; ſeeing ſo great wonders have been done by him, declaring him to be the only God that is Almighty, why ſhould not even the Heathen, that are moſt averſe from the truth, yeild and acknowledge, that he is the true God, and all other Gods vanities? For their Gods are the worke of mens hands, having

Verſ. 4. eyes and ſee not, eares and heare not: And becauſe they are ſuch, they are Verſ. 9. like unto them that truſt in them; for which cauſe, Iſrael is exhorted to truſt in God, and ſo is the houſe of Aaron in Iſrael more eſpecially, being an houſe of Prieſts, being aſſured thus to be bleſſed: whereas they that truſt in Iodols, are accurſed.

Verſ. 16. The Heavens are the Lords, and the Earth is given to the Children of men. Having ſpoken of Gods bleſſings upon his people in Generall, and his increaſing them, now he ſheweth in particular, that the bleſſing wherewith he bleſſeth bleſſeth them, and all men in this life, is very great: he hath given the Earth to the Sons of Adam, with all the benefits ariſing out of it, reſerving to himſelf only praiſe and Glory: For he contents himſelf with the Heavens, as not needing any Earthly thing, but beſtowing this wholly upon us, that our hearts might hereby be raiſed up to thankfullneſs to his Heavenly Majeſty. And here Calvin tells how a notorious prophane man uſed to abuſe this place, when he was in his cups, ſpeaking theſe words often, The heaven, the Heavens are the Lords, the Earth he hath given to the Children of men, in a deriding manner, againſt thoſe that impugned ſuch exceſſe of Riot; and how once ſpeaking ſo in his preſence at a Feaſt, he reproved him therefore, and by and by he fell into a fit of ſuch Torment, that he cryed out, O Lord, O Lord, with a very loud noiſe, a long time together; thus having a taſt given him of the torments to come to him, and all ſuch as he was: for he was after this never a whit the more amended. Calvin.

Here it is ſhewed how we ſhould improve this conſideration, that God hath given the Earth unto us, to praiſe him, that we may apply our ſelves ſo to do, whilſt we live upon Earth; for when we are dead we can no more do it, as is alſo ſhewed, Pſalme, 18. 17. Eſa. 38. 19. not that the faithfull departing hence ceaſe for ever after this to praiſe God, (For there were one hundred forty four thouſand appearing with Harps, ſinging to the praiſe of God the Pſalme of Moſes, Revel. 14. 1, 2, 3.) but becauſe this life is the time wherein God lookes, that for all his bounty towards us, we ſhould ſend up our praiſes to Heaven unto him. It is ſaid, The dead cannot praiſe thee: That is, They that have let ſlip the opportunity of this life, impiouſly paſſing their time without labouring to glorifie God by praiſing him, cannot after death do it, or any other thing to be accepted of; but muſt lye in the duſt rotting till the day of Judgment, and then without remedy be caſt into Hell fire, in thoſe bodies wherewith they ſhould, but did not glorifie, but diſhonour him in their lives. If it be ſaid, when the dead are ſpoken of that they cannot praiſe God, it is meant not only of the Impious, but of all ſorts in common; for both David, and Hezekiah, applyed this to themſelves; It is true, if we ſpeak of uttering Gods praiſes with the Organs of the Body: for thus all lye a ſleep till the laſt day, and ſo although pious, ceaſe to praiſe God: and therefore we are now to apply our ſelves with all earneſtneſs unto it whilſt we live, that we be not prevented by Death, and ſo cannot glorifie him at all; and then we ſhall not be glorified of him, ſith this is the rule, whereby he will go; thoſe that honour me I will honour, and thoſe that deſpiſe me ſhall be deſpiſed, and they are all ſuch as love him not, to honour him, whilſt they live here: For there is no Medium between not loving, and deſpiſing, as appeareth, Matth. 6. 24. Either he will love the one, and hate the other, and Command. 2. of them that hate me, and keep not my Commandement. Verſ. 17. 18. Pſal. 6. 5. Note. 1 Sam. 2. 30.

PSAL. CXVI.

I Love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard my voice, Hebr. I have loved, becauſe the Lord will hear: Whereupon Jerom noteth, that his profeſſion of love is in the preterperfect tenſe, and hope to be heard in the future, intimating, that ſuch as love God ſhall be heard, and therefore prayer is availeable in ſuch as love him only; the wicked that hate him, ſhall pray and not be heard, Eſa. 1. 14. Verſ. 1. Hieron: Note.

I will call upon him as long as I live, Hebr. In my dayes I will call: Whereupon Jerom alſo ſaith, what is it in my daies, when as in other places it is, Day and night? and anſwereth, ſo long as we are in the world, that is, in the ſtate of ſin, we are in the night; but being converted, our dayes begin: the wicked then are in the Night, they cannot pray, but the righteous in the day, there Ver: 2:

pray, and are heard. And it is ſayd, He hath inclined his eares unto me, or bowed them down, becauſe we are low, he the moſt high, ſo that he muſt graciouſly ſtoop to our lowneſs to hear us; and therefore he is ſaid to humble himſelf to behold things here below: and this was in his Son, humbled to take upon him our Nature, that he might be our Mediatour, and through him our prayers might come up acceptably before him.

Pſal. 113.

Then taking this to be the prayer of a Soule in trouble, he proceedeth upon theſe words, The ſorrowes of death compaſſed me, the dangers of Hell found me: He ſaith, Theſe ſorrowes, are evill cogitations, and the dangers of Hell theſe evill thoughts, breaking out into act; Luſt, when it hath conceived, bringeth forth ſin, and ſin perfected death: And I found trouble and ſorrow: Here he altereth his ſpeech, not ſaying touble and ſorrow found me, or laid hold upon me, as before, but I found, that is, beſides ſpirituall Evills before ſpoken of, indangering me, I willingly ſuffered Tribulation and affliction here, that I might reſt hereafter: for he that will follow Chriſt, muſt take up his Croſs, and follow him. Afflictions here are for our ſins; we are judged, that we may not be condemned, and therefore joyfully to be born.

Verſ. 3.

Iam. 1. 14, 15.

1 Cor. 11. 30.

Verſ. 5. Gracious is the Lord and juſt, our God is mercifull. Gracious and mercifull he is ſaid to be, that we might not deſpaire by reaſon of our ſins, and juſt, that we may not dare to go on in ſin.

Verſ. 6. Calvin. I was brought low, and he ſaved me: That is, Either I was brought low by ſin, and obtained mercy to be pardoned; or I was high minded, and humbled by his Grace, and ſo ſaved. Calvin, and others that follow the litterall ſence, apply all things here ſpoken, to David, that he was brought low, and lay long in great danger, but was again ſaved.

Verſ. 7. Return unto thy reſt O my Soule. As if he had ſayd, thou wert well and at reſt, till ſin entred into the World, return now therefore to Chriſt, who is thy reſt, by Faith and Repentance.

Verſ. 8. For thou haſt delivered my Soule from death: By ſuffering death for me, and ſo from the place where there is weeping and gnaſhing of teeth; for which it is added, Mine eyes from tears: and of them that are bleſſed with everlaſting life, it is ſaid Revel. 7. He ſhall wipe all tears from their eyes. A forcible motive to turn to Chriſt, and not to live in ſin any longer, becauſe this is to turn to reſt; whereas to go on ſtill impenitently in ſin is to be in a reſtleſt condition, and the way to weeping and wailing for ever.

Note.

Verſ. 9. I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living, Hebr. in the Lands: Vulg. Lat. Placebo coram domino, I will pleaſe before the Lord: Whereupon Jerom inferreth, that no man can perfectly pleaſe God living upon Earth here, for all men, the beſt have their imperfections; but the time ſhall come when they ſhall in all their doings be pleaſing before him, that is, In the land of the living: and what is that land, but that where Abraham, Iſaack, and Jacob live; of whom when our Lord had ſaid, God is the God of Abraham, Iſaack, and Jacob for ever, he added, he is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

Hieron.

And the ſame inference may be made upon our reading, I cannot walk before him altogether, as I ſhould here; but in the life to come I ſhall. From hence forth to the End of Pſalme 117. the Vulgar Latine makes another Pſalm in number there 115. and ſo, ſaith Jerom, doth Symachus; but Heb. Verſe 10. 11. &c. to the end, hang together with the Verſes before going, as one and the ſame Pſalme.

Verſ. 10. I did beleeve, therefore I ſpake, I was greatly afflicted, vulg. I was very much humbled; whereupon Jerom, I beleived, as I ſaid before Verſe 9. that I ſhall live in heaven in angelicall perfection, and therefore I ſpake ſo; but I conſider withall, that I am duſt and aſhes, and this humbleth me very low, even when my Faith lifteth me up ſo high as hath been ſayd: ſee this alleadged, 2 Cor 4. 23. to the ſame purpoſe.

I ſayd

I ſayd in my haſt, all men are lyars, Hebr. Either haſte or feare, or trepidation, Vulg. In exceſſu meo, Men are lyars, becauſe ſhadowes and no ſubſtances, they ſee but in part, and therefore not all truth; and ſo in things, where in they ſee not the truth, they are lyars. But what then, was David himſelf a lyar? for he was alſo a man? Verſ. 11.

Anſw. Some are ſaid to be Gods, Viz. The ſanctified, and therefore come not now under the Notion of men, as the word is here uſed. Or in reſpect of the bódy every man is a Lyar, not in reſpect of the Soule; becauſe the Body is no ſubſtantiall thing, but a ſhadow: thus Jerom. And I ſaid in my exceſs of calamity, which makes men to ſpeak, as it were in an ecſtaſy, All men are lyars. becauſe as the Corn from which great increaſe is expected, but faileth, is ſaid to be lying and deceitfull, ſo euery man that hath high thoughts of himſelf, and thinks that he is ſomewhat, and can do great matters, but proves nothing, is a Lyar. Of men ſayd to be lyars, ſee Numb. 23. 19. Pſal. 33. 17. Rom. 3. 4. Some underſtand it as ſpoken of Samuel, that had promiſed David that he ſhould be King, whith in the time of his diſtreſſe ſhould never come to paſſe: Or generally as before, that if any truſt be put in man, he will prove a Lyar, that is, he ſhall be deceived in him, for he is of no power. Calvin hath another Expoſition, which he ſaith ſome bring, that David doth only expreſs here, what atemptation he had about Gods promiſes made to him by his Prophets, but was not overcome hereby. But for his part, he holdeth it to be a confeſſion of his being overwhelmed with doubts and fears in his great dangers; not that he ever deſpaired, but by thus ſaying, ſought to magnifie Gods mercy towards him the more, who ſtood to him when no man did: And I think, it may be underſtood of the fair promiſes of Saul, and the great good will which his Courtiers ſometime ſhewed to him, and all the people in generall; but in fine they proved all deceitfull; and even Jonathan, who was moſt affected to him, though he were deſirous, could do him no good to ſave him from his Fathers fury. Baſil. Ainſw. Calvin.

I will take the Cup of Salvation and call upon the name of the Lord: Jerom, I will take the cup of Jeſus, becauſe it is Hebr. ישועות from whence Jeſus cometh, and expounds it of ſuffering Martyrdom for his cauſe. For this is the Cup of Jeſus, as he ſayd to the two Sons of Zebedee, Yee ſhall drink indeed of my Cup; For the Great benefit of Chriſt dying for us, we have nothing ſo worthy to render to God again, as our Lives; neither are theſe any thing, if they be compared with his laying down his life, which was of infinite worth, for us; only this, being all that we have, is accepted of as the poor Widdowes two Mites. Verſ. 13. Hieron. Matth. 20, 20.

Others rendring it the Cup of Salvations, becauſe it is a noune plurall, underſtand it of thankſgiving, expreſſed by ſacrifices, whereunto were added drink-offerings; but I prefer the former, and the rather, becauſe it followeth; Precious in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints: and Verſe 17. he ſpeaketh of ſacrificing the Sacrifice of Praiſe: as of another thing which the Faithfull ſhall do in the land of the living. Calvin. Verſ. 15. Verſ. 17.

And V 16: thou haſt looſed my bands, further ſheweth the ſame; for then the bands of ſin which before filled them with fear are looſed, when death is ſuffered for Chriſt, and the Soule appeareth confidently before the Lord to praiſe him for ever. Verſ. 16.

And when this ſhall be done, the vowes made of pleaſing before him are payd, in Heavenly Jeruſalem, before all his people, that is, The Saints in Heaven: for which he concludeth with their word of praiſe, Halalujah, Rev. 19. Verſ. 18. Verſ. 19.

PSAL. CXVII.

THis Pſalm hath nothing in it but what hath been ſaid before Pſalm 100. 96. 97. 98. and therefore needeth no expoſition, it being, as theſe here named, a Propheſie of the Converſion of all Nations to the Faith of Chriſt.

PSAL. CXVIII.

THis alſo is a Pſalm of Praiſe, rightly placed after the other, wherein all Nations are ſtirred to praiſe the Lord. For now the Iſraelites more particularly, and amongſt them the houſe of Aaron, conſiſting of preiſts, to whom it properly belonged, are excited to the ſame alſo, as before, Pſalme, 115. 10. 11.

Verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Verſ. 5. 6. And Verſe 5. 6. is the ſame with Pſalm 56. 4. 11. Then having exhorted Verſe 7. 8. 9. to truſt in God, he propounds himſelf for an Example of incouragement, ſaying, All Nations compaſſed me about, but in the name of the Lord, I will deſtroy them: which is ſpoken in the perſon of the Church, or congregation of the Faithfull, Hebr. I will cut them off: and thus it came to paſſe when the Goſpel was preached; the Church was in all places perſecuted, but by the power of Chriſt, who is brought in alſo here ſpeaking, deſtroyed, or cut off from having ſuch power any more.

Verſ. 10. Auguſt.

Verſ. 12. They compaſſed me about like bees, they are extinct as Thornes: This is ſpoken of Chriſt. whom the Jewes combined together againſt; but they were as bees about him, as an hony comb: for when they were moſt malicious againſt him, and killed him, he was made unto us ſweet as the hony Comb; but the fire of Gods wrath burnt againſt them ſhortly after, and they were ſoon extinct, and put out from being a Nation. Thus Auguſt. who alſo proceedeth upon the next words.

Verſ. 13. Thou haſt thruſt ſore at me that I might fall: which is the voice of the church every ewhere perſecuted; but he renders the words, Tanquam cumulus arenæ immenſus ſum, as an heap of ſand, ſo ſpoken for the great multitude of Chriſtians that were perſecuted, but ſaved, yet not by means of their multitudes, but by the power of the Lord.

Verſ. 14. God is my ſtrength, and my Song, and my Salvation, or Jeſus: For now he beginneth to ſhew the Ground of all the Comfort of the Church to be Chriſt Jeſus, for whom the Voice of joy and gladneſſe is in the dwelling of the righteous.

Verſ. 15. For he is our righteouſneſſe, and the Joy of him is univerſall amongſt all chriſtians; and that not only men but angells, who at his birth came down from Heaven, and having told the ſhepheards the Joyfull news of his birth, they were heard ſinging for joy, Glory to God on high, &c.

Luke 3.

Verſ. 16. The right hand of the Lord doth valiantly, it bringeth mighty things to paſſe: That is, out of baſeneſſe Glory, out of Darkneſs light, and out of death, life for evermore.

Verſ. 17. For which he ſaith, I ſhall not dye, but live, and declare the works of the Lord. That is, the Church being brought to triumph in Heaven.

Verſ. 18. The Lord hath chaſtned me ſore, but not given me over to death: For many be the troubles of the righteous, terrible the perſecutions of the Church, yet the life thereof faileth not; but it ſtill liveth and flouriſheth.

Verſ. 20, This gate of the Lord, into which the righteous ſhall enter: Having deſcribed Jeſus hitherto as a Saviour, and bringing exceeding great joy, and as the right hand of God bringing mighty things to paſſe; now he deſcribeth him further by the name of a Gate, or door, according to John 10. and whoſoever would attain to life, muſt enter hereby, that is by beleiving; but every very one that beleiveth, cannot enter; for it is to be noted, that he ſaith, The righteous ſhall enter: implying, that none unrighteous, that is, unconverted from ſin can enter; and the ſame is implyed in that teaching, Repent, and beleive the Goſpel. Note.

Secondly by the name of a Corner ſtone, The ſtone which the builders refuſed is become the cheife ſtone of the Corner. Of which applyed to Chriſt, ſee Matth. 21. 42. Act. 4. 11. &c. Verſ. 22. Matth. 21.

Thirdly, by the name of the day, or the light, for they are all one; This is the day which the Lord hath made: That is, ſaith Ierom, this ſtone: for the ſame is the Day, that is, the Stone. To expreſſe this further, our Lord ſaith, Abraham deſired to ſee my day and ſaw it, and rejoiced, that is, he deſired to ſee me. And he is ſaid to be the day ſpringing from on high, and that light, Ioh. 1, and Ioh. 3. 19. and therefore of the Faithfull, who are his Children, it is ſaid, Yee are the Children of the light, and of the day. Verſ. 24. Joh. 8. Luk. 1. 78. Eſa. 53. 1 Theſ. 5.

Fourthly, he is called, The bleſſed one that cometh in the name of the Lord: as it is applyed unto him, Matth. 21. 9. And touching the day, or light before ſpoken of, he ſaith, God is the Lord that ſheweth us light, bind the Sacrifice with Cords to the hornes of the Altar: the Vulgar, Appoint a ſolemne day in the thick places, even to the hornes of the altar. Auguſt. hath it, In confrequentationibus; to expreſſe this great joy for Chriſt, keep a ſolemn day; and that not by the coming together of a few; but to fill with frequency of comers all the Court, even to the horns of the Altar. But although the word חג ſignifieth either a ſolemn feaſt day, or a Sacrifice, here is no word ſignifying appoint, as in the Vulg. Lat. but bind yee; and therefore it muſt be rendred by Sacrifice: and the meaning is, bring in way of thankfullneſſe for the great mercy before ſpoken of, the plenty of beaſts to be offered in Sacrifice, ſo that they might ſtand ready found from one end of the Court to the other, even to the altar: and this is In condenſis, as the Vulg. hath it; for ſo it rendreth, בעבתות ſignifying either thick twiſted cords, as Judg. 15. 13. or Thick branches of trees, as Levit. 23. 40. Ezeck. 19. 11. Or this word implying thick branches of trees, ſetteth forth Garlands made of boughs born by the beaſts to be ſacrificed upon their horns for more expreſſion of Joy, as at the feaſt of Tabernacles they did going out of Jeruſalem, by ſuch branches bearing, expreſſing their joy in Boothes. He ſpeaketh after the manner of the moſt Godly in thoſe times; meaning, that the Faithfull under the Goſpell ſhould ſolemnly upon ſome ſet day in the year eſpecially praiſe God for Chriſts coming into the world to ſave us. For what time can be more fit, then the day of his Nativity, which hath been ſo long by the univerſall Church obſerved; but now out of an imagination of Superſtition herein ready to be in all places neglected? And although the word cannot properly be rendred conſtitute, or appoint a feſtivall day; yet becauſe ſuch frequent Sacrifices were not brought but at ſolemn times, the ſenſe muſt needs be as the Vulgar hath hath it, and ſo here is plainly a Charge to keep a Feſtivall day for Chriſt, and then to abound in our ſacrifices, both of our praiſes and almes, which are alſo commended to us by the name of Sacrifices, Heb. 13. 16. To do good and to communicate forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed: as Verſe 15. he had before exhorted to offer the ſacrifice of praiſe through him. Let us then conſider this, and not be deterred from that, under the name of Superſtition, which is injoyned as a Chriſtian duty. Verſ. 26. Verſ. 27. Of the Feaſt of Chriſts Nativity. Note.

PSAL. CXIX.

THis Pſalme, although it hath no Title, yet is by all men held to be Davids: It differs from all others in this, that it is far larger then any, ſet forth by a diſtinction into two and twenty parts, according to the number of the Hebrew

Hebrew Letters; and each part beginneth in every Verſe with the ſame letter, whereby the part is noted, and hath juſt eight verſes. So that if any man ſhall go about to make any other generall diviſion of it, he ſhall but croſſe the Spirit of God, from which, as the Contents, ſo the diviſion came. The order in which it is ſet forth, ſheweth it above all others, to be a moſt excellent Pſalme, and therefore worthy of our moſt ſerious conſideration. Pſal. 111. 112. are alſo ſingular, for the order of penning by the letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, but whereas in them every halfe verſe only goeth upon a letter, here eight verſes together, in every part, go upon a letter; wherein certainly the Prophet David would never have been ſo exact, but for the ſuperexcellency of this Pſalme above others; as being far more full in ſetting forth the way to true bleſſednes, prayers to be guided in this way, the pleaſure which the faithfull take herein, their ſorrow for the neglect of it, the light and underſtanding and comfort that is herein, the benefit of afflictions to keep us in this way, and the evill caſe of thoſe that digreſſe herefrom; together with the boldneſſe and courage of them that walke in this way, even before the greateſt in this World. It is all plaine, ſaith Auguſtine, and ſeemeth eaſie to be underſtood; but becauſe it is ſo extraordinary framed, he conceiveth ſome things more myſticall to lye hid herein; and therefore when he expounded all the reſt of the Pſalmes, he was hardly drawn by much intreaty at length to write upon this, and ſo he made two and thirty Sermons upon it. Baſil goeth by ſtations, of which he maketh three: and Jerom three Homilies, noting in generall, that Lawes are here ſpoken of, ſetting forth thoſe given by Moſes; Precepts, the ten Commandements; Teſtimonies, things to be done, about which Heaven and Earth and men are called for: Teſtes; yea and God himſelfe, and his holy Angels: Juſtifications, the love of God and of our Neighbour, rooting out the tares of hatred and envy; Wayes, the Writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles, ſhewing how we ought to walke; Judgments, the puniſhments of the wicked, and rewards of the righteous. But of the difference between thoſe, enough hath been ſaid before, upon Pſal. 19. For the reaſon of the Alphabeticall order held in this Pſalme, it is moſt probably thus ſet forth, that it might be the more eaſily gotten by heart, and remembred, as being very uſeful for us all. But to come to the parts of the Pſalm, called א ב ג ד ה ו ז ח ט י כ ל מ נ ס ע פ צ ק ר ש ת

Auguſt. Baſil. Hieron.

They containe every one a ſhort prayer, together with ſome pious Doctrine for inſtruction, or conſolation, or ſome complaint or profeſſion of love to Gods Lawes, and of a right Chriſtian reſolution; except the part called מ, which ſtands wholy in profeſſion. The firſt called א beginneth with Doctrine for inſtruction and conſolation, and endeth with prayer. Part 2. beginneth with doctrine and prayer, and proceedeth with profeſſions of piety. Part 3. beginneth with prayer, and intermingling the like profeſſion of piety, proceeds in prayer and profeſſion of reſolution, and moſt pious affections; ſome curſing of tranſgreſſors being interlaced, Verſe 21. Part 4. is altogether petitory, being mingled with pious profeſſions. Part 5. is moſt like to the fourth. Part 6. beginneth as the two former, and concludeth with profeſſions of Chriſtian reſolutions. Part 7. beginneth with prayer, and endeth with profeſſions of divers ſorts. Part eight beginneth with profeſſion, proceeds in prayer, then in profeſſion, and ends in prayer. Part 9. hath ſingularly a profeſſion of good gotten by affliction. Part 10. differeth not much from it. Part 11. beginneth with a profeſſion of hope, proceedeth to complaint and prayer againſt his Enemies, concluding with prayer. Part 12. beginneth with inſtruction, proceedeth to profeſſion and prayer. Part 13. conſiſteth wholy of profeſſions, chiefly of the good accruing to him, by delighting in the word. Part 14. beginneth with profeſſion, reſolution, and complaint, and proceedeth in prayer, and then proceedeth to reſolution again, and a moſt pious profeſſion. Part 15. beginneth with profeſſion, proceedeth in prayer, and ſheweth the evill end of the wicked. Part 16. conſiſteth moſt of prayer, and endeth with pious profeſſions. Part 17. beginneth with inſtruction, proceeds in prayer, and endeth with profeſſion of godly ſorrow. Part 18. is wholy

א ת ר ק צ פ ע ס נ מ ל כ י ט ח ז ו ה ד ג ב

ly doctrinall, touching Gods word till the end; which is a prayer. Part 19. is wholy petitory, ſomething being added in fine, to move the Lord. Part 20. is mixt of Prayers, Profeſſions, and Inſtructions. Part 21. is a profeſſion & reſolution, joy in the word, of praiſing God frequently, concluding with inſtruction and profeſſion. Part 22. is mixt of prayers and profeſſions. But now let us come to the particulars, which need explication.

ק
ר
ש
ת

Bleſſed is the man that is undefiled in the way, that walketh in the Law of the Lord. Becauſe we all deſire bleſſedneſſe, it is here ſhewed, which way we muſt go in to attain it; viz. in the Law of God; for that is the way unto it, if we keep and defile not our ſelves, by ſinning againſt it. The covetous man, ſaith Auguſtine, by fraud, injuſtice, and oppreſſion, ſeeks riches, and in being rich, to be bleſſed, and rejoyceth when he is rich, as if now he were bleſſed. So likewiſe the revengfull, and the luſtfull; but they are all deceived, reaping for bleſſing a curſe: but to lead a life undefiled, is undoubtedly the way to everlaſting bleſſedneſſe. Verſ. 1. Auguſt.

Thy Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not ſin againſt thee. Having hitherto ſpoken of bleſſedneſſe, and the meanes to attain it, now he ſheweth how theſe meanes muſt be uſed, to keep us pure and undefiled; we muſt hide the word in our hearts, by continually meditating upon it, and not read or heare it only. Jerome ſaith, this is done, when we caſt not Pearls before Swine, but hide them from them. Verſ. 11.

Deale bountifully with thy Servant, that I may live and keep thy word. Hebr. and Vulg. Retribute, or reward: not that he had any way deſerved it, but he craveth it as a Gift, which he ſhould account moſt highly of, to have grace to live according to Gods Law; it being indeed no life, but a death, to live otherwiſe. Verſ. 17.

Princes did ſit and ſpeake againſt me. This Jerome takes to be ſpoken in the perſon of the Church under the Goſpell, when the Princes of the Earth ſpake cruelly againſt the faithfull, and did cruell Executions upon them; but they were nothing moved to ſhrink from the truth, whereunto they were called: Howſoever it is propounded to our invitation, to be conſtant in our Chriſtian profeſſion; although we be impugned, not only by the common ſort of people, but even by the greateſt. Verſ. 23. Hieron.

I have declared my wayes and thou heardſt me, teach me thy Statutes. How is this ſpoken? Is there any thing of which God is ignorant, and hath need to have it declared unto him? He meaneth not then any ſuch thing, but that he confeſſed his evill wayes, and ſinnes, praying for pardon, and God heard him; and now he prayeth to be taught the way of his Statutes, ſo effectually, that he might walk therein. Verſ. 26.

Remove from me the way of lying. That is, keep me from errours, in matters concerning religion, and graciouſly give me thy Law. That is, in reſpect of the right underſtanding thereof, whereby I may be alwayes kept in the truth. To this effect Calvin: and it is confirmed further, Verſe 30. I have choſen the way of truth: But he bringeth two other Expoſitions of the laſt clauſe, and rejects them. Verſ. 29. Calvin.

Firſt, Make thy Law gratefull unto me, that I may love it.

Secondly, Impart unto me that grace, which in thy Law is promiſed to the faithfull: For the firſt is beſt.

Eſtabliſh thy Word unto thy Servant, who is addicted to thy feare. This is to be noted, that David prayeth not for any thing, but for that, touching which he had the word; neither ought we to do otherwiſe: and it is to be reproved in thoſe that in praying let themſelves looſe, to aske whatſoever their own phantaſies carry they to, although they have here no ground for it. Verſ. 38. Note

Take away the reproach which I feare, for thy judgments are good. Some, ſaith Calvin, underſtand this in reſpect of God, before woſe Tribunall we muſt all ſtand: as if it were meant, Let me finde grace with thee, to have none Verſ. 39. Calvin.

none of my iniquities imputed to me, for which I ſhall beare reproach at the laſt day, and then I will not feare the reproaches of men in this life; which he doth not diſlike: but before this he bringeth another, viz. Becauſe there are many, who out of malice pry into my doings, to ſee, if it may be, how they may take me tripping; keep me ſo upright, that they may be able to eſpy nothing in me, for which to reproach me, or ſuffer them not to traduce me, in that which I do well, as they are ready to do. The firſt related ſeemeth to me to be beſt, neither doth the next differ much from it; but he cannot mean according to the laſt, becauſe he profeſſed Verſe 38. to feare God, meaning doubtleſſe as in our Meter, That feares nothing but thee. That he feared nothing elſe, as alſo Pſal. 56. and that the courage of Gods Saints, who are indued in ſo great a meaſure with his Spirit, is ſuch that they feare no unjuſt calumnies of men; appeareth by the ſaying of 1 Cor. 4. 4. Paul, I paſſe not for being judged by you, or by mans judgment. For the next words, thy judgments are good; Theſe ſerve further to confirm the ſame: Acquit me thou from reproach, whoſe Judgments only I hold worth the regarding, and then I ſhall not be moved at the unjuſt reproaches of men, whoſe Judgments are evill like themſelves, and therefore vain, and to be by all that feare contemned.

Verſ. 42. Then ſhall I have wherewith to anſwer him that reproacheth me. Hebrew, And I ſhall anſwer the word reproaching me: That is, ſuch as caſt out reproachfull and contemptuous words againſt me, for truſting in thy word, as I did fooliſhly herein; for if they be once fulfilled to me, as Verſe 41. and I be ſaved from my dangers; it will appeare, that I truſted not in thy word in vain: as it followeth in the next words. And the next words Verſe 43. tend Verſ. 43. further to ſhew the ſame, And take not the word of truth out of my mouth, for I have hoped in thy Judgments: For this is not taken away when it com-
Verſ. 45. eth to paſſe, according to that which he out of his truſt in God ſaid, I will walk at liberty, for I ſeek thy Precepts; Hebrew, In latitude, or a large and broad way, where I ſhall not be ſtreightned or intangled; not knowing which way to get out, as is the manner of them, or it falleth out to them often times, that go in their own wayes, in all ſubtlety and fraud. But David contrariwiſe, making the word his rule, had a large and open way before him, and never fell into ſuch incoveniences; and if it at any time he did, God was ready ſoon to help him out again: and the ſame ſhall be the caſe
2 Cor. 4. 8. of all that walke likewiſe. For although ſuch may be ſtreightned, yet they ſhall not be forſaken by him, that can bring them out of their ſtreights a-
Note. gain, as the Apoſtle Paul found it in his own experience. Thus Calvin, and others very well; but withall, here is alſo an intimation of the free condition of them that live regularly, and of the ſervile condition of the wicked, to whom not Gods word, but their own will is a Law.

Verſ. 48. I will ſtretch out, or lift up my hands to thy Commandements. A metaphoricall expreſſion of an earneſt deſire to them, ſaith Calvin: or becauſe work is to be done with the hands; and to this end they muſt be lifted up, he thus ſpeaketh: as if he had ſaid, I will not only talk of doing the works of thy Law, but lift up, and put to my hands alſo, actually putting in practiſe what I ſay.

Verſ. 49. Remember thy word unto thy Servant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope. What the promiſe of God to David was, we all know: viz. that he ſhould be King; for hoping in which, he was by many derided, Verſe 51.

Verſ. 56. This I had, becauſe I kept thy Precepts. The word, this, here hath reference to Verſe 50. Thy word hath quickned me: Which is moſt probably meant of ſome deliverance, which he had as he hoped: yet Calvin thinks alſo, that it may have reference to all the benefits by the Lord conferred upon him.

Verſ. 61. The bands of the wicked have robbed me, yet do I keep thy word. The word word חבלי here rendred bands, ſignifieth both cords, companies, and ſorrowes; but it is beſt to take it for companies; who, he ſaith, robbed or ſpoyled him of his Kingdome and Eſtate, when he was made to flee before Abſalom; yet nothing could work ſo upon him, as to make him to go from the courſe of piety, wherein he had begun: ſo that this ſeemeth to be ſpoken of that which was done to him by Abſalom, and thoſe that conſpired with him, againſt him. A notable example for us to follow, by no ſufferings to be made to quaile in our piety. Note.

At midnight will I riſe to give thanks. This is ſpoken to expreſſe, how earneſtly he was ſet upon praiſing God; becauſe riſing up at midnight, to go about any thing, argueth, that the minde is moſt eagerly ſet upon it; and becauſe things done in the dark of the night, are not ſeen by other men, it is brought as an argument of his ſincerity, and that he did not thus, as ſeeking praiſe of men, but moſt ſecretly. Baſil takes it as an expreſſion of his perſeverance in Gods praiſes, not only in the day, but in the night: as Paul and Silas ſung Pſalmes at midnight. Verſ. 62. Calvin. Baſil.

The Earth is full of thy mercies, teach me thy Statutes. That is, thou ſheweſt mercy to all both good and bad, making the Sun to ſhine, and raine to fall upon them, all the Earth over; O let me thy Servant finde ſuch mercy, as to be taught thy Statutes. Verſ. 64.

Their hearts are as fat as Greaſe, but I delight in thy Law. This is the ſame with that, Iſa. 6. 9. Make fat the heart of this people, that they may hear, and not underſtand, &c. Hereby the ſpirituall Judgment that is upon the wicked is ſhewed, who though they heare the Law, regard it not; becauſe their hearts are taken up with worldly things, and they are hereby ſatisfied as with fatneſſe; as joying in nothing elſe, and counting the comforts of the word poor hartleſſe things, without ſubſtance. Verſ. 70.

They that feare thee will be glad, when they ſee me, becauſe I have hoped in thy word. That is, when they ſee me delivered according to my hope, and ſet up as thou haſt promiſed; for when the righteous riſe, there is joy to all godly perſons; and from ſuch examples, hopes are cheriſhed in them, that they alſo ſhall in Gods good time be delivered from their troubles. Verſ. 74.

I am become like a Bottle in the ſmoake, yet do I not forget thy word. A Bottle in the ſmoak is made very dry in time by the heat thereof, as coming from the fire, although not very great. Hereby then he meaneth, that through long continuance of troubles, he was in danger of having all ſpirituall moiſture dryed up in him, wherein the life of piety lyeth; but yet he continued conſtant in his piety ſtill: For grace is ſet forth often by water, that never faileth in the moſt drying times. A notable example for our imitation, even when our afflictions continue without end. It may alſo be referred to the Body, being ſmoak-wrung, as it were, and withered by long continued ſuffering, the beauty thereof being quite gone, and it becometh black, as men often uſe to be before Death. Verſ. 83. Note.

Thy word is ſettled in Heaven for ever. This as Baſil ſaith, is ſpoken in reſpect of the Angels conſtant keeping of it there; for they in doing Gods will, are propounded as a pattern to us, when we are taught to pray, Thy will be done in Earth as it is in Heaven. Calvin will have it underſtood of the word, as the ground of our ſalvation, and of Heaven, as oppoſed to Earth and earthly things, which are fading and tranſitory; as if the meaning were, the word of promiſe is as durable as Heaven it ſelf, which is everlaſting; and therefore to be built upon, and no doubt ever to be made of it: and this is further confirmed, Verſe 90. Thy faithfulneſſe is to all Generations: Which ſheweth, that by Gods word, is meant his word of promiſe; and Verſe 91. They continue to this day, for they all are thy Servants, do further juſtifie this ſenſe; the Heavens continue and ſerve Gods providence, or ſerve him in ſhewing his glory: as Pſal. 19; Verſ. 89. Baſil. Calvin. Verſ. 90.

Verſ. 96. I have ſeen an end of all perfection, but thy Commandement is exceeding broad. Hereby he further confirmes that which was ſaid, Verſe 89, 90. and that by comparing the durance of Gods word with worldly things: for look upon any thing here, that is moſt perfect, a man of ſtrongeſt conſtitution, a State moſt exactly ſettled, a building perfected moſt ſtrongly, &c. Yet every of theſe hath an end, but of Gods word there ſhall never be any end.

Verſ. 98. Thou, through thy Commandements, haſt made me wiſer then my Enemies, &c. Here he both ſheweth the fruit of meditating continually in the Law, and that this is not attained by mans induſtry, but of Gods donation: For he makes wiſe by this meanes, and Kings eſpecially, who are to teach others, and to be ſo wiſe, that they may not be circumvented by their Enemies. But Verſe 101. he ſheweth, that this wiſdome lyeth in refraining from all evill wayes; in which who ſo walketh, is a foole and not wiſe, what underſtanding ſoever he ſeemeth to have; as is ſaid, Jer. 4. 2.

Verſ. 106. I have ſworn and will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments. It may be queſtioned here, conſidering mans weakneſſe and inability to keep the Law, whether David did well to binde himſelfe thus by Oath? But Calvin. Calvin anſwers well; that as he was by Gods grace and Spirit, moved to make this Oath, ſo by the ſame Spirit he knew, that he ſhould be able to perform it, at the leaſt ſo as to be accepted by him, that accepts of the performances of his Servants, according to the meaſure of grace given unto them. And by ſuch Vowes and Oathes we ſhould binde our ſelves, that we may be the more ſtirred up in our godly care.

Verſ. 111. Thy Statutes are my Heritage for ever. As if he had ſaid, Let others make account of Houſe and Land, as a during Inheritance to them and their Heires, not eſteeming any thing in comparíſon thereof; the word of God ſhall yet be more to me, and as long as I have that in my heart, and ſo aſſurance of Gods favour, let them take other Inheritances in this World that will, this alone ſhall ſuffice me; and what minde I am in now, I will continue in the ſame for ever. And of David ſhould we learn to undervalue all things in reſpect of the word, and grace wrought hereby, accounting worldly things but adventitious, and true happineſſe to lye only in this; them tranſitory, but this a ſetled Inheritance, of which we can never be deprived by any Enemies: for them that do thus, God is an hiding place and ſhield, and his word ſuch a ſure Anchor of hope, that the moſt boiſterous windes cannot drive them from this Haven.

Note.

Verſ. 114.

Verſ. 118. Thou haſt troaden down all that erre from thy Statutes, for their deceit is a lye. They that live in ſin think by unjuſt and wicked meanes to raiſe themſelves, but their ſubtleties uſed to this end ſhould produce none other effect to them, but treading under foot, and being made full low, and ſo their craftineſſe, through which they promiſed great matters to themſelves, ſhall prove nothing but a lye; for when they thinke to prove as Gold, they

Verſ. 119. ſhall be but as droſſe, as Verſe 119. ſo baſe and contemptible, and finally ſeparated from the righteous, amongſt whom they are now mixt, as droſſe with Gold, and then when the fining pot comes, it is purged out and caſt away, and the righteous ſhine moſt gloriouſly, which ſhall be chiefly at the laſt day, Matth. 13. and Chapter 25.

Verſ. 120. My fleſh trembled for feare of thee. It may ſeem ſtrang, when he promiſeth unto himſelfe all good from God, in reſpect of his ſincere love to his word, that now he ſhould ſpeak of ſo great terrour laying hold upon him.

Pſal. 2. But it is to be underſtood, that confidence and feare, joy and trembling, are mixt together in the beſt, yea the Lord, by ſtriking feare firſt into them, maketh way for this aſſurance and joy.

Verſ. 122. Be ſurety for thy Servant for good. The word ערב rendred, be Surety, ſignifieth alſo, dulcify, or delight thy Servant in good; that is, make him joyfull and comfortable in following that which is good: which to me

ſeemeth

ſeemeth the beſt ſenſe; yet moſt are for being ſurety, as if he had ſaid, ſith thou knoweſt my heart when I promise to doe good, and eſchew evill, undertake, I pray thee, for me, that I ſhall do ſo, as I have promiſed and ſworn; for then I know, that I ſhall be inabled without fail: but only here is no word ſignifying, for thy Servant, but Calvin will have For underſtood. Calvin.

It is time for the Lord to work, for they have deſtroyed thy Law: Having pleaded for mercy, V. 23, 24, 25. now he ſeeketh to move the Lord to do for him as he prayed, becauſe wicked men through his delaying to appear in the cauſe of his Servant vilipended his word, and caſt his Law behinde their backs, thus making it of none effect, whilſt they walked audacionſly on in their evill wayes. To this effect Baſil, it is time for the Lord to ariſe and help the afflicted, becauſe the wicked ſeeing them lye ſtill in miſery, after ſuch hopes as they have had of deliverance, who walk moſt exactly according to Gods Law, think that there is no benefit cometh by keeping it, and therefore live as if there were none, or as if it were now quite deſtroyed: But Calvin, by Doing here, underſtands executing judgments upon the Wicked, which doth not ſo well cohere with the premiſes. Thus, ſaid David, the wicked did to the Law, yet he, notwithſtanding his hope, thus deferred, abated not one jot in his eſtimation of the Law; but prized it above Gold; yea, he was put on the more to count it precious, becauſe the Wicked ſlighted it; teaching us hereby to be ſo far from being drawn from that which is good, becauſe the greater ſort impugne it, and walk contrary, as even for this cauſe to eſteem the more highly of it, as David ſheweth here that he did, in ſaying, Therefore, &c. Verſ. 126. Baſil. Calvin. Note.

I opened my mouth and panted, for I loved thy precepts: or, I opened my mouth and ſighed: The word ſignifieth Reſpiravi, I ſent out and drew in my breath, as one that hath been in the purſuit of ſomewhat, which he deſireth moſt earneſtly: ſo he meaneth, that he laboured to keep Gods Law, even as a man that runneth to that wherein he greatly delighteth even runs himſelf out of Breath: and ſo ſhould our delight in the word carry us unto it, whereas contrariwiſe moſt men go not with ſo little haſt about any thing, as hereunto. Verſ. 131. Note.

I am ſmall and deſpiſed, yet I forget not thy precepts: He ſpeaketh thus of himſelf, becauſe he was under ſo great afflictions, whereby he was long kept poor, and in a deſpicable Eſtate, as we may ſee by the reproach laid by Nabal upon him, 1 Sam. 25. yet he ſtill had Gods precepts in his mind, and walked accordingly. A notable example, to the ſhame of them that will ſerve and praiſe God in their proſperity, and when they are increaſed; but let affliction, or want come, and then they have little heart to do it. Verſ. 141. Note:

Mine eyes prevent the night watches, that I might meditate in thy word: Verſe 147. and in this Verſe, he ſheweth what his continuall practiſe of piety was, not ſparing himſelf herefrom in the very night: for there he ſaith, I cryed before the dawning of the day, here, I prevented the watches of the night; if he ſlept, awaking again before midnight to meditate in the word. Some there are, ſaith Calvin, that have Diſſerere, for meditate; but in the night was no time to ſpeak or diſcourſe, in the hearing of others, touching the Law. Verſ. 148.

Seven times a day will I praiſe thee: That is, oftentimes, for ſo the word ſeven is uſed, Levit. 26. 18. Prov. 24. 16. 1 Sam. 2. 5. Verſ. 164.

Great peace ſhall they have that love thy Law, That is, Peace of conſcience to God ward, Rom. 5. 1. for otherwiſe David found not this ſo in his own experience, and Chriſt coming, came to ſend a Sword. Verſ. 165.

I have done thy Commandements: If it ſhall ſeem ſtrange that David ſhould thus juſtifie himſelf, when by the works of the Law no man living ſhall be juſtified, it is to be underſtood, as he explaines himſelf, Verſe 167. that he meant, that in his heart he kept them, as Paul. Rom. 7. 22. In my mind I ſerve the Law of God. Verſ. 166.

Verſ. 174. I have longed for thy Salvation, and thy Law is my delight: All men deſire ſalvation, but becauſe they ſeek it not the right way, they ſhall miſs of it in the end: wherefore the right way unto it, is here ſet down, viz. To delight in the Law of God, and not in any ſin; we are his workmanſhip created unto good works, which he hath prepared that we ſhould walke therein. Eph 2. 10.

PSAL. CXX.

A Song of Degrees.

HEre are fifteene Pſalmes together thus intituled, Hebr. שיר־המעלות a Song of Aſcentions: whereupon ſome conjecture, that there were fifteene ſtaires up to the Temple, upon each one of which, one of theſe Pſalms was ſung: Some upon the aſcent of the people from Babylon; and ſome, the voice being lifted up on high in ſinging of them, which ſeemeth the moſt probable, becauſe 2 Chron. 20. 19. the ſame word is uſed, where it is ſaid, that the Levites lifted up their voice on high in ſinging. Ainſworth ſaith, that theſe Pſalmes might be thus intituled for the high and eminent matters herein ſet forth, as 1 Chron. 17. 17. there is one called, A man Hamangnalah, a man of high degree, or eminency. Ainſworth.

For the Author of the Pſalm, Calvin is confident, that it was David, who thus prayed and complained before the Lord being indangered by Saul, and ſuffering much in his good time by evill tongues. Ierom, and Auguſt. take it to be meant of Chriſt, and of Hereticks, by whoſe tongues he ſuffered much; but they will not have the words of Verſe 4. Even ſharp arrowes of the mighty, and coales of Juniper, or as they render it, Coales making deſolate, underſtood as the threatning of Judgment, but an expreſſion of Efficacy of the word taught by the Apoſtles, peircing mens hearts, and like moſt hot fire, burning up corruption there, and making the Heart empty of evill, and rebellious thoughts, of which before it was full; even as a Land full of Inhabitants, they being deſtroyed, is made deſolate. And here Ierom illuſtrates it by the like, Eſa. 6. where one of the Seraphims, with a burning Coale touching the lips of the Prophet, ſaid, This coal hath touched thy lips, thou art purged from thy ſinne. Calvin. Hieron. Auguſt.

Then Verſe 5. where he cryeth out of his dwelling with Meſheck, and the tents of Kedar, he for Meſheck, hath, The time of my Sojourning is prolonged: Expounding it of the faithfull Soul held ſtill in this life, deſiring that this Tabernacle may be diſſolved, as 2 Cor. 5. 1. and Kedar ſignifying darkneſs, he underſtands as a further deſcription of them that ſojourn in this world; they are as it were in a land of darkneſs and miſery, amongſt thoſe that wander in darkneſs; yet as the light ſhineth in darkneſs, ſo they by a vertuous life.

And Verſe 6. My ſoul hath long dwelt with them that hate peace, when I ſpeake, they are for war: Unbeleivers, both of the Jews and Gentiles were averſe from peace with Beleivers,, inſomuch that when they went out preaching peace, as they were bidden, they raiſed perſecution againſt them. Thus by ſome all the Pſalme is applyed to Chriſt, and his Church; and ſome things do not diſagree, only thoſe words of that which ſhould be done to an evill tongue, being ſo plainly ſpoken by way of threatning, I cannot ſee how they can be expounded as ſpoken in way of favour: And therefore I rather take the whole pſalme, after the firſt, and ſecond verſes, to conſiſt of threatnings and complaints againſt Enemies of the truth, that harden themſelves in their ſins, to perſecute the faithfull; they ſhall one day be peirced with Gods judgments, as with ſharp arrows, of which alſo read Pſalm. 45. and ſuffer by moſt ardent burning: to ſhew which, Dives is propounded for an Example, Luke 16. ſee alſo Pſal. 140. 10. Calvin, and Junius underſtanding this Pſalme according to the Letter of David, thus ill handled by Saul and the incendiaries about him, will have Verſe 4. a diſcription of the evill tongue, ſpoken of Verſe 3. as if it were meant, that it is like ſharp arrows and hot burning coales, or coales of Juniper: But it is plainly an anſwer to the queſtion moved, Verſe 3, which otherwiſe goes unreſolved as hath been before expounded: and Baſil and Ainſworth agree hereunto. although Ainſworth ſaith alſo, that the hurt of an evill tongue is here ſet forth, as Pſalm. 64. 4. Prov. 25. 18. yet he expounds it of Judgments upon evill tongued men, noting Pſal 45. 6. Deut. 32. 23. Ezek. 5. 16. and coales of Juniper are ſpoken of as moſt durable, becauſe theſe coales are more ardent then thoſe that come of any other wood, and as ſome write, may be kept alive under aſhes a whole year together; ſo that the long continuance of the torments of the wicked is hereby ſet forth, as alſo Eſa 42. 11. Jer. 49. 2. of Meſheck, ſee Gen. 10 25 and of Kedar, Gen. 26. 13. Pſal. 83. 6. thoſe that came of Meſheck and Iſhmaelites are meant, and by them Iſraelites of like barbarous qualities: ſo 28. Ezek. 27. 21.

an

Caluin. Iunius.

Baſil. Ainſworth.

PSAL. CXXI.

IN this Pſalme is ſet forth the ſafe eſtate of the Faithfull; it being alſo for this life, unto Pſalm. 91.

For the firſt words, I have lifted up mine eyes to the Hills: I cannot but wonder at them that take it for a confeſſion of an erroneous expectation, or ſeeking for help to Idolls, whom men uſed to worſhip in high places or Hills, applying to this purpoſe, Jer. 3. 23. In vain is ſalvation hoped for from the hills, for the next words, From whence cometh my help, make it plain, that ſuch hills are not here meant, but hills where the Tabernacle ſtood, which was the habitation of the moſt high. So that in ſaying, I have lifted up mine eyes to the hils, is the ſame in effect, with Pſal. 123. 1. I have lifted up mine eyes to thee that dwelleſt in the heavens: and almoſt every one of theſe Pſalms of Degrees hath ſomething about looking up on high, or prayer, which is a lifting up of the heart, or going up to the houſe of God, or praiſing him the moſt high, or his Graces, according to the title coming from עלה to aſcend: And Ainſworth both expoundeth it of lifting up the eyes to mount Zion, and Moria, where the Sanctuary ſtood, and bringeth Pſal. 87, 1. His foundations are in the holy mountaines: which moſt aptly agreeth to this, and ſheweth the cauſe of lifting up the eyes to the hills, and juſtifieth this ſenſe: and the next words anſwering to theſe, My help cometh from the Lord, make it yet more plain, that by the Hills he meaneth him that dwelleth on high. Jerom, that abounds too much with Allegories, by Hills, underſtands the high things of the Law and Prophets; but without Ground, and to draw the Reader to unprofitable ſpeculations, from looking at that which is moſt profitable for our direction.

Verſ. 1.

Ainſworth.

Hieron.

He will not ſuffer thy foot to be moved, he that keepeth Iſrael neither ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth: Here the Prophet applyeth to every faithfull perſon, what he ſaid of himſelf, Verſe 1, 2: There is not one of them, but God keeps a continual watch and ward about him, ſo that his foot ſhall not ſlip, or ſtumble to make him fall to hurt him: but he ſhall be as one kept by a ſtrong Guard about him at all times; ſee the like Pſ. 91. 12: and this extends not only to the body, but to our Faith; he that is kept of God ſhall not be moved ſo, as to doubt through infidelity at any time, and to fall from his faith ſo, as to periſh for ever, although through the violence of temptation he may ſometimes be ſhaken with fear, yet he ſhall recover again, and ſtand againſt all temptations to the End.

Verſ: 3:

The Sun ſhall not ſmite thee by day, nor the Moon by night: Becauſe as

Verſ: 6:

as Verſe 5. The Lord ſhall be thy ſhade: ſo Pſal. 91. 1. But what is meant by Sun and Moon? Hieron. Jerom ſaith, that by the Sun in the day is meant proſperity, by the Moon in the night adverſity, from being corrupted by either of which the faithfull ſhall be kept. Calvin. Calvin, by two things, that commonly annoy men, parching heat in the Day, and pinching cold in the night, all things that annoy are underſtood. And this is moſt probable; the Faithfull who have God for their Keeper, ſhall not only be kept from falling, but from all other annoiances; or though they feel them as well as others, yet they ſhall not be hurt hereby. And ſometime an Experiment hath been in theſe particulars, as when the Children of Iſrael were in the Wilderneſs, the Lord took not away the pillar of a Cloud in the day, but hereby ſhadowed them, nor of fire in the night, but hereby kept them warm: and the like is promiſed to every congregation of the faithfull, Eſa. 4. 4. ſee Gen. 31. 40. what Iaacob ſaid of this to Laban. Exod. 13.

Verſ. 8. The Lord ſhall preſerve thy going out, and thy coming in: This is by Ierom applyed to our going out of this world, wherein the faithfull are ſo preſerved, that they come not into the place of torment, where Dives is: and then on the contrary ſide, thy coming in muſt be into his heavenly Kingdome, into which thou ſhalt happily enter, and ſo be bleſſed for evermore, as it is here added, From this time forth and for ever. Hieoon.

Others, in all things, that thou goeſt about, as Deut. 28. 6. 2 Chron. 1. 10. 2 Sam. 3. 25. Act. 1. 21. & Ch. 9. 28.

PSAL. CXXII.

THis Pſalme is in the title ſhewed to be Davids, conceived to be made, when God had ſhewed him the place where his houſe ſhould be built; and he had now pitcht a Tabernacle there, and brought the ark into it. For now the tribes came to Ieruſalem to worſhip at feſtival times, as they had formerly gone to Shiloh. It ſerves to expreſſe the affections of the Faithfull to Gods worship and ſervice, it is a joy unto them to ſee men come chearfully together to his houſe about it. Verſ: 1, 2: Verſ. 3.

V. 3. It is a city builded, that is compact together. having ſpoken of the houſe of God, which is one name wherby the Church is ſet forth, nowhe ſpeaks of a nother, viz. Jeruſ. where this houſe ſtood; & he praiſethit from the unity that is therein: unity in the Church being as great a Decorum unto it, as to a building to have the parts made conform to one another: but diviſions diſgrace & deform her, and therfore we ought to pray that ſects and errours being taken away, here may be all good agreement in all things; and if this cannot be, yet in fundamentals, which is the unity moſt commended, and ſuch an unity, as that particular Churches or perſons that herein diſagree, can by no means be juſtified to be members of the holy Catholike Church, at what unity ſoe-they be amongſt themſelves; as Papiſts, who bear themſelues to their unity, as an undoubted mark of the true Church: for their unity is no better then that of Simeon and Levi, of Herod, and Pontius Pilate, as long as it is in Superſtition, and Perſecution of them that oppoſe, and proteſt againſt ſuch Groſs Errours: neither doth it make againſt our Church, although diſtracted by divers opinions, to prove it no true Church, as long as we agree in all fundamentalls ſet forth in the Creed of the Apoſtles. However they are to be noted, that make theſe diviſions, and avoided, as having a black brand upon them; and therefore the ignorant people that are drawn after them are to be admonished hereof and reproved, as bearing a part in theſe infamous making and deforming diviſions.

Verſ. 4. Thither the Tribes go up to the teſtimony of Iſrael: That is, the Arke, which, which is ſo called, Exod. 25. 21. and here the word עלה is uſed, from whence the Title of the Pſalme is derived.

There are ſet Thrones of Judgment: Not only the ſervice of God being at Jeruſalem made it famous, but alſo it was the Seat of Davids Kingdome, and famous for that, Generation after Generation, as God had promiſed him, till the Seed Chriſt coming, his Kingdome ſhould be made everlaſting; Iſa. 9. 6. Verſ. 5.

Jerome underſtands all of the new Jeruſalem, where God ſhall alwayes be praiſed, and his Tribes ſhall come up, and twelve Thrones are ſet for the twelve Apoſtles to ſit upon, judging the twelve Tribes of Iſrael; becauſe the Church upon Earth is never thus united, but alwayes ſomewhat blemiſhed by diviſions and errours therein; as it is ſaid, There muſt be errours amongſt you, that the approved may be known: But in the new Jeruſalem ſhall be no blemiſh by differences, the 144000. that follow Chriſt, ſinging altogether in a moſt ſweet harmony the ſame ſong, and the foure Beaſts, ſetting forth the foure parts of the World, from whence the Saints come, making all the ſame confeſſion, wherein myriads of Angels joyne alſo. Hieron. 1 Cor. 11. 19. Revel. 14. Revel. 4. 9, 10, 11.

Thus indeed it ſhall be moſt perfectly in the Church triumphant, but here this unity is begun amongſt thoſe of the true Church; and that it may be more and more, we are exhorted to pray, Verſe 6. Pray for the peace of Jeruſalem: And therefore to indeavour it, one by yeilding to another in humility, where ſtrength of reaſon is from the word, and not puffed up by pride, each one ſtriving to make good his own conceptions, in matters that be not of any great moment. Finally he concludeth his own reſolution, to ſeek this peace, in reſpect of his Brethren, amongſt whom unity is a moſt ſweet thing; as followeth, Pſal. 133. and therefore diſcord ſtinketh before God. 2 In reſpect of the Lords houſe, which of all other Buildings, ſhould be moſt uniform, and hereby glorious. Verſ. 6. Note. Verſ. 8, 9.

PSAL. CXXIII.

UNto thee lift I up mine eyes, (O thou that dwelleſt in the Heavens) Jerome here noteth, how he proceedeth by degrees, in theſe Songs of degrees; for Pſalme 120. he ſaith, He cryed to the Lord; Pſal. 121. He lifted up his eyes to the Hills, where Gods houſe was; Pſal. 122. he went up to his houſe; now he lifts his eyes up higher, even to the higheſt Heavens, where God dwelleth. For the compariſon uſed, As the eyes of a Servant are towards the hand of his Maſter, and a Maid to her Miſtris: He alſo ſaith, it is eaſie to give a reaſon why he ſhould ſay, To the hand of his Maſter, but why of her Miſtris, is not ſo eaſie; for although the Lord be our Maſter, yet how is he a Miſtris? Sol. as he is the power of God, and the wiſdome of God, in Latine, Potentia & ſapientia Dei, in Greek it is a Feminine likewiſe; and the Church is a Daughter, or a Maid; and therefore the Chriſtian Soule ought, as an hand-maid, to bow to the hand of her Miſtris wiſdome, as Chriſt is called. And what doth he lift up his eyes for, but for mercy; as it followeth, Till he hath mercy upon us. And herein the Prophet teacheth us in prayer to lift up our eyes, that thus we may ſhew our faith, whence we beleive our help ſhall come: And for this cauſe lifting up of hands is alſo commended, and the voice, in ſaying Amen. The Publican indeed durſt not lift up his eyes, as being aſhamed, becauſe he was then labouring to be juſtified from his ſinnes; but David being full of faith, and ſo juſtified, lifteth them up, as being by the grace received the more imboldned: one poſition of body then beſt becometh the penitentiary, another the juſtified, and one confirmed in Gods grace. Verſ. 1. Hieron. Verſ. 2. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Pſal. 134. Nehem. 8.

PSAL.

PSAL. CXXIV.

Verſ. 1. IF the Lord had not been on our ſide. Hebr. and Vulgar Latine, In us: Which is yet an higher degree then any hitherto; for it is more to have the Lord in us, then to lift up our eyes unto him; for now who can be againſt us to do us hurt? as Rom. 8. 31.

Verſ: 2. 3: Baſil. When men roſe up againſt us, they had ſwallowed us up alive. To what deliverance this is to be referred, is not agreed; ſome referring it to the deliverance from Babylon, ſome from Antiochus Epiphanes, and ſome not to any certain, but to deliverances at ſundry times, the enmity of men of all Nations about being herein looked at, as they were alwayes infeſt Enemies to the Iewes, eſpecially in Davids time, who made this Pſalme, the Philiſtims: For they often roſe up and invaded Iſrael, but he by the help of God alwayes overcame and routed them. It doth not ſo well agree to the deliverances before ſpoken of, becauſe they were long after, as to theſe in Davids time: and he ſpeaketh not herein as propheſying, but relating a thing done. And the word ſwallowing up alive, intimateth their power, and Iſraells weakneſſe, after their overthrow under Saul, & all his time after Samuels death; for he that ſwalloweth a thing, muſt be much greater; and needeth no weapon to do it withall. Jerom expounds it myſtically of our Soules, which men, the evill inſtruments of the Devill, by their ſeeking to draw us to ſin, are even ready to ſwallow up, were we not by Gods Grace and ſpirit preſerved: and this danger is eſpecially by hot perſecution, as the next words ſhew; When their wrath waxed hot againſt us.

Calvin.

Verſ: 4: The waters had gone over our ſoule: A Metaphor, whereby he further ſetteth forth the irreſiſtible power as of a floud of waters; and not only by force do the wicked ſeek to carry away the Faithfull, but by ſubtilty, as Verſ. 7. followeth, Our Soul is delivered as a Bird out of the Snare of the Fowler: Not unlike unto that Pſal. 91. 3. where by this ſnare it is ſhewed, that the Devills ſubtill temptations are ſet forth.

PSAL. CXXV.

THis is another Pſalm of Degrees, wherein the Prophet yet aſcendeth higher, in ſpeaking of the Faithfull, Pſal. 124. he ſpeaketh of God in them; but here he ſetteth them forth as being in Gods compaſſing them about ſo, that no evill can come unto them.

Verſ. 1. Matth. 7 Firſt, He ſaith, They that truſt in God, are like mount Zion, that ſhall never be moved: So the Faithfull is built upon a rock, and ſtands unmoveable what weather ſoever comes.

Verſ. 2. Then he likens them them to Jeruſalem, about which the mountaines ſtand, making it inacceſſible by enemies.

Pſal. 2. 9. Verſe 3. The rod of the wicked ſhall not alwayes be upon the back of the righteous, that the righteous ſtretch not out their hands to wickedneſſe: By Rod here Expoſitors generally underſtand a Scepter, or Dominion, to which the faithfull are often times ſubject, and ſo do ſuffer greivouſly, as it is ſayd, When the Righteous are exalted, there is joy, but when the wicked rule, ſorrow and heavyneſſe: And to ſuch they are made ſubject for their ſins, notwithſtanding their ſafe being hitherto ſpoken of. But their comfort is, that God will put an end to theſe their ſufferings, and ſo keep them, that they ſhall not, being overcome by the Tedioufneſſe thereof, fall away from their godly care to ſerve the Lord; but by Experience finding, that to be thus afflicted was profitable for them, be the more confirmed herein.

Therefore when ſuch gracious promiſes of ſafety are made as before, they are to be underſtood of ſafety from being moved by Enemies prevailing to caſt caſt away their faith and hope in God, and conſequently their care of Godlineſs.

For none either men or Devills ſhall ever thus prevail againſt the truly faithfull; but they ſhall ſtand firm as mount Zion; and if any being broken by afflictions are overcome, it is a ſigne that they were Hypocrites: For a true Job, being thus tempted to fall from his righteouſneſs, will ſay, Shall we receive Good at the hands of God, and not Evill? Note.

Such as turne aſide to their crooked wayes, the Lord ſhall lead them forth with the Workers of iniquity. Verſ. 5.

Here he concludeth on the contrary ſide againſt Hypocrites, that under a pretence of Godlineſs are licentious in their lives, being full of deceit and Guile; covertly ſeeking worldly profit and honour amongſt men. Such he threatneth, that God ſhall lead, awe, as the word ſignifieth, make them go with the Workers of iniquity, that is, Into Hell, as it is ſaid, Goe yee curſed into Hell fire, &c. They being all alive before God, both that profeſs the faith diſſemblingly, and that are notorious for their wicked lives. And indeed they are alſo workers of iniquity, what ſhew ſoever they make; and therefore it is juſt, that they ſhould go altogether to the ſame place of torment. Matth. 25. Matth. 7. 22.

To expreſſe which, the ſinging Pſalm hath it, Such will the Lord ſcattter abroad, with Hypocrites thrown down to Hell.

PSAL. CXXVI.

WHEN the Lord turned the Captivity of Zion, we were as they that dream, Vulg. Quaſi conſolati fuimus, but Hebr. it is, Dreame, as Jerome alſo acknowledgeth. This is alſo a Song of Degrees, or Aſcenſions the ſeventh, wherein it is yet aſcended higher, then in Pſal. 125. viz. to Heaven. Verſ. 1.

For what, ſaith Auguſt. is the turning again of our Captivity, but our being brought out of the Captivity of ſin to Heaven, our Countrey? For till this be done, we are held captives in a ſtrange country, for which we are often ſaid to be Pilgrims and ſtrangers, and to be lead captive by the Law of ſin. But Chriſt came and Lead Captivity Captive, when having ſuffered death for us, he aſcended up into Heaven. Man was at the firſt made righteous, and placed in Paradiſe; but by being through the ſubtilty of the Serpent drawn to ſin, he was taken captive and put out; but then is his Captivity turned, when turning to Chriſt, by Faith and Repentance, he beginneth to enter into Paradiſe again; by which name Chriſt ſetteth forth Heaven, ſaying to the theif upon the Croſſe, This day ſhalt thou be With me in Paradiſe. But a full Entrance to dwell there is not made, till death: we now by Faith ſit in heavenly places, and have our Converſation in Heaven, Phil. 3. 20. but then we take actuall poſſeſſion. Auguſt. Rom. 7. Epheſ. 4, 8. Col. 3.

We wereas they that dream this ſaith Cal. is ſpoken, to ſhew ſo high a degree of Joy as a man waking is uncapable of, & can ſee & feel it here only, as one dreaming, to whom, as to a man in an exſtaſy, are ſhewed things unſpeakable, & never ſeen with mortal eys; for who ever waking ſaw whilſt he was in the body the joyes of Heaven? yea it is ſaid, Eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, &c. but ſome in dreams have ſeen them, and therefore it is ſaid, Were as they that dreame. Jerom ſaith, that by the returning of the Jews from the Babylonian Captivity here ſpoken of, according to the Letter, deliverance from the captivity of ſin by Chriſt is ſet forth; as alſo Ainſworth noteth it is Eſa. 10. 21. 22. ſee the like. Pſal. 14. 7. 68. 19. Deut. 30. 3. Calvin. 2 Cor. 12. 1 Cor. 2. 9. Hieron.

Our mouth was filled with Laughter, and our Tongue with ſinging: When the mouth is full ſaith Auguſtine: the tongue is ſilent, how is it then here ſaid thus? and he anſwereth, A mouth and tongue are aſcribed unto the Verſ. 2. Auguſt.

Epheſ. 5. 19. Soule, and ſo the mouth being filled, the tongue ſingeth, as it is ſaid, Be filled with the ſpirit, ſinging to your ſelves in Hymnes, &c. making Melody to the Lord in your hearts.

Verſ. 3. Then ſayd they amongſt the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them. Which is ſpoken to the reproach of ſuch Jews, as were not affected with Gods mercies, when the very Heathen were.

Verſ. 4. Turn our Captivity, as the Rivers in the South: That is, turn thoſe that are not yet converted as the ſtate of them that are converted is ſet forth by this Phraſe, Becauſe, becauſe the South Country, according to the Scripture, was very dry, and when Grace cometh, Water aboundeth, as it were, in dry places, as John. 6. 38. To which Effect, the Cald. Paraph. ſpeaketh.

Verſ. 5. They that ſow in tears ſhal reape in joy, he that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious ſeed, &c. This is ſpoken, firſt with reference to the Jews, carryed into Captivity, which could not be without abundance of ſorrow; yet in regard of the promiſe made by Ieremy, of returning again, it was but as a going out to ſow, which though it were in ſorrow, yet as the Husbandman ſowing ſometimes in hard weather, reapeth a plentifull Crop, whereof he hath great joy, as Eſa 9. So he meaneth that they ſhould, when they reaped the fruit of Ieremiah his Propheſying, do it with exceeding great joy. For precions ſeed here ſpoken of, the word משך is uſed, which ſignifieth to draw out, as when a man makes a little ſeed, corne being very dear, to ſerve to ſow a great deal of Ground; ſo that to go according to the proper ſenſe of the word, it is, that guides his hand ſo in ſowing, that he goeth far in ſowing a little ſeed by drawing it out to the uttermoſt, as having but little. And thus it ſhall be with all the Faithfull, by patient ſuffering in this world; they ſow ſo, as that they ſhall reap with unſpeakeable joy in the world to come; for ſo quiet ſuffering of afflictions is compared, Iam. 3. 18. And this is here ſet forth by the Jews return at the end of ſeventy years from Babylon, ſignifying confuſion; becauſe that in ſeven dayes, or weekes conſiſting of ſeven, this world ſhall come to an end, and we ſhall come out of confuſion, to which we are now continually ſubject, and be put into moſt decent order for evermore.

PSAL. CXXVII.

THis is the eighth Pſalme of Degrees, compiled by Solomon, as the title ſheweth, although the Hebrews ſay, it was made for Solomon to conſider. But it is uſuall in ſaying Pſalms of David, to ſay לדויד as here it is, לשלמה the letter ל ſignifying as well Of, as To. And it is moſt probable, as Ierom ſaith, that he made it, when he went about that great work of building the Temple, acknowledging, that he ſhould attempt it in vain without God. And it extendeth to the building of any houſe, or houſes; by building the houſe and watching the City, all other works alſo, to which men put their hands, being meant: And not only materiall buildings, and watching of Cities or Townes by watchmen, that hold weapons in their hands; but becauſe the Temple figured out the Church of Chriſt, and this is alſo called a City ſet upon an Hill, it is ſpoken alſo of Spirituall builders and watchmen, as Paſtors be called, 1 Cor 9. Heb 13. 17. They labour in vain, except the Lord work with them, as 1 Cor. 3. it is ſaid, That Paul and Apollo are nothing.

Hieron.
Verſ. 1.

Verſ. 2. It is vain for you to riſe up early, to ſit up late, to eate the bread of ſorrowes, for ſo he giveth his beloved ſleep: This is ſpoken to worldlings, that are covetouſly carryed after the things of this life; they uſe all means to increaſe their Eſtate, riſing up early to work, and continuing long at it in the night, and uſing a moſt ſparing and courſe dyet, that they may purſe up the more, more. For it is called the bread of ſorrowes, both becauſe it is gotten with hard and continuall Labour, as the covetous man is grieved, that he muſt ſpend any thing upon his Belly, and his Families, and that time muſt be ſpent this way to interrupt his work. So he giveth his beloved reſt, or ſleep: that is When the worldling is toyling thus, and diſtracted through anxious cares, the faithfull hath that quietly coming in, which is ſufficient for him, not breaking his ſleep therefore, Gods bleſſing giving him it: Or as the one toyleth and pincheth unreaſonbly, denying even ſleep to his weary Body, which is neceſsary for it, ſo the other hath the grace given him of god to take his neceſsary reſt, having yet no want of theſe worldly things, becauſe God ſupplyeth him by his bleſſing: to expreſs which Calvin thinks it may be read, he giveth his Beloved things Per ſomnum, whilſt he ſleepeth, which is not yet ſpoken by way of indulgence towards thoſe that live in idleneſs, and work little, but ſleep or go about idlely, or ſtand here and there, when they ſhould be at their work; but to taxe ſuch Worldlings as place all proſperity in their own induſtry, never looking up to God, or his Bleſſing, labouring unreaſonably, and unſeaſonably for the world, as if all increaſe lay herein; and to comfort the Godly Labourer, by ſhewing, that although he doth not as the other, but prayes, reads, & meditates more, taking pains ſeaſonably and moderately in reſpect of the time for his living here, yet he ſhal in thus doing have that given him by Gods bleſſing, which ſhal be ſufficient for him. For even the Author of this Pſalme in his Proverbs doth often reprove, and threaten the idle, and ſtir up to diligence in the works of our calling, ſo that upon this Ground no man may go from labouring in his Calling, in hope to have it given him, as the ſuperſtitious Fryers amongſt the Papiſts: neither may he, being poor, and having Wife and Children, ſpend a great part of his time in going to hear, although that be food which endureth to eternall life. For ſuch muſt work upon the ſix dayes, as is commanded, and work with their hands, that they may have to give to the neceſſities of others wife and Children, and according as Gods bleſſing is upon them, to the poor. Verſe 3. Lo Children are an heritage from the Lord, and the fruit of the womb is his reward: From building, watching the City, and labouring, he proceedeth to the getting of Children, wherein men may haply think, that they only are the agents; but contrariwiſe he ſheweth, that in this is Gods hand alſo; as he builds the houſe by men, ſo by men and women he giueth this bleſſing when he pleaſeth, and not according to the good pleaſure of his own will; from whence it is, that ſome as ſtrong and likely in Nature to be fruitfull, are barren: Therefore even herein alſo God is to be looked at by them that have Children, and to be praiſed: The poor, that hath no inheritance of houſe or land, comes thus to have an inheritance, & a reward or benefit from God. For which, that they may be the more ſtirred up to thankfullneſſe, be addeth, As arrowes are in the hands of the mighty, ſo are Children of youth, that is, good Children, and obedient to parents. For even Ariſtotle queſtioning, whether πολυπαιδία be a bleſſiug, unleſſe it be εὐγονία, anſwereth, that it is better to be without Children, then not to have Good Children; but when it is εὐγονία, Bleſſed is the man that hath his quiver full of them. The words are indeed, Young Sonnes, that is, being growen to the ſtrength of youth, becauſe they are by their Goodneſs and courage, as it were, a Guard unto him againſt Enemies that ſhall ſeek to preſſe in upon him at his door; as they did in Sodom upon Lot, for which it is added, He ſhall not be aſhamed when he ſpeaketh with his enemy in the Gate. And he brings in this of Children, becauſe poor men, that are full of Children, are ready to be full of Care, and think they had need toil Night and day to keep them: Againſt this it is oppoſed, They are an heritage from the Lord, &c. and God will doubtleſſe have a care of his own heritage, for which cauſe parents ſhould labour by prayer, and Education, to make their Children ſuch, and then not diſtract themſelves with caring to provide portions for them. Thus for them that have Children: but they on the other ſide that have none, are naked as it were, and deſtitute of armes, and means to continue long; for they ſhall ſhortly dye, and then when as others live ſtill in their Children, their life and memory is quite gone. Againſt this the Lord tells us of a name better then that of Sons and Daughters, and of a name written in Heaven, and of a white ſtone with a new name written in it: And of children alſo in the ſpirit, according to which Saint John layth often, My little Children; and Saint Paul, My little Children, of whom I travell again in birth, &c. and again, I have begotten you. And who converteth others, hath Children thus, wherein far greater comfort lyeth; and to ſuch ſpirituall Children begotten by the Gospell, Jerom referreth all this, making Chriſt the Gate, or Doore, in which he ſhall not fear his Enemy.

Calvin. Eph. 4. 28. Verſ. 3. Verſ. 4. Calvin. Verſ. 5. Verſ. 6. Note.

Eſa. 56. 5.
Luk. 10. 20.
Revel. 2. 17.
Gal. 4. 19.
1 Cor. 4, 15.

PSAL. CXXVIII.

THis Pſalm Baſ. noteth, begins where the former ended, for there he is pronounced bleſſed, that is ful of children, bleſſed is the man that hath his quiver ful of them; Here, Bleſſed is the man that feareth the Lord, and walketh in his ways &c. thy Wife ſhal be as fruitfull trees, thy children as olive branches round about thy table: Leaſt any man ſhould think bleſſedneſſe to conſiſt meerly in having Children, the fruit of the womb, the fear of God, and walking in his wayes, are premiſed, as the foundation of all bleſſing, according to Deut. 28. And although ſuch as feared God, commonly were herein bleſſed, that they had numerous of-ſprings under the old teſtament, yet under the new it is not ſo; for now is the time, that ſome make themſelves Eunuchs, or chaſt for the Kingdome of Heaven, and many that are married go without Children, and yet have a better name in Gods houſe, then they that have Sonnes and Daughters, as was before ſaid out of Eſa. 56. 5. Now the Wife that is as the fruitfull vine, ſaith Jerom, as wiſdome ſo much by Solomon commended, is wiſdome; and the Children, good works coming from an heart that feareth God; for theſe are the fruits of which Chriſt ſaith, Herein is my Father glorified, that yee bring forth much fruit: and the Childrens Children, which he ſaith they ſhall ſee, are the rewards beſtowed upon them that do good, in heaven, according to that, Give thy almes in ſecret, and thy Father that ſeeth in ſecret ſhall reward thee openly. And thou ſhalt ſee Peace upon Iſrael, when, all Enemies being ſubdued, the Faithfull ſhall live in peace and reſt for ever.

Baſil.
Verſ. 1.
Verſ. 3.
Matth. 19, 12.
Hieron.
Ioh. 15.
Matth. 6.

Here nothing hath been omitted throughout the Pſalme, but only Verſe 2. Thou ſhalt eat the fruit of thy labour, or the labour of thy hands; for it is threatned as a curſe, Strangers devour your land. Eſa. 1. 7. and thou ſhalt plant a vneyard, and others ſhall eat the fruit thereof: But to eat of that for which a man laboureth, is a bleſſing, Eccl. 2. 24.

Dent. 28. 30.

PSAL. CXXIX.

THis Pſalme is not amiſſe placed after the former, wherein the bleſſedneſſe of them that feare God was ſet forth, and their bleſſing in this, that they ſhould eat the labour of their hands, and their Poſterity ſhould be increaſed, and they ſhould live long to ſee their Childrens Children. Now on the contrary ſide he ſheweth, that the evill attempts of wicked Enemies ſhall be fruſtrated, how often ſoever they fight againſt the Righteous.

Often have they afflicted me from my youth, now may Iſrael ſay, but they have not prevailed againſt me.

The

The Plower have plowed, &c. The Lord hath cut aſunder the cord of the wicked: And that their labours ſhall come to nothing, but be as the Graſſe upon the houſe-top, which groweth a little, and withereth again, no man having benefit thereby, and therefore no man bleſſing them; whereas they that feare God, are ſeen and acknowledged to be abundantly bleſſed by all men. For plowing long furrowes upon our backs, this is a metaphoricall ſpeech, wherein the faithfull are likened unto Ground, and the wicked fighting againſt and perſecuting them, to Plow-men, tearing them in all parts moſt cruelly: But as the Plow-man can plow no more, when his Harnis, whereby he draweth the Plow, is cut in ſunder; ſo the juſt God cuts their cords aſunder, breaks their power, ſo that they are not finally able to hurt the faithfull any more. Then he ſetteth forth the ſame again, by another ſimilitude of Graſſe upon the houſe-top, which groweth green indeed, and high; ſo they ſeem flouriſhing, and in their pride boaſt and brag of great matters, but they are ſoon brought down, and the Poſterity promiſed to themſelves, vaniſheth. Verſ. 3. Verſ. 4. Calvin.

PSAL. CXXX.

THis is the twelfth Pſalme of Degrees, rightly ſo called, becauſe that from the loweſt ebb of miſery, it is aſcended to the higheſt degree of felicity, even to the Lord; to whom he ſaith, that he cryed out of the deep. The Papiſts uſe this Pſalme only for the dead, thus ſacrilegiouſly taking the uſe of it away from the living; whereas it is a very treaſury of great comfort to all, that are preſſed under the burthen of their ſinnes. So Calvin, From the deeps have I cryed unto thee; being heavy laden, and preſſed with miſeries. Baſil, Out of the depth of my heart: Not from my tongue within my mouth only. Auguſtine, Out of the depth of ſin, under which I lay moſt deep: as appeareth, becauſe he addeth, If thou Lord ſhouldſt mark iniquities, who ſhall ſtand? And none of the ancient Fathers ever found any Purgatory here, or ground of praying for theis Soules there, till that blindneſſe and ignorance, raigning amongſt the Papiſts, found it out. Let us joyne Calvin and Auguſtine together, and Baſil alſo; and then we ſhall come to the true ſenſe. Out of not one depth, but depths of ſin, and ſorrowes coming for ſin, and out of the bottome of my heart I have cryed; that is, with all earneſtneſſe, for ſo our praying muſt be, that we may prevaile. Of afflictions called deeps, ſee Pſa. 69. 3. 15. and Pſal. 42. And ſin is a depth, becauſe men dig deep to hide it, and the ſinner lyeth under ſin, as under a burthen too heavy to be borne, and ſo low, that he is almoſt in the bottomleſſe, and therefore deepeſt pit of Hell; and deep ſighs and groanes are the interceſſions of the Spirit. Verſ. 1. Calvin. Baſil. Auguſt. Verſ. 3. Iam. 5. 16. Iſa. Pſal. 38. 4. Rom. 8. 26.

If thou ſhouldſt obſerve iniquities, who can ſtand? but there is forgiveneſſe with thee, that thou mayſt be feared. Having cryed to the Lord, Verſe 1, 2. now he acknowledgeth, that without forgiveneſſe of his ſinnes, neither he, nor any man can pray, with hope to be heard, which he, meaneth by ſtanding: as it is ſaid of the Publican, that he ſtood praying afar off. But herein lyeth the comfort of the penitent ſinner, that there is forgiveneſſe with God; and therefore with feare and reverence, he addreſſeth himſelfe unto him in prayer: which is meant by ſaying, That thou mayſt be feared. Of ſerving God with feare, ſee Pſal. 2. 7. And this muſt be the ground of our crying to God, being otherwiſe ready to flee from him in deſperation: and therefore the popiſh Doctrine of ſeeking deliverance from ſin, by ſatisfying by acts of penance, and meriting by good works, and that there is no certainty by faith, is a ground of deſpaire; and their teaching the perfection of ſome, a Doctrine of preſumption, and contradictory to this, Who can ſtand? and to all the Fathers that write hereupon. But that we may be able to lay this Verſ: 3, 4. Note.

this ground, and to pray in aſſurance, we muſt have a deep ſenſe of our ſinnes, affecting our hearts, not ſlightly, but deeply; as Verſe 1. but in reſpect of the guilt and the puniſhment, crying out, if we ſhould be ſtrictly dealt withall, who can ſtand, and not to be put to everlaſting confuſion? And becauſe moſt by far want this, they may pray as they do, but ſhall not be heard to be forgiven, and everlaſtingly ſaved.

Verſ. 5. I waited for the Lord, I waited, in his word did I hope. Here the Prophet applyeth to himſelfe the ground before generally laid, viz. That there is forgiveneſſe with the Lord; for by reaſon of this he waited, and that not a little while, but with perſeverance, certainly expecting to be heard: for which the word is doubled: & for this he depended only upon this word, as every one muſt do, that would be ſaved, although he ſeeth nothing before him, but cauſe of deſpaire. And he illuſtrates his expecting, Verſe 6. from a ſimilitude of watch-men, watching for the morning light, whereof they are moſt deſirous, as being weary, eſpecially in Winter, of the long dark and cold night: So the faithfull Soule, being weary of ſin and miſery, moſt earneſtly looks and cryes for the morning light of comfort, by being aſſured of pardon and deliverance.

Verſ. 6.

Verſ. 7. 8. Let Iſrael hope in the Lord, for with him is mercy and plenteous redemption. Here he applyeth the Doctrine before going, not only to himſelfe, but to all Iſrael; who, according to the ſignification of the word, would prevaile with God for pardon. And here the meanes of mercy are ſet forth; viz. Redemption, coming from God, when he ſent his only deerly beloved Son, to pay his life for his Iſrael; for we are not redeemed with corruptible things, but with the precious blood of Jeſus Chriſt. 1 Pet. 1. 18.

PSAL. CXXXI.

HAving bidden Iſrael hope in the Lord, Pſal. 130. 7. now in his own perſon he ſheweth, in what humility this muſt be done; viz. in ſuch humility as is in little Children, who are without all pride. And to this he that humbled himſelfe moſt low, to pay the price of our redemption, often exhorteth, averring, that who ſo doth not humble himſelfe as a little Childe, ſhall never enter into the Kingdome of Heaven. Jerome thinks this to be ſpoken in the perſon of Chriſt, giving us example, O Lord my heart is not haughty, &c. for indeed it was moſt humble; and he that ſet forth a little Child to be learned of, biddeth, Learne of me that I am humble and lowly: And therefore, in humility, was as a Childe new weaned, free yet from all pride. Then as an argument of humility it is ſaid, I have not walked in great matters, and too marvellous for me. Which being underſtood of the humane nature, agreeth very well to our Lord: for in ſpeaking of the day of Judgment, having ſhewed the ſignes thereof, he ſaith, Of that day and houre knoweth no man, no nor the Angels of Heaven; and Marke 13. 32. Nor the Son, but the Father; But in ſpeaking of his humility, by a ſimilitude of a weaned Childe, it is to be noted, that he ſaith, If I have not quieted, and kept my Soule ſilent, as a weaned Childe with his Mother, as a weaned Childe within my Soule: For ſo the words go Hebr. being a form of an Oath, and therefore in the Vulgar Latine thus ſupplyed, Deus retribuet animæ meæ: and the Cald. acknowledgeth the ſame; an Oath, ſaith he, is taken to make it the more credible; and when a man by Oath bindes himſelfe to any thing that is good, he will apply himſelfe unto it with the greater care. And the meaning is, as a Childe is quiet with his Mother, ſo am I with my Father, reſting in his good pleaſure, and through contentation in all my ſufferings, bearing a quiet minde ſtill within me, and not ſending out murmurings and complaints, after the manner of proud and impatient men. And this anſwers to that which was ſaid in the former Pſalme, about his waiting upon the Phil. 2. 5. Hieron.

Verſ. 1.

Matth. 11. 28.

Verſ. 2.

Matth. 24. 36.

Verſ. 2.

the Lord. Laſtly as there, ſo here he ends, with applying the ſame to Iſrael; Let Iſrael hope in the Lord, from this time forth for ever: That is, in the like humble ſubmiſſion to his will, not prying into his ſecrets, but reſting in his will revealed in his word, without murmuring at any thing, and herein to be conſtant for ever, and not to deſpaire in any caſe. Verſ. 3.

PSAL. CXXXII.

THE thirteenth Song of Degrees was made, as Junius hath it, by David; when the Arke was removed from the houſe of Obed-Edom, to be placed in the Tabernacle ſet up for it; and this may well be gathered from the Contents of the Pſalme. Calvin thinketh, that it was made either by David, or Solomon, becauſe ſome paſſages here are in Solomons ſpeeches, at the dedication of the Temple, 2 Chron. 6. 16. 41, 42. But the firſt is moſt probable, becauſe he that made it, ſaith, We found it, that is, the Arke, in the wood, Verſe 6. which was Kireath Jearim, here called, Sethe Jaar, the feild of Jaar, or wood; whereas Solomon when he removed the Arke into the houſe, that he had built, found it in Zion, in the Tabernacle ſet up by David his Father. Iunius. 1 Chron. 15. Calvin.

Remember David, and all his afflictions, 2 Chron. 6. 42. for afflictions, it is the mercies of David, or his kindneſſes, or the care that he took about the Arke, that it might be worthily placed out of the great good affection which he bare to it. Verſ. 1.

How he ſware unto the Lord, &c. This may ſeem to be a ſtrange Vow, that David ſhould vow not to ſleep, or take any reſt, till he had found out a place and Habitation for God; becauſe it was a thing not in his power, but at the good pleaſure of God to be appointed, and when he would appoint it, he knew not. But forſomuch as he was a Prophet, and ſo by the inſtinct of the Spirit, might be moved to make this vow, knowing that God would appoint a place, as he had long before promiſed, and that the time was now come, he to ſhew his care & diligence, in this reſpect entred into this Vow, not doubting but that God would order the matter ſo, that he ſhould perform it. Or it may be conceived, that he made it when the Tabernacle was prepared, and he had once attempted to bring the Arke into it, but was diſcouraged by the death of Uzzah, whereupon it was left in the houſe of Obed-Edom; where whilſt it remained, he heard that God bleſſed him, and all that he had: therefore to binde himſelfe with all ſpeed to fetch it home to him, that he might be the more bleſſed, he made this Vow, and immediately went about it. The Rabbins, ſayth Calvin, faine, that this vow was made after the threſhing floore of Araunah ſhewed unto him in the time of the Peſtilence; but there is no reaſon to think ſo, for then the place was alteady found, although no houſe was yet built upon it: Therefore he thinketh rather, that David ſpake thus hyperbolically, or elſe, that his meaning was nothing elſe, but every time that he went to his reſt, and to his Bed, he would ſtudy about this, and ſeek to know it. But I reſt in the former, which is further confirmed by Junius, ſaying, that David could not be ſo unreaſonable, as to think to preſcribe unto God, and to binde him by his vow to a certain time; but he had doubtleſſe reſpect unto the Tabernacle, which he had made, and to the bringing of the Arke in thither; meaning, that he would not enter to dwell and lodge in the new houſe, which he had built him, till he had brought in the Ark; of which houſe of his, and the Tabernacle, ſpoken of together, ſee 1 Chron. 15: 1, 2. Ver: 2: Deut. 12. 5 2 Sam. 6. Calvin. Junius.

We heard of it in Ephrata, and found it in the feilds of the Wood. Of which laſt words, enough before: touching Ephrata, hereby Ephraim is meant, as Judg. 12. 5. an Ephraimite is called an Ephratite; for in the Tribe of Ephraim was Shiloh, where the Ark continued many yeares, 1 Sam. 4. 11. Verſ. 6.

Of

Of Shiloh being in Ephraim, ſee Judg. 18. 31. and 21. 19. 1 Sam. 1. 3. but from thence it was carryed againſt the Philiſtims, and being brought back again, it was kept in the feilds of Jaar, otherwiſe called Chireath Iearim, twenty years: 1 Sam. 7. 2. and that which is there called Kireath Jearim, 2 Sam. 6. is called Baale of Judah. This work of putting the Ark into its place, being done, Verſe 7. he exhorteth to adoration here, and then as Moſes, Numb. 10. 35. uſed to ſay when the Ark removed; he addeth, Ariſe O Lord, thou and the Arke of thy ſtrength, &c. Of which ſee the ſenſe there.

Verſ. 7.
Verſ. 8.

Verſ. 9. Let thy Prieſts be cloathed with righteouſneſſe. Here he falleth to prayer for ſuch graces and bleſſings, upon Prieſts and People, as whereof they might all have joy. After which his promiſe made, 2 Sam. 7. is commemorated; of which ſee there: and again 2 Chron. 6. God being firſt prayed, for his Servant Davids ſake, not to put away the face of his Annointed, Verſe 10. all which words, Verſe 10, 11, 12. make it probable to have been Solomons, when he brought the Ark into the Temple that he had built.

Verſ. 9.

Verſ. 11, 12.

Verſ. 13. For Verſe 13. ſee the like, Pſal. 78. 68. Here the delight which the Lord taketh in Zion, above all places, is ſhewed, which figureth out the Church; therefore this is ſpoken, for the comfort of all the faithfull whereſoever.

Verſ. 13.

Verſ. 15. And likewiſe that which followeth, Verſe 15. 16. I will abundantly bleſſe her proviſion, and her poor with bread.

Verſ. 15.

Verſ. 17. There will I make the Horne of David, mine annointed to bud. That is, I will magnify his power, meaning Chriſt, figured out in David, whoſe power increaſed, as his Goſpell was more and more propagated. And his Enemies, who remained obſtinate in oppoſing him, were cloathed with confuſion; which was moſt remarkably performed, in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, when the Jewes were ſo vilifyed and debaſed: but his Crown flouriſhed, when even the Romans, who deſtroyed them, turned Chriſtians in the time of Conſtantine the great.

Verſ. 17.

Verſ. 18.

PSAL. CXXXIII.

IN this Pſalme Love and Unity is commended to all Chriſtians, by two ſimilitudes; one taken from the ſweet ointment, wherewith Aaron the high Prieſt was annointed to his Office: Of which ſee, Exod 30. 23. Levit. 8. 12. and of his Garments, Exod 28. when this was done, there was a moſt ſweet ſmell in the Noſtrils of all that were neer about him: So when Brethren in Chriſt live together in unity. Jerom applyeth it to the love and unity amongſt Friers, that have left the World, and ſo they only can live in unity and love; others, although they come to one place together, yet departing thence, their wayes are divers, and none loves another, but for worldly profit; which indeed cannot be denyed, and is to the ſhame of Chriſtians. Neither let him think, that his love is any whit acceptable to God, that loveth no otherwiſe but thus; true love, that ſmelleth ſweet before God, is to love another meerly for the love of God, who hath commanded it; if he be poor, to feed him, if out of the way, to ſeek to turn him, if ſhining by grace ſingularly, to loue him for this, and to do him good. What ground Jerom hath to apply this to Chriſt, as he doth; ſaying, his Head ſetteth forth his Divinity, his Beard his Humanity, the skirts of his Garments, the virtue even in them, to heale ſuch as touched them, as the woman with the bloody Iſſue found it by experience, I cannot ſee. Aaron indeed figured out Chriſt, in the Oyle powred upon his head, and his glorious Garments; for ſo he was annointed with the oyle of gladneſſe; and his Garments were glorious, and are ſaid all to ſmell of Myrrhe, Aloes, and Caſſia, But here neither he nor his Garments are ſpoken of, as figuring out theſe things, but his ſweet ointment upon

Hieron.

Note.

Pſal. 45.

Matth. 17.

upon him and his garments, figuring out the ſweetneſs of unity and love. And hitherto of the 1 ſimilitude; the 2 is from the dew of Hermon: As the dew of Hermon, which deſcended upon the Mountains of Zion. Here ſomething is to be ſupplyed, to make the ſenſe perfect; for Hermon and Zion were far aſunder, ſo that the rain which fel upon Hermon, could not deſcend upon theſe mountains; the one being beyond Jordan, Pſal. 29. 6. being alſo called Sirion, the other on the other ſide; and therefore it is well ſupplyed, And as the dew which deſcendeth upon the Mountain of Zion, to make either of them fruitfull; whereby is intimated, that amongſt ſuch as are without love, there is barrenneſſe, which is the effect of Gods curſe, as where there is love and unity, his bleſſing; as here followeth, For there the Lord commanded the bleſſing, and life for evermore: In which words is ſhewed, that where unity and love is, Gods bleſſing is to make ſuch a Nation to proſper, and to grow rich and mighty, and afterwards to bring to everlaſting life. And therefore we in this Nation, who are ſo divided, cannot be bleſſed, that we may haſten to unity again under one head, without which it can never be, and which is yet more dangerous, we can never attain everlaſting life. God make us wiſe to conſider this, who cannot otherwiſe be truly godly, and ſo have the promiſes made good unto us, both of this life and of that which is to come; ſith that of godlineſſe, there being three parts, Faith, Hope, and Love, the chiefeſt of theſe is love.

Verſ. 3.

Pſal. 42. 6.

Note.

1 Cor. 13.

PSAL. CXXXIV.

THis is the laſt Pſalme of Degrees, touching which Jerom ſaith well, that having before aſcended by many degrees, as hath partly been touched already, in the 131, 132. and 133. three neceſſary graces are commended unto us. Firſt, Humility, Pſal. 131. Secondly, Piety, Pſal. 132. Thirdly, Love, Pſal. 133. which if we be indued withall, then we may bleſſe the Lord, and ſhall be bleſſed of him, as in this Pſalme: For to that which was before ſaid, the firſt word, Behold, hath reference: Behold, bleſſe yee the Lord his Servants: Not Servants of ſin, but the Lords Servants, which ſtand continually before him: Let not this your frequent being in his preſence, breed in you a contempt; as the ſaying is, too much familiarity breedeth contempt, but bleſſe him alwayes, acknowledge and with reverence praiſe his excellency. Which ſtand; that is, in the truth, not being turned after errour; for God accepteth not of the praiſes, either of the wicked, or of Hereticks: And it is ſaid, Yee that ſtand in the houſe of the Lord; to intimate, that many ſtand not here, but abroad and in the feilds; and they are ſuch as do but go and come, being as much or more away, then they are here; unlike Hannah, who ſerved God with faſting and prayer day and night, and departed not from the Temple. And it is further ſaid, That ſtand by night: Whereby not only praying, but watching thereunto is denoted; as is required, Eph. 6. 18. Matth. 24. although Jerom by night, will have the time of this life underſtood, for the darkneſſe of miſery, to which we are ſubject here; yet the Servants of God ceaſe not to praiſe God in the midſt of their afflictions.

Hieron.

Verſ. 1.

Nimia familiaritas parit contemptum.

Luk. 2.

Hieron.

Lift up your hands in the Sanctuary. Hebrew, Lift up yon hands Sanctuary. They that are before ſaid to ſtand in the houſe of God, are now Synechdochically called the Sanctuary, the continent being put for the content. Others, I confeſſe, generally ſupply the word in, or towards, but the ſenſe is good thus, without any ſupplement. And they are bidden to lift up their hands, to ſhew the lifting up of their hearts; as Pſal. 25. 1. which maketh againſt them, that being amongſt ſuch as bleſſe God, yet bring not their hearts to it, no nor the outward man, their hands not being ſo much as lifted up, nor their voice to ſay Amen, nor their eyes, but ſhut with drowſineſſe, or wandring after any other occurrences although moſt vain. Jerom wil have lifting up the hands, to do in way of charity meant, but this is forced here.

Ver. 2.

Verſ. 3. The Lord bleſſe thee out of Zion. For bleſſing God, every one of his Servants ſhall be bleſſed by him out of Zion; that is, from the piety there exercited, all bleſſings flowing as from a Fountain, that can never be drawn dry. And that we may not doubt of it, it is added, Which made Heaven and Earth: That is, who hath all power to do as he promiſed, and is not like Idols, which can do nothing, good or evill.

PSAL. CXXXV.

AS he ended with bleſſing God, Pſalme 134 ſo in this Pſalme he goeth on more largly; beginning with Halalujah, as in divers other Pſalmes before: So that this is nothing elſe, but a further exhortation to the ſame, that they were before exhorted to; the cauſes of bleſſing God being declared unto, Verſe 15. then the vanity of Idols, Verſe 15, 16, 17, 18 is ſet forth. Laſtly, Iſrael, Aaron, Levi, by name are exhorted to this duty, with all that feare God, to the end of the Pſalme. In the firſt all

Verſ. 14. things are plain to Verſe 14. The Lord will judge his people, and repent him concerning his Servants. Which is taken from Deut. 32. 36. where the meaning may be ſeen, Verſe 16, 17. &c. are the ſame with Pſal. 115. 4,

Verſ. 20. 5. &c. Laſtly, the houſe of Aaron and Levi, are exhorted in particular to bleſſe God, becauſe to them this Office in publick was committed in the

Note names of all the other Tribes, yet all ſuch as feared God, are called upon alſo to do the ſame; it being hereby intimated, that this duty muſt not ſo be left to Gods Miniſters, but if thou haſt the feare of God in thee, thou muſt likewiſe acknowledge it to be thy duty to do the ſame, as well as they. Verſe

Verſ. 21. 21. he concludeth, Bleſſed be the Lord out of Zion, that dwelleth at Ieruſalem. Pſal. 134. was concluded, The Lord bleſſe thee out of Zion, Here bleſſed be the Lord out of Zion; he that bleſſeth, is to have bleſſings and praiſes ſounded forth unto him, out of his Church; that is, every Congregation of the faithfull. And if yee would know where this Lord is, he reſolveth it by ſaying, That dwelleth at Ieruſalem; according to other places, where it is ſaid, This is my Habitation, here will I dwell, ſhewing my care continually over my Church, as my houſhold. Halalujah, this is as well ſet to at the end, as prefixed in beginning, being to the ſame effect with Amen; ſo Ainſworth.

PSAL. CXXXVI.

THere is little difference betwixt this Pſalme and the former, only here the motive, whereby we ſhould be moved to praiſe God, For his mercy indureth for ever, is repeated in every verſe. Ierom will have God of Gods, and Lord of Lords, Verſe 2, 3. to ſet forth God the Father and the Son; who becauſe they are not more, but one God only, it is added, Verſe 4. To him who alone doth great wonders. Verſe 23. Who remembred us in our low eſtate. Here as if he could never praiſe God enough, for the deliverance of his people out of Ægypt, he recounts the ſame mercy again, by the name of remembring them in their low Eſtate; that is, moſt grievous bondage and oppreſſions, to bring them out from them.

Hieron.
Verſ. 2, 3

Verſ. 25. That giveth food to all fleſh. That is, not only his people, but all other men, and not only men, but Beaſts and Cattell, as was ſhewed before, Pſal. 104. which is added, that his faithfull people might not doubt, being provided for in reſpect of food neceſſary for them. The like argument is uſed by Chriſt, Matth. 6. 26. Behold the Fowles of the Aire, &c.

PSAL.

PSAL. CXXXVII

THis Pſalme was made by ſome godly man, in the time of the Babylonian Captivity, which was long, even ſeventy yeares, and therefore they had need of ſomething to ſtir them up, not to fall from their religion, being overcome by the tediouſneſſe of their exile, or being allured by the pleaſantneſſe and fruitfulneſſe of that Country. The Vulgar Latine prefixeth for the Title, A Pſalme of David: when as indeed it hath none; and as Calvin noteth, there is no probability that it is Davids who lived ſo long before; but rather ſome other holy man, living then in Babylon, and ſpeaking both in his own and the Iewes living there; becauſe when David ſpeaketh in a propheticall way, he ſpeaketh not thus, but in another manner. Whereby one may perceive it to be propheticall, whoſoever made this, doth firſt in it ſet forth their ſorrow and miſery in thoſe dayes, Verſe 1, 2, 3, 4. And here becauſe it is ſaid, We hanged up our Harps, &c. Calvin. Baſil moveth a queſtion, Baſil. how it came to paſſe, that being carryed away by their Enemies in hoſtile manner, they could be permitted to carry their muſicall Inſtruments with them, or had any mind in that time of mourning ſo to do? and anſwereth, that it was by a divine diſpenſation, the Babylonians in permitting them, reſpecting nothing, but to make themſelves merry, to make them play hereupon, even then, when they had more cauſe to weep; as the Philiſtims brought forth Samſon their Captive ſometime to play before them. For the River by which they ſat, it is to be underſtood, that the great River Euphrates ran through Babylon, and of this it is meant, and of the Willowes growing here, as they commonly do about Rivers, upon which they hanged up their Harps, reſerving them to ſome more joyfull time, when returning to Ieruſalem again, they might uſe them in praiſing God, as they had formerly done; and to keep up the memory of that pious cuſtome, God in his providence would not have them to be there without them, nor to paſſe all their time without any ſolace hereby, when they were in private amongſt themſelves, though before their Enemies to make themſelves a laughing ſtock, they refuſed to do it, as followeth, Verſe 3, 4. Verſ. 2. Secondly their ſingular affection to Ieruſalem, the holy City and place of Gods Habitation. Verſe 5, 6. Verſ. 5, 6. Yet if I forget the O Ieruſalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. Here are direfull imprecations, wherewith he curſeth himſelfe, that made this Pſalme, to move others to the like affections, if he took joy in any thing, till that the people being reſtored, fell to the building of Ieruſalem again. Verſ. 7, 8, 9. Laſtly, here is a Prayer againſt Edom and Babylon: and if it be demanded, why Edom is ſo much inveighed againſt, we may gather from many places, that although Eſau, of whom they came, were Iſraels Brother, yet they were moſt infeſt Enemies to Iſrael, and when the Babylonians came againſt the Iewes, they ſtirred them up all that they could againſt them, without any favour to exerciſe all cruelty, as Obadiah. 1. 8. 9. &c. Ezek. 25. 12. Ier. 49. 7. Lam. 4. 12. wherefore juſtly is God prayed to take revenge upon them, as well as upon Babylon, and accordingly it was both threatned by Iſaiah, and other Prophets; and hiſtory ſheweth that it came to paſſe.

PSAL. CXXXVIII.

A Pſalme of David, wherein he praiſeth God for ſaving him according to his word given him, propheſieth that all Kings ſhall do the like. Verſ. 4. And from hence he draweth matter of praiſe, in that though the Lord be moſt high, yet he reſpecteth the lowly; and any of his, being in miſery, he will not ſuffer to lye ſo alwayes, but deliver them; and having begun this good Verſ. 6.

work, he will undoubtedly perfect it.

Verſ. 7. 8.

Verſ. 1. Calvin. I will ſing unto thee before the Gods: vulg. Before the Angells: and Calvin acknowledgeth, that the Angells moſt probably are meant, who are intimated to be in the Congregation of Gods people, 1 Cor. 11. ſo that in ſaying before them, he meaneth publickly: yet he ſaith, it may not unaptly be applyed to Kings and Judges, who are the principall in Congregations; but becauſe in every congregation the Angells are preſent, but Kings rarely, the firſt is to be preferred: unleſſe we ſhall ſay, that Kings heard the word of God, touching his Son Chriſt, by his Pſalmes coming unto them; unto which we may the rather agree, becauſe Verſe 4. it is ſayd, All the Kings of the Earth ſhall heare thy words.

Verſ. 2. Thou haſt magnified above all thy name thy word: Vulg. Lat. Thou haſt magnified above all things thy holy name: Calvin, Thou haſt magnified above all things thy Name by thy word: And he alleadgeth another reading of ſome: Thou haſt magnified above all things thy Name and thy Word: Which he rejecteth as frigid, and yet concludeth, that the meaning is, thou haſt magnified thy name above all things, by making good thy word, thy Promiſe, becauſe that hereby God hah more Honour then by any thing elſe. Ainſworth following the firſt reading, giveth this for the ſenſe; above all the names whereby thou art known, thou haſt magnified thy word of Promiſe, touching Chriſt. Junius, Thou magnifieſt with all thy name thy word: But Hebr. it is, עַל above: and whereas Calvin hath it, In thy word, In, is underſtood. Any other reading the Hebrew may well be brought unto, but I preferre the firſt: and Ainſworth thereupon, becauſe the words כל־שמך are joyned together, and therefore the firſt word כל is not to be taken from שם as ſignifying all things, but as conjoined to be rendred, All thy name: as is before done.

Ainſworth.

Junius.

Verſ. 4. Calvin. All the Kings of the Earth ſhall praiſe thee O Lord, when they hear the words of thy mouth: This is by Calvin underſtood of the Kings then living, to whoſe eares the fame of Gods promiſe and performance to David coming, they could not but confeſſe him to be his praiſe to be moſt mighty and juſt. But becauſe the words of God to David extended to Chriſt, it is rather to be held, that the meaning is, that the time ſhall come, when even Kings all over the world ſhall hear and beleive the word of God, and ſhall ſing in the wayes of the Lord, for great is the Glory of the Lord. Thus alſo Auguſt. who compareth the Earth unto Gedeons floore, and the Jews to his fleece; the dew fell firſt upon the fleece, and all the floore was dry; ſo the knowledge of God, and the dew of Heavenly Doctrine was a long time amongſt the Jewes only, the Nations of the earth being all dry, and without this Heavenly dew of divine Doctrine; but at length, the floor was wet, and the fleece was dry; The Jews, to whom the Oracles had been committed, were left without the comfort of them, and they were publiſhed in all kingdomes of the Earth: Then all Kings of the Earth heard the words of the Lord, and ſung as other ordinary Chriſtians, In the wayes of the Lord, thatis, Righteouſneſs and and Truth, of which they now have comfortable Experience, Great is the Glory of the Lord, not their own Glory; they falling down now in all humility to praiſe God, for which it is added Verſe 5. Although the Lord be high, yet he reſpecteth the lowly. Jerom, by Kings here, underſtandeth ſuch, as get the dominion over ſin, not Kings properly ſo called; for Nero did not ſing thus, nor Iulian, &c. I confeſs, that ſuch are indeed ſayd to be Kings, He hath made us Kings and Preiſts to our God; But there is no cauſe of turning that which is here ſaid to all the Saints: For although many Kings have been, and are moſt wicked, yet it is truly ſaid, All the Kings of the Earth, &c. Firſt for their outward profeſſion, to which they ſhould in time be brought. Secondly, becauſe in all parts of the Earth ſome Kings have been Godly, although generally hardned at the firſt by infidelity, and of all theſe Kings this is ſpoken, not of all without exception. So Eſa 49. 23. Kings ſhall be thy

Verſ. 5. Auguſt.

Verſ. 6. Hieron.

Rev. 1. 6.

Nurſing

Nurſing Fathers, and Queens thy nurſing Mothers.

Although I walk in the midſt of trouble, thou wilt revive me: Here David in his example commendeth to all the humble certain confidence, even when they are moſt oppreſſed with miſery, and ſee no way to be brought out; for now eſpecially is the time that God chooſeth to work for his greater Glory in delivering his, as Daniell out of the Lions Den, the three Children out of the fiery furnace, and Jonah out of the Whales belly. Verſ: 7.

The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me: Hebr. The Lord will retribute upon me, or towards me: But it is commonly expounded, will bring to perfection the good work of Deliverance, which he hath begun towards me, as the next words ſhew, that it muſt be expounded, Thy mercy endures for ever, forſake not the works of thine own hands: Give it not over til thou haſt perfected it. Thus alſo Calvin, who renders it, Retribue, expounds it. Verſ. 8. Calvin.

PSAL. CXXXIX.

To him that Excelleth, a Pſalme of David.

OF this Title ſee often before. Thou haſt proved me O Lord, and known me: What ſaith Baſil here, doth not God know, without trying and ſearching? And anſwers, yes, but it is thus ſpoken, to ſhew, that he knoweth moſt exactly, nothing that is in man lying hid from him, although kept in greateſt ſecreſy; even as a dark room by men ſearched with lights in every corner, nothing can lye hid in it, but it is found out: to expreſſe which further, the Lord ſaith, Zeph. 1. 12. I will ſearch Jeruſalem with lights; for all things are naked & manifeſt to God, with whom we have to do, therefore it is thus ſpoken only for further expreſſion. Verſ. 1. Baſil. Heb. 4. 13.

Now David beginneth, and proceedeth far in this Pſalme in ſhewing Gods exact knowledge of all things, in him, and in every man, becauſe he was about to appeale to God, touching the high eſteem that he had all his thoughts and wayes in, and the hatred that was in him of all the wicked enemies of God, of which ſee, Verſe 17. 18. and Verſe 21. that it was thus with him in ſincerity.

Thou knoweſt my ſitting down, and my upriſing, and my thoughts afar off: Auguſt. applyeth this to Chriſt, as if it were meant of his death and reſurrection; and to the Faithfull, as ſpoken of his lying down oppreſſed by ſin, & humbling himſelf therefore, and riſing up again with Comfort for the Forgiveneſſe thereof. But I paſſe this over, as more witty then ſolid, becauſe all things in this Pſalme agree well to David, but ſome of them not to Chriſt, becauſe there was no ſin in him, for which he ſhould have any thoughts of hiding ought that was in him from God; but David did ſomething ſometime in ſecret, which he ſought by all means to hide. In ſaying therefore, Thou knoweſt my ſitting and riſing, he meaneth, that the Lord knew, what he did when he was at home and abroad, and what Cogitations were in his mind being by himſelf and in his bed. For the word rendred Thoughts, it ſignifieth companions, or friends; and therefore is by Ainſworth rendred, My familiar thoughts: however it is to be conceived, that the Hebrewes do thus call thoughts, becauſe they are commonly with us, and delighted in, as familiar freinds. Now he ſaith, God knoweth them, as well as we our ſelves, that we may take heed how we diſſemble with him; and he knoweth them afar off, that we may not think, that the great diſtance between Heaven, the ſeat of Gods Majeſty, and Earth where we are, can hinder him from ſeeing into, and knowing our very hearts. Verſ. 2. Auguſt. Ainſworth. Note:

Thou haſt beſet me behinde and before, and layd thy hand upon me: Hebr. Thou haſt ſtreightned me, Like one kept in a place alwayes in view, that he cannot Verſ. 5.

cannot goe backward nor forward, and ſo be out of ſight, and this is done by Gods hand or power who thus holdeth every man.

Verſ. 6. Such knowledge is too wonderfull for me, I cannot attain unto it: That is, If I ſhould inquire how this can be, that God ſhould exactly know mine, and the Deeds, Words, and Thoughts of every man, becauſe neither I nor any other Man can doe the like, touching any one Man, I ſhould in vaine make ſuch an inquiry; and ſo ſhall any one, that would meaſure Gods knowledge by his own Module, when as indeed it it is tranſcendent, and above all humane capacity, how he ſhould know theſe things. Wherefore we muſt by faith beleeve it, and reverently admire his knowledge therefore as infinite, and by us incomprehenſible, and ſo live, and think, ſpeak, and do, as they that cannot whitherſoever they go, be out of Gods ſight at any time, who is a moſt ſevere Judge againſt all ſin.

Note.

Verſ. 7, 8. Verſe 7, 8. &c. are nothing elſe but a collection, or inference made upon the premiſes, Verſ. 5. for if I be held ſo ſtreightly, that I can neither move backward nor forward, I ſhall think in vain of fleeing away to hide me. And whereas ſpeaking of Heaven and Hell, and the Seas, he ſaith, Thou art there, nothing elſe is meant hereby, but thou art every where to ſee me; ſo that a man going any whether by changing his place is ſtill confined to Godward, being as it were kept alwayes in one ſtreight place open to his view. Of the wings of the morning he ſpeaks figuratively, alluding to the morning ſtar, which is now on the one ſide of the Sea, and in a ſhort time on the other, as if it had wings wherewith to fly with greateſt ſwiftneſs to and fro.

Verſ. 13. Thou haſt poſſeſſed my reines, thou haſt covered me in my Mothers womb: To make that which was ſaid before more credible, David here bringeth an argument from Gods making of him, and therefore ſeeing, and knowing, and holding him in his hand, when he was in his Mothers womb, and therefore how ſhould he be hid from him now living, and going up and down in the world, there being no place wherein a man can be in greater ſecrecy then there.

Verſ. 14. I am fearfully and wonderfully made, and that my Soul knoweth right well: Man for the wonderfullneſſe of his frame is called by the Philoſopher μικρὸς κόσμος, a littie world; but this is ſpoken, not only in reſpect of the Body, but alſo of the underſtanding beyond all other terreſtriall creatures in him; having a head to conceive and invent, and a tongue to ſpeak and argue, and hands to act beyond them all. But if the frame of man be ſo miraculous, how ſaith he thathe knoweth it very well? He meaneth not ſaith Calvin, that he had the exact knowledge, how God proceeded in making man ſo many wayes ſo admirable, as Philoſophers take upon them to know the cauſes of all things; but only knew, he was thus made by God, not to paſſe over ſuch wonderfull works of his without admiring and praiſing of his power and wiſdome ſhewed herein.

Calvin

Verſ. 15. My ſubſtance was not hid from thee, when I was made in ſecret, and curiouſly wrought in the lower parts of the Earth.

Verſ. 16. My ſubſtance being yet imperfect, in thy booke were all my members written: Here he amplifieth this argument begun, Verſe. 13. that God knoweth and ſeeth every man in every place. For he ſaw my matter, of which, being at the firſt a kind of confuſed Chaos, I was formed ſo excellent in all my parts and lineaments, even when I was but an Embrio, and ſtill in a ſecret place, my Mothers womb: and theſe words, In the lower parts of the Earth, are added, in oppoſition to Heaven above, the vaſt diſtance not hindering God from ſeeing me even then and there. For his members writing in a booke, this is ſpoken, not that God hath a Booke in which to write, but to ſhew what a care he had, that in framing him, there might be no limb or part deficient, or amiſſe formed, their number and form being as exactly ſet down in Gods providence before, as if they had been written and deſcribed in a booke.

How

How precious are thy thoughts to me O Lord, how great is the ſumme of them? Now he ſheweth how greatly his heart was taken up with a moſt high eſtimation, and unſpeakable love towards God, in the conſideration of theſe things and innumerable more; to which his wiſdome and Providence dayly extendeth: The Vulg. For Thoughts, hath Freinds, How honored of me are thy friends O God, their Principalities are very much comforted; Hebr. the word רעיך ſignifieth Freinds, as was ſaid before, and the word יקרו rendred Precious, ſignifieth either precious or honored, & ראשי rendred Summ, Heads; & עצמו rendred Great, Strong or mighty, ſo that if we render it verbatim, as the words are moſt commonly taken, it goeth thus, how honored of me are thy freinds how mighty are their heads? And to this agreeth the Cald. Par. How honorable are they that love thee O God? how are their Princes fortified? And this is followed generally by the Ancients, and for it makes that which followeth, Ver 19, 20, 21, 22. Slay the Wicked, they ſpeake againſt me wickedly, thine enemies take thy name in vain. Doe not I hate them O Lord that hate thee? For having finiſhed his diſcourſe touching Gods works towards him, and made profeſſion of his faith, that he beleeved that God knew his very heart, now out of the truth of his heart, he cometh to make profeſſion of his entire love towards all that were like minded, calling them the freinds of God, as on the contrary ſide, he profeſſeth to hate the Wicked and Hypocrites, who were contrary minded, taking haply Gods name into their mouthes, and pretending piety towards him; but this being nothing elſe in them but a taking of his name in vain, if any ſhal rather prefer the former reading, he may follow that which his own judgment leadeth him to; but then ther wil not be ſo good acoherence betwixt theſe words and thoſe following, V 19, 20. &c. But if we follow the next, we ſhall both keep cloſer to the Heb. words, & the coherence wil be better. If it be ſaid, but the words of v1. 8. If I count them, they are more in number then the Sands, ſhew plainly, that by heads before ſpoken of Sums, or numbers of thoughts are meant in the former words; I anſwer, theſe words will as well agree, if we take it of ſuch as love God, and turne to him as freinds, for theſe are ſet forth, Pſal. 110. 3. to be as many, as the dew covering the Earth, and in Judea alone. When the Goſpell was firſt preached, it is ſaid, there were many Myriads that beleived, and of all Nations innumerable that were ſealed; and it is ſaid to Abraham, Gen. 13. 16. that his ſeed ſhould be as the duſt, for the hatred wherewith he ſaith, that he hateth Gods Enemies, he meaneth, that his love to God and his freinds was ſo great that he conſorted not with any other, but was vexed and greived, as Lot, at the unclean converſation of the Sodomites, not faining an hatred againſt them, but loving them indeed, but perfectly and really hating them for this their Wickedneſs. But this is to be made a rule in caſe of incorrigibility, otherwiſe whilſt there is hope, that is to be followed, 2 Theſ. 3. 15. Yet reject him not as an enemy, but admoniſh him as a Brother. For the clauſe of V 18. When I awake I am ſtill with thee: The meaning is, whilſt I live here I am in thy preſence, ſo when as I ſhal ſleep by the ſleep of death, and wake again at the reſurrection, I ſhall be for ever in thy preſence, ſee the like Pſal. 15. 17. ſo alſo the Cald. Paraph. As he began, Thou haſt proved and known me: Verſe 1, ſo he concludeth, appealing to God again, Search me, and prove me, &c. as who ſhould ſay, in what I have ſpoken, I paſſe not for mans teſtimony whether it be true or no; but upon thee do I put my ſelfe, O Lord, for tryall, who I know, wilt herein give teſtimony on my ſide, and I pray thee ſtil to lead me on in this way, and of all virtue to the end, and finally bring me to everlaſting life.

Verſ. 17.

Cald. paraph.

Verſ. 19, 20. 21, 22.

Act. 21. Revel. 7.

Verſ. 21.

2 Pet. 2. 8.

PSAL.

PSAL. CXL.

THis Pſalme having the ſame title with the former, is a prayer againſt Davids malicious enemies, who raild upon him, and laid wait to inſnare him, and fought againſt him, but that God covered his head, Verſe 7. and finally he promiſeth himſelf an hearing, ending in this confidence with praiſe V. 12. 13.

Calvin. It is in argument much like to Pſalme 120. ſome ſaith Calvin, think it to have beene made againſt Doeg, but this is rightly rejected by him, becauſe Saul, and others his Sycophants, wrought continually againſt him, both by deeds and words, ſo that moſt probably he complaineth of them all. and prayeth againſt them: Moreover, there is a Pſalme before againſt Doeg, Viz. Pſalme 52.

Verſ. 3. They have ſharpned their tongues like a Serpent: ſo ſpoken, becauſe the tongue of a Serpent is ſharp and peircing, and the Poiſon of aſpes, is further ſpoken of, to ſhew, that there was as much danger in their venemous ſpeeches, as in moſt deadly poiſon.

Verſ. 7. Thou haſt covered my head in the day of battell, Hebr. Of armour, For David had never indeed any battell with Saul, but declined it; but Saul often armed againſt him; but then Gods providence covered him as a ſheild: but the head is only ſpoken of, to ſet forth his whole Body, becauſe that is cheifly aimed at by the enemy, as wherein the life principally lyeth.

Verſ. 9. Of this word, rendred Gall, ſee Pſalme 69. Verſe 22. For the head of thoſe that compaſſe me about, let the miſcheife of their own lips cover them: Hebr. the head or gall of my beſeigers, and labour, or trouble of their lips let cover them, God, he ſaith, had covered his head in the day of battell: Now contrariwiſe he ſheweth, what ſhould cover the head of his enemies, viz. it ſhould come to them, as with their lips they had maliciouſly ſpoken againſt him: for it may be thus rendred: the head of my beſeiger, let the trouble of his lips cover it: for curſing, let him be covered with Curſing, as with a cloake.

Verſ. 10. Let coales of fire fall upon them, he ſhall caſt them into deepe places; they ſhall not riſe: Or let coales fall upon them, he ſhall caſt them into the fire: for either reading is good: It is alluded to the burning of Sodom, and ſeemeth to have reference to the ſending of the wicked into hell fire at the day of Judgment, ſee Rom. 12. 20.

Let not an evill ſpeaker be eſtabliſht: Hebr. A man of tongue: For in a multitude of words ther ecannot want ſin; therefore it is given in charge, Be ſwift to heare, ſlow to ſpeake. Of keeping the tongue, ſee Pſalme 39. 1.

PSAL. CXLI.

THis Pſalme is altogether Prayer, Firſt for acceptation, that his praying might be as incenſe; of which Exod. 30. and the lifting up of his hands, by which words he ſetteth forth Prayer again by the geſture uſed herein, as the evening ſacrifice of which Exod. 29. 39. but the word is מנחה Meate offering; which conſiſted of fine flowre and oile, together with which a lamb was offered, but one part is put for all. But forſomuch as there was a morning ſacrifice as well as evening, why doth he not make his compariſon as well from that? Ainſworth, he putteth incenſe for the whole in the morning, and Minchah for the whole in the evening, not that one only was offered at one time and onother at the other, for all were offered at both; but but the Sacrifice of the evening was the more notable in reſpect of the great Feaſt of the Paſſe-over, beginning in the evening, which is called a Sacrifice alſo, and had its Meat-offering annexed to it, and when this Feaſt was firſt kept, the Children of Iſrael had a great deliverance the ſame night, and therefore it is aptly prayed, thus to imply a deliverance from his enemies to follow upon this his praying. Of lifting up of hands put for prayer, ſee Exod. 17. · Numb. 6. 28 16. 17, 18.

2. He prayeth to be kept from evill words; Set a watch before the doore of my mouth; a Metaphoricall ſpeech, implying, that to the end we may be kept from ſinning with our mouthes, God muſt keep them, ſo prone is every one to offend this way; therefore David having vowed againſt ſinning thus, Pſal. 39. now being conſcious to his owne weakneſſe, commendeth the care of this to God; how prone every one is to ſinne with his tongue, ſee Jam. 3. Verſ. 3.

3. He prayeth to be kept from evil deeds; Incline not mine heart to any evill thing, to practice wicked workes with the workers of iniquity, let me not eate of their dainties. And here to prevent evill deeds, he firſt prayeth againſt evil thoughts, from whence they come, Matth. 15. 19. But what is eating of their dainties? Calvin anſwereth well, their delights, for it is very delightfull to the wicked to doe evill, and by the pleaſure that is herein, as by dainties, men are moved to eate even to their hurt; ſo by theſe pleaſures, they are faſcinated to ſinne to the deſtruction of the ſoule. The Chald. underſtands it of their Songs at their ryotous feaſts; Or by their dainties underſtand Idolatrous ſacrifices. Verſ. 4. Calvin. Cald. Paraph.

4 He prayeth, in caſe that he offends by word or deed, that the righteous may ſmite him, Let him reprove me, it ſhal be an excellent oyl, it ſhal not break my head, Heb. Let the righteous ſmite me in clemency, or mildly, let precious or head-oyle reprove me, it ſhal not oppreſſe, or do violence to my head. According to which it is ſaid, Gal. 6. 1. If any be ſalne by infirmity, ye that are ſpirituall reſtore him in the ſpirit of meekneſſe. But here may ſeem to be a contradiction, in that he prayeth that ſuch may ſmite him, by a word implying ſmiting, as with an hammer, Pſal. 47. 6. Judg. 5. 26. ſharp rebuke, Prov. 23. 35. 9. 8. 35. 12, 28. 23. Zech. 13. 6, and yet in mildneſſe. This is well anſwered by Calvin, it is the mildneſſe of the heart, and the tender love and care that this Smiter hath, though ſharp in words, of the good of the party reproved by him; Head-oyle is put for principall, and moſt precious Oyle, and the reproofes of ſuch are likened to the beſt Oyle, in oppoſition to the flatteries of the wicked, theſe healing, they skinning over, as it were, and making the ſoare of ſinne more dangerous; ſo that although violence may ſeeme to be done to thee, by the ſharp reproofes, and caſtigations of the righteous, as he hath power to proceed by the one, or the other, or by both, yet indeed it is no oppreſſion, or violence, to hurt thy head, that is, thee, in thy ſoule, which is thy principall part; but to heale thee, as by a precious Ballum applyed to a dangerous wound, for ſuch is ſinne to the ſoule, and if by the reproofe of the righteous thou beeſt not amended, it will be thy death, and that everlaſtingly. For yet my prayer ſhall be in their miſeries; that is, although the righteous ſeeme to deale harſhly with me for my ſinnes, either by ſharp reproofe, or otherwiſe chaſtening me, yet I will not, as one exaſperated hereby, curſe, or raile upon them, and, if they fall into miſery, inſult over them, as juſtly thus met withall; but as for ſuch as I dearly love, I will pray for them, that they may be comforted in miſery, and delivered. Verſ. 5. Calvin. Note.

Some take it either thus, or as meant of the wicked before ſpoken, rendring the former words, Let not the oyle of the head oppreſſe my head; That is, the flatteries of the chiefe of them be a meanes to make me ſinne, which way if they ſeeke to move me, or howſoever, I will pray againſt their wicked practiſes, that they may not prevaile, or have any force to taint me with ſinne; But I reſt in the former, yet not excluding this for the next words. Ainſw.

When their Judges ſhall be over-throwne in ſtony places, they ſhall heare my words, for they are ſweet, Hebr. their Judges are falne head-long in the hands of a rocke, they ſhall heare my words, &c. which ſeeme to have reference to the laſt words of verſe 5. I will pray in their evils, as the word ſignifieth; or againſt Verſ. 6.

them, that they may be turned here-from; and the time ſhall come, when their Rulers that lead them thus headlong on againſt me, meant by Judges, ſhall cruelly periſh, as men caſt head-long downe from a rocke, and then the common people ſhall entertaine a better opinion of me, and heare my words, to acknowledge me innocent, although thus hotly perſecuted for a time, and a true Prophet and Servant of God, to follow my inſtructions, as ſweet and excellent, although now contemned. For the common people being without judgement, are carried in multitudes againſt any man, although ſet up of God, and choſen of him, as their Princes, and ſuch as have power lead them; in doing which, although they are not excuſed a toto, yet they are a tanto; and ſo there is hope, if theſe their Leaders be over-throwne, that they will come to a better minde, and ſubmit to him, whom God hath choſen. Let not therefore judicium populi, which is nothing, be our rule to walke by, but fore-ſeeing the over-throw that is coming upon their Leaders, which cannot but be with the ruine of them alſo; let us pray againſt ſuch evill practiſes, and decline them, and heare the words as ſweet, which tend to dehort us here-from, before that to our greater ſmart we ſhall be made ſo to doe, whither we will or no.

Note.

Verſ. 7. Verſ. 8. As one that cutteth and cleaveth, our bones are ſcattered at the Graves month, &c. Feare not my ſoule, deſtitute. Here is the fifth thing that David prayeth for, promiſing a Declaration of his, and his mens moſt dangerous caſe, they being as wood cut in peeces in their bones, and lying thus all mangled at the Graves mouth; whereby he intimateth not at once ſuffering of death, but being cut peece by peece, and ſo brought unto it, after the manner of ſome Martyrs, who have had their bones broken, and then have been killed; yet he truſted in God, and prayeth, Leave not my ſoule naked, as the word ſignifieth, that is, without the cover of thy protection, whereby I may be preſerved and comforted. And in ſpeaking ſo of his dangers, he looketh not at what was done already, but what was every day ready to come upon him and his.

PSAL. CXLII.

THis Pſalme, as the title ſheweth, was made by David, when he was hid in a Cave, into which Saul entred unwillingly to doe his eaſement, 1 Sam. 24. inſtead of taking this advantage to kill him, he now falleth to prayer, and was heard accordingly, as the Hiſtory ſheweth.

Verſ. 3 When my ſpirit was over-whelmed within me, thou kneweſt my path; That is, when I in ſo apparent danger ſtood aſtoniſhed, not knowing which way to take to eſcape Sauls hands, thou kneweſt by what way or meanes I ſhould come out againe; and this was by holding Sauls eyes, that he might not ſee him or his men, being foure hundred in the way wherein I walked, they privily laid a ſnare for me; ſo that if I had had none other way of eſcaping but my owne, of keeping aloofe in the Wilderneſſe, I ſhould certainly have come into Sauls hands, who had his Spyes, like ſnares ſet in every place to diſcover him, that he might be taken.

Bring me out of priſon, &c. This he ſpake of the Cave, which he counted as a Priſon, becauſe there was no way to get out, but at the entrance, where Saul & his men were, although Calvin thinketh this too reſtrained, holding that by priſon he meant all his ſtreights in generall; but ſince he had no cauſe to except againſt it, conſidering that the Cave is expreſly named in the title, ſhewing whereupon it was, that he ſpake thus of David, when Abſalom perſecuted him.

PSAL

PSAL. CXLIII.

THis Pſalme of David moſt aptly anſwereth to the former, for there he ſheweth, that he prayed, repeating it twice verſe 1. here he twice ſaith, Heare my prayer, give eare to my ſupplication; There verſe 3. When my ſpirit was over-whelmed within me; Here verſe 4. My ſpirit is over-whelmed within me, only he is in this more full, but all things are eaſie to be underſtood, and need no expoſition; And for the title, prefixed by vulgar Latine, and being ſo like the former, it is rather held that it was made upon the ſame occaſion.

PSAL. CXLIV.

THis Pſalme of David beginneth like Pſalme 18. but whereas there he deſcribeth Gods wonderfull coming to ſave him, and his people, from verſe 8. to verſe 18. here he prayeth in ſome of the ſame Phraſes, that he would come ſo to ſave him from his enemies, verſe 5, 6, 7. calling them the Sonnes of ſtrangers, as Pſal. 18. 44. where ſee the meaning. But before he cometh to this, verſe 2, 3. he borroweth ſomewhat out of Pſalme 8. but after praying againſt his enemies, verſe 7. he deſcribeth them further, verſe 8. ſaying, Whoſe mouth ſpeaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of iniqnity, or of falſhood; whereby he meaneth, that as they were ready to promiſe any thing, although they meant not in their hearts to doe ſo, and what they ſpake thus falſly with their mouthes, they did not ſtick to give their right hands to performe it, but in both they were falſe and fraudulent alike.

Verſ. 1, 2,
Verſ. 5, 6, 7.
Verſe 2.
Verſ. 3.
Verſ. 8.

Some bring other expoſitions, but becauſe it is common with men, that they may be the better truſted, to reach out, and give their right hand for more aſſurance, this of Calvin ſeemeth beſt to me, and fully to ſet forth the ſence. For the Pſaltery, and inſtrument of ten ſtrings, ſee Pſal. 33. 2.

Calvin.

That our ſons may be plants, grown up in their youth, &c. Calv. Becauſe our ſonnes are as plants; As if it were meant, that they were now ſo, and it were here deſired that they may ſtill ſo continue; but moſt generally it is underſtood as a bleſſing to come, which the Prophet promiſed himſelfe and the people ſhould be, when the things before ſpoken of were done, and this is moſt conſonant to the argument of the Pſalme, intimating ſome troubles then in the Land, to hinder the happineſſe here ſpoken of; and the word כִּי may be rendred either, becauſe, or that. Theſe here ſpoken of are worldly bleſſings, and great bleſſings, but the greateſt of all is the laſt mentioned, to have the Lord for our God.

Verſ. 9.
Verſ. 12.

PSAL. CXLV.

THis is intituled a Pſalme of Praiſe, and like unto it are all the reſt to the end of the Pſalmes. Here David beginneth with generall praiſes, wherewith both he and all men praiſed God, to verſe 8. where he brings an argument of praiſe from Exod. 34. 6. The Lord is gracious, full of compaſſion, &c. as Pſalm 103. 8. and in magnifying his mercy further he ſaith, His tender mercies are above all his workes; and, the Lord is good to all, hereby meaning, that Gods mercy extendeth to every thing that he hath made, to feed and preſerve it, and not, as it is commonly taken, that which he doth in mercy excelleth all other things that he doth. although this be true alſo, for there is no worke comparable to that ſhewed in Jeſus Chriſt. But to ſhew, that here mercy is meant towards all, verſe 10. he ſaith, All thy workes praiſe thee; and verſe 14, 15, 16. the two things which have before been ſpoken of, preſerving and feeding are ſpecified, as Verſe 8.

Verſ. 9.
Verſ. 10.

the matter of their praiſe, of the latter of which ſee before, Pſal. 104. 17

Verſ. 17. 2 He praiſeth him for his righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe, in all his wayes and workes. 3 For his hearing thoſe that pray unto him, whereby wee ſhould be ſtirred up ſo to doe, and to praiſe him, but they muſt be ſuch as Verſ. 20. feare him. 4 For his ſpeciall providence over his friends and Lovers to preſerve them; the vulgar alſo to this Pſalme prefixeth David againſt Goliab.

PSAL. CXLVI.

HEre is an Exhortation to himſelfe to praiſe God, as Pſal. 103 and to us all, not to truſt in man, but in Almighty God, who is commended to us, 1 From his workes of Creation, verſ. 6. 2 The truth of Verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4. his promiſes; 3 His juſtice towards the oppreſſed. 4 His feeding the hungry. 5 His looſing the Priſoners. 6 His giving ſight to the blinde.

Verſe 6. 7 His lifting up of thoſe be bowed downe. 8 His love to the righteous, Verſ. 7. who doe bleſſe and praiſe him. 9 His charity to ſtrangers, fatherleſſe, and Verſ. 8. widowes. 10 His over-turning the wayes of the wicked. And leſt it

Verſ. 9. ſhould be thought God indeed hath done this, but will he doe ſo ever,

Verſ. 10. verſe 10. he concludeth, The Lord ſhall reigne for ever, even thy God (O Zion) to all Generations. So that whoſoever to the worlds end putteth his truſt in him, as his caſe ſhall require, ſhall finde him ready in any miſery to helpe him. In vulgar Latine before this, and Pſal. 147. and 148. is prefixed for title Halalujah, of Haggai and Zechariah, but Hebr. there is no title prefixed, but the firſt word of every of them is Halalujah, and the like of Pſalm 149. 150. It is conceived by Jerom to have been made after the peoples returne from Babylon, the laſt words, verſe 10. being by him underſtood, as a joyfull acclamation made thereupon, it being gathered, that the God of Zion, who had done ſo great things for her, ſhall alwayes continue, as a moſt mighty King, protecting her; that is, his Church for ever; and therefore he doth not only proſecute the literall ſence, which ſpeaketh what he hath done for the oppreſſed Jewes, making good his promiſes, looſing them, and lifting them up that were ſo low, giving their eyes light of comfort for the darkneſſe of ſorrow, and ſhewing them mercy in a ſtrange Land, many of them being fatherleſſe and widowes, and theſe he ſetteth forth by the name of the righteous, becauſe peculiarly choſen, and ſanctified. to be his owne people, but the wicked Babylonians he over-turned; for having ſpoken to this effect of corporeall bleſſings, he ſaith further, that Chriſt was the truth here ſpoken of, and deliverance from oppreſſion is from ſinne and Satan, looſing Priſoners, the captives of ſinne, feeding the hungry with the ſpirituall food of his Word, opening the blindes eyes, who were blinde in their underſtanding, kindneſſe-ſhewing to ſtrangers, by bringing ſtrangers to the Common-wealth of Iſrael into the Covenant of Grace; and to fatherleſſe and widowes, thoſe that were without God to their Father, and Husband; and therefore he noteth, that Hebrew, it is not giving light to the blinde, but giving wiſdome to them, ſo he; but פקח is opening the eyes of the blinde, indeed there is no word ſignifying eyes, but opening the blinde, which is the ſame in effect, but may as well be referred to the underſtanding, as to the eyes, and that of Jerom will be made good.

Hieron.

Moreover he noteth, that touching the widow and fatherleſſe it is not ſaid, Cuſtodiet, he will keep, but ſuſcipiet, he will undertake, or receive them returning. Hebr. it is יעודד, he will eſtabliſh, for ſuch as he receiveth are eſtabliſhed; as on the contrary ſide, the wicked over-thrown, of which alſo it is, Pſal. 147.

PSAL.

PSAL. CXLVII.

THis Pſalme is in vulgar Latine divided into two, viz. 146. and 147. beginning at verſe twelve, and ſo that tranſlation cometh in fine to the ſame number of Pſalmes with ours, Pſal. 146. being there, Pſal. 145. but take we it as it is Hebr. for one Pſalme conſiſting of twenty verſes. He proceedeth herein as he did, Pſal. 146, viz. after exhortation to praiſe God, in the title he bringeth arguments, or layeth downe grounds of praiſe;

1 It is good, it is comely; 2. The Lord buildeth Jeruſalem, and gathereth together the out-caſts of Iſrael; which, if the Pſalme were made by Haggai, and Zechary, as was ſaid before upon Pſal. 146. may well be expounded of the building of Jeruſalem after their returne out of captivity, when the Jewes were called, the out-caſts of Iſrael were come againe to Jeruſalem, in Nehemiah his time, who built walls about the City, being much oppoſed, but yet by Gods help in a ſhort time perfecting that worke. Jerom underſtands it of the Church under the Goſpel, and likewiſe the next words: Verſ. 1. Verſ. 2. Hierom.

He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds; of the broken-hearted for ſinne, and the wounded hereby, for of our being wounded thus, the Parable of him that travelled from Jeruſalem to Jericho, who fell amongſt theeves and was wounded, ſpeaketh, and the next words: Verſ. 3.

He telleth the number of the ſtarres, &c. Of the meek ſpoken of, verſe 6. He lifteth up the meek, but caſteth the wicked downe to the ground: for theſe, ſaith he, be the ſtarres here ſpoken of, witneſſe Daniel, who ſaith, The righteous ſhall ſhine as the firmament, and they that turne others to righteouſneſſe as the ſtarres. And this is to be noted as moſt wonderfull, the Angels ſinning meant here, by the wicked are made to come from Heaven downe to the ground, but the men broken-hearted for ſinne are lifted up to Heaven, and placed there as bright ſhining ſtarres; and I ſee nothing againſt it, but that firſt underſtanding this according to the letter, it may well be drawne up to ſuch a Spirituall ſence. But we are not to exclude, from this ſpoken of the Stars, the proper meaning, that God knoweth them all, although innumerable, which is another ground of praiſing him, as being in his underſtanding infinite, and ſo hitherto are three grounds of praiſe: 1. For his building Jeruſalem, &c. 2 For healing the broken-hearted with long continuing miſeries. 3 For his unparalleld underſtanding about the ſtarres. Now followeth the fourth: Verſ. 4. Verſ. 5. Dan. 12.

He covereth the heaven with clouds, &c. much like to Pſal. 104. 13, 14. only here the young Ravens that cry to him are particularly mentioned, becauſe, as Calvin ſaith, they are of the baſeſt and moſt contemptible ſort of Fowles, wch none eſteem of, but for their hurtfulneſſe deſtroy, and therefore in ſpeaking of Gods hearing them when they cry to him, he moſt highly extolleth his providence, as being over not only the better ſort of Creatures, but even the baſeſt of all; whereas the Rabbins in expounding this ſay, that for nine dayes the Raven forſakes her young, being newly hatcht, as not acknowledging them, becauſe, being without feathers, they are ſo unlike unto her, in which time they having nothing to ſuſtaine them, Wormes breed of the putrifaction of the meat, brought thither formerly by their Damme, and thereupon they live, he rejects it, as a putid invention; yet the Philoſopher ſaith, that for ſome time, having no other food, they live upon the dew of Heaven, and to this the Pſalmiſt might have reſpect, when he ſaith thus, it being ſo extraordinary an act of providence thus to keep life in them: For their crying to God, Calvin alſo thinkes, that this is ſpoken of more then of other Fowles, becauſe they make more noyſe then others in their crying. Hitherto according to the letter. Verſ. 8. Verſ. 9. Calvin.

But Jerom maketh alſo a Spirituall expoſition hereupon, and upon the Hierom.

gathering of the Clouds, verſe 8. and making graſſe through the raine to grow upon the mountaines; for, ſaith he, if it were only literally meant, it would have been ſaid, in the vallies, for there the graſſe groweth in greateſt abundance, and in ſpeaking of this other particular, he would have ſaid, the Ravens, that cry to him, as well as the young of Ravens בני ערב and indeed underſtands it literally, and it muſt follow, ſaith he, that the young of Ravens ſhall be ſaved, becauſe who ſo calleth upon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved. Therefore by the Clouds and Raine here ſpoken of, he underſtandeth heavenly Doctrine to drop downe, which he gathereth, and ſendeth out Preachers. For thus Eſa, 5. the Lord threatens his Deut. 33. Vine-yard, that the Clouds ſhall not raine upon it, and let my doctrine, ſaith Moſes, diſtill as the raine; and where this raine falleth, the mountaines bring forth Graſſe; that is, the moſt eminent men for holineſſe bring forth, upon the receiving of this Doctrine, fruites of good Workes, where-with men and women, that are poore, be fed, who are ſet forth under the name of Beaſts, as man generally is, becauſe he dyeth, as doth the beaſt, Pſal. 49.

Laſtly, the ſons of the Raven, for ſo the word ſignifieth, cry to him, and are fed, not the Raven it ſelfe, that is, the Devil, whoſe children the wicked are, till they be converted, and then, which they ſhew that they are by calling upon God, they cry to him, and are fed with the bread that came downe from Heaven, Chriſt Jeſus, to eternall life; to this effect almoſt Jerom, I having made but little alteration in citing him. Hitherto the fourth ground of praiſe, now followeth the fifth.

Verſ. 13. He hath ſtrengthened the barres of thy gates, &c. ſpeaking to Jeruſalem, Verſ. 14. Anſwer me (O Jew) ſaith Jerom, how was this fulfilled touching your Jeruſalem, which the Romanes deſtroyed, wherein thy Children periſhed by famine, and for peace had the ſword raging amongſt them, were her Children bleſſed in her, had ſhee peace, was ſhee fed with the fat of Wheat? And if thou canſt not acknowledge that another Jeruſalem muſt needs be here meant, viz. the Chriſtian Church, the barres of the Gates whereof are the Prophets, and Apoſtles, barring out all ſuch as obey not their teaching. But the barres of the Gates of the Church, are rather thoſe Matth. 16. barres which Chriſt put hereunto, when he ſaid, The gates of hell ſhall not prevaile againſt it; That is, the Divine power founding it ſo ſtrongly upon a Rock, that no adverſe power ſtirred up by Hell can over-throw it; the Children here are bleſſed, and multiplied, and here is peace with God, and feeding with the Floure, which is the fat, or the beſt part of the Wheat, that is, the Word and Sacrament, and this is further confirmed:

Verſ. 15. He ſendeth out his Commandement upon earth, his word runneth very ſwiftly; whereby he ſheweth what he meant by the fat of Wheat, viz. the Goſpel, which went all over the world, and that in a ſhort time after the coming downe of the Holy Ghoſt, as the Sun coming forth, and inlightening all parts of the world, as Pſal. 19. being for the ſwiftneſſe of going ſet forth by Heathen Poets, as drawne in a Chariot by flying Horſes.

Verſ. 16. He giveth Snow like Wooll, and ſcattereth his hoare-froſt like aſhes; he caſteth Verſ. 17. out his Ice like morſels, who can ſtand before his cold? he ſends out his Word and Verſ. 18. melteth them, he cauſeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow. Here is a ſixth ground of praiſing God for the mighty workes of his Providence, as in covering the Heavens with Clouds, and ſending raine before ſpoken of; ſo now in the Snow, Froſts cauſing Ice, and an hoarineſſe like aſhes upon the face of the earth, which are diſſolved againe at his word, or will. And of this Jerom alſo giveth this Spirituall ſence, Chriſt is the Lambe of Hieron. God, as a ſheep before the ſhearer; from him then cometh wooll for a garment to cover us, that beleeve, & then we are white as the ſnow, Eſa. 1. 18. Pſa. 51. Waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter then ſnow; and by ſinne, being cold as the dead, and and frozen into hardneſſe of heart, his Word cometh, and then all this hardneſſe is diſſolved, the heart melteth before it, as the hoare Froſt before the heat of the Sunne, and the Ice, being otherwiſe in danger of extremity of heat in Hell fire; and the wind, that is, the Spirit blowing, as Joh. 3. the waters flow, that is, teares of repentance come pouring out, of which we may make uſe, as an excellent Allegory, or Similitude, but not paſſing over the literall ſence, as he doth in all theſe things, which is moſt properly the meaning of Raine, and Snow, and hoare-Froſts, and Ice: the Philoſophers diſcourſe much, and ſhew Naturall cauſes thereof, but here we are taught, that God and his mighty power is to be looked at in all theſe things, and he to be praiſed therefore.

He hath ſhewed his Law to Jacob, and his judgements to Iſrael; Here is the ſeventh ground of praiſe in this Pſalme, becauſe he had ſpoken, verſe 18. of his Word, and Commandement, now he ſaith, that this is ſhewed to Jacob, calling it, Law, and Judgements, hereby meaning, that every one who prevaileth with God to be bleſſed, for ſo Jacob had his name turned to Iſrael, hath his Law of Faith and Juſtification by Grace ſhewed him, and then ſuffers by his Judgements, of which it is ſaid, that they muſt begin at Gods houſe. But what is it that followeth? He hath not dealt ſo with the Heathen, &c. Sol. He doth not hereby meane, that any Nation is excluded from this, but being converted, all the Heathen alſo are one Iſrael, becauſe in Chriſt all are one; but before their converſion they have no knowledge of theſe things, the Law of Faith is fooliſhneſſe to them, and the judgements upon Beleevers are taken by them for ſignes of Gods wrath, utterly diſliking their wayes, ſo Auguſt. Verſ. 19. 1 Pet. 4. Auguſt. Gal. 3. 28.

PSAL. CXLVIII.

AFter all the grounds of praiſe laid, Pſal. 146. and 147. now the Pſalmiſt worketh hereupon to ſtirre up all things to praiſe God, both in Heaven and Earth, and in the Aire, and Waters, and men of all eſtates and degrees; and in the ſame argument the next two Pſalmes goe on alſo to the end, all beginning with Halalujah.

Sunne, and Moone, and Starres of light, vulgar, Starres and light, whereupon Jerom queſtions what light this may be, which cometh not either from Sunne, Moone, or Starres, and anſwereth the Light; that is, when none of them appeare; but becauſe the Sunne being downe, or hid in a Cloud, ſtill giveth ſome light, and alſo the Moone, neither is there any other light in heaven. It is therefore to be noted, that Hebr. the words goe thus, Sunne, Moone, and Starres light, that is, being a ſhining light. But in ſpeaking upon this, that the Lights are bidden to praiſe God, he ſaith, that their cauſe given to them, for being delivered from a neceſſity of ſeeing ſo great abominations in the world, as were daily committed in the time of Heatheniſh Idolatry, from which by the going out of the word before ſpoken of, the Nations are now freed; and the Heavens, and heavenly bodies, and other Creatures are called upon to praiſe God, as intimating hereby, that men alone are not ſufficient to praiſe him as he is worthy, but there had need be a concurrence of Angels, &c. to make a perfect harmony to his glory. If it ſhall ſeeme ſtrange, that a man who cometh ſo farre ſhort of Angels in zeale for Gods glory, ſhould ſtirre them up to the praiſing of God, when as without any ſtirring up they doe it continually, Eſa. 6. 6. Verſ. 3.

Calvin anſwers well, that he doth only by thus ſaying, ſhew his deſire to conſort with them in praiſing God, which will be fuller, if we take in that ſaid before by Jerom, that he calleth upon them to doe, as thinking all Calvin.

all men inſufficient to praiſe him as he is worthy, unleſſe Angels come in and doe it alſo. Becauſe the Sunne, Moone, and Starres are alſo called upon, we muſt not thinke that they have underſtanding, as Plato aſcribes to them, but hereby is ſhewed, that in giving light and influence, for which they were created, they conſtantly, ever ſince they were made, give praiſe to God, and in keeping their courſe without intermiſſion, to the reproofe of man, who is inordinate in the courſe of his life; yea, not only the Sunne, Moone, and Starres, but all other Creatures here enumerated doe, as is appointed them to the praiſe of God, only man for whom they were all made, diſhonoureth him, by going from that order which God had preſcribed unto him, which ſhould make us, much aſhamed, to repent.

